Pinochet loyalists admit defeat

SANTIAGO, Chile — Senior government officials conceded early today that President Augusto Pinochet, undisputed ruler of Chile since 1973, had lost his bid in a plebiscite to remain in power another eight years.

Opposition leaders hailed the result as a victory for democracy and pledged to seek a dialogue with the military to achieve a peaceful transition to civilian rule.

The latest official returns, with 15,959 out of a total of 22,248 polling places reporting, showed 53.31 percent of the voters marked their ballots "no," compared to 44.34 percent who voted "yes." The remainder of the ballots were null or blank.

FAA limits O'Hare flights

CHICAGO — A sharp increase in errors by air traffic controllers at O'Hare International Airport has prompted the Federal Aviation Administration to limit the number of incoming flights during peak hours at the world's busiest airport, officials say.

The FAA's decision also placed a limit on hourly landings at Midway Airport, Chicago's second largest airport, although there have been no reports of major incidents involving Midway.

Korean students storm offices

SEOUL, South Korea — Dissident students armed with iron pipes stormed the office of a ruling party legislator today and demanded former President Chun Doo Hwan and his wife be arrested on charges of corruption and abuse of power.

About two dozen activists from eight universities forced their way into the private congressional offices at 10 a.m. after overpowering a policeman on guard duty.

Survey: Bentsen won debate

OMAHA, Neb. — A survey of 571 Nebraskans after the vice presidential debate showed a majority thought Democrat Lloyd Bentsen defeated Republican Dan Quayle, the Omaha World-Herald reported Thursday.

Forty-six percent of those asked sided with Bentsen, while 37 percent thought Quayle won, and 16 percent were undecided. The poll's margin of error was plus or minus 4.1 percentage points.

A poll of 516 Nebraskans conducted after last month's presidential debate showed 49 percent thought Republican George Bush won, while 33 percent thought Democrat Michael Dukakis won, and 18 percent were undecided.

A's, L.A. win playoff games

BOSTON — The Oakland Athletics grasped more than a 1-0 lead in the American League championship series. They also disrupted the Boston Red Sox's overall strategy for winning the pennant.

Oakland's 2-1 triumph Wednesday in Game 1 came against Bruce Hurst. The Red Sox had decided to bypass ace Roger Clemens for the opening assignment to give Hurst the ball in Fenway Park, where he was 13-2 this year and 25-6 the past two seasons.

Meanwhile at Dodger Stadium, Los Angeles overcame a Tuesday come-from-behind setback by the Mets to take a 6-2 decision over New York Wednesday in game two of the National League playoff series.

Postal center construction to begin in December

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — A $39 million postal distribution center off Rinehart Road in Lake Mary will be built after all.

Construction bids have been put out for the building which will be about 330,000-square feet including dock space, Guy Bennett, postal operations analyst in Orlando said today.

Construction is expected to begin in December and will take from 16 to 18 months to complete, he said.

The project had been a casualty of federal budget cuts but was restored because of rapid growth in the area. Projects in other Florida growth areas also have been restored, according to postal officials.

The 40-acre Lake Mary site was bought last year for $7 million by postal officials. Lake Mary was selected because of its central location with the I-4 running adjacent to it, Bennett said.

The distribution center will process mail with high technology optical scanners for "327" (first three digits of the zip code) mail. This includes Lake Mary, Altamonte Springs, Longwood, Casselberry and other areas, according to Bennett.

The distribution center will enhance services for the growing communities, Bennett said.

The optical scanners are able to read mail at the rate of nine letters per second, verifying the

Suggs in ICU

Transplant recipient suffers heart attack

By CAROL HUMSBY
Herald staff writer

Chuck Suggs suffered cardiac arrest Wednesday morning, nearly two months after undergoing a heart and lung transplant.

Today he is resting in the intensive care unit of London's Harefield Hospital. He is to remain in ICU for three days.

Parents Ed and Pat Suggs watch their son from a window as they did immediately after the 15-year-old received the organ transplant.

His recovery from that procedure has surprised family, friends and physicians. It was not long before he was talking and laughing with sister Jackie. He spoke enthusiastically of returning to Lake Mary to play baseball in the Seminole Pony League. He walked hospital corridors and stairways, and completed a one-mile hike in Harefield's annual walk-a-thon. He spent several hours last weekend with his family in their London apartment. There was talk of his coming home for Thanksgiving.

But the past few weeks have seen setbacks in that recovery, including kidney failure, and a lung infection that seemed to clear up. Fund-raiser Debbie Black says doctors are puzzled and have experimented with different and varying amounts of medications. In the meantime, Suggs' facial skin is peeling, his color has an odd blue cast, and he's been running a temperature of first 101 degrees, then 103 and finally 105 before he went into arrest.

Black said Suggs' case is the second in 800 performed at Harefield in which the transplanted organs have rejected the body and not the reverse. Doctors can control the latter with drugs. A biopsy of Suggs' bone marrow will be performed along with tissue samples of the transplanted organs to reveal the cause of rejection. Suggs and his family are used to struggle and setbacks. They left Lake Mary a year ago and spent months sitting in hospital and hotel rooms worrying that a donor wouldn't be found in time. Parents felt helpless as their son grew weaker. They prayed and asked friends to do the same.

That all changed August 11, when Ed Suggs telephoned the states to say Chuck was on his way to surgery. A donor, a 26-year-old man from

Precinct reports surprising

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Although he failed to win the District 3 Republican runoff Tuesday, Jeff Etchberger gained the support of Sanford voters.

Precinct reports, issued Wednesday by the Seminole County Supervisor of Elections office, show Etchberger edged out incumbent Fred Streetman 52 of the 14 Sanford-area precincts. Streetman took two incorporated Sanford districts, Precincts 21 and 62. The result is surprising because Streetman was endorsed by Sanford Mayor Betty Smith.

Streetman prevailed county-wide however, giving him a 58.9 percent margin of victory over Etchberger. Streetman will now go on to face Democrat Warren Keiner in the Nov. 8 general election.

Streetman was strongest in south county precincts near his unincorporated home near Longwood. Streetman passed Etchberger in all Longwood precincts and all but one Altamonte Springs precinct.

Streetman, who along with other commissioners, has taken a strong stance on low density development near the Wekiva River, also edged out Etchberger in seven of the eight precincts closest to the river. But Streetman's support of increasing densities in the rural Sylvan Lake area hurt him in Precinct 2, which borders the Wekiva but includes Sylvan Lake.

Etchberger led Streetman 80-57 in Precinct 2.

Streetman also slipped past Etchberger in two of three Lake Mary precincts.

Etchberger's stance on favoring a four-lane limit to Red Bug Lake Road, favored by those residents, allowed him to win over Streetman in Precincts 8 and 56 in the area of the proposed widening. Although Streetman has not taken a formal position on the widening, county road officials want to provide for an eventual six-lane road.

In the District 5 runoff, Jennifer Kelley also led in 12 of the 14 Sanford precincts — virtually the same ones dominated by Etchberger. Kelley's opponent, Streetman's political crony Dick Van Der Weide, also lost Precinct 62 — along with Streetman — but he lost Precinct 22, not Precinct 21 as Streetman did.

Kelley sailed past Van Der Weide Tuesday, remaining ahead as early precincts reported and staying out front with 53 percent of the vote

Simplimatic to open doors in November

SANFORD — Simplimatic Engineering Company will open its new 78,000 square foot facility at 500 Airport Boulevard in November, a plant official said today.

With the additional structure, company administrators hope to increase the manufacturing of conveyors, palletizers, and de-palletizers.

The Sanford business was purchased from Acme Conveyor in 1975. Simplimatic's current facility at 540 Pecan Ave. will be used for research and development, according to production manager Phil Sortore. He is anticipating the move will take two to three weeks.

Texas murder suspect arrested in Longwood

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — A man wanted on a Texas murder charge was arrested without incident in Longwood Wednesday afternoon after a woman — who said she was the murder victim's girlfriend and had been abducted and raped by the suspect — tipped Sanford police.

Danilo Garza, 33, of Route 1, Harlingen, Texas, is held without bond on a Texas capital murder charge. He is in the Seminole County jail.

Sanford Police Capt. Herb Shea said today that the sheriff of Cameron County Texas is scheduled to arrive in Sanford Friday to take custody of Garza for transport back to Texas.

The 25-year-old woman told police that Garza abducted her after the 4:30 a.m. Sept. 26 killing of her boyfriend Horcio Gonzalez, in Harlingen, Texas. She said that in addition to shooting Gonzalez, Garza is accused of stabbing to death another Texas man, about one-half mile away from the scene of the killing of Gonzalez.

In addition to the murder charge that Garza is being held on, Shea said, he faces a second murder charge and numerous other felony charges, including kidnapping and rape.

The woman said after the killings, Garza brought her to a house at 2800 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, where they since Sept. 29 have been staying with a friend of Garza's.

Garza had gotten a job at Engineering Truss Co., in

Officials say marina budget will recover

By SANDRA BOUCHAHINE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — The Lake Monroe marina has cut expenses and should begin making money this month from the launching fees imposed this summer by the City Commission, according to James R. Jernigan, recreation and parks director.

The marina has been losing money. But, Jernigan said, "We feel like we are going to be in the black in a couple of weeks."

The part-time, off-duty police officer hired to patrol the area has been relieved because the number of visitors dropped off with the passing of summer. The marina will save $4,114 as a result.

"A big expense was the off-duty police officer," Jernigan said. "He was paid time and one-half."

The fee ordinance was passed in June and fees for boat-launching permits were imposed on non-city residents for the first time on July 9. The fees included daily charges of $5 or an annual fee of $100 for non-city residents.

Use of the marina by Sanford residents is free.

The fees were imposed to raise money for the maintenance of streets, parking lots and boat ramp facilities, to help reduce traffic congestion and to provide money for police patrols.

Red tide strikes Gulf Coast

ST. PETERSBURG — The Department of Natural Resources has banned the harvest of shellfish in Manatee, Sarasota and Pinellas counties because of an outbreak of red tide. Marine biologists said the red tide first was spotted in Sarasota waters Monday and worked its way north Tuesday. DNR spokesman Jamie Serlono said the outbreak could remain offshore and dissipate quickly but said the ban on shellfish harvesting is expected to last for at least two weeks. Red tide is a population explosion of a highly toxic marine micro-organism that can kill fish and other marine life and contaminate the meat of shellfish. It gets its name from the discoloration of the water that results from the population explosion of the organism. Eating the contaminated meat can result in severe illness and when carried in the air the organisms can cause respiratory problems.

Lawyer to fight babyswitch test

SARASOTA — The father of a 9-year-old girl will try to prevent a genetic test that could determine whether she was switched with another child when they were babies, his lawyer says. Attorney Arthur Ginsburg also said he will try to delay a court hearing set for Friday, at which a lawyer for the Pennsylvania couple who claims the girl is theirs intends to ask a judge to order that the girl produce a blood sample for testing. "I don't want my client to be steamrolled into a hearing when we haven't had the opportunity to prepare for it," Ginsburg said Wednesday. Ginsburg, a family law specialist in Sarasota, is representing the unidentified girl's father along with Tampa attorney Dale Swope. The Pennsylvania couple, Ernest and Regina Twigg, say they lost their healthy newborn daughter nearly 10 years ago when she was switched with an ill infant at Hardee Memorial Hospital in Wauchula.

Ronnie's estate, state reach agreement
MIAMI — Attorneys for Florida and the estate of Ronnie DeSilva, a young liver transplant patient who died last year, asked Wednesday that a judge approve an agreement that could give more than $280,000 to children needing organ transplants. The agreement, the last settlement in four claims against the estate, followed two weeks of negotiations by court-appointed curator Karen Clevers and Morton Laitner, a lawyer for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. It was offered to Judge Francis J. Christie in the form of a motion filed in Dade County Circuit Court. A hearing is scheduled for Oct. 24. "It makes little sense for both of us to be fighting over the money and running up costs, considering we have the same goal of having this money being spent for children in need of transplants," Laitner said.

Fraternity member found guilty of rape
TALLAHASSEE — A member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity has been convicted of raping a female student who gave him a ride home after a Jan. 7 party in a fraternity house at Florida State University. Sean Charles Russell, 23, a student at Tallahassee Community College, was found guilty Tuesday night of sexual battery. He has maintained his innocence, saying the woman consented to have sex with him. The jury deliberated for about two hours before pronouncing its verdict. According to testimony, the 18-year-old FSU student gave Russell and several other people rides home after a party at Russell's fraternity house. She acknowledged she voluntarily entered his apartment, drank beer and kissed Russell, but denied consenting to sex. Medical evidence showed a laceration "consistent with forced intercourse." No sentencing date had been set.

Secretary of State candidates square off
ST. PETERSBURG — Secretary of State Jim Smith, who switched to the Republican Party last year, wants Florida should allow "cross-over voting" in primaries — a change he predicted legislative Democrats would never allow. Smith's Democratic challenger, Tom Moore of Tallahassee, said the state should stick by its current system of allowing only Republicans and Democrats to vote in the primaries — restricting each to their own party's contest — but called for a combination of state conventions and primaries to screen candidates.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Officials divided on runoff elections

By MICHAEL McLELLAND
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Republican Party Chairwoman Jenne Austin wants Florida to stop holding runoff elections, but Democratic Party chief Charles Whitehead says the races have put some of his party's brightest lights into office. Florida is one of nine states — most of them in the South — that still holds a runoff election, and the contests are notorious for low voter turnout.

Tuesday's runoff, for example, featured high-profile battles for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination and insurance commissioner's race, but drew only 20 percent of the voters to the polls.

"The time has passed us to have a runoff," Austin said Wednesday. "If (no runoff) works well for the rest of the country, there's no reason it shouldn't work for us."

