Absentee Workers Are Big Problem To War Industry

By WENDELL LUND
Director, Labor Production Division, War Production Board

Absenteeism in war industry is not the simple problem of one pay day's work. It is a problem which swells waiting lists for work, and it is a problem which makes it difficult to get the most out of the workers.

For example, Mary Smith was a department supervisor in an airplane factory in Los Angeles. Part of her work was to keep the schedule. She was efficient and her workers respected her. But troubles piled up at home. Her husband was away at a battle in another factory. Her sister managed to keep an eye on her three youngsters, but she herself didn't get much chance to be with them. Stores in her neighborhood closed at 6 p. m. She didn't get home until 7. It was pretty tough to shop. And then she was behind. She hadn't had a chance to get housework done. Dirty laundry was piling up. The vacuum set came down with a cold. She stayed home two days to catch up.

John Brown worked on the ship yards at Newport News. "Batted" it in a noisy, crowded rooming house. Exhausted from the strain of a job new to him, he couldn't get enough rest off shift. His only acquaintances were nearby workers in the plant. His family, wife and two children, were in Charleston, W. Va. They couldn't find a place in Newport. Spring came, with it hot weather. Brown's day off was Sunday. This particular one, he hopped a train for Charleston to spend the day with his family. Getting a rest at home was so good that he stayed three days. He figured it was worth losing two days' pay but a cost of $1.00. Bam! Two days of needed work gone.

Those are just two examples of the causes of absenteeism in the American war industry. The problem today is a problem that can be solved only one way through community cooperation in the "boom-towns" which have mushroomed since the war.

That very mushrooming, a government survey recently showed in the rest areas behind the mounting tide of absenteeism. It's a problem involving housing shortage; lack of time for needed shopping; inadequate transportation; care of a married woman trying to do her job and run her home, too.

The War Production Board and War Manpower Commission are seeking cooperation of civic and public agencies on health, housing, transportation, recreation and other problems in the community and are solving "in-plant" problems through more than 2,000 plant labor-management committees.

Efforts are made to approach each problem in a positive way. One firm put German workers in the pay envelopes of absentees with the explanation that this was "Hitler's" payment for the day you took. That method flopped, because there was no way of telling whether a death or serious illness might not have struck responsibly the absentee. If such were the case, it only made the worker angry.

Another firm achieved considerable success in hitting unnecessary absence by holding drawings on unspecified days with prizes going to the winners. If they were on the regular.

Many firms have cut absenteeism by having soldiers and

Typical Housewife Chosen By OPA To Help Ration Plans

By MARGARET KRRODLE
WASHINGTON, Mar. 30. (AP) OPA's typical housewife, Mrs. Philip L. Crowley, of Huron, South Dakota, runs a tractor, rides a horse and reads public library books almost by the bushel. She thinks she's typical because she spent 20 years raising three children, never had a maid (only an occasional servant when the children were babies) and graduated into community service as her children grew up. When she came to Washington a few days ago, she had cut her housekeeping to three hours a day and was way out front in fixing up the farm situation in South Dakota, particularly in her home county, Beadle.

The western rancher's daughter never met Public Administrator Prentiss Brown until a national woman's organization recommended her as the housewife to represent American women in OPA policy making and interpretation.

In her white cotton dress, shoes, tweed skirt and her No. 17 coupon shoes (as much like boots as possible), she looks like a grown-up all-American outdoors girl. Her eyes are blue, and her brown hair rolls back from her face.

When she appeared at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference, she wore a chic, two-year-old hat which she bought because the winds of South Dakota couldn't blow it off. She has such glowing natural color in her cheeks that she needs little makeup. Her wedding ring is plain gold. She wears no other jewelry and no nail polish.

Mrs. Crowley says her paternal grandparents got to South Dakota by ox team and her mother and grandparents by flat-bottom boat from Tennessee. She rode a horse with a western saddle and one-half mile to school, and though nothing of riding 25 to 30 miles horseback in a divided skirt before she came east for the job. She insists postmen on a horse would kill her and save eastern horses seem stiff-legged.

Mr. Crowley is manager of a clinic and hospital in their home town. Their second son, John, is a junior in high school, he with Dick, who enlisted in the U. S. Army, is at Fort Knox, Ky., and their daughter, Mary Jane, 12, is in private school at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

"I'm not a technical person," she insists, "but I've analyzed the problems involved in her new job from her 20 years of 'buying food, preparing it myself, serving it and cleaning up afterward.'"

While Father O'Brien was studying the figure, called "A Concept of Justice," Mr. Roche, who is a lawyer, approached and explained how he came to represent the noble virtue by an ugly plotting female.

