At A Glance

Garbage rate hike will be discussed

LONGWOOD—A $1.37 rate increase for residential garbage service from Industrial Waste Service will be discussed by the city commission at a 6:30 p.m. work session Monday in city hall.

IWS is asking an increase from $7.42 per month to $8.79, which would yield the company $7.79 after the city gets its $1 share. Thomas F. Daly, director of public relations for IWS, pointed out that even with the increase Longwood's residential garbage service rates would be the lowest in the area. For example the fee for county residents is $11.65; Sanford, $9.78; Casselberry, $9.61; Winter Springs, $9; and Maitland, $10 plus $25 initiation fee.

IWS also recommends a one time fee of $10 for each new resident be initiated to cover the removal of move-in boxes and debris.

Birds of prey will be on display

MAITLAND—The Florida Audubon Society will open its Madalyn Baldwin Center for Birds of Prey to the public 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. The center is at 1101 Audubon Way.

The center houses baby owls and other birds of prey who have been received as orphans from throughout central Florida. After hunting and flight training they are banded and released to suitable habitat areas.

This is the only time young birds are on display at the center. Visitors are encouraged to bring gifts, such as 30-gallon garbage bags, water bowls, cat litter pans, newspaper, fresh leaves and pine needles, towels, sheets or cash contributions.

859 win in first computerized game

TALLAHASSEE (UPI)—Florida's new computerized lottery games beat early predictions on its first day, drawing nearly $1 million in wagers and producing 859 winners.

The first winning number Friday in the CASH 3 daily game was 806. The state awarded $94,090 in prizes.

First day sales reached $961,920 for the CASH 3 daily game and weekly Lotto game with $616,513 wagered on the daily game and $345,377 bet on a Lotto game in which the winning numbers won't be known until next week.

Robber kills restaurant owner

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Sanford businessman found stabbed to death in his restaurant early Saturday morning was the apparent victim of a robber who discarded the murder weapon and the cash drawer from Mr. C's Southern Fried Chicken in a trash can a few blocks away.

The body of Liteh Yu, 32, of 1236 Rising Sun Blvd., Winter Springs, was found in the dining area of his restaurant at 2100 S. French Ave., Sanford, about 1 a.m. Saturday.

Sanford Police Chief Steve

Harriett, at the scene at about 8:30 a.m. Saturday, said Yu's sister, whose name he did not have, came to the restaurant about 1 a.m. Saturday to see why her brother had not come home. Harriett said the sister had called the restaurant at about 10:30 p.m. Friday and got no answer.

She called police after finding Yu's body. Harriett said Yu was dead at the scene.

The door to the small, white building with red trim and a bright yellow and red sign was open when the sister walked in. Harriett said.

The dining area was in disarray with tables and chairs overturned. Yu was lying on the floor. Harriett said he suffered multiple stab wounds to his abdomen, back and hands. The hand wounds indicate that Yu tried to fend off the stabs by raising his hands to the attacker. Harriett said.

In searching Sanford for clues in the murder early Saturday, police found what is believed to be the murder weapon, a knife, in a trash can in the 1900 block of Maple Avenue. They found the cash drawer from the restaurant in the same trash can.

Harriett said it is believed that the robber or robbers fled on foot. Police used overturned chairs and trash cans in the parking lot at the murder scene to protect footprints which may be those of the killer. Harriett said they also have other physical evidence linked to the murder.

Harriett said he didn't know Yu personally, but knows he has owned the chicken restaurant since March 1987. It is believed that Yu came to Seminole County from his native Taiwan just over a year ago.

"Heinous," was Harriett's description of the murder, in this busy business strip through Sanford.

"I almost came here for chicken last night," said Sanford policeman Ken Kaiser. He described Yu as a happy man who had been through some hard times, but who had high hopes for his business. "He never seemed unhappy—for something like this to happen..." Kaiser said.

It is believed the killer fled on foot at least to where the knife was found. Harriett said police aren't sure, but possibly only

An estimated $250,000 worth of damage was done to this home near Chuluota after an electrical line shorted out, causing a fire which spread to the attic. Oviedo and Seminole County firefighters took about 45 minutes to bring the fire under control but not before it had gutted much of the inside of the home.

Electrical short causes fire

By Brad Church

OVIDEO — A short in an electrical line feeding a clothes drier is blamed for a fire which caused an estimated $250,000 damage to the Ray Jacobs home between Oviedo and Chuluota Friday.

Ray Schaefer, Seminole County Fire battalion chief, said an electric line inside the wall of the home's utility room apparently shorted out and started a fire which spread to the attic.

The home is located on State Road 419 between Oviedo and Chuluota. Schaefer said no one was home when the fire broke out. A passerby noticed smoke coming from the home shortly before 10 a.m. and drove to the Oviedo Fire Station and reported it.

The Oviedo department responded with one fire engine and a rescue vehicle and, after determining that the home was outside the city limits, notified the county public safety department. Schaefer said the county received the alarm at 10:09 a.m. and a truck from the Chuluota station was on the scene four minutes later. Five more county units arrived later.

"When we got there, the roof over the utility room has already caved in and the flames had spread throughout the attic," he said.

Chief Schaefer said in order to get to the flames firefighters had

New administrator's contract on agenda

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The city commission is expected to approve an agreement with Gene DeMarie of North Miami Beach, top choice for city administrator, Monday night.

Under the proposed contract, DeMarie, 47, will receive a base salary of $43,000 annually in addition to normal employee benefits such as group insurance coverage and participation in the Florida State Retirement System.

DeMarie, who works three days a week as a part-time city manager for Florida City, a community near Miami, was selected April 18 to fill the city administrator post in Longwood, subject to approval of the negotiated contract. In order to give Florida City 30 days notice and still meet the needs of Longwood he will be working part time (two days a week) here during May at a rate of 40 percent of his base pay. The city will reimburse him for expenses for airfare between Miami and Orlando and two nights' lodging each week during the time he is commuting.

He will be evaluated in six months and entitled to a merit increase to his base salary rate as determined by the city commission. He is also entitled to any across-the-board increases granted other city employees.

The new administrator will receive use of a city-owned and maintained car for strictly city-related functions or duties and if one is not available will be paid $300 a month or $10 a day to use his own personal car. The city also agrees to pay for

Show and tell in Seminole school speed zones

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Like the "Scarlet Letter" worn by literature's Hester Prynne, those who lead foot it though Seminole County school zones may be marked for stigma—the stigma of seeing their speed publicly posted.

The device, in conjunction with a radar unit, reads and posts in bold digital figures on an electronic board the speed of targeted cars.

Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Riggins, who oversees the sheriff's school safety programs, said in the next couple of weeks, traffic officers will study the use and effectiveness of the board at Wilson Elementary School on Orange Boulevard in Paola, and at Sterling Park Elementary School on Eagle Circle.

Casselberry. Drivers in those school zones are the first to see the speed of their car posted. Riggins said more than half who drive through school zones whiz through at speeds higher than the posted limits. Speed limits are 20 mph or 25 mph during school opening times.

After two weeks of testing and speed studies, the electronic board, which cost $700, with a $1,200 companion radar unit, will be moved from school to school on a random basis and will most likely pop up where there are complaints of speeding in school zones, Riggins said.

Although he said more than half the drivers violated school zone speed limits, Riggins said he doesn't believe the violators in most cases are intentionally breaking the law. "They're pre-occupied. We can get their attention with this (the board)," he said. "Surprisingly, the biggest offenders are teachers, or parents who are picking up their children, or someone with a husband of kids."

With the digital board, Riggins said, "We can inform the motorists of their speed and simply get voluntary compliance to the speed limit by letting them know they are speeding."

In a demonstration of the

Despite seeing a display of his speed on digital board, the driver of a heavy truck continues to exceed the 20 mph limit in the Wilson Elementary School zone. Seminole County Sheriff's Lt. Jerry Riggins (left), crossing guard supervisor Beverly Hughes and school district risk manager Walter Meriwether are on duty to make speeders realize they had better slow down in school zones.

POLICE IN BRIEF

Sanford police catch robber, stolen merchandise recovered

SANFORD — Sanford police reported the arrest of a robbery suspect, who allegedly robbed a Tennessee Oil Co. service station early Friday morning at knife-point.

The suspect, identified by police as John Doe, entered the store at the station at 1800 French Ave., at 6:28 a.m. and asked for two packs of cigarettes. The suspect, approximately 25 years old, then produced a knife and demanded money.

After stuffing an undisclosed amount of money into a paper bag, the suspect fled on foot before being apprehended 10 minutes later at the intersection of 16th Street and Roundtree Street.

According to Police Chief Steven Harriett, the suspect has been positively identified as the robber and has been charged with armed robbery. The weapon, money and cigarettes were recovered by police.

The suspect has refused to cooperate with police and has used several aliases, according to Harriett.

Man faces auto theft charges

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The driver of a car recognized by a Seminole County sheriff's deputy as a vehicle stole in Orange County, faces a charge of auto theft. A passenger in the car, arrested on a Seminole County warrant, is being held without bond.

The car was spotted at a convenience store on State Road 436 at Oxford Road, Fern Park. Annette Desson, 33, of 122 Jackson St., Altamonte Springs, was arrested on the theft charge and is being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Her companion, Rochelle Betty Gallant, 27, of the same address, was arrested for failure to appear on a criminal conspiracy charge. The owner of the car was summoned and claimed the vehicle, a sheriff's report said.

Possession charge issued

LONGWOOD — Longwood police were suspicious of a man getting into a car in the parking lot of an ACE Hardware store about midnight Thursday. Because of their suspicion, a 24-year-old Longwood man faces a charge of possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana.

Michael Peter Anania, of 247 E. Orange Ave., has been released on $500 bond to appear in court May 11. Police said they arrested him on a Volusia County warrant on an unspecified charge before searching him and reportedly finding a bag of marijuana in his pocket.

Dog autopsy ordered

CASSELBERRY — Seminole County Animal Control authorities have ordered an autopsy to determine what killed the dachshund of Harry M. Conner, of 256 Sandpiper Drive, Casselberry.

Connor told Seminole County sheriff's deputies his 7-year-old dog was killed by a "projectile" fired into his home through a screen door at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday. He told deputies the name of a possible suspect who may have shot his dog. Connor said the suspect had complained about the dog's barking.

An autopsy was ordered to determine if the animal was shot, a sheriff's report said. The incident is under investigation.

Spouse abuse charge filed

SANFORD — A 24-year-old Sanford man who allegedly beat his wife as he drove along Park Avenue in Sanford faces a charge of battery-spouse abuse.

The alleged beating came to light, Sanford police report, after a policeman made a traffic stop of a truck driven by Larry Alan Futrell, of 2530 Georgia Ave. #B. The car was stopped in the 3500 block of Park Avenue, and Futrell's wife, Terry, reportedly accused him of hitting her. In the policeman's presence Futrell also allegedly threatened another man with a claw hammer, prompting a charge of aggravated assault. The arrest was made at about 8 p.m. Friday and Futrell was being held in lieu of $1,000 bond.

Police catch fleeing suspect

SANFORD — A Sanford man was arrested after trying to flee the scene of an alleged cocaine transaction.

Ray Grubbs, 24, of 2619 W. 18th St., Sanford, was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine and resisting arrest after city police reportedly saw him run from a porch at 19 William Clark Court, where an anonymous tip led officers to believe a drug sale might be taking place.

The arrest was made at about 4:30 p.m. Friday on 12th Street at Mulberry Avenue, where police caught Grubbs, an arrest report said. Police reports indicate the suspect attempted to discard a matchbox, which officers recovered. Officers say the box contained crack cocaine.

Grubbs is being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Face-slapper goes to jail

SANFORD — A man who allegedly hit a woman during an argument in the street in front of a Sanford bar faces charges of battery and disorderly intoxication.

Sanford police report arresting Ronald Lee Pratt, 34, of 355 Evansdale St., Sanford, at about 10:33 p.m. Friday in front of LaRue's Bar at 2601 S. Park Ave. Police said they saw him hit a woman in the face during an argument there. He was being held in lieu of $500 bond.

Thief's method too obvious

had been taken from his Chevrolet while his car was parked at a Casselberry supermarket, he thought he saw them on the floor of the Chevy parked next to his.

Zurinsky took his suspicion to Casselberry police at about 10 p.m. Thursday. Police waited in the parking lot of Gooding's, State Road 436, until a man approached the vehicle containing the wheel covers. They asked him if they could search the car for stolen wheel covers and he reportedly agreed.

After police recovered the wheel covers, identified as Zurinsky's, they arrested the driver of the other car, Jeffrey Ernest Bittling, 18, of 645 Williams Road, Winter Springs, has been charged with burglary to a vehicle. He was arrested at 10:30 p.m. Thursday and was being held in lieu of $2,000 bond.

Ten arrested during 'crack' raid

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

MIDWAY — Four suspects tried to flee through a window and one allegedly dumped cocaine into a bathtub when City County Investigative Bureau agents raided a "crack house" in Midway at about 10:15 p.m. Friday.

Those suspects were all taken into custody, along with five others, on cocaine possession charges. Two of the suspects are free on $2,000 bond each and the rest remained jailed early Saturday.

CCIB agents reported that during their investigation centering on a home at 2371 Jitway Ave., Midway, they determined that cocaine was sold and used there. The home was without electrical power or water and was unoccupied, according to agents.

When CCIB agents with a search warrant entered the house they reported that Timothy Jerome McMillan, 20, of 3011 20th St., Sanford, rushed in and back out of a bathroom before being apprehended by authorities. In a bathtub, agents said they found what appeared to be 21 grams of cocaine. McMillan also had $714, which was confiscated when he was arrested. He has been released on bond.

As McMillan was being captured, other agents caught four more suspects as they reportedly fled through the window of a bedroom. Those four were identified as John Stephen McRee, 32, of 2401 Palmetto Ave., Sanford; Jimmy Hampton, 26, of 2251 Greenway St., Sanford; Richard William McAber, 26, of DeLand; and Henry Lee Freeman, 33, of 1807 Knox Ave., Sanford.

Captured in the bedroom were Richard Caldwell, 25, of Deltona and Harold Vincent Davidson, 32, of Osteen. Davidson has been released on bond.

Arrested in the living room were John Henry Young, 36, of 2441 Jitway Ave., Sanford and William Morrison Huggins, 22, of 152 Clear Lake Circle, Sanford.

Tonya Litheria Moore, 21, of 2450 Jitway Ave., Sanford, was caught in her car parked at the house. She allegedly possessed crack cocaine and reportedly told agents she had just exited the house before they arrived.

Five vehicles, $12,000 in merchandise reported stolen

SANFORD — At least five vehicles were reported stolen along with almost $12,000 worth of cash and merchandise in separate thefts and robberies in and around the Sanford area, according to police reports.

Following are summaries of the reported incidents:

● Marcella Jenkins, of 585 Sanford Ave., Altamonte Springs, gave sheriff's deputies the name of a suspect who may have stolen her 1987 Dodge Wednesday or Thursday. The vehicle's value was not reported.

● A car being repaired at Clay Jenkin's Auto Body Shop, 1890 U.S. Highway 17-92, Casselberry, was stolen Wednesday or Thursday. A sheriff's report said the 1983 Buick, valued at $4,000, belongs to Courtesy Used Cars, 3214 U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford.

● A 1957 International Harvester van, belonging to Roy Mator, 250 Oxford Road, Apt. G-4, Fern Park, was stolen recently from the parking lot of K-Mart, U.S. Highway 17-92, Fern Park. According to a sheriff's report the van was valued at $500.

● A 1985 Pontiac valued at $5,500 was stolen Tuesday or Wednesday from the home of Anthony Winn, of 308 Wild Olive Lane, Longwood. A sheriff's report said Winn is buying the car from co-owner James Dede of Longwood.

● Robert B. Stepen, of 203 Centura Drive, Sanford, reported to sheriff's deputies his 1980 Chrysler valued at $1,000 was stolen Wednesday or Thursday from the rear parking lot of Jacobson's, 1855 State Road 434, Longwood.

● Seminole County sheriff's investigators have the name of a suspect who may have stolen $3,000 and a $210 necklace from the home of Jeffrey Alan Straub, of 155-C Springwood Circle, Longwood, Thursday.

● French doors valued at $370 were stolen between Tuesday and Thursday from a home construction site at 1111 Adams St., Altamonte Springs. A sheriff's report said the doors belong to John Ellis, Co., of Winter Park.

● Robert Dickerson, of 3455 Athena Drive, Winter Park, reported to sheriff's deputies his $165 camera and $5 were stolen from his home Thursday.

● A $400 pistol was stolen along with $100 worth of ammunition and $20 from the home of George V. Ruos, of 1007 Sweetwater Blvd. S., Longwood. A sheriff's report said the burglary occurred Thursday.

● Jerome Chandler, of 2200 Dollar Way, Sanford, reported to sheriff's deputies $175 worth of stereo equipment was stolen from his home Thursday.

● Sheriff's deputies have the name of a suspect who may have stolen a television, a radio, a vacuum cleaner and a toaster with a combined value of about $280 from the home of John Blackley, of 9380 Junior Drive, Apopka. The theft occurred between April 22 and Thursday, a sheriff's report said.

● Stereo gear and a box of tools with a combined value of about $720 were stolen Wednesday or Thursday from the vehicle of Larry G. Peck, of 135 Stoney Ridge Drive, Longwood, a sheriff's report said.

● A sheriff's report said four microphones with a combined value of $500 were stolen Tuesday or Wednesday from Northland Community Church, 530 Dog Track Road, Longwood.

● Eight tires and wheels with a total value of $1,200 were stolen between April 22 and 24 from the semi truck of Joe Miller, of Holiday Park. A sheriff's report said the truck was parked at Rand R. Fleet Service, at the Port of Sanford, 121 Kastner Ave., Sanford, when the theft occurred.

Five-Day Forecast

For Central Florida

Praise the Lord, rain's a coming

By Fred H. Cooper
Herald Staff Writer

Okay neighbors, you've asked for it and you may, even as you're reading this, be getting it. "It," of course, is rain.

The "official" United States government-sponsored forecast, as issued by the federally certified meteorologists of the National Weather Service, an agency funded by the deficit budget of the nation, says we will have scattered thundershowers. So, if you're not getting rain, you're not scattered enough.

It's that front that's moving from the Escatawba Bayou near Pascagoula in an easterly direction. New Orleans has been drenched. So, too, has Mobile. Saturday morning it was laying off the west coast of the Sunshine State, poised to eclipse the sun. See outside, the sun has gone. Eclipsed by the clouds. So it goes.

During the past 24 hours, the temperatures have dipped a bit. High Friday was 79 degrees and the low was in the mid-50s throughout the county. No one in Florida has gotten any rain lately but that will change. You might be interested in knowing that a trace fell on Seminole County on April 20. Then about 15 inches on April 13. How's that for a two week total. No wonder water bills are zooming.

Elsewhere, it hit 93 degrees in Death Valley and Laredo while Hibbing, Minn. had the nation's low with 24 degrees. That'll bring a shiver to at least one Seminolan. The rain storms which may plague us, have done a number west of here.

Thunderstorms that spun at least 11 twisters through south Texas and flung hail the size of baseballs weakened today as they shifted into the lower Mississippi Valley and unleashed heavy rain along the Gulf Coast.

A total of 11 tornadoes were reported Friday in Texas, mostly in an area from San Antonio to Corpus Christi, the National Weather Service said. No injuries were reported.

Police in Bishop said a twister ripped off one house's carport and flung the debris through windows of several nearby cars and homes.

A tornado in Nueces County downed large palm trees and damaged fences, signs and billboards, officials reported.

The storms unleashed hail the size of baseballs at Nixon and the size of golf balls at Corpus Christi.

Forecaster Hugh Crowther said the thunderstorms were moving across the lower Mississippi Valley early this morning, but that no reports of severe weather had been received since the storms moved out of Texas.

The storms doused the central Gulf Coast with heavy rain early today, and a flash flood watch was posted for southwestern Louisiana.

Crowther said a cold front crossed the western United States, and snow advisories were posted for the Cascade Mountains of Oregon, the mountains and foothills of southwestern Montana, and mountains east of the Continental Divide.

A high wind watch was posted for southern Idaho, where wind gusts could exceed 50 mph today, Crowther said.

(Reports by United Press International and data provided by the National Weather Service were used in compiling this report.)

Local Report

The high temperature in Sanford Friday was 79 degrees and the overnight low was 54. There was no recorded rainfall.

Area Readings

UCF commencement ceremonies Monday

SANFORD — Janice Buchanan, a teacher at Wilson Elementary School and Seminole County's Teacher of the Year, will be one of the honored guests at the University of Central Florida commencement ceremonies Monday.

Buchanan and Richard Ellenburg, an Orlando teacher named Orange County's Teacher of the Year, will join Gov. Bob Martinez on the speaker's platform for the 2:30 p.m. convocation, plus Cecil B. Keene of S. Petersburg, the newest member of the Board of Regents.

The afternoon ceremony, at which Gov. Martinez is commencement speaker, is one of three graduation ceremonies to be held for the largest graduating class in UCF history—expected to number 1,400.

The afternoon ceremony is for graduates of the colleges of education and engineering.

Special recognition will also be given to three long-time faculty members: Dr. Harold Green, former director of the UCF Daytona Beach campus, who will be named professor and director emeritus; Dr. George F. Schrader, former associate dean of engineering, who will become professor and associate dean emeritus; and Dr. Herbert Towle, who will be named dean emeritus of engineering.

Speakers at the morning commencement convocation will be astronaut John Young, an Orlando native; and Broadway producer Zev Bufman.

Bufman will speak at 8 a.m. to graduates in the College of Arts and Sciences. Young will speak at 11 a.m. to those in the colleges of Business Administration and Health, and liberal studies program.

The ceremonies in the UCF gym are part of the continuing series of events this year in recognition of the university's silver anniversary.

People planning to attend graduation ceremonies are asked to be seated at least 30 minutes prior to the scheduled starting times. Parking areas for visitors will be designated at UCF police officers will be on hand to lend assistance.

Probe centers on jet's defects

KAHULUI, Hawaii (UPI) — The Aloha Airlines jet that ripped open miles above the Pacific Ocean was a heavily used older model Boeing 737 that federal officials had warned could develop dangerous cracks in the fuselage.

Aloha grounded three Boeing 737s Friday that are similar to the aircraft that lost a huge hunk of its fuselage at 24,000 feet, apparently killing a flight attendant who was sucked from the cabin and leaving terrified passengers under the open sky like they were "riding in a convertible."

National Transportation Safety

Board investigators said Friday night their probe into the incident will focus primarily on possible defects in the plane's structure.

NTSB member Joseph T. Nall, who arrived on Maui Friday afternoon with an 11-member investigation team, said that while it is unusual for the NTSB to make such an early pronouncement, in the case of Flight 243 it is justified.

"You've got a ruptured hull, you've got virtually the top half of the fuselage at the front end of the aircraft that is missing," Nall said at a briefing Friday night.

Chamber honors scholars

By Wayne Mize
Herald Staff Writer
LAKE MARY — Seniors from Seminole and Lake Mary high schools received good news from the Lake Mary Chamber of Commerce.

Wednesday, the Chamber of Commerce notified the eight deserving students of the winning selections for scholarship awards totaling $6,000, $750 for each student.

Four seniors, among a total entry of 31 applicants, were chosen from each high school.

Scholarship winners from Lake Mary High School were Shannon Foley, Monica Frakes, Jacqueline Greco and Jon Nephew.

Scholarship winners from Seminole High School were Lori Earnest, Christine Eckstein, Heather Malloy and William Spivey.

Applicants were judged on grades, extracurricular involvement and presentation letters, among other criteria.

Lake Mary Police Chief Charles Lauderdale, Karen Coleman, representing the Seminole County School Board, and Maureen Liberatorre of the chamber of commerce served as judges.

"The applicants were terrific," said Marian Caraway, chamber president. "It was very difficult for the judges to narrow it down."

Caraway said the chamber decided to stay with its original concept of selecting four students from each high school despite the disparity in the number of applications. Eight applications were received from Seminole High School and 23 from Lake Mary High School.

"The chamber wanted the awards to be equally distributed between the high schools," explained Caraway.

The eight scholarship winners will be presented their awards at the 8 a.m. Wednesday meeting of the chamber in the CIA Building, 260 N. Country Club Drive.

The students will tell the audience their goals for the future at the meeting. "They have got some terrific goals," said Caraway.

The money for the scholarship awards was raised at the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts, which took place last October.

The event was so successful that Caraway predicts the scholarship awards will continue to grow with each year.

Poland offers lower taxes to halt strikes

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The government Friday said it would attempt to end the country's spreading strikes—including a work stoppage by 20,000 steelworkers—without violence and with a program that may include lower taxes to free up money for wage increases.

"In next couple of days the government will present an offer to normalize the situation," government spokesman Jerzy Urban said at a news conference. Urban said the proposals would include lowering taxes for enterprises allowing them to spend more money for wage increases to satisfy the workers. But observers said the move, considered as a capitulation to prevent the spreading of labor unrest, will cause higher inflation.

Urban vowed no "arbitrary measures" would be used against strikers, hinting that authorities would try to solve the conflicts without resorting to force. But witnesses said detachments of motorized riot police were in Warsaw and Krakow, close to the Lenin foundry where 20,000 steelworkers were on strike.

Asked if the current labor unrest is the end of the ruling team led by Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, Urban replied: "It's not the most important question. More important is what will happen with Poland?"

Polish authorities have faced a growing number of wage disputes throughout the country in the wake of economic reforms that caused huge increases in the price of food and other goods. Prices in Poland have risen an average of 42 percent during the first quarter of this year.

The steelworkers strike and other recent unrest represent the most serious challenge to the government since the spiraling cycle of strikes and other events that gave birth to Solidarity in 1980 and led to the imposition of martial law in December 1981.

