Dream of children's park is coming true

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Those who want to get children off the streets feel they are obligated to give them a safe, fun alternative.

To that end, the Concerned Organized Men in Action (COMA) group is joining with the city of Sanford to create the Bentley/Wilson Children's Park at the corner of 7th Street and Orange Avenue.

The park has been named in honor of Sanford children's activists Altermese Bentley and Eunice Wilson.

For now, an aging playground with rusting swings and a number of tarnished metal climbing places fill a corner of the spacious area. Too often, they say, the park remains empty. The equipment, nearly 30 years old, seems dull to children of this era and not quite safe to their parents.

The members of COMA have been working hard to drive the drug dealers and other questionable characters from the playground and from the surrounding neighborhoods over the last several years. As a result of their efforts, the streets in that area are cleaner and less dangerous for children. Still, the park is largely unused.

COMA intends to do something about that.

They are looking for some help in their endeavor, however. Nearly 75 volunteers are needed on Friday to help the group turn the rolls of blueprints into an exciting place for youngsters to hang out.

Food donations for project workers are also needed.

Bernard Mitchell, president of COMA, said he applauds the citizens of Sanford who worked hard to raise

City explores plan for airport control

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An agreement to turn operations of the Orlando Sanford Airport from the city of Sanford to the Sanford Airport Authority remains unsettled. The matter was tabled during Monday night's Sanford City Commission meeting.

Extensive discussion was held on the proposal during the commission work session. Airport Authority Attorney Steve Coover gave an overview of the proposed agreement.

Coover explained that in order to progress at the airport, both in the field of aviation and commercial development, the Authority needed proof to furnish to potential developers that the land would not be taken away from them. He told the commission that no developer would become involved in a multi-million dollar construction project when the Authority could not assure them of a long-term commitment.

Coover supplied the commission with a letter from Luis Reiter, with Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, a law firm serving as Bond Counsel.

Traffic accident

A 1986 Mitsubishi, driven by Leon K. Wyrum, 62, of 507 N. Lake, Sanford, collided with a 1986 Plymouth Van yesterday morning. The van was driven by Patricia Klash DeBose, 43, of Bethune Circle, Sanford. According to Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmire, Wyrum, headed north on French Avenue, apparently ran through a red light, into the 13th Street intersection. DeBose was reportedly heading west on 13th, and crossing French at the time. Whitmire said the Mitsubishi struck the driver's side of the van turning it over. DeBose was taken to South Seminole Hospital for treatment of her injuries. Wyrum was charged with failure to yield the right of way to a vehicle approaching an intersection. Wyrum reportedly was not injured.

New cop station in future?

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A proposal to relocate the Sanford police station has made it through the first step. The City Commission has earmarked up to $5,000 for a study to determine if the First Federal Bank building at 312 W. First Street would be usable.

At the present time, only the first three floors of the six-story building would be utilized, but City Manager Bill Simmons explained that the rest of the building could be used for possible expansion in the future.

Under present plans, the city would lease the building for 15 years.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein said he had heard there may be a sufficient quantity of asbestos in the building which may be a hazard. Simmons responded that he had checked the previous lease on the building and found no significant asbestos mentioned.

Lawsuit settled for $2 million

MIAMI — The families of environmentalist George Barley and a pilot who died in a charter plane crash in June have sued the plane's manufacturers after settling with the owners of the aircraft.

Air Orlando, which owned the 1977 twin-engine Beechcraft, agreed Monday to pay $2 million to settle the wrongful death suit filed on behalf of Barley and pilot Mark Swade.

Miami attorney Ira Leasfeld, who represents the Barley family, said Monday the original suit asked for $20 million, but it was settled for $2 million since that was the amount for which the company was insured.

Another $20 million suit was filed Friday against four of the airplane's parts manufacturers, claiming the Beechcraft crashed because of defective equipment and design and manufacturing negligence.

The Air Orlando charter plane was on its way from Orlando to Jacksonville on June 23 when it crashed on takeoff. Barley, 61, and Swade were the only people on board.

The cause of the crash remains under investigation, but a preliminary report from Federal Aviation Administration said it was caused by a fuel system failure.

Named in the latest suit filed in Dade County Circuit Court are Teledyne Continental Motors, Beech Aircraft Corp., Aircraft Technical Publications and Micro VQ Inc.

Barley's widow, Mary, said Monday in a telephone interview from her Orlando home she did not know about the settlement, but she pledged part of the money would go to Everglades clean-up causes.

Air Orlando does not acknowledge any wrongdoing in the settlement, Leasfeld said.

FDLE raids firm run by Gallagher

CLEARWATER, Fla. — State police agents raided a testing company run by former state insurance commissioner Tom Gallagher and owned by his longtime political ally, Jim Bax.

Agents from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement served a search warrant at National Assessment Institute for records connected to an ongoing federal grand jury investigation in Tallahassee, said FDLE spokesman Mike McHargue.

Citing grand jury secrecy rules, McHargue said he couldn't offer details about the agents' search, other than they sought to "seize and inspect records related to the investigation."

The probe is believed to focus on possible problems within the Joint Underwriting Association and contractual arrangements between NAI and the state Department of Business and Professional Regulation, the Tampa Tribune reported today.

Gallagher was secretary of the Department of Professional Regulation, a predecessor of the current agency, from September 1987 to July 1988.

Sources told the newspaper that after agents served the warrant, they asked NAI employees to immediately walk away from their desks, leave their computers on and not take anything from the building.

Gallagher, who was state insurance commissioner from 1989 through 1994, took over day-to-day operations at NAI after losing in the Republican primary for governor last year.

Bax is a heavyweight in Republican Party politics whom Gallagher appointed to head the state's Residential Joint Underwriting Association.

Voter ire could force lottery change

TALLAHASSEE — Education Commissioner Frank Brogan says 1996 could bring changes in the state lottery after years of criticism of the way lottery money is spent.

The Republican commissioner proposed a bill Monday to tie the lottery money directly to specific education programs. Two Senate Democrats slated a news conference today to outline their own lottery bills.

"Floridians have come to see lottery funding of education as a giant shell game," said Brogan.

He proposed, over seven years, to shift all lottery money to pre-kindergarten programs, scholarships for above-average students, and classroom enhancements such as new technology or textbooks.

"We want to assure the people of Florida that those proceeds are used for enhancements of education," he said. That was the promise to voters who approved launching the lottery in 1987. But most of the proceeds have gone to replace general tax revenue spent on schools, allowing lawmakers to use that money for other purposes such as prison-building, he said.

Pre-lottery, 63 percent of general tax revenue went to education. Lawmakers have cut that to less than 50 percent since the lottery began.

Anger over the money switch was "absolutely" to blame when voters trounced sales tax increases for school construction in seven of nine Florida counties with referendums this year, said John Gaines of the state Association of District School Superintendents.

It was Rep. Robert Starke, R-Winter Park, who proposed to abolish the controversial games in an amendment to a lottery-related bill in 1993.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Chiles talks about phonegate

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles hopes to get started today on putting phonegate behind him.

Chiles has scheduled a news conference to talk about his campaign's use of scare calls in the waning days of the 1994 campaign against Republicans Jeb Bush and Tom Feeney and not telling voters the truth about who made the calls. Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay also will answer questions.

The governor said Monday he will propose legislation to prevent future political campaigns from doing what his campaign did — lying to voters. "I'm responsible for what happened. ... It was my campaign," said Chiles, who has denied knowing about the deceptive calls until just two weeks ago.

Chiles also said he has no plans to fire Scott Falmien, executive director of the Democratic Party, for his role in the Chiles campaign's deceptive scare calls to older voters before the November 1994 election.

Falmien said Friday the Chiles campaign had done nothing wrong in hiring telephone callers to slam his Republican opponents and tell voters they represented an organization that doesn't exist and a Republican group that had no connection to the calls.

"I had a little chat with Scott," Chiles said. "I think he knows that is not a way Lawton Chiles and Buddy Mackay do business or ever have done business."

"It's not the way we should've done business," the governor added. "I apologize for that. I'm sorry about that."

The callers described Bush as a tax cheat and said Feeney wanted to abolish Social Security and cut the Medicare health insurance program for the elderly.

After denying for a year the campaign was responsible for the calls to voters in a seven-county area, Chiles' former campaign manager said earlier this month he had approved the calls.

