Salary increase proposed

SANFORD — If proposals advanced at a budget work session of the City Commission last week come to fruition, City Manager Bill Simmons will be receiving a three percent raise during the upcoming fiscal year.

The suggestion was made by City Commissioner Whitey Eckstein during budget discussions. Although no vote of approval can be made during work sessions, the members of the commission indicated they would support the proposal.

City employees meanwhile, will be undergoing individual evaluations to determine if they will or will not be granted a salary increase under the new budget.

City Finance Director Carolyn Small explained, "We are not giving cost-of-living (COLA) raises this year, but we already have money set aside in the proposed fiscal 1993/94 budget, to provide for merit raises."

"Each separate department has the merit raise money indicated in a line item," she said. "Depending on the results of their personal evaluations, they will either have zero, three percent, or six percent."

"In other words, some will get raises, and others will not. But the money has been set aside already," Small said.

The additional money for the City Manager's raise was not in the original budget proposal, and determining where it will come from will be up to the commission during formal budget hearings scheduled for September.

Building permits slip in June

SANFORD — New home starts in the unincorporated areas of the county slipped slightly last month, but year-to-date totals are still above 1992 levels.

A total of 89 new home permits were issued by the Seminole County Building Division in June, according to a monthly report. That number was 9 percent less than the 98 permits issued in June 1992, according to the report. But the county has issued 5 percent more single-family permits than last year for the October to June period. A total of 737 home permits were issued during the first nine months of the county's fiscal year.

New commercial construction remains strong, up 47 percent for the year-to-date period ending in June. Fifty-three commercial permits were issued during the first nine months of the year, compared to 36 for the same nine-month period in 1991-1992. Five commercial permits were issued in June, compared to four in June 1992.

Overall, permit activity has dropped considerably over last year, largely due to the completion of roofing repairs on south-county homes damaged by the March hailstorm of 1992. A total of 901 miscellaneous category permits were issued in June, compared to 1,929 permits in June 1992. A total of 1,091 permits were issued last month, less than half the 2,110 permits issued in June 1992.

The total reported value of the work permitted in June was $18.1 million, an 18.5 percent drop from June 1992. Overall value of work performed for the year is up 11 percent however, from $144.8 million to 162 million. See additional story Page 3A.

Property tax cut?

Commissioners: Cut one tax if other fees are raised

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — The majority of Seminole County commissioners called for a reduction in the countywide property tax to compensate for proposed increases in gasoline and utility taxes and garbage fees.

On the first day of budget reviews, marked by frequent bickering among themselves, commissioners did tentatively decide not to move the Seminole County Historical Museum to the old Sanford post office to save $200,000, accepted Sheriff Don Estinger's $28.9 million spending plan, and praised Public Safety director Gary Kaiser for trimming spending.

Budget reviews will continue through this week.

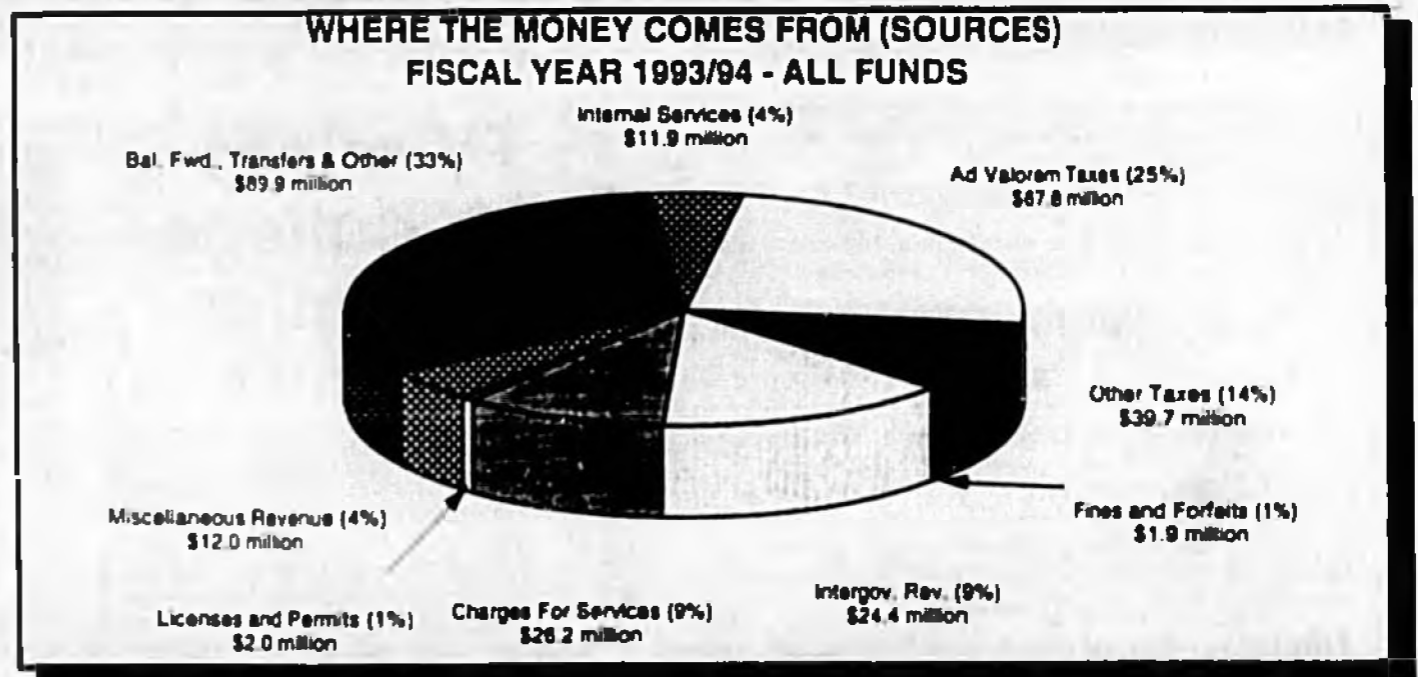

Commissioners Larry Furlong and Pat Warren said they wanted County Manager Ron Rabun to reduce his status-quo property tax rate to compensate for more than $4.5 million in proposed increased fees and taxes. Commissioners Daryl McLain and Dick Van Der Welde said they also questioned some of the tax proposals.

Only commissioner Bob Sturm was ready to accept Ron Rabun's $276 million budget proposal Monday, the first day of county budget reviews.

"We're going to ask the taxpayers for $4 1/2 million more a year," said Furlong. "I'm not comfortable asking for that level increase in a recession."

"What's scaring me is you're not looking ahead to the future," said Sturm. "You can't continue to cut the millage to satisfy the constitu-

County revenue more than property taxes

SANFORD — When your property tax bill arrives in November, it may seem like those taxes carry the entire weight of county government, but they actually represent less than a quarter of Seminole County's revenues.

Actually, most of the $276 million in County Manager Ron Rabun's proposed spending plan for next year comes from charges on services, gasoline taxes and "user fees," which are frequently some form of tax. These other local sources of revenue account for slightly more than 25 percent of the county's income. Property taxes account for slightly less than 25 percent. Together, property taxes and other local sources of income account for half the county's income. The remainder of the revenues comes from leftover money from the year before, state and federal grants and shared revenues and internal transfers. See Revenue, Page 5A

Department probe of cop's actions ends

SANFORD — A Sanford Police officer acted improperly according to an internal investigation of a May paddling incident at Crooms School of Choice.

Officer Vic Burns, 43, who had been with the police department almost five years, resigned effective June 30. Burns was the school resource officer at Crooms and was head of the city Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program.

According to the investigation report, Burns paddled two male students involved in a classroom fight even though he had been specifically told not to administer corporal punishment. The parents of the two paddling recipients were not informed prior to the administration of the punishment, which is a violation of the Seminole County School Board's policy.

On the day of the incident, Crooms Principal Barbara Kirby and the vice principal were away from the school. Kirby had given Burns limited authority to deal with disciplinary problems in her absence.

After warning one of the students he would be sent to the office if he didn't behave, teacher Tanya Joiner decided his disruptive behavior warranted attention from the principal. A comment was made by an unknown student. The student being punished heard the comment and became involved in a physical fight with the second male. Burns was called to the classroom to intervene in the fight.

After taking the pair to the office, Burns administered "one lick" with See Burns, Page 5A

Chandler remains critical; third arrest made in case

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — A 16-year-old comatose boy is still clinging to life this morning after enduring 130 degree heat locked in the trunk of his car during an alleged carjacking Saturday.

The Orange County Sheriff's office said Phillip Clayton Chandler was apparently held captive in the trunk of his car for possibly five hours, while the car was driven around Orange, Seminole and Volusia Counties by his abductors.

When taken to HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, he was suffering from severe dehydration believed to have been caused by the extreme heat in the car's trunk. He was also reported to have suffered a number of bruises and burn marks. He is still in a coma, listed in critical condition.

Chandler's body was discovered in a parking lot at the DeBary campus of Daytona Beach Community College, where he had apparently been dumped.

Yesterday, a third person was taken into custody. He is identified as 17 year-old Terrance Jenkins from Alabama, who had been visiting in the Orlando area.

Two others, Michael Daymon, 16, from Orlando, and a 14 year old girl were arrested. See Arrest, Page 5A

Eight Seminole County graduates among 1,200 scholarship winners

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Eight Seminole County graduates are among the 1,200 winners of Merit Scholarships financed by colleges and universities and awarded by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC).

About 115 private and 85 public higher education institutions, located in 42 states and the District of Columbia, offered Merit Scholarships this year for use at the sponsor college or university.

The scholarships provide between $250 and $2,000 for each year of undergraduate study. Winners were chosen by officials of the sponsor institution from among Merit Program Finalists who will attend that college.

Only semifinalists, representing about half of one percent of graduates in every state, had an opportunity to advance to the finalist standing and compete for the scholarships.

Bills with a message

FORT LAUDERDALE — Dollar bills bearing the message "Bring Them Home or Send Us Back" are drawing attention to American soldiers still missing in action, but defacing U.S. currency is illegal.

The marked bills are showing up in supermarket checkout lines, at gas stations and in taverns throughout South Florida, but no one knows who is stamping the bills with the phrase encircled by a POW-MIA logo.

"They're making a point. It won't be long before a lot of people get the message as these bills get circulated around," said Bill Kling, vice chairman of the Broward County Veterans Council.