"It is a blow into a reform and policy of democratization," said Urban to stress that process of granting more freedom to Poles, such as permission to form independent associations, can be slowed down.

Last fall authorities introduced economic reforms under which state-run enterprises were granted more freedom to decide about production targets and wage increases if they are justified by the growth of productivity.

Urban said the strike by 20,000 steelworkers demanding 70 percent pay raises at the Nowa Huta Lenin foundry near the southern city of Krakow was the only one in the country although "a danger of the other strikes exists."

Disident sources said 3,000 of the 25,000 workers at the Stalowa Wola steelworks in southern Poland were on strike. A disident source also said preparations were under way for some kind of show of support for the strike in the copper center of Lubin, in southwestern Poland.

A spokesman for the communist trade unions in a foundry of Bochnia, west of Krakow, said work stoppages began Friday among the first shift workforce of 1,000.

Other workers in the Nowa Huta Lenin foundry said they would strike and paralyze the mill's operations unless director Eugeniusz Pustowka opens negotiations with the 16-person strike committee.

Authorities called the burgeoning steelworker strike "illegal," saying the strike committee did not notify plant management about it in advance.

The director ignored the committee and opened talks Thursday with the Communist Party's official union, which replaced the banned Solidarity union when it was outlawed in 1982. The official union demanded wage increases of 50 percent a month during the

Disident Jacek Kuron said about 25 disidents, most of them Solidarity activists, were detained by police across the country.

Bogdan Borusewicz, a Solidarity leader in the seaport of Gdansk, said three leaders of the Fighting Solidarity—Kornel Morawiecki, Andrzej Kolodziej and Krzysztof Szymanski—were freed from Warsaw Rakowicki jail. They were arrested last year on charges of smuggling printing equipment from Sweden into Poland. Authorities could not immediately confirm the report.

Fighting Solidarity is a splinter group in the outlawed Solidarity. Borusewicz said the three popular activists were freed to defuse tension in the country.

U.S. may be softening demands on Noriega

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — The Reagan administration and Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega are now "talking as if they're willing to make a deal," sources said Friday, but a Noriega adviser dismissed reports the military strongman accepted a U.S. deal to leave his post.

News stories from Washington quoted senior U.S. officials saying the outline of a deal in which Noriega would step down had been struck. Sources in Panama could not confirm the reports but said the Reagan administration had softened its conditions for Noriega's removal.

Noriega adviser Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, president of the official Revolutionary Democratic Party, denied the reports in The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times that Noriega has agreed to resign and permit free elections and the restoration of constitutional government.

One official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the Post that Noriega would leave Panama after a "face-saving transition" and that the Panamanian chief of the armed forces preferred the Dominican Republic as his new home if forced into exile.

But Escobar Bethancourt said in an interview he had been present in meetings Monday and Tuesday with Michael Kozak, a senior State Department official sent to Panama to negotiate with Noriega.

"I dismiss roundly these reports that General Noriega is going to leave inside a week," Escobar Bethancourt said. "That is totally false."

Sources in Panama said the Reagan administration had softened its conditions for the removal of Noriega and the two sides are now "talking as if they're willing to make a deal."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater refused to discuss the news reports Friday. "We've had discussions, but we don't have any results at this point," he said.

Thursday, Fitzwater said the administration now might not insist that Noriega seek asylum elsewhere, as it had previously.

"Our policy is that General Noriega must go," Fitzwater said. "That means leave power."

Asked about earlier indications from President Reagan and others that Noriega's continued presence in Panama would be unacceptable and potentially threatening to a restoration of civilian rule, Fitzwater said: "Our policy is that he must go. We would prefer that he leave the country."

The United States has been trying to remove Noriega from power for the last three months since he was indicted by two Florida grand juries for involvement in drug trafficking.

Failure to achieve his removal after making such a public effort, however, has been embarrassing to the Reagan administration. Economic sanctions imposed against Panama have failed to hurt Noriega significantly but have done major damage to the country's capitalist economy.

Officials told United Press International that the United States had to soften its position because the sanctions were not working to remove Noriega and were doing irreparable economic damage.

"We have lost all leverage at this point," one official said.

The official said "it would be a 100 percent capitulation of U.S. policy" if Noriega is allowed to stay in Panama long enough to influence elections scheduled for May of 1989.

"Noriega has always been told it was unacceptable (to the United States) for him to stay," the source said. "If that has changed, it is a complete reversal."

The Los Angeles Times quoted an official as saying a compromise deal with Noriega would allow the Panamanian strongman to make "a dignified exit" while achieving the administration's aim of ousting him from power.

A senior U.S. official told the Times, however, that the deal has not yet been sealed.

"There is not yet an agreement in principle," the official said. "There are some significant decisions that the president and (Secretary of State George Shultz) need to make. Noriega understands our conditions and we understand his. For there to be an agreement, there need to be compromises on both sides—and it is not clear yet that the necessary compromises are forthcoming."

In Miami Thursday, a federal judge ruled lawyers for Noriega can file motions challenging one of the indictments against the Panamanian.

Road work this week

Here are the projects in Seminole County that may affect the flow of traffic:

1 Red Bug Lake Road from east of State Road 436 to Autumn Glen Lane. Road widening. This major project will include substantial underground drainage work and removing the existing road surface. Flagmen or detours may be used, but traffic backups are not expected to be worse than they are currently. Expected completion by November 1988. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

2 Sand Lake Road from Ruth Street to Wessex Road. Road widening on weekdays. Congestion possible, with flagmen handling traffic flow. Expected completion by May 1988. Jurisdiction: Seminole County.

3 Upsala Road and State Road 46 intersection. Intersection improvement. Expect single-lane traffic, flagmen and reduced speed limits from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. weekdays. Expected completion: May 17.

4 Pressview Avenue, construction work, drainage improvements and road reconstruction from North St. to Adams St. weekdays from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. Motorists may encounter flagmen, reduced speed limits and single-lane traffic from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. weekdays. Expected completion: September.

5 Wessex Road, drainage improvements and road paving. Expect reduced speed limits, single-lane traffic and flagmen from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. weekdays. Expected completion: May 13.

6 Balmy Beach Drive, installing underdrain from Charmant Drive to Floral Way. Motorists may be slightly delayed by flagmen, possible single-lane traffic and reduced speed limits from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. weekdays. Expected completion: May 6.

Submarine arrives in Charleston

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — Tight-lipped Navy officials offered few details Friday about a pending investigation into explosions that crippled the USS Bonfish and killed three crewmen aboard the attack submarine.

The vessel, towed by a Navy salvage ship, arrived Friday afternoon at its home port of Charleston, where a judge advocate general's investigation into the accident has been initiated, Navy officials confirmed.

Chief Petty Officer Terry Borton, a Navy spokesman in Norfolk, said the review will be directed by Capt. Robin White, commander of Submarine Squadron 18 in Charleston.

However, Borton would not comment on what will be done with the submarine at the Charleston Naval Base and could offer no insight into what course the investigation will take.

Explosions and fire tore through the diesel-power submarine Sunday, spewing toxic fumes and smoke and forcing the 92-member crew to flee. Twenty-two sailors were injured and three were killed.

The USS Hoist, a powerful salvage ship, began towing the 29-year-old submarine Wednesday afternoon from off the Florida coast, where the explosions occurred.

The Bonfish and its crew had left Charleston April 16 and were involved in routine training exercises with several other Navy ships when the explosions and fire erupted in the ship's forward battery compartment.

Twenty-two of the 89 crew members who escaped were treated for smoke inhalation. Two remained hospitalized in stable condition Friday.

The bodies of the three dead sailors were found on board the Bonfish Wednesday, but the causes of their deaths were not known, the Navy said.

The remains of two sailors — Lt. Ray Everts Jr., 30, of Naoma, W. Va., and Petty Officer 1st Class Robert Bordelon Jr., 39, of Willis, Texas — were transferred late Wednesday to the hospital at the Charleston Naval Base.

The body of Petty Officer 3rd Class Marshall Lindgren, 21, of Pisgah Forest, N.C., arrived in Charleston several hours before the Bonfish.

INF Treaty delayed slightly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia delayed final action Friday on the INF Treaty until "serious problems" are resolved, pushing ratification further up against the deadline of the superpower summit.

Byrd and other Senate leaders outlined four major problems with the treaty, some of which have come to light only in the past few days, including a fundamental problem with the lack of a definition of a weapon.

However, the senators said the problems were not insurmountable and could theoretically be resolved before President Reagan leaves May 25 for the May 29 summit meeting in Moscow with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The treaty was scheduled to come up on the Senate floor May 11. Byrd had said previously that debate could begin as early as May 9.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, said the committee would meet May 9 with administration officials and the Senate leadership.

"Hopefully at that time, we'll be able to say these problems have been resolved," he said. "I'm very hopeful that the administration and Soviet Union will be hard at work" in the meantime.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, which turned up one of the major obstacles to approval that has emerged, said he believes the problems can be resolved but he admonished the Soviets for seemingly gumming the process with recent statements that appear to conflict with the provisions of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty.

The treaty was signed by Reagan and Gorbachev at their last summit in Washington Dec. 8 and in light of slow progress on a more comprehensive strategic arms reduction treaty, has become the expected centerpiece for the Moscow summit — Reagan's last chance on the world stage to tout his arms control progress.

"The Soviets should understand it's not a good way to start off the INF Treaty," Nunn said, referring to reports that positions taken recently on the pact's verification by two Soviet officials contradict the terms of the agreement.

"We don't need any clouds of bad faith hanging over it," Nunn added.

All the Democratic senators denied they were attempting to delay the treaty for political reasons and said the administration itself was expressing concern about the Soviet statements.

"Our desire is to be absolutely thorough," Boren said. "Misunderstandings over this treaty could harm the future path" of arms control agreements.

The four problems he outlined included:

- Ambiguities over the definition of "weapon," stemming from questions over whether futuristic weapons are covered by the treaty.
- The ability to verify an implied ban on futuristic weapons.
- Differences of opinion on how on-site inspection is to be conducted and procedures to be followed.

—Whether the "administration is adequately committing itself" to update eavesdropping satellites and other "technical means" of intelligence.

At least two of the problems, the weapons definition and futuristic weapons, would require at least an exchange of letters with the Soviets and at most an amendment to official documents exchanged with the Soviets and attached to the treaty.

The administration has adamantly opposed tampering with the treaty but Nunn said he was trying to "do the job thoroughly."

"When you do things quickly, you have to do things twice and that causes delay. This is important business."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Iraq jets fire on tankers carrying Iranian oil

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iraq reported an air strike against two tankers carrying Iranian oil in the Persian Gulf as the U.S. Navy extended its coverage in the troubled waterway and American warships completed their first escort mission since clashing with Iranian forces early last week.

In Baghdad Friday, a military spokesman said Iraqi warplanes fired missiles into a "large" and "very large naval target," terms Iraq uses for a tanker and supertanker in Iranian service.

Shortly after the reported attack, a U.S. Central Command spokesman said four U.S. warships completed their first convoy operation through the gulf since naval clashes between the United States and Iran April 18.

The convoy of three re-flagged Kuwait tankers included the 48,723-ton Gas Queen, a liquefied gas carrier, and the oil products tankers Chesapeake City and Ocean City, both 80,000 tons. It began its journey Wednesday after a one-day postponement due to bad weather.

Polish workers to get pay raises

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — The government offered nationwide pay raises in an effort to quell labor unrest sparked by 20,000 striking steelworkers and a threatened walkout at the Gdansk shipyard, cradle of the outlawed Solidarity trade union.

Strike plans also were announced Friday in other parts of the country, including the nation's biggest foundry at Katowice in southwestern Poland. Labor leader Leszek Moczulski said half of the 30,000 workers may begin a strike Monday unless they get a $39 pay increase and Solidarity is revived at the foundry.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said "arbitrary measures" would not be used against the striking steelworkers in the Krakow suburb of Nowa Huta. But witnesses said detachments of motorized riot police had arrived in Warsaw and Krakow, 175 miles southwest of the Polish capital.

Contras, Sandinistas meet again

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Nicaraguan government and Contra rebel leaders finished another session of peace talks with no apparent breakthrough on proposals that may include U.S. humanitarian aid to the guerrillas, and both sides set a third day of talks for Saturday.

A virtual blackout on negotiations aimed at ending Nicaragua's 7-year-old civil war has been imposed. Neither side would comment on the results, if any, during Friday's session at the posh El Camino Real Hotel.

Following the meeting, a special commission consisting of four members from each delegation met to "analyze" the "proposals put forth by each delegation," said presidential spokesman Manuel Espinoza.

Before Friday's meeting, sources from both sides said the negotiators were expected to continue debate over delivery of the non-lethal U.S. aid to the Contras.

Two men, company disciplined by board

TALLAHASSEE — Two men associated with Seminole County real estate firms, and a real estate investment company have been disciplined by the state Department of Professional Regulation's Division of Real Estate.

Cecil E. Boozer, a Winter Park broker, had his license suspended for one year, after being found in violation of two Florida real estate statutes, according to Patsy Rushing, administrative assistant for the Department of Professional Regulation.

Also, Christopher Wiley

Laughner, a Longwood salesman, surrendered his license for revocation and Land and Home Real Estate Investment Company did likewise, Rushing said.

Boozer's license was suspended when it was discovered he had used a $15,000 contractual offer for his own personal use and benefit. Boozer filed an appeal of the department's decision but the disciplinary action was upheld.

Boozer's license was suspended for what the department termed as "fraud, misrepresentation, concealment, false promises, false pretenses, dishonest dealing by trick, scheme or device, culpable negligence, breach of trust in a business transaction and failure to maintain a $15,000 deposit in trust account." Boozer was also fined $1,000 by the department.

Laughner's license was surrendered, a practice Rushing says is common when accused real estate professionals are faced with a virtual no-win chance when summoned before the board, when it was discovered he was acting as a broker without having a license. Rushing said Laughner was also using funds from escrow accounts for his own personal use and was not allowing his brokers access to escrow accounts.

The Land and Home Real Estate Investment Company, whose headquarters are in Longwood, also surrendered its license. It is unclear why the company did so, although in most instances, a license of this type is surrendered in lieu of further prosecution. Rushing said.

Alleged terrorist pleads innocent

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A suspected Japanese terrorist was escorted by state troopers with M-16 automatic rifles as he appeared in court Friday to plead innocent to possession of explosives and fraudulent use of a passport.

Yu Kikumura, 36, according to Japanese authorities, may be linked to the terrorist Japanese Red Army, the group held responsible for the bombing of a U.S. military club in Italy this month. He was shackled hand and foot as he stood before U.S. District Judge Alfred Lechner.

Bomb-sniffing dogs checked the courtroom before the hearing, a state police helicopter flew over the federal courthouse and the Holland Tunnel from New York was closed while Kikumura was driven through from a federal lockup in Manhattan.

Lawyers William Kunstler and Ronald Kuby, known for representing radical defendants, accused the government of trying to prejudice the case by treating Kikumura like a "dangerous animal." They also argued that the case was assigned to Lechner, a recent Reagan appointee, because he is one of the most conservative federal judges in New Jersey.

"We're very concerned that in a case like this, where the government has asked for (a sentence of) 90 years, that Mr. Kikumura's constitutional rights be preserved," Kuby said outside the courthouse.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John

Lacey told reporters all decisions about security were made by the U.S. Marshal's Service and that the state troopers were part of a joint state-federal anti-terrorism task force.

"You know that this man was picked up with three very powerful explosive devices," Lacey said. "He had a fraudulent passport in his possession. Those facts would indicate that this man might present some type of danger. That may well be what the marshal's office took into consideration."

U.S. Attorney Samuel Alito said in court he was insulted by the suggestion that the government shopped for a conservative judge. Federal cases are generally assigned to judges on a rotation basis.

Lechner set a tentative trial date of June 13 for Kikumura, who was spotted acting suspiciously on the New Jersey Turnpike and arrested April 12.

Authorities said he was using a stolen Japanese passport and driving a car registered under a false name. A state trooper who stopped Kikumura said he found three pipebombs and additional explosives paraphernalia in the car.

Alito has refused to say whether the U.S. government believes Japanese allegations that Kikumura is linked to the Japanese Red Army or any other terrorist group. Kikumura was arrested with explosives in 1986 at Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam, but was later released and deported because of an illegal search.

 device at Wilson Elementary School, only about 10 percent of the drivers voluntarily complied with the posted 20 mph limit before Riggins began operating the board.

After drivers began to see their speeds posted they tended to slow down, but many continued to drive at speeds that exceeded the limit.

Beverly Hughes, supervisor of county school crossing guards, who has been using the board in conjunction with school resource officers, said, "It's funny what people will do. Some try not to look at you, as if you won't see them. Some smile and wave and slow down. Or, a passenger will nudge the driver and point out the board."

In an earlier outing with the board, six cars at South Seminole Middle School were stopped and the drivers were ticketed for speeding, Hughes said. Two of those drivers are teachers.

During the experiment at Wilson Elementary, Walter Meriwether, risk manager for the school district, who oversees the safety of students and county workers, watched as a school bus entered the school zone at a speed of 46 mph. Upon seeing the digital display of the bus speed, the driver slowed, but the bus' speed never fell below 30 mph in the 20 mph zone.

Meriwether said he reported the incident to the driver's supervisor and added that school bus drivers are subject to the same traffic rule as all other drivers and may be ticketed for offenses.

The basic fine for a speeding ticket is $50, with $2 added for each mile per hour over the posted limit, Riggins said.

The new board and radar combination allows sheriff's deputies to zero in on specific cars even in congested areas, he said, adding this is hard to do with conventional radar devices.

Safety in school zones is a major concern of officials. Meriwether said just a few days ago when a crossing guard had traffic stopped in the westbound lane of E.E. Williamson Road at Woodlands Elementary School in rural Longwood, a driver in the westbound lane ignored the guard's stop sign and drove into a 5th grade boy on a bicycle. The boy, who had been crossing the road, received superficial injuries, Meriwether said.

"There's a certain amount of personal satisfaction," in seeing how drivers react and slow down when they see their speed displayed, Riggins said.

- Payment of "reasonable" moving costs.

orney Michael Kramer will introduce an emergency ordinance Monday night appointing the city clerk as acting city administrator when the city administrator is away temporarily or disabled.

A similar ordinance following the usual procedure will be presented for tentative approval.

If it passes, a public hearing and final action will be held May 18.

Should DeMarie wish to resign, the contract calls for him to give the city at least a one-month written notice. If the city should terminate him by means other than those provided in the city charter, it promises to pay him 90 days' severance pay plus any accrued vacation or sick leave allowance. DeMarie, in turn, would agree to release the city from any further claims.

DeMarie has been under contract as city manager of Florida City since 1984 and prior to that was city manager of North Miami Beach for nine years. He has 16 years of experience in government.

While under contract, DeMarie agrees to remain in the exclusive employ of the city, but can accept part-time employment such as teaching and consulting work with the prior consent of the city commission providing it does not interfere or conflict with his responsibilities as city administrator.

The city commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in city hall.

Testimony: Mafia holds 'make or break' power

By George Loboens
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — A soldier in New York's Genovese crime family says the Mafia can "make or break" businessmen in the city's construction, waterfront and garment industries through its control of key unions.

Vincent "Fish" Cafaro, under indictment since 1986 for racketeering, extortion and other charges, told Congress Friday that while the mob makes most of its money from gambling, it has gained more far-reaching power by muscling in on unions that provide essential services to certain industries.

"My family made a lot of money from gambling and the numbers rackets ... but our real power, our real strength, came from the unions," Cafaro told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"In some cases, we got money from dealings with the unions, in some cases we got favors such as jobs for friends and relatives, but most importantly, we got power over every businessman in New York," he said.

"With the unions behind us, we could make or break the construction industry, the garment industry, the docks, to name a few."

Much of Cafaro's testimony focused on the Mafia's pervasive influence in New York City's concrete industry. He said the mob rigged bids on 75 percent of the concrete contracts in Manhattan through its control of construction unions. In particular a Teamsters local that represents all concrete truck drivers in the city.

He said the city's four biggest mob families formed a so-called

"2 percent Club" to funnel concrete work to corrupt contractors in return for kickbacks amounting to 2 percent of each contract's price. The kickbacks then are divided among the four families.

Asked about the prospects of contractors who didn't belong to the "club," Cafaro said, "The legit guy ain't got a chance."

 to knock down the ceilings in the west end of the house, where the utility room is located. As a result, flames dropped into the living quarters of the house, gutting the master bedroom, kitchen, living room and a bedroom, as well as the utility room.

Schaefer said from questioning the Jacobs family he found out Mrs. Jacobs had used the clothes drier earlier that morning and turned it off when she left the house. The Jacobs' son, who is about 20, came into the house a few minutes later and heard the drier running, Schaefer said.

After learning that the drier had been turned off earlier, Schaefer said fire investigators suspect the electric line feeding the drier must have shorted out, causing the drier to start while the switch was turned off. The short evidently caused a fire inside the wall which spread to the attic, he said.

Foyt leads 2nd round qualifying

LALLADEGA Ala (PH) - Racing veteran A. J. Foyt led the second round of NASCAR Winston Cup stock car qualifying Friday for Sunday's Winston 500 at Mahan's International Motor Speedway.

Qualifying for the second round in the ARI-A 500K Formula Super Car Series Pole also ended Friday.

Foyt, whose Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme was slowed on Thursday by a faulty ignition, lapped the 2.66-mile speedway at an average speed of 193.076 mph good enough for 21st place. Forty-one cars will start the race, scheduled to begin at 4 p.m. CST.

Foyt won the pole in Chevrolet in 1977 but has never won the race.

Davey Allison, the defending champion, Thursday won the pole position in his Ford Thunderbird with a track speed of 198.967 mph. Darrell Waltrip qualified second with a speed of 198.196 mph in a Chevrolet.

Phil Parsons was third fastest in an Oldsmobile and Allison's father, Bobby, qualified fourth fastest at 197.941 mph in a Mustang.

NASCAR imposed carbon-restrictions designed to slow down speeds at Talladega last week following a crash that killed driver Al Unser Jr. in 1987. Unser, an Oldsmobile driver, worked the first-time speed limit during the qualifying session.

Parsons' 1987 season was hampered by a crash in the 500-mile Daytona race. He finished 31st in the race after a crash on lap 100. He also finished 31st in the 500-mile race at Talladega.

Lady Rams: Oh what a night

Track: Lake Mary rolls to crown

By Chris Flister Herald Sports Editor LONGWOOD — After turning in solid performances in the field events, Lake Mary's Lady Rams put their title hopes on the track. They went into the running events with a comfortable lead — they went out in a blaze of glory.

The dominance on the track, highlighted by a 1-2-3 sweep in the 330 hurdles, enabled Lake Mary to pile up 115 points and run away with the 4A-9 District title before 751 fans at Lyman High. Lake Brantley was a distant second at 68 followed by Manland (49), Lake Howell (31), Spruce Creek (30), DeLand (28) and Lyman (26).

The top four finishers in each event advance to this Friday's region meet at Showalter Field in Orlando.

For Lake Mary's girls, it was their first ever Class 4A track title. They won a Class 3A title in 1985. And this was, by far their most impressive performance ever.

"I'm still flying high," Lake Mary coach Mike Gibson said after the meet. "After the field events, I told the girls we had a 348 lead and then they went out on the track and poured on it. It was just what we needed."

Included in Lake Mary's field events excellence was a 1-2 finish in the high jump as Jennifer Caputo cleared 5'2" for first place and Teri Whyte was second at 5'0". Amy Kuyach also had a superb meet as she took second in the shot put with a personal best 36.75 and fourth in the discus at 98-10. Kwapa Floyd added four points in the long jump as she took third with a leap of 16.95.

The triple jump was another good event for Lake Mary as Tabatha Gano was third (33.55) and Oneyke Berry fourth (32.10).

The triple jump was a big turning point for us, Gibson said. "We expected Brantley to gain some points on us but we ended up outscoring them. 7-5-1 really didn't expect Berry to qualify but she came through with a great effort."

Berry, a senior, is one of three Lake Mary performers who bounced back from injuries to help lead the title chase. Berry missed much of the season with a hamstring pull, but she looked in fine form Friday night as she took first place in the 110 high hurdles with a time of 15.5 and also was second in the 330 hurdles (48.9) and ran a leg on the winning mile relay.

"I'd definitely have to say that I'm 'in' back," Gibson said. "She did a lot of work on her and more."

Sophomore Allison Snell, another Lady Ram, who missed part of the year with an injury, showed she is back in top form as she turned in three superb efforts in the quarter mile.

In the prelims of the open quarter, Snell ran a 61.7 and she came back with a 61.5 in the finals for third place. Snell also ran a 61.0 anchor leg on the mile relay team which won with a time of 4:11.7. Also on that team where Gano (62.5), Whyte (64.9) and Berry (65.9). Gano continued to look good in the hurdles as she took the 430 lows at 47.1 and was second in the 110 highs at 16.2. Tabitha Newsome completed the Lake Mary sweep in the 330 lows with a third place time of 48.9.

Softball: Mary upsets Brantley, 6-3

ALFAMONTE — Sparkling defense has always been the forte of Lake Mary's Lady Rams. When they add good offensive production to that defense, the Lady Rams are as tough as any team around.

Lake Mary put together a classic all-around performance Friday night as they knocked off one of the most powerful teams Seminole County has ever seen. It was a near perfect game and also a case of a team, particularly its 11 seniors, that was determined not to let its season end.

The Lady Rams rallied for four runs in the top of the first inning, then relied on sound defense and superb pitching to pull out a 6-3 victory in the finals of the 4A-5 District Tournament before 651 fans at Lady Patriots Stadium.

This is such a sweet win, especially for the seniors, Lake Mary coach Karen Nolen said. "We made an oath before the game that we were not ready for the season to be over."