Chiles said he has asked Bill Jones, former executive director of Common Cause in Florida, to come up with recommendations he can propose to the Legislature to be sure no future campaigns could conduct similar deceptive campaigns without legal recourse.

"It's not right, it should be changed," Chiles said.

Some Democrats already were calling for Falmien's resignation for his role in the telephone bank, but noted he was put into the job earlier this year by Chiles and MacKay.

Judge offers to jail victims

By The Associated Press

PENSACOLA, Fla. — An elderly couple say they will refuse to appear again before a judge who offered to jail them for protection against the woman's son, who's accused of beating her and making threatening phone calls.

That could mean prosecutors will have to drop a battery charge against the son, Grover Heller, who remained at large Monday, because his case is scheduled to be tried Dec. 27 before the same judge.

Jeanette and Chuck Strangway say they will refuse to testify if Escambia County Judge William Green does not withdraw from the case.

Green declined to comment on the Oct. 26 bond hearing at which he offered to jail the Strangways, but he acknowledged he could not legally put the couple behind bars.

He also said he has used the same tactic in one or two past cases just as a way of gauging how much danger a defendant poses.

"What I am trying to do is the best I can to get information to me quickly," Green said. "I've found it to be a legitimate tool to make a decision. I don't have a bad motive."

But the couple say Green's proposal left them afraid to say anything more in court. Mrs. Strangway, 63, said at first she didn't believe what she was hearing.

"Did he ask if my husband and I wanted to be incarcerated? I mean there's a man loose with a gun," she recalled. "He scared me."

Her husband, a 67-year-old retired paper-mill worker, said he thought to himself: "They got a motel over there at the jail, or what?" He declined Green's invitation, saying, "No, I can protect myself at home, sir."

The Strangways say they are living in fear behind tightly bolted doors and seldom leave home.

Mom takes son home after nearly 11 years in hospital

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. — Justin Bates is home from the hospital — finally.

When Cynthia Mendat took her son to Broward General Medical Center to be treated for an asthma attack in 1985, she thought he would be there only a few hours.

But it wasn't until Monday that Justin, now 12, left the Fort Lauderdale hospital after a medical mistake left him blind, paralyzed and unable to speak.

"Oh, my God," Mrs. Mendat shrieked with joy as attendants lifted Justin's shriveled body, about the size of a 5-year-old, into an ambulance.

"Earlier this year I thought that maybe Justin would never come home," she said a few moments before, recalling her long legal battle with the hospital that ended when the state Legislature approved a $6 million settlement earlier this year.

The ambulance took Justin to a new home bought with part of the legislative settlement. Family members and about two dozen news reporters and television camera crews gathered around the youngster's new hospital bed as Mrs. Mendat held one of her son's clenched hands.

The tiny hand relaxed a little as Mrs. Mendat cooed and talked softly to her son. Justin's mouth opened wide as he held his head back, exposing undeveloped teeth. He was smiling, his mother told everyone.

"He hasn't been this happy and relaxed since I took him to the hospital 11 years ago," Mrs. Mendat said later.

"Never do you think you're going to the hospital and that something terrible is going to happen and you'll never be able to bring him home again," she said.

The ordeal began Jan. 14, 1985 when a wrongly inserted respirator caused a collapsed lung, cardiac arrest and brain damage.

Mrs. Mendat was unable to provide the round-the-clock care Justin needed. The hospital allowed him to stay but was unhappy about it, trying several times to move him out.

A jury awarded the $6 million to Mrs. Mendat in 1990. But awards of more than $200,000 against public institutions must be approved by the Legislature. Justin remained at Broward General while its attorneys and lobbyists battled to keep the Legislature from approving the full payment.

One legislator who fought for the payment, Rep. Ben Graber, said the hospital had pictured Justin as vegetative.

"When I visited him in the hospital for the first time, I rubbed his head. He smiled. I rubbed his head again. He laughed. Vegetative people don't laugh," said Graber, who was at the hospital Monday when Justin was discharged.

Cops seek missing man

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Altamonte Springs police are searching for Paul Kendall, who has been reported missing since September 20. Kendall is said to be suffering from Huntington disease, which causes involuntary/uncontrollable muscle movement. Police said he is taking medication for his condition, but since his disappearance, it is unknown if he has been continuing to take it.

Kendall is a white male, age 35, last seen wearing a white tank top T-shirt and jeans.

Altamonte Springs police Detective Stan Phipps said while no foul play is suspected at this time, it was believed that because of Kendall's condition, he may have been very depressed. Whether he may be harmful to other persons is not known.

Det. Phipps urges anyone who may have seen Paul Kendall, to contact him at 830-3980, or the nearest law enforcement agency.

• Michael Joseph Filka, 40, 1822 Landing Drive, Sanford, charged with assignment to commit prostitution and theft.

• Larry Oliver, 23, of 76 Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, charged with assignment to commit prostitution and resisting an officer without violence.

Members of the SIU also conducted a drug sting operation on 10th Street near Orange and Bay avenues Friday.

• Patrick V. Robinson, 28, of DeLtona, was charged with sale/delivery of crack cocaine.

• Tarnus L. Davis, 19, 823 Valencia Court, was charged with sale/delivery of crack cocaine.

Dog attack

Sheriff's deputy Karen Mills was reportedly bitten several times by a pit bull Monday morning, while checking out complaints in the Goldenrod area. According to sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough, the deputy was responding to a number of citizen calls shortly after 7 a.m., regarding a pit bull chasing joggers on Eastbrook Boulevard, and near a school bus stop.

When Deputy Mills arrived at the dog owners home, 2302 Eastbrook Blvd., McDonough said the owner reportedly had the dog on a leash but the dog broke free and bit the deputy on the left wrist and several times on the right forearm.

Deputy Mills was treated at the scene and required additional medical treatment.

The dog was impounded by the Seminole County Animal Control.

Suspect arrested in cross-country slayings after high-speed chase

By MIKE BERRY
Associated Press Writer

WACO, Ky. — An unmarked police car pulled up beside Glen Rogers as he was sipping a beer and driving a car that may belong to one of at least four women he's suspected of killing.

The smooth-talking drifter with long blond hair and a beard threw the can at the car — and the chase was on.

Speeding at up to 100 mph, Rogers led police Monday afternoon through two towns and ran around a roadblock as an officer tried to shoot out one of his tires. One of about a half-dozen police cars pursuing Rogers eventually forced him off the highway near rural Waco and into a field, where he crashed and was arrested.

"A lot of people around the country can rest a lot better," said Capt. Charles Bowman of the state police.

Rogers, 33, was interrogated for about three hours by police and the FBI, and taken to a jail in Richmond, Bowman said. Rogers was "cooperating to some degree."

The suspect was to be arraigned today on endangerment charges for the chase, and for being a fugitive from justice.

Rogers was arrested after police got a tip — reportedly from a cousin — that he was in the area. When asked by a reporter if he had killed the women, Rogers said "No" as he was being pushed into a police car.

Details of his extradition were being worked out, Bowman said. Rogers is suspected of strangling or stabbing at least four women in California, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida in the past two months.

Authorities believe he may have committed three other killings in California. Rogers also is wanted for questioning in the death of a 73-year-old Ohio man and former roommate whose decomposed body was found last year tied to a chair and wrapped in a sheet in an abandoned cabin that Rogers' family owns near Beattyville, Ky.

The FBI said Rogers also fits the description of a gunman who robbed a bank Thursday in nearby Booneville. Authorities won't say how much money was taken.

Rogers grew up in Hamilton, Ohio, where he had a long arrest record on charges such as assault and arson. He is believed to have moved to California in 1983.

He was said to be able to talk a person into anything: a ride home from a bar, a place to crash for a few days or weeks, a woman's affections.

"Oh, he's smooth," said Detective Dan Pratt in Hamilton. "Glen is very personable."

State police Detective Robert Stephens said he spotted Rogers after responding to the tip that he was in the area.

"I pulled up beside him and was able to get a look at him," Stephens said.

Rogers was drinking a beer and threw it at Stephens' car, state Trooper Ed Robinson said. The 18-mile chase ended about 40 miles southeast of Lexington.

Police, guns drawn, pulled Rogers out of the car and shoved him face-down onto the ground. He didn't put up a fight as officers handcuffed him.

No weapons were found in the stolen white car that Rogers was driving and that police believe belonged to one of the victims, a woman found dead in a bathtub last week in a Tampa, Fla., motel. Without elaborating, Robinson said there may be evidence in the car.

