The Blind Mosquito War:

By MARK WEINBERG Herald Staff Writer

The appointment by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce last week of a special task force to find a solution to the Sanford lakefront blind mosquito problem marks the second consecutive year the chamber has worked on the problem.

But, despite last year's efforts, there were no new programs to eliminate the pesky midges that spawn at the bottom of Lake

Last June, the chamber convened a one-day conference on the blind mosquito. The conference was attended by Polk and Lake County mosquito control officials, Fred Hassut Jr., of the State Bureau of Entomology, Sanford and Seminole County officials, concerned businessmen and ir

TURNING OFF AN ERA

The holiday weekend was kicked off Saturday with the end of an era in Sanford - as Francis E. Roumillat Jr. locked the door of his drugstore at 100 E. First St., for the final time after 55 years. Roumillat's was the haven for many of the city and county decision-makers and area politicians.

holiday beachgoers applauded as Voyager 1 blasted smoothly into space exactly on time today, taking a shortcut that will put it near Jupiter and Saturn ahead of its twin launched 17 days earlier.

"Everything looks good," a spokesman for the Kennedy Space

Scientists said the three-day delay in launch to give engineers time to put extra springs on Voyager 1's arms had paid off. A spokesman said the arms, loaded with cameras and scientific equipment, were locked in position.

"We have confirmation that both booms are fully deployed with everything locked in place. That's another milestone for Voyager 1," the spokesman said.

A similar boom on Voyager 2 had failed to move completely into position after launch and scientists worried that the mission would be crippled. It is now believed to be within a fraction of its

Project scientists, trying to avoid the same problem w Voyager 1, delayed launch from Sept. 1 and installed extra springs on both arms to give them more of a push to put them in

Voyager 1's launch went smoothly from the start. The spacecraft lifted off into clear blue skies at 8:56 a.m. EDT, FOG carried aloft by a Titan-Centaur rocket that left a long white tail

The rocket's thunder startled a flock of eight rare roseatte spoonbills feeding in a marshy area about three miles away. The birds ruffled their pink plumage as the spacecraft sped on its multibillion-mile journey to the outer edges of the solar system. The Titan portion of the rocket separated shortly after liftoff, and an hour later the Centaur broke away, leaving Voyager 1 on since its Aug. 20 launch. But Voyager 1 will fly a more direct route and will be first to arrive near Juputer and Saturn, scientists said.

Scientists designed Voyager 1's path to bring it closest to Jupiter on March 5, 1979 and closest to Saturn on Nov. 12, 1980. Voyager 2's closest planned approaches are to Jupiter on July 10, 1979 and Saturn Aug. 27, 1981 Space scientists say the sophisticated spacecraft could function as long as 30 years, so Voyager 2 could be sent on toward Uranus and Neptune. But it would not reach Uranus until 1986 or Neptune

Jupiter and Saturn are tremendous in size. Jupiter has 1, 300 times the volume of earth and Saturn has 55 times earth's volume. They are giant balls of gas, composed mostly of hydrogen or helium and may possibly have rocky cores. The planets, located so far from the sun, are believed to be

The early morning Labor Day hours presented a stark contrast for Seminole Countians today as the fog that covered the area later lifted, offering a bright, clear day to mark the holiday.

Babe Dragging, Fading-There's 'Not Much To It'

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) -Hurricane Babe blustered and weakened as it stormed inland across the Louisiana coast this morning, leaving heavy rains behind but apparently little

"Nothing much to it," said Fred Marshall in the Civil Defense office in Morgan City where the storm came ashore. Some streets and highways were flooded, and tides along the marshy coast were reported four or five feet above normal.

However, forecasters warned that tornadoes could spin out of the storm as it moved slowly toward Baton Rouge. Southern Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and northwestern Florida were put under tornado watch.

The low-lying area had been evacuated well before the hurricane hit land. The impact was lessened because of the Labor Day weekend, with shops

As the hurricane dragged across the land, the storm winds wore down. The National Weather Service located the storm about 50 miles south of Baton Rouge. Highways leading into Plaquemines Parish were opened and refugees were told they could return home.

