Longwood Man Gets 35 Years In Shooting Death Of Boy

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A Cuban refugee who valued his credit rating more than his family life was sentenced to 35 years Thursday for the second-degree murder of a 7-year-old boy.

Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor also ordered that Osvaldo Lorenzo Acosta receive counseling "as to the value of human life as contrasted to the more material things in life." Acosta, 50, of 226 Berkshire Circle, Longwood, was stone still during the sentencing. He could have received 40 years.

Acosta pleaded no contest Dec. 11 to killing Roldy Aragon, wounding the boy's mother and sister, Miss Margarita Montero, 33, and Lourdes Aragon, 15, and shooting inside a home. The couple's infant son was uninjured in the attack.

"What troubles me here, is that Mr. Acosta was involving the children who were totally innocent with the problems of the adults," said McGregor of the June 29 shooting.

"Why direct anger and frustration towards them. They're innocent. I could better understand if Miss Montero was the decedent," he said.

According to testimony, it was deteriorating finances, a rumpled 10 days in a motel, and a drinking bout that changed an upstanding family man into a child killer.

Acosta, testifying at the hearing in the Seminole County courthouse in Sanford, said he was a successful Miami businessman who moved to Orlando in 1985 for a fresh start. He had a small brush with the law in Dade County and chose Orlando because of its growing economy and low crime rate, he said. He started a car repair and sales business but it was running poorly and by June he owed creditors $20,000. He decided to sell his Longwood house to pay off the debts but Miss Montero refused to let a realtor into the house, he said. Acosta and Miss Montero argued. He left for 10 days, sleeping in a motel and eating at restaurants. He even tried to give the house to a realtor to sell it without Miss Montero's approval, he said, though she had no legal right to the house. Acosta was also behind in his income tax filing.

Launch Over, Protest Vigil To Continue

ORLANDO — "You may call me Periwinkle."

That was the response of Jane Doe 9 to U.S. Magistrate Donald P. Dietrich Thursday afternoon during the initial appearance of two anti-missile activists arrested Wednesday for trespassing on Patrick Air Force Base. John Doe 5 and Jane Doe 9 followed the pattern of most of the others arrested in not identifying themselves.

Anti-nuclear activists at Cape Canaveral vowed to maintain their protest vigil today with a rally and the anticipated arrival of Dr. Benjamin Spock to lead demonstrations against Trident-2 missile tests and deployment.

But the call went out for advocates of a strong national defense to join a counter-demonstration at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station under the banner "Peace Through Strength."

The Navy successfully completed its first test launch Thursday of the new Trident-2 long-range nuclear missile while protesters screamed, cried and threw themselves to the ground to simulate nuclear war death. About 38 protesters were at the gate of Cape Canaveral Air Force station when the launch occurred at 10:25 a.m.

At least 19 more test firings are scheduled from the cape, and up to seven sea-based tests are planned before the missiles are deployed in 1989 aboard Ohio-class submarines.

In the courtroom, Judge Dietrich requested identification

King Stamp Use Halted

After Grandparent Complains

By Deane Jordan
Herald Staff Writer

A complaint from the relative of a student at Goldsboro Elementary School in Sanford prompted teachers to stop using a reward hand stamp with the likeness of Martin Luther King Jr.

The incident occurred Wednesday, the day before King's actual birthday and a few days before federal employees celebrate the holiday next Monday, a federal holiday in King's honor. There is no school in Seminole County Monday, but teachers will be working.

According to school district spokesman Karen Coleman, teachers frequently use hand stamps to reward children or highlight class activities. This week elementary schools throughout the county held events about King, including essay and

...teachers' made the decision to stop using them on their own individual judgment.

poster contests, speeches and readings. As a result of one of those activities, students in a class at Goldsboro received a stamp on their hands

A grandparent of one student telephoned Ken Bovio, director of elementary education for the county, and complained that the King stamp was on the child's hand, Mrs. Coleman said. The child is white.

Bovio telephoned Goldsboro principal Leroy Johnson who then held a staff meeting to discuss the incident. As a result of that meeting, the use of the stamp has been discontinued, Mrs. Coleman said. Johnson said there was no particular reason given for stopping the use of the hand stamp, but "they (teachers) made the decision to stop using them on their own individual judgment."

In a related incident, a Sanford woman and friend are trying to get a petition drive going to have schools close on King's birthday and not on designated Mondays, as is the case with federal employees.

Rosie Perkins of Sanford, who said she objected as a parent of school age children to students not being able to have their hands stamped with the King likeness. She also said she thought it was wrong, as is the case this year, to celebrate King's Jan. 15 birthday on Jan. 19.

Besides the petitions, Mrs. Perkins and her friend, Jackie Stephens, said they are thinking about getting stickers for the kids to wear asking for the change in celebration day.

Awaiting Transport

Paramedics attend to Bert Conant, 22, of Sanford following a car-motorcycle accident Thursday at 1 p.m. In front of the Sanford Police Station. Passenger on Conant's motorcycle, Avo Kubar, 23, of Sanford, received minor injuries and was treated and released. Conant was admitted to Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment of a fracture. Conant was southbound on U.S. Highway 17-92, police said, when a Chevy driven by Martha L. Potter, 28, Deltona, started to drive across the southbound lane heading north. The motorcycle struck the left front fender of the car. Potter was charged with violation of right of way and Conant's license.

Sanford Parking Ideas Get Scrutiny

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

The pros and cons of a deck parking lot and parking meters in downtown Sanford were debated during the two hours community representatives spent with a traffic consultant at Sanford city hall Wednesday.

Springboard for the discussion, which also considered possible installation of parking meters and traffic light signalization on First Street, was the preliminary draft of a downtown Sanford parking and traffic study.

The city is paying a private consulting firm $12,500 for the study. In effort to get the most out of the firm's services, city staff arranged for one of its consultants, Jack Freeman, to meet with about 15 local representatives Wednesday.

The result "was a very productive session with plenty of positive input," said City Planner Jay Marder. "The suggestions that were offered will be very beneficial for development of the final product."

The plan is to address alleviation of present and anticipated traffic woes in the downtown area.

A list of "low cost" recommendations to improve present traffic and parking downtown is likely to result from Wednesday's session, Marder said. These proposals will include consideration of signage directing drivers to certain locations, such as government offices.

Wednesday's commentary will be packaged by city staff and there may be another meeting with the local representatives before this data goes back to the consulting firm, Marder said. A final draft, incorporating the input, should be presented by the firm to city commissioners within two months, he said.

Staff will then look to commissioners for direction about refining specific recommendations and coming up with a plan for implementation, Marder said.