James Bauer, assistant special agent in charge of the Secret Service in Miami, said Monday he has not seen any of the stamped bills but would expect them to be removed from circulation fairly quickly.

Molestation charged at Wet n' Wild

ORLANDO — Orlando police have charged three Miami area teens in an alleged molestation of several teenage girls at the Wet n' Wild amusement park over the weekend.

"We've charged three teenage boys and a fourth charge is pending," Orlando police spokesman Mike Holloway said Monday.

He said the boys, who allegedly surrounded the girls and fondled them, were charged with performing a lewd act on a child and simple battery.

The park, which is patrolled by off-duty police and has lifeguards at the pools, hasn't had complaints of similar problems in the past, Holloway said. Five girls, ranging in age from 12 to 17, said the boys fondled them at a park attraction known as Lazy River on Friday evening, said Detective Frank Roche.

The suspects were part of a group of about 15 youths attending an event supervised by the Miami Beach chapter of the Police Athletic League, Roche said. They were taken to the Orange County Juvenile Detention Center, but later were released to their supervisors on the trip.

Highway Patrol wants 777 new troopers

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Highway Patrol is proposing an additional 777 new troopers over the next four years, boosting its force by nearly 50 percent.

Highway Patrol Director Ron Grimming said the 1,600 member patrol is so understaffed, it takes an average of 25 minutes for a trooper to respond to a call for help, and in some counties the wait has been up to an hour.

Twenty-one counties aren't covered after midnight, and it is not unusual for troopers to drive 80 miles to reach an accident scene, he said.

Grimming said he is preparing to pitch the plan to state lawmakers for next year's budget, though earlier attempts to dramatically increase the size of the patrol force have failed.

Tight budget years have brought only 16 new troopers to the force in the last four years. The plan calls for $50 million over four years.

Man suing police after he was jailed

FORT LAUDERDALE — A man who said he was arrested and held for 41 days in the Broward County Jail because his name sounded similar to that of a car theft suspect is suing police.

Donnie Ray Boone, 26, a radiator repairman in Huntsville, Ala., said once he was arrested, deputies should have investigated his repeated assertions that they had the wrong man.

Boone's case, filed recently in federal court in Fort Lauderdale, stems from a February 1989 report of a stolen car in Coral Springs. He is suing Coral Springs Police Detective Lawrence Cambi, the Broward Sheriff's Office and the Orange County Sheriff's Department.

Ultimately, Donald Lee Bohn, 36, was arrested, charged and convicted of the car theft, court documents show.

By the time Bohn was arrested, Boone had already spent 25 days in jail, his attorney, Gary Paige of Miami Beach, said on Monday. And even then, Paige said, Boone was held another 16 days until a witness to the car theft confirmed to a Broward Circuit judge that Boone was the wrong man.

"It is scary that we live in a world where a person can spend 41 days in jail just because the police didn't do their job right," Boone said in a prepared statement. "If it can happen to me it can happen to anybody."

Merchants seek to ban panhandling

TAMPA — Downtown merchants are pressuring the city to restrict panhandling by making it illegal to beg for money once a person says no.

"We're not asking to outlaw panhandling," said Bob Abberger, vice president of the Franklin Street Council.

"The people doing this are killing business ... and ruining the city's reputation," said Kirby Rainsberger.

He is the police legal adviser who drafted ordinances to make it a misdemeanor to threaten someone when soliciting a donation and to make it illegal to seek payment for guarding a parked car.

Child's lawsuit

Appeals court considers two major issues in child's 'divorce'

BY IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

DAYTONA BEACH — An appeals court is considering two major issues in deciding whether a 12-year-old boy should have been allowed to "divorce" his mother in favor of adoption by a foster family.

Chief Judge Charles M. Harris said the 5th District Court of Appeal was more concerned with the child's mental capabilities in filing a lawsuit than in his lawyers' legal arguments that the boy had a constitutional "right" to do so.

Harris and two fellow judges also questioned Monday whether Juvenile Judge Thomas Kirk in Orlando had acted properly in hearing two issues simultaneously last September. One was a petition to terminate

"I don't see her as a Mom anymore. It's just a word to me."

-Shawn Russ

Rachel Kingsley's legal rights to her son, Gregory; the other was the petition for adoption.

"Procedure is a mess. Throughout this case, procedure is a mess," Harris remarked during oral arguments.

Shawn Russ, known for a time as Gregory K. is now 13. He told reporters outside the courtroom he wants to remain with his adoptive parents, George and Elizabeth

Russ, no matter which way the court rules. "I don't see her as a Mom anymore," he said about his biological mother. "It's just a word to me."

The youngster claimed neglect and abandonment by his mother. His biological father, Ralph Kingsley, did not contest the boy's lawsuit.

Russ, the adoptive father, is a Lake County lawyer who helped another attorney, Jerri Blair, bring the case to trial. Gregory took the name Shawn along with his new last name.

Under Florida law a child must be represented in court by a parent, a legal guardian or the state's welfare agency except in rare cases.

TV might be college education of future

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A $6 million project to deliver college classes to more people using fiber-optic technology and television is being developed by four state universities.

The project, known as "distance learning," is being pursued by Florida universities as they struggle to offer more classes to the estimated 100,000 students expected to enroll over the next seven years.

"I see distance education as one solution to our access problem," said Jon Moyle, a member of the Board of Regents.

"I'm not talking about staying home and getting a four-year college degree, but I do think we can do special things such as having a kindergarten class in Key West tie into a special program at the University of West Florida in Pensacola," Moyle said.

A student in Tampa could view a lecture given in Orlando and question the professor. People could take college extension courses without having to travel. High school students could view lectures and learn about research.

The University of Central Florida in Orlando, Florida International University in Miami, Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton and the University of South Florida in Tampa are rating a four-way network known as Metnet.

The system could offer 200 courses via television and reach 80 percent of Florida's population.

The network would let professors see students and allow computer communication for enrollment, admissions and perhaps class assignments, said Bob Arnold, director of instructional resources at the University of Central Florida.

"We're calling ourselves the Urban Four," said Florida Atlantic President Anthony Catanese. "With this system, you could take courses offered by any of our universities or branch campuses, no matter where you live."

More than 100,000 Floridians have concealed weapons permits

By Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH — The number of concealed weapons permits in Florida has topped 100,000, as people seek some security from a rising wave of crime.

"It's a crazy world out there," said Gary Boggs of Boca Raton. "Home invasions have been increasing. I don't feel it's safe anymore. There are a lot more burglaries. It's my firm belief that everybody should have a gun in the house."

According to Monday's editions of The Palm Beach Post, state records show that since 1987 — when the state began requiring licenses for concealed weapons — 115,295 applications have been approved.

Miami has the largest number of licenses in the state. One address in Miami, the Israeli Consulate on Biscayne Boulevard, had the most issued to a single address.

The consulate has had 24 license holders, including the vice-counsel, since 1988, records show. A spokesman attributed the number to "security reasons" but would not elaborate.

Rich and poor alike hold permits. Some well-known people who are licensed to carry concealed weapons in Palm Beach County include developer E. Llywd Eccleston Jr., lawyer Joseph Farish and sugar magnate Jose "Pepe" Fanjul.

License holders include judges, city commissioners, a mayor and about a dozen other public officials.

Farish believes it's good for those in the public eye to carry a weapon. Once, he said, with the judge's permission, he took his gun into court when he had to confront a volatile, crack-shot witness.

"I carry one under my pillow," he said. "It's just a matter of habit, just like I carry a pocket knife in my pocket."

An untold number of people — drug dealers, for instance — conceal guns illegally.

Mentally ill people, felons or those who have two drunken driving convictions within three years are denied licenses, said Connie Crawford of the Florida Secretary of State's office, which regulates the licenses.

Lake Mary recreation: New rules

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The City Commission last week finalized a listing of rules and procedures to be used at city recreational facilities.

The rules resulted from complaints by several city residents two months ago about loud noise, profanity, late-night lights, and other problems connected with the operation of two basketball courts at Country Club Road and Lake Mary Avenue, in a residential area.

The specific problem was believed to have been resolved during a June commission meeting, when the city voted to close down the courts, and find new locations for them at the city

Sports Complex off Rantoul Lane.

At the July 1 meeting, former City Commissioner Paul Tremel brought the matter up again, by asking the city to reconsider the use of the courts. The reconsideration still has not been scheduled.

Meanwhile, pertaining to all city owned and operated recreational facilities, the city has adopted a list of guidelines to be followed by users.

City property includes the Sports Complex, Liberty Park, and the city's various neighborhood parks.

"All users, participants, spectators, or otherwise thereupon shall be expected to exhibit appropriate behavior and sportsmanship at all times," the ordinance says.

It continues, "Disorderly conduct by the use of obscene or vulgar language, obscene or vulgar gestures, profanity, lewd behavior or unsportsmanship behavior shall be grounds for removal from the premises."

It also warns that repeated violations could result in suspension of user privileges.

"Failure to comply with an order or directive from an authorized city employee to leave the premises or to comply with an order of suspension shall be deemed to be a trespasser," it says.

People authorized to give such orders are listed on the ordinance. They include the city manager, parks director, recreation supervisor, recreational assistants, all sworn members of the Lake Mary Police Department, and other city employees who may be so designated.

The matter was approved on second reading, with no discussion or objections by members of the commission or the audience at the meeting.

In the meantime, Parks and Recreation Director John Holland, has been pursuing the possibility of locating two new basketball courts at the new Sports Complex, just off Rantoul Lane.

Approval of the suggested location and the appropriation of up to $32,200 for the construction of the courts was unanimously approved by the city commission, but must now be taken before the city's Planning and Zoning Commission for approval of the site plan.

After four months, gas prices drop slightly

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

HEATHROW — A report from AAA indicates motorists are getting their first price break of the summer. Gasoline prices have dropped slightly across the state.

Prices are down in nearly all locations surveyed by AAA, with the statewide average price for self-service regular unleaded gasoline dropping one cent to $1.131 per gallon.

In the Sanford/Oriando area, self-service unregular average price was $1.123. Mid-grade unleaded was $1.257 and premium unleaded was $1.332. For all three levels, this area was below the state average.

"We may finally be seeing the results of low crude oil prices and the traditional mid-summer lapse in demand for gasoline," said Tom Schroder, Manager of Public Relations for AAA Florida at Heathrow. "Both factors would tend to lower prices at the pump."