"Two primaries is just too much," she said. Whitehead said he has some doubts about runoffs, but that he was not ready to call for their elimination. "I've always had mixed emotions about runoffs, until I look at Reubin Askew, Bob

I've always had mixed emotions about runoffs, until I look at Reubin Askew, Bob Graham, Lawton Chiles, Buddy MacKay and Bob Butterworth.

Charles Whitehead
Democratic Party chairman

Graham, Lawton Chiles, Buddy MacKay and Bob Butterworth," Whitehead said. "They all say they are going to break my arm if we do away with second primaries, because that's how they all won."

Former governors Askew and Graham, Sen. Chiles, D-Fla., Democratic Senate nominee Rep. MacKay, D-Fla. and Attorney General Butterworth all placed second in their respective Democratic primaries, but won runoffs and then beat their GOP opponents.

Runoff elections are a holdover from the days when Democrats totally dominated the South. For many years, winning the Democratic nomination meant winning the office and runoffs were needed to narrow down large fields of candidates.

Even now, with Florida Republicans moving close to parity, statewide runoffs seldom include GOP candidates. There were no Republicans in statewide runoffs this year, though there were GOP candidates in three congressional races and eight races for Florida house seats.

Secretary of State Jim Smith, who is in charge of all Florida elections, was traveling and could not be reached for comment, but spokesman Don North said Smith supports the runoff system.

"He thinks it is a system that brings the ultimate decision closest to the voters, in all respects," North said.

Division of Elections director Dorothy Joyce could not estimate how much runoff elections cost the state, largely because individual counties foot the bill.

Most of the division's expenses are for salaries, while each county must supply voting places, transport machinery, hire election workers and install telephones.

"Our cost is just piddly compared to what the counties have to spend," Joyce said. "We spend maybe one-fiftieth of what the counties have to spend."

Bishops oppose English amendment

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's Catholic bishops say they are opposed to a proposed amendment on the November election ballot that would make English the official language of Florida and do away with state-sponsored bilingual services.

"It can do no good and could cause much harm," the eight bishops said of Amendment 11 in a prepared statement released Wednesday by the Florida Catholic Conference.

"Enlightened governments throughout the world seek to encourage rather than discourage multilingualism," the bishops said, adding the proposal is "now causing and will continue to cause disharmony between ethnic groups and other minorities."

The amendment is backed by the U.S. English organization, a group dedicated to making English the official language in the United States. Some states have passed similar amendments, but courts also have ruled the amendment unconstitutional. A Miami group opposing the measure says it may file suit to keep the amendment off the ballot because it is written only in English and not, as required by state law, also written in Spanish.

The bishops said while there is "an urgent need for all our people to be able to speak, read and write English," the proposal "could well jeopardize existing forms of bilingual assistance including emergency services ... and public safety."

The statement also said the amendment "would deliver the wrong message" to ethnic groups and immigrants and that the question of whether bigotry and prejudice that immigrants have experienced would increase.

"We must ask," the bishops said, "whether the campaign to make English official is only about language, or is it not also directed against Hispanics and other foreigners?"

"We must not let even the hint of prejudice become enshrined in our Florida laws."

Gala homecoming planned for Navy

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION — More than 4,000 sailors return home Friday to a carnival-like celebration after six months at sea that included support for an escort mission of U.S. flagged tankers in the Persian Gulf.

The aircraft carrier USS Forrestal spent six months in the North Arabian Sea, the Mediterranean and the North Atlantic. The massive ship is scheduled to arrive at Mayport Naval Station Friday afternoon. Lt. Cmdr. Tim Taylor said.

Taylor said thousands of people are expected to line Mayport's docks in a fanfare celebration.

"There'll be babies and bands, you name it," he said, adding many sailors will see their newborns for the first time.

Twenty-eight pilots and crew on seven anti-submarine aircraft flew into Mayport

Naval Air Station Tuesday.

"They've been away from home for six months. They've been at sea for 108 days in a row," he said, noting they only had 15 days of liberty which was unusual.

"They were on duty in the North Arabian Sea where there are very few opportunities for ships to port," Taylor said.

The frigate USS Elmer Montgomery, which is part of the Forrestal battle group, is scheduled to port Oct. 12. "They took another route. They participated in an exercise in the North Atlantic," Taylor said.

The Forrestal battle group supported escort missions of U.S. flagged oil tankers moving through the Persian Gulf and frequent targets of Iranian missiles.

The Elmer Montgomery, which has about 300 sailors aboard, was the first warship to respond to distress call from Danish SS Karama Maersk July 2.

Dog trainers arrested for using live rabbits

By ROCKY SCOTT
United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — State wildlife officials say they have arrested one of the nation's top dog owners in a sting operation designed to halt the widespread use of live rabbits to train greyhounds for parimutuel racing.

"During our investigation, we came to conclude at least 80 percent of the greyhound trainers are using live rabbits to train their dogs," Mark Paulhus of the U.S. Humane Society said Wednesday.

Officials from the Madison County Sheriff's department and the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission arrested 12 people Tuesday morning for alleged violations of a 1986 Florida statute that makes it illegal to use live animals for training purposes.

Four of the people arrested, including Jack Frost, the owner of the training facility located near Lee, Fla., east of Tallahassee, and Robert Mendheim, a leading greyhound kennel owner, were charged with felonies.

The other eight were charged with misdemeanors, Paulhus said. Court dates for the defendants have not been set.

A videotape taken by undercover officers showed a live rabbit dangling from a mechanical arm that whirled around the practice track at speeds of up to 35 mph with dogs chasing it.

Paulhus said the animal died before investigators could stop the early morning training exercise.

He said the investigation began about a year ago when it was suspected wild jackrabbits were being imported to Florida to train greyhounds.

About 40 percent of the parimutuel racing involving dogs is done in Florida, statistics show, and Paulhus said as many as 60 percent of the trainers live and work in the state.

Once the investigation began, it was determined domestic rabbits also were being used to train the animals and that the dogs were allowed to chew on the rabbit at the end of a training session.

Paulhus said the arrests were the first in Florida as a result of a 1986 law that bans the use of imported jackrabbits and domestic rabbits for the training of greyhounds.

Anyone convicted of the felony portion of the statute can spend five years in prison and be fined up to $5,000. A misdemeanor conviction can result in a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Paulhus said the National Greyhound Association and the American Greyhound Track Association have gone on record opposing the use of live animals for training.

POLICE BRIEFS

Agents subdue drug suspect

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man who agents said gave a suspected cocaine dealer instructions on how to elude City County Investigative Bureau agents during a chase Wednesday night is charged on several counts connected with a fight with CCIB agents who confronted him.

Walter Melvin Day, 28, of 325 DePugh St., Altamonte Springs, is charged with two counts of battery on a policeman, obstruction, assault on a policeman and resisting arrest with violence. He was arrested on DePugh Street, rural Altamonte Springs at 8:35 p.m. Wednesday.

Agents report they were chasing a group of suspected cocaine dealers from the North Street area when Day began advising one suspect to hurry and telling him the location of agents. The agents had identified themselves as police.

When confronted by Sgt. Jack Cash, Day, who is 6-feet, 5-inches tall and weighs 266 pounds turned on Cash, who had called for backup from other agents, agents said. Cash and another agent were battered while trying to subdue Day, the arrest report said. The agents were not seriously injured.

Man, wife arrested on drug charges

CASSELBERRY — A City County Investigative Bureau agent who reported he bought LSD from a Casseberry man on Sept. 20, returned to the man's house Wednesday night to arrest him and his wife.

Scott Arnold Swanson, 28, and Sharon Lee Swanson, 27, of 181 Lemon St., were arrested at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Both are charged with possession of LSD and drug paraphernalia. Scott Swanson is also charged with the sale of LSD. Bond for each is $2,000.

The agent said that on Sept. 20 he bought four "hits" of LSD from Swanson at Swanson's house. The agent said he returned there Sept. 30 and offered to exchange marijuana for LSD. When the agent contacted Swanson Oct. 1, he said he was leaving town and didn't sell LSD anymore, according to agents.

When the agent arrived at Swanson's house Wednesday, Swanson, the agent said, told him "You're either a mark or a ripoff person. In any case someone will get shot." The arrests were made at that point.

Agents reported Mrs. Swanson was in the room during the drug deal and took the money from the $20 sale Sept. 20.

Man accused of stealing from police

SANFORD — Sanford police report the arrest of a man they said had burglarized their own Benevolent Association Building, on Seminole Boulevard, Sanford, on Sept. 21.

Anthony Jones, 21, of 1405 W. 16th St., Sanford, was charged with burglary, grand theft and dealing in stolen property. The arrest was made at the police station Wednesday.

Jones is accused of entering the building through a window and taking a television, a microwave oven and several extension cords. A witness tipped police to the suspect. The witness said he bought a television from Jones on Oct. 2, police said. The television had been stolen from the police building. The buyer paid $35 for it, police said.

Police report finding marijuana plants

SANFORD — A man who let Sanford police search his house at about 6:50 p.m. Wednesday was arrested after police reported finding four marijuana plants growing at the house. Drug paraphernalia was also found, police said.

Chester John Biernacki, 27, of 1907 S. Summerlin Ave., Sanford, is charged with cultivation of marijuana, possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia. Bond is $1,000.

Cocaine pocketed, police charge

SANFORD — Sanford police report the arrest of a Sanford man after they said they found cocaine in his pocket.

Lavon Elliott, 25, of Cowan Moughton Terrace, Sanford, was arrested at 10:10 p.m. Wednesday on a charge of possession of cocaine. The arrest was made on Third Street at Avacado Avenue, after a police search. Bond is $2,000.

DUI suspects arrested

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County.

- Joni Lynn Payne, 32, of Deltona, was arrested at 12:51 a.m. today after her car was seen weaving on Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary, according to authorities.
- Gerald Lee Poffmberger, 39, of 704 Gen. Hutchinson Parkway, Longwood, was arrested at 3:20 a.m. Wednesday after his car was seen weaving on Lake Mary Boulevard, Lake Mary, authorities said.

MIA activists head for Laos

By PAUL WEDEL
United Press International

BANGKOK, Thailand — Four American MIA activists headed toward Laos today to scatter money stamped with a notice offering $2.4 million to anyone bringing a U.S. prisoner of war safely out of Indochina.

The activists said they were not deterred by the arrest of two colleagues in Laos earlier this week, the refusal of the Thai government to grant permission for their venture or what they said was U.S. government opposition to their activities.

The team boarded a domestic Thai Airways flight for Ubon Ratchathani, about 325 miles northeast of Bangkok near the Laotian border. From there they were scheduled to travel to the Thai-Laotian border.

"Our mission is to get the word out that the reward is real," Ted Sampley, chairman of the National Steering Committee for American War Veterans, said Wednesday.

Sampley, of Kinston, N.C., said his four-member group planned to dump about $2,000 in U.S., Vietnamese, Laotian, Soviet and Indonesian currency in plastic-wrapped packets into the Mekong River to publicize their offer. The river forms the border between Thailand and Laos.

"We don't want information, we don't want remains, we want a live American," said Sampley, displaying the packets that contained pamphlets and bills stamped with the message that anyone bringing a live American POW to the International Red Cross would be given a $2.4 million reward. The reward is pledged by a group of U.S. Congressmen and other citizens.

Besides Sampley, the traveling group consisted of Bruce Adams of Laramie, Wyo., whose brother Steven has been missing in action for 22 years, Lynn Hampton, a Vietnam veteran nurse from Winterhaven, Fla., and Bill Sullivan, a Marine veteran from the Vietnam War era from Jacksonville, N.C.

Adams, who helped dump about 5,000 MIA reward pamphlets without money into the Mekong last year, said the pamphlets had generated "about a dozen" inquiries from people working with Laotian resistance forces.

Maj. Thomas Boyd, a spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Command, declined to comment on the particular activities of the group but said in general the government was not in favor of private efforts to find missing Americans.

Sampley, a former sergeant in the Special Forces in Vietnam, charged that officials of the National Security Council had tried to interfere with the group's efforts to come to Thailand.

He said he had appealed to the Thai government for permission to distribute the money as a political and humanitarian expression.

He displayed a letter from the Thai charge d'affaires in Washington, Abinang Nu Ramong, saying that "the Royal Thai government would not allow any organization or individuals to use its territory to interfere in the internal affairs of neighboring countries."

Prison escapee charged with girl's kidnapping

By SUSAN LODEN
Herald staff writer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — An escapee from a state prison in Orange County is charged today in connection with at least one of three Sept. 29 and 30 breakins in Altamonte Springs.

Walton Broomfield, 21, of the Orange County Correctional Institute, is charged with kidnapping and armed burglary in connection with the attempted abduction of a 7-year-old girl from her Springs Oaks house shortly after midnight Sept. 29.

Police said the kidnapper was startled by a noise and dropped the girl he had picked up from her bed. He left the house without taking the girl.

Broomfield is also suspected of earlier that night burglarizing the house of a 75-year-old woman in that same neighborhood. The woman said she was awakened and robbed by the burglar who stole money from her house.

Broomfield may also be the man who was run from another house in Spring Oaks that night, after a male resident found him inside his house, police spokesman Jeff Hawkins said.

Broomfield was captured by Altamonte Springs police on the morning of Sept. 30 inside a trailer at Mobil Manor off State Road 434.

He was arrested as a prison escapee and jailed in Orange County. Since then, Hawkins said, continuing police investigation has linked him to the kidnapping and related charges added. Broomfield is held at the Orange County Correctional Institute without bond. Other charges are pending the completion of the investigation, Hawkins said.

House panel gives thrift regulators borrowing power

By LYDA PHILLIPS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A House committee has approved a bill that would provide more money to shore up foundering savings and loans, but critics question whether the thrift industry can pay the estimated $50 billion cost of the crisis without taxpayer help.