Using various surveys and statistics, the study that downtown Sanford presently experiences "minor" parking problems in the First Street area. It also sees downtown Sanford pretty much built-out within the next 10 years and recommends courses of action, such as the parking deck, to alleviate the anticipated crunch.

Mayor Bettye Smith, city commissioners John Mercer and Whitley Eckstein and Seminole County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff attended Wednesday's session. Also present were representatives of downtown businesses and associations and marina Isle businessmen. The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce was represented by Executive Director Dave Farr and the downtown merchants association by President Margie Beine.

Sturm Seeks More Taxes For Roads

Seminole County Commissioner Bob Sturm presented a plan for raising transportation and road-building funds to the local legislative delegation Thursday, and it got some support from lawmakers.

Sturm asked that counties be allowed to raise gasoline tax to 10 cents a gallon and levy an extra penny sales tax.

Senate President John Vogt, D-Merritt Island, said the Florida Legislature will likely pass some increase in state or local gasoline taxes this year. But he didn't know if a raise above the 5-cent sales tax would be forthcoming.

Rep. Art Grindie, R-Altamonte Springs, delegation chairman, said he supported the gas tax as a user fee, and even more than 10 cents may be warranted. But he had some personal problems with the sales tax.

Sturm said it was very important that the legislators act due to the demise of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority at the ballot box. The MTA proposal that was soundly defeated by voters included a property tax provision.

Sturm said voters are looking for a plan that is affordable, broad-based and user-oriented like the sales and gasoline taxes.

Sturm said his proposal would raise an extra $40 million in gasoline taxes and $282 million in sales tax by 1997.

'Killer Bees' Could Reach South Texas By 1989

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (UPI) — "Killer bees" could invade south Texas by 1989 in their northward migration through Mexico, a Department of Agriculture official said, adding his agency has done nothing to repel the attack.

The bees' migration could bring devastation to the honey industry in the United States, and the USDA has "zero dollars" to combat the problem, said Milton Holmes of the USDA's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service, speaking to representatives of the American Honey Producers Association Wednesday.

Cross-breeding of the Africanized bees with American bees would make the domestic bees more aggressive, and methods used to eradicate the "killer bees" could endanger the American bees, Holmes said.

"The economic health of the honey industry and the beekeepers could be in jeopardy," he said. "If the Africanized bee is allowed to continue to migrate, it can out-compete and replace the American bee."

Since 1957, when 26 African queen bees escaped from captivity in Brazil, the bees have continued a steady northward march of about 200 miles per year through Central America and into Mexico, Holmes said, adding they would reach south Texas in two years.

The swarms are now in Chalapas, at the southernmost tip of Mexico, and are expected to move past the Isthmus of Tehuantepec on the southeast Pacific Coast of Mexico in the next 12 to 15 months, he said.

"Killer bees" got their name after "there were a number of human deaths in Brazil from massive sting incidents," said John Thomas, an entomologist with Texas A&M. "They have left a trail of deaths along their movement north."

Holmes said, "If (the swarm) marches up past the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and into Mexico City and Monterrey (100 miles south of the Texas border) and starts causing the same damages seen in Argentina and Brazil, what are we going to tell the people in Corpus Christi and the people of Houston?"

Industry leaders believe the Africanized honey bees may be controlled with genetics, but Holmes said the risk is too great. He said he favors aiding a Mexican barrier program to stave off the swarms through a complex set-up of queen replacements, drone flooding and bait hives — a program that would cost up to $17 million the first year.

Mexico, financially depressed by low oil prices, has offered to put up $4 million for the program and the Guatemalan government has agreed to join the program, but a Mexican barrier would have little chance of succeeding without U.S. government money, Holmes said.

Light Of Reform In U.N. Tunnel

For too long, the budgetary process of the United Nations has been a sorry spectacle. It is reassuring, therefore, that Congress and the Reagan administration finally got their act together and dropped a fiscal ax. Lo and behold, the light of reform shines at long last in the U.N. tunnel.

Last year, the United States stood up to the predictable chorus of shrieks from the Third World-Soviet bloc coalition and withheld $108 million of its 1986 assessment of $208 million. The U.N. General Assembly, confronted by the subsequent, shrunken travel expenses and other diminished perquisites, was forced to respond with some reform. Delegates voted recently to implement procedural and cost-cutting measures that U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters hailed as "really historic." The package paves the way for a dose of budgetary accountability — something the United Nations has thus far looked upon as an insulting concept.

It's important to note that, heretofore, the United States had almost no influence in the mysterious decision-making process that determined the size and distribution of its $208 million assessment (approximately 25 percent of the international body's entire budget). U.N. funding is based on a collectivist formula — from each according to its means and to each according to its ability to extract. So, for much of its existence, the U.N. treasury has been a Third World-Soviet pork barrel largely provided by the industrialized West.

Studies show that U.N. officials are better paid even than federal workers in the United States. In the U.N. Secretariat, for example, the more than 11,000 officials receive approximately 20 percent more than their federal counterparts. Consequently, would-be U.N. bureaucrats jostle each other for these positions like bidders at a potato market. In many cases the victors kick back part of their salaries to their bosses. According to Sen. Paul S. Trible, R-Va., the kickbacks have constituted an indirect U.S. subsidy to undeserving recipients in utterly unintended locales.

But from now on, a U.N. body called the Committee for Program and Coordination must decide on budgetary questions by consensus. And most of the developed countries, which pay a lion's share of the bills, will be represented on the panel. The new process also means that, perhaps for the first time, there will be a U.N. body that seriously examines the effectiveness of selected programs in conjunction with its budgets. This should do much to prevent shoveling funds into bloated programs which produce little beyond the salaries and expenses of the officials running them. And the committee can work toward directing resources into such worthy U.N. programs as the World Health Organization.

But the General Assembly reform is only a compromise, not an absolute victory. It's still possible that anti-West diehards will attempt to block any meaningful action by the oversight committee. If that happens, then the United States can reaply funding pressure. The real question is why Washington waited so long to require accountability in return for its massive support.

Democratic Caucus Should Un-Dump Aspin

On Jan. 22, the Democratic Party will send a message, wittingly or unwittingly, to the American electorate. The message will either be "Yes, we've been serious when we've been telling you that our party is strong on defense," or "No, we've only been kidding — soft-on-defense liberals still have a veto over our defense policy."

What happens on Jan. 22 is a meeting of the Congressional Democratic Caucus. The caucus will determine who will be the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee in the new Congress. That is the committee that plays a large role in spending, or not spending, about $300 billion per year to defend America.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., was the chairman of the committee in the last session. On Jan. 7, in a very rare action, the Democratic Caucus refused to retain Chairman Aspin. On an up-or-down vote Aspin lost by the narrow margin of 130-124. The caucus will vote again on the 22nd to see who the new chairman will be.

