Sanford Extends Cable TV Franchise By DONNA ESTES

Herald Staff Writer

Cable television service will continue to be supplied to the Sanford area for the next 10 years or longer by Seminole Cablevision. Inc. The Sanford City Commission Monday night gave preliminary approval to an extension of the current nine-and-a-half-year old franchise arrangement with the company for another decade, with options to renew for two more decades.

A major reason for extending the franchise agreement rather than adopting a new one is to continue income to the city of a 9 percent franchise fee.

City Manager Warren Knowles said a new contract, under new Federal Communications Commission regulations, would permit only a 3 percent franchise fee on the firm's annual business activity.

The new contract permits the company to request approval from the city commission for no more than one rate increase to its customers annually and that increase must be pegged to the federal Consumer Price Index (CPI) for the previous 12-month period. No rate change has been approved by the city for the past five years.

Cablevision, said the Sanford system is being expanded from 10 to 30 channels. The current franchise agreement was to have expired in September. The commission authorized Mayor Lee P. Moore to execute the contract documents when minor language in the agreement is clarified. The commission must adopt an ordinance before the franchise becomes effective. The number of major crimes committed in Seminole County increased by 17.9 percent in 1979 according to this year's edition of Crime in Florida, the state Department of Law Enforcement's annual survey of criminal activity.

That increase is larger than the reported increase of 12.1 percent statewide. But when measured against Seminole's growing population, the crimes per-person rate only rose 6.7 percent in the last calendar year.

Despite the increase in the number of crimes, the number of arrests in the county dropped in 1979 by 3.2 percent - down to 5.276 for the year.

Over a thousand of those arrested were under 18, the report Seminole County Sheriff John Polk said Monday he has not yet seen a copy of the annual report, and could not comment on the figures until he did. But Polk said the report the county only cleared and closed out 15 percent of all cases, against a statewide average of 22.3 percent, may be due to the fact no new detectives have been added to the county force in two years, despite the rise in both crime rate and the increase in size of the population. Polk said he would be asking the county for 11 new officers when he prepared his fiscal 1961 budget (see related story, Page 1A).

Give Federal Judges Raise, Rules Federal Judge Smith

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Federal judges should have received a 12.9 percent pay raise last year when government executive and judicial salaries were increased by only 5.5 percent, a federal judge has ruled. Judge John Lewis Smith Jr. ruled Monday in favor of a suit brought last year against President Carter by William Foley, director of the administrative office of the U.S. courts - the administrative arm of the federal court system. Last year, the judges declined to accept the 5.5. percent government pay raise approved by Congress because they would have had to waive the full 12.9 percent increase they argued they were entitled to.

AUGUSTA, Mich. (UPI) - A research scientist who four years ago received a "Golden Fleece" award from Sen. William Proxmire, has won $10,000 and a public apology from the Wisconsin Democrat in a unique out-of-court settlement.

As part of the settlement, Proxmire was to make a speech on the Senate floor today acknowledging that many of the charges made in his original Golden Fleece award against Dr. Ronald R. Hutchinson and his monkey-research project were not true.

Hutchinson, currently president of the Foundation for Behavioral Research, said he has read every word of Proxmire's public apology and considers it a "statesmanlike" response.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Commerce Depart ment Monday rejected a claim by Florida growers that Mexico has been "dumping" winter tomatoes and other vegetables in U.S. markets at unfairly low prices.

Florida growers associations had sought the imposition of anti-dumping duties against Mexican winter tomatoes, cucumbers, eggplant, peppers and squash entering this country.

Officials said the department's decision rules out such duties as far as the executive branch of the government is concerned, although the Florida growers still could appeal to the courts. For the American consumer, the decision means ower vegetable prices than if it had gone the other

The Acid Test In Illinois Bout

Nothing is certain in life, and especially in politics. Nevertheless, the political reality er. erging from Illinois' presidential primary is that, come November, Ronald Reagan probably will head the Republican ticket challenging president Carter's record in office.

There is no denying the significance of the Illinois vote, the losers' reckless contentions to the contrary notwithstanding. That major state, with its urban-rural mix in the heartland of America, is properly regarded as an important, perhaps decisive, litmus of the 1980 presidential primaries.

Moreover, Illinois was a really big one because naysayers have denigrated earlier primary results elsewhere: Little New Hampshire was not representative they said. Liberal Massachusetts was Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's home turf. The overwhelming Carter-Reagan victories in of thousands of independents and Democrats Florida, Georgia and Alabama reflected Southern loyalties to Mr. Carter and Southern conservatism to Reagan.

And the primaries had progressed to the point - having previously eliminated John Connally, Howard Baker and Robert Dole on the Republican Gov. Ronald W. Reagan. side - where George Bush and John Anderson had to stop Reagan in Illinois or be lost in the backwaters and where Sen. Kennedy had to stay Reagan's 48 percent win, which was as much as his two rivals received together was particularly impressive in light of the cross-over system in surrounding the city - but those margins Illinois that permitted large numbers of independents and Democrats to vote Republican and distort the results. Instead of benefiting Rep. Anderson in his home state, perhaps to the point of victory as had been widely assumed, a substantial percentage of the independents and moderates went for Reagan, swelling his margin of victory. Another unusual consequence was that sizeable numbers of liberal Democrats crossed over and voted for Anderson, thereby reducing Sen. Kennedy's expected totals and strengthening President Carter's 2-to-1 victory.