Lake Mary, 1986, hopes to take its storied season one step further Tuesday when it plays at Apopka in the Region 3 playoff. Apopka won the District 6 title with an 8-6 decision over Lake Howell on Friday.

Lake Brantley, which finished second in the state a year ago, concluded the year with a 21-3 record. The Lady Patriots had shut Lake Mary out twice during the regular season.

"I guess Lake Mary saved up all of their hits for this game," Lake Brantley coach Benny Betris said. "I hope they go on and beat Apopka and go as far as we did last year."

Lake Mary put together as many hits in the first inning as it did in either game against Brantley during the regular season. Amy Adams singled to lead off the inning and Valerie Smith singled to left. Brantley shortstop Tracy Brandenburg then made a big play as she fielded Brooke Taylor's grounder, stopped on second and fired to first for a double play with Adams taking third.

Designated hitter Paula Songer kept the inning alive as she tapped a single to left to drive in Adams with the game's first run. Heather Golden then drilled a double to center and the Lady Rams had runners on second and third. Kristen Garrison followed with a grounder to short but this time Brandenburg's throw sailed into the Lake Mary dugout and both Songer and Golden scored for a 3-0 lead. Marine Frey then smacked a single up the middle to plate Garrison for a 4-0 lead.

The girls came out ready to play and really stroked the ball in the first inning, Nolen said.

here. McCullough said. "The annual steps quite a bit and I think that's how we got off in the first game. We were tough and put the ball over the plate in the defense, get behind, which was the something that would happen."

Lake Mary pitcher, Alex Hays, was strong over the middle innings, allowing the Braves a pair of late runs in the top of the first. Hays was able to induce left fielder John Lee to hit a ball that could not score from a full path to the right wall.

Brantley's left fielder, John Lee, walked one and scattered six hits, including a home run in the first inning. Lee allowed just two base runners to reach the second and sixth innings. Lee lost slow the pace that Lyman needed.

The Braves had a chance to score a run in the bottom of the fifth inning when Weeger led off with a line single to the middle. Weeger then walked with Lyman. But the plate was empty and Lyman's pitcher, Alex Hays, struck out Lee.

Creek takes 4A-9 boys title

Lyman's Marshall, Lake Mary's King win two events each

By Chris Pieter
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Spruce Creek's Hawks used a pair of first places by distance runner John Circeili and a pair of Lyman disqualifications to slip away with the 4A-9 District title Friday night at Lyman High.

In winning their first district track title, the Hawks finished with 92 points compared to 89 for Lyman. Lake Howell was third at 55½ followed by Lake Mary (44), Mainland (43), Lake Brantley (28½) and DeLand (15).

The top four finishers in each event advance to this Friday's region meet at Showalter Field in Winter Park.

Circeili claimed first place in the mile run with a time of 4:20.4 and also took the 800 at 1:58.3.

Lyman lost as many as 12 potential points after John Scherpf and Dave Garrett were disqualified from the shot put for a technicality in not reporting to the clerk of the course in time. The two had finished 1-2 in the discus.

Despite falling short in the team score and the disqualifications, Lyman had some excellent performances. Darren Marshall had the most notable effort as he dominated the hurdles and also took a second in the pole vault.

Marshall won the 120 high hurdles with a time of 14.5 while teammate Victor Farrier was second in 15.0 and Lake Howell's Greg Meier third at 15.0. It was the same order of finish in the 330 intermediates as Marshall blazed to a 39.7 with Farrier at 40.8 and Meier 41.3.

TRACK/FIELD

Marshall cleared 12-0 in the pole vault for second place while Lake Howell's Brian Horvath turned in a superb effort by clearing a season's best 13-6 for first place. Horvath figures to do well in the next two meets if he can consistently clear that height and maybe even go up a few notches.

Along with the tight team race, there were also several close individual battles in Friday night's meet. Among the more exciting races was the mile run where three runners finished in a virtual dead heat for third, fourth and fifth places.

After Circeili had won, Lyman's Teddy Mitchell took second. Then came Lake Mary's Eric Petersen, Lake Brantley's Darin Tugman and Lyman's Nick Radkewich all fighting for a regional qualifying spot. In the end, they all finished with a time of 4:25.9 but it was Petersen outlasting Tugman for third and Tugman doing the same to Radkewich for fourth.

Another interesting battle was the two mile where Mitchell, Radkewich and Lake Mary's Brad Smith and Matt Suttill all were in position to win through most of the race. Suttill fell back a bit late, but held on for fourth place. Mitchell used his strong kick to win out in the end with a time of 9:35.8 while Radkewich was a close second at 9:36.8 and Smith finished third at 9:41.2. It was a nice performance for Smith, returning from a foot injury many people felt would end his season.

In the field events, Lake Mary's Cecil King claimed a pair of firsts while Lyman got a 1-2 sweep from Scherpf and Garrett in the discus.

King took the triple jump with leap of 46-6 and also won the long jump at 22-4. He now will look forward to returning to Showalter Field's surface where he soared to a 49-14 in the triple and 23-8 in the long jump the last time he competed there.

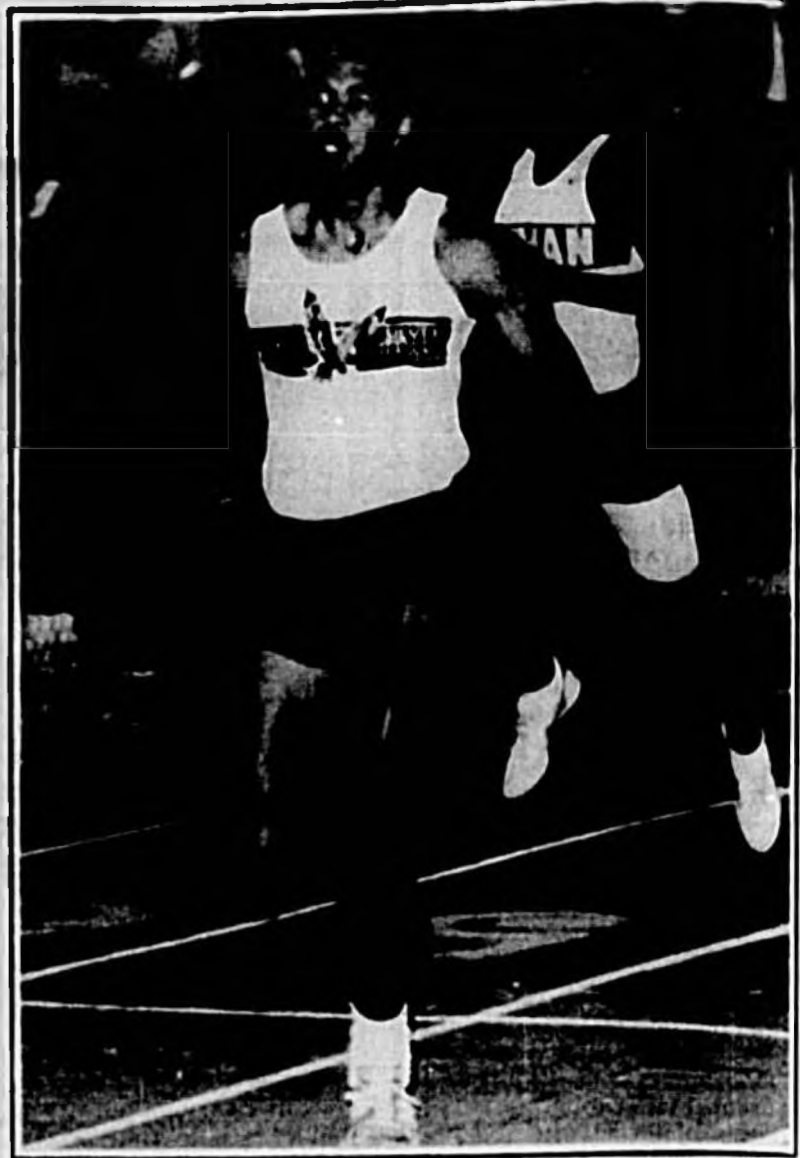

Also qualifying for Lake Mary was Leroy Jenkins in the high jump (third at 6-2) and the 220 (third at 23.4) and Manny Sapien in the shot put (fourth at 45-6).

In the discus, Scherpf unleashed a throw of 154-5 for first place and Garrett let loose with a 152-11 for second.

Lake Howell's third-place team effort included a first place in the 440 dash by Cornel Rigby as he finished in 50.5 compared to 51.1 for Lyman's James Flint. Howell also did well in the 100 meters where Marquette Smith finished third at 11.1 and Craig Derington was fourth at 11.1.

Also qualifying for Lake Howell were Brandon Lowenthal in the 800 (third at 2:00.6), Gary Weeden in the high jump (fourth at 6-2) and the mile relay team which was third at 3:28.8.

Lake Brantley's Clint Johnson had a good day in the sprints as he was second in the 100 at 11.0 and second in the 220 at 22.6.

The sprinters also had a good night for Lake Mary as Eilan Maher qualified in two events and Tonya McCrae one. Maher was third in the 100 meters (13.1) and fourth in the 220 (27.7) and McCrae took second in the 100 at 13.0.

Both Maher and McCrae also ran on the 440 relay team which finished second at 52.5. Newsome and Floyd also ran on the that team.

"McCrae is another one who really helped us out," Gibson said. "She hadn't run (knee injury) since the Lake Mary Invitational on March 17 and came out and gave it everything she had tonight."

Whyte also qualified in the open 440 with a second-place time of 60.9 while Christine Adamson came through with a third in the 800 (2:31.1) and Tara Braheny was fourth in the mile (5:49.4) and fourth in the two mile (12:53.8). Heather Heikkila, despite running while ill, took a fifth in the mile at 5:51.3.

"We qualified just about everyone we could have hoped for," Gibson said. "Now we'll go into the region and see what we can do against Oak Ridge. If we perform like we did tonight, I believe we can stay right with Oak Ridge."

Tabatha Gano glides over a hurdle en route to victory in the 330 lows. Gano led a 1-2-3 Lake Mary sweep of the event that was among the many highlights of the Lady Rams' district championship.

Camino, Tullis, Frizzell shine for Brantley

By Chris Pieter
Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD — Heather Camino and Joyce Tullis continued their distance dominance while Lisa Frizzell turned in a fine meet in leading Lake Brantley to second place in Friday's District 4A-9 meet at Lyman High.

Camino sailed to first places in both the mile and two mile with Tullis right on her teammate's heels in both races. In the mile, Camino cruised in with a time of 5:29.5 while Tullis came in at 5:39.2.

The two mile turned into a good duel between the Lady Patriot pair as Tullis led for most of the way before Camino put on a late kick for first place. Camino finished in 11:51.8 with Tullis second at 11:52.1.

TRACK/FIELD

Frizzell, who was a couple steps short of making the finals of the 440 dash in last year's state meet, continued her quest to get back to state as she took the open quarter Friday with a time of 60.1.

Frizzell, who had been known as more of a middle distance runner, also showed her versatility by taking third in the 220 dash with a time of 27.7. It was the first major meet Frizzell had competed in the 220 this season.

The senior standout capped off the night by running a nice anchor leg on the mile relay which finished second to Lake Mary at 4:13.2.

Also qualifying for regionals for the Lady Patriots were Jackie Brockington in the triple jump (second at 33.7) and Kristen Pauley in the mile (third at 5:46.3).

Lake Howell was led by Stacy Johnson who took a second in the 800 run (2:26.3) while Jenny Bolt was fourth in the 800 at 2:31.3. The Lady Hawks also received outstanding efforts from a pair of freshmen as Rita VanderMolen qualified for regionals in the long jump with a fourth-place effort at 15-5 and Jessica Cardarelli qualified in the 330 hurdles with a fourth-place time of 49.5. Also for the Lady Hawks, Amy Miller took fourth in the 110 hurdles (17.5). The Lady Hawks' mile relay team qualified by finishing third with a nice time of 4:14.9.

Falcon shows way in distance medley

TRACK/FIELD

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Arkansas' Joe Falcon pulled away in the last 250 meters Friday to give the Razorbacks an easy victory in the men's college distance medley at the 94th Penn Relays.

Falcon, the NCAA indoor champion in the mile and 3,000 meters, kicked past Indiana's Charles Marsala to allow Arkansas to win the race in a time of 9:29.4. He finished about 25 yards ahead of Indiana, second in 9:33.4.

Kentucky was third in 9:36.2, West Virginia fourth in 9:37.4 and William & Mary finished fifth in 9:37.9.

Falcon received the baton for the final 1,600-meter leg a few strides behind Marsala and was content to remain in his wake until the last lap. After completing his finishing kick for a 3:59.6 leg, Falcon raised the baton in the air as he crossed the finish line.

"Coach (John) McDonnell told me to sit back and get ready to make a good move," Falcon said. "He wants us to be like a cobra and just spring out and pull away. I made the move when I felt he (Marsala) was tired."

Arkansas' Matt Taylor gave the Razorbacks an eight-yard lead over Indiana after an opening 1,200-meter leg of 2:54.7 and John Register maintained the advantage with a 46.6-second 400-meter leg.

But Lorenzo Brown fell slightly behind Indiana in the 800-meter leg, which he covered in 1:48.5, leaving it up to Falcon to give the Razorbacks their fifth victory in the last six years in the event.

"I backed off the pace so Indiana could take the lead down the stretch," Brown said. "We felt that if I was coming in and someone was near me, I would ease off and let them pass so Joe could be behind their guy."

Last year's winner,

Georgetown, did not enter its best runners and finished back in the pack and Villanova, a perennial contender, did not field a team.

"We'd like to have seen more teams in it," Brown said. "That would give us a chance to pack it in with other teams. But we're happy with the win."

Arizona State won the college women's 4 x 100-meter relay championship in a time of 44:46 seconds. George Mason finished second in 44:68 and Texas was third in 45:88.

Texas Christian's team of Roscoe Tatum, Greg Sholar, Tony Allen and Ray Stewart had the fastest qualifying time, 39:36 seconds, for Saturday's final in the men's 4 x 100-meter relay.

Junior John Branch of Howard won the college men's 400-meter hurdles in a personal best time of 49.80 seconds, leading the entire length of his section while running in lane 9, which prevented him from seeing his competition.

"I've been running that way all year," said Branch, who is in only his fourth year of running competition. "In other meets the competition hasn't been as strong so I would be in front by the first hurdle and I'm used to running in the lead."

David Jones of Seton Hall was second in 50.34 and Penn State's Michael Timpson, who is also a receiver on the Nittany Lions' football team, was third in 50.54.

Kevin Anderson of the Atlantic Coast Club won the men's Olympic Development 400-meter hurdles in 50.48 seconds. Randy Cox, who won the college event last year and is now running for the Shore Athletic Club, was second in 50.92.

Raymond Humphrey of Georgetown won the college men's long jump with a leap of 25 feet 5 1/4 inches.

Fleck joins America staff

SANFORD — Today is the last day for this month's league bowlers in house no tap tournament. We will be paying out at least 14 or 15 places. Don't miss your chance at the cash and some very inexpensive bowling — 87 for four games of bowling and a free game pass plus a shot at the money.

Those of you who have seen the tall guy "with hair" working with me the past few days have seen Bowl America Sanford's new manager. His name is Bruce Fleck and he comes to us with about 30 days of bowling center management experience. Fleck is a people person, and I am sure all of you will learn to love him. I plan to officially retire from the bowling business on July 1, 1988, but Jackie and I will be staying in Sanford and bowl with you all as much as we can. I'll write more on my leaving later and Fleck will give you more of a rundown on himself. In the meantime introduce yourself to Fleck.

Summer league sign up is reaching its peak.

Bird, McHale boost Celtics

BOSTON (UPI) — Larry Bird and Kevin McHale scored 29 points apiece Friday night and the Boston Celtics' strong defense resulted in a 26-5 second-half spurt and a 112-92 victory over the New York Knicks in the opening game of their Eastern Conference first-round playoff.

Game 2 of the best-of-five series will be played Sunday at Boston Garden.

New York led 74-71 at 3:21 of the third quarter then scored just 5 points over the next 9:04. Boston tightened its defense and had 4 of its 10 blocked shots in the 26-5 surge which broke open the game.

"It was almost equivalent to a blitz in football," said New York Coach Rick Pitino.

"When the 'D' kicked in, we just took over," said Bird. "D.J. (Dennis Johnson) made a couple of steals. Kevin was blocking everything in the middle and Robert (Parish) was grabbing every rebound. When we're playing like that we're tough to beat."

After watching the Knicks

were well inside during much of the third quarter. Boston Coach K.C. Jones switched his team to a collapsing defense.

"They threw a couple of lobbs in there that hurt us and I said, 'Let's not beat a dead horse,'" said Jones. "So I made the change."

The run featured 10 points by McHale, who also totaled 10 rebounds and 5 blocks. McHale scored on a pair of tip-ins, an 8-foot baseline jumper, a layup and a goaltending call against Knicks center Patrick Ewing. Johnson completed the surge with a free throw at 6:26 of the fourth quarter, putting Boston ahead 97-79 and New York was unable to mount a comeback threat.

The Knicks, in the playoffs for the first time since 1984, shot just 30 percent in the fourth quarter, hitting only 7 of 23 shots. But Ewing said Boston's playoff experience made no difference.

"We've just got to figure out another way," he said. "We don't worry about experience, experience doesn't mean anything — as long as you're good. This is the time of year when those who can play, play."

New York was paced by Gerald Wilkins with 24 points. Ewing had 16 points, 11 rebounds and 5 of New York's 6 blocked shots.

For Boston, Johnson added 16 points, Parish contributed 14 points and a game-high 13 rebounds and reserve Jim Paxson scored 12. Boston twice held leads of 21 points in the final two minutes.

The Knicks led 23-16, but Boston responded with three consecutive baskets and was within 20-26 after one quarter. Neither team led by more than 5 points in the second quarter and Boston held a 53-51 halftime edge despite New York's 24-16 rebounding advantage in the first half.

To combat New York's harassing defense and keep Boston's starters fresh, Jones used his bench extensively in the first half, rotating 10 players.

Hawks wake up, top Bucks

ATLANTA (UPI) — Dominique Wilkins had a simple explanation why the Atlanta Hawks, who had been playing like sleepwalkers, awoke with a vengeance Friday night.

The Hawks, trailing by 12 points at halftime, outscored Milwaukee 36-16 in the third quarter and went on to beat the Bucks, 110-107, in the opening game of their first-round NBA playoff series.

"We were determined not to be embarrassed at home, especially in the first game," said Wilkins, who lived up to his credentials as the NBA's No. 2 scorer by winding up with a game-high 26 points after a slow first half. "We were determined to come out and play good, hard basketball that second half."

Wilkins' coach, Mike Fratello, said the Hawks "played two different halves of basketball. The first half, we basically caught, letting everything come to us. In the second half, we were the aggressors."

Wilkins was just one member of the Hawks' "W Troop" that turned things around Friday night. Guard Randy Wittman had 18 of his 20 points in the second half. Forward Kevin Willis scored 22 and diminutive, 5-7 guard Spud Webb scored 18. "The defensive effort in the second half was what turned the game around," Fratello said. "Our crowd has been waiting for awhile to have something to cheer about."

Wittman made just one of two field goal attempts in a 2-point first half performance but hit 9 of 14 in the second half — including the Hawks' final two of the game. "Randy was really rolling tonight," said Webb. "When he's hitting like that, he's tough to guard."

The second game in the best-of-5 series will be played Sunday night in Atlanta with Game 3 in Milwaukee on Wednesday.

"We were here to win," said Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief. "We had the opportunity to win, but the run in the third by Atlanta hurt us. They like to run and we knew that to win, we had to control the tempo. We'll come out Sunday and try to have fewer dead spots."

The Hawks appeared out of synch in the first half when the Bucks, paced by Terry Cummings, who had 13 of his 24 points in the first half built a 60-48 halftime lead.

"That wasn't the Hawks in the first half, we were flat," Wilkins said. "In the second half, we came out to play."

The Hawks led by 8, at 84-76, after three quarters. But Milwaukee battled back, tying the score at 80-all with 7:10 left in the contest and leading 101-100 with 2:02 to go.

Nuggets outgun Sonics, 126-123

DENVER (UPI) — The Seattle SuperSonics, the surprise team of the playoffs last year, started the postseason the same way they did last season — with a loss.

Lafayette Lever scored 8 of his 18 points in the final four minutes Friday night to pace the Denver Nuggets to a 126-123 victory over the SuperSonics in the opening game of their Western Conference playoff series.

Alex English scored 28 points, Danny Schayes 26 and Jay Vincent 25 as the Nuggets overcame a 12-point deficit in the final period. Tom Chambers led Seattle with 29 points.

Game 2 of the best-of-five series is scheduled for Sunday in Denver. Seattle opened the playoffs last year with a loss to the Mavericks and went on to eliminate Dallas and advance to the Western Conference final.

"This win really gives us a big edge," said

BASKETBALL

Schayes. "It's like we won more than one game. To play as well as they played and lose has got to take a lot out of them."

The Sonics took the lead early in the second quarter and was ahead 96-84 in the first minute of the final period before Schayes hit 7 consecutive points to pull the Nuggets within 96-91.

Denver reserve Mike Evans sank 9 points over the next four minutes to help the Nuggets move within 105-104 with 6:58 remaining.

Vincent then canned four straight jumpers, but Seattle matched each basket. Denver took the lead with 2:27 left, 120-119, on a pair of Lever free throws.

With the score tied 120-120, English sank a 15-foot jumper with 1:05 to play, and Denver never trailed thereafter.

Nate McMillan made only 1 of 2 free throws with 47 seconds left, and on the ensuing possession, Lever hit a jumper from the corner with 22 seconds to play for a 124-121 lead.

"We played well, but we could have played a lot better down the stretch when the game was on the line. We were in control throughout the game until the last few minutes. We should have won," said Chambers.

"There's always a tomorrow, but in these playoffs, there's not many tomorrows," said the Sonics' Xavier McDaniel.

Seattle converted just 5 of 10 free throws in the final four minutes and sank just one basket in the final 4:30.

Dale Ellis added 24 points for Seattle and McDaniel 20 as the Sonics lost despite shooting 59 percent from the field. For the game, Seattle was 21-34 from the line and Denver 41-46.

Lakers overpower Spurs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — James Worthy scored 22 points and Kurt Rambis struck for 15 straight Laker points in the third quarter Friday night to power Los Angeles to a 122-110 victory over the San Antonio Spurs in the opener of their first-round playoff series.

Rambis, who finished with a season-high and career-playoff high 19 points, sank 7 straight shots in his remarkable run — as Los Angeles expanded a 64-56 lead to 79-64 midway through the third quarter. The Lakers coasted the rest of the way.

Game 2 of the best-of-five series is set for Sunday night at the Forum, with the third game Tuesday night at San Antonio's HemisFair.

in place of A.C. Green and averaged 4 points a game, hit 7 layups and 1 foul shot in his improbable streak as the Lakers took a 90-80 lead entering the final period.

Green then scored 8 of Los Angeles' first 12 points of the fourth period as the Lakers built a 103-86 bulge with 7:24 to play and coasted from there.

The Spurs, losers of all six games with Los Angeles this season, were led by Alvin Robertson with 34 points and Walter Berry with 25 off the bench. Both Robertson and Frank Brickowski, who had 17 points, were in foul trouble throughout.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, appearing in an unprecedented 17th playoff, had 19 points as did Byron Scott for the Lakers.

Los Angeles, seeking to become the first team to repeat as NBA champions since the 1969 Celtics, stumbled at the start of their quest, committing 12 turnovers in the first quarter to trail 28-26. The Spurs, running effectively, had 31 shots in the period.

Brickowski's jumper then gave San Antonio its biggest lead at 34-28 two minutes into the second quarter, but the Lakers reeled off 11 unanswered points, with Abdul-Jabbar contributing 7, for a 39-34 edge.

A short time later, Worthy and Green launched a 9-2 spurt with 4 points apiece, and Los Angeles led 50-41 en route to a 60-49 advantage at the break.

Lions claim third consecutive district crown

By Mark Myths
Herald Sports Writer

KISSIMEEE — Richard Cobb won his second game of the tournament to lead Oviedo to an impressive 6-1 victory over Edgewater Friday night in the District 3A-6 final at Osceola County Stadium.

The Lions improved to 18-8, winning their third straight district title, and will return to action Tuesday against the winner of the Ocala Vanguard-Gainesville Eastside game. Oviedo has not yet chosen a field to host the game on or set a time.

"Richard Cobb had a tremendous performance tonight," Oviedo coach Howard Mable said. "He was in total control, he was able to keep them off balance and let his players get behind him."

BASEBALL

Cobb struck out seven batters, walked two and gave up just three hits. Cobb also struck out the side in the bottom of the seventh for the second time in the tourney and the fourth time this season.

Edgewater, 8-20, opened the scoring with its only coming in the top of the second inning. Danny Yeoman led the frame off with a single. Ronaldo Jones followed and reached on an error. A passed ball advanced the runners to second and third with Durango James sending a deep fly to center to plate Yeoman.

Oviedo came up with its first two runs in the bottom of the third inning to take its initial lead. Mike Lounsberry led off with a walk. Robbie King then sacrificed him to second. Lounsberry moved up on a wild pitch and scored on an throwing error by the Eagle pitcher, Tom Brady, to tie the score.

After the second out Micah Kinnaird reached on a walk with Alan Greene following with a thunderous shot off the left center field wall for a run scoring triple.