Several candidates have been mentioned. Some are more conservative than Aspin, some are more liberal — and Aspin himself is still in the running with a real chance to overturn the original verdict.

The key question is, why was Aspin dumped?

After all, it is pretty well acknowledged that he is probably the most competent, knowledgeable and experienced person in the Congress for the job. As always in these situations, there are some personal and political machinations going on, but the root reason is clear to those who know the situation. Some (not all) Democratic liberals are trying to mug Aspin because he didn't toe the line and pass all the liberal litmus tests. Aspin has the audacity and knowledge to think for himself. He has worked with and for liberals on many positions — many of which, by the way, I personally disagreed with. But Aspin has also had the effrontery to be for limited production of the MX missile, for a slightly higher defense budget than the liberals wanted and for aid to the contras.

For these sins, some far-out liberals feel, the asp has to be applied to Aspin. Never mind that his successor might be more conservative. These folks play politics like the old-fashioned radicals whose motto was "the worse the better." Bring down the temple, they say, flex the liberal veto and show who's the boss.

For, to them, Les Aspin's real sin is not that he's a conservative. He is a moderate-liberal who believes in the common sense proposition that we Americans live in a dangerous world, that history has put us in the role of leading the free world, and if we're to do that, we'd better be strong. It is a position that most Americans intuitively and wisely agree with.

What bugs the liberals is that Aspin proves that a political leader can be liberal on domestic issues and many foreign ones. In favor of reasonable arms control, and yet be realistic about the potential danger from Soviet imperialism. Such men can be politically dangerous. Such common-sense thinking can be contagious. Next thing you know even more Democrats might become convinced. It might be possible to have a party that wouldn't be split all over the lot on every foreign policy and defense issue. Aspin has worked hard to get some consensus between left and right, in the best interest of the party, and the country.

But some of the liberals want purity at all costs. Philip Burgess, former director of the Democratic Policy Commission, who has been through these sorts of wars, calls the Aspin incident "the har-kari impulse of the Democratic Party."

We shall see. Wait for Jan. 22. We will see if the Democrats are really serious about being prepared to capture the presidency and govern in a sensible way. Or whether they want to take yet one more stroll down suicide lane.

Regan Back In Saddle

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter
WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House chief of staff Donald Regan appears to have weathered the storm and is the man in charge again.

Regan, 67, a take-charge man, has incurred the wrath of many who refer to him as "Mr. Prime Minister." He was up against strong opposition, including first lady Nancy Reagan, who felt the president would be better served with a new team during the unfolding of the Iran arms scandal.

Republican leaders, close friends and political advisers of the president, including former deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver and a host of others, pleaded with Reagan to dump Regan, but Reagan stood fast.

In this respect he was in the tradition of Dwight D. Eisenhower, who was urged to fire Sherman Adams, his chief of staff, after revelations that Adams had helped a Boston industrialist and had received gifts from him.

"I need him," was Eisenhower's reply.

Later, however, Ike bowed to the clamor from political associates who felt that his administration was threatened in the scandal of that era.

Regan is loyal to those who serve him. After firing Lt. Col. Oliver North as a deputy national security adviser in the Iran arms-contras aid scandal, Regan called North a "national hero."

He has demonstrated the same loyal ties to others.

Deaver, who was like a son to him for 20 years, dating back to his California gubernatorial days, is under investigation for alleged conflict of interest since he left the White House and set up his own public relations firm. But the Reagans invited Deaver and his family to Christmas dinner at the White House.

But Regan is now acting like a man who has the job he obviously enjoys for another two years, or at least until he thinks the president is over the hump and has survived the scandal.

Sultan Never Gave $10 Million To Contras

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta
WASHINGTON — The Sultan of Brunel says the State Department lied when it claimed he had donated $10 million to aid the Nicaraguan contras, according to sources speaking for the Southeast Asian ruler.

State Department officials insist that a "third country's" money was intended for "the Nicaraguan resistance." But they maintain that Brunel has never been officially identified as the country that was imported to help with U.S. efforts in Central America.

In numerous published reports, however, Foggy Bottom officials have said that Hassanah Bolkliah, sultan of the tiny, oil-rich country and the world's wealthiest man, was told that any donation he made would go for non-military aid to the contras. But Brunel officials told us emphatically that the U.S. request was for humanitarian aid to the needy of Central America.

If the sultan had known that the $10 million was to be used to help the anti-Sandinista rebels, he would not have given the money, the Brunel officials told us. Though

President Unlinked

From the outset of the Iran controversy, it has been plain that any hope of damaging President Reagan personally hung by two slender threads: (1) establishing that the central purpose of the arms sales to Iran was to "trade arms for hostages" — which would allegedly violate our firm policy of not bargaining with terrorists, and/or (2) establishing that the president was aware of the alleged diversion of profits from the sales to provide illegal military aid to the Nicaraguan contras.

Several weeks have now gone by without the slightest evidence being adduced that the president knew about the alleged diversion. This, of course, has made it all the more important for the president's detractors to prove that obtaining the release of our hostages in Lebanon was the central purpose of the arms sales. President Reagan's explanation — that the sales were part of a broader attempt to develop friendlier relations with moderate elements in Iran — has been dismissed by his foes as so much eyewash.

Small wonder, then, that the White House has been eager to put before the American people two previously classified documents dated Jan. 17, 1986, one in which the president authorized arms sales to Iran, and a second in which national security adviser Adm. John Poindexter spelled out the reasons for doing so. If the Senate Intelligence Committee had released the report on its December hearings, the documents would undoubtedly have come to light that way. But the Senate Democrats are sitting grimly on that lid, well aware that the report's net effect is to exonerate the president.

So the White House released the documents itself, and the job of misinforming the American people about what they prove fell to Washington's liberal press corps. They asserted with a straight face that the documents demonstrate that the release of our hostages was central to the arms sales. They are lying through their teeth, knowing that most people will never read the documents themselves.

The second paragraph of the president's authorization defines the scope of the operation. Note the order of the listed purposes:

"Assist selected friendly foreign liaison services, third countries and third parties which have established relationships with Iranian elements, groups and individuals sympathetic to U.S. government interests and which do not conduct or support terrorist actions directed against U.S. persons, property or interests, for the purpose of: (1) establishing a more moderate government in Iran, (2) obtaining from them significant intelligence not otherwise obtainable, to determine the current Iranian government's intentions with respect to its neighbors and with respect to terrorist acts, and (3) furthering the release of the American hostages held in Beirut and preventing additional terrorist acts by these groups."