This month's drop in prices comes after four months of price increases raising the cost of gasoline by more than a nickel per gallon.

Prices determined in the AAA Clubs of Florida July Fuel Gauge are as follows:

●Self-Serve — Florida's regular unleaded averaged $1.131 per gallon, down one cent from last month. Mid-grade unleaded averaged $1.264 per gallon, down .7 cent, and premium unleaded averaged $1.344, also down .7 cent from last month.

●Full-Serve — Regular unleaded dropped 1.1 cents per gallon to $1.495. Mid-grade unleaded dropped 1.3 cents per gallon to $1.589 per gallon and premium unleaded was down 1.2 cents per gallon to $1.672.

The highest reported price for self-service regular unleaded was $1.201 per gallon in Miami. The lowest reported price was $1.075 in Port Richey.

Nationwide, housing starts flat in June

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Housing starts were flat in June after two monthly advances, the government said today. Construction was up in the Northeast and West, but down in the Midwest and South.

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.25 million, unchanged from May. May starts, however, were revised up from 1.24 million in the department's original estimate.

The June rate is 9.9 percent above that of the same month last year. But for the first six months of 1993, starts were just 1.1 percent above the same period last year.

Analysts had expected little change in the rate despite the lowest mortgage rates in two decades — down to 7.16 percent last week, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. It was the lowest since the company began keeping records in April 1971.

Economists contend that housing activity should pick up because of the rates, stable prices and moderate growth in jobs and income. It had slowed considerably from January through March largely because of unusually harsh weather.

These analysts say that first-quarter activity merely had been postponed until later in the year. Indeed, new home sales jumped 21.5 percent in April as the weather improved. But the industry was unable to sustain the pace and sales dropped back 21 percent a month later.

The department reported earlier that the seasonally adjusted estimate of new houses for sale at the end of May was 278,000, representing a supply of 5.8 months at the current sales rate.

It was the highest level since 279,000 in March 1992 and could mean builders would reduce construction until demand picks up again.

Indeed, applications for building permits, a barometer of future activity, slipped 1.3 percent in June after rising 1.8 percent a month earlier.

Single-family starts fell 2.8 percent, to a 1.08 million rate, after advancing 4.8 percent in May. But construction of multi-family units jumped 21.5 percent, to a 175,000 rate, following a 2 percent drop the previous month.

Regionally, the Northeast posted a 16.2 percent increase, to a 136,000 rate. Starts were up 4.4 percent in the West, to 307,000.

Practice safety and sobriety

People used to look at a dilapidated car and say, "It's just an accident, looking for a place to happen."

The comment may touch on humor, but its meaning is unfortunately true. Motor vehicles can be killers if not controlled. Maintaining their proper operational capabilities is one of the best ways to prevent trouble.

The Florida Highway Patrol is presently involved in a crackdown against unsafe vehicles. Troopers will be conducting traffic stops during daylight hours to check a number of safety features.

For several years, Floridians were required to have their vehicles checked on a regular basis, and could only be operated with stickers showing they had been approved. When vehicle checks were eliminated, many people expressed thankfulness that the checks were no longer required.

Unfortunately, many of the people who applaud the end of safety checks, are the same who are presently driving vehicles which would never pass the tests.

These are the people we hope will be identified by the FHP.

Many problems can be caused by faulty equipment: putting the driver at risk; passengers' lives in jeopardy; and other people, motorists as well as pedestrians getting killed or injured.

Another old axiom pertaining to cars is the question, "What is the most dangerous part of a car?" The response, "A loose nut on the steering wheel."

In this respect, we also hope the FHP will be able to help eliminate problems caused specifically by the driver. Law officers making a routine traffic stop, are no longer surprised to find the driver has been drinking alcohol, or has a suspended license caused by similar problems in the past.

There are not enough law officers to completely eliminate dangerous vehicles and/or drivers from our streets and highways.

People must refrain from driving under the influence of alcohol, or driving an unsafe car. If not, the punishment could be arrest, a collision, injuries, and even death for the driver and/or other people.

Refrain from being an accident looking for a place to happen.
Practice safety and sobriety.

Clean up lakefront

We have been reading about the Sanford lakefront beautification, the meetings of the master plan Steering Committee and the proposed plans for this worthwhile project.

When a person drives along the lakefront there are areas where the lake is not even visible. It would seem that a big step in the lakefront beautification would be to cut the weeds, mow and trim where necessary along the lakefront, so those driving in or out of Sanford would enjoy the view of our beautiful Lake Monroe.

Experience shared

We generally hear reports about how emergency room care at local hospitals is below standard and lacks the care and service we expect to receive. I would like to take this opportunity to tell of an exceptional experience we had at Central Florida Regional Hospital's emergency room.

On the night of June 18, 1993, our two-year-old son had an accident with the edger and sliced off the top portion of his thumb and the front portion of a finger. We rushed him to Central Florida Regional in Sanford and immediately the nurses and doctor cared for him. This quick response was a great relief to us. We knew our son's chances for complete recovery would be greater because of their swift action.

What made this an exceptional experience was the care and concern that was extended to the other three children we had with us (our six-year-old daughter and two boys, ages 4 and 2, whom I was caring for). The security guard and the receptionist in the emergency room gave the children crackers and cups of water, placed them into a glass enclosed waiting room, locked the door so no one could get in (the children could get out if they needed something), and kept an eye on them while my husband and I were with our son. This meant a great deal to us because we were able to care for our son and still have the peace of mind that the other children were being cared for.

I have never had to use the emergency room before, and I pray I won't have to again, however, after this experience if it is within my power I will go to Central Florida Regional where people are treated with genuine compassion, care and concern.

Clinton deficit plan doesn't add up

Honest Abe Lincoln said: "You may fool all the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all the time; but you can't fool all of the people all the time."

Well, less-than-honest Bill Clinton and the Democrat-controlled Congress are out to prove Lincoln wrong. In 1990, the American people were duped into believing that a huge tax hike actually would go toward lowering the federal deficit. Now, just three years later, Clinton and the Dems are trying to pull the same con on the taxpayers.

The 1990 tax increase was, at that time, the largest in history. It included a nickel-a-gallon boost in the federal gas tax and jacked up the top individual income tax rate to 31 percent from 28 percent.

The American people were assured by both President Bush and Congress that the new taxes would be matched dollar for dollar with spending cuts. The federal debt was to be reduced by $492 billion over five years.

Of course, it didn't happen this way. The taxes took effect, but the cuts never materialized. So instead of a $29 billion annual deficit in 1995, as the American people were promised in 1990, the government is starting at a $284 billion nut.

The deficit-reduction projections of three years ago were off by nearly 900 percent.

Which brings us back to less-than-honest Bill. His putative deficit-reduction plan bears a striking resemblance to the 1990 bait-and-switch plan.

It raises the top individual tax rate to 36 percent from the present 31 percent. And it hits motorists with an additional 4.3 cents a gallon levy at the pump.

The president promises that his budget plan will reduce the federal debt by $500 billion over the next five years. He also says that the roughly $250 billion in new taxes that he is slapping on the American people will be coupled with roughly $250 billion in spending cuts.

Of course, it won't happen this way. You can bet your bottom dollar that while all of the new taxes will take effect, most of the spending cuts won't. The end result will be an annual deficit in 1998 that is higher than what we have today.

Just look at the so-called spending cuts that are included in the president's deficit-reduction package. The only real trim is in defense spending by $74 billion over five years. Virtually all the rest of the cuts are bogus.

For instance, the budget plan forecasts optimistically $60 billion in interest savings. And that's considered a spending cut. It imposes $15.5 billion in higher user fees. That too is considered a spending cut. And it audaciously claims $44 billion in spending cuts that actually were locked in for the coming year as part of the 1990 budget deal.

Much ado was made of the entitlement spending cap that was included in the House version of President Clinton's deficit-reduction plan. It was put in there by crafty Democrats to give the illusion that they are reining in runaway entitlement spending (which is increasing by three times the rate of inflation).

When you add it all up, President Clinton's deficit-reduction plan cannot possibly shave $500 billion from the federal debt. He may fool some of the American people into believing that it will, but certainly not all, and probably not even most.

Now, just three years later, Clinton and the Dems are trying to pull the same con on the taxpayers.

Scientist attacked for research

Dr. Herbert L. Needleman is one of the nation's top researchers in uncovering the poisonous effects even small quantities of lead have on children.

His work was instrumental in removing lead from gasoline in the 1970s and pointed the way to more recent government actions to combat lead exposure for young and old alike.

His professional career has met the highest standard of science serving the public interest. Literally hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of children will have healthier lives because of him.

But for the last two and a half years, Needleman has been under attack. Accusers arose with charges of scientific misconduct. His reputation was placed under a cloud. He was distracted from his research and spent tens of thousands of dollars defending himself.

He has paid the price for taking on the lead industry.

It all began 20 years ago when Needleman, today a professor of child psychiatry and pediatrics at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine, published a brief article in a scientific journal. He hypothesized that measuring the lead content in children's teeth might prove to be an excellent indicator for the total lead burden carried in their bodies after exposure had ended.

In 1979 this speculation produced a seminal report Needleman and his research colleagues published in the New England Journal of Medicine. Based on a survey of Boston-area schoolchildren, the research found direct evidence that low lead levels caused both mental and emotional impairment.

As part of the survey, teachers evaluated the children's classroom work without knowing in advance anything about what their lead levels were.

"We saw as tooth lead went up, teachers reported those children as being more distracted, less organized, more hyperactive or easily frustrateable and that their overall performance in class was not as good as their classmates," Needleman recalls. "The teachers were finding classroom behavior impaired in direct relation to the amount of lead in the children's teeth."

As Needleman and other researchers intensified their work, an increasingly disturbing picture emerged. The body, in effect, mistakes lead for calcium where it attaches to and disrupts enzymes that are essential to the normal function of brain and other cells. In addition to exposure by eating chips of lead-based paint (phased out in the 1970s), children ingest fine lead dust on their fingers that comes from windowills, furniture and carpeting in homes covered with lead-based paint. They inhale lead that settled into the soil of sandlots and playgrounds once blanketed by fumes of leaded gasoline. This poisoning is particularly pernicious because it is often concentrated in inner cities among low-income and minority communities.