The House Banking Committee approved a bill Wednesday that would let savings and loan regulators sell another $5 billion in bonds to resolve the crisis in the nation's thrift industry.

Debate on the bill coincided with M. Danny Wall, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, making a large upward revision in the estimate of the ultimate cost of strengthening the ailing thrift industry.

In testimony before the Senate Budget Committee, Wall estimated it would cost between $45 billion to $50 billion in current dollars over the next 10 years to restore the industry to health, but still ruled out a taxpayer bailout.

The bill, passed on a 28-23 vote and sent to the House floor, would authorize the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to sell an additional $5 billion in bonds to cover the costs of closing, merging or selling the nation's remaining 419 insolvent thrifts.

In August 1987, Congress gave the FSLIC permission to issue $10.8 billion in bonds to help resolve the deepening thrift crisis.

The bill would also lift entirely a $3.75 billion annual cap previously imposed on FSLIC borrowing.

Congressional critics in both chambers warned the cost could go even higher than Wall's Wednesday estimate, and several members of Congress have warned the problem will eventually require taxpayer money.

The General Accounting Office has also doubled its original estimate of the costs of merging, folding or selling the nation's 500 insolvent thrifts from about $25 billion to about $50 billion.

"It's not clear to me the FSLIC has the resources to do the job," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., in line to assume chairmanship of the Senate Banking Committee, rapped Wall for his frequent revisions, at one point calling his answers "slippery."

"The bank board has consistently underestimated the size of the problem," Riegle said. "I'm sorry to say even this estimate is below the ultimate cost."

Rep. Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., chairman of the House Banking Committee, agreed while supporting the additional bond authority for FSLIC.

"Voodoo accounting seems to be an accepted art form in the Home Loan Bank Board reports to the Congress and to the public," he said.

Johnson focus of judicial inquiry

By LAURIE WATSON
United Press International

OTTAWA — Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson, who was stripped of his 100-meter Olympic gold medal after testing positive for steroids, will be the center of a sweeping judicial inquiry investigating drug abuse in the sports community.

Federal Sports Minister Jean Charest announced the inquiry Wednesday, saying investigators could recommend in their final report that the government lift its lifetime suspension against Johnson or that criminal charges be laid against others found responsible for providing him with the banned drug.

The investigation, to be headed by Charles Dubin, associate chief justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, will subpoena witnesses to testify at hearings across Canada. Investigators also will be able to travel internationally, including to Seoul, where Johnson was stripped of his gold medal.

"We wanted to ensure the commissioner had the tools to compel people to testify, take testimony under oath and get to the bottom of matters," Charest said.

Johnson, who broke his own world record to win the 100-meter dash at the recently concluded Seoul Olympics, shocked the world when he was stripped of his gold medal after testing positive for steroids following the race.

He also was banned from competing again in the Olympics, and banned by the government from competing again for Canada.

Johnson told a news conference Tuesday that he has never knowingly taken illegal drugs and said he expects to be able to clear his name and compete in the next Olympics in 1992.

Canadians, in the midst of an election campaign, have urged a forum be held to give Johnson an opportunity to clear his name.

Expert: bodies shot at close range

United Press International

SAN FRANCISCO, El Salvador — Government forensic experts exhumed the bodies of seven peasants allegedly massacred by the army two weeks ago and one expert said they were "killed by people who fired at close range."

Gravediggers opened the graves Wednesday near the village of San Francisco on orders from the attorney general's office investigating charges soldiers shot a group of 10 unarmed peasants in cold blood after interrogating them.

The army initially said the peasants, seven men and three women, died Sept. 21 during a rebel ambush but changed its story a day later when relatives of the dead accused the army of the killings. If army culpability is found, it would be the largest massacre of civilians by soldiers since 1984.

As four army helicopters circled above and reporters, human rights advocates and a few relatives looked on, local gravediggers bolstered by shots of moonshine excavated seven decomposed bodies — three in one grave and four from a second — from the gravesite at the edge of a cornfield.

"The cause of death in three bodies we have exhumed was wounds made by what we believe are high-caliber bullets fired from a distance of 7 to 10 inches in the back of the head," Dr. Jose Roberto Maldonado said.

Dangers cited in policing research fraud

UPI report

SAN FRANCISCO — Stepping up efforts to prevent fraud in the scientific community could stifle the ingenuity and progress of research, experts say, but both enforcement of academic standards and protection for researchers need to be increased.

"The greater the potential effect on an individual's reputation, freedom or livelihood, the greater must be the due process afforded," Barbara Mishkin, a Washington, D.C., attorney specializing in medical ethics wrote in one of three articles on policing scientific research published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Due process should include procedures for fair hearings, and protection for whistle-blowers, innocent authors unaware of fraud in cooperative research and for scientists who are accused but then exonerated, Mishkin said Wednesday at the annual AMA Science Reporters Conference.

The articles were written in the wake of recent criticism of lax scientific self-regulation voiced at congressional hearings and by the inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services.

The articles also followed the case of Stephen Breuning, a 36-year-old psychologist who admitted he fabricated data concerning treatment of hyperactive children with Ritalin and Dexadrine in order to obtain more than $160,000 in federal research grants.

The full extent of scientific wrongdoing in America remains unknown, Mishkin said.

"When any profession is perceived to be lax or uninterested in self-regulation, the public and its elected representatives will press for external controls," she said.

But Mishkin said restrictions can put a damper on scientific enthusiasm necessary for progress. She urged establishment of clear standards "so the scientists know what's expected of them."

"Normally, research institutions don't worry about fraud and misconduct until after they are hit with some embarrassing scandal," she said.

Casualty of politicking

Ken Jenne's win over John Vogt for the Democratic nomination for State Insurance Commissioner has been described as an upset. Polls had indicated Sen. Vogt would win by as many as eight percentage points, yet he lost by five state-wide. Seminole County voters backed Sen. Vogt who represents a large portion of this county.

When assessing the why of Sen. Jenne's victory, one conclusion seems logical: Sen. Vogt, president of the Senate is a casualty of the ill-starred, ill-advised sales tax on services. A secondary reason is the phalanx of state senators who were allied with Sen. Jenne against their body's president.

Until recent years Democrats controlled the Florida Senate with an iron hand. The strongest bloc was from the Panhandle and called the "Pork Chop Gang." They held the committee chairmanships and Panama City's Dempsey Barron was their leader. Senators from Central and South Florida wrested control from the Pork Choppers gradually, and held control until two years ago.

Ken Jenne had been selected president-elect of the senate and was scheduled to be sworn in November 1986. But Sen. Barron made his move and formed a coalition of very conservative Democrats and Republicans to gain a majority in the Senate. They chose Democrat Sen. Vogt as president, and he was sworn in on Nov. 18, 1986. He subsequently named members of the coalition to the chairmanships, including Republicans, and, of course, Sen. Barron as chairman of the rules and calendar committee. The dean of the senate was back in the saddle. Sen. Jenne, and his fellow Democrats, were out in the cold.

The first act of the Democrat-Republican coalition, under Senate President Vogt, in the 1987 session of the Legislature, was to go in lock step with newly elected Republican governor Bob Martinez in hastily passing the sales tax on services. The state-wide unpopularity of the law caused the governor and legislative leaders to retreat and the tax was repealed six months later.

The voters of Florida have neither forgiven nor forgotten the services tax. Neither have the Democratic senators ceased to think of Sen. Vogt as a scalawag for joining with the Republicans in the Senate power grab.

The Vogt-Jenne campaign charges and countercharges dealt with fund-raising and insurance rates and grabbed the headlines. But references to the services tax and Sen. Vogt's dumping of Sen. Jenne as Senate president were frequent. The reminders were sufficient.

Sen. Vogt is one casualty. Sen. Barron, who lost his re-election bid to a political newcomer, is another casualty. The coalition, also, is probably doomed. And Democrats are lining up to run against Gov. Martinez in 1990.

The lessons to be learned from the campaign are that casualties result from missteps, whether actual or perceived, and mistakes, such as the tax on services, result when action is taken in undue haste.

Just waiting around for Duke's magic

I am working on a one-hour television special about the recent history of the Democratic Party (PBS, Monday, Oct. 17 — WMFE-TV, channel 24). In that connection I recently interviewed Gov. Michael Dukakis. We talked about Democratic Party political philosophy and about politics for 1988. Here is what he had to say about tactics.

I asked him if he was having fun. His response: "Yes, although there's no question that a presidential campaign, after you've won the nomination, is unlike just about anything one has ever gone through, even if you've been in politics as I have for 25 years. It takes a little while to adjust to it. But I'm adjusting, and enjoying it."

Indeed, full-scale presidential campaigning is like no other act in politics. There is no training for it, except doing it. Ronald Reagan, not a bad country politician, ran in the 1976 primaries — a somewhat less intense political experience than a general-election presidential campaign. It was his first time out, and he blew it. He won in 1980. Sen. Ted Kennedy, who had been in politics all his life, blew it in 1980, his first time out. My hero, Sen. Scoop Jackson, had been in Congress for more than three decades. He campaigned for the presidency in 1972. He won no primaries, nor did he come close. By 1976, when he tried again, he racked up several big primary wins before losing out to Jimmy Carter.

What about Carter? He could be regarded as an exception to this rule. He came out of nowhere in the primaries to win the nomination the first time out. In July, after the Democratic convention, he was beating Pres. Gerald Ford by 33 percent in the polls. Then, in just the time period Dukakis is talking about, Carter did all kinds of things wrong. His lead had slipped to 15 percent by late August after both conventions. Carter barely held on, beating Ford by only 2 percent.

What Dukakis is saying is that he had a bad September in part because he and his staff didn't know the terrain. They do now, he indicates, and October will be better. It is a reasonable proposition.

Dukakis also talked about the dynamism between the press and the politician. Recalling the 1960 presidential campaign of Sen. John F. Kennedy, he said: "You had this young man from Massachusetts who many thought was not experienced enough, didn't have enough experience in foreign policy, didn't have the strength to be president. There was a lot of this kind of thing. He talked too fast, wasn't emotional enough. This was one of the raps on Jack Kennedy; that he was too cerebral, too cool. And it was only in the closing days of that campaign that you began to see a charged up and emotional John Kennedy."

Again, true enough. The press is always in the pejorative caricature game. "Cool," "cerebral," "technocrat," "clerk" (for Dukakis), or "clumsy" (Ford), "bumbling" (Reagan), "wimpy" (Bush) and "dull" (Mondale). Don't take too much stock in all that. Many hundreds of very smart politicians want to be president. Every four years only two of them get to the finals. Then they are trashed, not only by the press but also by the politicians who weren't shrewd enough, or knowledgeable enough, or tough enough to become a nominee.

Full-scale presidential campaigning is like no other act in politics.

Cynicism winning campaign

PENN HILLS, Pa.—The voters on Idaho Avenue in this blue-collar Pittsburgh suburb have picked the winner of the 1988 presidential race. Cynicism is winning by a landslide over George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

Almost the first words I heard when I revisited one of my favorite ticket-splitting, barometer precincts was the U.S. word that does not stand for Bachelor of Science. It was uttered by Dominic Manfredi, a 54-year-old machinist, describing the debate between the Republican vice president and the Democratic governor of Massachusetts.

This community has gone through the collapse of the steel industry and seen its school population drop by half, as young families moved elsewhere, looking for work. After prolonged exposure to the candidates' rhetoric, coming here gets you back to reality. These hard-working people are scraping to get by, with two wage-earners as in the Manfredi case, or by hoarding their savings and Social Security checks, as many of their neighbors do.

The difference between them and the presidential candidates is that they are not cheating their children to avoid hard choices for themselves. Though they grumbled, they accepted an 8 percent increase in their property taxes this year to finance school programs. They know that education is the only hope those young people have for the jobs of the future.

This is not a partisan truth. Penn Hills is 2-1 Democratic, but it has a Republican mayor. And in neighboring Greensburg the other morning, Bill Brock, the former secretary of labor in the Reagan Cabinet, made the point as clearly as anybody could: "There will be an increasing supply of good jobs," he said. "The only question is whether we'll give our (young) people the education and training they need to fill them. If we don't we'll have to open our borders to massive immigration of those with the needed skills, or let the jobs go overseas."

No one disputes that, and both candidates say they favor improved education, just as they favor better health care, housing and more effective defense forces. But the question the Dominic Manfredis ask is, "How the hell are they going to pay for this stuff?"

When that question is asked, the candidates change the subject. They are deathly afraid of talking about taxes. But they show no compunction about taking away the next generation's prospects by continuing the profligacy of borrow-and-spend budgeting. They will not face the reality that we are crippling the ability of this nation to make the investments it needs to guarantee its future.

The figures are stark. Between 1980 and 1988, the fastest-rising element of the federal budget, by far, was the annual interest payment on the national debt. It was $52 billion in the first year of the decade. This year, it's about $151 billion. In 1980 21 cents of every dollar you paid in federal income taxes went to meet the interest on the debt. This year, more than 37 cents of every tax dollar goes for that purpose.

Those are the numbers. But what do they mean? They mean a steady, increasing erosion in our ability to finance our current and future needs. When Ronald Reagan became President, 79 cents of every income-tax dollar was available to pay for military salaries, weapons and all our domestic needs. When his successor takes office, only 63 cents of every tax dollar will be there after the interest bill has been paid. And that number will continue to go down as long as no serious effort is made to eliminate the annual budget deficits of $150 billion or so.

Bush says we can solve the problem with a "flexible freeze," letting economic growth eliminate the deficits. But it's not working. We've had six years of growth and the annual interest payments are rising, not shrinking. The interest bill jumped $13 billion this year, 50 percent more than it had in the two previous years combined.