So there goes the ballgame. President Reagan never adopted a "policy of trading arms for hostages."

SCIENCE WORLD

Summer's Volcanic Disaster

By United Press International
A British scientific team has concluded the Lake Nyos disaster that killed or injured thousands in Cameroon last summer was caused by a massive surge of carbon dioxide from a submerged volcanic vent.

The gas, mixed with water mist and traces of poisonous hydrogen sulfide, swept through the valleys to the north of the lake and to communities beyond, "leaving a terrible toll of injury and death in its wake," the scientists said. More than 1,700 people were left "dead or dying."

Carbon dioxide can kill by displacing oxygen in the air and causing asphyxiation. The water vapor would hold the gas close to the ground.

The scientists reported in the journal Nature that late in the evening of Aug. 21, said the gas was released above a volcanic vent in the northeast corner of the lake.

The report was written by S.J. Freeth of the Department of Geology, University College of Swansea, and R.L.F. Kay, a hydrochemist with the British Geological Survey in Wallingford. The two, accompanied by P.J. Baxter, a toxicologist with the University of Cambridge, visited the lake and its surroundings in early September.

The lake is in a region of volcanoes. A large volcanic cone exists in the northeastern corner of the lake. To the west of the main cone is a related, smaller, ash cone.

Help for horses

Researchers have developed a new vaccine for equine diseases that could save the lives of thousands of horses and millions of dollars in vet bills each year.

The vaccine, called endobactoid, helps control colic, laminitis and other serious diseases that strike horses, according to the researchers at Missouri-Columbia College of Veterinary Medicine.

Colic, a medical chain reaction that can begin when a horse overeats and ends with death or disability, has stumped veterinarians for years, the researchers said in a report.

King, who was present at the meeting, refused to comment when we asked if the donation was solicited at that time.

"It was his majesty's understanding from the personal representative of Mr. Shultz that the donation would be devoted to welfare purposes, and his majesty assumed that it had been so applied," the statement continued. "Once the money had been paid it was beyond his control."

Brunel officials told us that Shultz's "personal representative" was Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Latin American affairs. The final paragraph of the sultan's statement reflects his feeling of betrayal:

"His majesty was given to understand that the United States was approaching other countries ... for donations. On this basis, he agreed to accede to this request in good faith as a gesture of good will and friendship to the United States."

As it turned out, the Sultan of Brunel was apparently the only philanthropist who bought the Shultz/Abrams sales pitch for aid to the contras — and he didn't even realize where his money was going.

It's Time To Decide On Seeds Or Transplants For Spring Garden

Planning a spring vegetable garden? If you are, now is the time to make the big decision as to whether to plant seeds or set transplants. Most gardeners are successful with either. Both have their good and bad points. Before you decide, let's take a look at both systems.

One advantage of transplants is an early start. Transplants are grown in protected seed flats, or seed beds. These allow the seeds to germinate under the best possible conditions. And, seeds in flats can be started before the weather is really good for planting directly in the garden. Whether you grow your own transplants, or buy them at a garden center, you'll be several weeks ahead of gardeners who start with seeds.

Using transplants allows you to choose only the best plants. When you seed your own, you'll have many more plants than you need, so you can be choosy. Pick only the healthiest specimens. If you buy your transplants, pick from the best available.

It's easier to start from transplants, especially if you only need a few. This is much more practical than starting from seeds. By using transplants, you can minimize seedling decay problems.

The main disadvantage is using transplants is that the cost would mount up quickly if you have a large garden and, many crops are difficult to transplant successfully. Beans, corn, cucumbers, and turnips do better if started from seeds planted directly in the garden.

If you plan to raise your own transplants, they should be ready for the garden when they're four to six weeks old. Those you buy you can set out immediately. If the seedlings are

In individual containers, moisten the soil before removing them. If they're grown in peat pellets, insert them directly into the soil. Don't try to remove them from the pellets.

The best times to transplant are: right after a rain, when it's cloudy, or late in the afternoon. Handle the plants gently. Don't press the soil too tightly around the roots.

To give transplants a quick start, apply a "starter" solution. You can buy ready-mixed, or mix your own. For best results, mix one or two tablespoons of a high phosphate fertilizer, like a 10-50-10, in a gallon of water.

Or, you can use an ordinary all-purpose fertilizer, such as 6-8-6. Just pour about a pint of the solution into each hole as you set the plants.

Don't sell seeds short, though. Especially if you're planning a large vegetable garden. Besides costing much less than transplants, a major advantage of starting your vegetable garden directly from seeds is that you can choose from a wider selection of varieties. Many crops do transplant well. They include: tomatoes, broccoli, collards, lettuce. If transplants are available — they're probably a better bet than starting them from seeds, unless you plant a very large garden.

While most vegetables can be grown from seeds, there are exceptions — sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, and strawberries. For specific recommendations, on the crops you want to grow, check with your favorite garden supply store.

If you decide to start from seeds, get the best you can find. Seed quality could mean the difference between success and failure in your garden. Always buy good seeds from a reliable dealer. It isn't very practical to try to save seed from your own garden. Since most seeds are relatively inexpensive, you're better off buying those you need, if they're available.

You should buy tested seed varieties. Those recommended for planting in Florida. Of course, you can plant anything you like. But, many gardeners cheat themselves by continuing to plant inferior types, without even trying those that grow best in our area.

A note of caution to keep in mind when handling seeds. Most have been treated with chemicals to reduce injury and decay caused by insects and diseases. Usually, you can tell when seeds have been treated, because they're coated with brightly colored dye.

It's a good idea to use treated seeds. In fact, you should always use them, when available. But, remember that the chemicals on such seeds are poisonous. Treated seeds should never be eaten by people or animals. Handle the seeds with care and keep out of reach of children and pets.

Follow the planting directions on the seed packets. If you plant too deep, the young plants may not be able to reach the soil surface after sprouting. And, if you plant too shallow, the seeds may be washed away by rain.

Whether you use seeds or transplants, or both, I wish you success with your spring vegetable garden.
Happy Gardening!

Charities' Collection Tactics Irk Reader

DEAR ABBY: I am not rich, neither am I poor. I've always contributed to the charities I feel are deserving, and nobody has to remind me to make my annual contribution, but things have now gotten out of hand.

Lately I have been deluged with what appear to be "bills" from numerous well-known organizations, pleading that they are desperately in need of funds. Yesterday, I received 16 requests from charities — yes, 16 — with urgent "please-help-us-now" letters, of which 12 were third and fourth requests! I felt as though I was being billed for a debt that was long overdue.