He said that in his work as a lawyer he had seen cases where bribery, corruption, power and privilege wrote the verdict instead of the facts and the principles of law. He determined to represent a caricature of justice

Government Uses Farm Workers To Produce War Food

By ROBERT GRIGER
AP Features Writer

FORT LUTON, Colo. Mar. 30. Thirty mule-driving cotton-tobacco packers have been sent to Arkansas to grow war food in sun-dried Colorado. It's the first contingent of 60,000 American families that the war will uproot this year in a campaign to solve the farm manpower problem of raising foods desperately needed at home and an world wide battlefront.

The U. S. government is sponsoring the mass migrations. The 60,000 families will be scattered throughout the country where farm help is needed and where they may produce war foods with maximum efficiency. They will come from regions where there is drought, a labor surplus or other unfavorable conditions.

They are year-round farm hands and will be placed in more or less permanent jobs, bringing their families with them. Some are migratory workers, as the government has another plan for the migrators.

For the Arkansians it was an overnight reversal of living conditions and habits. With a mile or two they grew corn, cotton, tobacco or hay in Arkansas. Most of their farms were from 30 to 60 acres. Some never had been higher than 1,000 feet above sea level in their lives.

At Fort Lupton they are a mile high. Two-mile high peaks of the peaks of the Rockies, snow frosted, form a backdrop for the farm fields. They're going to work on Colorado ranches spread over as much as 1,000 acres. They will handle cattle, help grow sugar beets or vegetables and they'll be driving tractors, not mules.

"There's no reason why we won't make good Colorado farm hands," said Silas M. May, father of 10 children who has farmed in Arkansas 20 years.

"Many of my friends said it was foolish for me to try this new life at my age. But I say farming is farming, no matter where you are."

Another of the farmers, Garner Jenkins, neighbor of May in Independence county, Arkansas, said:

"Maybe we won't be entirely happy. But we can farm! That's the important thing."

Cost of the migrations is borne by the government. As soon as the farmers reach the new region, they go to school for two weeks. In Colorado the Arkansians had to learn how to irrigate, talk practice seldum necessary in their home state.

Farmers who need ranch hands may visit camps in which the migrating workers are housed. The farmer and his prospective hired hand deal directly with each other, not through the government, in making their working agreement.

Farmer E. B. Davis of Fort Lupton needed a hand and he visited the farm school where the Arkansians were in training.

Spotting John Hutson of Fulton county, Arkansas, six feet tall and a two hundred pounder, Davis smiled. He felt Hutson's arm muscle. "You're good enough for me," said he. And they went into a huddle.

In 1870 during whiskey riots in Brooklyn, N. Y., local authorities called for the U. S. Marines to assist in the destruction of illicit stills.

Perverved Justice Is Caricatured In Wood Carving

SOUTH BEND, Ind. Mar. 30. On a visit to Palacio de Bellas Artes in Mexico City, Mexico, the Rev. John A. O'Brien, Ph.D., LL.D., of South Bend's University of St. Joseph, is carving in wood by Carlos Husarek Roche, of Jalapa in the Mexican state of Vera Cruz.

While Father O'Brien was studying the figure, called "A Concept of Justice," Mr. Roche, who is a lawyer, approached and explained how he came to represent the noble virtue by an ugly plotting female.

He said that in his work as a lawyer he had seen cases where bribery, corruption, power and privilege wrote the verdict instead of the facts and the principles of law. He determined to represent a caricature of justice by a figure crooked in every line of her body with the long, covetous fingers of one hand stretching out for all that could be reached and with the left hand clutching close to her side the secret bribe. As a result of this determination the sculptor produced the terrible looking figure

Nazi Manhunters Comb Mountains For Norwegian Patriots

Rjukan Siege Is On As Wave Of Sabotage Flourishes Also In Denmark

(By Associated Press)
In Norway, 3,000 Nazi-led manhunters combed the mountains for patriot saboteurs and the partial siege of Rjukan was reported.

A growing wave of sabotage against the German occupation forces has produced a "critical" situation in Denmark and it is believed that the sabotage may reach a high point in a few days, informed Danish sources here last night.

It has been learned that the Germans are threatening to introduce brutal measures, heretofore absent in Denmark, namely death penalties, rounding up hostages and the levying of communal fines unless patriot outbursts cease.

Reports reaching Stockholm say that Maj. Gen. Hermann von Hanneken, commander of the Nazi occupation army, threatened such reprisals at a meeting in the Nydøder Hills schoolhouse in Copenhagen, on February 27. The fact that the Germans waited this long to act, it was explained, indicates that they first wanted to build up a propaganda case such as the recent warnings in the Danish press against sabotage.

Reliable Danish sources in London reported Tuesday that sabotage in Denmark has spread to such an extent that the Nazis are threatening to eliminate Danish control of the civil administration. This first step in "unknown causes" was said to have occurred in the past three months. In addition, the Danish artillery barracks recently were destroyed in part by fire.

Halfway Mark Is Reached In Red Cross Campaign

Southern Section Of County Has Gone Over Set Quota

The halfway mark in the Red Cross campaign has been reached, Ned Smith, chairman, stated today and added that the southern section of Seminole County has reached 50 percent over its quota. The county goal is $8,500.