In both the 1940s and the 1960s, the lead industry attacked the work of earlier researchers who raised questions about the health effect of their product. Needleman's turn came in 1991.

Two researchers, each of whom had either received funding for their work from the lead industry or had been paid to testify in civil lawsuits on behalf of the industry, questioned whether Needleman had committed scientific misconduct by adjusting the data in the 1979 report to predetermine the outcome.

Newspaper columns began appearing in some of the nation's more conservative newspapers about a possible lead-hoax perpetrated by Needleman. A top-level public relations firm was hired to open up a "lead hot-line" to get out the industry's spin on the story.

The ferocity of the attack has been exceeded only by its presumption of public gullibility. An Environmental Protection Agency Committee that scrutinized Needleman's data was unambiguous "in finding them (misconduct charges) groundless," according to the chair of the panel, Dr. Morton Lippman.

The relationship between low lead levels and both mental and emotional damage has been documented since 1979 in at least 17 other studies in this country, Great Britain, Scotland, Denmark, Italy, Greece, Germany and New Zealand. Several of these studies have found even greater dangers from lead than Needleman first exposed.

A University of Pittsburgh hearing board, that Needleman had to sue to force it to hold its proceedings in public, found no evidence of "fabrication ... deliberate falsification of data, procedures or analysis that would bias the results" of the 1979 study.

But the jury is in on this case. Its finding can best be expressed in the words of a unanimous Pittsburgh faculty senate resolution that says of Needleman, "Few environmental scientists have the distinction of contributing so much to humanity by eliminating a serious threat to millions of children."

He has paid the price for taking on the lead industry.

Will computers write columns?

"What we fear comes to pass more speedily than what we hope," Publilius Syrus said in the 1st century B.C. You said it, Pub. A danged computer has written a novel.

If that weren't bad enough, the same week the computer-broiled potboiler hit the bookstores, a mere mortal solved a 350-year-old math mystery by proving "Fermat's last theorem." Mathematicians around the world hailed the discovery as, according to one, "the most exciting thing that's happened in — geez — maybe ever, in mathematics!" And proof that "things that seemed completely impossible are more of a reality."

All it means to me is that all those well-meaning school counselors were lying when they told me it didn't matter if I wasn't good in math, that there were plenty of good jobs for English majors. I'm feeling about like the rotary egg-beater the day the Osterizer Deluxe spun off the assembly line.

I'm feeling about like the rotary eggbeater the day the Osterizer Deluxe spun off the assembly line.

I used to feel OK about my lack of math ability because of my lifelong friend Roy O. Vahdick Jr., a math teacher. While Roy can do logarithms and differential equations to make Archimedes weep with joy, he could not write so much as one clear, concise English sentence. Or at least we assumed he couldn't, because whatever he wrote with his big, hammy hand was indecipherable outside the U.S. Army Cryptography Unit.

Roy and I had a deal: If he needed anything written, I wrote it for him. If I needed anything ciphered, he did it. We were like yin and yang, one side of the perfect circle completing the other. Nature in her infinite mercy had left us lacking but steered us to each other.

Then Roy got a computer, complete with word processing program, spelling checker and thesaurus. He learned to type with three or four of his ballpark-frank digits, and loved nothing better than giving me weekly updates on the newest timeless prose he had crafted.

I, on the other hand, was no better off than I'd been in the 10th grade, staying after my Algebra II class for extra help. I had no software that worked differential equations, nor even explained the hidden code in which my Algebra II textbook had been written.

Roy began to need my help less and less, and soon all I was doing was helping him write a few speeches. "Someday you won't even need me for this," I told him ruefully not too long ago. "Because all you'll need to do is poke in a speechwriting program, select the 'funny' mode and punch some keys."

He tried to make me feel better, probably because he knew that computers break down, and bridges burnt to ash cannot be rebuilt quickly enough to meet a speech deadline. "Nah, they'll never be able to program a computer to be creative," he said. "A computer will always need a human to run it."

Well, mercifully, that's what Scott French still says about his computer, a supercharged Macintosh named Hal who just wrote a steamy romance novel that hit the bookstores in hardback early this month. French programmed into Hal thousands of rules on tone and plotting, based on formulas he gleaned by analyzing the writing of "Valley of the Dolls" author Jacqueline Susann. And Hal's book, "Just This Once," is getting better reviews than Susann's did.

"It doesn't write whole paragraphs at a time," French told The New York Times. "You can't get up, walk away, come back and find a completed chapter. It's not that advanced."

Eight years for a smutty novel today, eight hours for "War and Peace" in a few years. Is it too late to enroll in a good technical school?

PSC to consider reopening state's water, sewer case

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The state Public Service Commission is considering whether to take another look at a decision that set identical water and sewer rates for 127 utility systems across Florida.

The systems are owned by Apopka-based Southern States Utilities and are located in 19 counties, from Washington County in the Panhandle to Collier County on the south-western coast.

The Florida Public Service Commission set uniform rates last March that affect 75,055 Southern States water customers and 25,966 sewer customers. In some areas, that means a 100 percent increase in rates, according to a PSC staff report.

"I think everybody admits this is a fairly radical departure in the regulation of water and sewer facilities in the state of Florida," said Michael Twomey, an assistant attorney general.

He is seeking to reopen the case along with state Sen. Ginny Brown-Walke, R-Spring Hill. The PSC was scheduled to consider the matter today.

"If I were a gambling woman, I would say we will be in court over this one," Brown-Walke said.

Southern States spokeswoman Ida Roberts said rates would probably be higher if it were forced to pursue 127 different increases.

Twomey and the other critics say uniform rates force customers in some areas to subsidize less-efficient systems elsewhere and that the PSC did not develop standards for setting statewide uniform rates until two months after the Southern States case.

The critics also contend the entire five-member PSC should have voted on such a high-profile case instead of only two commissioners, and that customers weren't given adequate notice that a uniform rate was being considered.

The PSC staff recommends the case be closed, saying all issues were addressed properly.

In March, the PSC approved a 85 base monthly rate for residential water service plus $1.19 for every 1,000 gallons used for all 127 systems. For sewer, a $12.61 base monthly rate was approved plus $3.41 per 1,000 gallons of water used. The figures reflect charges for the average residential customer.

The PSC staff report indicates only seven systems would have received lower rates if each case had been considered individually.

cents. You're ready to gut the whole goddam budget. I don't object to any of it."

Rabun has proposed retaining the same $5.42 tax rate for each $1,000 of taxable property as imposed last year.

But Rabun has also asked commissioners to increase the county gas tax by a penny to raise money for mass transit, raise the 4 percent tax on unincorporated utilities by nearly 100 percent to provide money for drainage improvements and to increase the dumping fee paid by garbage haulers by $5 per ton.

After commissioners briefly considered imposing tax cuts on Rabun, then allowing him to adjust his spending plan, they returned to scrutinizing each of his proposed 81 new employees, new vehicles and other specific spending. The review process was ripped by McLain, VanDerWeide and Sturm as "micro-managing," but Furlong and Warren insisted on department-by-department reviews.

Eslinger followed one heated quibbling session with a pause, then an exhaled "Well!" But commissioners were generally tolerant of his $28.9 million spending plan. The amount does not include $2.9 million to county pays for insurance and other sheriff's and jail expenses.

Rabun had proposed cutting four of Eslinger's eight sought-after new community policing officers and two of his requested seven new corrections officers. To save the positions, Eslinger offered to drop requests for a typist, three deputies and a school resource officer along with other expense trims.

Eslinger said the community officers were important to his program of problem-prevention rather than problem-response.

"I want to assure this commission I want to solve problems rather than throw deputies at them," said Eslinger.

Commissioners used the sheriff's budget discussion as an opportunity to return to their bickering. Furlong suggested voters be asked whether they should spend $10 million for a new sheriff's administration-public safety center.

"That's a nice way of ducking the issue," Sturm said.

"In case you don't recall, there was a referendum for much the same thing and the voters voted against it," said Eslinger.

Furlong, "But as long as you're in the tax-the-hell-out-of-em mode, then well be it." Both Sturm and Eslinger noted voters rejected the 1990 "Copper Penny" largely because it included a jail expansion while portions of the 756-bed jail remained empty each day. The sales tax also included money for each city even though half of them had no use for it.

In other discussions, commissioners agreed to eliminate a proposed move of the Museum of Seminole County History to the old Sanford post office to save a total of $200,000.

Deputy County Manager Kevin Grace said he proposed removing the county museum from its present location at Five Points because the building costs $20,000 to $25,000 annually to maintain and is not fully accessible to wheelchair-bound visitors.

The switch would cost $150,000 to move the library Technical Services Division to the Central Library in Casselberry and $50,000 to re-establish the museum in the former post office.

Sturm proposed taking the $200,000 and eliminating the vacant $30,000 museum curator position and spending the "savings" to make room for the county museum in a new building, possibly at Sanford Museum. No other commissioners took up the idea.

McLain also had praise for county Fire Chief Kaiser for trimming 6.5 percent out of his firefighter's spending plan and cutting other costs.

"We're real proud of that," Kaiser responded.

Clinton names Freeh to FBI

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — President Clinton today announced his nomination of federal Judge Louis Freeh, a former FBI agent and federal prosecutor, to succeed fired director William Sessions as FBI director.

Clinton called the 43-year-old district judge from Manhattan "a law enforcement legend." Freeh has spent nearly his entire career in government service, much of it investigating organized crime.

The announcement, made by Clinton during a brief Rose Garden ceremony attended by Freeh's family and friends, came just a day after he dismissed Sessions, ending a dramatic six-month confrontation.

"He is experienced, energetic and independent. He will be both good and tough — good for the FBI and tough on criminals," Clinton said in announcing Freeh's nomination.

Freeh, who spoke after Clinton, said: "If confirmed by the Senate, I pledge my total commitment to the FBI whose only beacon is the rule of law, whose sole task is protecting all our people from crime and violence."

"The FBI must stand for absolute integrity and be free of any political influence," he added.

Freeh was appointed to the bench by President Bush in 1991 after five years as an FBI agent and a decade as a federal prosecutor. As a prosecutor, he specialized in investigating organized crime.

Clinton interviewed Freeh at the White House last Friday and aides said he had been the only candidate for the FBI post under active consideration.

Clinton said he hoped for Freeh's "speedy confirmation" to the 10-year term.

White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers said today that swift confirmation was hoped for, in part because "he went through the process only two years ago."