I am aware that charities need funding, but I am so annoyed at this point, I am ready to toss all of these letters into the wastebasket without even opening the envelopes — even though some may contain a 22-cent postage stamp that could be used for another purpose.

Abby, please get this message across. These people need to know how turned off some of us get when we are ...

DUNNED TO DEATH

DEAR DUNNED: I couldn't agree with you more. But please don't quit giving to the charities of your choice because of those who dun you to death with high-pressure tactics.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree about this problem: We have a friend who we think has "I" trouble. She brags about herself constantly. She is absolutely shameless when it comes to praising herself. Examples: "I was by far the best-looking woman at the party," and "Oh, she's a good player, but, of course, she's not as good a player as I am." "It was a good group, but I was by far the most intelligent one there."

I say this woman is suffering from an inferiority complex. My husband says she is suffering from a superiority complex. What is your opinion?

SICK OF BRAGGERS

DEAR SICK: Actually the "sufferers" are those who have to listen to her. Knowing nothing of her qualifications, it's clear she has a very high opinion of herself — deserved or otherwise. But her apparent need to constantly build herself up would indicate that she needs constant reassurance of her worth — which is typical of one with an inferiority complex.

Three Treatments Can Help Allergies

DEAR DR. GOTT — Our son, 13, is constantly blowing his nose, and his voice gets funny from drainage in his throat. The ENT doctor did cryosurgery on him a year ago, but that didn't help. The allergist just says he's allergic to dust and mold. Could something be done for the boy?

DEAR READER — Your son seems to be showing the classical signs of inhalation allergies. If, as the allergist suggests, he is sensitive to dust and molds, desensitization shots may help.

caged animals ordinarily do not carry rabies. However, healthy animals do not die 48 hours after biting someone. If the health department won't check the animal for rabies or other contagious diseases, ask your veterinarian to perform an examination (which can be done even if the animal has been dead for several days). It's important

With any allergy, there are three basic treatments: avoidance of the substance, use of medicines to control symptoms and administration of injections to reduce the severity of symptoms.

Dust and mold are so prevalent in our environment that avoidance is virtually impossible; antihistamines do reduce nasal congestion and mucus production. However, the only suitable long-term solution to your son's allergies is probably a program of regular injections. Ask the allergist about this treatment.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I breastfed my child until he was 10 months old. Now my breasts are soft. What can I do to firm them up?

DEAR READER — When breasts are producing milk, they enlarge and become firm. After a woman stops nursing her child, the milk glands shrink (and softer). I am not aware of any natural method to enable you to regain the characteristics of lactating breasts. However, synthetic methods — such as plastic surgery — are worth looking into if the condition of your breasts really bothers you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Last week we bought a hamster, and it bit me on the finger. The teeth went all the way in and it bled a lot. The hamster died 48 hours later. Our local health department said it does not run rabies tests on caged animals. I'm still worried. Is there anything I should do?

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

A reminder: Six outstanding cards of a suit will usually divide 4-2. If you need them to be 3-3, then play for that division, but you will succeed more often if you look for better alternatives.

North didn't particularly like supporting his partner's spades with only two cards, but they were good ones (A-Q), and it was certain that South had at least five spades when he responded one spade originally and then bid diamonds over opener's jump to three clubs. South had a comfortable bid of four spades after the strong bidding by North.

Hearts were led and continued, and declarer ruffed the second trick. What now? If spades divide evenly, declarer can play A-Q, cash the diamond ace, ruff another heart and pick up trumps with the king. If they don't divide 3-3, the defender with the long trump will eventually trump in on the diamonds and take some tricks. And if that defender started with only two diamonds, the contract will be set.

The solution doesn't come easy, but declarer must sacrifice his trump queen to make his contract. After trumping the second heart, he should play a spade to dummy's ace, cash the diamond ace and then overtake the spade queen with his king. The defense now has two trumps left, both higher than declarer's trumps, but South will simply play out his winning diamonds. The defenders will get two trump tricks, whether or not the trumps are in the same hand, but declarer will have made his contract, barring a very unusual 5-1 spade distribution.

HOROSCOPE

What The Day Will Bring...

YOUR BIRTHDAY
 JANUARY 17, 1987

In the year ahead, you'll be able to bring to fruition a venture to which you've given lots of time and energy. The change for the better will be slow, but consistently favorable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Benefits can be derived from a joint venture today if you don't upset the appraiser by asking for more than what you're entitled. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If a friend does something that displeases you today, don't suffer in silence and keep your feelings bottled up. Air what perturbs you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today is a peculiar day where you may operate at one extreme or the other. You'll either be very industrious, or frivolous and extravagant.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you get involved in an activity today that has competitive elements, don't let your ego get bruised if a friend is better at it than you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A portion of your time should be allotted to looking out for the needs of loved ones today. Do it of your own volition instead of waiting to be asked.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're a good salesperson today, and others will be receptive to what you have to offer. Just be sure you only promote things in which you truly believe.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may be a trifle loose with your resources today. It's OK to spend on things you enjoy, provided they bring pleasure to others as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) For you to properly enjoy yourself today, it's best you take care of your duties first. You won't be relaxed if you have responsibilities hanging over your head.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll want to help others today. This is a noble endeavor as long as you don't make those you assist feel they're obligated to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A friend of whom you're especially fond may be a bit more attentive to another pal than to you today. Don't be envious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Uncertainties may plague you early in the day, but when it's time for you to swing into action, you'll be remarkably resourceful and competent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be amply endowed with bright ideas today, but don't disregard the thoughts or suggestions of others, especially regarding commercial matters.

Stocks Open Mixed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which scored its tenth advance in a row Thursday, was up 2.39 to 2073.11 shortly after the market opened.

Losers led gainers 421-386 among the 1,263 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 11,529,300 shares.

The stock market scored another record-breaking advance Thursday, sending the Dow Jones Industrial average to its ninth new high of 1987 in the heaviest trading Wall Street has ever seen.

The Dow has made a total gain of 175 points since the start of 1987. Kidder Peabody & Co. Inc. analysts said the Dow's 10-day advance was the first such climb since July 1973.

Analysts said the stock market's advance was mainly driven by investors' voracious appetite for equities.

"It's a frenzy," said Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "The pension funds, the mutual funds, foreigners, the public, everyone wants to get in."

Wachtel said the usual guidelines for figuring out whether the market is nearing the end of an advance are irrelevant when the action is so frantic.

Dollar Ends Slide; As Gold Declines

By United Press International

The U.S. dollar fell to its lowest level in five months against the Japanese yen but ended its week-long slide against most other major world currencies at the opening of trading on major foreign money markets today. The price of gold was lower.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell to its lowest level since last August 21 against the Japanese yen, closing out the week at 153.10 yen, down 0.70 from Wednesday's close.