The Lions added two more runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to seal the win away. John Emerson and John Bowers each drew walks to lead off the inning. Lounsberry then dropped down a sacrifice bunt to move the runners up with King hitting into a fielders choice that scored Emerson and Bowers scoring on a wild pitch to up the lead to, 4-1, with four innings completed. Oviedo added a pair of insurance runs in the bottom of the sixth inning with Emerson leading off and reaching on an error. Bowers then walked with Lounsberry again dropping down a sacrifice bunt to advance the runners. King then dropped down a suicide squeeze that plated Emerson and put runners on the corners. Gary Pelczar then ripped a shot to deep center that was run down by the Edgewater right fielder, the hit was deep enough to score Bowers and build the lead to 6-1.

"We executed well and scored when we had the opportunity," Mable said. "Edgewater is a lot better than their record would indicate and played us tough. Cobb, though, was just able to control them and keep them off the bases."

"We're not sure who we play and not sure where we'll be playing," Mable added. "I'm looking to find a field in the area with lights so we can have a night game."

Lady Lions rip Osceola in 3A-6

By Mark Myths
Herald Sports Writer

ORLANDO — Oviedo's Lady Lions captured their third District 3A-6 softball crown in the last four years Friday with a convincing 8-1 decision over Kissimmee Osceola before 101 fans at Fairview Park.

Oviedo, 15-7, will now return to action Tuesday against the winner of the Ocala-Gainesville district. Oviedo will host the game at Red Bug Park. Osceola, who downed Oviedo, 1-0, earlier this season completed its season at 12-10.

"We have no idea who we'll play and know nothing about that district this year," Oviedo coach Jackie Miller said. "We've concentrated on getting ourselves going and we're looking real good right now."

The Lady Lions took command of the game in the first inning scoring five runs. Cheryl Buntz led the rally off with single with Becky Jakubcin and Jill Knutson each followed with singles to load the bases. Jodie Switzer followed with a shot to second that was booted and allowed Buntz to score.

Osceola managed to come up with a play at third, though, and put out Knutson. Corrie Lawson followed with a single to load the bases with Keri Gaines and Kerstein Colon each following with a run scoring single to center field. Robin Hetsel then walked to score Switzer as Anna Hollis reached on an error by the third baseman to up the lead to 5-0 in the early going.

"The people who usually don't hit the ball for us really came through today," Miller said. "It's nice to see the entire team contributing because that makes everyone's job so much easier."

The Lady Lions added another run in the third with Lawson reaching on an error to open the inning. Colon then drilled a single to right followed by a single by Hollis to left that scored Lawson that upped the lead to 6-0.

The Lady Kowboys came up with their only run in the game in the fifth inning with Sonya Mills leading off with a single followed by a single by Pam Hill. Joyce Rose then hit into a fielders choice with Jill being put out at second. Elinia Hatachaw followed with another fielders choice that plated Mills to narrow the lead to 6-1.

Oviedo added its final two runs in the bottom half of the inning, though, to take command over Osceola. Hollis led the inning off with a single followed by a fielders choice by Kristie Mantione with Hollis being put out.

Jakubcin and Knutson followed with singles to load the bases followed a Switzer single that scored two runs and ran the lead to 8-1.

"Jodie Switzer had a great game," Miller said. "She kept them (Osceola) from hitting the ball by the way she pitched and made good contact with the ball every time she hit."

"We finished with 15 hits and it was nice to see that everyone was involved offensively," Miller added. "We'll need to keep hitting well and play good defense for the rest of the season and hope we can get some breaks."

Apopka ousts Howell, 8-6

APOPKA — Lake Howell squandered and early lead for the second day in a row and this time the Lady Silver Hawks could not come back as they dropped an 8-6 decision to Apopka's Lady Blue Darters in the District 4A-6 championship game at Edwards Field.

Apopka advances to the 4A-3 Region playoff Tuesday at home against Lake Mary. Lake Howell concluded the season with a 20-7 record.

The Lady Hawks built a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning, scoring all three runs with two outs. Julie Barton started the rally with a base hit and Leslie Barton and Stormi Littrell both singled to load the bases. Val Monico followed with a base hit to drive in Julie Barton and two more runs scored on a single by Lia Boatwright.

Apopka scored once in the bottom of the second and Lake Howell held a 3-1 lead until the Lady Darters broke loose for seven runs in the bottom of the fourth. Included in the rally were five hits, two Lake Howell errors and two walks.

Lake Howell cut into the 8-3 deficit with two runs in the fifth and one in the sixth but could not mount a last-inning comeback. In the fifth, an Apopka error scored the first run and Monico's single scored the second. In the sixth, Marie Peters singled and later scored on Leslie Barton's fielder's choice.

The Lady Hawks finished the season with three key players on the sidelines as outfielder Tammy Lewis was out with a leg injury, shortstop Misay Martinez broke her wrist before the district tourney and Ginger York, one of the top hitters off the bench, was injured during Thursday's game against Colonial.

"I would have liked to see what we could do with the entire team healthy," Lake Howell coach Jo Luciano said.

Lake Howell figures to have another strong team next season and hopes to stay healthy. The team loses only three seniors including Littrell and first baseman Rixja Millwood along with Lewis.

slapped a single to left to lead off and Michelle Weston looped a single to right. Penny Siqueros then hit a shot back toward the middle but pitcher Monica Frakes made a nice stop and threw to Frey at third for the force on Rabaja. Brandenburg then singled to drive in Weston and Tina Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Siqueros.

The teams then put on a defensive clinic for the next four frames. Shortstop Laurie Lelifer, Frey and Frakes made some nice plays for the Lady Rams during that stretch while Heather Meyer kept Lake Mary from adding to its lead with several spectacular catches in left center.

Neither team got a runner to third base from the second through the fifth frames and the Lady Rams grew more confident with each inning.

"This is something we've been dreaming about for so long. We've never wanted anything as much as this."

Lake Mary then put a pair of runs on the board in the top of the sixth for a 6-2 lead. Smith drew a walk to start the inning but Meyer then took away what could have been a home run from Taylor with a nice running catch in left center. After Songer lined out for the second out, Golden drilled a shot to center that skipped between the outfielders and went for a two-run homer.

Lake Brantley came back with a run in the bottom of the sixth but left runners at first and third. Siqueros led the inning off with a base hit and, with one out, Wilson singled. Meyer then singled through the middle to score Siqueros and send Wilson to third. Pinch hitter Pam Wittig then flew to left fielder Terri Peters for the second out and Frakes struck out pinch hitter Jennifer Rose to end the inning.

Lake Mary got a pinch hit single from Collette Davis in the top of the seventh but could not add to its lead.

In the bottom of the seventh, Michelle Karr led off with a base hit for Brantley but Frakes got the next two hitters to pop up. Weston then lined a single to right center that temporarily got away from Taylor. Karr then tried for third base but Taylor quickly came up with the ball and threw a strike to Frey who tagged Karr for the final out of the game.

"This game is something we've been dreaming about for so long," Taylor, one of the 11 seniors, said. "We've never wanted anything as much as this."

Derby field shaping up

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A precocious filly named Winning Colors and the undefeated colt Private Terms are the standouts in the large contingent of 3-year-olds gathering in Louisville for the May 7 Kentucky Derby, but they will not necessarily be the betting favorites.

That distinction could end up going to the Woody Stephens-trained duo of Forty Niner, the 1987 juvenile champion, and Cefis, a Caveat colt who bears Stephens' middle name.

The speedy Forty Niner, 5-for-6 last year, has not been quite as impressive in longer races this season, and the late-closing Cefis is still relatively unaccomplished, with just one stakes victory heading into his final prep in Churchill Downs' Derby Trial April 30.

But bettors may find the 2-for-1 bargain, Stephens' Kentucky roots and Forty Niner's Eclipse Award more appealing than the challenges facing Winning Colors and Private Terms (7-0).

The D. Wayne Lukas-trained Winning Colors, who shot to the top of the Derby standings with an awesome, 7 1/2-length victory in the Santa Anita Derby, will be trying to become the third filly to win the Roses in 114 runnings. Filly winners were Regret (1915) and Genuine Risk (1980). The last two to make the attempt, the Lukas-trained Life's Magic and Althea, finished eighth and 19th respectively in 1984.

Private Terms, a nephew to the late, two-time champion filly Ruffian, will be seeking to become the fifth undefeated horse to win the first leg of the Triple Crown and the first since Seattle Slew in 1977. The last unbeaten Kentucky Derby starter, Air Forba Won, finished seventh in 1982.

Though somewhat less accomplished, Risen Star, a twice-beaten son of Secretariat, and Proper Reamy, the lightly-raced winner of the Grade I Arkansas Derby, appear to be of similar caliber to Private Terms and Winning Colors.

Risen Star proved his mettle when he came off a Louisiana Derby triumph to upset Forty Niner by a head in Keeneland's Lexington Stakes April 18.

Proper Reamy, an In Reamy colt based at Oaklawn Park, has won four of five career starts by a combined 25 1/2 lengths. In his sole defeat, a fourth-place finish in the Rebel Stakes, he was beaten just 3 lengths after being pinned inside until late in the race.

Despite questions about Forty Niner's ability to go the 1 1/4-mile distance of the Derby, the Mr. Prospector colt also must be considered among the five most talented horses in the probable field of 18 to 20. Forty Niner has displayed a gritty toughness and competitiveness in his three losses this spring, digging in and trying to come again before losing by a length, a neck and a head.

Among the second echelon of Derby contenders are several promising and still-developing horses who could play a major role in the Classic.

They include Kingpost, a tall and ungainly gelding who won the $500,000 Jim Beam Stakes; Brian's Time, a small and undistinguished-looking Roberto colt who came from the back of the pack to edge Forty Niner in the Florida Derby; Granacus, the upset winner of the Blue Grass Stakes, and Seeking the Gold, another Mr. Prospector colt who was undefeated until he finished second to Private Terms in the Gotham and Wood Memorial.

The other horses committed by their trainers to the Derby include the Charlie Whittingham-trained Lively One, Purdue King, Jim's Orbit, Regal Classic, Intensive Command, Sea Trek and Stalwart.

At least three horses were still being considered for the remaining three spots in the Derby's 20-horse gate. They included the Lukas-trained Tejano, the leading juvenile money-winner last year; San Felipe winner Mi Preferido, who came out of the Arkansas Derby "body sore," and the Jack Van Berg-trained Din's Dancer.

Din's Dancer has no graded stakes earnings and would qualify for the field only if fewer than 20 horses enter.

The running of the Derby Trial also could produce an unexpected Derby starter. The only committed Derby starters in the Trial were Cefis, Jim's Orbit and Kingpost, but all seven Trial starters were Triple Crown nominees.

The makeup of the field did not fall into place until this past week. Four potential starters — Cherokee Colony, Ruhlmann, All The Power and Flying Victory — were injured in their final Derby preps. Others were eliminated by poor outings in the Wood, Arkansas, California Derby and the Blue Grass.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — U.S. District Judge Charles Allen signed a temporary restraining order prohibiting anyone from selling or distributing the names of Churchill Downs or the Kentucky Derby, several Derby logos, and the twin spires design.

The track has signed agreements with Louisville Manufacturing Co. and All Pro Championship to distribute or sell Derby and Downs products. Churchill General Manager Gerald Lawrence said following the court order secured Thursday.

Last year the Downs' campaign to enforce protections of the names and items led to federal seizure of some merchandise. And it also forced the Kentucky Derby Motel in St. Petersburg, Fla., to change its name.

But Churchill Downs never tried to move against Kentucky Derby Festival Inc., perhaps the biggest user of the Derby name.

Orioles rip Chisox, end streak at 21

United Press International

This time, the Baltimore Orioles fell two short — happily. After 21 straight losses — nine by a run or two — the Orioles claimed their first victory of their 25-day-old season to stop skidding two games short of the modern major-league futility record.

The Orioles, victims of jokes all across the country, Friday night shut out the Chicago White Sox 9-0, to stop their assault on the record of 23 consecutive losses by the 1961 Philadelphia Phillies. Baltimore had long ago broken the major-league record for losses to start a season, 13 straight by the 1904 Washington Senators and 1920 Detroit Tigers.

"What did Cleveland do to-night?" kidded Orioles manager Frank Robinson, a reference to Baltimore gaining ground on the American League East leaders.

The defense sparked, the offense came to life and the pitching was nearly perfect as the nightmare ended.

"Now hopefully all this stuff is over and we can go out and play some baseball like we know we can," said Orioles pitcher Dave Schmidt, who earned his first save by pitching one-hit relief over three innings. "We all knew we weren't this bad. It was unbelievable to us that we could lose that many games in a row."

The Orioles own the major-league mark for longest slide at the beginning of a season, and the longest slide in American

Yankees 9, Rangers 1
At New York, John Candelaria, 2-2, pitched a five-hitter, striking out eight while walking only one. Charlie Hough, 3-3, lasted 7 2-3 innings and gave up eight hits, four walks and one earned run.

Angels 9, Blue Jays 5
At Toronto, Johnny Ray drove in three California runs and scored his third run of the game on Devon White's eighth-inning triple to hand the Blue Jays their fifth straight loss. Bryan Harvey, 1-0, worked three scoreless innings for his first major-league victory.

Tigers 9, Mariners 6
At Detroit, Chet Lemon, Alan Trammell and Larry Herndon started the seventh inning with consecutive doubles to snap a tie and spark the victory. Guillermo Hernandez evened his record at 1-1 and rookie Don Heinkel pitched two innings for his first major-league save.

Mets down slumping Reds, 5-4

United Press International

The Cincinnati Reds, managed by one of the best hitters in baseball history, haven't been managing many hits lately. "I'm not pointing any fingers but the guys in the clubhouse know who isn't hitting," Pete Rose said Friday night after Cincinnati lost to the New York Mets 5-4. "We're supposed to be a hitting team, but we're not hitting. When the big guys aren't hitting, it puts a strain on everybody else."

The Reds finished with only five hits against three Mets pitchers, including reliever Roger McDowell, who went 1-2-3 innings for the victory.

And their numbers three, four five hitters — Kal Daniels, Eric Davis and Nick Esasky — went 0 for 7 and struck out five times. In the last two games, those three went 0 for 17 and fanned 13 times.

At San Diego, Andy Hawkins, 3-1, and Mark Davis combined on a seven-hitter. Davis pitched two-thirds of an inning for his third save, extending his scoreless innings streak to 18. Padre John Kruk hit his third homer and had two RBI. Pittsburgh starter Brian Fisher left in the third with a sore shoulder.

Ramirez' blast sinks Expos, 6-4

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rafael Ramirez blasted a two-run homer in the eighth inning Friday night to lift the Houston Astros to a 6-4 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Craig Reynolds reached base with two outs in the eighth on an error by shortstop Luis Rivera before Ramirez hit a 2-0 pitch from Tim Burke, 1-1, over the left-field fence. It was Ramirez's first homer of the season.

Juan Agosto, 1-0, worked the eighth inning for the triumph. Dave Smith got three outs for his fourth save.

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the first. Kevin Bass singled with two outs and Glenn Davis hit his seventh homer of the season.

Montreal grabbed a 3-2 lead in the fourth. Hubie Brooks led off with a single and scored, one out later, on Andres Galarrraga's double. Jeff Reed tripled to drive home Galarrraga and Tom Foley singled to score Reed.

The Expos increased their lead to 4-2 in the sixth. Galarrraga reached on second baseman Jim Pankovits' throwing error to open the inning and advanced to third on a pair of ground outs. Johnny Paredes drove in Galarrraga with a single, his first hit in the major leagues.

Montreal starter Dennis Martinez retired the final 13 batters he faced but had to leave the game with a bruised index finger after five innings.

Davis singled with one out in the sixth off Andy McGaffigan and moved to second on a wild pitch. Alan Ashby sliced a single to left that scored Davis to cut Montreal's lead to 4-3.

Houston tied the score in the seventh. Terry Puhl, pinch-hitting for Danny Darwin, walked with one out and advanced to second on an infield single by Gerald Young. Tim Burke relieved McGaffigan and retired Billy Hatcher before Bass singled to drive in Puhl.

Guerrero out

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dodgers third baseman Pedro Guerrero was scratched from Thursday's starting lineup because of tendinitis in his right knee.

Guerrero, second in the NL with a .371 batting average, was injured in the seventh inning of Wednesday night's game against the Cubs. He is listed as day-to-day.

Guerrero fielded a grounder, stepped on third to get a force play, then twisted the knee throwing to first.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought to you by Ken Rummel

One of the greatest hits in baseball history was the unusual home run by Babe Ruth during the 1932 World Series. Ruth came to bat, stopped the game and pointed to the centerfield bleachers, advising the crowd that he was going to hit a home run to that exact spot on the next pitch — and he did! Sports-writers said it was probably the only time in history that a player publicly announced in advance where and when he was going to hit a homer, and then exactly fulfilled his prediction — to both time and place.

NOTICE OF INTENT

TO REQUEST RELEASE OF FUNDS (NOI/RRFP)
At least one day after the termination of the public comment period for the FONSI, but not before comments on the FONSI have been considered and resolved, Seminole County will submit a Request for Release of Funds (RRFP) and Certification to HUD. By so doing the County will ask HUD to allow it to commit funds to this project, certifying that (1) it has performed the environmental review prescribed by HUD regulations (16 CFR Part 181), and (2) the Certifying Officer, Fred W. Stralman, Jr., consents to accept the jurisdiction of the federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review or resulting decision making and action. The legal effect of the certification is that by approving it, HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environment Act thus allowing Seminole County to commit Community Development Block Grant funds this project.

Benefit car wash providing free tacos

SANFORD — Taco Bell, at 2700 S. Orlando, will sponsor a car wash until 3 p.m. Saturday, April 30, to benefit Easter Seals.

Cost per car is $2. Each contributing driver will receive a coupon for a free taco.

Lake Mary High grad enters honor society

LAKE MARY — 1985 Lake Mary High School graduate David W. Gibson was recently initiated into the University of Miami chapter of the prestigious Phi Beta Kappa national honor society.

The initiation ceremony took place at the historic Biltmore Hotel in Coral Gables. Of the 51 new initiates, Gibson was one of the only two junior class members initiated into the 211-year-old society.

Gibson graduated Magna Cum Laude from Lake Mary High and is a pre-med biology major at the University of Miami.

In addition to Phi Beta Kappa, he is a member of Golden Key National Honor Society, Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Society, and Alpha Epsilon Delta.

Gibson is the son of James and Marilyn Gibson of Longwood.

Young artists to have their day at zoo

SANFORD — Artists aged preschool through grade 12 are invited to draw their favorite animal on Young Artists' Day, May 14, at the Central Florida Zoo in Sanford. Children interested may register at the zoo's small group shelter Monday, May 2, beginning at 9 a.m.

Each entrant will receive a ribbon and certificate. Trophies will be awarded to first, second and third place winners, and first place drawings will be purchased by the zoo for display.

Winners will be notified by mail and invited to attend a special awards dinner hosted by Burger King.

Children must bring their own art supplies to participate, and any drawing medium may be used.

Each child is limited to submitting one entry, to be drawn on the zoo grounds between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. on Saturday, May 14.

Registered participants will be admitted free to the zoo.

For more information, call the zoo office at 843-2341 or 323-4450.

Art association plans officer installation

SANFORD — The Sanford-Seminole Art Association will install officers for the coming year at its meeting Monday, May 9, at Lake Monroe Inn.

A buffet dinner, beginning at 7 p.m., will precede the meeting.

Job's been a blast; wish it could last

Memories. It doesn't seem like it's been 24 years since my newspaper career began with The Sanford Herald. But, as the old cliché goes, time flies when you're having fun, and I can truly say that I have had one heck of a good time.

The years since I began as The Herald's society editor in 1964 add up to nearly a quarter century of excitement, challenge, glitter and glamor. I was a party girl by nature, so, not only did I get to party, party, party, but I was paid for writing about the amenities of my life in paradise. I have had the absolute best of so many worlds that any bitterness along the way was simply small stuff.

I recall attending 11 events one Saturday back in the days when we covered everything that smelled of a social activity. The day, which included a multitude of graduation parties, started out with a breakfast. It moved on to splash parties, Coke parties, brunches, lunches, teas, dinners and ended with a Shriners' convention that night at Mayfair Inn, Sanford's elegant hostelry where some of the nation's elite gathered to greet, meet and eat.

A newsroom just has to be the most exciting work place in the world. Those were the days when skilled operators set copy on rugged, noisy linotype machines after stories were written by reporters who hammered away feverishly on antiquated, manual typewriters. The clankety-clank of the linotypes combined with the clickety-clack of the typewriters spelled out the epitome of excitement as adrenaline pumped, deadlines were met, and the paper was about to be put to bed.

But this long-lived, historic era bit the dust when it succumbed to the sophisticated age of electronics and computers several years back. Today, the newsroom and composing rooms are comparatively as silent as a scampering church mouse, except when the system goes down in the middle of an unfilled story and loud groans such as, "Oh, no!" from reporters and editors are apt to be heard all over the building.

One of my first assignments on the new job was to interview the exotic and glamorous Eva Gabor, who was in Orlando for a promotion. We had a "vunderful time, Dahlin'." The charming and gracious actress reflected class in its purest form. She treated us royally, and it's only natural that today she is one of my favorite personalities.

I vividly recall attending a champagne brunch for the popular red-haired comedian, Arthur Godfrey, at the Villa Nova in Winter Park. My purpose there was for a story and photograph, which I never forgot on any assignment, and at times this meant leaving politeness on the shelf somewhere. Sometimes, it became dog eat dog. Zooming in on Godfrey, I quickly moved in the line of a television camera, and the cameraman severely admonished me with outward hostility as if he owned the place. I turned around and snapped at the big jerk. "I have as much right here as you." I got the picture.

The newsroom has always been a popular place for celebrities and politicians when they hit town. The name of the game for many is free publicity. Allen H. Neuharth, chairman of the board of Gannett Co., Inc., was a frequent visitor to the area and a good friend of our paper. The newspaper magnate was later to marry Lori Wilson of Merritt Island, a friend of mine who was elected to the U.S. Senate. We attended many of the spectacular functions they threw at their estate, Pumpkin Center, at Cocoa Beach.

But my favorite star was Guy Lombardo, who appeared under the auspices of the Seminole Mutual Concert Association. After his rousing concert, he invited my party to join his party, to party. We did and we had a ball.

But that's not all. En route to their next engagement, the masterful maestro and his Royal Canadians stopped their bus at the Herald the next day and came in to visit. What a thrill for all the Herald angels to see and talk to Guy Lombardo.

I'll never forget the elaborate Sunday brunch that Jeno and Lois Paulucci hosted for Hubert H. Humphrey when he was a vice presidential candidate. The lavish brunch, complete with a tent, was held at their Sanford home long before Heathrow, a luxury Paulucci residential and commercial development in Lake Mary, was even a dream.

Political bigwigs, television personalities and throngs of local guests hobnobbed with the friendly guest of honor, who later became the nation's vice president during President Harry Truman's administration.

Speaking of tents, one year the concert association had so many reservations for the champagne ball—the association's annual glittering gala to raise funds—that a tent was added adjacent to Mayfair Country Club. This was when Sanford Naval Air Station was in full swing, and top navy brass graciously joined forces with the civilian sector to form a lively, impressive social front.

Political candidates have always frequented the newspaper, especially at election time.

Red Cross more than disaster relief, says new director

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Judith Werts is getting in the swim as the Director of the Seminole County Service Center for the Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross, based in Longwood.

Werts, who has held that post for about three months, after a move from Washington, D.C., is focusing on summer swim programs as she plans for volunteers to teach both children and adults to swim in Seminole County this summer.

However, she's quick to point out there's more to the Red Cross than swimming. Werts hopes to dispel several myths about the Red Cross. Number one, she said, is the fact that the organization is supported solely by donations from individuals and corporations as well as through the United Way.

Because the Red Cross is and has always been mandated by the U.S. Congress to provide help in times of disaster and to aid those in the U.S. military service, many think it is a branch of the U.S. government, Werts said, but it is not. The Red Cross, she said, is an independent, non-profit group that depends on the community for funds and for volunteers.

Seminole Red Cross director

Werts said she sees the Red Cross primarily as an educator in the community. That mixes well with her degree in physical education.

"I have a lot of programs I'd like to see the Red Cross develop. But it takes money to deliver them," Werts said. Support for the Red Cross comes from the community it serves, so that donations made in Seminole County buy services for Seminole Countians, she said.

Not only is the Red Cross prepared to aid in times of major community crisis, such as the havoc left by a hurricane or tornado, it also assists individual victims of tragedy, Werts said. She added that food, clothing and shelter are given to families that fires leave homeless.

A major challenge, she said, is convincing citizens to prepare in advance for disasters, which the Red Cross is always ready to deal with.

In addition to the swimming programs, the Red Cross offers classes in first aid, CPR, AIDS education and back injury prevention, she said. Most of the classes can be taken into the workplace and are offered free to companies on that basis.

The AIDS program, Werts said, is informative to those who aren't necessarily in one of the "high risk" groups for the disease. The program does not deal directly with AIDS victims, but the Red Cross does interface with AIDS victims' support groups in the area, she said.

The back injury prevention program can be helpful to most persons, she said. Back injuries don't only affect those who do heavy lifting, but can also be a major problem for those who sit or stand for long periods of time. The program includes exercising to strengthen back muscles. Werts said back injuries cost the U.S. $15 billion a year in losses to businesses and in medical bills.

Who: Judith Werts, 38, of Orlando.
What: New director of Seminole County branch of American Red Cross.

Ahead: Planning summer swimming programs; beginning with lessons for instructors.

Other: Outlines other programs and services offered by Red Cross.

Some of the programs are taught at the Longwood headquarters of the Red Cross, next door to South Seminole Community Hospital on State Road 434.

Oh, Canada! Floridians chill out in the land up north

PEOPLE Editor

Call it culture swap. An approximate 1,459,300 Canadians visited Florida in 1985, says the Canadian Consulate General office in Atlanta. Despite the popularity of Florida with Canadians, Floridians have an affection for Canada, said Cindy Leffler-Collison, manager of Sun Travel Agency in Sanford.