Clinton noted his earlier appointments of Attorney General Janet Reno and drug czar Lee Brown. Along with Freeh, Clinton asserted, "our administration has a street-smart front line against crime."

"Our country must be made safe again, in cities, towns, villages and the countryside," the president said.

Burns

a school paddle to each youth, according to the report.

Kuby told investigators she specifically told Burns he did not have authority to administer corporal punishment. He had paddled a student before in an unrelated incident and had been told not to do it again.

On May 19, the mother of one of the boys filed a complaint against Burns after her son told her about the paddling. She had left instructions at the school her son was not to be paddled. The mother of the second youth did not find out about the paddling until informed of it by investigators.

The investigation found that Burns committed battery when he paddled the youth.

"It is common knowledge among school resource officers they have no authority to administer corporal punishment to students. Most are reluctant even to witness corporal punishment," the investigation report states.

Victor Burns assumed a cloak of authority neither granted by Florida State Statutes, Seminole County School Board policy, the School Resource officer program or Sanford Police Department policies or procedures," the report concluded.

The mother who filed the complaint against Burns could not be reached for comment this morning.

Revenue

Rabun said property taxes are the last thing he considers in the budget process. He said after each department chief makes their requests for the upcoming fiscal year, wants — and some needs — are trimmed out, then compared with fixed revenues and lastly, discretionary expenses.

"You look at the needs versus the wants and you try to match the needs with the available resources," said Rabun. "In boom times, you can look at increasing taxes to do a few more things. Some years, you just have to back into it. I've had to do that for the past couple of years."

With that in mind, here's a brief look at Rabun's proposed income picture:

PROPERTY TAXES: $67.8 million

Rabun will propose commissioners keep the same county tax of $5.42 per $1,000 of taxable property they imposed last year. The county's tax represents about a third or less of the total property tax bill paid each year. The school tax is nearly double that amount.

In all, ad valorem, property taxes will raise a total of $67.8 million. Of that amount, $53.3 million will be raised from the proposed countywide taxes and $14.6 million will come in from the county's tax on unincorporated properties.

LOCAL REVENUES: $70.6 million

Local gasoline taxes will contribute $4.4 million to the budget. Residents and visitors currently pay 9 cents on each gallon of gasoline. Rabun has proposed an additional cent to raise $775,000 next year for mass transit. Another $9.4 million will come from garbage fees.

Utility taxes will generate $2.8 million if Rabun's proposed increase is approved. Another $2.3 million will come from building permits and other development fees.

STATE REVENUES: $47.8 million

The largest share of money in this category, $27.2 million comes from the sales tax imposed by the county in 1991 after voter approval to build roads. Another large portion is the $10.9 million from state-shared sales taxes. Another $5.4 million comes from the state's cigarette and intangible taxes.

FEDERAL REVENUES: $3.8 million

A large portion of this income is derived from the $2.3 million the county expects to receive from the Community Development Block Grant program for low-income neighborhoods and seniors. Another portion comes from a $221,600 anti-drug abuse grant.

Among some of the specific revenues are:

- $24,000 from traffic fines;
- $9,605 from parking tickets;
- $64,417 from animal adoptions and disposal fees;
- $9,284 from late library fines and book replacements;
- $250 from Code Enforcement Board fines;
- $5,000 from code enforcement citations;
- $1,700 from scrap sales;
- $990,000 from the county's tourist development tax;
- $750 from adult entertainment licenses; and
- $12 from rent from the Central Florida Blood Bank.

Sunday when officers stopped Chandler's car as it was being driven in Matland. At that time, they said the driver, later identified as Jenkins, had fled from the scene on foot after the car was involved in a collision.

Orange County Sheriff's spokesman Carlos Padilla said the parents of the two originally apprehended, apparently convinced them to reveal the identity of the third person who was said to be driving Chandler's car. "I don't have specific details of where he was located," Padilla said, "but we have him in custody."

Preserving the good life means self-control

By ROBERT DVORCHAK
AP National Writer

NEW YORK — Looking for a sign of the times? Try a circle with a red slash through it and fill in the blank.

No smoking — in offices, restaurants, planes, airports, the White House and sports stadiums (baseball has even banned cigarettes and chewing tobacco in all minor league parks). Smoking is also prohibited in bars in the California towns of San Luis Obispo and Davis.

No drugs.
No drinking, at least the hard stuff, although a glass of wine with a meal is OK.

No fat and no cholesterol. Fish, pasta, poultry and oat bran are in; red meat and fried eggs are not. And please, Simplesse instead of superpremium ice cream for dessert.

No sex? Get real. But at least the free-wheelers have been warned about the risks. And, by the way, no unwanted flirtations in the workplace.

Tune in to the new mating call: "Drug-free, disease-free, nonsmoking, nondrinking, nonreligious, trim, politically correct vegetarian seeks soulmate with runner's high to lighten deaf brew with nondairy creamer."

What's it all mean?
This is the age of self-control and self-denial. Self-indulgence is not in one's self-interest.

Some call it New Puritanism, Neo-Prohibitionism or Non-ism, although those names are clumsy fits. The people who observe social patterns believe it's more accurate to call it Preservationism.

It's not puritanical. It's aging. Baby boomers who had a long run at youth are looking age in the face and saying, "Holy cow, I'm not going to live forever and I've been living like I would," said Pepper Schwartz, a sociologist at the University of Washington.

It's not narcissism. It is the preservation of the active and good life for a group of people who believe life is precious. There's a perspective at the risks one used to take, a feeling that I may have done it then but now I see the light," she said.

Ironic, huh?
A generation defined by wretched excess, one that questioned authority and parental values while searching for life's deeper meaning, has sobered as it reaches midlife parenthood and positions of responsibility. What goes around, comes around.

Yet from an historical perspective, the swing is hardly extraordinary.

"Every time you see a generation of narcissists in their 30s, you find a generation of moralists in their 50s," said Neil Howe, co-author of the book "Generations."

"They become very value focused in midlife. A boomer is like a black-cloaked preacher with a purgative tonic. There's a pessimistic edge, a dark edge, a tone of finality separating good from bad."

Howe finds one parallel at the turn of the century: Red meat was on the outs when muckraking author Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle" carped about Chicago meatpacking practices. And crusading evangelists helped outlaw heroin, cocaine and ultimately booze during Prohibition.

An earlier comparison involves the Puritans, noted for their solemn spirit of morality and religion that determined their whole way of life in colonial America. The Puritans fostered the "blue laws" to keep the Sabbath holy, and they went to extremes even in their black-and-white garb.

Although Puritans had plenty of scarlet letters, they had no aversion to alcohol, and some historians say one out of three colonial marriages came when the bride was pregnant. Still, H.L. Mencken once described Puritanism as "the haunting fear that someone, somewhere, may be happy."

Of course, any place as large and as complex as America contains pockets and countertrends where people smoke heavily, eat freely, drink liberally, have sex openly and can claim to live rich, full lives.

But in general, one-time symbols of hipness — cigarettes, lines of white powder, roach clips, a martini tumbler, ample waistlines — carry baggage as icons of the low-life.

According to an Associated Press poll taken by ICR Survey Research Group of Media, Pa., part of AUS Consultants, 60 percent believe the practice of healthy habits with regard to diet, exercise, drinking, drugs and personal behavior is increasing. And 78 percent said they personally worry some or a great deal about healthy behavior.

By sheer weight of numbers, the bulge in the population born after World War II influences older and younger generations. Per capita consumption of cigarettes and hard liquor have dropped significantly from 1980, and beer and wine consumption is down.

But baby boomer progeny are part of the pattern. Among high school seniors, drinking and smoking are down sharply, and in a recent survey conducted by the University of Michigan's Social Research Center, 73 percent said smoking is a dirty habit and 61 percent think smoking reflects poor judgment.

Purification is in the air. The self-improvement agenda includes unclogging arteries, trimming body fat and increasing aerobic capacity. All of which seem more doable than restoring the ozone or saving the rain forests, the lungs of the earth.

"The feeling is if one can't do anything about external circumstances, at least they can get their own lives in order," said Robin Room, a sociologist with the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto.

"There are quite important changes going on. This isn't happening the same way everywhere," he said. "But people are more concerned about their health. Health is a new kind of religion."

Ah, religion.
The same people who are taking better care of their lungs, livers and hearts are also tending to their souls. Baby boomers who once chanted "party hearty" are going back to church.

"Boomers grew up without boundaries. They gave themselves permission to do all kinds of things. Now that they have kids, they want their children to have structure and boundaries. Without banks, a river doesn't flow," said Ira Zepp, professor of religious studies at Western Maryland College.

"If you take one thing too far, you have its built-in opposite. Take the '60s too far and you get the '80s," Zepp said.

Summer Thunderstorms Cause Havoc On Pump Systems

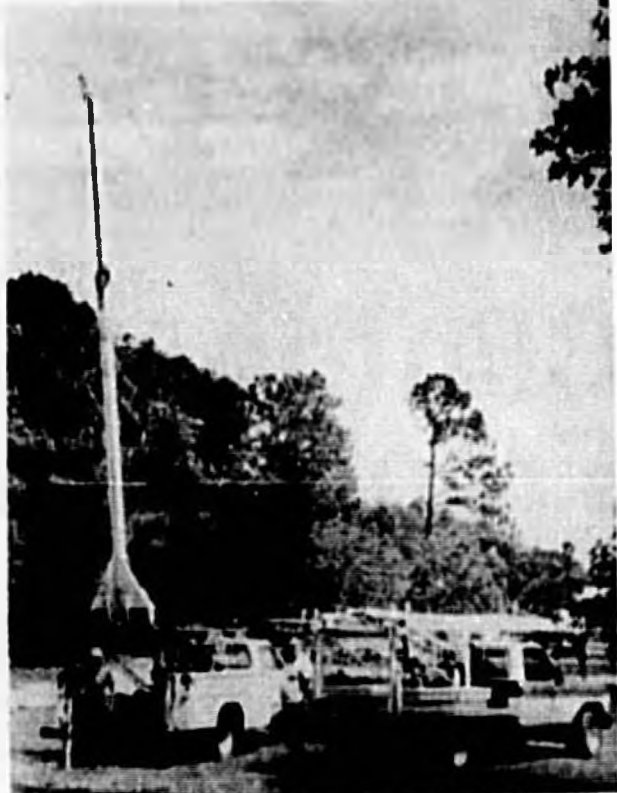

Summer is a busy season for Jim Smith Well Drilling because of frequent afternoon thunderstorms. Unfortunately, lightning and water don't mix and many pumps are damaged because water conducts electricity. While many pump companies leave their customers without water for several days, Jim Smith Well Drilling strives to provide same day service because of their up-to-date hydraulic equipment, specially designed for deep well retrieval. Companies with outdated equipment can take up to four days to do repairs and often don't do the best job in that amount of time.