The closing Thursday of the Tokyo foreign exchange market for a national holiday also seemed to break the downward momentum, dealers said.

Japan's Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa said again that Japan would intervene on foreign exchange markets to prop up the sagging dollar.

However, Miyazawa said he did not consider appropriate an emergency meeting of finance ministers and central bankers of five major industrialized nations, known as the G-5 group, to shore up the dollar against the yen.

The group agreed in September 1985 to devalue the dollar against several major currencies, particularly the yen, as a way to reduce Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States.

Since then, the dollar has dropped nearly 50 percent against the Japanese yen.

In European trading the dollar opened higher in Frankfurt at 1.843 German marks, up from Thursday's close of 1.834.

In Zurich the dollar opened at 1.5455 Swiss francs, against 1.5345; in Paris at 6.115 French francs, against 6.115; in Amsterdam at 2.0735 Dutch guilders, against 2.073; and in Milan at 1.311 lire, against 1.303.50.

In London, the pound sterling opened at $1.5045, against Thursday's close of $1.50525.

In early New York trading the dollar was slightly higher against all major foreign currencies in light trading.

Gold prices opened $1.50 an ounce lower in Zurich at $414.50 per troy ounce and fell $1 in London to $414.50 an ounce.

The morning fixing in London was $414.50, off $1 from Thursday's close.

Silver opened unchanged in Zurich at $5.55 per troy ounce and edged slightly higher in London, opening at $5.5825 against Thursday's close of $5.58 an ounce.

In earlier trading in the Far East, gold closed out the week at $414.75 an ounce on the Hong Kong Bullion Exchange, off $1.75 from Thursday's close.

In early trading on New York's Comex, a 100-troy-ounce gold futures contract for current delivery in January opened at $414.10 an ounce, off $1.80 from Thursday's close. A 5,000-troy-ounce silver futures contract for delivery in January opened at $5.603, unchanged from Thursday.

...Acosta

Failing to sign the house away and due in Miami to work on his taxes, Acosta was kept in Orlando by heavy rain and started drinking, he said. When he went home that night after drinking too much, he was armed with a .38.

Miss Montero, who loved Acosta but had declined to marry him in fear he would think she did so for his money, let him in. She said he was pale. They exchanged words then walked towards the large home's master bedroom where the children had been sleeping with their mother. Acosta lost control.

The first shot struck Miss Montero in the chest. It came out her back. Acosta then shot the girl in the legs or sent the bullet through the sleeping boy's brain. No one knows for sure in which order. Turning, he shot Miss Montero a second time, in her back. The bullet came out her side. Fleeing, she tried frantically to open the front door. She couldn't. Behind her Acosta was yelling he was going to kill her and solve all their problems. But the gun was empty so he beat her with a liquor bottle, he said. He tried to choke her.

Acosta said during the hearing he could not remember all of the incident, although he reportedly told two court-appointed psychiatrists about it. Earlier during the hearing, Acosta calmly accused Assistant State Attorney Don Marblestone of being an over-zealous prosecutor.

"Your honor," said Acosta speaking through Spanish interpreter Florence Vanhissenhoven of Altamonte Springs. "I want to say to you that I took, made, the decision to plead guilty in the greater scale than my score came to because I did not want to arrive at this position of having to stand before my Margarita, my wife, the mother of my son. And, on the other hand, because of my personal criteria. I understand that your honor has told me that Mr. Marblestone is a professional and I respect him as that. But I feel he has exceeded somewhat in his manner of dealing with me, that he has tried to invent things."

He said Marblestone looked into the relationships of family members, accusing him of creating issues where none existed.

Marblestone was undaunted by Acosta's assessment of the prosecution.

"All charging documents used to say a crime was committed against the 'peace and dignity of the state of Florida,'" Marblestone said.

"Nothing is more against the peace and dignity of the state of Florida or society than the killing of an innocent child while sleeping," Marblestone told McGregor.

Marblestone acknowledged that Acosta's sentence nearly guaranteed he would be an old man when he got out of prison. But, he said, the boy was robbed of about 70 years of life.

Miss Montero, also from Cuba, asked McGregor to be lenient. She said her dead son would ask for mercy and that she, for refusing to let Acosta sell the house, was also guilty for her son's death. She asked McGregor not to look at the color photographs of the death scene the state presented at the hearing for McGregor to view. She asked him not to place the father of her 10-month-old son and adopted father of her daughter and deceased son in jail for 40 years. It was but a "moment of madness" she said, and she forgives. If she can forgive him, she asked, why can't society.

"Why now do you insist on hurting us?" she asked, losing her composure as Mrs. Vanhissenhoven finished the translation.

McGregor, who complained the attorneys were presenting the same information and arguments as they did at the December plea hearing, took several minutes to think about what the sentence would be. He had listened to 2 1/2 hours of testimony and arguments.

"Sentencing is the most difficult part of a judge's function," said McGregor as he turned pages of a presentencing investigation into Acosta's background. It included a previous conviction of dealing in stolen property in Miami and comments about his life under the communist regime in Cuba. There was also the attempt of Miss Montero to marry Acosta after his arrest, to show her love for the ruined man. But officials would not allow it.

"For a moment of time in his life, (Mr. Acosta) found himself in a position where he was prompted to do an extreme act that I don't believe would likely occur again," the judge said.

McGregor, who described himself as a businessman, said Acosta placed business credit above that of his family life.

"That's being too much of a businessman," he said.

He issued the 35-year sentence then ordered Acosta to remain on probation for the rest of his life after the prison term and to pay $9,673.77 in funeral and medical expenses. He also sentenced him to serve 3 years for attempted first-degree murder of Miss Montero, 3 years for the attempted second degree murder of the girl and 15 years probation for shooting in the house. The sentences are to run concurrent with the second-degree murder sentence. McGregor also gave Acosta credit for 200 days already served in the Seminole County jail.

According to comments made by Acosta's attorney, Jerry Luxenberg of Orlando, Acosta will probably have to serve at least 17 1/2 years of the sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

for purposes of setting bond and following the refusals of the pair, asked if either was making any claim to being under the age of 18. John Doe 5 responded "In spirit, perhaps."

"I am reluctant to order them held for a petty offense but with the lack of identity, I have no choice."

The two Does were taken, handcuffed, back to jail to await arraignment.

Two observers in the magistrate courtroom, citing friendship with the arrested pair, jubilantly claimed to have helped delay the Thursday morning launch for "three hours." They then advised the prisoners not to worry, that the demonstrators would be going to Sebring from Cape Canaveral to support the dozens of protestors arrested and held at that city.