Dukakis says he'll lower interest rates. But the federal debt keeps constant upward pressure on those rates, as lenders demand their pound of flesh from Uncle Sam. It's estimated that foreign banks and individuals now hold about one-seventh of the Treasury notes. That means they get about one-seventh of the annual interest payments—more than $20 billion this year. That's money that is going into their pockets to build their economies, for investments that improve their schools and labs, their productivity, so they can compete more effectively against us.

How much is $20 billion? It's three times what we put into our own federal community and regional-development programs to help depressed areas like western Pennsylvania, almost twice what we spend on our own transportation network, two-thirds of what the federal government puts into education, training, employment and social-services.

Penn Hills is 2-1 Democratic, but it has a Republican mayor.

Casinos scalp Indian games

WASHINGTON — It is hard to picture the casual gambler passing up the glitz of Caesar's Palace for a metal bingo shed on a Wisconsin Indian reservation. But the casino industry apparently views the growing appeal of Indian gaming as competition.

Nevada casino barons, who claim they want to protect American Indians from organized crime, have successfully lobbied Congress for a law that crimps gambling on Indian reservations.

The new law will require Indian tribes to subject their bingo and betting parlors to state and federal inspection and to pay fees to finance the regulatory bureaucracy. Until now, the tribes have regulated their own gambling operations and there is no evidence of any organized crime involvement.

The National Congress of American Indians says the attempt to regulate reservation gambling is a violation of the Indians' sovereign rights and will open the door to state regulation of their lands.

In the past six years, bingo, pull tabs, card games and video betting have bloomed into a major source of revenue for more than 100 Indian tribes. Indian gaming now generates about $400 million a year.

The Nevada Resort Association paid a Washington law firm $12,100 during the first six months of this year. That firm made campaign contributions to some members of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee and the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee during that same time frame. The law went through those two committees and was passed Sept. 27.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., is not convinced by the stated intent of the law, "to shield (tribes) from organized crime and other corrupting influences."

In testimony on the House floor, Udall noted the irony of the debate: "The Indian opponents that are instructing us in the evils of organized crime are the gambling casino operators of Nevada, the Horse Track Owners Association and American Greyhound Track Operators Association," Udall said. "It is quite simply economics. The gambling lords of Nevada and the race track owners of the country perceive an economic threat to their profits."

Indian leaders say the tribes have become increasingly dependent on gambling revenues. Federal funding for Indian programs has declined by 15 percent under the Reagan administration. Many tribes now rely on gaming proceeds to generate more than half of their revenues for health, education and housing needs.

The law, awaiting President Reagan's signature, was a compromise between those who favored severely restricting Indian gambling operations and those who wanted only a bare minimum of state interference.

Arguably, the record of organized crime infiltration in casinos in the past would lead Congress to believe that the tribes should also be scrutinized. But the Indians say they are capable of regulating their own industry rather than surrendering their sovereignty to the states.

Casino owners carried the clout of Nevada Senators Harry Reid, a Democrat, and Chic Hecht, a Republican, into the political ring. Reid got the Senate's attention soon after entering office in 1986 when he introduced a bill that would have outlawed all Indian gambling enterprises except bingo, effectively eliminating the reservations as a source of competition for Nevada.

Indian gaming now generates about $400 million a year.

Market moderate, prices dip

United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened slightly lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.
The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 4.45 Wednesday, was off 2.85 to 2103.66 shortly after the market opened.
Declines led advances 353-259 among the 908 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 5.7 billion shares.
Stock prices posted modest gains Wednesday in active trading after a seesaw day in which takeover or rumor stocks dominated the activity.

The market opened with modest gains but within 30 minutes of the opening bell the Dow had reversed itself and tumbled about 13 points before stabilizing.
It then managed to advance more than 10 points before giving all that gain in early-afternoon trading. The modest gain came in the final half hour.
"The Dow was all over the map but in a narrow range," said Tracie Lathier, a market analyst with Josephthal & Co.

Dollar mostly lower; gold, silver gain

United Press International

The dollar was mostly lower in quiet trading today on major foreign currency markets. The price of gold moved higher.
Dealers said business in currency markets was extremely light as operators awaited the release Friday of U.S. employment statistics for September.
In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell slightly against the Japanese yen in slow trading, closing at 133.30 yen, off 0.18 from 133.48 yen on Wednesday.
In Europe, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.861 West German marks, down from 1.864.

The dollar began trading in Paris at 6.3415 French francs, down from 6.354 and in Brussels the dollar dropped slightly to 39.46 Belgian francs, down from 39.47.
In Milan the dollar slipped to 1,388.50 lire from 1,390.50 but in Zurich it traded unchanged at 1,5825 Swiss francs.
In London the dollar strengthened with the pound opening at $1.6935 compared with $1.696 on Wednesday.
In early New York trading, the dollar was slightly higher against key foreign currencies in thin trading.
On the bullion market gold rallied sharply, extending gains made in New York on Wednesday.

Carnival out in cruise line takeover

United Press International

MIAMI — A minority shareholder of Royal Admiral Cruises said Wednesday it will pay $561 million to buy the balance of the cruise ship company, in a move that apparently sinks a rival bid by Carnival Cruise Lines Inc.
Anders Wilhelmsen & Co. of Oslo, Norway, which owns about 30 percent of the holding company for Royal Caribbean Cruise Line and Admiral Cruises Inc., also said it is negotiating a joint venture agreement with an entity related to the Pritzker family, which owns the Hyatt and Hyatt International hotel chains.
Richard Fain, chairman of Royal Admiral in Miami, said the two companies expect to form an equal partnership.

"It is contemplated that it would be a 50-50 partnership," he said. "My understanding is that they are expected to close (the agreement) shortly."
However, Fain said Wilhelmsen's purchase of Royal Admiral is not contingent on forming the joint venture.

Myerson: 'I should have had a face lift'

United Press International

NEW YORK — Former Miss America Bess Myerson passed icy barbs about her boyfriend's ex-wife to live up the courtroom drama during an unexpectedly quiet first day of testimony in her divorce-fixing trial.
Myerson, facing charges she gave a judge's daughter a job in order to influence the divorce case of her boyfriend, Carl "Andy" Capasso, seemed at ease during breaks in the testimony, which is to resume today in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.
Outside the courtroom during Wednesday's testimony, Myerson made reference to her boyfriend's ex-wife, saying, "Maybe I should have had a face lift like Nancy Capasso did in 1985."

During the testimony, St. John's University professor Alan Scheinkman, a matrimonial law specialist, dryly described the workings of the legal system that prosecutors charge was subverted by Myerson, 64, and her 43-year-old lover, Capasso, a millionaire sewer contractor.
It was a quiet start for the highly publicized trial that saw prosecutors in opening statements Tuesday describe the case as one of "greed and abuse of power" and the defense blame the "Bess mess" on the jealous fury of Nancy Capasso.

Myerson and her boyfriend, who is serving a three-year sentence on an unrelated income tax evasion conviction, frequently conferred and whispered with one another behind the backs of their lawyers seated at the defense table during the professor's testimony.
Prosecutors charge that Myerson, the city's former cultural affairs commissioner, hired the daughter of former state senator James Gabel, 75, to a $19,000-a-year job in a successful bid to have the judge slash temporary alimony payments Capasso had been ordered to pay his ex-wife.
The matrimonial law expert, who appeared as an expert prosecution witness, gave a civics lesson on how divorces are handled in New York state.
Defense lawyers brought Scheinkman a list of divorce payments reduced by Gabel to approximately $358,000 annually on a "pledge" by Capasso for additional outlays elsewhere. The original figure was not disclosed.

It was a successful defense move to show that Nancy Capasso and her children, two of them Capasso's and three of them Nancy's by a previous marriage, were left well-situated.
During a break in the proceedings, Myerson and Capasso joked about the effects of age on their physical appearance.
Capasso, who became noticeably slimmer since imprisonment, pleaded with a television courtroom artist to make him "a little thinner."
When told Myerson looked thin in her long-sleeved turquoise outfit, the aging beauty gave a reply, "I'm not down to my fighting weight yet, 135 pounds."
Myerson, Capasso and Gabel, who is now retired, are charged with conspiracy, mail fraud and violating bribery laws in Manhattan.
Myerson, who is also charged with obstruction of justice, faces up to 20 years in prison. Capasso and Gabel could get up to 25 years if convicted.

Hirohito's condition worsens

United Press International

TOKYO — Emperor Hirohito's health weakened further today as his temperature and pulse rate hit their highest morning levels since his health crisis began 18 days ago. Doctors gave him his 22nd blood transfusion.
Hirohito, at 87, the world's oldest living monarch, has been resting in his Imperial Palace bed since Sept. 19 when he suffered a relapse of suspected abdominal cancer with severe internal bleeding.
A team of five court physicians have tried to stop the bleeding with transfusions of blood rich in red corpuscles, including a transfusion of about half a pint of blood early today, but the treatment has so far failed.

Shea said Garza and the woman who tipped police to his location speak only Spanish, so police have had difficulty communicating with them.
Police believe that Gonzalez was killed during an argument between him and Garza. They were possibly arguing over the woman, Shea said. The investigation into the crimes is being conducted by Texas police.
A palace spokesman said Hirohito discharged blood again in the morning and his temperature at 9 a.m. was 100.6 F and pulse rate 102, about the same as an average adult after jogging. Both indicators were at their highest morning levels since palace officials began reporting Hirohito's vital signs Sept. 20.

Panel: Bentsen defeats Quayle

By THOMAS FERRARO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen defeated Sen. Dan Quayle in their vice presidential showdown, as judged by a panel of communication, political science and debate experts.

Considering such factors as poise and presentation, four of six judges assembled by United Press International gave the contest to Bentsen. But the two others said they saw no winner and that both candidates seemed programmed.

Kathleen Jamieson, communications professor at the University of Texas and author of the book, "Presidential Debates: The Challenge of Creating and Informed Electorate," gave the nod to Bentsen, D-Texas.

"He sounded more decisive, more sure-footed," she said. "Quayle, R-Ind., damaged

(The Jack Kennedy exchange) will raise questions, not allay them, over whether Quayle is qualified to be president."

-Kathleen Jamieson, communications professor and author himself by repeatedly seeming to go back to his script, repeating answers nearly verbatim," like the answers on his qualifications.

She said, "The key moment in the debate was the exchange" over John Kennedy where Bentsen, after Quayle compared himself to the former president, said, "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy."

Jamieson said that will be the sound bite repeatedly played by the news media during coming days and it "will raise questions, not allay them, over whether Quayle is qualified to be president."

Austin Ranney, chairman of the political science department at the University of California at Berkeley, said, "I thought Bentsen won hands down."

Ranney quickly added, however, that Quayle did well enough to "establish himself as a reasonably intelligent and articulate guy" to counter criticism that he is too inexperienced to handle the job.

Stephen Wayne, a political science professor at The George Washington University in Washington, D.C., declared neither man the victor. He said, "My major impression was they were each giving scripted answers."

Larry Sabato, a political science professor at the University of Virginia, agreed with Wayne but speculated that the media would portray Bentsen as the winner.

"Most people in the media and politics have serious questions about Dan Quayle. They were looking for an opportunity to give voice to that concern," Sabato said.

Bentsen heads to Texas

United Press International

OMAHA, Neb. — Confident he has shown that Republican rival Dan Quayle is not ready for the White House, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen began renewed efforts today to put his home state of Texas in the Democratic column on Election Day.

Bentsen today was heading back to Texas, where he planned to join with Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis at a rally at the Lone Star Steel Co.

In their tense 90-minute face-off before 7,000 partisans in the Omaha Civic Auditorium and a television audience in the millions, Bentsen and Quayle traded barbs over the other's presidential candidates.

Two days before the Omaha showdown, Bentsen's campaign aides were playing down expectations for his performance — but after the debate, officials were jubilant that Bentsen appeared knowledgeable and steady against Quayle's stunted seriousness.

An ABC News poll of 637 voters taken immediately after the debate showed 51 percent thought Bentsen won, while 27 percent gave it to Quayle and 22 percent declared it a tie. The survey had a 4.5 percent margin of error.

At a post-debate rally at a downtown hotel, Bentsen avoided any specific assessment of his wrangle with Quayle.

Candidates praise running mates, declare each winner

By DAN CARMICHAEL
United Press International

George Bush said Sen. Dan Quayle was "outstanding" in the vice presidential debate and Michael Dukakis declared his running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, so good that it was "no contest."

Bush watched the debate Wednesday night at a hotel in Fort Worth, Texas, and Dukakis viewed it from his home in Brookline, Mass.

"I'll tell you, it was a great evening for us, a great evening," said Bush, the Republican presidential nominee. "This guy, under tremendous fire ... came through with flying colors, and now people can see what I've seen all along. I thought Senator Quayle was outstanding, commanding, assured."

Dukakis called Bentsen, a senator from the Lone Star State, after the debate to congratulate him and then spoke to hundreds of supporters at a Boston hotel where a band played "The Yellow Rose of Texas."

Dukakis said, "It was no contest. I couldn't be prouder of my running mate. He's going to be a great vice president."

Dukakis added, "The most important qualification for vice president is that he's ready at a moment's notice to assume the presidency of the United States and tonight Lloyd Bentsen demonstrated that he was the one candidate on that stage who meets that qualification."

Shortly after the debate ended, top Bush and Dukakis campaign managers praised the performance of the No. 2 men on the tickets.

Bush campaign chairman James Baker said Quayle gave "an excellent performance, he demonstrated knowledge, experience, and maturity. We are very pleased with what we saw."

"I think it's a win ... Yes, it was a win," Baker said.

Dukakis campaign manager Susan Estrich said, "Dan Quayle is a bigger liability now than he was when he started. He was asked three times to respond to what he would do if he were president and he didn't do it."