Jim Smith Well Drilling, a complete well and pump service, is owned and operated by Bill Dearoff. The company is a licensed water contractor by the St. Johns River Water Management District (state license #7103). Bill is also factory certified and trained by the Sta-Rite Pump Manufacturing Co., which is the most common pump used in wells.

Bill Dearoff has been a resident of the Longwood area for more than 40 years.

Bill works along side of his servicemen Howard and Larry. Together they have 35 years of experience in the well and pump business. This experience is what makes the difference. If you are considering the purchase of a well system, make sure that "terrific deal" is really terrific. Bill says the quality of the products and work is the first thing that is cut when a company quotes you a low price. You also need to consider who is going to give the best service after the sale. Bill really understands all the aspects of electricity and water and the relationship between the two during summer thunderstorms. Lightning usually strikes the highest object in the area. That is why people are warned not to take refuge under lone pine trees on golf courses during storms. But what Bill knows is that well pumps are one of the best lightning attractions there is even in the ground. Lightning will follow power lines to the metal pump and through the welded metal pipe leading down beyond the water table of your well. Bill says he spends a lot of time in Volusia County making service calls after big storms. Most homeowners insurance policies cover the cost of pump repairs.

Jim Smith Well Drilling does commercial and residential work, on established as well as new construction. Homeowners with big yards should consider well pump systems as a source of money savings. Most systems pay for themselves in savings over paying for city water. Most large office complexes and apartment communities use well pump systems.

All of Bill's trucks are radio equipped for fast service. In most cases, Bill can drill a complete well from start to finish in one day. Because most brands of replacement pumps are available locally, Bill can also complete most repair jobs in one day.

Give Jim Smith Well Drilling a call anytime to discuss a new well pump system, and of course, in times of need of fast friendly service with quality equipment and experience. Jim Smith Well Drilling can be reached at 695-2700 or 323-8590 at Highway 427 and County Home Road in Sanford. Member of the Florida Home Builders Association.

Endangered tax break means billions for Puerto Rico

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A multibillion-dollar tax break for companies operating in Puerto Rico is under attack in President Clinton's budget, triggering a fierce defense from industry lobbyists, the island and their potent allies in Congress.

Clinton is asking Congress to scale back a tax break that permits firms to earn tax-free income from their operations in Puerto Rico, a benefit that has attracted dozens of manufacturers there over the past two decades.

"The whole thing is absolutely indefensible," said Richard Leonard, an official of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, which backs the president in curtailing the benefit. He said the credit encourages export of union jobs.

But Peter Holmes, a lobbyist for a business coalition trying to protect the tax break, countered: "This is a very unfair and inequitable hit on Puerto Rico," already burdened by poverty and high unemployment.

The benefit, known as Section 936 of the Internal Revenue Service Code, has been targeted as part of Clinton's effort to slice the federal deficit by $500 billion over the next five years.

The House voted to cut the benefit by $6.7 billion over five years by limiting it to a credit for 60 percent of wages paid by the companies in Puerto Rico.

With the support of two influential members of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee — Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Bill Bradley, D-N.J. — the Senate restored about $2.5 billion. Moynihan represents a large Puerto Rican community in New York.

Career as teen undercover agent ends with sex charges

By PATTY HENETZ
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — For six years, Kevin Carter repeated his senior year of high school. Always the nice-looking new kid, he studied math and English, made friends, scored drugs from other students.

And busted them.
He's 24, but his face is as unlined and pink-checked as a 10-year-old's. He's loose-jointed, rangy, adolescent. He could have passed as a high-school senior for many more years.

But Kevin Carter's career as a high school narc is over. He did well in Utah, but when he moved his show to Wyoming, disaster ensued. In the end, the only charges filed were against Carter: he was too old to mess around with teen-age girls, and that is what he is accused of doing.

He denies it. "I had every opportunity to have sex with those females. I didn't. Other officers did," he said, but he wouldn't elaborate.

Carter, whose uncle was a California Highway Patrol trooper, always wanted to be a cop. He swears he has never done drugs, and has made a living as a contract narcotics investigator or a free-lance informant since 1987, the year he graduated from high school in Utah.

He put himself through a four-week training session at the state Police Academy. When he didn't have a regular undercover assignment, he free-lanced.

He once earned $1,000 after turning in a man he befriended after overhearing him talking on the telephone about drugs. In Summit County, Utah, he was paid $5 per hour for his high school undercover work.

Carter was provided with false driver's licenses and dummed school records, but he had to keep his grades up enough to stay in school.

Carter approached the students carefully. For the first month or so he wouldn't mention drugs. Then he'd tell his new teen-age friends he was a former user, now clean — a tactic the youths found irresistible.

Ultimately, he would ask someone to score for him, then made a point to be there when the teens were arrested: "I had to ID them. But I also wanted to look them in the face. I didn't want them to think I couldn't do that."

Carter readily acknowledges his living arrangements helped lure his quarry. His friends swallowed the lies he told about why he was living alone. And with no parents around, his house or apartment would become the favorite party spot.

Carter said the arrangement was enticing — but not a trap.

"We afforded them the opportunity to commit crime. But we didn't force them to do it," he said.

In a major drug sweep in 1991 that included an undercover operation at a small-town high school, Carter made 13 of 30 cases before his cover was blown and authorities ended the operation. All 13 of his Utah cases brought convictions, most for second-degree felonies.

"I never should have left Utah," he said.

But he did. In 1992, the Wyoming Department of Criminal Investigation hired Carter to go undercover in the state's first-ever high school drug stings; they did not go well. One operation ended after Carter helped steal beer from an American Legion hall. The other netted six arrests but no prosecutions.

Some families claimed Carter had encouraged their children to buy drugs. Wyoming Attorney General Joseph Meyer investigated, then left it to the county attorneys to file charges. They did — against the informant.

In two separate cases in different Wyoming counties, Carter is charged with taking indecent liberties with a minor, which is causing or encouraging a child to commit an immoral or indecent act but doesn't include sexual intercourse. Convictions could bring 10 years in prison.

A $6 million suit filed by parents of a 17-year-old girl from Pinedale, Wyo., provides more details.

Police given incentives to live in neighborhoods they protect

By CHRISTINA CONNOR
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — When police Officer James Jones bought a condemned house through a city loan program, he didn't have to gut it before renovating. The crack dealers who lived there before had pretty much seen to that.

"The before picture of the house you wouldn't believe," said the 28-year-old officer, who first saw the place when he raided it as a rookie in 1990.

The dealers had torn holes in the walls to hide drugs and painted "Stop" on a lamppost for a drive-through drug pickup. Cars blasted music into the night.

Now, the officer, his wife and two young children have a new home with smooth, white walls and shiny floors. The tree-lined street is quiet.

Jones was one of nine city officers to sign up in 1990 for a program that gives them low-interest loans to buy and move into houses in poor neighborhoods they have patrolled.

"The whole idea is to promote home ownership and encourage police officers to have a vested interest in the city of Columbia and the neighborhood," said program director Eric Cassell.

Cities around the country have followed Columbia's lead, and the program is in the running for a national award. The Ford Foundation on Friday awarded it $20,000 as one of 25 finalists for its Innovations Awards. If the program makes the top 10, it could get $100,000.

Another officer who signed up, Michael Hendricks, said driving home in a patrol car for meals makes neighbors feel safer and might deter crime. He lives in the neighborhood with his wife and 9-week-old daughter.

"Just his presence makes people feel more secure," said 72-year-old Dorothy Barton, who has lived in the area for 12 years and is two houses away.

Dorothy Murray, 58, said before Hendricks moved in last September her house was broken into several times, despite sturdy locks. "The only way to get in was to smash the windows, and they did that in broad daylight," she said.

But with Hendricks as a neighbor, she hasn't had any problems.

Columbia used federal grants and money saved by refinancing city debt to offer the 4 percent loans with no money down. The homes were bought and renovated for an average of $65,000 to $70,000 each.

At least seven similar programs have been started by other cities, including Sarasota, Fla., and Wichita, Kan., Cassell said.

A Savannah, Ga., program, called Cops on the Block, also offers 4 percent loans, but the officers must make down payments. At least two officers bought houses that had been condemned.

"They'd been vacant for years and they were just in terrible shape. You can imagine — the worst piece of property. They had to be stripped and gutted to the core," said Henry Moore, the city's public development director.

Danny Baker, assistant dean of the University of South Carolina's College of Criminal Justice, said there are other pluses when officers move into blighted neighborhoods.

"It will show people in the community another side of a law enforcer. When the officer is uniform, all they see is a badge and gun," he said.

Gay soldiers feel betrayed

By The Associated Press

Naval reservist Lt. Zoe Dunning, a lesbian, feels betrayed.

She announced her homosexuality in January, relying on President Clinton's promise to lift the ban on gays in the military. Then she heard the news.

"I'm probably out of a job," the 29-year-old said in San Francisco.

Backpedaling on a campaign promise to lift the ban unconditionally, Clinton announced a plan Monday that will allow homosexuals to serve provided they do not engage in gay sex and they keep quiet about their sexual preference.

Around the country, many homosexuals said the policy would unfairly force gays to hide their lifestyles and doesn't make clear what is acceptable behavior.

"I look at this and think, God, we're taking a step 30 years back," said retired Sgt. 1st Class Perry Watkins of Tacoma, Wash., a 16-year Army veteran who was discharged in 1984 because he is gay. After seven years in court, he was reinstated, then retired.

Watkins said that it is unrealistic to require gays to be celibate.

"He sold us short, and now he expects us to be happy," said Capt. Pam Mindt in Minneapolis. "It's like giving someone who's starving half a piece of bread and saying, 'Be happy.'"

A board of officers recommended in May that Mindt, a 16-year veteran of the Minnesota Army National Guard, be discharged because she is a lesbian. The case is pending.