The major occupant of the North American continent lends itself ideally to year-round winter sports: skiing, snowmobiling, ice skating, bobsledding, and ice-fishing, along with river rafting and mountain climbing.

Canada suffers the same misconception Americans have about Alaska: It's always frigid enough to make a Royal Canadian Mountie fall off his horse. Actually, Canada endures both extremes of temperatures in the central and eastern areas, with brief, hot summers and snow-bound winters. The north can be cold enough to make one permanently knock-kneed, while the south Pacific coast of British Columbia is invariably mild. The optimal time to visit is May to October (or November to March for winter sports.)

Canada's size—3,852,000 square miles—dwarfs its population, and only 5 percent of the land is cultivated. This leaves much wild, untamed nature open for the enjoyment of 20th-century man.

Helicopter tours are a big hit with Florida tourists, Leffler said. The whirring blades take sight-seers, shutterbugs and hikers over forests and snowfields, landing them on mammoth glacier heads or in plush, green meadows atop the Alpine Mountains.

Seeing Canada by train, a mode of travel high in demand, means having to book reservations a year in advance. Leffler said, adding that the trains outweigh motorcoaches (buses) in cost as well as scenic pleasure. Big tours are sold out fast, she said, recommending the booking of flights six months ahead of travel plans.

Although French and English are both official languages of Canada, the natives are taught both in Canadian schools.

American citizens in Seminole County can obtain passports easy enough, by presenting a completed passport application, two passport photos and a $35 check at the courthouse. The applications are sent to the Miami passport office, and passports are returned in 2-4 weeks.

(Information from United Press International was used in compiling this story.)

The Rockies embody the beauty and majesty in nature.

SANFORD — Randy and Sue Thompson of Sanford announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Joan Thompson of Sanford, to David Lee Holt of Sanford, son of Lee and Ruth Holt of Sanford.

Born in Sanford, the bride-elect is the maternal granddaughter of the late Hubert J. and Odessa C. Davidson of Sanford. She is the paternal granddaughter of Earl A. and Vera Thompson of Tampa and the late Joan White Thompson of Bracknell, England.

Miss Thompson is a 1986 graduate of Seminole High School in Sanford, where she was a member of the Tribe Club, Future Business Leaders of America, and Key Club. She attended Seminole Community College and is employed as a counterperson at All Small Car Parts in Sanford.

Her fiancé, born in Meridian, Miss., is the maternal grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Kerth O. Keck Sr., of Meridian, Miss., and the paternal grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Holt.

Holt graduated from Bishop Moore High in Orlando in 1981, where he was active on the tennis team. He attended Jefferson State University on a tennis scholarship. He is presently warehouse manager at Solar-tite.

The wedding is set for 7 p.m. August 13 at All Souls Catholic Church in Sanford.

Bare-Willis

SANFORD — Mrs. Vernie Bare of Sanford announces the engagement of her daughter, Christine Dianne Bare of Sanford, to Ronald W. Willis Jr. of Sanford, son of Ronald and Linda Willis of Sanford.

Born in Findlay, Ohio, the bride-elect is the maternal granddaughter of the late Claire and Ida Meekins of Findlay and the paternal granddaughter of Lloyd and Esther Bare, also of Findlay.

Miss Bare graduated from Seminole High School in Sanford in 1981, and was active in the school's National Honor Society, Future Business Leaders of America and Cooperative Business Education. She attended Seminole Community College in Sanford and is a secretary for Spolski General Contractor Inc. in Sanford.

Her fiancé, born in Sanford, is the maternal grandson of John B. and the late Ann Threatt of Winston-Salem, N.C. and the paternal grandson of Sara C. and the late Clarence Willis of Sanford.

Willis is a 1981 graduate of Seminole High School, where he was active as a football team trainer. He attends Seminole Community College and is a pipelayer for Wiginton Fire Sprinklers in Longwood.

The wedding is set for May 21 at 2 p.m. in Pinecrest Baptist Church, Sanford.

Amy Sue Laughlin and Philip John Commodario Jr.

Laughlin-Commodario

WINTER PARK — Ruthann L. Laughlin announces the engagement of her daughter, Amy Sue Laughlin of Winter Park, to Philip John Commodario Jr. of Winter Park.

Born in Orlando, the bride-elect is the maternal granddaughter of Gertrude Elizabeth Levenhagen of Orlando.

Miss Laughlin graduated in 1980 from Lake Howell High School in Maitland, where she was active in chorus and art. She has attended Seminole Community College in Sanford and is employed as an apprentice optician.

Her fiancé, born in Peckville, Pa., is a 1978 graduate of Lake Howell High School and has attended Seminole Community College. He is employed as a pilot instructor.

The wedding is set for May 14 at 7 p.m. at St. Peter and Paul Catholic Church, Winter Park.

Longwood student pledges sorority

LEWISBURG, Pa. — Charlene Garrett, Longwood, has pledged Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority at Bucknell University.

A freshman psychology major, Garrett is the daughter of John and Jerroldine Garrett, 2125 Silver Leaf Court. She is a 1987 graduate of Lake Mary High School.

Bucknell University is a highly selective liberal arts institution with professional programs in engineering, management and education.

NEW ARRIVAL

LAKE MONROE — Robert and Linda Breum of Lake Monroe announce the birth of their child, Roger Alan, on April 22 in Longwood.

Touch of Italy raises much moola

The Lake Mary Women's Club really outdid themselves with their "Italian Feast" fund-raiser, held on April 18.

When they began planning for the event, the goal was to raise about $900 to fund community projects. As it turned out though, more than $1,500 has been cleared thus far!

This success can be attributed to the terrific participation by club members in selling tickets and preparing and serving all of the delicious food available that evening.

All 64 members were asked to sell at least six tickets each, and well over half—37 of them—sold that many or more. Fifty-five ladies were asked to put in time on committees, and the teamwork they displayed was admirable. In all, almost 400 tickets were sold and almost 300 people were served. A great turnout for a "first-time" event!

The eight committee chairwomen attended meetings, planned, shopped and joined efforts together to help make the Italian Feast the triumph that it was.

Cathy Fausnight

Several local businesses and individuals supported the Women's Club.

Another fine accomplishment for the Lake Mary Women's Club: Mrs. Claire O'Conner took "Best of Show" at the State Competition of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs' Craft Show. Her "Blue-Ribbon" painting was entered and won at the district, which earned her the right to progress to the state competition in Orlando. Congratulations!

Rock Lake Middle School students in Longwood participated with more than 500,000 other students across the United States, to launch helium-filled balloons on April 28. About 400 Rock Lake students took part.

Students attached post cards with their name and the location of their launch-site to each balloon, with the finders asked to drop the postage-paid card in the mailbox, returning it to the American Geological Institute. A map, indicating which direction and how far the balloon traveled, will then be produced. Cards will be returned to the students, who will discuss air currents, demography and weather predictions.

The balloon project was sponsored by the Triangle Coalition for Science Technology Education. The Balloon Launch/Student Weather Experiment is a nationwide science project.

The student council at Greenwood Lakes Middle School, Lake Mary, sponsored by Mrs. Susan Hansberger, Crystal Howard and Jeri Helleman, held a taco dinner and talent show recently to a filled gymnasium. Winning first place for her dance ability was Courtney Boltzauer. Michael Walsh took second prize for a piano performance of "The Sting," and Courtney Redditt was awarded third prize for a ballet dance.

Another student at Greenwood, eighth-grader Sheri Corino, and her dance partner, Tara Schwartz, a sophomore at Lake Mary High School, were asked to audition for "Star Search." Both have flown to Washington, D.C. for that performance. The girls have won numerous awards and trophies for their dancing abilities.

Debbie J. Ronaldo has been appointed Quality Assurance Director at HCA West Lake Hospital in Longwood. Previously Ronaldo was Manager of medical records and utilization review at the hospital and served as medical records supervisor. Ronaldo has been employed at West Lake for three years.

Tom, in their spare time volunteer as teachers of those who qualify to learn to be Red Cross swimming instructors.

Werts, 37, said her career with the Red Cross began when she was a volunteer swim instructor. After the Louisiana native earned her degree in physical education from Centenary College in Louisiana, her first job was for the Red Cross in Dallas, Texas, where she taught first aid, CPR and water safety.

She said she met her husband when they were both volunteers in swimming programs. He works for Walt Disney World. Werts said their Orlando home is halfway between his work and her Longwood base. His 15-year-old daughter, Kelly, lives with them.

"I love the activities," Werts said of her splashy job. "I see a need for people to know how to take care of themselves in water. It's satisfying to teach the public."

Now, at the Heathrow pool, Werts is laying the groundwork for summer swim programs by teaching an advanced lifesaving course, which can lead the students into a swim instructor's course. From there, Werts hopes to get the volunteer instructors for summer swimming and watersafety lessons for elementary school children as well as for some adults.

Her plans for summer swimming lessons for youngsters hinges on the training in advanced life saving for strong adult swimmers—those over the age of 15. After completing that course, Werts said, students over the age of 17 may be trained as instructors who are qualified to teach fledgling swimmers.

She is working with the community, asking for the use of private community pools for the children who will enroll in the swim programs. The Red Cross, she said, hopes in most cases to offer the lessons free or for a minimum pool use fee.

"The whole idea is to make it convenient, so there are no excuses." She said the Red Cross is not sponsoring an infant swim program this year, but that's in the works for next year, she said. The focus this year is on first through fifth graders, with lessons also offered to a few adults.

"It's very rewarding to take someone who has waited all of their life to learn to swim and to teach them," Werts said.

She added, "I want to let people know we're here. We will develop services if people just ask us. I would like for the Red Cross to be an organization where people would look to us for educational programs to meet their needs and to care. I would like for them to know the

We had them all, from presidential hopefuls to candidates for local offices.

I will never forget Reubin Askew, then a state senator from Pensacola married to the former Donna Lou Harper of Sanford, when he came by to announce his candidacy for governor. He stood so tall and was so handsome, so polished, so charming and so sure of himself. He was elected governor for two consecutive terms and is now the Democratic contender for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Lawton Chiles.

Speaking of "Walkin' Lawton"—who walked the Florida campaign trail in his comfortable brogans while stumping for his first crack at a U.S. Senate seat—he has also visited our office. He has close ties in Sanford: longtime friends Sylvia and Howard McNulty, who were among the hosts for a big barbecue honoring Chiles.

Attending governors' inaugural balls during the years became quite habitual. An outstanding ball comes to mind when Gov. Haydon Burns and his wife, Mildred, were guests of honor at the Seminole Jai Alai fronton. Kay Gallagher still remembers when I scooted, armed with a camera, between Florida Highway Patrol troopers forming a barricade as the head of state and state dignitaries marched into the spacious facility. I suppose I could have been arrested, but I got the picture.

After the ball, two colleagues and I decided to return to the office to get our pictures printed and write our stories. But first, I dashed home to change from the orchid ball gown, fashioned along the bouffant silhouette, into orange pants, orange sweater and bright blue fuzzy bedroom slippers. In my rush, I neglected to remove the large orchid hair ornament and long, dangling rhinestone earrings. My partner typed away for the rest of the night in her ball gown.

We finished up that assignment about 6 a.m. and decided to have breakfast before heading home for a couple of hours shut-eye, a shower and back to work. Needless to say, we looked like two freaks, and were mistaken for...uh...ladies of the evening, so to put it. Two highway patrol troopers came in for breakfast and probably saved us from pouring the pitcher of hot coffee on the two ruthless brutes at a nearby table.

There was a time when I was in hog's heaven judging beauty pageants. This area has turned out numerous beauty queens and entertainers. It was my pleasure to serve as a judge, along with Seminole County Sheriff John Polk and several others, for the contest at the Sanford Civic Center that catapulted Delta Burke (of Television's "Designing Women") to fame and fortune. Delta later became Miss Orlando, Miss Florida and then went on to participate in the Miss America pageant, where she was among the top 10 finalists.

I'll always remember when the shapely, statuesque and beautiful Sylvia Hitchcock Carson, Miss Universe, came to Sanford to preside over the festivities at a Beta Sigma Phi charity ball. Our paths crossed frequently at social gatherings in those days and the personable, curvaceous beauty queen made many lasting friends in Sanford.

It seems like just yesterday that we were always welcome at the sprawling South Seminole castle complex of Glenn W. Turner, a controversial multi-millionaire entrepreneur who struck it rich peddling cosmetics and unlawful motivational materials.

Glenn was a fantastic host, a super salesman and a highly skilled showman who could charm a snake. But his luck ran out. Claiming to be broke, he is now serving a seven-year hitch in an Arizona prison for mail fraud, among numerous other charges.

Through the years, it has not been the celebrities who have made my day, but every person with whom I have dealt. In the '60s, I rambled on for nearly a half page sometimes about a wedding. In some of the wedding stories, I have dressed the bride from her picture and have "lavishly embellished" many a gown just as I have "tastefully appointed" many lovely refreshment tables.

As times have changed, so have people's lifestyles. Progress and growth planted their roots deep in the terrain of our community. A new crime wave was born when drug traffic reared its ugly head. More women hit the work force, and the elegant party scene has nearly vanished. There is no time to shine sterling to a gleaming finish nor polish the imported, sparkling crystal.

Those flamboyant, dazzling, good old days are, as the eminent Margaret Mitchell so aptly describes in the title to her immortal best seller, "Gone With The Wind."

Through the years, my job title changed to People editor, which offered new and exciting challenges and dimensions to my work. Not only have I handled the social news, but, also, people in general. What an inspiring experience—never a dull moment. I am indeed privileged to have been in this enviable position.

And now I have embarked on a new venture and face another crossroads offering new challenges and new dimensions. Either way points to a leisurely lifestyle of semi-retirement. I will miss the excitement of the bustling newsroom and my beloved colleagues with whom I have spent more time than I have spent with my family. But most of all, I will miss the people making the news.

Friends have asked, "What on earth are you going to do?"

My reply: "Whatever my many moods happen to dictate."

Who knows? Maybe I'll do something worth writing about.

By Mary Martin Niepold Newspaper Enterprise
Association

Perhaps, when you were very small, you saved up your allowance as May approached. Then the day before Mother's Day, you headed for the dime store. There you found a shiny blue perfume bottle with a silky blue tassel. Mother loved you for it, but you noticed that the blue bottle was never empty. As you grew older and wiser, you looked for fragrances that Mother already loved. And you noticed that those beautiful new bottles did grow empty.

Perfume is a classic Mother's Day gift. The reason? That day honors the woman in us all, and ever since Cleopatra's time, perfume has signaled a woman's interpretation of her own femininity.

And at no other time has femininity meant so many different things. Today's mother is a kaleidoscope of moods and activities. She can be witty or seductive, assertive or subtle. She may express herself in the office, at home and, frequently, in both places.

Today's perfumers know that women match fragrance to mood and occasion. Most wear several fragrances, not the classic one fragrance that women, in earlier eras, wore as their talisman.

"Today's woman," observes Bernard Lanvin, heir and ruler of the 100-year-old House of Lanvin in Paris, "wants a wardrobe of fragrances. A really feminine woman, however, will still wear one fragrance—it's her personality."

To that end, today's perfume counters swarm with label after label. In 1987, 36 new women's fragrances—including Tiffany and Samba—were introduced. Thus far into 1988, at least 20 more fragrances are being launched.

Fragrance, like fashion, follows trends. The new romantic fragrances—fruity, flowery, Oriental—are a safe bet for any mother.

"We are seeing a turn to more romantic fragrances, the multi-florals and some floral Oriental types," notes Annette Green, executive director of The Fragrance Foundation, a non-profit educational organization.

Multi-florals, new and old, include Oscar, L'Air du Temps, Anne Klein, Ysatis, YSL and Fleur de Paris by Givenchy. Floral Oriental fragrances are classics like Shalimar and Karl Lagerfeld's Kl.

Last year's trends, according to Green, were stronger, more erotic, "animalistic" scents like Obsession, Opium and Poison.

"Typical of the new, lighter, but sexy and romantic fragrances is Knowing by Estee Lauder. At $300 per ounce, it also will be one of the world's most expensive scents.

Selecting an item as personal as perfume for someone else can be tricky, so Green offers these suggestions:

• Determine Mother's personality. If she's experimental, sophisticated, and likes to try new experiences in fashion, food or art, get her something brand new. If she has real fidelities to what she likes, then stay with what she uses.

• Get clues from Mother's dressing table. Notice which bottles are empty. She may just be keeping the full ones for the pretty bottles.

• Look at her activities. If she's sportive, Liz Claiborne and Eau de Givenchy are good selections. If she works and wears a fragrance to the office, choose lighter, more sophisticated fragrances rather than romantic ones: L'Air du Temps, Chanel No. 5, Coco, Lauren and Oscar, for example.

• Let the salesperson guide you. Tell the perfume specialist what fragrance Mother has always used. He or she can then help you find something completely different for her sporty or business side, or something in the same category of fragrance.

• Consider other products in the same fragrance. There are fun new forms of fragrance to choose from, such as eau de parfum, body creams, lotions and soaps. Bath products give you a lot of fragrance for your money.

• Consider Mother's age. Older women need a stronger fragrance, because their sense of smell usually diminishes after 60, so one of the stronger multi-florals or Orientals is a good idea.

Remember, too, that fragrance manufacturers offer "specials" for Mother's Day. You'll find an abundance of gift with purchase (GWP) and purchase with purchase (PWP) offerings.

Unusual GWP choices this year are scented shelf paper from Pavlova and a cute pink beach chair from Camp Beverly Hills.

Many of the PWPs this year offer sets of products with a product purchase. Definitely romantic is Lanvin's Arpege four-product set, which includes dusting powder, body lotion, shower gel and perfumed bath oil. Gucci No. 3 offers a beautiful silk-like white robe as a PWP. Whatever your choice, just remember Mother's personality and lifestyle. You'll find hundreds of scents to match it.

In-laws' mooching does not deserve smooching

DEAR ABBY: I love my husband's brother and his wife dearly, but they much too frequently show up just as I am about to prepare supper. They live out of town and work in the city where we live. They've made a habit of stopping at our place right after work, and staying until they are invited to eat supper with us.

There's no problem when I have sufficient food—I ask them to join us (which I've done many times), but I usually plan just enough for the two of us. Even my husband admits that these visits have gotten out of hand, but he doesn't know what to say to his brother.

I don't want to offend them, but how do I get them to leave? I hate to hurt their feelings. Incidentally, their combined income is on a par with ours.

HAD IT OUT EAST

DEAR HAD IT: You say you "love" them. What's to love about nifty people who take advantage of you?

These relatives are freeloaders. They could occasionally bring deli food, carry-out chicken or Chinese. Unless you speak up, they will continue to come empty-handed to be fed at your expense.

Instead of complaining to Dear Abby, get the gumption to tell them enough is enough and don't worry about offending them. They're about as sensitive as a pair of rhinoceroses.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me and countless other people in my department at work. There is a woman we work with who seems to think that we are interested in every detail of her personal life. What she and the kids had for dinner. What her husband said when she got home. What they watched on TV, etc.

We have been through the purchase of a car, moving into a different house, her kids' and husband's illness from start to finish. I don't know where she ever got the idea that we are the least bit interested.

Please print this letter so we can drop it on her desk, and maybe she will take the hint.

HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: One's co-workers are much like a "second family," so it's not unusual for co-workers to share bits and pieces of their personal lives.

However, if you all agree that this woman is overdoing it, ask the person closest to her to tell her so as diplomatically as possible. It would be an act of kindness.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

The Leisure Time/Lifelong Learning Programs at Seminole Community College announces that the following classes are among those that will be offered the week of May 2. Registrations are being accepted in the registrar's office.

AEROBICS I - A cardiovascular workout using free weights, and learning low impact dance routines along with Jane Fonda floor exercises.

DOG OBEDIENCE TRAINING AND BEHAVIOR MODIFICATION - A basic class which will teach the dog owner to teach his animal to heel, heel and sit, sit and stay, down and stay, recall, respect for the word "No," problem solving and other basic skills. Dogs must be three months old or older and on a training collar and a leash.

EXPERIENCED RIDER PROGRAM - For the experienced motorcycle rider. This program reviews important riding skills, such as proper braking, turning, speed selection and countersteering. Use your own motorcycle.

FIREARM SAFETY - This firearm safety and training course is for the general public and those interested in obtaining certification to apply for a concealed weapons permit. There is classroom and firing range exposure on when to use a gun, safety requirements, legal limitations, nomenclature, and weapon maintenance.

FLOWER ARRANGEMENT - Brighten and beautify your home with color, shape and style through flower arranging. You will also learn the creative ways of styling designs with silk and fresh flowers. The course offers an inspiring method for beginners and new ideas for advanced students. Students will furnish their own flowers and supplies. The cost of the flowers and supplies will be determined by the size and type of arrangements the student chooses to make.

SEWING I - A class for those who have never sewn before or have not sewn in a long time. Learn to operate a sewing machine, to select a pattern, and to renovate and repair garments.

SIGN LANGUAGE I - This course will consist of learning the alphabet in visual English, signs for numbers and a series of twelve hundred signs. It is primarily for the hearing who wish to communicate with and better understand the world of the deaf.

Methodists debate issues in St. Louis

Casselberry pastor David Brazelton is Conference delegate

By Jane Casselberry
Herald Religion Editor

ST. LOUIS — The Rev. David Brazelton, pastor of Community United Methodist Church of Casselberry, is one of 29 official delegates representing the Florida Area at the United Methodist General Conference meeting in St. Louis, Mo. April 26-May 6. Florida has the third largest delegation in the United Methodist Church.

Tied with Western North Carolina, Florida is exceeded only by Virginia and West Ohio in the size of delegation. There will be 998 voting delegates in the General Conference, half clergy and half laity.

For the first time in the church's history, more than half of the lay delegates from the U.S. are women (290). Women also make up 14 percent of the clergy delegates. 140 of the U.S. delegates are from ethnic minorities. About 80 of the delegates come from the Central Conferences in Europe, Africa and the Philippines.

The General Conference, the top legislative and policy making body of the church, will address many issues, the most controversial of which are those dealing with homosexuality which will come up for debate on Monday.

Brazelton briefed his congregation Sunday on some of the important issues to be addressed at the conference cautioning them not to get upset when they read in the press that this group or that committee has proposed something they find objectionable such as ordination of homosexuals.

He assured them that the United Methodist Church does not condone homosexuality and predicted defeat of efforts to tone down language in the Book of Discipline condemning homosexuality.

The General Conference will debate four proposals dealing with homosexuality of these, the one considered to have the best chance of passage, Brazelton said is a measure that would allow church funding to study relevant issues concerning homosexuals within the church.

Brazelton said he approves the new edition of The Methodist Hymnal and he expects it to be well received because it contains many of the old favorite hymns left out of the present hymnal. Delegates will also be asked to approve a Mission statement, a Theological statement and additional Episcopal areas, he said.

Among the other issues to be discussed are South Africa, boycotts, pornography, violence, language, budget and finances, an African University and telecommunications funding.

In the first full day of legislative action at the quadrennial meeting, delegates rejected a proposal that would have limited debate on homosexuality to 90 minutes.

"They could still cut off debate at any time (on Monday), but it's interesting that they resisted attempts to limit debate to a short amount of time," said Tom McAnally, director of United Methodist News Services.

The General Conference opened on Tuesday.

The first week of the conference is devoted to the work of legislative committees, which are considering 2,661 different petitions from members, churches and denominational organization on such topics as homosexuality, AIDS, the rural crisis and a new hymnal. The meeting continues through May 6.

United Methodists, with 9.6 million members worldwide, comprise the second-largest Protestant denomination in the United States behind Southern Baptists.

While delegates decided on an extended debate of the homosexuality issue, a group of United Methodist gays, Affirmation, called on the general conference to be more tolerant of homosexuals.

The group lauded the Council of Bishops' statement on AIDS last week that said the disease was not a curse sent from God.

However, the group asked for a role within the Methodist church.

"No amount of legislation is going to change who we are," said Mary Gaddis of Evanston, Ill., a spokeswoman for the group. "We believe it would be most ideal for Methodists to become an intentionally inclusive church."

"We have a gift to give to the church, and they can accept it or reject it," she said.

The Board of Church and Society is recommending the deletion of language in the denomination's "Book of Discipline" that would condemn homosexuality as "incompatible with Christian teaching."

The Board of Higher Education and Ministry is asking for deletion of wording prohibiting the ordination of homosexuals as ministers; however, it wants wording retained requiring married ministers to be faithful and unmarried ones to be celibate.

A few annual conferences have suggested that the ban on ordination be extended to those who merely advocate homosexuality as an acceptable lifestyle.

Morris Floyd, a homosexual minister from Los Angeles, said he was encouraged by the bishops' statement on AIDS, but said that gays have a long way to go before being accepted by most churches. Currently, only 32 Methodist churches accept admitted homosexuals without question, Floyd said.

"From our perspective, we view this as a lengthy process," Floyd said. "If you're asking me the chances we'll be accepted in the next 10 days, I'd say zero. But within the next 10 years, maybe."

Christian Science couple charged with manslaughter in son's death

BOSTON (UPI) — A Christian Science couple who tried to save their dying baby with prayer and spiritual healing rather than take him to a doctor have been indicted for manslaughter by a county grand jury.

The Suffolk County district attorney's office said Tuesday that David and Ginger Twitchell would be arraigned Monday in Suffolk Superior Court for the death of their 2 1/2-year-old son Robyn, who died of a bowel obstruction five days after becoming ill in 1986.

The indictment was believed to be the first of its kind in Massachusetts since passage of a 1971 law recognizing spiritual healing as an alternative to modern medicine in the treatment of illness.