As Reagan slugs it out with verve and vigor in primary after primary, the age issue that has haunted him has faded. And, as in New Hamp- the polling stations offer virtually identical Russian troops in Afghanistan. They have shire where he ran better than any non-incumbent of either party in the history of that contested primary, Reagan also continues his remarkable advance against those who underestimate his campaign capacities and insist he can't win. He is confounding his rivals, not to say political observers, by holding his conservative core and building upon it with substantial support from moderates, independents and middle-income

Even though President Carter has won percent of the delegates up for grabs thus far, and Ronald Reagan has captured 60 percent, their rivals have vowed to battle all the way to the workers and members of their families, living invading Afghanistan, we should not lose convention, presumably in the hope that events, a in Chicago's South Side and northwest corner. sight of the energy crisis. The Commuter monumental error, or fate could still deliver the Nevertheless, we may expect the campaigning to become less intra party and to become more interparty.

In any event, as things are shaping up, the American people will be presented in November with the clearest choice in this generation between conservative and liberal economic and political philosophies. Thus far President Carter and Ronald Reagan have survived the pitiless primary process as the fittest contenders of their respective parties. Their forthcoming showdown should define domestic and foreign issues more clearly than bipartisan ineptitude thus far has managed to do.

The voters are restless, politics are volatile, and this could be an interesting election year.

The turnout in the Republican primary was exactly what Anderson had sought — up from slightly more than 775,000 in 1976 to better than 1.1 million this year, an increase of more than 335,000 or almost 45 percent.

Most of those new voters apparently were independents, but evidence that many were Democrats comes from turnout totals in that party's primary - down from more than 1.3 million in 1976 to less than 1.2 million this year, a decline of more than 125,000 or almost

Red China Has ICBM To Reach U.S.

Chinese have corrected major problems they have been having with this missile ... The CSS-X-4, a large, two-stage missile, is China's only missile with true intercontinental range, and it is clearly the key to a Chinese ICBM force. It is not, however, expected to become operational as an ICBM for several years.

"The CSS-X-4 will probably be able to carry a thermo-nuclear warhead about 7,000 miles or place a missile weighing approximately 5,000 pounds into a low earth orbit."

When Rep. Pat Shcroeder, D-Colo., heard that a Selective Service report existed which contradicted the president's claim that draft registration was needed, she asked the White House for a copy. Sorry, the Carter people said, the report had been lost.

Outraged, the congresswoman filed a Freedom of Information Act request for all documents relating to Carter's controversial draft-registration decision. More than a month later. Schroeder was told that White . House lawyers had completed their review of the documents, and that she could drop by for a look - at some of them. NEW YORK (NEA) - Late this summer, crews representing the U.S. defender and five challengers will gather in Newport, R.I., to compete for the America's Cup, perhaps the oldest and most prestigious sports trophy in the world.

The ornate silver symbol of supremacy in 12-meter yacht racing dates from 1851, when the schooner "America," representing the New York Yacht Club, defeated 14 British rivals in a 60-mile race around the Isle of Wight off the English coast. Since that time, yachts representing England, Ireland, Scotland, Australia, France and, most recently, Sweden have made a total of 22 unsuccessful attempts to lift the cup from the United States.

Challenges for the America's Cup - which may not be made more frequently than every third year - capture the imagination and attention of millions of sports enthusiasts, only a few of whom can define the difference between a winch and a genoa jib.

Even fewer are more than remotely aware of the role played by modern technology in enhancing the skills, experience and competitiveness of the wind-bronzed men who crew these sleek yachts.

In fact, modern challenges for the cup represent significant applications of advanced technologies in many fileds: hull design, hydrodynamics, hydraulics, metallurgy, sail construction and design, mechanical equipment and use of computers to maximize a boat's performance.

One of the most useful tools available to the designer of a 12-meter boat is the model towing tank in which scale models have been tested since 1931. Originally, crude scales were affixed to a model of the hull. As the model was towed through the water, the designer walked alongside the tank, recording the action of the needle on the resistance scale.

Today the crude scales have been superseded by sophisticated sensors that feed information to a computer.

Using this data, the designer can determine such factors as hull resistance, stability, side force on the hull and location of the center of water force. Various types of water conditions - from smooth to extremely rough can be simulated with great accuracy. Computers played a key role in the design of the Swedish challenger "Sverige" in 1977. Data processing was used in developing and testing several scale models and in the actual construction of the hull and keel. Blueprints for the final design were enlarged to full scale with the aid of a computer. And the frame of the hull was cut from sheet aluminum by computer-controlled form-milling cutters in Volvo's experimental workshop.

Throughout construction, the Swedish Technical Control Institute inspected the welding of the hull by means of X-ray photography and ultrasonic testing in addition to its visual control. Of all the details of construction of a 12-meter yacht, the design and fabrication masts are possibly the most critical. Despite the use of special metal alloys and sophisticated production techniques, the masts of these boats have a disquieting tendency to fail.

The reason is not difficult to understand since the spars are subject to tremendous forces. Under normal racing conditions, they can bend as much as 11/2 feet from the ver-

The search for new technologies to assure the construction of dependable masts, most of which are made of aluminum alloys, is

In 1977, the designers of the U.S. boat "Enterprise" tried a new approach.

Their mast was constructed in two sections, with the upper section 55 feet long. Rather than follow the normal practice of cutting and welding, the designers specified that the upper section be tapered by pulling an aluminum tube through a die and rollers.

Without welds to weaken the material, the aluminum retained its full strength throughout the length of the section.

The rigging developed for the "Enterprise" was also noteworthy since it illustrated how technology developed in one field can be applied in a totally different one. In this in- have little chance for victory without a skilled and stance, the designers relied on a nickel-cobalt experienced crew.

Successful sailing combines technology with craftsmanship.

Space age technologies have done much to optimize the performance of America's Cup competitors. But even the most advanced yachts like this Swedish boat named the "Sverige" -