A bailiff declined to confirm the holding of activist-prisoners in Sebring, but he also declined to deny the information with the comment that "Sebring is about midway between the coasts and we want to keep them away from the water."

Approximately 58 demonstrators have been arrested, all for trespassing on federal property, and are being held in various jails, including Seminole County.

Regarding the launch, "It was a complete success," said Lt. Cmdr. Robert Pritchard, a Navy spokesman. "It looks like it operated as advertised."

The unarmed rocket soared in a clear blue sky above "Cancel the Countdown" protesters, who for seven days had attempted to disrupt the launch by sneaking past Air Force security in what they call occupation tactics.

Nine protesters were arrested Thursday when they crossed the yellow security line painted on the highway at the air station's south gate.

"We feel we were successful in disrupting and postponing the launch twice," said Judy Freiwrith with National Mobilization for Survival, one of three anti-nuclear groups participating in the protests.

"But more importantly, we have raised the consciousness of the people in Florida and around the nation that the Trident-2 is a first-strike offensive weapon," she said.

Navy and Air Force officials flatly denied the protesters had any effect on the launch.

Freiwrith said a rally would be held today at Jetty Park, south of the Trident launch pad, as Spock, the pediatrician-peace activist, arrived from his home in the Virgin Islands.

The protest is to culminate Saturday with Spock leading a march to the air station and many of the demonstrators crossing the security line to be arrested.

parking lot, and also parking meters for the downtown area. Both proposals are contained in the preliminary report, with the meters suggested to help pay for the $4 million deck.

The deck was supported by architect Gerry Gross, who is re-designing shops on First Street. Gross said it could be just one level above ground instead of the four proposed by the consultant and have walkway access to First Street. The deck would be built on the city's municipal field, between the Seminole County Courthouse and the Sanford Post office.

The consultant's recommendation would add 410 spaces to the 360 in the municipal lot there.

A study proposal to make part of First Street into a one-way route apparently won't come to fruition as a result of representatives comments Wednesday, Marder said.

Another proposal, to synchronize First Street's traffic lights, was offered by Gross and would probably cost about $40,000, Marder said.

Farr cautioned about avoiding

First Street's becoming too much of an express route, with drivers missing downtown's attributes.

"Nothing (from the session) has been set in concrete," Marder said. "This was just a chance to get everyone together, to receive their opinions and commentary on the study draft."

Those at the session had received a copy of the 45-page study beforehand. Freeman spent about 40 minutes summarizing its highlights and discussing how recommendations were developed before the floor was opened for input.

Regarding the launch, "It was a complete success," said Lt. Cmdr. Robert Pritchard, a Navy spokesman. "It looks like it operated as advertised."

U.S. Must Waive Death Penalty In Extradition Of Hijacker

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The United States must waive the death penalty if it wants West Germany to extradite an Arab wanted for air piracy and murder in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner, the government said today.

Mohammad Ali Hamadel was arrested Tuesday on his arrival in West Germany from Beirut when three bottles of the nitronitrate high explosive disguised as a grape drink were found in his hand luggage, authorities said.

Hamadel is one of three Lebanese Shiite Moslems charged with piracy and murder by the United States in the hijacking of TWA Flight 847, during which Navy seaman Robert Stethem was beaten and killed and 39 Americans were held hostage up to 17 days.

Justice Ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid told reporters today West Germany has received a preliminary U.S. extradition request for Hamadel, a Lebanese-born Palestinian, and could extradite the suspect soon if it gets a formal petition with an indictment.

Chinese Party Chief Resigns

PEKING (UPI) — Hu Yaobang — the second most powerful man in China for nearly seven years — resigned his position as chief of the world's largest Communist Party, the state-run media reported today.

An announcement broadcast on nationwide radio and television said a special enlarged meeting of the Central Committee Politburo today unanimously elected Premier Zhao Ziyang acting general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party.

A communique issued by the meeting said Hu "made a self-criticism on his mistakes on major issues of political principles in violation of the party's principle of collective leadership."

It said he requested the Central Committee approve his resignation.

Blackout Imposed On Arms Talks

GENEVA (UPI) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators imposed a strict news blackout today on the new round of superpower negotiations on strategic and medium-ranged nuclear missiles and space-based defense systems.

U.S. delegation leader Max M. Kampelman and his new Soviet counterpart, Yuli M. Vorontsov, opened the new round Thursday with a private working luncheon.

The news blackout was so severe that U.S. delegation spokesman Terry Schroeder was unable to even say how long the luncheon lasted. Kampelman was seen returning to the U.S. Embassy after three hours.

The only basic detail released by both sides was the fact that it was Vorontsov who proposed the luncheon to open the new round.

...Relief

Sanford's Florida Victorian Architectural Antiques is the salvation of many examples of relief art that in years past adorned area businesses and homes. Through that company's salvage efforts, intricately carved mantels and cast metal panels that once were the facade of business establishments have a second chance to be woven into the fabric of a contemporary home or business.

"People are looking for a lot of detail. It's not just wood, but has something more to catch the eye," said Tom Custer of that company.

Custer pointed out that on one mantel the relief adornment on the pillars had been cast in plaster, while the ribbon design across the face was carved of wood and then applied to the wooden mantel.

Even the more simple homes of a bygone era were likely to have some form of relief art built into the decor. More posh buildings would even have decorative relief-cast hardware to add a Midas touch to the doors.

Today's fanciers of architectural relief art may have to come up with a creative plan for incorporating salvaged decorative panels into their homes. But, Custer said, a 17-foot work of relief art pulled from the front of a demolished business might be just the ticket to add a special touch to a wall where a typical painting just wouldn't do the trick.

Relief sculptors have also left their mark on home furnishings. Today, a woodcarver, according to woodcarver and teacher Dan DeMendoza of Sanford, can take a plain, unfinished, mass-produced piece of wood furniture bought at a discount house, and transform it with relief carving into a work of art.

"It depends on how far a person wants to go with it," DeMendoza, 64, said. "They may want to keep it fairly simple or they may want to make it complicated."

The methods and tools used to add floral designs or other figures in wood relief sculpture may vary, he said, depending on the design and the item to be carved. Also, a similar effect may be obtained by carving the design separately creating an applique to be glued in place.

A relief carving is the starting point for students who take DeMendoza's leisure time carving classes at Seminole Community College. Most, he said, can master the craft and many move up to great advancement in the technique.

Such wood relief sculpture can be found in fine antique furnishings, created in bygone days when even the most simple objects were likely to be adorned by a patient craftsman.