President Reagan called Quayle after the debate to congratulate him. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said

"The president and Mrs. Reagan watched the debate on television in their living quarters. The president felt Senator Quayle was effective and did an outstanding job," Fitzwater said.

Tom Cosgrove, Texas director of the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign, said, "Even the Korean judges would have given that one to Lloyd Bentsen," referring to a controversial decision at the Olympic games in Seoul in which a gold boxing medal was given to a Korean boxer over the U.S. fighter.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., also compared the debate to a boxing match.

"If this would have been a boxing match, they would have had to stop the fight."

Quayle says he did well in debate

By BUD NEWMAN
United Press International

OMAHA, Neb. — Republican Dan Quayle, saying he felt great about his performance in a debate that at least one poll showed his losing, turned to the South today, hoping to have quieted the clamor over his qualifications.

The junior senator from Indiana had campaign appearances scheduled today in Missouri, where he was to appear in Springfield with former President Ford, and in Florida.

Top officials in the George Bush-Dan Quayle campaign promptly declared Quayle the victor in his vice presidential debate Wednesday with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

An ABC News poll of 637 voters taken immediately after the debate showed 51 percent thought Bentsen won, while 27 percent gave it to Quayle and 22 percent declared it a tie. The survey had a 4.5 percent margin of error.

The ABC survey also showed that after the debate, Bush's lead in the presidential contest over Democrat Michael Dukakis shrank from five points to two. The poll showed that while Bush's support stayed constant at 50 percent, Dukakis's climbed from 45 percent before the debate to 48 percent afterward.

But Quayle, while declining to claim victory, said he felt good about his performance.

"I feel great," he said after a post-debate rally at Omaha's Peony Park. "I think we did very well."

Quayle got calls of congratulations from Bush, who told his running mate he "did great," a Quayle aide said. President Reagan and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas also congratulated Quayle on his performance.

Quayle declined to say whether he defeated Bentsen in the debate. "I'll let the American people make that determination," Quayle said.

But top campaign aides chose not to wait. They declared Quayle the winner and Dukakis — rather than Bentsen — the big loser because Bentsen "ran away" from defending Dukakis's positions on issues on which the two Democrats disagree.

"I think it's a win," Bush campaign chairman James Baker said immediately after the debate. "The senator really acquitted himself extraordinarily well."

Baker said Quayle, because of his debate performance, "clearly met and overcame ... the test and overcame any questions that exist out there about whether or not he is competent to become president of the United States."

"He cleared that hurdle with a lot to spare — a lot to spare on knowledgeability and competence," Baker said.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Emotions flare at anti-abortion 'siege'

ATLANTA — Anti-abortion protesters, at times hurling themselves in front of women trying to enter abortion clinics, are "crazy people" who have cost the city $500,000 for police to haul them off to jail, the city safety director said.

Thirteen members of the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue were arrested Wednesday, the second day of demonstrations dubbed "Siege of Atlanta" conducted by protesters who are pleading with women not to go through with abortions.

Three were charged with simple assault, a misdemeanor, when a teenage patient they were trying to block from the Feminist Women's Health Center stumbled and fell to the pavement. Other demonstrators threw themselves in front of three women trying to enter the clinic to undergo abortions.

On Tuesday, police said 343 people were arrested. One tearful female protester collapsed on the ground, screaming, "Please God, don't let that little one die. There's a little one left in there. Please Father, don't let it be torn limb from limb."

"We are dealing with some crazy people," said Atlanta Public Safety Director George Napper, watching members of his force detain the marchers. "These are not just religious people. These are fanatics."

Police attend whiz kid's birthday party

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. — Police joined the party when child genius Adragon De Mello and his father, Agustin, who was arrested last month on suspicion of child endangerment, celebrated Adragon's 12th birthday.

De Mello said two police officers and an unidentified family friend were present at the meeting Wednesday at a local restaurant and the elder De Mello said, "I gave him a hamster for his birthday, but he can't take delivery until he gets approval."

Adragon made nationwide headlines when he graduated from the University of California at Santa Cruz in June at age 11 after completing two years of school in one calendar year.

The father made further news when he suggested that his math genius son might go to the Soviet Union to pursue his education because no U.S. graduate school would accept him because of his age.

On Sept. 19, allegations by the boy's mother of a father-son suicide pact prompted police to search the De Mello home. They confiscated 10 guns, some loaded, and a suitcase full of ammunition.

Court approves oil exploration off Alaska

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal appeals court said that environmentalists and Alaska Indians would not suffer hardships from offshore oil exploration on 5.6 million undersea acres in the salmon-rich Bristol Bay area of southeast Alaska.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals cleared the way for exploratory seismic testing and geologic drilling Wednesday by lifting the preliminary injunction imposed by U.S. District Judge James von der Heydt in Anchorage that blocked exploration for two years.

Actual oil drilling was not at issue because it would not be approved until the final stage in the four-phase leasing process, the court noted. The first stages are formulation of a leasing plan, a lease sale and exploration.

Environmentalists lambasted Wednesday's decision.

Sentencing rules called unconstitutional

WASHINGTON — Intricate sentencing guidelines that took three years to draw up are unconstitutional because federal judges had a hand in their creation, a lawyer told the Supreme Court.

Alan Morrison, representing a drug dealer sentenced under the rules, said Wednesday Congress set the commission that drafted the sentencing guidelines mixing the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government in clear violation of the Constitution's provision that requires a separation of powers.

He also said the term "sentencing guidelines" was a misnomer because federal judges have little discretion in criminal sentencing under the rules.

Since the rules went into effect Nov. 1, 1987, at least 59 federal judges have found them unconstitutional while 31 judges have upheld them, according to court records.

From United Press International reports

Columnist Carl Rowan will not be retried

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The city's top prosecutor said he remains convinced that Carl Rowan broke the District of Columbia's strict gun-control law but will not resurrect the case after the syndicated columnist's highly publicized trial ended in a hung jury.

D.C. Corporation Counsel Frederick Cooke Jr., who oversaw Rowan's prosecution, announced on Wednesday that the city would not retry the case, saying he did not believe an impartial jury could be assembled for a second trial.

"This case is over and cannot be brought back," Cooke said.

Rowan, reached Wednesday morning as he was leaving town for the day, said he had heard no official word from the city, but would discuss the matter after an official announcement was made.

Rowan, 63, who has often advocated a national gun-control law, was charged with possessing an unregistered firearm and illegally possessing ammunition under the city's stringent gun-control law after he shot and slightly wounded a teenager behind his home in the early morning hours of June 14.

Cooke said he believed Rowan was guilty of violating the district's gun law, and said he did not believe the testimony of Carl Rowan Jr., who told the jury he was assured on three occasions by city police that the .22-caliber pistol did not have to be registered because of his status as a former FBI agent and federal marshal.

"I happen not to accept Carl Rowan Jr.'s version," Cooke said.

Ben Smith, 18, was among a group of young people who climbed Rowan's fence and were using his backyard swimming pool and jacuzzi before the 2 a.m. shooting. Rowan, who shot Smith once in the wrist, said he fired the gun only after Smith lunged at him, an account Smith denies.

A D.C. Superior Court jury deliberated for 10 hours over two days before becoming deadlocked last Thursday at 9:30 in favor of acquitting Rowan.

Judge Arthur Burnett declared a mistrial and gave the district two weeks to decide whether Rowan would be retried.

Cooke blamed the inability of the jury to reach a unanimous decision on media attention and what he said was the public's misperception of the case.

"We're going to have a string of hung juries," Cooke said, adding that Assistant Corporation Counsel Thomas Collier, who represented the city in the trial, "did a real good job."

The city has faced criticism for its handling of the case against Rowan, and Cooke reportedly was concerned about possible damage to the reputation of the corporation counsel's office if another hung jury or acquittal resulted from a second trial.

But Cooke said Wednesday that public opinion did not influence his decision to drop the case, and said the city residents should not get the impression that the city will blink at hardship prosecution.

Surveys list reasons given for abortions

United Press International

NEW YORK — Too little money and increased job or educational responsibilities force American women to resort to abortions, according to two surveys of women who underwent the procedure during the past two years.

One of the studies, published Wednesday in the magazine Family Planning Perspectives, also said half of the women who had abortions in 1987 reported that they were practicing contraception when they became pregnant.

Nearly a third of all abortions in 1987 were obtained by students and more than six in 10 by working women, and 70 percent of women having abortions say they intend to have children in the future, according to the nationwide surveys of 11,900 women.

One survey, titled "Why Do Women Have Abortions?" conducted by Aida Torres and Jacqueline Darroch Forrest of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, reported, "Three-quarters (of the women responding) said that having a baby would interfere with work, school or other responsibilities; about two-thirds said they could not afford to have a child; and half said they did not want to be a single parent or had relationship problems."

Some of the respondents said they underwent abortions relatively late in pregnancy. The survey said, "Of women who had an abortion at 16 or more weeks' gestation, 71 percent attributed their delay to not having realized they were pregnant or not having known soon enough the actual gestation of their pregnancy."

"Almost half were delayed because of trouble in arranging the abortion, usually because they needed time to raise money," the Torres-Darroch survey report said. "One-third did not have an abortion earlier because they were afraid to tell their partner or parents that they were pregnant."

The second report, "The Characteristics and Prior Contraceptive Use of U.S. Abortion Patients," was based on a study of data collected by Stanley K. Henshaw and Jane Silverman, also AGI analysts.

The study, financed by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' National Institutes of Child Health and Human Development, reported the following:

- Half of all abortion patients in 1987 were practicing contraception during the month in which they conceived, and a substantial proportion of those who were not taking so had stopped using a method only a few months before becoming pregnant.

- Hispanic women are 60 percent more likely than non-Hispanics to have an unintended pregnancy ended by abortion but are less likely than non-whites to do so.

- Women who profess no religion have a higher abortion rate than do women reporting religious affiliation. Catholics are about as likely to obtain an abortion as are all women nationally, while Protestants and Jews are less likely to do so.

- One in six abortion patients in 1987 described themselves as born again or Evangelical Christians. Such women are half as likely as other American women to get abortions.

- Unmarried cohabitating women are nine times as likely as married women living with their husbands to have an abortion. Separated women also are more likely to have abortions.

- School enrollment, employment, low income, Medicaid coverage, intention to have no more children and residence in a metropolitan county also are associated with above-average likelihood of having an abortion.

Shoppers help keep costs down

UPI report

WASHINGTON — Vigilant shoppers, making sure grocers heeded a warning against profiteering from the summer drought, helped to prevent drastic increases in food prices, the head of the Senate Agriculture Committee says.

Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who for months has warned against price gouging, told a hearing Wednesday that shoppers should stay alert and be ready to switch stores if food prices appear unfair.

"Smart shoppers have been comparing prices among brands and between markets. In fact, their vigilance, as much as anything, probably accounts for the fact that there have not been more dramatic food price than we have seen," Leahy said. "At this point, we did not find anything that looks excessive," agreed consumer advocate Ellen Haas.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, in measuring the Consumer Price Index, says grocery prices were up 4.7 percent for the first eight months of this year.

Progress reported in Philippine talks

MANILA, Philippines — A senior U.S. official said after a meeting with President Corazon Aquino today that the "differences are narrowing" in thorny negotiations on the operation of strategic American bases in the Philippines and expressed hope for an early conclusion.

Michael Armacost, undersecretary of state for political affairs, said he discussed the stalled bases negotiations with Aquino during a 40-minute call at the presidential palace.

Details of the meeting with Aquino were not disclosed, but Armacost said Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus and Gaston Sigur, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, continued talks on the bases in New York Wednesday and the results seemed "more encouraging."

Jaruzelski attacks J for Solidarity talks

WARSAW, Poland — A member of a state-sanctioned trade union publicly accused Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski of sacrificing official labor groups "on the altar of the reconciliation" between the government and the banned Solidarity union.

In an angry confrontation broadcast by television news Wednesday, Jaruzelski told a street crowd in the central city of Poznan that Solidarity should be a partner in seeking a social consensus to pull Poland out of its economic crisis. The news program said the meeting took place Monday.

Until last month, the government had refused to talk with Walesa and described the man whose union once boasted 10 million members as a "private person."

Brazil gets new constitution

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Brazil's new democratic constitution not only wipes away the last vestiges of military rule, but also enhances civil rights and protects domestic industries from foreign competition.

The gold-embossed, green leather-bound charter was signed Wednesday by President Jose Sarney, Congress President Ulysses Guimarães and Supreme Court President Rafael Mayer in the flag-draped chamber of Congress in the capital of Brasilia.

Earlier in the day, Sarney said in a televised address that he hoped "the new constitution brings Brazil years of peace, progress, prosperity, understanding and a sense of duty."

It is Brazil's eighth constitution since the country declared independence from Portugal 166 years ago.

North Korea: South fired shots

United Press International

TOKYO — North Korea accused South Korea today of firing several shots at one of its outposts along the tense demilitarized zone separating the two countries and has called the incident a serious military provocation.

North Korea's official Korean Central News Agency said the shooting incident Wednesday "vividly proves that the South Korean puppets' call for detente and dialogue is no more than hypocrisy and deception."

The dispatch monitored in Tokyo indicated that North Korea is likely to reject the latest proposal by South Korean President Roh Tae Woo for a summit with President Kim Il Sung of North Korea to discuss reunification of the divided peninsula.

Roh, banking in the just finished Seoul Summer Olympics, made the offer in a nationally televised address

Tuesday and said he had also lifted a ban on students from the South meeting with their northern counterparts to hold reunification talks.

North Korea, which boycotted the Olympics but found itself isolated when major communist friends joined the Games, accused South Korean forces in the dispatch of "firing several pinpoint shots at our side's post from an artillery piece which they had carried into the DMZ by stealth."