Lt. Heidi DeJesus, a logistics officer at Goodfellow Air Force Base in San Angelo, Texas, also criticized the plan. A military board in Washington is reviewing a recommendation that DeJesus be discharged for having a gay affair.

"What might happen is you don't ask me, I don't tell, but if you find out I could still be dismissed," DeJesus said.

Clinton called the plan "an honorable compromise" and "not a perfect solution."

Under the plan, scheduled to take effect Oct. 1, homosexuals could be dismissed for gay activity ranging from holding hands to sexual acts.

But they would not be discharged for simply going to a gay bar, reading homosexual publications or marching in a gay-rights parade.

Investigations into a gay soldier's conduct could only be initiated with clear evidence of homosexual behavior.

"We didn't get what we wanted, but we can live with what we've got," said Danny Leonard, owner of the only gay bar in Jacksonville, N.C., near the Marine Corps' Camp Lejeune. "We've got our foot in the door."

The Friends Lounge will no longer be off limits to the base's 40,000 Marines.

Cubs split

ORLANDO — The Orlando Cubs and Knoxville Smokies split a doubleheader Monday night in Southern League action.

Knoxville took the first game 3-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Huck Flenner. The Cubs won the second game 3-2.

Flenner (10-4) became the Southern League's second 10-game winner. Alex Gonzalez, Tim Hyers and Tim Hodge all drove in runs in a three-run sixth inning for the Smokies.

In the nightcap, Corey Kapano's sacrifice fly in the fourth inning scored Mike Grace to snap a 2-2 tie. Travis Willis pitched the final 1-2-3 innings to notch his league-leading 21st save and give Sherman Corbet (1-0) his first win.

AROUND THE STATE

Marlins dump Rockies

MIAMI — Ryan Bowen (5-8) allowed one run in seven innings and Darrell Whitmore hit the longest ever home run in Florida, leading the Marlins over Colorado 3-1. The Rockies, who have lost five straight games, lead the season series against the Marlins, 6-4.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fourth inning, Gary Sheffield doubled, moved to third on a grounder and scored on a Benito Santiago sacrifice fly to put the Marlins ahead. Whitmore followed with his second home run of the season, a solo shot estimated at 421 feet off starter Kent Bottenfield (2-6).

Suns edge Lookouts

JACKSONVILLE — Jacksonville pitcher Ron Villone pitched six innings of one-hit baseball to lead the Suns over Chattanooga 2-1 Monday.

Villone (2-0) struck out 10 and allowed one unearned run in the seventh inning.

Jacksonville scored in the second on a Ruben Santana double and Lipso Nava's groundout.

The Suns scored another run in the third inning when Tow Maynard hit a two-out double and Eddy Diaz singled him in.

AROUND THE NATION

Bulls get stronger

DEERFIELD, Ill. — The Chicago Bulls have signed a deal guaranteed to give opposing backcourts even more problems than they already have against Michael Jordan.

By signing 6-foot-11 Toni Kukoc, who can play guard and forward, to a deal reportedly worth as much as $17.6 million over eight years, the Bulls refused to rest on past glory.

Despite his height, the 24-year-old Kukoc (pronounced KOO-coach) is more skilled as a ballhandler and a shooter than as a rebounder, and the Bulls envision him pushing the ball upcourt and making plays similar to forward Scottie Pippen.

Kukoc averaged 17.8 points, 6.3 rebounds and 5.8 assists in helping Benetton to second place in the European Club Championship and the Italian League.

Contrasting victories

Winner's "adopt" styles in NABF tournament

Brian Erlich of the College Park Angels disproves the saying, "you have to keep your eye on the ball", on this play as he records a put out against the Altamonte Springs Dodgers in the opening game of the NABF Tournament at Lake Mary High School Monday evening. The Dodgers would win the game 6-3.

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — What's that nickname again?

The winner's in the opening round of the National Amateur Baseball Federation (NABF) district tournament at Lake Mary High School Monday evening, the Altamonte Springs Dodgers and the Seminole Animal Supply Bullets from Longwood, belied their respective team names to advance in the winner's bracket.

In the opening game, the Dodgers, the defending tournament champions, looked more like speeding bullets as they jumped on the College Park Angels for four runs on six hits in the top of the first inning and went on to post a 6-3 victory.

In the nightcap, the Bullets' pitchers looked more like arctic dodgers as they stranded 10 Winter Park Bates Team Sports runners in winning 5-3.

If you take seeding into account both games had to be considered upsets as the Angels (Bishop Moore High School's summer team) and Bates Team Sports (the summer team from Lake Howell High School) were seeded third and fifth, respectively.

That can be a little deceiving, however, as all four teams had finished the regular season with 9-11 records and the seeding was decided by the luck of the draw.

Left hander Chris Tibbetts hurled a complete game as the sixth-seeded Dodgers (the summer team for Lake Brantley High School) earned an 8 p.m. date with the second-seeded, and host, Lake Mary Mudcats (the summer team from Lake Mary High School) tonight.

The Angels will play in an elimination game at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Both the Bullets (Lyman High School's summer squad) and Bates Team Sports hit the ball hard, but

"Mice" caught in own trap

From Staff Reports

WINTER SPRINGS — Bamboo Cafe turned the tables on Paddy McGee's Monday night and trapped the "Mice" in their own trap.

Paddy McGee's "Mice", from Oviedo, have made a habit of either winning games by big scores or by falling behind early and roaring back in the late innings, stunning their opponents and not leaving them enough time to recover.

Monday night in the Winter Springs Recreation Department Women's Class C Summer Slowpitch Softball League at Central Winds Park, the "Mice" held a 4-3 lead but Bamboo Cafe scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning, only giving the "Mice" one turn at bat to come back, and posted a 6-4 triumph.

Paddy McGee's fell to 2-3 with loss and will play an interesting contest next Monday night against Reg's Raiders at 6:30 p.m.

The Raiders are the summer team from Oviedo High School and are managed by current Oviedo High School head coach Greg Register, who plays on the men's counter part team of the "Mice". Toucan Willes, on Tuesday night, both the "Mice" and Toucan Willes are managed by Mickey Norton.

Doing the damage offensively for the "Mice" were Heidi Green (three hits), April Stoner (two hits, two runs scored), Connie Thomas (two hits), Terri Mann, Brenda Davis, Phyllis Baynes, Tami Chesser and Lisa Berg (one hit each) and Jackie Janowiak (two RBI on a sacrifice fly and a fielder's choice).

Chesser and Denise Levinson led the defense.

Laurie Szymanski (front) leads Mary Coode, six-year-old Katie Szymanski and Lionel Bonck (hat) across the finish line in the Mile-run at the Lake Mary Summer Track Series at Greenwood Lakes Monday evening.

Mau, McDowell shine at Track Series

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Shan Mau and Patty McDowell were the big winners in the Lake Mary Summer Track Series at Greenwood Lakes Middle School Monday evening.

Mau and McDowell were the top individual winners for night as 26 competitors showed up for the series that will conclude next Monday night.

Mau, running in the 9-10 year old Boys age group, entered seven events and walked away with seven wins in an unbelievable performance, especially considering the hot and humid conditions that existed during the meet.

Patty McDowell, the sister of Lake Mary High School runner Jennifer McDowell, also had a monster night, winning all five events she entered while competing in the 11-12 year old Girls Division.

Monday night's meet also featured a unique, first time, and probably last, 5x200-yard co-ed relay race. The normally scheduled 4x200 relay attracted 10 interested parties, and since two more people could not be found to make up three full teams, the decision was made to go with two live member teams.

The experiment worked out well as after four legs the race was dead even and was decided on the final lap by only one-and-a-half seconds.

The series will close its four-week run next Monday with the annual "Watermelon Mile Prediction Race" in addition to the regular events at the Greenwood Lakes Middle School track.

"Each person who runs the mile will tell me what he or she thinks they will run," said Series coordinator Mike Gibson Sr., the head Girls' Track and Cross Country coach at Lake Mary High School. "The closest to his or her estimated time, both a boy and a girl, will win a free watermelon."

The Lake Mary Summer Track Series has an age group for any person, male or female, from age five on up who is interested in running for fun, getting in shape, or getting ready for the high school track and cross country seasons.

The cost to enter is a minuscule $1 for the entire meet and you can run in as many events as you like, although it is recommended that you only enter four events.

Field events start at 5:30 p.m. with the running events set for a 6 p.m. start.

New faces dot Dolphins roster

By STEVEN WINE AP Sports Writer

DAVIE - Before getting ready for the first game, the Miami Dolphins must learn each other's first name.

Miami began training camp Monday with new receivers, two new offensive linemen and a new fullback. Also present was a full complement of rookies - every draft choice took part in the workout.

"This is the first time in recent memory that that's happened," a delighted coach Don Shula said.

Quarterback Dan Marino began a transition with a new offensive cast. His targets since 1983, Mark Clayton and Mark Duper, will be replaced by newcomers Irving Fryar, Mark Ingram and top draft pick O.J. McDuffie.

"I'm going to have to learn about them, but that's what training camp is for," Marino said. "I think our offense will be an explosive offense."

"The thing we want to do," Shula said, "is be able to line up on opening day with our people in place and not have them make mental errors that can cost you games."

The last of seven draft choices to sign a contract was third-round pick Terry Kirby, a running back from Virginia, who accepted a three-year deal for an estimated $900,000.

Two veterans - receiver Scott Miller and cornerback Chris Green - agreed to terms, leaving four players unsigned. They are safety Louis Oliver, cornerback J.B. Brown, center Jeff Uhlenhake and running back Bobby Humphrey.

Despite broiling weather, a crowd of 1,500 filled the stands to watch the first practice at the team's new complex at Nova University. The injury list began even before the workout.

run second," he said. "You don't get a break during practice. That's different from New England."

Also adjusting to a new club was fullback Keith Byars, who signed as a free agent Thursday. Byars will spend many hours with his playbook in the weeks to come.

"I'll just give up some free time," he said. "Every moment I have is going to be to eat, drink and sleep football. It's a good thing my wife isn't down here."

Large turnout for Bucs mini-camp

By FRED GOODALL AP Sports Writer

TAMPA - Unsigned draft picks Eric Curry and Demetrius DuBoise reported to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' voluntary minicamp and team officials are optimistic that the two will sign contracts before training camp formally begins next week.