A spokesman for the Boston-based Church of Christ, Scientist, which espouses spiritual healing, defended the Twitchells and accused District Attorney Newman Flanagan of putting the Christian Science "way of life" on trial.

"They acted in accord with the law as they understood it," spokesman Nathan Talbot said. "No one would think of prosecuting grief-stricken parents in the hundreds of sad instances where children have died under conventional medical care."

"It is obvious that what is being put on trial here is not the action of individual parents, but a public policy, a healing practice, and a way of life in many families."

The 1971 law was passed in response to the case of another Christian Science mother who was convicted of involuntary manslaughter in 1967 after a judge ruled spiritual healing violated the state's child abuse and neglect law.

The church, founded in 1879 by Mary Baker Eddy, has 2,700 churches worldwide, but does not disclose its membership. In addition to its spiritual approach to healing, members also follow a lifestyle free of drinking, drugs and smoking.

The indictment, handed up Friday and unsealed Tuesday, followed a yearlong inquest into the infant's death ordered by Flanagan. Findings of the inquest have been impounded pending trial, the district attorney's office said.

According to police records, the Twitchells' son developed a fever five days before his death and became lethargic. An accredited church practitioner who was called in by the parents came to their Boston home and prayed for the child and a Christian Science nurse monitored his condition.

On the night of his death, the child developed convulsions and lost consciousness. When the father detected no vital signs, he called a funeral home that told him to notify police. The infant was later pronounced dead at Carney Hospital in Boston, police said.

The Twitchells, who now live in an undisclosed Boston suburb, were not available for comment. But their attorney Rikki Kleiman defended the couple.

"I'm very angry. We maintain that what they did was not illegal. Treating a child under the tenets of Christian Science faith is permitted by statute," Kleiman said.

"The whole question is whether the parents' conduct in not seeking medical help was reckless conduct," she said. "They believe they did everything to save their child."

Kleiman said medical experts will testify the Twitchells' son had a congenital birth defect that led to the bowel obstruction, casting a "reasonable doubt" as to whether the child's life could have been saved even by conventional medicine.

Revival speaker

Dr. Franklin Paschall of Nashville, Tenn., will be the guest preacher for revival services at Central Baptist Church, 1311 Oak Ave., Sanford, Sunday through Wednesday at 7 p.m. There will also be noon services Monday through Wednesday with lunch available at $2 per person.

Euthanasia—where do we draw the line?

If euthanasia (or mercy killing) is legalized (it is due to go on the ballot shortly in at least one state), will the churches continue to oppose it?

The traditional stand of the church has been that euthanasia is wrong because it involves "playing God." Only God, it is said, has the right to determine when a person should die.

Christian proponents of euthanasia answer their "playing God" critics by saying that if it is up to God to decide when life ends, then all attempts to lengthen life may be thwarting God's will.

"It is just as logical to say that God may have intended for many of those to have died who are alive today only because of the intervention of doctors," they argue.

And there have always been prominent churchmen who have been in favor of euthanasia. The Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, Dr. W.R. Inge, lent his considerable prestige to the pro-euthanasia movement in England in the 1930s.

Inge said, "It seems anomalous that a man may be punished for cruelty if he does not put a dog or a horse out of its misery, but is liable to be hanged for murder if he helps a cancer patient to an overdose of morphine. I do not think we can assume that God wills the prolongation of torture for the benefit of the soul of the sufferer."

The Euthanasia Society of America, organized in 1938, has listed on its roster through the years the names of many prominent Protestant clergy, including Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Everyone has to die sooner or later. Why the repugnance then — especially on the part of religious people who believe in a happy, heavenly life beyond the grave — to hastening the death of someone who is suffering the ravages of a terminal disease?

Wouldn't it be "more Christian" to end the patient's suffering and to speed his entry into that realm "where there is neither pain nor disease"?

That apparently was the view of Dr. Henry Pitney Van Dusen, a ranking Protestant churchman, and his wife, who committed suicide a decade ago. Their suicide note contained what seemed to be an implication that because of medical science some people may be living past the time allotted them by God.

Seen in this light, the Van

Dusens' suicides were an attempt not to "take things out of God's hands," but to readjust things according to the divine plan in which death's role is that of a welcome visitor who will forestall the pains attendant upon old age.

While the legalization of euthanasia would provide a way out of their suffering for terminally ill patients who might otherwise attempt suicide, the Van Dusens' suicides raise a new dilemma. Should euthanasia be available to those not terminally ill?

The 77-year-old retired president of Union Theological Seminary had suffered a stroke five years before his death. This left him with a severe speech impediment, but he was able to walk with a cane and had little pain.

His wife, 80, suffered from crippling arthritis, but she had made a trip to England a month before her death. Their decision to end their lives was not, therefore, made under the extreme conditions of terminal illness.

Why then did they decide to take their own lives? "We are both increasingly weak and unwell," they said in their note, "and who would want to die in a nursing home?" Their declining health, they added, would no longer allow them to "do what we want to do."

Are these sufficiently compelling reasons to quench life's flame? Look for this to be the next big issue in the right-to-die controversy.

'Angel' to help Sanford Sharing Center build

SANFORD—An undisclosed "angel" has offered to help the Sanford Christian Sharing Center to construct a building on a lot owned by the center, according to the Rev. Daniel Coy, president of the sharing center board.

The board met Thursday at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church and unanimously voted to accept the offer by the donor in order to get its own building on the property at East 25th Street and Poinsettia Avenue. The lot is zoned RC-1 Restricted Commercial and approved by the city for a 24,000 square foot structure. Details are yet to be worked out.

Sharing Center

Sanford Christian Sharing Center board has voted Thursday to build a permanent home and name interim director.

- How: With help offered by anonymous donor.
- Where: On the center's E. 25th Street property.
- Why: Present location at Park Avenue and 13th Street is temporary.
- What: Irene Brown will be interim director until September.

out of a two-story house at 13th Street and Park Avenue, which belongs to the Central Baptist Church after being closed down for three months.

The board voted to accept the offer of its treasurer, Irene Brown to serve beginning Monday as the center's interim director without pay until September. She is a retired banker with 20 years experience in the field. Her expertise was in marketing and business development and before retiring in December 1985 she was branch manager of the Tusawilla American Pioneer Savings Bank.

In addition to being organist and choir director at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, she is a member of the church council and coordinator of the senior outreach program.

The board will hold a recognition luncheon at Good Shepherd at 12:30 p.m. Friday to honor the center's volunteer workers. Past and present volunteers, as well as anyone interested in becoming a volunteer, are invited to the luncheon, Brown said.

She said more volunteers are needed to work at the center, which is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon. Brown said the financial support from local churches has been "fairly good" since the center reopened, "but we can always use more."

The board reconfirmed at the meeting that it will confine the activities of the center to providing emergency food and clothing as specified in the group's laws.

Celebrating economic expansion

"OK, Bernie, now get this and get it right. First, I want elephants. I want 1,000 elephants... I know that's a lot of elephants, Bernie, but this is BIG!"

"What? Oh, right. Then give me 10,000 people to clean up after the elephants. Now, Bernie, on top of each elephant I want a Rockette... I said a Rockette! Read my lips, Bernie."

R-O-C-K-E-T-E-R-O-C-K-E-T-E. Rockette... I KNOW this is the telephone, Bernie... I don't care how many Rockettes you think there are, Bernie, I want 1,000. And I want them dancing on top of their elephants, so I'll need for you to get a little Rockette stage rigged up on top of each elephant."

"Bernie, this has got to be BIG! And that means we think BIG! Right, Bernie? Now, for the fireworks..."

I was in the office of T. Lambrop Maddison, the world-famous impresario. Listening to the great man on the telephone, I had only been able to guess that he was planning a celebration for George Bush. I told him it seemed rather premature to be arranging such a gala to celebrate his election and that it seemed rather excessive as a celebration of his nomination.

"George who? Oh, right. What in heaven's name... Oh! I see. Ha, Ha! The elephants fooled you. No, this has nothing to do with George Bush. We get a President every four years. What's to celebrate? This is something that only comes along maybe once in a decade! This is BIG!"

I asked Mr. Maddison what was so big.

"Let me give you a hint. Think of our great goals as a nation. I'm talking GREAT goals here."

"Peace? No, no, no! Justice? No, no, no! Let me give you a clue. We're talking economics here."

Suddenly, it was easy. Mr. Maddison was planning a celebration of the economic expansion, which is already the longest peace-time expansion in 50 years.

"Close. You're warm, but not red hot. What are Congress and the President required by law to try to achieve, besides economic growth, I mean?"

Full employment? "Right! Now you're using your head. Now, let's see... the little Rockette stages on the elephants will have to be lighted. Do you suppose the elephants are going to get tangled up in the cords? Of course they are. Remind me to call Bernie about getting 1,000 little generators."

The old school house must go

Principal: 62-year-old building is obsolete

By Nancy Simmons
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — While the thought of tearing down the main building at Sanford Middle School may disturb some area residents, Principal Dan Pelham believes it has to be done for practical reasons.

The Mediterranean revival style building is the former Seminole High School, and was constructed in 1926. It is one of several buildings in the city of Sanford being considered for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

However, a $5.1 million construction project is planned for Sanford Middle School and under those plans, the main building would be torn down. A parking lot is planned for the site the main building now occupies, so that the school buildings would be set back farther from French Avenue. School board staff estimates that it would cost almost $3.8 million to rehabilitate the building.

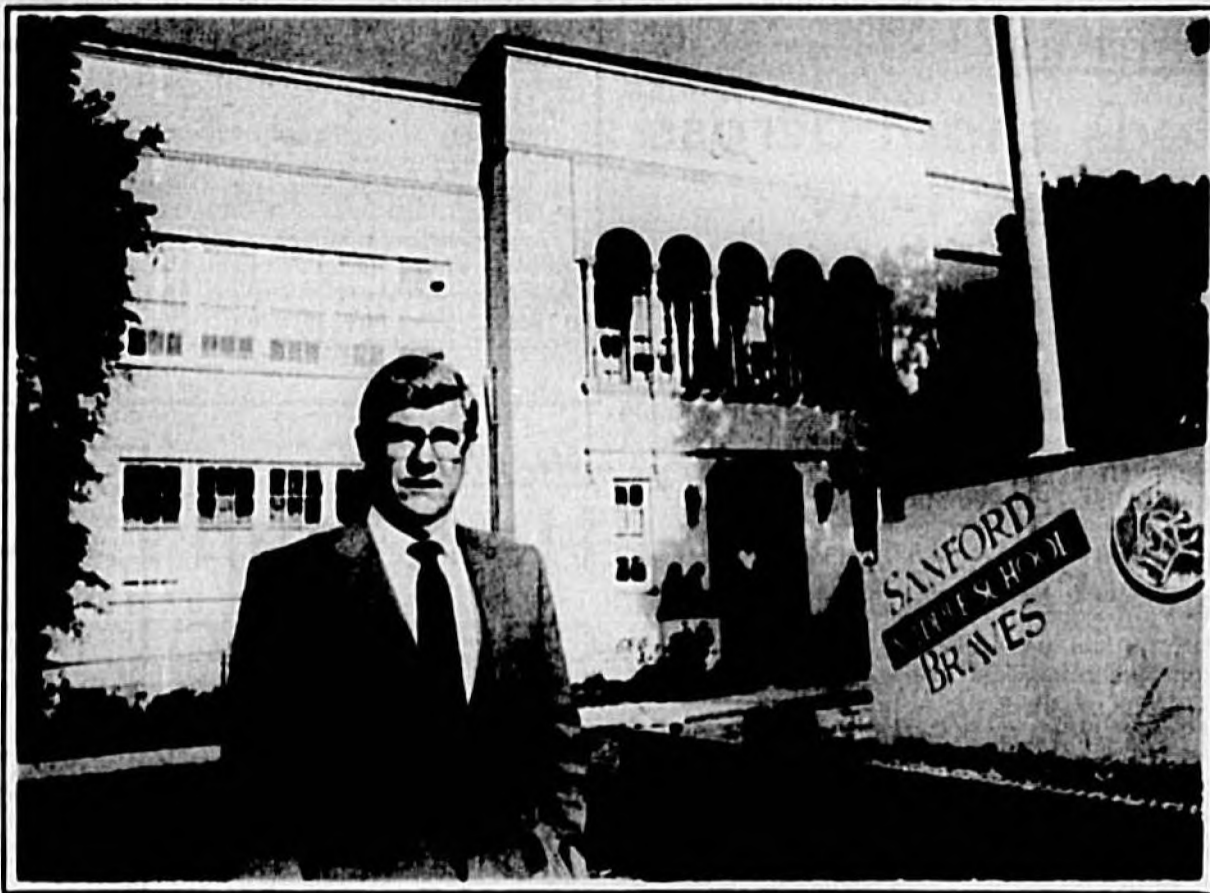

Pelham notes that figure is four-fifths of the bond money allotted to the school through the 1985 school bond.

According to the principal, the estimated cost for rehabilitation only covers basic renovative work, and does not take into consideration unexpected problems that may come up during the rehabilitative process. He said architects have told him that an extra $15-20 per square foot should be allowed to meet those needs. The main building is about 53,000 square feet.

Pelham says construction at the school could begin by the end of this year. Some residents interested in preserving the building have told the school board it could obtain state grants with which to rehabilitate the building. However, at a recent school board workshop concerning the main building at the school, David Ferrell, with the state Division of Historical Resources, told the board that funds would not be available until next year. He noted that most grants range between $250,000 and $700,000.

"The facility is the limiting factor of many teachers in carrying out their programs," Pelham says. Classroom sizes in the building are only about half the size they should be, according to the principal. Most of the rooms are about 525 square feet. However, updated classrooms, due to the number of students and the various programs offered, need to be at least 978 square feet, Pelham says. Many science classrooms need to be at least 1,100 square feet, he adds.

Both seventh and eighth graders are housed in the main building right now, Pelham said. Should the building be renovated, and the classrooms enlarged to meet updated

Principal's background

WHERE: Sanford Middle School, since 1970

OTHER POSITIONS: Prior to 1970, the school was called Sanford Junior High School. He served first as physical education coach from 1969 to 1967, then, as dean of students during the 1967-68 school year. During the 1968-69 and 1969-70 school year he served as assistant principal.

EDUCATION: Bachelor of Science in physical education from The University of Florida, 1959; and a master's in teaching, Rollins College, 1965.

FAMILY: He and his wife, Rebecca, have two children.

specifications, 150-175 pupil stations would be lost, Pelham said. That means that number of students would still have to be housed in another building which would have to be built, according to Pelham.

"With the limited space we have now, it is impossible for the teacher to do a really adequate job," Pelham says. "And at best it would create many logistical problems to continue with this building," he adds.

The campus now has 21 buildings and three portables, Pelham says. The state recommends tearing down and replacing 13 of those buildings.

However, keeping the main building would also mean acquiring several more portables. Pelham says he has talked to district administrative staff about that. "But, no one seems to know if any are available, due to so much growth in the district. They all may be in use somewhere," he says. And he says the average cost of a portable is about $20,000.

Should the building be rehabilitated several enrichment programs such as home economics would "be out of business," the principal says. Five kitchen units are needed in the home economics rooms, but a portable could not hold five units, he says. Portables would not be suitable for arts or graphics courses, he adds, explaining that portables are adequate only for normal academic classes.

Referring to the recent school board workshop on Sanford Middle School, Pelham said that of those arguments presented in favor of keeping the main building, "I didn't hear anything convincing for the salvaging of this building. It's nice to see the old buildings, but I think there has to come a time when logic and the realization of the current needs have to come into play."

Modern-day sleuths identify suspects

'Genetic fingerprints' nail criminals

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — Gone are the days when all criminals had to worry about was wearing gloves or carefully swabbing the telephone, murder weapon or doorknob free of fingerprints to erase telltale evidence of their identity.

Modern-day sleuths can identify a suspect from minute amounts of DNA unknowingly left behind by the culprit in the root of a hair, a splotch of blood or a trace of semen.

Known as "genetic fingerprinting," the new technique is quickly being incorporated into law enforcement investigation arsenals to generate virtually undeniable proof linking a suspect to a crime.

"Its use offers tremendous potential," said William Carter, a spokesman for the FBI, which is studying the technique to determine how best to apply it to law enforcement.

At least two companies —

Lifecodes Corp. of Valhalla, N.Y., and Cellmark Diagnostics of Germantown, Md. — already perform genetic fingerprinting for use in paternity cases, immigration cases and criminal investigations. Cetus Corp. of Emeryville, Calif., has also developed a similar approach.

All three techniques take advantage of the fact that everyone except for identical twins — who have identical genes — have unique patterns in their DNA.

DNA, which stands for deoxyribonucleic acid, contains all of an individual's genetic information in chemical codes. Each cell, whether it be a sperm cell, blood cell or cell from the root of a hair, contains the individual's full genetic complement.

The DNA itself is made up of strands that are interrupted by a series of chemical sequences. For each person, the length and number of these repetitive sequences are different.

To produce a "DNA

fingerprint," scientists extract and purify the DNA from a sample, cut it apart with enzymes and run it through a process that uses recreations of certain sequences, known as "DNA probes," to produce the "fingerprint." The result looks like a bar code found on grocery store items.

The same technology is being used to learn more about the genetic basis of disease and to develop tests to determine whether an adult or a fetus has inherited a disposition for a disease.

For paternity cases, genetic fingerprinting offers a more precise way than conventional blood tests of determining who fathered a child, the companies say.

The technique also offers valuable tools for investigating crimes, such as identifying human remains through tissue samples, determining whether a drop of blood found in a suspect's home belongs to the victim or whether the semen found in a rape victim belongs to the suspect.

Tommy Lee Andrews was the first person convicted in a criminal case in the United States in which genetic fingerprinting was introduced as evidence. Police arrested the 24-year-old Andrews last spring and charged him with two in a series of nearly two dozen rapes that had occurred in Orlando, Fla., in the previous year.

Prosecutors were worried Andrews would be acquitted because the rapist had been careful to cover his victims' faces. Lifecodes compared DNA from Andrews' blood to DNA from semen found on the victims. The samples matched. Andrews was convicted in one case November and on the second in February and sentenced to prison.

"It was very important to both cases," said prosecutor Timothy Berry. "We finally have a test that we can use in cases where identity is the issue. We have a foolproof test to use."

Genetic fingerprinting can also be used by suspects to try to clear themselves, such as in the highly publicized rape-recantation case involving Gary Dotson and Cathleen Crowell Webb in Chicago.

Dotson was convicted in 1979 of raping Webb two years earlier and sentenced to prison. He was freed in 1985 when Webb recanted her charge, though jailed again when he encountered additional legal problems.

Dotson's lawyer recently requested a semen stain on the panties Webb wore on the night of the alleged rape be tested with genetic fingerprinting to try to definitively establish Dotson's innocence. The results, released in early April, were inconclusive because the panties were not kept at cold enough temperatures early in the case.

Lawyer whose wife passed bar exam for him gets probation

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A man whose pregnant lawyer-wife disguised herself as a man and passed the state bar exam for him was placed on three years probation in a case prosecutors called "yuppie greed gone amok."

Superior Court Judge Judith Chirfin placed Morgan A. Lamb, 34, on probation Tuesday, saying she did not think it would be fair to put Lamb in prison since his wife had received only probation.

Lamb was convicted of forgery and false personation for allowing his wife Laura Beth Salant, 31, to take the bar exam on his behalf in July 1985 and to forge his name on test documents. The couple are now divorced.

Salant, a former federal prosecutor with the Securities and Exchange Commission, achieved the third highest score out of 7,000 applicants. Her husband finished in the bottom 20 percent when he took the exam earlier.

Salant pleaded no contest in the case in 1986 and was placed on three years' probation, fined $2,500 and ordered to perform 2,000 hours of community service.

Lamb's lawyer Donald Ray said if Lamb satisfactorily completes his probation, he may once again try to pursue a legal career in another state.

Feds shoot across airlines' bow

Federal transportation official James Burnley delivered a reassuring message last August. Yes, commercial airlines experienced safety and service problems, he acknowledged. But the Federal Aviation Administration had a handle on the situation. Steps had been taken to improve service. Moreover, he noted the absence of major air crashes in the United States for nearly a year.

Twelve days after that interview, a Northwest flight crashed on takeoff in Detroit; 154 people died. The media reported increasing incidents of pilot errors, equipment failure and near-collisions. Clearly, the skies were becoming a far more troublesome place to travel. Apparently, that fast hasn't been lost on Burnley.

Since his promotion from the No. 2 post in the Department of Transportation to transportation secretary, Burnley has been anything but complacent. He is becoming downright tough.

Recently, he and FAA Administrator T. Allan McArtor announced an $823,000 fine against Eastern Airlines, a thorough inspection of Eastern's fleet and a probe of Eastern's giant parent corporation, Texas Air.

Texas Air and Eastern officials blame this action on labor union agitation. Yet Burnley correctly asserts that the volume of complaints from passengers and crews—plus the financial crunch that Texas Air is experiencing—warrants federal scrutiny.

Texas Air's planes serve millions of airline passengers. Their safety must not be compromised because an airline company awash in red ink tries to save money by scrimping on spare parts and maintenance.

"If there's any other airline in this country even contemplating that strategy, I certainly hope it takes this as a shot across the bow," Burnley said.

Unlike the improbably sanguine assessment Burnley gave last summer, the transportation secretary's "shot-across-the-bow" warning is an assurance that means something. It should signal the flying public that the federal government won't stand by idly while airlines try to improve their bottom line by sacrificing passenger safety.

Credit the mules

White House military strategists and analysts are clearly guilty of shallow assessment when they give so much credit to high-tech equipment such as bazookas, grenade launchers and, above all, stinger missiles, for ending the guerrilla war between the Afghan rebels and the Soviet Army.

Some rather more humble, but no less praiseworthy, contributions seem to have escaped their attention.

A report from Washington says Tennessee mules made an "invaluable contribution" to the guerrillas' campaign, transporting tons of equipment, food, clothing and medical supplies across the border between Pakistan and Afghanistan.

A mule trading and auction company at Gallatin, Tenn., has disclosed that in the last year alone it delivered 700 mules to an army base in Kentucky for shipment to Pakistan.

The analysts should have the grace to acknowledge that the low-tech mule was the perfect means of transport in that undeveloped, rugged terrain, and that no new-fangled machinery could replace it. They should give credit where credit is due.

Reagan stores up joke supply for summit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is going to be one busy man in Moscow in late May. Summit plans shaping up show that his four-day visit to the Soviet Union will be non-stop.

In addition to the official meetings to take place in the Kremlin, Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will have private tete-a-tetes with only interpreters present.

The president also will deliver an address at Moscow University and will have lunch with Soviet writers, artists and film makers.

On his first full day in Moscow, May 30, he will have a session with Soviet dissidents and "refuseniks."

First lady Nancy Reagan will get her wish to see Leningrad and The Hermitage, the great art museum that was once the winter palace of Peter the Great.

Reagan boasts that he has a storehouse of new Russian jokes that he will pack along, probably to tell on auspicious occasions. But Gorbachev will hardly be able to stand it if he says yet again: "Doverai no poverai," trust but verify.

president's, but it falls like a lead balloon on the Kremlin leader.

The conservative Reagan is still taking off on "liberals," asserting that they hesitate to say what is right and what is wrong.

He told a gathering of educators at the ceremony where the new report "American Education: Making It Work" was presented that "if God had been a liberal, we wouldn't have 10 commandments, just 10 suggestions."

Education Secretary William Bennett is all for Vice President George Bush's announcement that he wants to be an "education president," saying "that's great."

Bennett said he had been advising Bush but does not believe he will be staying on in a Bush Cabinet if Bush becomes president.

"I have some problems with some forms of tenure in education," he said. "You know, walk it like you talk it."

Bush, meanwhile, is looking for a running mate on the Republican ticket but he has one no-no. He told NBC-TV in an interview recently that he does not want anyone with a sense of "moral outrage."

White House aides have shown their irritation with Bennett's high flying publicity grab. In issuing the new report on the small progress in American education, Bennett held two news conferences, including one at the White House, and another in his own department.

He also made remarks in the East Room. But then the president owes Bennett one. The education secretary was the first to telephone federal appeals Judge Douglas Ginsburg urging him to withdraw his nomination to the Supreme Court after disclosures that he had used marijuana while teaching at Yale. Bennett said it was "an introductory call," since he had never met Ginsburg before.

Bennett is not afraid of controversy. He jumped into the Stanford University curriculum dispute, charging the faculty and university officials had submitted to intimidation, setting up a reading agenda for students based on the "race or ethnicity of the authors."

ANALYSIS

New path ahead for Jackson

By Joseph Minicovsky
UPI Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — In Pennsylvania, Jesse Jackson lost a crucial campaign to broaden his emotional message far beyond his core support, and the result for Michael Dukakis is a wider path to the Democratic presidential nod.

Nonetheless, Jackson likely has succeeded in changing the tone of Democratic politics, at least for the 1988 election, and may force the party to deal with some liberal issues overlooked in recent years. In the process, many Democrats worry, the civil rights leader may hurt as much as he has helped.

Pennsylvania, the first one-on-one showdown between Jackson and Dukakis, was the culmination of a trend that built since a week after Jackson stunned the party by beating the Massachusetts governor in Michigan's caucuses March 26.

That victory, though it came in a contest decided by a relatively tiny sample of state voters, combined with other Jackson wins to lend him a legitimacy he had not enjoyed before and raised serious questions about Dukakis's ability to register a knockout punch in the convoluted Democratic race.

It also allowed Jackson to claim his message of hope for the economically disaffected was reaching far beyond his traditional black constituency.

However, in the primaries that followed — from Wisconsin a week later to New York last week and finally to Pennsylvania Tuesday — Dukakis employed a quiet efficiency not only to win but to do it in overwhelming fashion.