"This artillery firing threatened the safety of our side's civil police personnel who were on their routine duty and destroyed facilities of the post," the news agency said. No injuries were reported.

It said the incident represented a "grave military provocation" and a "deliberate and premeditated provocation intended to screw up the situation on the Korean peninsula to a higher pitch of strain."

Burmese students forming guerrilla units

United Press International

RANGOON, Burma — Student activists say former university military cadets have formed urban guerrilla units and are preparing to attack government troops in three cities.

Although harsh military repression has driven student demonstrators from the streets, student leaders said Wednesday they were regrouping and training for an armed struggle against the government.

Kyaw Swa, who received military training as a reserve officer while a student at Rangoon University, identified the University Student Volunteers Force and the University Training Corps as two guerrilla groups undergoing daily training at secret points in the city.

Kyaw Swa said the groups have a total of about 3,000 members.

"We have divisions in Mandalay, Rangoon, and Moulmein" — the country's three largest cities, he said.

He said the guerrillas have supplies of Chinese-made M-36 hand grenades as well as a few assault rifles.

Student activists claimed responsibility for a mine explosion this week that killed one soldier and left two others seriously wounded.

Millions of Burmese have demonstrated against the government for the past seven months, fed up with 26 years of repression and failed socialist economic policies that have helped make resource-rich

Burma one of the poorest countries in the world.

Some opposition leaders have called the student plans impractical and dangerous because the well-armed and battle-hardened army has already shown it is prepared to open fire even on peaceful demonstrators.

Violent tactics might also endanger promised elections, one opposition leader said.

"The military is just waiting for these groups to attack so they will have an excuse not to hold elections," said Gen. Tin Oo, a retired army officer who is now vice president of the opposition National League for Democracy.

No date has been set for the elections.

IN BRIEF

BASEBALL

Howe interested in Astros job

HOUSTON — Former Astros infielder Art Howe has told club officials he is interested in becoming the team's manager, saying it would be "a dream come true."

Howe, 41, has been with the Texas Rangers the last three years, as hitting instructor and first base coach.

"I've always wanted the opportunity to manage someday, and it would be a dream come true for it to happen here in Houston," said Howe, who lives in Houston.

Howe is believed to be one of the leading contenders to replace Hal Lanier, who was fired during Houston's last game of the season.

Astros first base coach Matt Galante and former Astros Joe Morgan and Phil Garner have also been mentioned as candidates for the job.

BASKETBALL

Spurs sign Robertson

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Guard Alvin Robertson came to terms with the San Antonio Spurs Wednesday on a new seven-year contract with a base pay of $950,000 per year, virtually assuring the popular veteran will finish his career as a Spur.

"Over the long haul, it's going to make me real happy," Robertson said Wednesday night. "I'm really glad it's all finally over and now we can go out and get the job done on the court."

Robertson's agent, Tom Selakovich, and the Spurs have discussed renegotiating the guard's contract all summer. The new deal includes performance incentives for Robertson and is guaranteed for five years.

Spurs owner B.J. "Red" McCombs announced the new agreement. "I told Alvin that it is not my plan to renegotiate contracts," McCombs said. "But from a personal standpoint I really admired Alvin as a player and a person and I wanted to honor the commitment that was made to him."

TENNIS

Curran outlasts Sampras

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — No. 2 seed Kevin Curran withstood a see-saw battle with Pete Sampras and went on to win a hectic 6-7 (7-5), 7-6 (10-8), 7-6 (7-1) match Wednesday night in the second round of the $415,000 Eagle Classic.

Neither managed to break the other's serve in any set.

Curran said he realized he was getting chances at break point, but he was not capitalizing on them. On the other hand, he fended off several challenges from Sampras, a 17-year-old from Palos Verdes, Calif.

Curran fell behind 0-40 in the fourth game of the third set, but won it.

Curran meets No. 8 seed Derrick Rostagno, a 6-3, 2-6, 7-6 (7-4) winner over Johan Kriek, in the quarterfinal round Friday.

In other singles matches Wednesday, Tobias Svantesson outlasted Jim Grabb, 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 (0-8). Grabb had ousted the No. 5 seed, Jay Berger, in the first round.

CROSS COUNTRY

Seminole invite runs today

SANFORD — Seminole County cross country teams will return to action today in the Seminole Invitational to be held at Seminole High School with the first race scheduled to begin at 5 p.m.

The race will include all Seminole County teams with the exception of the Lake Howell girls and Lyman boys varsity. Deltona, Spruce Creek and DeLand are also expected to appear in the meet.

"It will be a nice relaxed race," Seminole coach Ken Brauman said. "There won't be too many power house teams, it should be a fun race on a tough course."

Dodgers get even

Belcher, Hatcher lead way in 6-3 triumph

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Mickey Hatcher rarely starts against right-handers and rookie Tim Belcher will readily admit he's not the No. 2 pitcher in the Los Angeles rotation. But both were in the lineup Wednesday night to help the Dodgers even the National League playoffs at a game apiece.

Hatcher aroused a slumbering offense with a two-run double in the second inning and Belcher fired a five-hitter over 8 1-3 innings as Los Angeles registered only its second victory against New York in 13 games this year with a 6-3 triumph.

Mike Marshall contributed three hits and two RBI and Alejandro Pena prevented a replay of the Mets' Tuesday night comeback victory by retiring Game 1 hero Gary Carter with two out and the bases loaded to end the contest.

Los Angeles, struggling to bat at least 200 the last month, scored more than five runs in a game for only the sixth time since Aug. 18. The Dodgers took a 5-0 lead and made the most of their seven hits, scoring five times with two out.

"We got some runs early and it made my job a heck of a lot easier," said Belcher, who fanned a career-high 10 before weakening in the ninth.

The best of seven series shifts to New York, where Los Angeles sends left-hander John Tudor against right-hander Ron Darling Friday night in Game 3.

In the second inning, the Dodgers sent nine batters to the plate and collected four runs and four hits to drive David Cone from the mound.

Cone, who posted a 20-3 record and finished second in the NL with a 2.22 ERA, threw just 47 pitches, allowing five runs and five hits. The right-hander had won his last eight starts, but hit a batter, balked, issued one unintentional walk and surrendered a single to Belcher — all of which contributed to his downfall.

Cone got in trouble before the game as well. In a ghostwritten article which appeared in Wednesday's New York Daily News, he called Orel Hershiser "lucky" to have pitched well in Game 1 and said reliever Jay Howell reminded him of a "high school pitcher."

Cone's story was posted in Los Angeles clubhouse. "That's nothing but throw gas on our fire," Belcher said. "We see Dodgers, Page 4B"

Athletics disrupt Red Sox

United Press International

BOSTON — The Oakland Athletics grasped more than a 1-0 lead in the American League championship series. They also disrupted the Boston Red Sox's overall strategy for winning the pennant.

Oakland's 2-1 triumph Wednesday in Game 1 came against Bruce Hurst. The Red Sox had decided to bypass ace Roger Clemens for the opening assignment to give Hurst the ball in Fenway Park, where he was 13-2 this year and 25-6 the past two seasons.

It also opened the opportunity for Hurst to pitch three games in the series, including if necessary a Game 7 in Fenway, after his strong close to the season. Now, the chances of the Red Sox getting the series to seven games, or even a Game 6 at home, has been jeopardized.

For even if Clemens can pull out a triumph Thursday night in Game 2, Boston will travel to Oakland for three games with the series tied at 1-1. And the Red Sox have lost 14 of their last 15 at Oakland, including all six game there this season.

"It was nice to beat Hurst because he has pitched so well against us," said Carney Lansford, whose eighth-inning single preceded Dave Henderson's game-winning RBI single. "It was also nice because our record against left-handers this year was not very good (22-25). Bruce has pitched very well, obviously that's why he pitched Game 1."

He pitched Game 1 because he went 9-2 with a 2.47 ERA over his

County powers flex muscles

By CHUCK BURGESS
Herald correspondent

LONGWOOD — The two Seminole County swimming powerhouses hit the pool Wednesday night at Lyman High School as the Greyhounds took on the Lake Brantley Patriots.

The outcome was as everyone had expected with the Lyman boys and Lake Brantley girls dominating. The Greyhound men splashed their way to a 107-35 win in the boys' meet while the Lady Patriots returned the favor in the girls' meet with a 113-45 victory.

"Clay (Parnell) really took it easy on us," Lyman head coach Don Clark said of the Patriots' head coach. "Lake Brantley is awesome. They're definitely contenders for the state championship."

The Patriot girls won all of the swimming events, but the Lady Greyhounds did manage to score a first in the diving with Angie Palf's 39 points. However, it was the flash of the Lady Pats that prevailed as a host of swimmers had double victories.

The sister tandem of Kristen and Ryann Pauley got things underway with their wins. The older Kristen stroked to victory in the 200 individual medley with her time of 2:16.0 and Ryann followed with a win in the 100 freestyle at 56.2. The two girls then teamed with Dani Ohnsman and Gina Story to claim the 400 freestyle relay in 3:49.0.

In the 200 medley relay, the foursome of Beth Rosenbluth, Lindsey Seyler, Liz Rodgers, and Shannon Stevens flew to a win in 2:05.8. Rosenbluth added another win in the 50 free (26.7) and Stevens powered her way to a first in the 100 breaststroke (1:17.6).

Other victories for the Lady Patriots' splashers included Story in the 200 freestyle (2:09.3).

Colder weather, better fishing

By JIM SHUPE
Herald fishing writer

Can't you feel fall in the air early in the morning? The coolness may not last for long, but colder weather is definitely in the offing.

What does this change of seasons mean for the fisherman? First of all, it means fewer anglers. Many Central Florida outdoorsmen elect to hunt in the fall, and this translates into fewer boats on the water and more peace and quiet for the fisherman.

On the freshwater scene, anglers can look forward to improved fishing with dropping water temperatures. Bass will become more active and begin to fatten up for the rigors of winter and the upcoming spawning season. Speckled perch will leave their deep summer haunts for shallower depths in which to spawn. Sunshine and striped bass will once again terrorize schools of baitfish with colder water temperatures.

Salt water angling will also be going through a transitional period. Migrating schools of finger mullet and other baitfish will trigger feeding frenzies by toothy predators. Tarpon, cobia, jack crevalle, king mackerel, sharks, snook, redfish and trout will all share in this bonanza of bait as it migrates south down the east coast.

Wave after wave of cold fronts will stir up the ocean, but fantastic fishing awaits when the seas subside. Grouper and snapper will move onto inshore reefs and provide fast action for those anglers who can find the small rock piles and ledges that hold these tasty fish. Sailfish love rough weather, and anglers who brave high seas can have banner catches of these fine gamefish.

Trout and reds will head for canals and other deep water to seek warmth. Many fishermen actually hope for freezing weather to concentrate the fish and make them targets for Mirrorlures.

grubs and other slowly-worked artificials. Some of the year's largest trout will be caught by anglers who fish at dark on the second or third day of frigid weather.

Don't put your fishing gear up and wait for the spring. Now is the time to put on fresh line in order to tangle with some of the biggest fish of the year!

FISHING FORECAST

Lemon Bluff Fish Camp reports slow bass fishing, but specks, bream and catfish continue to be caught in good numbers in Lake Harney and in the river.

Steve Gard at Osteen Bridge Fish Camp said that a lot of bream are being caught on crickets along the borders of emergent grass beds. Dropping water levels have the bass moving around a lot, with good spots changing from day to day. A cold front is expected to pass through Central Florida today, and cooler weather should really turn the bass on if the winds die down by the weekend.

Sebastian Inlet has been hot and cold. When it's hot it's hot, and when it's not, it's not. It seems to be one extreme or the other. On the good nights, just about everyone connects with at least one snook. On the slow nights, often not a single snook is caught. Most of the snook are running from 8-15 pounds, with one or two over 20 pounds caught each week. Finger mullet often catch the larger fish.

Smith handles difficult time like a champion

By DAVID CORCORAN
Herald correspondent

TALLAHASSEE — The month of September, 1988 has been the toughest of Sammie Smith's life.

For the entire summer all the talk around the college football world has been "Will Sammie Smith win the Heisman Trophy?"

If that wasn't enough, there was the added pressure of being the showcase player on the No. 1 team in the country in every pre-season poll.

And on top of that, there was the added burden of being a husband (wife Angie), and a father (daughter, Janay Chantelle 13 months).

In 1987, Sammie set a FSU single season rushing record, gaining 1,230 yards in only 10 games and his 7.1 average per carry led the nation, as well as a career-high 244 yard effort against East Carolina.

But during this time, Sammie also went through a major period that would change his life.

During the spring, Sammie got his girlfriend Angie pregnant, and instead of asking her to get an abortion, decided to take responsibility and they got married and the baby was born in September.

So, in a nutshell this is what you have.

A 20 year old man, who is trying to get a college education to better himself and his family (he lives in Zellwood when not at FSU), with the added responsibilities of being a new husband and father.

That's enough pressure for any young person.

But when you also know that this young man is one of the best football players in America, well that's really pressure.

The early going of the 1988 season was not pleasant for Smith. In the 31-0 loss to Miami, he gained just 6 yards on 10 carries. In game two vs. Southern Miss., he suffered bruised ribs. In game No. 3, he was held to under 40 yards. And in the fourth game against Michigan State, he gained less than 30 yards.

So even though the Seminoles were 3-1 and ranked 9th in the country, the

"I have a wife and little girl to support. If I look at it from that aspect, I have to consider turning pro."

— Sammie Smith

talk around the country was not about FSU, but "What's wrong with Sammie?"

On Sept. 28, Sammie held a news conference and announced that he was considering that he might forgo his senior year at FSU and enter the 1989 NFL draft (he is a senior in terms of academics and can graduate with a degree in social science in the summer of 1989).