The suspect's sister, Sue Rogers, told television's "A Current Affair" in an interview shown Monday that her brother "said he's already killed 85 people (and) shot a highway patrolman."

Edith Smallwood, Rogers' cousin who lives in nearby Beattyville, told the Lexington Herald-Leader that she and her sister called state police to report that Rogers had just stopped by for a visit. That was about an hour before Rogers was caught.

"I love Glen, and it hurt," Smallwood told the paper in today's editions. "But he had to be stopped."

Eugene Smallwood, Edith's brother, said he was unsure what to believe about Rogers, whom he knew as a boy.

New facility for police

The Sanford police station at 815 S. French Avenue is not in the best of shape. The city and police department have simply progressed, while the police headquarters facility has deteriorated.

Now the suggestion is being advanced to have the city lease at least the bottom three floors of the First Federal Bank building at 312 W. First Street in the downtown area. The additional floors may be added, if expansion is required in the future.

The bank building suggestion has both good and bad points, but we believe the good outweighs the bad.

In the first place, there is an ample parking area at the bank location. Finally, there will be enough room for police vehicles, staff personal vehicles, and citizens using the police facilities. How much better it would be than what we have now, where people must park wherever space is available.

There would be ample room for storage. This has been a problem, as state and federal laws require certain items, such as evidence and records, to be retained for various lengths of time. In order to comply with these requirements, the present facility halls must be crammed with boxes and there is simply not enough space to provide adequate files and/or storage areas to meet these requirements.

In a city which is constantly seeking to improve its visual appeal, who could argue that this former bank facility wouldn't be far superior to the old-fashioned building our police now use?

Having police located closer to downtown may also have an effect on helping to reduce crime in that area.

On the other side however, there have been a number of crimes within just a few blocks of the present police headquarters, so having them close may not necessarily be a crime deterrent.

There may be problems responding to emergency calls when police cars are housed in the downtown area, but certainly, French Avenue isn't traffic free either.

It may cost money to refurbish the present downtown building to meet police requirements and legislated government standards. But then, what would this be in comparison to building a police facility, which would probably exceed two or three million dollars in cost?

In looking at both sides of the proposal, and with the information presently available, we believe that use of the old bank facility would be an excellent move for the Sanford police department. Perhaps the present facility could then be sold and returned to the tax rolls as well.

As it stands now, until and unless something negative of major proportion comes up regarding the condition of the bank building, we believe this is an excellent idea. We urge the city and the citizens to support the matter.

LETTER

New men's movement

Ellen Goodman's article about the "new" men's movement seems more like one position paper for the feminist movement than two vignettes. She could have said it all in a few sentences. The promise keepers crusade and Louis Farrakhan's recent Million Man March were both designed to promote or revive the patriarchal family system in America. This system requires male dominance to survive. Both of these men's movements have attempted to guarantee that most of the patriarchs will treat their families in a decent, caring way and be responsible law-abiding members of the community in which they live. I do not believe Ellen Goodman cares much for a social system which just has a kinder and gentler patriarch.

Ellen believes that women should have political, economic, and social rights equal to those of men. In short, she believes in feminism. Frankly, I believe women really want and would achieve more of their real objectives in matriarchy. Then the mother would be the head of the family and descent or kinship would be traced through the mother rather than the father. Some role-model feminists have already done this.

In the "Gimlet Eye" section of the Nov. 6, 1995 issue of National Review Joe Briggs makes a good case for young men to support a matriarchic system. He tells them to become good looking, Trophy Husbands and hook female go-getters so that: "They get the degree. They make the bucks. They get the ulcers. We hang out by the pool."

Speaking truth to Reno and Clinton

In the first half of the 19th century, John Chapman - better known as Johnny Appleseed - traveled this nation distributing apple seeds. Orchards grew up in his wake.

In recent years, law students around the country have been confronted by a Johnny Appleseed of public interest law. Steve Bright - to whom injustice is personally insufferable and a national disgrace - speaks at law schools to persuade new lawyers to use their skills where they are most needed - among prisoners, the homeless and the mentally impaired.

He does not conjugate pieties but rather tells of real bloodless judges and prosecutors who would have been familiar to Charles Dickens. And Bright tells of the work of the Southern Center for Human Rights in Atlanta. He is the director there, and his small staff is currently attending to 50 clients on death row and is also involved in 24 class-action suits trying to change conditions in prisons and jails.

Some of the lawyers on his staff came to the center after hearing Bright at their law schools. At the center they have learned - as Justices William Brennan and Thurgood Marshall used to say - how far from equal justice we still are.

On Oct. 2, Steve Bright came to Washington as part of a nationwide series of events promoting law in the public interest. This call to conscience for lawyers was put together by the Alliance for Justice, which works for the survival of public interest law.

In the auditorium of the National Education Association, Bright spoke to an audience of over 400 law students, lawyers and some members of the Justice Department. Attorney General Janet Reno was the opening speaker but left before Johnny Appleseed spoke truth to power. She should have stayed because he specifically had her, among other mandarins of the law, in mind.

Three days before his talk - Bright told the audience - he had been in a Georgia courtroom trying to keep a black defendant from being added to the death penalty statistics. Sitting there, he thought of the Olympic Games coming to Georgia next year and how Georgia, like South Africa, "has a long history of apartheid and racial oppression. Yet now South Africa has moved ahead, joining the rest of the civilized world in abandoning capital punishment. But we in Georgia are still burning people up in electric chairs while other people celebrate their deaths outside."

Are we actually less civilized than South Africa? "Already," Steve Bright said, "the president is running television ads proclaiming his support for the death penalty. Last year he signed into law a crime bill providing for the death penalty for 50 more crimes."

Bright spoke of the attacks by Congress this year on due process, the supposedly fundamental guarantee of our justice system. For example, habeas corpus - federal judicial review of state verdicts in capital cases - is becoming dangerously diminished, as are the number of qualified lawyers to represent the inhabitants of death row.

Steve Bright was vigorously applauded after his speech. But on that day of celebration of public interest law, no one from a law firm came forward to pledge some help to bring fairness.

He tells of real bloodless judges and prosecutors who would have been familiar to Charles Dickens.

ELLEN GOODMAN

Debate: Late-term abortions

BOSTON-In the drawings all you see of the woman is a womb.

The black and white sketches that have become truly graphic art for the debate over late-term abortions, don't show the shock on Viki Stalla's face when a routine pregnancy became "Oh, my God."

They don't show Tammy Watts' expression when the doctor reading her ultrasound said quietly, "There is something I did not expect to see."

Nor do they show Coreen Costello's pain when she discovered that there was something horribly wrong with the child she was expecting and that the amniotic fluid puddled in her uterus could rupture at any time.

The woman, her family and her humanity have been cropped out of the illustrations shown on the Senate floor as if they were irrelevant.

As for the fetus in this pro-life portfolio, the perfect, C-180-baby outline of a fetus in the birth canal? It doesn't look much like the one in Viki Wilson's sonogram, with two-thirds of her brain lodged in a separate sack, looking "as if she had two heads." Nor does it look like the Watts' fetus which had no eyes, six fingers and six toes and a mass of bowel and bladder outside of her stomach.

Would full-color, real-life illustrations be too graphic for legislators? Would it have been too sensational to show torn cervixes on television, fetuses for whom the decision wasn't life or death, but what kind of death? Or are they too vivid a portrait of the real tragedies that force families and doctors into painful decisions.

Over the past months, we have watched the phrase "partial-birth abortion" forced into the political language by sheer repetition. It's been used over and over again to mislabel a rarely used medical technique called "intact dilation and evacuation."

A bill to criminalize this procedure - described with inflammatory inaccuracy as the sector stabbing murder of a conscious baby - sailed through the House. It barely lost momentum in the Senate and was temporarily derailed last Wednesday to the judiciary committee.

But when the hearings begin next Friday (Nov. 17), the chamber will once again be turned into an anti-abortion art gallery.

What is clever about this new visual tack of the anti-abortion leaders is that any late-term abortion is gruesome. What is malicious about this attack is that it's aimed at families that wanted babies, at women whose pregnancies went terribly awry.