In Wisconsin, he accomplished it in a four-man field that included Sens. Paul Simon from neighboring Illinois and Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee. In New York, he had no trouble in a three-man race and finally, in the Keystone State, he crushed Jackson when the choice was down to two.

For Dukakis, each of those wins appeared more impressive than the one before, while for Jackson, each defeat more clearly showed that while he had made some inroads outside of black voters, he had not been effective enough.

Perhaps the most disturbing thing for the Chicago preacher was to see his appeals to workers and poor people of all races achieve only limited success.

Patent lawyers are mothers of invention

By Jack Anderson and Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — Sixty-five-year-old Seebor Fowler has a closet full of secret inventions, but he is afraid to share them with the world. He fears they will make someone else rich.

The Florida man has reason to be wary. Like many frugal, homespun inventors, Fowler competes with high-paid designers at big manufacturing companies for whom the road to the patent office is greased with experience. The little guys like Fowler say they have been turned down by patent attorneys, only to see their gadgets crop up later in a competitor's catalog.

Fowler quit his federal job with the National Security Agency 27 years ago to pursue his passion — inventing. In that first year, the naive Fowler walked into the office of a patent attorney with an idea for a water toy. He handed over all the diagrams. The attorney looked them over, said the idea couldn't be patented and sent Fowler a bill.

Reagan's ready, sure

By Anne Baber
United Press International

President Reagan will formally endorse Vice President George Bush, who has all but clinched the Republican nomination, in a joint appearance in the next couple of weeks, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday.

Fitzwater said the president "will endorse the vice president, but we don't have a specific date ... probably in the next couple of weeks."

He said there will be a "special ceremony" for the endorsement, which will also kick off Reagan's active participation in the campaign.

The two Democrats, front-running Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, opened their campaigns for the next set of primaries but also were looking ahead to the general election by firing off sharp attacks on the vice president.

Bush, who has campaigned very lightly in the last seven weeks, spent Wednesday in the nation's capital for his weekly working lunch with Reagan a day after his huge 79 percent victory in the Pennsylvania primary.

Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia are next on the calendar with primaries Tuesday. Jackson has a full day of campaigning Friday planned in the Buckeye State; Dukakis was to spend the day in Boston, and Bush was in Washington.

The United Press International count, which tabulates only elected delegates, Friday puts 1,092 delegates in Bush's column, just 47 short of the 1,139 he needs for nomination at the Republican National Convention in New Orleans.

This week, Bush campaign officials said victory in Pennsylvania would officially seal the nomination for the nomination — thanks to 60 unopposed delegates running in the New Jersey primary June 7.

The UPI count of Democratic National Convention delegates gives Dukakis 1,129 votes, 952 short of the 2,081 needed for nomination in Atlanta in July.

His victories in New York and Pennsylvania, which will send the second- and fourth-largest delegations to Atlanta, allowed Dukakis to open up a substantial lead on Jackson, who has 780 delegates.

In addition, Dukakis gained support Wednesday from four more lawmakers who will be convention super delegates. One of them, Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who once backed Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, said he endorsed Dukakis "with the hope this will be the beginning of a coalition that will make him president."

Reagan has refrained from active participation in the GOP primary campaign as long as Bush was challenged. But since the vice president's chief rival, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, dropped out of the race March 29, Reagan has said he would campaign for his loyal No. 2.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan and Bush met for lunch Wednesday and "discussed politics in general and the vice president's strategy in the months ahead."

"They also talked about (appearing together) at a political event soon," which Fitzwater said would be tantamount to a presidential endorsement.

The watershed Pennsylvania primary solidified Dukakis's claim on the Democratic nomination, and the Massachusetts governor focused on what he expects will be his autumn showdown with Bush.

Dukakis, in Boston, promised Wednesday that despite predictions, a Bush-Dukakis race will not bore the nation: "I've never been in a dull, boring contest in my life and I don't expect this one will be either."

Brain theory of ulcers

By Deltha Richs
UPI Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — When Australian gastroenterologist Barry Marshall gulped down a vial of bacteria five years ago he not only resurrected the idea of self-experimentation but laid the foundation for the germ theory of ulcers.

The campylobacter cocktail caused stomach cramping, bad breath and an erosion of stomach tissue, giving the first scientific hints of a bacterial role in the development of ulcers, one of the most common gastrointestinal diseases.

But Dr. Daniel Hernandez, a gastroenterologist at the University of Southern California, thinks that something far more subtle may be at work.

While stress has been implicated for years as the most common factor in the cause of the raw, penetrating sores made ever more painful by the continual bath of strong stomach acids, Hernandez has begun to look to the brain for clues.

In his laboratory, where ulcer-afflicted rats are monitored daily, he has developed promising evidence that ulcer formation may be directly related to brain chemistry, a hypothesis he estimates that is more than 200 years old.

Hernandez and his colleagues have identified an area of the lower brain stem as the site of specific hormonal activity that stimulates stomach acid secretion, lending credence to his notion that ulcers may be inextricably tied to neurochemistry.

"The classical approach to the cause of gastric ulcers has been to look at the stomach itself mainly because that is the site where the actual disease occurs," explained Hernandez, an associate professor in the department of gastroenterology at USC's School of Medicine.

"So because of that, a great deal of interest has been generated in specific studies to determine what mechanisms in the stomach cells may be involved in the onset of gastric ulcers.

"Evidence that the brain is involved in producing stress ulcers has existed for more than 200 years.

"But the specifics as to how they're formed or the mechanisms involved in the onset have remained elusive," he said.

Taxes are a small price

This sounds incredibly hokey. I'm going to write it anyway, because I'm not sure if I'm embarrassed more because it's really hokey, or that I think it's hokey.

It's the same feeling I had the first time my eyes teared up at a major league ball game a few years ago, hearing "The Star Spangled Banner." I wanted to sing it, real loud, but didn't because no one else around me was singing. Yet as I scanned the crowd, I noticed a few folks humming, a few more with their hands over their hearts, and a few more sort of mouthing the words and avoiding my glance. Maybe they wanted to sing real loud, too, and were waiting for me to start.

This time, it's the darndest thing. A couple of weeks ago, I wrote a check to the Internal Revenue Service—a big one. And I think everyone who worked on the new "simplified tax forms" should be given short jail terms, so they can learn what simplicity is all about. But truthfully, I minded this check less than any of the smaller ones that preceded it.

Why on earth don't I resent this, I wondered? I'm sure as heck supposed to. Everyone's supposed to hate paying taxes, from the most liberal liberal to the most conservative conservative to the most paranoid tax protester holed up somewhere in the Ozarks training for Armageddon. This just isn't right, this ambivalence toward watching the equivalent of six paychecks fly out of my checking account.

Still, I don't care. "Just let me live here," I think, at the same time surprised. "How the tax laws aren't fair, and bamboo shoots shoved under fingernails and lit are more fun than an IRS audit. I know my taxes are used for 1,000 things I wouldn't like if I knew about them, and I feel guilty for not knowing any more about them. I ought to find out more about where my money's going once it leaves the processing center so I can stamp my foot loyally and say, "enough." Yet I do know enough about where it's going to have stamped my foot, at least symbolically, once in a while. Right now, it just doesn't seem to matter. I have paid my yearly dues, my rent for living in America. All I can think of is how small the payment seems.

I am fascinated with all my dues have bought me. I live in a house I like, mostly. It belongs to me. A beloved 8-year-old car thunders me anywhere I want, anytime, and all it requires is a few checks a year offered up to the garage god. Cheap. Cheap.

Energy efficiency critical to nation's future

By Claudine Schneider

Amidst the sounds and fury of presidential politicking, nary a word has been spoken on behalf of America's most unsung technological success story, energy efficiency. The notable absence of discussion about the benefits of energy efficiency bodes ill for solving most of the "major" problems facing the presidential aspirants.

Unless energy efficiency is recognized for its real value—America's dominant least-cost, low-risk energy resource—the next administration can forget about spurring economic productivity, enhancing U.S. global competitiveness, promoting energy security, maintaining environmental quality, and ensuring against another bout of high inflation and interest rates.

American's spend nearly $500 billion annually for energy services, more than any other commodity purchase. Our energy bill, however, would have been $150 billion a year higher if Americans had not invested in making buildings, factories, and vehicles more efficient over the past decade.

In recent years, utilities like Southern California Edison have been using efficiency investment opportunities to displace the total output of a large coal or nuclear plant annually. This is being achieved through a combination of financial incentives to its customers to purchase efficient equipment, and through energy efficient building standards developed by the state of California.

Similarly, federal fuel economy standards for vehicles passed in 1975 doubled the efficiency of the nation's auto fleet to 26 miles per gallon. This one action is now saving U.S. consumers billions of dollars annually, and has already reduced our foreign oil imports by more than half and helped to cut the U.S. trade deficit by tens of billions of dollars.

Overall, efficiency investments since the 1973 Arab oil embargo have succeeded in displacing the equivalent of 14 million barrels of oil per day—40 percent more energy than is currently produced by the 100-year-old

What can be done

Invest more of the nation's resources in improving the efficient use of energy.

- Allocate more money to the Department of Energy for research and development.
- Make sure energy services are delivered to consumers at the best cost and risk. This would include eliminating federal energy subsidies.

domestic oil industry. This is the good news. Not so good is the fact that the U.S. still spends 50 to 75 percent more energy to produce a dollar of Gross National Product than foreign competitors like Western European nations and Japan. This puts U.S. firms at an inherent disadvantage.

These other countries are outspending the U.S. on research and development of high-efficiency, low-energy-consuming buildings, appliances, vehicles, and industrial processes in an effort to lower their energy bills even further. The steady erosion of U.S. auto sales to fuel efficient foreign models is but the first dramatic signal of troubles on the horizon. Foreign competitors are poised to capture increasing domestic and global market share of lighting products, motors, air conditioners, and other energy-consuming devices.

Do we have a choice in this ill-fated future that threatens to diminish our economy's level of prosperity? Absolutely. Experts have testified before Congress that this nation can easily save another $150 to $200 billion on its yearly energy bill through further investments in energy efficiency. Such investments would entirely eliminate foreign oil imports, further reduce the trade deficit by more than $30 billion per year, continue to dampen world oil prices, and most importantly put

Moreover, energy efficiency investments not only save money, they prevent pollutants. Several key studies have found that the nagging problems of acid rain, global "Greenhouse" warming, and hazardous wastes can be greatly mitigated by efficiency investments.

If we fail to capitalize upon these innovative devices, consumers will not only needlessly pay more for their energy services, but also face a dirtier environment and higher taxes to clean up their polluted air, water, and land.

What can the next President do about this situation? The first step should be to allocate more resources to energy efficiency research and development. The Department of Energy's 1989 proposed budget of $16 billion sets aside a mere $89 million, just 0.5 percent, for energy efficiency. In contrast, 80 percent goes to military-related programs.

Second, the next President should develop public policies that ensure energy services are delivered to consumers at the least cost and risk. This would include eliminating most of the $45 billion a year in federal energy subsidies. Two-thirds of these subsidies go to promote power plant construction that is 10 times more expensive than getting the same services from efficiency improvements. Decreasing these subsidies will greatly aid the next President in reducing the nation's deficits and debt.

Energy efficiency is vital to ensure adequate investment capital for sustaining our nation's economic prosperity. In recent years, the energy sector has consumed over 40 percent of total private investment capital.

OUR READERS WRITE

Ortega has fooled too many Americans about his intentions

In March I read an editorial criticizing President Reagan for sending troops to the Honduras. The writer claimed the President had endangered the peace plan. He said, "...these maneuvers risk taunting the Sandinistas."

Surely anyone with a grain of sense can see that, far from endangering the peace plan, the troops preserved it. The Sandinistas had crossed the border into Honduras, bent on weakening the Contras. When Ortega saw that there was something to stop him, he withdrew and went on with plans for the peace talks.

Last week I heard an interview on television with the President of Costa Rica. He seemed to have very little hope for a democratic government in Nicaragua and he thinks Gorbachev will not stop trying to spread Marxism in our hemisphere.

Both of our Florida senators think the Soviet Union is a threat. They voted for aid to the Contras.

Every voter should read "Nicaragua's Secret Plan" in the April Reader's Digest. It is a report of Ortega's secret plan for a wider war of subversion against Nicaragua's neighbors as reported to American intelligence officers by Roger Miranda, Secretariat of the Nicaraguan Ministry of Defense who was fed up with corruption, and came to the United States with his wife last year to "spill the beans."

Roger Miranda had power, money and a good future in Nicaragua. He deserted because he said, "The Sandinistas have established a totalitarian, anti-democratic regime of terror, betrayed the revolution, destroyed the economy and militarized all levels of society."

But our liberal Speaker of the House and other powerful but foolish members of Congress refused to listen to Miranda. They had already listened to Ortega.

Are these men naive, or are they communists at heart?

Miranda said Ortega's brother was a millionaire. He took money from defense and put it in a bank in Panama in his name. So Communists are greedy too. Maybe that's why our Congressmen have so much sympathy for them.

The people of Nicaragua were oppressed by the dictator Somoza. They joined Ortega thinking they were fighting for freedom. It has happened in many countries. President Carter was fooled. During his administration millions of our tax dollars went to support the Sandinistas.

When people suffer they forget that bad can be worse. Here at home many of us listen to the most convincing promises without considering the fact that the candidate can't deliver! And we don't actually know what the candidate is like. Recently I asked several people, "Which of our candidates for president—just four years ago—went to Cuba, was chummy with Castro and said "Viva (long live) Castro! Viva Che Guevara!" Nobody remembered. I think that man was a communist four years ago. Can a leopard change its spots in four years?"

Rail mass transit: an idea that's overdue

During the last 25 years I have written numerous letters pertaining to using the railroad right-of-way for mass transit, but I have not received much interest, which is hard for me to believe. When you can't get the citizens of Central Florida to vote for a one-cent increase in taxes to build future roads, there isn't any way you will ever find the money for rail mass transit in Central Florida.

The solution is very simple. The present railroad that runs through Sanford, Lake Mary, Longwood, Winter Park, Orlando, and to the south of the International Airport already has two tracks laid, the right-of-way is there, the signalization is in, and in most cases the depots are in, parking spaces are available, and the tracks are used less than one percent of the time.

The solution to our rail traffic transportation problem would be to have a half dozen mini-trains scheduled to run from Sanford through the above cities to South Orlando and back, several times a day and night, that would carry passengers to the various destinations. These could easily be scheduled so they are not in conflict with the few trains that presently use the rails.

It is time that Central Floridians are more resourceful and more creative in their thinking, and try to achieve today what needs to be done instead of daydreaming for something that, in all probability, will not be in place 50 years from now. It is one thing to dream, but another to achieve.

Psychiatrists find aid to predicting violence

Doctors in New York have developed a formula to help them predict which patients admitted to psychiatric wards will be violent.

In an article in the April issue of Hospital and Community Psychiatry, a team of five researchers described the technique that enabled them to make correct predictions of violent behavior for about 66 percent of 79 male schizophrenia patients admitted to the Manhattan Psychiatric Center.

The authors, who are affiliated with the Nathan S. Kline Institute for Psychiatric Research in Orangeburg, N.Y., first surveyed the personal profiles of another group of men and correlated traits with violent behavior, defined as pushing, hitting, slapping, choking, scratching or kicking staff members or other patients.

The researchers then used four risk factors uncovered in that group to develop the predictive formula applied to the 79 men in the second group. The factors used in the formula were: abnormalities in brain function, history of violent crime or violent suicide attempt, and deviant family environment during childhood.

History of drug and alcohol use, head injuries, cruelty to animals, and bed-wetting were not predictive because they were equally common in assaultive and non-assaultive patients.

The researchers said the formula probably would not be useful for predicting violence in other types of psychiatric patients such as those with severe depression or drug abuse problems.

Second graders think Earth flat

The voyage of Columbus helped disprove the ancient belief Earth is flat, but a survey shows many children have not caught on.

Two researchers, Alan Lightman and Philip Sadler, say most children draw Earth as a giant pancake, a curved sky covering flat ground, or a round ball with a flat portion in the interior on which people live.

Lightman is a research physicist at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory and a teacher at Harvard University, and Sadler is a former science teacher.

The two conducted a survey of 65 elementary and middle school teachers to predict how their students would draw Earth. Second-grade teachers believed 95 percent of their students knew the Earth was round, when less than 5 percent of the students actually did, the researchers wrote in Science and Children, a magazine published monthly during the school year by the National Science Teacher Association.

The two wrote that the impression Earth is flat is a preconceived notion, or naive theory, based on common sense experience from an early age. Part of education is to convince children things are not always as they seem.

Genes govern bay scallop shell colors

Beachcombers and shell collectors will appreciate the research of two Virginia scientists studying the genetics governing the colors and banding patterns on bay scallop shells.

In a recent article in The Journal of Heredity, biologists L. Adamkewicz and M. Castagna said heredity determines which of three background colors a shell will have: white, yellow or orange. On top of a white background color, most scallops lay down additional dark pigments, leading to elaborate banding, stripes, chevrons or solid dark colors.

Only 2 percent to 3 percent of the scallops have orange or yellow backgrounds, said the researchers.

Sex in nursing homes

Healthy sex life called Rx for elderly

By Peg Byron
NEW YORK (UPI) — Old age is widely viewed as a sedentary time of life — not very physical and certainly not sexual. Challenging this outlook, however, are geriatric experts opposed to forced retirement of sexuality.

Nursing homes especially can be sexually inhibiting, with residents ridiculed or prevented from enjoying physical contacts or sexual activity, said one proponent of geriatric sexuality.

"It's an 'ageism' thing. Our society has such an emphasis on being young and slim," said assistant nursing professor Paula Wringer of Purdue University.

"When you get older, a pot belly and your hair is a little thin, people associate that with asexuality," she said.

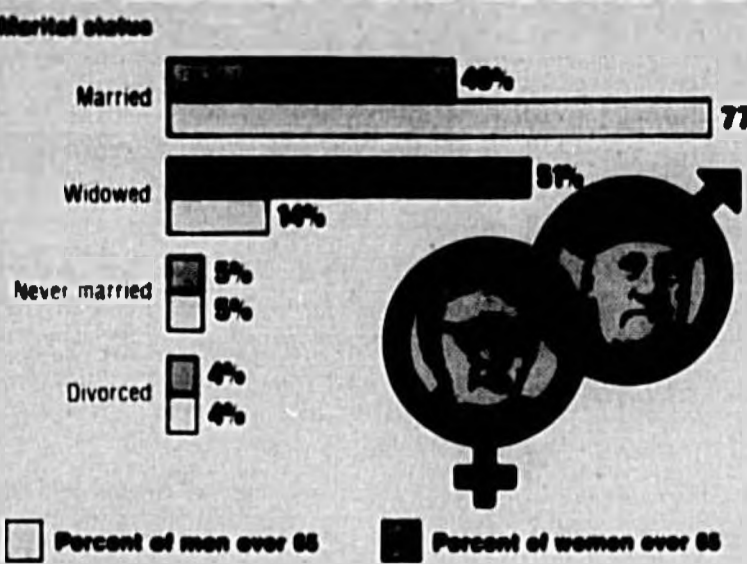

She argued that the need for intimate physical contact continues throughout life, and said sexual intercourse is enjoyed by many in their twilight years.

"Masters and Johnson say if you have sex twice a week while you are 40, when you are 90, you will do the same," barring significant illness or the death of a mate, she said.

But among those over age 65 living in nursing homes, only 10 percent remain sexually active, experts report.

Wringer said the elderly, as

THE ELDERLY AND MARRIAGE

consenting adults, have a right to both sexuality and privacy, although the latter is often lacking in nursing homes, where sex or even extensive physical contact among residents is generally discouraged. Repressing sexuality, which includes simple touching and cuddling, can be just as harmful in old age as during life's earlier stages, experts insist.

"I often say you ought to be dealing with sexuality as much as you are dealing with arthritis," said Dr. Jane Thibault, director of the geriatric evaluation and treatment unit at the University of Louisville's School of Medicine.

She recalled the case of a 96-year-old woman in a private care home who was physically active and even played the piano for church groups. But the staff complained that she was often seen masturbating.

"She was in a private room and she essentially told me, 'This is my room, I pay for it and if they knock before they come in, I will stop. They get what they deserve,'" Thibault said.

Thibault, who is also a clinical gerontologist, said in too many cases, elderly people respond to criticism by becoming depressed and withdrawn.

Wringer, who consults on behavior problems of nursing home residents, agreed, saying she too has found that the problems often turn out to stem from the attitudes of nursing home staff.

"When people (residents) hold hands or say they want to marry someone, there is a lot of ridicule. It can be very humiliating."

She described the case of a 90-year-old man in a nursing home who began exposing himself and making inappropriate remarks, although earlier his behavior was normal.

She found the staff had been laughing at the man for holding hands and putting his arm around a woman friend in the home.

"He was being treated like a child, so in his own unconscious way, he was saying, 'Look at me. I'm still a man. I'm still a human being,'" said Wringer.

As a solution, Wringer conferred with the staff and also arranged for the couple to have a few hours of privacy together each week.

"It worked. He's really a nice gentleman," she said.

Most nursing homes don't say specifically they have a policy barring physical contact between residents, but Wringer said residents get the message through "a campaign of indifference."

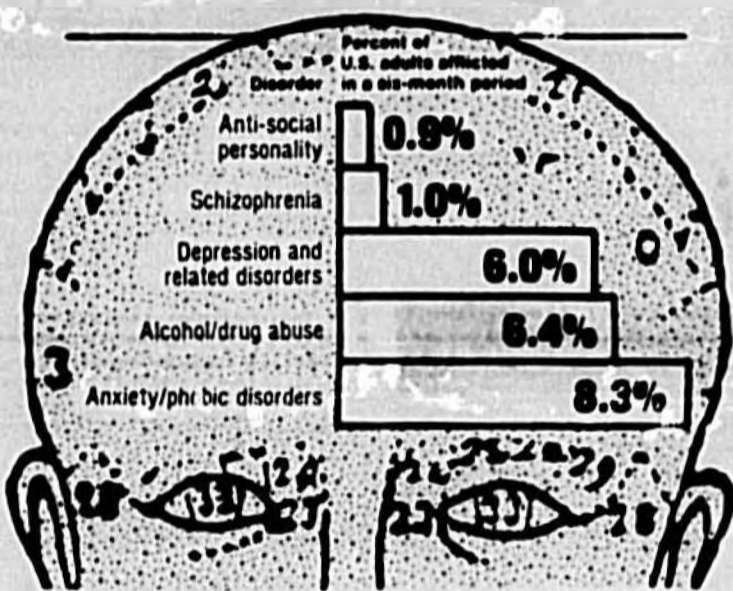

"They are made to feel naughty instead of, 'It's ok, you're an adult'" and they may get no human physical contact except when receiving medical services, she said.

Regulations governing social security, Medicaid and Medicare benefits also can restrict companionship among the elderly, Wringer said, when couples are forced to live apart because both cannot get reimbursed for residing in a facility providing care only one of them needs.

Other couples who might choose to marry sometimes cannot because one of them then would have to forfeit federal benefits.

Study: Early education can reduce heart disease risk

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — In the first study of its kind, researchers found that early education about the dangers of smoking and the benefits of a good diet and exercise appears effective at lowering the risk of heart disease.

"The take-home message is that kids can be taught in school how to reduce the risk for the nation's No. 1 killer and that schools can play a big role in improving the health status of kids," said Dr. Heather Walter of the American Health Foundation in New York, where the study was conducted.

Walter and her colleagues found that fourth- through eighth-graders in the New York City area who took special health classes lowered their total blood cholesterol levels by an average of 4 percent.

Another group of researchers reported that many adult heart attack patients apparently can be discharged from the hospital much earlier than the standard week to 10 days, saving millions of dollars without harming their health.

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States. About 1.5 million Americans have heart attacks each year and about 550,000 die.

Walter and her colleagues studied 1,769 students in 37 schools in and around New York who received special "Know Your Body" instruction designed to encourage the children to eat well, exercise more and not smoke, all factors that reduce the risk of heart disease.

After five years, children in the Bronx who received the special classes had lowered their cholesterol levels by an average of 2.9 percent more than those who had not. Children in suburban Westchester County who took the classes had lowered their cholesterol levels an average of 5.1 percent more than their counterparts who had not taken the classes.

Cholesterol can accumulate inside arteries, narrowing the passage, that provide blood to the heart and increasing the risk for a heart attack.

While the children who took the classes also demonstrated a better overall knowledge of health and the dangers of cigarette smoking, the program had no significant effect on their weight, blood pressure or overall physical fitness, which are also risk factors for heart disease.

Heart damaging blood vessel condition may go undetected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many people may not be aware they are at risk for atherosclerosis, a leading cause of heart attack, because current testing methods can fail to detect the condition, Canadian researchers warned today.

Most tests involve measuring blood cholesterol levels after subjects have gone several hours without eating even though cholesterol levels in people genetically predisposed to atherosclerosis appear to be highest immediately after a meal, said Dr. Gary Kakis, a professor of nutritional sciences at the University of Toronto's department of nutritional sciences.

Kakis, Dr. Dushan Vaithilingam and undergraduate Viola Antao, also of the university, further reported evidence for the theory that atherosclerosis has a genetic cause.

Atherosclerosis is a condition in which medium-sized and large arteries become clogged with cholesterol and other materials. If blood flow to the heart is blocked, a heart attack results. Though scientists do not know the ultimate trigger, high levels of cholesterol are known to contribute to it.

Kakis described the research in remarks prepared for delivery today at the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Nutrition.

The investigators based their conclusions on tests involving two strains of mice: C57BL/6J, "B6" for short, and BALB/c, both originally bred for cancer experiments.

The Toronto researchers fed the mice concentrated doses of fat, then measured their cholesterol levels. During the first four hours, those levels climbed rapidly in B6 mice, then fell, while in the others it showed no increase.