But the national news media blew the whole thing out of proportion, and the rumors started that Sammie was quitting FSU and giving up the college game altogether.

But Sammie responded like a champion as he exploded for 212 yards and two TDs against Tulane in the Seminoles 48-28 win last Saturday in New Orleans.

And on Tuesday, Sammie

finally decided to put all the rumors to rest. He wants his side of the story told.

Of the early season problems (the first 4 games): "It wasn't my fault that I haven't had the great games, because Sammie Smith can't do it without an offensive line. We had to put together a lot of different combinations on the offensive line because of injuries."

On the possibility that Smith may turn pro in 1989: "That's nothing new. I've always thought about turning pro, and I think that a pro career is something that every football player here (FSU) thinks about. And at the end of the season, if I feel that I'm ready to turn pro, then I may, and then again I may not."

"And I also have a wife and little girl to support, and I've played football for 8-9 years, and now I would like to get something out of it. If I look at it from that aspect, I definitely have to consider turning pro."

On his feelings towards the news media's handling of his personal life:

"They made a big deal out of the meeting that coach

Bowden and I had last week. Just because we had a meeting and it was behind closed doors, everybody thought that (the rumors) something's going on. Nothing negative came out of the meeting, but I do think sometimes news people tend to overstep boundaries and tend to get into stuff that's none of their business."

Bobby Bowden feels "What the media does is the nature of the job. Football or athletics are for tough minded people. You're going to get criticized. And you're going to get criticized good."

Bowden also said that the problem with Sammie "is a combination of us (FSU) playing three (Miami, Clemson, Michigan St.) of the best run defenses in the country, the offensive line being hurt, and Sammie getting hurt in the Southern Miss. game. So, I think all that together has slowed him down, but he had a lot of fight in him last week (against Tulane)."

"And remember, we've got 12 games this year, not just four."

Jerry helps spark Lyman to 3-0 start

By DEAN SMITH
Herald correspondent

LONGWOOD — Lyman High School's Steve Jerry is one of those people who is a leader by example. He will do anything and everything it takes to help his ballclub win.

So far, Jerry's all-around versatility has helped Lyman to a 3-0 start. He has rushed for 189 yards and three touchdowns, thrown for 127 yards and one touchdown, and on defense plays a superb safety.

"Steve has a lot of ability. He's the kind of player who makes things happen, no matter where he plays," Lyman coach Bill Scott said. "It's like the other coaches tell me, he makes you defense the whole field, the team feels that when he gets his hands on the ball something is going to happen."

Jerry, who has been a starter since his sophomore season with the Greyhounds, said he has no preference of what position he plays, as long as it benefits the team.

"It does not matter to me that I have to play both ways. I can do it and it helps the team. The coaches run us a lot in practice to keep us in pretty good shape."

Steve comes from a football family, his uncle, Al Latimer, played for Lyman in the mid 1970s, and later played in the NFL for the Detroit Lions. His cousin, Clarence Latimer, played at Winter Park High School and the University of Miami, so a lot of his ability may come naturally.

He says it does not really matter to him what position he plays. "I can play quarterback, tailback, wide receiver, defensive safety, cornerback. I have even played linebacker at times. Wherever I can help the team I don't mind."

Steve is also a very good student, carrying close to a 3.0 grade point average. "I'm trying to keep my grades up and send them back."

Steve Jerry, Lyman High senior, is one of the most versatile players in Seminole County this season. He is among the county leaders in rushing, passing and receiving and is also a talented defensive safety.

Division II. But I think I could play Division I as a wide receiver or a safety. But, no matter how big or how small the college is, I fill all of the letters out and send them back."

Scott said Jerry not only has great athletic talent, but is a very intelligent competitor and an intelligent player.

"Steve is a competitor, he really loves the competition."

Peters, Calvin lead Lady Rams' victory

By MARK BLYTHE
Herald sports writer

Junior Terri Peters moved from better to bitter and performed well while freshman Tara Calvin turned in a strong all-around effort as Lake Mary's Lady Rams claimed a 15-1, 15-13 victory Wednesday over Bishop Moore's Lady Hornets at Orlando.

Lake Mary, 10-5, will return to action today at home against Lyman in an important SAC matchup. Lyman defeated Jones on Wednesday and the two teams are a game apart in the conference race.

"We were able to play everyone in today's match and everyone played well," Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry said. "We lost a little intensity in the second game but we managed to win."

Peters and freshman Calvin turned in superb all-around efforts for the Lady Rams while Tammy Scott added strong play at the net with Peters calling upon to help on the front line.

"We had to take Terri (Peters) from the setter position when we lost Farah Mirza to mono this week," Henry said. "Terri did real well adjusting and hopefully we can continue to play well tomorrow against Lyman. They (Lyman) scare me because they keep coming at you, they've improved a great deal and they want to win."

SEMINOLE DOWNS OSCEOLA

In the past, Seminole always suffered when it just went through the motions. This season, the Lady 'Noles are powerful enough to endure a sluggish performance. That's what happened Wednesday when SHS posted a 15-8, 15-10, victory over Kissimmee Osceola in prep volleyball action in Kissimmee.

Seminole, 12-3, will return to action today against DeLand in a Seminole Athletic Conference matchup. The Lady Tribe is 6-2 in the SAC and looks to improve on that today against the winless Lady Bulldogs.

"We didn't do anything that spectacular today, we just went through the motions," Seminole coach Beth Corso said. "Bobbie Osbourne did a nice job setting and Adrian Hillsman and Liz Long also did well on the front line."

Hillsman served the final five points of the first game to give the Lady Tribe the victory. All five serves fell in for aces and Seminole took a one game advantage.

Lake Mary's Terri Peters goes to the floor to save a ball. Peters played a key role Wednesday as the Lady Rams defeated Bishop Moore, 15-1, 15-13.

Yolanda Baker came up with five straight service points in the second game, which included four consecutive aces, to put the Lady Kowboys away.

Sloan, Sewell serve Rams past Tribe

LAKE MARY — The serving of Matt Sloan and Jason Sewell got Lake Mary's Rams off to a blazing start and they went on to claim a 15-1, 15-10 victory over Seminole High Wednesday in Seminole Athletic Conference boys volleyball action at Lake Mary High.

The Rams ran their record to 8-0 overall and 7-0 in the league while SHS dropped to 0-2. Lake Mary has a big game today at 5 p.m. at home against Lyman while Seminole looks for win number one at DeLand.

Sloan opened the match by serving six points in a row and, after Seminole scored one, Sewell came on to serve nine in a row to close out the game. In game two, Matt Rapp came up with six service winners while Mike Clark added five.

"Seminole played pretty well against Lake Howell so our kids didn't take them lightly," Lake Mary coach Bill Whalen said. "I hope we can rise to the occasion again when we play Lyman."

LADY LIONS TRIUMPH

Gateway's Lady Panthers have only two losses this season, both against Oviedo's Lady Lions. Wednesday night, Oviedo used the strong net play of Suzanne Hughes and the superb defense of Corrie Lawson to take a 15-6, 15-11 victory from the Lady Panthers at Gateway High.

Oviedo ran its record to 11-1 overall while Gateway now stands at 7-2.

Oviedo's junior varsity upped its record to 12-0 by defeating Gateway in two games.

APOPKA TOPS HOWELL

Apopka's Lady Blue Darters avenged an earlier defeat by founting Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks, 15-3, 15-13, Wednesday at Apopka.

"Apopka has improved quite a bit and once again we didn't help ourselves," Lake Howell coach Jo Luciano said.

Apopka played a strong opening game and also took advantage of Lake Howell's serve receive problems. In game two, Apopka built a 9-3 lead before Debbie McDonough and Leslie Barton brought Lake Howell back, but Apopka held on for the win.

BOSTON — Dave Henderson, a postseason hero for Boston two years ago, singled home Carney Lansford with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning Wednesday to lift the Oakland Athletics to a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

Henderson, nearly the goat of the game in the seventh inning, hit an RBI single to right that enabled Oakland to hand Bruce Hurst only his third loss in 16 decisions at Fenway Park this year.

Lansford, who won a batting title with Boston in 1981, led off the eighth with a double and Henderson followed with his single.

Henderson was a hero for the Red Sox in game 5 of the 1986 playoffs when he hit a home run in the ninth inning against California that enabled Boston to stave off elimination. The Red Sox went on to beat the Angels in seven games.

The Red Sox put the tying run on second in the ninth when Jody Reed doubled with two out. After Rich Gedman walked, Dennis Eckersley, the major league leader in saves this season, struck out Wade Boggs, the major league's leading hitter, to end the game. It was Eckersley's sixth save against the Red Sox this season.

Eckersley worked two innings

In relief of winner Rick Honeycutt, who took over for starter Dave Stewart in the seventh.

Game 2 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled for Thursday night at 8:20 p.m. EDT. Two-time AL Cy Young winner Roger Clemens will start for Boston and Storm Davis for the A's. The playoffs shift to Oakland for Game 3 Saturday.

Hurst, who has been virtually unbeatable at Fenway the last two years, went the distance. The left-hander allowed 6 hits, walked 3 and struck out 7. The loss was Hurst's first in four career postseason decisions.

Henderson's failure to catch a soft fly ball by Gedman in the seventh helped the Red Sox tie the score.

Stewart, a 20-game winner in each of the past two seasons, had dominated the game through six innings but showed signs of tiring in the seventh when he went 3-0 on the first two batters.

Jim Rice walked with one out and Kevin Romine pinch ran for him. Stewart hit Jody Reed with a pitch and Gedman followed with a blooper to center. Henderson charged the ball but slipped on the wet turf as the ball dropped in front of him for a single that loaded the bases.

Boggs, who had struck out with the bases loaded earlier in the game, then hit a sacrifice fly to left to tie the score at 1-1.

Oakland had taken a 1-0 lead in the fourth when Jose Canseco, who hit a major-league leading 42 homers this season, led off the with a blast into the screen above the Green Monster in left center. It was his first homer in 29 plate appearances at Fenway this season but his fourth career home run off Hurst.

The Red Sox missed a chance for a big inning in the second. With two out, Rice singled and Reed walked. Oakland shortstop Walt Weiss then saved a run with a diving stop of Gedman's hard smash in the hole and Stewart bore down to strike out Boggs on a high fastball.

final 14 starts. Toronto was 7-0 at Fenway this year and inflicted both of Hurst's home losses. Aside from the Blue Jays, Hurst had not lost at Fenway since Sept. 23, 1987, against Detroit.

Hurst was far from disappointing against Oakland. He threw a six-hitter with three walks and seven strikeouts.

"It was a big key for us to beat a guy who pitched that well at home," Oakland shortstop Walt Weiss said.

"When your starting pitcher allows only two runs to Oakland, you should win," Red Sox catcher Rich Gedman said.

Now, it is up to Clemens, who finished 3-7 after hurting his back in August. The Red Sox claim their fireballing right-hander is fine, but he did not use his fastball as much down the stretch as he usually does.

"It says something about beating Hurst," Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said. "But, then again, we have to go against Clemens tomorrow."

The loss by Hurst might force Red Sox Manager Joe Morgan to do some shuffling of his rotation.

He has refused to divulge anything beyond his Game 3 starter, Mike Boddicker.

But, down one game already, Morgan would be hardpressed to let Wes Gardner start Game 4. He's more likely now to pitch Hurst on short rest and go again to Clemens for Game 5, if necessary.

"We really can't worry about what happened today with Hurst," Boston shortstop Jody Reed said. "Right now there are only a certain amount of games you can worry about. We better worry about the games ahead of us."

Dodgers show their character

United Press International

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers have talked all season of their character. Wednesday night, they displayed it.

There was a big question last night after we lost the way we did," Los Angeles right fielder Mike Marshall said after the Dodgers evened the best-of-seven National League playoffs with a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets. "We were down, we were demoralized."

"We had that situation three or four times this year when we were in trouble. We've come back each time. (Tito) Lefebvre pitched a great game, we had some hits in the holes and we found the breaks."

Many expected the Dodgers to fold after they blew a 2-0 ninth-inning lead in Game 1 and lost 3-2.

"Everyone was saying the defeat affected the ballclub," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "When we came out and scored five runs in the first two innings, that was indicative of the ballclub we have."

The Dodgers were jacked up by a New York newspaper column written by Mets starter David Cone. In the story, Cone questioned the Dodgers' ability, called them "lucky" and said reliever Jay Howell looked like a "high school pitcher."

"After that, I knew we would be up to start the game," said Dodger second baseman Steve Sax. "I know the guys were psyched up."

Cone allowed five runs and departed after two innings. The Dodgers continually yelled at him during a four-run second inning.

"I think he made his deadline tonight," Sax said. "What we were saying to him, I can't tell you. This is for family review. I'll clean it up a little bit — bleep, bleep, bleep."

Ahead 6-2, the Dodgers nearly buckled again in the ninth when the Mets scored a run and brought the go-ahead run to the plate.

"We played eight great innings again tonight," said Dodger catcher Mike Scioscia. "We've had good relief pitching all season. I felt confident."

"We haven't given up all season. There was no reason to give up now. We came back in this ballgame and we've got a real chance in the series."

Scioscia said the playoff will take many more turns.

"It's too early to talk about pivotal games," he said. "We can't look that far down the road. Whoever wins Game 3, I don't think it will be pivotal."

Marshall said Cone's remarks will be forgotten.

"This series is going to be decided on the field, not in the newspapers," he said.

came into the clubhouse pretty inflamed. I'm sure he'll think twice before he gets in front of a typewriter again."

Said Cone: "My comments were said in a facetious manner after a very emotional game."

Belcher, moved up in the rotation when Tudor developed hip soreness and Tim Lary slumped late in the year, displayed an outstanding curve and split-fingered off-speed pitch. The right-hander started the only other game in which the Dodgers beat the Mets this season.