A reckless Maureen Malloy of the National Right to Life Committee, described "healthy women carrying healthy babies." An overheated Bob Smith, the Republican senator from New Hampshire, waxing on about the trip through the birth canal, called the doctor "an executioner." They talked as if women carried their pregnancies for 36 weeks and then decided, "oops, I changed my mind." As if doctors performed such treatments "on demand."

If you only saw these drawings on the board, you would not know that state laws already restrict late-term abortions except for the life or health of the woman. Nor would you know that this procedure is sometimes the best of the rotten options - the one that may best enable a woman to have another baby. You wouldn't even know that anesthesia ends the life of such a fetus before it comes down the birth canal.

But this artwork is just the most recent rendering of the anti-abortion strategy. For years, they have targeted doctors, the "weak link" of abortion rights, through harassment, death threats, violence. Now they are threatening them with jail.

For the first time, Congress has been asked to outlaw a medical procedure. If it works, right-to-life advocates hope to eliminate abortion, one procedure and one prosecution at a time.

Under the current bill, doctors who don't practice the congressionally approved protocol, risk two years in prison. Even if the Senate amends the law to permit this technique to save the life of a woman, it would not be allowed to "merely" save her health. What would that mean? A legislated ruptured uterus? A "mere" hemorrhage? Who would decide?

Sen. Barbara Boxer, a mother and grandmother spoke to her colleagues last week and asked these senators to, yes, think about "babies." She asked them to think of their own babies, growing and grown daughters, whose futures could be at risk.

Now the hearing room is set to become a "drawing room." Stark, black-and-white renderings of womb and fetus will carry all the easy appeal of propaganda into the judiciary committee.

But life doesn't always imitate art. And in this real world, only the women whose pregnancies turned into "Oh, my God" can paint the whole picture.

Would full-color, real-life illustrations be too graphic for legislators?

JOSEPH SPEAR

Seeing the future at Camp Snoopy

We have seen the future, and it is enclosed. More than that: It may be simulated and voice-activated.

Laugh if you must, but we assure you this is no joke. The futurists at the Spear Foundation are serious students of direction, drift, patterns and trends. And we are convinced that tomorrow's America will have a roof over it.

This is the conclusion reached in the third of a series of futurist studies by SF's research staff. The report, entitled "The Indoor World: The Malling of America," envisions a 21st century that looks a bit like a "Road Warrior" or "Waterworld" film.

All homes, offices and shops in the nation will be built under domes, where all will be safe and secure, and the domes will be connected with covered roads and railways. The criminal elements will live in the uncovered part of the country, and the good guys will rarely venture outside. They will have electronic chips implanted in their bodies, so that when they do go out, they can re-enter without triggering the alarm systems.

There is nothing particularly oracular about this observation. The covering of America has been coming for years. It began in 1906, when the first enclosed shopping mall was constructed in Edina, Minn. Now we have the Mall of America in Bloomington, Minn., which contains more than 400 stores on three retail levels, and another floor crammed with movie theaters, bars and restaurants.

Meantime, in what can now be seen as a corollary trend, the Disney company began building pseudo-worlds inhabited by cartoon characters, and soon the state of Florida began sinking under the weight of craze Worlds, Lands, Jungles and Safaris. In Houston, architects unveiled the Astrodome, under which the game of baseball would be played on artificial grass. In Japan, the enclosed-amusement trend leaped forward with Indoor Oceana, complete with fake sand, plastic palms and adjustable waves. They also manufactured ski slopes, one of which was billed as a "mountain under a roof." All were said to rival God's own.

Now we are in sort of an intermediate stage, where the malls are getting bigger and bigger, and indoor activities in general are becoming increasingly sophisticated. How long can it be before all activities are merged under a series of roofs and connected with covered pathways?

Not long at all, actually. The Mall of America contains an amusement complex called Camp Snoopy, which comes complete with an inflated castle, a water slide, a roller coaster and a Ferris wheel. The world's largest mall, in Edmonton, Alberta, includes an artificial ocean and a bungee-jumping platform.

In malls all across the country today, there are corporate offices, government offices, doctor's offices. There are malls with schools, libraries and churches. In the Washington, D.C., area, fewer kids are tricking and treating on neighborhood streets at Halloween. Instead, thousands of them dress in costumes and go to malls and trick or treat their way through the shops. It's safer and nicer and safer that way.

The Synthetic Century, friends, is just around the corner.

The only question, it seems to us, is whether people will actually go out to malls or be content with simulating them by computer. Shopping by machine is possible now.

We have seen the future, and it is enclosed.

Protest

John's River Water Management District (SJRWMD) pushed their way along the easement at 209 Lake Blvd into Becky Nova's back yard where the weir sits.

Nova, who spends most of her time in North Carolina, said she was told damage might be done to the property if they were to force their way on to the property she hopes to rent out or sell. She said she gave them permission to bring the heavy equipment back. By Saturday evening, two tires on the tractor were flat. No one seems to know how that happened.

SJRWMD had planned to pump water from E. Crystal Lake so that water from W. Crystal Lake and the lakes and the golf course in the Timacuan community could be released into E. Crystal Lake.

"It'll be damned if a man-made golf course is more important than a natural lake," said James DeKleva, president of the Crystal Estates homeowner's association and one of the organizers of the protest.

DeKleva and residents of many of the neighborhoods along the shores of the lakes gathered Monday morning to block workers who planned to come and begin the pumping. The workers never showed to begin the job.

Late Monday afternoon, after conferring with representatives of Seminole County sheriff's department, the protesters watched as the tires were re-inflated and the equipment moved from the neighborhood.

The group then turned their attention to some pumping equipment being assembled near Liberty Park in Lake Mary as part of the same job. That pump was hauled away this morning.

Bob White, one of the protesters who stood in the way of the pumping at E. Crystal Lake, said they felt SJRWMD was reacting more to pressure from Timacuan than to any realities of flooding in the area.

"Nine holes of the (Timacuan) golf course are under water," he said. "But there are no homes that are in any danger of flooding."

The E. Crystal Lake residents said the rise in the lakes is the part of the natural ebb and flow of the water system. For the last quarter century the level has been too low and it has now risen to the point where it should be. Pumping water from their lake and filling it with effluent and run off from Timacuan will, they say, destroy their lake, choking it with fertilizers and weeds.

"This will destroy our water quality," said Darrell Leidigh, one of the protesters. "They have trumped up this issue of flooding because they don't want to deal with the real problem of water quality."

Jim Gehr said he grew up along the Crystal Lake chain and has seen it go up and down over the years. At times, he said, it has been almost empty. Like mud flats one could almost traverse on foot.

"We're thrilled to have our water level back up," he said. "The truth is, there are no homes that are threatened by the water. It's just the golf course that is flooded."

Gehr said the developers who created the Timacuan community on wet low lying land are to blame for any flooding that is occurring.

"They took a risk," he said. "Now they want everyone else to pay for it."

DeKleva and others believe the pumping is not the only solution to the problem of the flooded golf course.

"There are other, probably more expensive, solutions to the problem," he said. "They are just looking for the easiest way out. We're not going to stand by and let them do it, though."

Neither representatives for Timacuan nor SunTrust, which holds the mortgage on the Timacuan Golf Course, currently in receivership, were available for comment.

Doug Forner, who lives in Crystal Ridge near the Timacuan end of the debate, has lived with more than a foot of standing water in the street in front of his home on Canal Drive for more than two months. Meanwhile, he says, the residents on E. Crystal Lake are Jet Skiing and enjoying the water that should be pumped to relieve his flooding.

"I don't know why I should have to put up with this so they can get out there and Jet Ski," he said.

DeKleva said most of the residents on E. Crystal Lake who are fighting the pumping are "senior citizens who don't Jet Ski" and who are only interested in preserving the quality of the water.

He added that he had been told that Forner's problem was caused by an engineering problem with the roads. No amount of pumping on E. Lake Crystal, he said, would solve that problem.

The citizens on E. Crystal Lake have retained Altamonte Springs attorney Mike Jones who is filing for an injunction to stop any future plans for pumping on the lakes. Jones was in court this morning and unavailable for comment.

"We're not giving up," said resident Bud Layer. "The blame for this rests with the city fathers in Lake Mary who allowed (the Timacuan community) to be built in the flood plain. We shouldn't have to pay for that."

Airport

Retter had examined provisions in the original agreement between the city and the Authority, enacted in December, 1981.