Weather service radar tracked Hurricane Babe as it came ashore about 5 a.m., 25 miles south of Morgan City about 75 miles southwest of New Orleans. It was poorly ormiles an hour - about half the strength of Hurricane Anita's winds that lashed Mexico last However, forecasters said up to four inches of rain could fall as the storm inched along. Officials in cities like New Orleans said four inches of rain would be no problem for flood-control facilities.

But the main concern along the swampy coast was that heavy rains would combine with the already-sodden ground and cause local flooding. Last month was the wettest August in Louisiana this century. "It wasn't too bad," said St.

Mary Parish Sheriff Chester Baudoin. "We don't even have any broken limbs in the road."

Sanford Marina operators tried to make it easier for holiday boaters today by clearing out water hyacinths or weeds that congest slips along the marina and public boat ramps. Between 75 and 100 boats had already set out as early as 8:30 this Labor Day morning.

Principle Taken For A Ride

So during his campaign for President, Jimmy Carter benefited from three, probably five, flights on a plane belonging to the National Bank of Georgia, and Mr. Carter now proposes to pay for

The bill comes to $1,793.90 for all five, and, of course, that's beans as a contribution to a multimillion dollar presidential campaign.

But a contribution it was, nonetheless, and so it very well may be a violation of the Federal Campaign Act, which forbids corporate contributions in cash, housing, or transportation. Transportation was what Mr. Carter got, free rides through the Georgia skies.

Now, we've no doubt that Mr. Carter wasn't trying to beat the law. An unwitting violation it would have been, but unwitting violations are punishable, according to the campaign act, up to a

With a President less pretentious about moral gospels, we'd perhaps be inclined to say unwitting errors do happen, and let's all forget. But Mr. Carter has made so much of the need for public sector saints that at least he ought to admit the possibility of his then violating the law, if not gallantly suggest he now owes some fine money.

But no, there's an air of casualness spilling from the White House.

The President, we understand, isn't "particularly disturbed." Press Secretary Jody Powell allows anyway as how the trip to Dalton, Ga., was to address "a sparsely attended fund-raiser."

The operative word is "sparsely," as if to say: so what if we didn't pay for the flight; that trip hardly mattered to the campaign.

Halting Youth Cult

Rep. Claude Pepper, chairman of the House Committee on Aging, has introduced legislation to outlaw mandatory retirement in the federal government. The congressman, who finds age discrimination "odious," hopes such an action will induce the private sector to follow.

The motivation, and we agree with it, is to halt the youth cult practice of pushing the elderly out of the picture. Mandatory retirement, another of those government programs originally conceived as humanitairanism, has become a convenient way for employers to lop off people who don't fit the corporate image of youth and vigor.

It is deplorable that so many in our society have confused age with incompetence - especially when it is so manifestly true that age, more often than not, means competence. Rep. Pepper's legislation, then, seems an appropriate corrective.

The items on display, said Ivey, are not only representative of many kinds of Crane's work, but come from the collections of several central Florida collectors. Among these collectors are Ivey himself and his oft-time curator at the museum Dick Hodgins. Dick still does a sports cartoon of his own which is syndicated, but he was — almost as long as First, there is the loaded language. Isn't american business also a part of the "public?" Aren't businessmen also "consumers" and citizens?" Most assuredly this is so, says CC's director of issue development, Bruce Adams, when I press him in an interview.

Isn't it possible that industry reps meet 10 times more often than consumer reps with regulatory commissioners because industry reps request 10 times more meetings? Does CC have any evidence that any regulatory commission officials refused to meet with any consumers reps who requested meetings? No, CC does not have any such evidence, says Adams. In fact, he says, CC is willing to stipulate that all reps of all kinds who request meetings with regulatory commission officials are met with.

Adams says: "We are not accusing anybody of doing anything wrong." BERRY'S WORLD

" 'Yeh' is the number two man in China - and I suppose 'I Don't Know' plays third base?!"