After allowing a single to Darryl Strawberry with one out in the fourth, Belcher faced the minimum 14 hitters until Len Dykstra opened the ninth with a double.

The Mets, who scored three times in the ninth to pull out the opener, then received a single by Keith Hernandez that made it 6-3. Jesse Orosco relieved and surrendered a single by Strawberry.

Pena induced Kevin McReynolds to foul out but Howard Johnson climbed out of an 0-2 hole to walk and fill the bases. However, Carter — who hit a two-out, two-run double in the ninth to provide the winning margin Tuesday — flied to right fielder Marshall to end the game.

"The biggest boost of all was Marshall's catch at the end," Hatcher said. "They just never give up."

Los Angeles' best pinch hitter, Hatcher usually sits in favor of left-handed swinger Frazer Stubbbs. He started at first base and produced the big hit in the second.

"We've done that a few times, inserting Hatcher," Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda said. "We know he's a pretty good hitter. He does something to ignite our ballclub; he fires us up and he hustles."

With Los Angeles ahead 1-0 in the second, Jeff Hamilton was struck by a pitch with one out and took second when Belcher — an .073 hitter this season — singled up the middle. Steve Sax followed with another bounce over second, and the Dodgers led by two.

Hatcher, who had 49 at-bats against right-handers and 142 against southpaws this year, lashed his two-run double just inside the third-base line.

Belcher scored easily and Sax slid just inside Carter's tag to beat Johnson's relay throw, and the Dodgers' advantage was 4-0.

"You come to the park and don't expect to play, then you see your name in the lineup and get excited," Hatcher said.

After an intentional walk to Kirk Gibson, Marshall singled to right to compete the outburst.

The Mets belted the first homer of the series to get to within 5-2 in the fourth. Rookie Gregg Jefferies walked leading off before Hernandez drove a 1-2 pitch some 400 feet to right-center.

But the Dodgers retaliated with a run in the fifth off Rick Aguilera. Marshall and Mike Scioscia singled and Hamilton walked to fill the bases with one out. Alfredo Griffin's run-scoring groundout made it 6-2.

As they did in Game 1, the Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the first with a bloop RBI single by Marshall.

Hatcher walked with one out, then appeared to be thrown out at second attempting to advance on a pitch in the dirt, but Cone was called for a balk.

Gibson flied out before Marshall's pop fell between sliding left fielder McReynolds and shortstop Johnson. The Dodgers would never trail.

Light to teach five-day course on watercolors

SANFORD — Artists' Co-operative Workshops will sponsor Duane R. Light for a five-day course Oct. 17-21 at the Holiday Inn in Sanford on Lake Monroe.

Light's course topics will consist of "The Concept," "Composition," "Value," "Color" and "Technique."

Class participants will paint or sketch on location when light allows. Light will cover the basics for novice painters who want to study with an instructor who interprets art terminology.

Light, a self-employed illustrator for 21 years, has taught drawing, painting and airbrush. He is a professional photographer and author of three books, including Watercolor.

The workshop fee is $175. Welcoming dinner is an extra charge. If a person lives locally, they may come for a few days of the workshop.

To make reservations for the class, contact ACW representative Pauline C. Stevens at 323-4938. One should make his own reservations with the Holiday Inn.

Mother hates the fact that she lacks love for daughter

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem loving my 15-year-old daughter, "Lisa." Since the day she was born, I've had to force myself to show her any affection. I don't have this problem with my 13-year-old son.

When I hug Lisa, I feel embarrassed and a little hypocritical. Why? She is a very happy, outgoing girl and a wonderful daughter—always helping me around the house because I work full time away from home.

I am afraid she's beginning to notice my attitude toward her. Maybe it's my guilty conscience. Every day I tell myself that tomorrow will be different. But it never is. The truth is, I really do love her; it's just hard for me to show it. I would like to have a close mother-daughter relationship so she will come to me if she ever needs me. (I never had this with my own mother.)

Abby, I was 17 and pregnant with Lisa when I married her father. His parents never liked me. I never should have married him. It was a miserable marriage. We're divorced now. Do you think that has anything to do with the way I feel about my daughter? Help me, please.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: I think

ADVICE

you've found the first piece of this puzzle. For years, you have unconsciously blamed your daughter for your miserable marriage because you couldn't bring yourself to blame yourself. Get professional help to bring your deeply buried feelings to the surface where you can examine them for what they are. And then forgive yourself. Once this is accomplished, you will be able to express your love to Lisa without feeling hypocritical. Good luck, mother.

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked at your response to "Divorced Dad," who asked into which restroom he should take his 2-year-old daughter when they were in a public place and she had to use the bathroom. You recommended taking the child to the men's room because if women were using the ladies' room, they would be "outraged" to see a man walk in—even to tend to the needs of his small daughter.

Abby, please never say it's OK for a little girl to go into a men's room—even with her daddy!

SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: Little boys are taken into ladies' rooms by their mothers, so why shouldn't little girls be taken into men's rooms by their fathers? (Better a small girl in a men's room than a grown man in a ladies' room.)

And by the way, my answer prompted an unsolicited "bravo" from David L. Levy, Esq., the president of The National Council for Children's Rights.

DEAR ABBY: A month ago, my younger sister and her boyfriend announced their engagement. She is 22 and he is 26. They are planning to be married in 16 months.

Since then, my boyfriend and I have decided to take the same step—probably much sooner than my sister. I am 26 and he is 34. Abby, we don't want any hurt feelings, neither do we want to steal my sister's thunder or, worse yet, commit a breach of etiquette. Would it be all right for us to get married prior to my sister's wedding? Or must we wait until after she's married?

TWO LOVEBIRDS
IN EL CENTRO

DEAR LOVEBIRDS: You'd have to be cuckoo to wait for 16 months! Discuss this with your sister. I can't imagine her having any objections. After all, you're the older one, and traditionally you should marry first. You are most considerate to be concerned about stealing your sister's thunder, but she didn't invent marriage. Love knows no timetable, so if you're ready now, I say, let the wedding bells toll for thee, and good luck.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 68440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

Uncovering facts about hepatitis

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've been on cortisone for five years for chronic hepatitis. I also take Imuran, Lasix, MicroK and hormones. I get black and blue marks all over my arms. Would you discuss this condition.

DEAR READER: Chronic hepatitis is arbitrarily defined as liver inflammation that lasts more than six months. It is further subdivided into two classes.

●Chronic persistent hepatitis is benign, usually follows typical acute hepatitis, rarely causes symptoms and needs no treatment.

●Chronic active hepatitis, on the other hand, is serious. It is thought to be due to an inefficient immune response to the hepatitis B virus. Some medicines, such as methyldopa (for hypertension) and isoniazid (for tuberculosis) can cause chronic active hepatitis. This ailment can progress to cirrhosis (liver scarring) or liver failure. Diagnosis is made by liver biopsy. Treatment includes cortisone and immune suppressing drugs, such as Imuran, in order to reduce liver inflammation and retard hepatic damage.

Unfortunately, these medicines also affect tissues other than the liver. In particular, blood clotting may be impeded. Therefore, patients on cortisone or Imuran may tend to bleed readily and bruise easily. I suspect that your black and blue marks are drug-induced. However, the healthy liver plays a role in blood coagulation, so if your liver is malfunctioning, your blood clotting may be slowed by liver disease, irrespective of the therapy.

You seem to be under the care of a doctor who is judging from the treatment you are receiving, familiar with chronic hepatitis. I suggest that you ask him or her about your bruising.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm allergic to egg albumin and have positive TB tests, although my lungs are clear. Is this because the test is cultured with egg?

DEAR READER: Depending on the test, tuberculin antigen should be free of contamination. In particular, PPD (purified protein derivative) is isolated from human strains of tuberculosis and should cause no reaction unless the patient is responding specifically to the test substance.

In your case, I suspect that you are reacting to the tuberculin derivative. This means that you probably have

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

You have opened a sub-marginal hand in third position because of favorable vulnerability. What do you do now if your partner doubles a one no-trump overall? Since bridge rules do not allow you to pray for rain, you must decide whether to pass or bid. Look at today's East hand, ignoring for the time being the strategy of the questionable opening bid. Doesn't it seem dangerous to pass and hope for the best, defending against the doubled contract, particularly since East can bid two clubs, his second suit, with some chance of playing a makeable part-score contract? That would be my view had I opened the East hand, but I am happy to say that my partner in a regional pair event last summer took the more aggressive stance. He thought I would have 10 points for my double, and with his own 10 points and our side having the advantage of the opening lead, he passed and hoped for the best.

When diamonds were led, declarer won and led a low heart to the queen and king. East returned a diamond, and West took five more diamond tricks and the ace of spades for down one. Although West had only eight high-card points for his penalty double, the six-card diamond suit compensated. Even though discretion is the better part of valor, the valor exhibited by East won out this time.

Drug shows promise for children with AIDS

United Press International

BOSTON — A government study indicating the only drug proven to help adult AIDS victims will also limit the damage the disease inflicts on children is an "exciting first step" toward helping these patients, an expert says.

Researchers at the National Cancer Institute reported Wednesday in The New England Journal of Medicine that the drug AZT appears effective for treating children infected with the deadly AIDS virus.

"It does appear to have a significant impact on the course of the disease," said Dr. Philip Pizzo, chief of pediatrics for NCI who headed the study, which is the first of its kind.

Pizzo noted the study only involved 21 children and additional studies involving larger numbers of children and various methods of administering the drug are needed to evaluate the treatment.

"At this point we conclude on the basis of what is clearly preliminary data that AZT does appear to be beneficial to children with AIDS," said Pizzo by telephone. "It requires further study."

But the study indicated AZT has significant benefits for children infected with the AIDS virus, helping them gain weight, eat better, maintain a better immune system and continue normal mental development.

"I think it's an exciting first step in providing children with [AIDS] with access to the kinds of drugs they should have access to," said Dr. James Oleske, a professor of pediatrics at the New Jersey Medical School in Newark.

Oleske is helping conduct a followup study to confirm the benefits of AZT for children, he said.

Although only about one to two percent of all AIDS cases involves children, the incidence of AIDS among the young is increasing, researchers said. Babies are most commonly infected with the virus from their infected mothers.

AZT, which interferes with the ability of the AIDS virus to reproduce, does not cure the disease but has been shown to be effective in adults for improving their quality of life and helping them live longer.

Panel: Incontinence can be cured

United Press International

BETHESDA, Md. — Urinary incontinence, considered part of growing old, can be cured or improved with a physician's care, but many elderly sufferers are reluctant to seek medical help and doctors tend to ignore the problem, experts say.

In a report submitted to the National Institutes of Health, a panel of medical experts "conservatively estimated" Wednesday that urinary incontinence cost the nation about $10.3 billion in 1987.

The panel found 15 to 30 percent of all people over 60 and at least 50 percent of nursing home residents are troubled by involuntary urination. Women are twice as likely as men to suffer from the problem.

"Urinary incontinence is very common among older Americans and is epidemic in nursing homes," the committee said, adding that although many elderly people have problems controlling urine flow it is a myth that incontinence is part of normal aging.

"Contrary to public opinion and often medical opinion, most cases of urinary incontinence can be cured or improved," Dr. John Rowe, committee chairman and president of Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, told a news conference.

The panel found more than half of the 10 million Americans with urinary incontinence have received no medical evaluation or treatment. "Most health care providers ignore urinary incontinence and certainly do not provide adequate diagnosis and treatment," Rowe added.

Incontinence can stem from many different sources, including weakened pelvic muscles, prescription drugs, infection, enlarged prostate glands and spinal cord tumors. Giving birth can increase the risk for incontinence because it appears to weaken the sphincter muscle that keeps the bladder shut.

In its 22-page report, the 15-member panel recommended that doctors try to correct incontinence with behavioral changes, such as pelvic muscle exercises or drugs, before resorting to surgery.

Instead of going to a doctor for help when incontinence first begins, many people simply cope with their wetness problem using absorbent material, such as paper towels, sanitary napkins and more expensive products specifically designed to soak up urine.

Absorbent products, while they may be very helpful to many individuals, are costly and are really a last ditch treatment," said Rowe. "People may prematurely turn to these products without seeking proper diagnosis."

The committee unanimously recommended that the Food and Drug Administration require makers of adult diapers to label their products with the warning that if someone is troubled by persistent incontinence, they should see their

Viral disease may cause cancer in young women

SAN FRANCISCO — Researchers say a virus that causes the most common sexually transmitted disease among teenagers is also implicated in cervical cancer, highlighting the need for early detection and treatment.

Scientists who studied 1,400 sexually active girls under age 19 in the San Francisco area reported Wednesday that more of them suffered from genital infections caused by the human papilloma virus, or HPV, than from chlamydia and gonorrhea combined.

"That is an extraordinary finding, important for taking preventive and detection measures," said Dr. Gary Schoolnik, chief of the Division of Geographic Medicine and associate professor of medicine at Stanford University.

"It may turn out such measures against the most common sexually transmitted disease among adolescent women should be taken as soon as a woman is sexually active," Schoolnik said at the annual American Medical Association Science Reporters Conference.

The HPV family of viruses includes 45 known types, which can persist for years and cause disorders ranging from hand warts to cancer. Of the sexually transmitted HPV diseases, the most common include genital warts, cervical intraepithelial neoplasia, or CIN, and cancer of the cervix.

HPV-caused venereal diseases have increased six-fold in the United States in the past decade, Schoolnik said in an interview, with Americans making an estimated 2 million visits to the doctor's office each year for treatment.

He said the key was to catch and treat the diseases at an early stage since by the time that the first outward symptoms occur — such as discomfort or bleeding following intercourse — the disorders have progressed to a dangerous point.