"Said provision permits the city to revoke by resolution, the delegation granted to the Authority under the Resolution, with respect to the airport," Retter wrote. "The city's ability to revoke the Authority's rights under the resolution runs contrary to the representations, warranties and covenants of the authority under the Bond Documents, and can impair its covenants thereunder, and the continued operation throughout the life of the bonds. This is a risk which purchasers of bonds are not generally willing to assume."

"Another reason we need this agreement with the city," Coover said, "is to help us in our relationship with people who provide most of the funding for expansions and development, including the FAA (Federal Aviation Authority), FDOT (Florida Department of Transportation), and the various business developers."

During the discussion, several of the commissioners questioned whether the city would be held liable for any bonds obtained by the Airport Authority if this agreement was approved. Coover said it would not.

"I'm more than willing to support efforts to attract more business to the airport," said Commissioner Lon Howell, "but I believe we should hear from our own bonding counsel on this. We should know for certain that this is a good move for the city before we make any decisions."

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein suggested that if the proposal was approved, the city should have a closer relationship with the Authority. "What I believe we should do," Eckstein said, "is have a city representative, perhaps the mayor, sit on the airport authority. I would also suggest we consider reducing the authority members from the present nine, to six, with the mayor to be number seven. I think a smaller board would be just as effective."

Mayor Bettye Smith asked if the commission might also consider adding a representative from county government to sit on the board as well. There was no immediate response.

Commissioner Bob Thomas expressed his support of the proposal. "I am in favor of this because I see it bringing in job opportunities and economic development," he said. "While I believe we perhaps should have our attorneys tell us if it is a good move, I also believe this is an opportunity we should look at."

Coover explained that the next meeting of the Sanford Aviation Authority is scheduled for Deember 5, and the authority would like to have an agreement approved by that time if possible so bonding efforts can begin before the end of the year.

The commission however, gave a consensus opinion to hold off on any decision until the city's bond council could give an opinion.

The operation agreement between the city and the airport was listed on the agenda for the regular commission meeting last night. In the agenda packet, City Manager Bill Simmons had already recommended the matter be tabled to allow staffs and attorneys to develop a final copy of the proposal.

In presenting the agenda item, Mayor Smith commented that "the matter is a moot one now, so we don't need any action." No vote to table was officially made however.

Several meetings between airport and city officials have already been scheduled to continue discussion on the matter.

This 72-year-old tradition is sponsored by the National School Board Association, National Association of Elementary Secondary School Principals, American Association of School Administrators, American Federation of Teachers, Council of Chief State School Officers, National School Public Relations Association, The American Legion and the U.S. Dept. of Labor.

Midway Elementary School is a "Break the Mold" school, through growth, development, promoting high expectations. Officials believe in motivating the children through creative, flexible learning experiences in education.

Government shuts down

By DAVE SKIRMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of thousands of federal workers were sent home today as the budget deadlock between President Clinton and the Republican Congress forced much of the government to shut down.

"Our government shutdown is now under way," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said.

Budget Director Alice Rivlin issued a mid-morning directive to the heads of federal departments and agencies telling them to "implement the close-down of affected operations promptly and in an orderly manner."

There was no indication that Congress would approve a temporary spending resolution that would keep the government operating.

Each side insisted the other would have to compromise to break the impasse.

White House staff chief Leon Panetta and Rivlin were going to Capitol Hill for another session with congressional leaders, but no one sounded optimistic.

"It was kind of a waste of time coming in," said Barbara Duffitt, who handles mail for HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros.

"The real question is whether they're prepared to back off a little bit," Panetta said of the Republicans as hundreds of thousands of federal Washington's commuter routes were crowded as usual with government employees heading to work. How long they would stay there was the question of the day.

"Quite frankly, I'm discouraged," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas.

"The president has threatened to veto everything we've sent up there."

"The question is how do we get an agreement?" asked House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

Following midnight talks at the White House as spending authority for the government ran out, the major sticking point appeared to be a provision in an emergency spending bill that would raise Medicare premiums.

Rivlin directed all federal employees to report to work as usual. But the expectation was that about 800,000 workers — 40 percent of the federal work force — would be sent home later in the day.

Other government workers were kept on the job, deemed essential for the public health, safety or defense.

The only clear agreement was to keep talking. But as negotiators from the White House and Capitol Hill made the rounds of morning talk shows, they showed little inclination to compromise.

Appearing on CBS, Armey said the president "cannot sit removed, detached from the whole process, and then veto every thing that comes up there."

Both sides said they hoped any shutdown wouldn't last more than a day or so.

"You let this thing go beyond a day or two days there's going to be some serious impact here," Panetta said.

"I still hope that we can come together very quickly ... and be able to tell everybody in the government that this will be a one-day affair," Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said shortly after the White House meeting.

White House press secretary

Mike McCurry said it was virtually certain the government would shut down, at least for a brief period.

"There's ... no funding authority to keep the United States government operating," he said. And he dismissed any suggestion that Republicans could rush a bill through early in the day to avert a shutdown.

Only federal employees deemed non-essential were to be sent home — that means national museums and monuments and the IRS and Social Security hotlines would be among the federal operations closed.

"All of us hope it isn't closed for very long," Rivlin said on ABC. "It might be one day, it might be two or three or more."

Air traffic controllers, prison guards and others with crucial jobs would keep working, as would military personnel and the Postal Service, which is independent of the government.

Only two hours before the midnight spending deadline expired, Clinton, Dole, Gingrich, Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., hashed over their differences for an hour and 40 minutes.

The meeting began moments after Clinton vetoed emergency spending legislation that the Senate, by voice vote, had shipped him earlier in the evening. A previous short-term spending measure expired at midnight Monday.

"If America must close down access to quality education, a clean environment and affordable health care for our seniors, in order to keep the government open, then that price is too high," the president said.

His biggest objection was to a provision raising Medicare premiums in January from $46.10 to $3.50, rather than letting them fall to $42.50 as scheduled.

Said Gingrich on NBC this morning: "We have to get assurances we are not going to be passing debt ceiling extensions forever." He said the American people would blame both sides in the deadlock.

The temporary spending measure is needed because only three of the 13 regular appropriations bills required for the budget year that started Oct. 1 have been enacted.

Clinton signed the third bill Monday night, providing $19.3 billion for the Energy Department, parts of the Interior and Defense departments, the Army Corps of Engineers and other smaller agencies. He already had signed bills funding the Agriculture Department and military construction.

Earlier Monday, Clinton vetoed another bill that would have extended, until Dec. 12, the government's ability to borrow money beyond its expected expiration Wednesday.

Agreement there was unlikely anytime soon because Republicans insist on denying the Treasury Department the accounting flexibility to maneuver through a debt crisis.

Indeed, Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin on Monday demonstrated his ability to evade the $4.9 trillion federal debt ceiling. He took steps to raise cash and announced the government would draw on two federal retirement funds with assets of about $375 billion.

Station

"I've been in discussions with the owners of the building," Simmons said, "and they would be willing to help adapt the structure to suit our needs if we decide to go ahead with this."

Simmons also explained that with the lease agreement, the building would remain on the tax rolls.

While Eckstein said he was not certain this was the best place for a police station, Simmons responded that at the present time, there were no alternatives.

"We all know that the police have outgrown their facilities," Simmons said, "not only is there no storage space which is required, but there is certainly insufficient parking where they are now (815 S. French Avenue)."

Architects Design Group (ADG) is to be contacted to act as professional consultant in the study of the building as a potential police station.

While the commission voted unanimously to approve spending up to $5,000 for the study, there was no immediate indication regarding when the study may be made, or when the matter would be brought back before the commission for continuing discussion and/or consideration.

Sanford Recreation basketball

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Department is busily preparing for the upcoming Youth Basketball Leagues.

Coaches are badly needed for all age groups: 15-Under, 13-Under, 11-Under, and Bidt Ball (7-9). Sponsors, at a cost of $90, are also needed.

Tryouts/signups will be Saturday, November 18th at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium. Registration fee is $10.

Bidt Ball (for both boys and girls) will have signups only, no tryouts. 11-and-Under (tryouts 9 a.m.) will be for both boys and girls, boys only for 15-and-Under (tryouts at noon) and 13-and-Under (tryouts at 10:30 a.m.) and girls only (tryouts at 1:30 p.m.) for ages 12-15.

Call 330-5697 for more information.