Californian Blocking Key Pipeline Project

accuses a top California official of delaying an interstate pipeline project and depriving other the pipeline project as a club to "bludgeon" the states of desperately needed oil. The memo charges that the official, an intimate of Gov. Jerry Brown, has deliberately held up construction of the pipeline because he doesn't want California to share natural gas equally with other states. The pipeline would deliver surplus Alaskan oil from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex., for distribution throughout the East. The alternatives would be to sell the oil to Japan or to haul it in tankers through the Panama Canal to the Gulf Coast.

But Thomas Quinn, formerly the governor's campaign manager and now head of California's Air Resources Board, is obstructing the project. He has declared, with eyes rolled heavenward, that he is merely protecting the environment. But the confidential memo contends that he is olding the pipeline hostage for political ransom. The memo, prepared by the staff of a House Energy subcommittee for Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., points out that President Carter has called for equitable distribution of natural gas to all states. But Quinn "made it clear," declares the memo, that the California state government, "with a club like the Long Beach-Midland pipeline in its hands, . . . was not about to accep federal authorities into granting California "a special advantage" when natural gas is allocated. This is the "price for letting oil flow through California to the East Coast." The memo emphasizes that the articulate and aggressive Quinn has been "the major roadblock to the development of the Long Beach-Midland pipeline." In spite of the national needs, the congressional investigators allege, "Quinn has waged a long and often acrimonious campaign

o hamstring the project." The proposed pipeline is supposed to be built by SOHIO if the company can ever get clearance to begin construction in California. With the oil already beginning to flow down from Alaska, it not only will cost an extra $2.03 a barrel to ship the oil by tanker through the Panama Canal but it will create "a major national security problem in light of the vulnerability of the shipping lines and the Canal." the memo warns.

Quinn's office contends it's SOHIO, not Quinn, that's holding up the pipeline. The oil company hasn't met the stringent environmental requirements, which California law requires, a man for Quinn alleged. "Under the law." he said, "we have no choice but to refuse them."

BUFFALO BILLS

OFFENSE

Quarterback: Well, Joe Ferguson's season-ending injury proved Gary Marangi isn't man to oust him. Joe's solid enough as a passer and field general and back injury should be healed. Rating—B

Receiving: Once you get past Bob Chandler, there's gaping void. Trades and personnel losses (i.e., defection of Ahmad Rashad) have decimated this department. Paul Seymour at tight end is still more tackle type. Real help needed outside.

Running: There's still none better than O.J. Simoson, and even in discouraging situation he still gained over 1,500 yards.

That's without blocking and inside threat of Jim Braxton, who returns from knee surgery. Backup guys are just so-so.

Rating—A Offensive Line: One of strong points of club. Joe DeLamieulleure moved ahead of running mate Reggie McKenzie as all-pro guard. Look for Joe Devlin to progress at tackle, maybe tree Donnie Green for trade. Mike Montler at center only

DEFENSE

Defensive Line: On paper, should be hopeful because there are four No. 1 NFL draft choices available: Mike Kadish, Tody

Smith, Sherman White and now Phil Dokes, '77 pick. Trouble is going to be motivating them to perform, individually and as unit. Rating—C Linebackers: Disaster area. John Skorupan had bad year in

'76. Mery Krakau in middle is limited talent. Dan Jilek on right side showed promise as rookie. Might get something out of Tom Ruud, who's been around couple of years. Rating-C

Secondary: Robert James never has come back from knee surgery, and Tony Greene slumped at safety. They were the quality guys. Young Mario Clark is still learning as corner man.

Keith Moody, Doug Jones are sustaining players. So's Dwight

Harrison. Rating—B Kicking, Special Teams: Marv Bateman boots long punts.

but how is he under pressure? Add a question mark. George

Jakowenko hits line drives as place kicker, will be challenged by rookie Neil O'Donoghue. Top kick returner remains Keith

PREDICTION

Mr. Kastner began by opening five produce stands. With that beginning, and a later move to the Sanford State Farmers Market, he developed what would become the oldest continually operating produce business in Florida.