The idea of relief also thrives in contemporary art. Variations on the theme, sculptures that hang from surfaces or paintings that pop out of canvases thrive among today's artistic efforts.

Even quilters who stuff sections of their creations to make them stand out from the total piece are creating relief sculptures in fabric form.

Relief has "always been a useful tool to artist," said Judith Zilzcer of the Smithsonian Institution. "Modernist techniques, such as collage and assemblage, have joined traditional modeling and carving as ways to build up a surface, to have an image bounce off the wall."

"Because relief is both tactile, like a sculpture, and illusionistic, like a painting, it poses an inherent contradiction that has continued to challenge and inspire artists," who consider what is missing in their work, where the shadows play within the design to be as important as the object.

First, Let's Kill The Lawyers

By Mark Schwed
UPI TV Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two of my younger brothers are rich, fatcat lawyers, and I admit to a tinge of jealousy over their jacuzzis, fancy cars, luxurious oceanfront condos and landscaped designer homes in Miami.

I covet their goods.

On my last visit to one of them there was a big trauma when I broke a crystal champagne glass in the hot tub. Yee gads, not the hot tub.

A lawyer friend of one brother has a problem relating to his lifestyle. You see, he owns a very flashy Porsche, but he can't park it at the airport.

Three times thugs have smashed his windows and ripped off his $1,000 car stereo. And it's a real hassle filling out those insurance forms. So he has his secretary drive him to the airport.

If these are the problems of young legal eagles today, no wonder people both admire and despise them. Even Shakespeare thought them contemptible. "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers," the bard wrote in Henry VI, Part II.

In the opening of "Ethics on Trial," a one-hour PBS special airing Jan. 21 (WMFE-TV, Channel 24 in Orlando does not have the show scheduled), CBS News correspondent Fred Graham points out that the public has more esteem for used car salesmen than lawyers. Even journalists outrank lawyers in public esteem, a fact that riles my brothers to no end.

"There's an old Mexican curse — may your life be filled with lawyers," Graham says before getting to the meat of "Ethics on Trial."

The special, produced by WETA Washington, D.C., looks at America's love-hate relationship with lawyers and asks whether the phrase "legal ethics" is a contradiction in terms. Are lawyers ethical, or are they just money-grubbing, ambulance-chasing elitists? Are they defenders of truth, or hard-core capitalists more concerned with jacuzzis than justice?

In order to judge the program impartially, we must first set aside our disgust and envy for the lawyer lifestyle. According to the special, lawyers have far more serious problems than where to park the Porsche.

Home Buyer's Talk

In home buyer's language, Freddie Mac is the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., a major mortgage agency that buys mortgages from lenders. Fannie Mae is the Federal National Mortgage Association, which does the same thing. Ginnie Mae is the Government National Mortgage Association, a government-owned agency that buys FHA loans from lenders.

Interesting Records

In 1986, Ashrita Furman claimed the world underwater pogo-stick jumping record. Wearing a wet suit and a snorkel, he jumped for five hours and 38 minutes underwater in San Francisco Bay. On land, Furman claimed a new record after he somersaulted over the entire 12-mile, 390-yard route of Paul Revere's famous ride in Massachusetts.

Bronson-Ireland Succeed As Team

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Husband-wife acting teams are a rarity in motion pictures but Charles Bronson and Jill Ireland have made it work for two decades.

Currently the ruggedly handsome superstar and his blonde, English-born wife star in "Assassination," with Bronson as a Secret Serviceman guarding the nation's first lady, played by Ireland.

"Assassination" marks the 15th film Bronson and Ireland have done together, perhaps a record for husbands and wives.

There were Olivier and Leigh, Gable and Lombard, Newman and Woodward, Lunt and Fontanne, Cronyn and Tandy.

But none starred together in as many films. In most cases, Bronson had the more important role. Like most married teams the male member of the duo was the bigger star.

Ireland, however, appears more prominently in "Assassination" than Bronson, as she did in their 1976 film "From Noon Till Three." In 1984 Ireland co-produced "The Evil That Men Do" with her husband in the starring role.

A smiling Bronson said, "Jill's role dominates 'Assassination.'"

Bronson in brown suit, dress shirt and necktie looked dapper and relaxed, a far cry from his tough-guy screen persona.

"I haven't kept count of the pictures we've made, but I like working with my wife. She's easy to work with. Sometimes we get into a conflict over her suggestions, but we work them out. Often her ideas are great and I tell her so.

"Jill turns down a lot of pictures, you know, including some with me. She only accepts scripts she thinks are absolutely right for her."

Ireland's British accent presents no problem. In most cases it is acceptable as New England-ish or simply aristocratic, to-the-manner-born American. She also is adroit at American regional dialects.

Bronson grinned when he said he was more comfortable playing love scenes with his wife than other actresses, adding, "Not that I get many opportunities to play love scenes with anybody.

"But it is easier to work scenes with Jill because we both know how to draw the best reaction from each other.

"We know each other so well we're able to emphasize a word or phrase to draw the right response. It's not the words themselves, but the emphasis we put on them. Her tone of voice can rile me immediately, and if I stress a word a certain way it will make her angry or amuse her. Ireland interrupted an established career in English films for her first role with Bronson, a bit part in "Villa Rides," in 1968. Her most recent before "Assassination" was "Death Wish II."

Inbetween there were "Rider On The Rain," "The Family," "The Mechanic," "Breakout," "Hard Times," "Breakheart Pass" and "Love and Bullets," among others.

"Jill plays different characters from what she is in real life," Bronson said. "My roles are close to myself. They're not way out. You don't see me wearing eyeglasses or different hair styles. I don't play extreme characters. And there isn't much opportunity to express humor."

Off-screen Bronson has a subtle sense of humor. He's a gentleman to the nines. But, as in most of his roles, Bronson is a loner, quiet, observant.

"For years I've had to play characters with minimum dialogue," he said, "and that makes it tough. Dialogue helps develop the character, allowing him to express himself. I have to express my character through attitudes and body language.

"It's been a long time since I played a villain or comedy role. I have some light moments in 'Assassination' and I enjoyed playing them. I'd like to do a comedy if it was well-written. But producers don't think of me in those terms."

What they do conjure is Bronson with a gun in his hand, meting out justice.

"I'll be doing another 'Death Wish' this year," he said. "I have script approval and will do my best to minimize the violence. But directors have a way of getting around my objections when I'm not on the set."

The "Death Wish" series inspired the title for Ireland's new autobiography, "Life Wish," in which the gallant actress gives an account of her battle with cancer.

"Assassination" is the first film she and Bronson have done together since she was stricken by the disease almost three years ago.