Recreation volleyball results

SANFORD — Parity reared its head in the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Recreational Volleyball League in the Dan Pelham Gymnasium at Sanford Middle School Monday night as three teams were 2-1 in the A League and two teams were 4-1 in the B League.

The records in the A League were Kathy's Baby Shop, Westview Baptist Church and Simpsons (all 2-1) and Nichols (0-3).

In the B League: Fisher, Laurence, Deen & Fromang and Reckers (both 4-1), Church of God (3-2), 1st United Methodist-Flames I (2-3) and Flames II and Park Air (both 1-4).

PDS-Hackers clinch tie

WINTER SPRINGS — Teresa Walburger, Jane White, Terri Mann and Jackie Janowiak combined for 10 hits, five runs and five RBI as the PDS-Hackers from Oviedo clinched at least a tie for the Winter Springs Women's Fall Slowpitch Softball League with an 8-3 triumph over Bill's Elbow South at Central Winds Park.

The Hackers are now 8-1, while T's Angels were 6-2 heading into a late game Monday. PDS will end its season with a make-up game against Bill's Elbow South next Monday at 6:30 p.m.

Providing the offense for the Hackers were Walburger (home run, double, three runs, two RBI), White (3-for-4, triple, run, two RBI), Mann (3-for-4, RBI), Janowiak (2-for-4, run), Juanita Johnson (single, RBI), Pam Newton, Denise Levinson and Phyllis Baynes (one single and one run each) and Kristy Kessinger (RBI).

Debbie Pegel was a standout on defense for PDS, making couple of diving catches.

Russia nips UCF

ORLANDO — Aleksey Pegoughin's two free throws with 3 seconds remaining lifted Russia-Red Army to a 90-89 comeback victory over Central Florida in an exhibition game.

Howard Porter led Central Florida with 19 points. Eric Riggs added 17 and Brad Tice had 16 points and 10 rebounds.

The Red Army was led by Ruslan Avlev's 21 points and Audry Afanasyev's 20 points.

Dolphins lose linemen

DAVIE — The Miami Dolphins are in need of offensive linemen after starting guard Chris Gray sprained his left ankle in Sunday's 34-17 loss to New England, and is expected to be sidelined for several weeks, and reserve tackle Ethan Albright, the snapper on kicks, tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee and will likely miss the rest of the season.

FSU 2-0 in pre-season

TALLAHASSEE — Kirk Luchman's dunk with 6 seconds left capped a perfect shooting night and lifted Florida State to a 100-75 exhibition victory Monday night over Athletes in Action.

Luchman, a 6-10 junior, hit all nine field goal attempts and finished the night with 19 points and a team-high 10 rebounds as the Seminoles won their second straight preseason game.

James Collins, who scored 29 points in Florida State's exhibition win over the Red Army last week, again led the Seminoles with 23 points. He and Avery Curry, who added 13, each hit three field goals from 3-point range.

Mark Pack scored 16 points and Gerald Jarmon 13 for Athletes in Action.

Hawks, Rams join Seminole with first night wins

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Seminole stayed hot Monday night as it opened the regular season with an easy victory after winning the Lake Howell Tipoff Classic Tournament title Saturday night.

Also winning its opening games were Lake Mary and defending Class 6A-District 4 champion Lake Howell.

HAWKS, TRIBE WIN

SANFORD — Mindee Hampton and Dana Merrick combined for 43 points as host Seminole blitzed Lake Brantley 71-48 in the first round of the Lady 'Noles Invitational Tournament at Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

In the other game Lake Howell nipped Lyman. Tonight's schedule has the Tribe taking on the Silver Hawks at 7 p.m.

The remainder of the schedule has Lyman playing Lake Brantley at 7 p.m. on Wednesday and on Thursday, Lake Howell faces Lake Brantley at 6 p.m. and Seminole battles Lyman at 8 p.m.

Tonight's matchup between the Tribe and Silver Hawks will be the second of the young season, as Seminole beat Lake Howell 68-54 in the finals of the Lake Howell Tipoff Classic Saturday night.

Hampton scored a game-high 24 points and also had six steals and five assists, while Merrick chipped in with 19 points, seven rebounds, five assists and four steals.

Also contributing were Rosetta Jackson (11 points, eight rebounds, four steals), Katrina Southward (six points), Hancefah Miller (four points, three assists) and Shemeika Stokes, who had 13 points and 16 rebounds Saturday, (six rebounds).

Kate Carlough paced Lake Brantley with 17 points, while Leah Reese added 12 for the Patriots.

RAMS SQUASH HORNETS

ORLANDO — Lake Mary's "twin towers", 6-foot-3 Lori Hammett and 6-foot-1 freshman Lauren Bradley, combined for 23 points as the Rams buried host Bishop Moore 60-33 at the Gold Dome Monday night.

The Lake Mary junior varsity also opened its season on a winning note, cruising past the Hornets 53-37.

The Rams will open their regular season home schedule on Wednesday, hosting Winter Park. The junior varsity starts at 6 p.m., with the varsity set to tipoff at 7:30 p.m.

Bradley led Lake Mary with 13 points, while Hammett was the only other player in double

Lake Brantley's Salle Labret (left) was the second best individual Seminole county runner in the 6A-Region 3 meet, finishing eighth behind winner Kelly Hudson from Lyman, while Lake Howell's Cally Howell (right) returned from a three week layoff to pace the Silver Hawks to a berth in next week's state meet in Jacksonville.

Cross country squads in state

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Editor

ORLANDO — Both teams from Lyman, as well as the Seminole boys and Lake Howell girls qualified for the state tournament after outstanding performances in regional cross country meets this past Saturday.

The Greyhound boys got a break when the Edgewater duo of Derek Romich and James Hunt, running first and second, crossed the finish line holding hands, a violation of the rules, forcing a disqualification and handing the 6A-Region 3 title to Lyman, 70-85 over Edgewater at Cypress Grove Park.

Lyman's Rob Evans, the defending state champion, was the top Seminole county finisher with a fifth place finish. Also finishing in the top 15 individually were: 6th, Kinsley (Lyman), 11th, Scott (Lyman), 13th, Frank (Lake Howell) and 15th, Badan-Firouz (Lake Howell).

The Lyman girls had the individ-

49ERS gain last flag title in playoff

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Cowboys took the measure of the 49ers in the regularly scheduled game, but the 49ers came back to win the Major Division playoff as the Sanford Recreation Department Youth Flag Football League season came to an end at Sanford Middle School on Saturday.

The Cowboys used a pair of interceptions and two long touchdown runs to defeat the 49ers 12-0 and end the regular season with both teams tied with 8-2 records.

But the 49ers used the same formula, interceptions and long runs, to easily win the playoff game 25-7.

In other games Saturday, the Dolphins finished the season with a winning record with a 27-0 whitewashing of the Jaguars and the Steelers closed the season with a doubleheader sweep, getting a 7-0 forfeit victory from the Raiders and blanking the Jaguars 22-0.

The 49ers finish the season with a 9-2 record, while the Cowboys were 8-3. Following the leaders were the Dolphins (6-4), the Steelers (5-5), the Jaguars (3-7) and the Raiders (0-10).

The other division winners were the Hurricanes in the Boys' soccer opens with romp, tie

From Staff Reports

WINTER PARK — The Lake Howell boys' soccer team got off to a flying start Monday night, crushing the West Orange Warriors 8-0 at Richard Evans Field.

Josh Holcomb, Austin Pumneo and Jeff Yearick netted two goals each, while Marvin Gabriel and David Lewis added one score each.

Lewis also added three assists to his goal for the Silver Hawks, which led 3-0 at halftime. Also getting assists were Andy Dettro with two and Pumneo, Yearick and Igor Goncalves with one each.

Raouf Khan got the shut out in goal for Lake Howell, turning away nine shots. The Warriors keeper came up with five saves.

The Silver Hawks had 27 shots on goal, to 11 for West Orange. Lake Howell also had four corner kicks to none for the Warriors.

The Silver Hawks junior varsity also won by shutout, blanking West Orange 2-0.

Lake Howell will return to action on Wednesday, taking on Melbourne in the opening game of the Goldenrod Rotary Cup Tournament at 6 p.m. at Ward Field in Winter Park.

TRIBE TIES COLONIAL

SANFORD — Phillip Faulk scored both goals in the game, unfortunately one of them was for Colonial as Seminole and the Grenadiers tied 1-1 in boys' soccer at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium Monday night.