1975 convinced doctors that Mr. Kastner ought to slow down, but did nothing to convince the man himself. He had always been active with more than just his produce business; his family took a great deal of time, but so did his expansive civic, social and charitable activities.

"The trouble is," his wife, Viola, once remarked, "nobody seems to realize what demands are made on people who are prepared to give of themselves."

But Mr. Kastner found A massive heart attack in impossible not to give of his time, energy and creativity. When 30,000 Shriners came to Shriner's Convention of 1975 Inc., Mr. Kastner was director general for the event. Despite the heart attack he attended the

The Mosquito Damage: More Than Just $$$ By MARK WEINBERG

Herald Staff Writer

Each year Sanford spends $11,250 to spray the shores of Lake Monroe to keep down the hordes of blind mosquitoes blown into town by the north wind.

One Sanford business will spend more than five times that amount this year because of the pesky midges, and two other businesses have bought their own mosquito "fogging

But nobody knows realistically how much the mosquitoes cost downtown businessmer "The damage each year is incalculable," said Jack Horner, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce. "You can't put a dollar figure on it. Businessmen have to clean up the mosquitoes and that costs money. But in addition, they lose many dollars in potential business each year because people don't want to get out of their cars into a cloud of mosquitoes." Last week, the chamber appointed John Krider to head a special task force to find a solution to the mosquito problem. The task force will consist of up to 10 members, chamber officials say.

The chamber works all year to promote Sanford, said the chamber official. "All year long we work to bring people to Sanford, and Horner said most of the damage "is not reported. When businessmen have to clean their merchandise because of mosquitoes, they don't tell us. But I can tell you this - the other day a local realtor lost a $50,000 sale. He had a property owner ready to close on a piece of property, but his wife couldn't even get out of the car, the mosquitoes were so

The mosquito plague means that lakefront property is "valueless," according to Gene Meadors of Meador's Marine on U.S. 17-92 at the lakefront west of Sanford. "Millions of dollars of property here could go on the tax rolls if it weren't for the mosquitoes. That property could be worth a lot in property taxes to the county. It's the most logical place in the county for lakefront condominiums and year on cleaning mosquitoes off his boats, windows and inventory. The indirect costs of the midges, he said, are many times greater. "We have a lot of potential customers who never get out of their cars. They just leave." The Monroe Harbour Marina on the lakefront has spent $1,000 so far on mosquito control, said new co-owner Joe Maino, "and I've only been here three months. We bought our own portable fogger. You strap it over your shoulder," he said. "The harbor master fogs twice a day for an hour each time. We also fog the docks."

Marina workers have to sweep up the dead mosquitoes after each fogging "because of the stench they create," said Maino.

And the mosquitoes "keep the customers away," the marina co-owner said. "There are times they can't breathe out here, the mosquitoes are so thick. So they don't come

"We'll spend over $50,000 a year because of the mosquitoes," said Lanny Greene, manager of the Holiday Inn on the lakefront. where clouds of mosquitoes burned out the motel's neon sign last Wednesday night at a cost of $2,000.

"We have a hundred rooms, and we've had to take out all the air conditioners and clean them three times already. On top of that, we have trouble with our refrigerators, which are compressor-operated, and the compressors are outside where the mosquitoes get into them."

Like the marina, the Holiday Inn has purchased its own fogging equipment. The motel owns a fogging truck, "just like the city foggers," said Greene. "It cost us $10,000." Motel personnel fog the area each morning and evening.

"We've discussed the cost in general, but we don't have an overall dollar figure," said Earl Black, chairman of the Downtown Businessmen's Association. "But there's another problem - people are turning out their outside security lights because the lights attract mosquitoes. This will lead to a security problem."

None of the businessmen disagreed with the gloomy assessment of City Engineer Mack LaZenby: "The mosquitoes have always been here, some years worse than others."