Among the towns that over-subscribed to the drive were Slavia, with 12 percent over its quota, Geneva with 10 percent over the quota, and Paola with a little less than 10 percent over the quota set for it.

Not only the head of each household, but also each individual in the family should contribute to the drive war effort, Mr. Smith said. He advised prospective donors not to wait for campaign leaders to contact them, but to send in their donations and to alleviate the work of canvassers, and save gas and tires on their cars.

March was officially designated campaign month, he added. "But on account of the later start here, it will run over into April. Money, however, should be sent as soon as possible, as the need is urgent on account of the war."

In view of the progress made, Mr. Smith stated that he believed the goal would be reached by April 10.

New Wholesale Price Ceiling Put On Veal

WASHINGTON, March 31, (AP)—The Office of Administration prescribed Tuesday new packer-wholesale maximum for veal, preparatory to setting up a new system of retail prices.

Within a week or two, the agency expects to issue uniform retail prices on beef, veal, lamb and mutton, similar to the standard prices on pork effective Thursday. Under this pricing system, maximum prices on meat will be the same in all stores of the same type in the same area, instead of each store's having a different legal maximum as at present.

Preparatory to the system, however, OPA has been trying to standardize packer and wholesale prices. Price regulations have been issued previously on packer-wholesale sale of pork, beef, lamb and mutton.

The new veal ceiling will go into effect Saturday and generally is similar to the beef regulations. The same 10 cents and other general methods of control in the beef regulation are used. Also, the maximum prices for the Chicago market are the same on veal as they are on beef.

Few Quakers Object To Military Service

PHILADELPHIA, March 31, (AP)—Two members of the peace-loving society of Friends (Quakers) are opposing the armed forces for every one that serves a civilian public service camp on a conscientious objector, a committee reported to the Arch Street Friends at an annual meeting.

Celery Man Says Product's Price Is Fairly Good

County Crops Bring About $2.75 To $3.25 Per Crate

Despite reports of lower prices being offered by buyers for celery, M.L. Cullum, sales manager for a produce company, stated today that he saw no ground for pessimism regarding this crop. He pointed out that according to his figures, celery was selling for a fair price, $2.75 to $3.25 a crate, and that the movement was upward.

During the week ending March 20, Mr. Cullum said, 167 crates of celery were shipped from the state, dropping to a shipment of 396 crates by the end of the next week. He predicted that around 375 crates would be shipped this week, or between 50 and 60 crates a day. California shipments, he stated, have dropped to but four or five crates a day.

While considerably off grade in quality, this condition of celery is general in all sections, he added, and buyers find good quality celery very scarce.

Veterans Of Crete Battling In Africa

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Mar. 31, (AP)—

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Mar. 31, (AP)—Two Imperial forces staked in the bitter struggle for Crete, New Zealanders who fought on Crete and the 5th Highlanders who escaped from France in 1940, led the brilliant flanking movement which made possible the Greek victory at the Mareth Line, it was disclosed yesterday.

It was an operation of such audacity and such difficulty that even an astute desert fighter as Field Marshal Erwin Rommel apparently never even suspected it would be tried. When he realized his oversight it was too late and the Mareth Line was doomed.

For 10 days, the New Zealanders labored across 200 miles of desert and mountains to move thousands of armored and motorized vehicles up to the outskirts of El Hamma, waging minor battles with Axis outpost troops in the moonlight, often at hand-to-hand combat.

Then the New Zealanders stormed El Hamma itself, and after a violent week-end battle during which Rommel pulled out of his Mareth positions, they broke the Axis defenses and raced seaward to complete the South Tunisian victory with the capture of Gabes.

Depending on the age and part of the vehicle, the price will be reconditioned, the percentage will range from 20 to 47.5 percent. This action was taken, the OPA said, to halt the speculation which has boomed prices.

Federal Factory Turns Out First Synthetic Rubber

30,000 Tons Yearly Can Be Produced In Single Plant

BATON ROUGE, La., Mar. 31, (AP)—A new plant today turned out the government's first synthetic rubber, a product to be produced in quantities of 30,000 tons yearly from a minimum of strategic materials. The 10,000-ton annual capacity, enough rubber for 1,000,000 tires, is the first plant built for the government under an atomic energy program to make synthetic rubber from petroleum. Private industry has had some plants in operation.

The building, constructed with a minimum of steel and other critical materials, is to be built with mixtures of liquid and gas, which turned out synthetic rubber needed by the army and navy in fighting the Axis.

United by government expert on hand for the year, the plant is the first of a series of plants to be built in Louisiana, which is being rushed to construction well ahead of schedule. Buildings were skillfully erected on a permanent basis, deliberately balanced on metal and glacial sand, which were made to accommodate petroleum distillates and serving chemicals.