Faulk's fluke own goal came in the opening half to give Colonial a 1-0 lead at intermission.

But he redeemed himself 23 minutes into the second half as, on a through ball, the Grenadier goalie came out to make a play, but just as he was about to grab the ball, the Tribe's Eric Ho headed the ball loose and Falk put the ball in the back of the net from 25 yards out.

Seminole outshot Colonial 9-7, but the Grenadiers had the edge in corner kicks, 4-3.

Tribe goalkeeper Brett Clark had eight saves, while the Colonial keeper had six saves.

The junior varsity went to the Grenadiers by the score of 2-1.

Seminole will be at home tonight, hosting St. Cloud in a non-district matchup. The junior varsity contest starts at 5 p.m., with the varsity kicking off at 7 p.m.

Half-N-Half clinches tie for Co-Ed crown

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Everyone appreciates a little help once in a while.

Half-N-Half received an early Christmas present Monday night in the form of an upset as it clinched at least a tie for the first ever title in the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Co-Ed Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park.

Jerry Camus had four doubles and scored four runs and Rene Sanville drove in four runs to lead Half-N-Half to an 18-1 trouncing of Uncle Nicks Oyster Reef in the opening game of the evening.

Then in the nightcap, Todd's Produce/Crazy Wings scored three runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to break a 0-0 tie and then added three more runs in the sixth inning to knock off Village Paints 6-3.

Half-N-Half has now won six games in a row to run its record to 6-1. Todd's Produce/Crazy Wings and Village Paints, which lost for the second week in a row, are now tied for second at 4-3, with Uncle Nicks Oyster Reef still looking for its first win at 0-7.

Next week, Village Paints takes on Uncle Nicks Oyster Reef at 7 p.m. and Todd's Produce/Crazy Wings battles Half-N-Half at 8 p.m. at Pinehurst Park.

Powering Half-N-Half were Camus (four doubles, four runs, RBI), Lori Poe (double, two singles, three runs, three RBI), Sanville (three singles, run, four RBI), Steve Ross (double, single, run, three RBI), Dan Lasseigne (two singles, run, two RBI) and Marie Byrd (two singles, run, RBI).

Also contributing were Gary Conklin (double, RBI), Mike Miller and Carol Dick (one single, three runs and one RBI each), Tom Kelly (single), Shannon Ross (run) and Rose Ross (RBI).

Doing the hitting for Uncle Nicks Oyster Reef were David Blakey

(triple, single), Jeb Webb (two singles, run), John Hogan (single, RBI) and Chip Smith and Denise Byrd (one single each).

Pacing Todd's Produce/Crazy Wings were Bobby McRee (two singles, run), Tim Barkley and Diane Colangelo (one single, one run and one RBI each), Kevin Moore (single, two RBI), Belinda Anderson (single, run), Lynette Barkley and Debbie Cole (one single and one RBI each), Bobby Shaw and Allen Dow (one single each) and John Searles and Della Garner (one run each).

Providing the offense for Village Paints were Kirby Swinehart Sr. (three singles, run), David Goldstick (home run, single, run, RBI), Jeff Neff (single, run), Sue Mohr (single, RBI) and Leah Sparrow, Cary Keefer and Dee Walden (one single each).

Mary Jean Walker introduced Guest Speaker Dell Healy, who demonstrated the art of understanding "Body Language" with pictures portraying varied poses communicating inner feelings.

Following Dell Healy, Jan Leach a certified graphologist handwriting specialist, demonstrated her skill utilization as a tool for career guidance and private investigations. Jan has been a guest speaker for the Institute of Graphological Sciences. Her analysis of various members handwriting, described personality traits that were humorous, entertaining and rewarding.

Volunteer of the Week

Teacher serves in disaster areas

By SUSAN WANNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In addition to substitute teaching at Seminole High School, Stuart Moriarty has found time to help others through her volunteer duties with the American Red Cross.

According to a brochure, for over 100 years, the American Red Cross has assisted people who have been affected by disasters. "The American Red Cross is committed to making a positive difference by improving the quality of human life, enhancing self-reliance and concern for others and helping people avoid, prepare for and cope with emergencies."

The information further adds, "As a voluntary organization, the American Red Cross depends on the generosity of people for both their time and money to provide disaster relief...It is prepared to respond to hurricanes, floods, tornadoes, earthquakes, fires, hazardous materials incidents and other disasters. In fact the Red Cross responds to more than 50,000 disasters every year."

Moriarty worked in 1968 to 1970 as a paid staff member in Madrid, Spain and in Frankfurt, Germany. Upon returning stateside she then married and had children. She operated as the executive director for three years while in St. Augustine.

For the past three years Moriarty has functioned as a volunteer with the Central Florida American Red Cross. "I have to cover about three local fires or disasters each week as an on-call volunteer," she said. "We have opened Sanford Middle School to help those needing shelter during several hurricanes."

Traveling from Sanford to Tallahassee, Pensacola, Port St. Joe and recently, Panama City Beach, Moriarty has assisted many families in the area of disaster relief as a family services technician.

"I get to wear many hats when I'm there assisting," she said. "I may do home visits to assess the immediate needs of the family. They may need help with shelter, clothes or food."

She added by saying, "Normally, the damage assessment team goes out door to door to figure how much damage was done. During Hurricane Opal when housed 500 people in a shelter. Our slogan is 'Help Can't Wait.'

Moriarty elaborated concerning a family she dealt with in Port St. Joe. "The family had come to the shelter," she said. "Their house was hit by a storm surge and was destroyed. We had to work up a voucher for them. They needed lodging for a month, food and clothes. WE had to get them into a different environment and keep them dry, fed, warm and safe."

Attending a training program that involves four courses for two to three days of intensive training as well as information regarding how to manage a shelter is required for this work.

Funding for the Red Cross is from the United Way and other private donations, according to Moriarty. "I'm a weekend and after hours volunteer," she said.

"I carry a beeper so if a disaster hits I'm ready at any time. We have a briefcase full of forms necessary and a cellular phone to contact the proper people."

Moriarty still makes time for her family. Her husband of nine years, Jack, and children Mary Stuart, Amanda, Terry and two grandchildren all admire Moriarty's dedication and hard work. The family attends Holy Cross Episcopal Church in Sanford.

Moriarty concluded by saying, "I love my volunteer work. It sums up my feelings on a brochure from the Red Cross. It says, 'You may never work harder or get dirtier or get paid less. But it will be the best job you never got paid to do.'"

Time out for fun needed

DEAR ABBY: I feel compelled to write to the stay-at-home mom who felt overworked, underappreciated and suffocated. I know how she feels. I have four small children under 5 years old, and I haven't had a "day off" since the first one was born.

Many people think I'm lucky because I don't "have to work." Staying at home with children is work. My husband looks forward to the weekends, when he doesn't have to work, and just when I think I'll have him around to help, he decides to go golfing, because he needs to relax after working all week.

My sisters have commented that I used to be fun and funny. It's hard to be quick-witted when you're up all night with a new baby, then up again at dawn with the other kids.

As a single-income family, we can't afford to hire help or baby sitters. But your column helped me. After I wrote you this letter, I showed it (and the letter in your column) to my husband. He agreed I needed a "santy day," and he's planning to stay home with the kids one day next week. I'm going to dress up and go to lunch with my sisters. Thanks, Abby, for my first day off.

STRESSED AT HOME IN PA.

DEAR STRESSED: I'm glad to help. I hope you and your husband make your "santy day" a regular occurrence. Head on for another letter with a different take:

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Not OK Kaye," the stay-at-home mom who said her only relief from full-time motherhood is her part-time job.

My problem is exactly the opposite. I love to work outside the home. I wish I could be home more often with my two young children. I feel like they are being raised by day care. I hate dragging them out of the house when it's barely light, and not seeing them until it is dark again.

My house goes unattended all week, so my weekends are spent doing laundry, vacuuming and errands — a week's worth of housework in two days.

I'd do anything to be home more and watch my children play and grow. I wish I were in Kaye's shoes.

HOMEMAKER WANNABE

DEAR HOMEMAKER WANNABE: In today's economy, with the need for two incomes, many families share your plight. Fortunately, employees are becoming more sympathetic to working parents.