Although attendance wasn't mandatory, 83 players were present for the start of workouts on Monday. The group included all of the team's unsigned players except offensive tackle Paul Gruber, the club's designated franchise player.

"The two buzzwords for this week will be conditioning and learning," coach Sam Wyche said. "We are doing a little hitting, but the main objective is to get as many reps in as possible."

Besides Gruber, Curry and DuBoise, linebacker Calvin Tiggle, defensive lineman Rhett Hall and safety Marty Carter are unsigned. Meanwhile, third-year wide receiver Lawrence Dawsey became one of the team's better-paid players.

Dawsey, a third-round draft choice in 1991, insisted on signing a short-term contract as a rookie - gambling that he would perform well enough to command big money after two years.

So after leading the Bucs with 60 receptions and making about $240,000 last season, the former Florida State star signed a four-year contract on Monday. Terms were not revealed, but he was seeking about $1 million per season.

"We both gave a little bit to get the deal done," Dawsey said. "I probably could have held out for a better deal, but I wanted to get in here and get ready for the season."

Curry, the sixth player selected in the draft, and DuBoise, the club's second-round selection, are participating in minicamp even though they haven't signed. Bucs vice president Rich McKay said he's hopeful that agreements can be reached by the end of the week.

"Everything's going to work out," Curry said. "I'm really not too worried. Things will get done." Dawsey had an outstanding rookie season two years ago, starting 10 games and catching 55 passes for 818 yards and three touchdowns. A nagging ankle injury slowed him in 1992 and while his receptions increased to 60, his yardage (776 yards) and TDs (one) slipped.

"I don't think he had the kind of second season that any of us, including L.D., would have liked," Wyche said. "But all the talent is there. ... He has worked hard during the offseason and this (third year) is about the time a player's career starts to take off."

Cincinnati probable new home for Duper

Associated Press

CINCINNATI - Free-agent wide receiver Mark Duper has reached a verbal agreement on contract terms with the Cincinnati Bengals, his agent said.

Duper, 34, recently was waived by the Miami Dolphins after 11 seasons.

"In all likelihood, he will sign within the next couple of days," said Drew Rosenhaus, Duper's agent. "The interest in Mark was amazing. ... I didn't think things would go this fast, no way."

Sources told The Miami Herald and The Cincinnati Enquirer that Duper agreed to a one-year, $1 million deal.

Bengals general manager Mike Brown would say only that the team was interested in Duper.

Program helps prevent abductions

WINTER SPRINGS — Joan Thompson, executive director of Missing Children Center, Inc., participated in a training workshop to learn about Child Find of America's unique Mediation Program to prevent and resolve parental abduction.

Sponsored by the National Victim Center in conjunction with the National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, the workshop provided missing children's organizations with another alternative to returning abducted children.

Child Find's Mediation program offers the parent who is hiding with their child or the parent contemplating abduction, the opportunity to resolve differences with the other parent through confidential, over-the-phone, no cost mediation provided by a trained volunteer Child Find Mediator.

"We are happy to share our program and work in cooperation with organizations like the Missing Children Center to help bring missing children home", said Carolyn Zogg, executive director of Child Find. "With over 350,000 children abducted by a family member each year, all missing children's organization must work together to stem this alarming national problem".

Late wife's parents are still in-laws

DEAR ABBY: Could you please answer the following question for me: When your spouse dies, are his parents still your in-laws?

I am involved with a widower I'll call John, who always refers to his late wife's parents as "my in-laws."

I do not consider my late husband's family my in-laws any longer. To be honest with you, I am glad to be rid of them — with the exception of one, whom I consider a friend now, not an in-law.

I feel that John is having trouble letting go of his late wife's memory, as he still calls her parents his in-laws. I haven't any problem with his being friends with them, but after a couple is divorced, they no longer have in-laws, so why not in death?

DEAR WONDERING: When John's wife died, technically, her parents became his former in-laws, but he probably continues to refer to them as his in-laws out of habit and respect to their former relationship.

DEAR ABBY: As I begin my second year of medical school, I need some advice on how to respond to those ignorant people who assume that since I am female, I am studying to be a nurse. Men and women alike are guilty of this stereotypical error.

Please don't get me wrong, I have just as much respect for nurses — they work as hard as some physicians, but women are seldom given the credit they deserve.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

I once heard the following statement: "Oh, so you're in a medical school? My sister is a nurse, too!"

I cannot tell you how angry this makes me, and I am not alone. Many of my female classmates also feel this way.

Do you have a response that expresses our feelings without offending the speaker? By the way, my class in medical school is 40 percent female — the highest percentage ever in this school.

MS. FUTURE DOCTOR IN L.A. DEAR FUTURE DOCTOR: Anyone who is confused about the role of a student in medical school should be told that medical schools, and future nurses are trained in nursing schools.

DEAR ABBY: You ought to be ashamed of yourself for advising Mrs. Bogus (whose name was changed from Buguslaski) to stick with "bogus" because it's much easier to spell, pronounce and remember. I am proud of my brothers for not changing our name, which is Szczepanski, to one that might have been easier to spell and remember. I am also proud of our grandchildren who never complained about our name, which is not easy to spell, pronounce or remember.

THERESA SCZEPANSKI SIENKIEWICZ, JERSEY CITY, N.J. DEAR THERESA: (Do you mind if I just call you "Theresa"?) You win.

DEAR ABBY: An acquaintance of ours offered to get us some fireworks for our Fourth of July celebration. He dropped them off and we paid for them.

When we opened them, we realized there is no way they could be legal for private use.

Abby, I don't know what to do with them! They are in our garage covered up. How can we get rid of them without getting into trouble? Please hurry your answer.

INNOCENT YET GUILTY IN FLORIDA DEAR INNOCENT: Since I don't know the size of your town, or what public services it offers (such as hazardous waste removal), the place to call would be your fire department. Explain that you have some combustible materials that need to be disposed of. I'm sure they will be happy to be of assistance.

Keep smiling

Cortisone relieves fluid buildup

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have water on my elbow that has been drained three times in the last 30 days. Why does it keep coming back?

DEAR READER: Joints, like other body tissues, respond to injury or infection only by producing certain limited reactions -- pain and swelling being the most common. Joint trauma usually causes the appearance of excess fluid, which protects the joint from further injury.

If the trauma is ongoing, such as the continued use of an affected joint, the fluid will repeatedly accumulate as fast as it is withdrawn. This is merely one of Nature's protective mechanisms.

Bursitis of the elbow often causes fluid buildup, which can be reduced by injecting cortisone into the joint at the same time the fluid is removed. If this doesn't do the trick, try immobilizing the elbow (with a splint or elastic bandage) for several days. The enforced rest should allow the joint to heal.

Incidentally, a joint effusion (fluid) is not harmful; it won't lead to arthritis or permanent disability. Therefore, some people choose to ignore it until it disappears, usually in a matter of months.

DEAR DR. GOTT: As a business person, I have to wear a suit and tie most days. I've noticed that on the days when I don't wear a buttoned shirt with a tie, I am more active, productive, and less fatigued. It's almost as if the restriction on the neck reduces the flow of blood to the head. Could this be possible?

DEAR READER: No. I'll bet that you're more productive and less fatigued on the days you shed your coat and tie because you're experiencing less stress. A tight collar may impede venous blood flow from the head to the heart, but it won't reduce arterial blood flow from the heart to the head because the arteries lie deep in the neck and are not affected by such mild external compression.

Probably, the days you are required to dress up are filled with more tension, expectations and demands, which can increase fatigue and reduce productivity. To test my theory, analyze your workdays. Let me know your conclusions.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

You are at home, wanting to play some bridge, but you don't have three friends handy. Fear not. If you have a computer and a modem, you can log onto The Sierra Network, usually with a local phone call, and play not only bridge but a host of other games. (For details, call 1-800-SIERRA-1.)

The rate of play is slower than with four people around a table, but you may interact with the other players: discuss system with your partner, alert bids you think partner might not understand, watch partner's card-play when you are the dummy. You even see pictures of the other players - which might not be accurate likenesses.

On today's deal, Richard Aaronson, who works for Sierra, found a great opening lead. East was playing in Dallas, dummy in Venice, Calif., and declarer in Chicago.

From the Blackwood auction, Aaronson knew that all four aces were coming down in the dummy. Deciding to put immediate pressure on declarer, Aaronson led the diamond nine.

With 12 top tricks, South could finesse the diamond queen. But he saw that the spades offered more chances. There might be a 3-3 split, or East could have a singleton 10 or jack, or either opponent could hold J-10 doubleton, or East could have a doubleton honor and South could guess the position. Also there was one other factor. If West had under-led the diamond king and held four or more spades, he could be squeezed.

So South put up dummy's diamond ace at trick one and went down in his grand slam.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 21, 1993

In the year ahead you might do better in joint endeavors than you will in situations where you're operating independently of others. Seek allies if what you're attempting to do is too much for you alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's imperative you manage your money prudently today so that you'll have what you'll need when the weekend rolls around. Extravagance will be penalized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Being your own person is admirable, but be careful you do not carry this inclination to extremes today. There are times when you should be a team player rather than a lone eagle.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you failed to take care of previously might vy for immediate attention again today. Why don't you take care of this thorn in your side once and for all?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be tolerant of your friends today and accept them as they are, faults and all. If you are intolerant, this could cause them to start looking for your shortcomings as well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your chances for success are only fair to middling today, not because you lack motivation and ambition, but because the tactics and procedures you'll use might be self-defeating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Have all your facts at your disposal today if you're promoting issues you want others to endorse. If they aren't convinced you know what you're talking about, you won't be believed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It might be necessary today to make a few adjustments and tighten up your budget a bit more than you already have. Prudence is a good preventive measure against extravagance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today if you have to deal with several people who appear to be uncooperative and self-seeking, be honest and ask yourself if they are emulating your example. There's a chance they might be.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Self-induced problems are likely today if you fly by the seat of your pants without having a proper game plan. Take time to figure out your moves before making making any moves.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't impose yourself upon any group or situation where the welcome mat is not out for you. If you assert yourself where you're not wanted, negative results are likely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you do not express yourself carefully today, there is a very strong chance what you say could be misinterpreted and difficult to repair. Think before you speak.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It could be a big mistake today to test your ideas out on someone you know from experience is a negative thinker. He/she might cause you to alter your ideas into something ineffective.