Hours later, the cholesterol levels in both groups became identical, but the B6 mice had developed atherosclerosis; hence the finding that the disease is caused by a genetic defect allowing the intestine to absorb more cholesterol.

This could explain why some people whose cholesterol intake is normal or high never develop the condition while others do, the researchers said, and also why some with atherosclerosis have cholesterol levels in the normal range.

Other research has shown a reduction in blood cholesterol also reduces risk of heart attack.

'Sundae' drivers, beware

SELINGROVE, Pa. (UPI) — Attention dieters: Steer clear of central Pennsylvania this weekend.

Sellingrove will become a sundae lover's dream and a weight watcher's nightmare Saturday when residents try to peel, dip and top their way back into the Guinness Book of World Records by creating a 4

1/2-mile-long banana split. That is equal to 23,760 feet and roughly 12.9 million calories.

Organizers have ordered 24,000 bananas; 2,500 gallons of vanilla ice cream; 450 gallons of chocolate, strawberry and pineapple toppings; 600 pounds of chopped nuts; and — to top it all off — 24,000 cherries.

Doing research on children

Current federal regulations and ethical standards being what they are, it's virtually impossible to conduct high-quality medical research using infants and children as subjects. At least that's what many researchers believe. And their beliefs affect the quantity and quality of pediatric research.

While all medical research involving human subjects is carefully monitored and controlled, adults are not as intensely protected as children are. The theory is that because adults must grant informed consent, they go into a study knowing the potential risks and benefits, while children cannot make such informed choices.

(That, of course, begs the question of whether anyone can make a truly informed life-and-death decision, or whether an adult patient does what the physician suggests because the patient wants to please the physician, thereby "insuring" good treatment. But that's another column.)

There's little doubt that children do need special protection. Assumptions that parents automatically provide that protection were far more likely to be made in an age when we were less aware that some parents use their children as punching bags and sex objects. Clearly, children today need more than parental protection to ensure that they are not misused by those who would help them.

But in order to protect children from misuse as research subjects, federal regulations make it virtually impossible to use them. A child can only be used as a medical-research subject if it can be shown that the child may directly benefit from the research.

That means that if a new drug is developed to treat a pediatric illness, the drug may only be tested on children suffering from the illness — it may not be safety-tested on large numbers of healthy children, as a substance intended for adult consumption might be.

The real problem here is not that it's virtually impossible to develop new treatments for pediatric illness, although that is a very real problem. An even greater problem is the fact that the regulations — and fear of them and the climate they create — fosters a situation in which new treatments are inadequately tested before being used on enormous numbers of children.

The latest case in point is a study of a drug for the treatment of neonatal jaundice. In the latest issue of Pediatrics magazine, researchers reported that they treated neonatal jaundice with an apparently safe drug.

Prior to this, many of the up to 200,000 infants a year born suffering from jaundice were treated with exposure to ultraviolet light — a treatment that in many cases required an extended newborn stay in the hospital, and thus much higher than average post-delivery medical bills.

The UV light treatment has been used for years on millions of infants, with no signs of ill effect. The drug treatment, however, has been tested on 53 infants with no serious side effects.

Unfortunately, the new treatment will probably speed through very limited additional trials because it is cheaper and faster, and, in the very near future, will become the treatment of choice in the newborn nursery.

So before you can say "potential medical disaster," millions of infants will have received a drug to treat a condition that could have been treated alternately and safely with light.

It's a sure thing that — barring initial disaster — this treatment will be given to about 6 percent of the infants born each year. It is also safe to predict that as soon as a "safe" drug for 53 infants is given to hundreds of thousands of infants, there will be side effects.

The question, then, is how many infants will have to be maimed or die before we learn that excluding children from well-designed scientific studies doesn't protect them from anything?

New laser shows promise in heart disease treatment

By Lidia Wasowicz
United Press International
MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — A laser capable of destroying diseased tissue without harming healthy cells may open up new avenues of treatment for cardiovascular patients, doctors say.

In recent years, lasers have been supplanting some of the more conventional tools of medicine. Heart surgeons, however, have been wary of jumping on the bandwagon because of the difficulty and danger of aiming a lethal weapon at a continuously moving target.

The new computerized "Probe and Treat" laser may change that, doctors said. Initial tests at the National Institutes of Health and in France showed the system operates with unprecedented accuracy and speed. Thus, it can wipe out problem areas without damaging any of the surrounding tissue, an achievement that has eluded other lasers.

That is good news for 63 million Americans who suffer from one or more forms of cardiovascular disease, doctors said.

Each year, 1 million of them die, 100,000 undergo limb amputation, 1.5 million suffer a heart attack, and 500,000 have a stroke, according to the American Heart Association.

Seven million people in the country are afflicted with coronary artery disease caused by blockages of the heart's arteries; 4 million with hypertension due to blocked kidney arteries; and another 4 million with blocked leg arteries.

Once the laser gains federal approval for wider use—expected within 18 months barring any unforeseen obstacles—it could help some of the 50 percent of heart patients who are not candidates for such conventional treatments as bypass surgery and balloon angioplasty.

In angioplasty, surgeons insert through the arteries a tiny balloon mounted on the end of a tube. Doctors inflate the balloon to enlarge artery openings narrowed by build-ups of plaque, or fatty deposits of cholesterol, cellular waste products, calcium and fibrin, a clotting material found in the blood.

In addition, the new laser could serve as an adjunct to the 550,000 heart bypass surgeries and angioplasties performed each year, said Dr. Douglas Murphy-Chutorian, a cardiologist and president of MCM Laboratories, Inc., of Mountain View, which produces the system. Eventually, he said, laser treatment may replace some current cardiovascular procedures.

"The most difficult area of medicine and surgery in which to use a laser is the vascular," said Murphy-Chutorian, former co-director of the Cardiovascular Laser Laboratory at the Stanford University Medical Center, where the country's first laser angioplasty to open blocked leg arteries was performed in 1983.

"The target is hard to see because of heart motion, breathing and blood flow. It is risky for the physician to both aim the laser and discern precisely the amount of laser energy to apply."

To date, a significant percentage of laser cardiovascular surgeries have been complicated by perforations, dissection, pain and vessel spasm, he said.

In initial tests, the new laser system distinguished between plaque and normal tissue 100 percent of the time and never fired on healthy areas surrounding a diseased treatment site.

Results of the experiments were reported at a recent annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology in Atlanta.

Doctors from NIH in Bethesda, Md., and the Henri-Mondor Hospital in Paris had a 93 percent success rate in reopening blocked leg arteries. The laser was used to open a primary channel through the blockage.

Standard balloon angioplasty was then performed.

Of 26 patients who had been considered untreatable, 26 underwent successful operations.

"No other laser system for the treatment of atherosclerotic blockages has produced such remarkable results in 'impossible' cases such as these," said Dr. H.J. Geschwind, director of the Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory at the Paris hospital.

"More trials are needed to prove the laser's safety and efficacy, but we are excited about the very successful preliminary results," said Murphy-Chutorian.

The laser system actually consists of two lasers: a low-power diagnostic laser, which probes to find diseased tissue, and a high-energy treatment laser, which vaporizes the plaque into harmless gases absorbed by the blood.

The whole process, guided by a computer, takes a fraction of a second and repeats continuously throughout the treatment.

During laser angioplasty, one end of an optical fiber is attached to a laser outside the body, while the other end is passed through the patient's arteries to the site of the blockage. When the laser is fired, energy travels along the optical fiber, out the other end, and the plaque is vaporized.

By contrast, balloon angioplasty merely remodels the plaque, leaving material behind, which leads to reclosure of the artery in 30 percent of the cases.

Tiny TVs to be used in eyeglasses

By Mary Gabriel
UPI — NASA and Johns Hopkins researchers are using techniques developed for space shuttle flights to attach tiny televisions on eyeglass frames for people whose vision problems cannot be surgically corrected.

Dr. Robert Masoff, a researcher at Hopkins Wilmer Eye Institute who is helping to develop the Low Vision Enhancement System, said the joint effort will use NASA technology to help an estimated 2.5 million people with vision problems.

"This is not intended to restore lost vision, but it will help people make the best use of their remaining vision," he said, adding the devices are expected to be available in five years and, though costing $11 million to develop, should be affordable to the elderly on fixed income.

The researcher added that the technology will allow doctors to "custom tailor" the presentation of images to the needs of each patient.

The apparatus resembles wrap-around, mirrored sunglasses, but instead of lenses the sections covering the eyes actually are two small television screens that the person will look at rather than through.

"The transfer of NASA's technology will make it possible to improve the visual capability of low-vision patients by appropriately enhancing and altering images to compensate for the individual patient's impaired eyesight," Masoff said at a Wednesday news conference.

When the device is worn, the patient will see the world on two miniature color television screens where the lenses of eyeglasses are usually located.

Lenses and imaging glass fibers will be embedded on each side of the frame where the front and ear pieces join.

Fibers in the lenses, Masoff said, will pick up the scene the wearer is looking at and then carry the pictures back to miniature solid-state television cameras in a pack worn on the hip or shoulder.

The pictures will be processed in the pack by a computer before being sent back to the tiny television screens in front of the wearer's eyes.

The whole process, Masoff said, should move as quickly as a film or 1-30th of a second.

"It will be processed at TV frame rate, like a movie, and provide continuous vision," he said.

In some cases, patients will be equipped with a "zoom" capability that will be triggered either manually or by eye motion when they try to see at a distance.

Among those to benefit from the device are many elderly people with retina degeneration, diabetics who suffer scarring on the retina that leads to loss of sight and glaucoma sufferers.

Charles Whitehurst, director of the National Space and Aeronautics Administration's Earth Resources Laboratory, said the technology used in the device was developed as a result of the Challenger shuttle accident to detect, among other things, ice on shuttle booster rockets.

Regulation linked to high rates

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — Government efforts to control health care costs may adversely affect the quality of patient care, according to a new study that found hospitals in states that strictly regulate them have higher death rates.

"These findings raise serious concerns about the welfare of patients who are admitted to hospitals in higher regulated areas," the Northwestern University researchers wrote in reporting their findings Wednesday in The New England Journal of Medicine.

The Chicago researchers studied 214,839 Medicare patients treated at 981 hospitals in 45 states from July 1, 1983, to June 30, 1984, and found hospitals in states with the most stringent controls over hospital costs had death rates between 6 percent and 10 percent higher than those in states with less stringent controls.

Hospitals in states with the most stringent controls over hospital expansion and investments in new equipment had death rates 5 percent to 6 percent higher than those of hospitals in states with less stringent controls, the researchers found.

Stephen M. Shortell, a professor of hospital and health services management who headed the study, said the findings do not mean cost controls should be eliminated, but that the monitoring of care may need to be improved.

"A lot of people across the country have been concerned about strict regulation to contain costs," Shortell said in a telephone interview. "Will it have an adverse effect on patient outcome? What we're saying is that what may be suggested (by the study) is that those kind of stringent (controls) may have an adverse effect on certain kinds of patient outcomes."

Tight control of hospital costs may adversely affect patient care by hindering institutions' ability to buy new technology and attract the best doctors and nurses, Shortell speculated.

Besides the effect of regulation, the researchers also found that hospitals in areas where there was more intense competition with health maintenance organizations also had higher mortality rates.

But they found no increased mortality rate associated with whether a hospital was run for profit or not for profit.

"Our findings suggest that when faced with either type of external threat, hospitals may respond in ways associated with an increase in their mortality rates," the researchers said.

"Examples may include attempts to cut costs through reductions in staff, elimination of selected services, consolidation of services and postponement of capital improvements," they said.

The researchers acknowledged that they studied only Medicare patients in 16 illness categories, but maintained the findings "are particularly important" because they were culled from many hospitals nationwide.

"The present findings underscore the need for improved monitoring of the issue of the quality of care and patients' outcomes as regulatory and competitive approaches to hospital cost containment continue to become more stringent," they said.

Inexpensive Cavity Prevention: Dental Sealants Protect Your Children's Teeth

By sealing the chewing surfaces of their teeth, dental sealants help your children stay cavity-free!

The chewing surfaces of molars are the most cavity-prone areas of your child's teeth. Unfortunately, they are also the most difficult areas to protect with fluoride! That's why the American Dental Association recommends that dental sealants be applied to permanent molars of all children as part of routine preventive dentistry. A "sealed" molar is actually ten times less likely to experience decay because bacteria and food debris cannot enter its tiny pits and grooves.

Sealants, which are tooth-colored or transparent plastic resins, are painted on the teeth in liquid form and quickly harden into thin, very strong coatings. Their protection can last for up to five years, but they should be checked regularly.

The combination of sealants for the chewing surfaces and fluoride for the smooth surfaces of tooth enamel is a cavity-fighting powerhouse. Dr. Richard J. Simonsen, Chairman of the Department of General Dentistry at the University of Tennessee and author of several scientific studies on sealants, explains:

"With proper use of fluorides and proper use of sealants, children in families that are motivated to follow their dentist's advice on diet and oral hygiene will very likely stay cavity-free."

Sealing teeth is a simple, painless and inexpensive procedure. Ask your dentist about its potential for your children, or call our office, no cost consultation.

U.S. criticism of Mexico's anti-drug efforts drawing backlash

By Frederick Kiel
MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican anger over U.S. pressure that it do more to counter drug trafficking already was high before the U.S. Senate's recent overwhelming vote to sanction the country.

Now one Mexican official says he is going investigate U.S. efforts to curb drug use before the country bends further to U.S. demands that Mexico curb drug supply.

Other expressions of outrage are appearing in newspapers and on bookshelves.

The vote in the U.S. Senate turned public opinion even further against the American government, although Mexican officials have said the action would not deter their campaign against narcotic gangs.

Signs of a backlash were everywhere even before the Senate voted 61-27 on April 14 to overturn President Reagan's certification that Mexico was fully cooperating in the war on drugs.

An angry Sen. Humberto Hernandez Haddad, president of the Foreign Relations Commission of the Mexican Senate, said he would launch an investigation of U.S. efforts to halt drug trafficking.

"With the same right that the American Senate evaluates the effort of Mexico in its fight against drug trafficking, the Mexican Senate will examine the real efforts of its U.S. counterpart to determine the responsibilities of the involved governments," Hernandez Haddad said.

A Mexican author published a widely publicized book entitled "Corruption in the United States." Its cover features the Statue of Liberty clutching dollar bills instead of a torch.

A Mexican newspaper's front-page headline over a story on narcotics use in the United States said: "No Corner in the U.S. is Free of Drug Addiction."

An influential political scientist made public his study that Mexico's anti-narcotics campaign has sent 20,000 peasants to jail in five years for growing marijuana while most Americans escape punishment for smoking it.

The incidents are

symptomatic of growing Mexican discomfort over heavy-handed U.S. pressure on the government to improve its effort against drug traffickers. America's continual charges of Mexican corruption, and over statements of disbelief, especially in the U.S. Congress, on Mexican claims of drugs confiscated and gangs broken up.

Although all Latin American nations are sensitive to the issue of U.S. intervention, Mexico is almost certainly the most watchful.

It shares a 2,000-mile border with the United States, has suffered several U.S. invasions and lost half its national territory in the 19th century to the United States — all of which is taught at every level of Mexican schools.

"The U.S. campaign for the past 40 years against the international drug trade has been counter-productive," said Prof. Samuel del Villar in an interview at his office at the Colegio de Mexico, the nation's top think tank.

"The emphasis has been on destroying fields and plants, and there has been no discrimination between the types of drugs or the effects they produce — that is, marijuana, cocaine and heroin are treated as equally bad."

Del Villar, who was instrumental in writing the Moral Renovation law against public corruption for the administration of President Miguel de la Madrid, delivered a paper in December to the Council on Foreign Relations in New York.

"The accumulative failure and counter-productivity of U.S. anti-drug policy have created enormous problems and have imposed unbearable burdens on the national security and development of Mexico," del Villar wrote.

"The policy is counter-productive mainly because it fails to acknowledge that the driving force behind the drug market is U.S. consumer demand."

"Drug abuse is based on individual decisions conditioned by the prevalence of hedonistic social values which encourage the pursuit of illusory and momentary pleasure."

"What is absurd," del Villar said in an interview, "is that up to 20,000 peasants have been imprisoned, mostly for growing marijuana, over the past five years, while the U.S. police are not inclined to bother the 23 million marijuana consumers in the States, and the district attorneys and judges have even less disposition to try them, and even less to send them to jail."

"But poor Mexican peasants receive completely different treatment."

"Mexico has accepted pressures to employ exceptional forces, such as the use of pesticides to destroy drug fields — pesticides that are prohibited in the United States for health reasons," del Villar said.

"It is primarily a U.S. problem, because that is where the consumers are. The impact of the drug culture is so great that it has arrived at a nominee for the Supreme Court and presidential candidates."

"The United States has to clear up an enormous confusion. The United States can't say it's opposed to drugs and pressure others, while it doesn't set its own house in order."

The book on U.S. corruption has enjoyed favorable publicity across Mexico.

"Corruption is diverse in the United States, from drug pushing in the streets of New York to a magazine devoted to drugs, called HighTimes," author Julio Zamora Battiz told reporters.

He cited examples ranging from the Tamayo Hall scandals of New York politicians to the recent impeachment trial of Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham.

"I wrote this study because I'm tired of people, who are also corrupt, denigrating us," Zamora Battiz said.

The Unomasuno front-page story on the U.S. drug problem also discussed corruption.

"Scandals have proliferated that involve functionaries and public servants in acts of corruption, which include drug trafficking and assassinations carried out by local police officials," the newspaper wrote.

BOOK REVIEWS

Universe's fate awaits confrontation

By United Press International
The King of the Murgos, by David Eddings (Del Rey, 454 pp., $18.95)

In this, Book Two of the Mallorean, Belgarath, the Overlord of the West, continues his search for his infant son. The two Prophecies that will decide the fate of the universe are coming together for their final confrontation.

The Bear, Cyradia, has made known that the spirit of Torak now resides in Zandramas. It was Zandramas who stole the baby, to use him in a ritual at the Sardon Stone in "a place which is no more."

Cyradia has sent Garion and his chosen companions through Nyssa and Murgos to Mallorean. Eventually they come to a village on the Isle of Verkat inhabited by Dala, mysterious people who spend their time studying the stars with little regard for their comfort.

Here, Belgarath receives the Book of Ages, the one tale of both the Light and Dark. He must use it to take Garion to the "place which is no more" for the final confrontation. Next, they are betrayed.

David Eddings once again keeps the reader riveted with his wonderful saga. The tale of Belgarath — started in his five-novel series, "The Belgariad" — continues with the same consistent power and vivacity in this new epic fantasy series.

We meet old friends and new, old enemies and new, and some we're not sure about. The color and richness, the twists and turns of the Prophecies that rule all their lives are there, even in the seventh volume. Hats off!

The most frustrating thing about all this is waiting for the next volume.

The Third Friday, by George Bellak (Morrow, 266 pp., $18.95)

The novelist and the reader make a pact at the outset that the reader will supply the force and energy to begin a book so long as the writer will, with the force and energy of his words, take over that role and carry the reader to the end.

The earlier in the work that exchange of labor is made, the easier, faster and more enjoyable the read.

George Bellak's swirling Wall Street nightmare, "The Third Friday," is a difficult read in that respect. While the burden seems to be lifted from the reader in the very first paragraph, it is given back in the second.

Over the next 200 pages it is a loss-up over who is working harder to maintain interest — the reader or the writer. Only in the last hundred pages does the author lift and carry the reader to a neatly symmetrical conclusion.

"Third Friday" opens with the plunge of Wall Street wizard Cy Bannerman from the balcony of his high-rise apartment. Suicide or murder? His partner, Max Roberts, wants and needs to find out.

taken a position on the use of genetic fingerprinting, the technique raises many concerns, according to Janlori Goldman, staff attorney at the ACLU Project on Privacy and Technology in Washington.

King County, Washington, recently passed a law requiring everyone convicted of sex offenses be genetically fingerprinted. The fingerprints will be kept on file so police can use them when investigating future rapes. A similar law is pending in at least one other state, Colorado.

There is a danger large banks of DNA files could be used, saying into some of the new buildings. He notes there are several frescoes on the front of the building that might be preserved, as well as the cornerstone. The thespian masks in the auditorium might also be preserved, he says.

Once construction begins at the Sanford Middle School campus, Pelham estimates it would be 18 months to two years before the project would be completed.

Teachers generally favor the idea of working in a new facility, Pelham adds. "They have to work here every day and deal with the inadequacies of an old Cellmark claims there is a 1 in a trillion chance that two people would share the same genetic fingerprint its technique can produce. The world's population is only 5 billion.

"I think it's a strong psychological impact when you can exclude the world's population," said David J. Green, technical director for Cellmark.

Since case was the first in which a conviction was obtained using a genetic fingerprint, the technique has been used in many cases before.

"The results are so devastating that in most cases they (suspects) agree to a plea bargain" rather than fight the charges and plead not guilty, said Terry.

According to Pelham, "Our kids need more than we can provide by continuing in housing like this." He also says the school has to prepare for growth. "We now have 770 students," he says. "I think we're going to have a considerable increase by the time this school is rebuilt."

One possibility Pelham does not oppose would be the possibility of moving historic mementos from the main building into some of the new buildings. He notes there are several frescoes on the front of the building that might be preserved, as well as the cornerstone. The thespian masks in the auditorium might also be preserved, he says.

Teachers generally favor the idea of working in a new facility, Pelham adds. "They have to work here every day and deal with the inadequacies of an old building. They're looking forward to the day they can set up their classroom material the way they want to. Right now, it's a hodge-podge—a lot of shifting," he explains.

Students too, seem to want a new building, according to Pelham. He said many students are interested in examining the proposed architectural drawings of the new complex. "The biggest disappointment for the kids is that those who are here now, probably won't get to see it—except maybe for the sixth graders," he says.

I told Mr. Maddison I was confused. I thought that we had a lot of unemployment.

"Of course we have unemployment. But we've also got full employment! Look, we could never have zero unemployment, right? I mean, some people are always going to be moving between jobs. We NEED to have SOME unemployment. So we've got to figure out how much unemployment is consistent with full employment. That's the NARU. You've heard of the NARU, haven't you?"

I hazarded a guess. Was he the prime minister of India?

"No, no, no! That's Nehru. This is NARU. It stands for the non-accelerating inflation rate of unemployment. It's the lowest unemployment you can get without causing the inflation rate to take off. The Congressional Budget Office says that the NARU for this year is 5.7 percent unemployment. We just made it to 5.6 percent last month! We've passed the full employment mark for the first time since 1974!"

"Do you think we'll need a spotlight on each Rockette, or will the stage lights be OK? Wow! Can you imagine the electricity, the excitement of this moment?"

I told Mr. Maddison that I didn't know very many people who were very excited.

"Not excited? You're kidding, right? Ha, ha! Not excited about achieving full employment? We're talking big, here. B-1-G, big! Do you suppose we can have fluorescent balloons going off with the fireworks?"

I left Mr. Maddison may be on to the sleeper of the year, Happy Full Employment.

I have a job I like, thanks to a state university education subsidized by people who, ye gods, were probably some of the same folks who worked on the simplified tax forms. And thanks, too, to parents who started out with nothing and were given the chance to make a life full of all the comforts it takes to be happy. They had a fighting chance. They passed it on to me.

I have satisfying relationships with people I care for. I can think what I want and write what I want, with the blessing and protection of the U.S. Constitution. I'm not worried about the handful of fearmongers who would like to stuff those rights into Fawn Hall's shredder, because ultimately, I don't think they can win.

Really, I'm not getting soft. I understand it's still as much my duty to protect these freedoms as it is to enjoy them, and that I have an obligation to work toward jail terms for tax simplifiers. It's just that this seems as appropriate a time to be thankful as in November, when I'm officially supposed to be. I never was very good at doing things when I was supposed to.

Merry Christmas, America. Hurry it through the processing centers and run with it. I'll be watching where it goes, but I won't miss it. It's already been a bargain.

Wolves: When will pack be back?

By Elizabeth Pennell
TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — The wild wolf once ranged freely everywhere, from New York's sand dunes to California's coast, from Montana's glaciers to the U.S.-Mexican border. Now, the furred hunter is threatened with extinction.

Yet efforts to bring wolves back in North Carolina, the Southwest and the Northern Rockies have had mixed results and have sparked criticism from pro-wolf and anti-wolf factions.

While environmentalists and conservationists want to reestablish wolves in the wild, ranchers and farmers are concerned about the wolves' appetite for cattle and sheep. Because wolves are a protected species, ranchers are prohibited from trying to shoot or otherwise dispatch them to their maker.

Presenting another complaint are wildlife experts, who say efforts to reestablish the wolf in the wild are too slow and caught up in bureaucracy and that the government is not taking a strong enough stand against groups opposing their reintroduction.

"I think there is every strong sentiment in favor of the wolf," said Stephen R. Kellert, professor of forestry and environmental studies at Yale University in New Haven, Conn.

"But the agencies responsible tend to be far more responsive to the very small number of vocal opponents. They haven't had the courage to do what needs to be done."

Courage in the federal government is probably not be the issue for Joe Helle, a sheep rancher in Dillon, Mont., who said simply: "I fear for my livestock."

Three kinds of wolves once roamed the United States. These include two subspecies of gray wolf, the Mexican and the Northern or timber wolf. The grays are larger than the red wolf, which may have been the only wolf to have evolved completely in North America.

The red wolf, whose actual color varies from black to cinnamon red and gray, and the Mexican gray wolf tend to travel alone or in pairs, while timber wolves form six- or seven-member packs.

By 1967, federal predator control programs were stopped and the red wolf was declared an endangered species. The Fish and Wildlife Service adopted a recovery plan, the first for an endangered species, in 1972.