In order to allow employees to spend more time with their families, some employers offer "flex-time": employees can arrange their work schedules in different ways (such as four 10-hour days with three days off, work from home part of the day, etc.). Perhaps your company would consider such a plan.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent letter to you, "Another Texan" said, "A man once wrote that if he owned Hell and Texas, he would rent out Texas and live in Hell."

The man who said it was Gen. Philip Henry Sheridan (1831-86), in a speech at Fort Clark, Texas, in 1865.

While Texans may not want to remember Gen. Sheridan, we Chicagoans have memorialized him in the name of (among others) Fort Sheridan, Sheridan Road and Philip H. Sheridan School. A statue of Sheridan on his horse stands just off Lake Shore Drive at Belmont Avenue near the south end of Sheridan Road.

How to grow perfect cactus for holidays

As we approach the holidays, the presence of the Christmas Cactus in garden centers and florist shops is more visible. The plant, a true cactus, has flat, jointed stems that resemble crab legs. For this reason, it is sometimes called crab cactus. Flowers are borne at the tip of the stems and the flowers are striking in color and shape. The fruit is a red berry.

The Christmas Cactus, Easter or Thanksgiving Cactus, belong to the genus Zygocactus and Schlumbergera and their hybrids. As a group they are known as holiday cactus. The Christmas Cactus has red, pink, or white flowers, or combination of these colors. The Thanksgiving Cactus has bright orange-red flowers and the Easter Cactus has white flowers.

Even though these plants are epiphytes (like orchids or bromeliads), in Florida they are grown in media containing organic matter. A mixture of perlite and peat moss is usually recommended. The plants should be watered regularly, avoiding overwatering and fertilized lightly each month. Plants can be grown outdoors during the summer but need some shade during the hottest hours of the day to protect the plants from sunburn. They are not cold tolerant.

It is surprising to many that, while the holiday cactus they see in the stores are in full bloom, the same plants at home do not have flowers. The reason for this phenomenon is that nursery growers that produce holiday cactus control the exposure to light of their plants to induce blooming at a specific time of the year.

To induce blooming of plants both temperature and length of darkness must be carefully controlled. If the night temperature is maintained between 50 and 55 degrees F., flower buds will form regardless of day length. If the temperature is above 55 degrees F., buds will form if plants remain in complete darkness for at least 13 continuous hours. Any exposure to light during this time will interrupt the formation of the flowering buds. If the temperature is above 70 degrees F., it is necessary for the plant to be in complete darkness for a period of 15 hours per day. Excessive heat or temperatures above 80 degrees F., may cause bud drop. Controlled temperature and/or periods of darkness should continue until flower buds develop, which may take about six to nine weeks. Sometimes black plastic bags are used each night to protect the plants from receiving any light during this period and removed each day to keep the plants healthy. Watering is very important during this period, too little or too much water will cause the plants to drop their flowers. Reducing watering and stopping fertilization will help promote flowering. After the flower buds are well formed, the plants can be placed again under normal conditions. Flowering will continue its normal development regardless of temperature or periods of darkness.

GARDENING

The varieties used for Christmas Cactus, are usually hybrids of Zygocactus, which have the pointed lobes, often claw-like, and will bloom from Thanksgiving to Christmas. Easter Cactus, usually hybrids of Schlumbergera, have wider segments which are rounded, and will bloom from Christmas to Easter, under the above described conditions. The flower buds of Easter Cactus take longer to develop than those of the Christmas Cactus, and consequently, bloom later.

Occasionally, mealy-bugs can damage the plants, they can be controlled with a local application of soap and water or be removed with a cotton swab and alcohol.

Why docs don't date patients

MEDICINE
PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Doctors who date patients should be allowed to do so. It's too hard to find a nice-looking, successful man, so I think it would be stupid to pass one up just because he's your doctor. It's no one's business who dates whom -- or who marries whom.

It's easy for you to criticize this arrangement because you probably have a wife or a girlfriend. Whatever answer you give, I know I'm still in the right. If your reply really ticks me off, you deserve every bit of suffering that life can give you until you literally die from it. My name is none of your business either!

DEAR READER: You seem to feel strongly about the issue of doctors dating their patients. Fortunately, I've never considered that my answers to readers' questions could cause me to suffer chronically and die. If I believed that, I wouldn't be much of a doctor -- and I certainly would be a lousy columnist.

Since the dawn of the medical profession, there has been a prohibition against physicians experiencing intimacy with their patients. There are solid reasons for this.

In the first place, patients -- because of worry or disease -- are especially vulnerable. Therefore, a doctor who takes advantage of this is really engaging in a form of emotional/sexual abuse.

Second, patients generally revere their doctors. Consequently, what should be a balanced relation is unbalanced from the start. You can't have an honest equality when one partner is the authority figure.

Third, doctors' professional judgment is compromised when they're emotionally involved with a patient. This is one reason that physicians should not treat their own family members for serious ailments. Under such circumstances, they lose objectivity and become less effective healers.

Having said this, I should add the obvious: There have always been doctors who have had affairs with their patients, even married them. This still doesn't make it right.

The same prohibition holds for other professions, including lawyers, dentists and similar "service" practitioners.

I disagree with you. The doctor who becomes sexually or emotionally involved with a patient is making a big mistake and runs the risk of losing his reputation, not to mention that he can be charged with unethical behavior and be punished by his state medical society. Doctors who experience the urge to engage in funny business ought to think twice -- and the proposed partner ought to think three times.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What happens to attention deficit disorder children as they grow to adulthood? Is this condition something they outgrow as they mature?

DEAR READER: Many children with ADD improve their learning skills as they age. The reason for this is unknown. Other youngsters continue to experience inattention, impulsive behavior and fidgetiness well into adulthood, even if they are treated with stimulants, such as Ritalin.

In general, children whose ADD is recognized early and treated do better than those who suffer ostracism and frustration in school -- or who remain undiagnosed until later in life.

In a sense, ADD is like alcoholism: A person never really outgrows it but can learn effective ways of coping with it -- even without drug therapy.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Eddie Kantar is a popular bridge teacher. Earlier this year he published a third book of class notes. Containing advice and illustrative deals on 13 topics, like declarer-play at trick one and common-sense defense, it costs $25 from the author at Box 427, Venice, CA 90294. You can still purchase the bigger books one and two for $35 each or $60 for both. All three cost $80, prices being postpaid.

Here is a deal from the third book. How should South plan the play in four hearts after West has led the spade jack?

South might have taken a (successful) gamble on three no-trump. Given the opening lead, South thought he saw 10 top tricks: two spades, seven hearts and one diamond. However, after ducking the first trick to East's spade king and winning the second trick with his spade queen, South suddenly noticed a problem: Where was his dummy entry to the spade ace? In desperation, South ran a lot of hearts, but the defenders made no mistake, throwing all their spades. And when East won the first club trick, he switched to the diamond 10, a classic surrounding play.

South should have assumed that West had the spade 10 to back up his jack lead. When East goes up with his spade king at trick one, South should unblock his queen. Suppose East switches to the diamond 10. South wins with his ace, draws trumps and plays a spade to dummy's nine. When the finesse wins, South cashes dummy's spade ace and claims his contract.

Phillip Alder's book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available, autographed upon request, for $14.95 from P.O. Box 189, Roslyn Hts., NY 11577-0189.

HOROSCOPE

Nov. 15, 1995

Several previously impossible objectives might be accomplished with surprising ease in the year ahead. You have learned a great deal from your experiences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23) If you rearrange plans at the last minute to satisfy your needs at the expense of your friends' wishes today, they might get miffed. Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead make wonderful Christmas stocking stuffers for all signs of the zodiac. Mail $2 for each and $45 for Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158. Make sure you state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In an important career matter today, use caution when choosing a teammate. A poor choice will work against you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep your priorities in order today. Take time to enjoy yourself, but make sure not to take too much time away from your regular responsibilities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Bargaining will be a strength today if you negotiate with familiar faces on familiar turf. If you start operating out of your parish, you may not be as lucky.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Take the commitments you make to friends seriously today. Beware of promising something you know you can't deliver.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Material rewards are possible today, but they may not live up to your grand expectations. Try to remain hopeful. Half a loaf is better than none.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to avoid expensive pastimes today. Even though you may not think so, free activities could provide the most fun.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something begun with companions today might have to be finished independently. Do not let a lack of assistance derail your objective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Lady Luck will look kindly upon you today if you're willing to share your benefits with others. If you're selfish, you may not be as fortunate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The possibility of a significant material gain will be strong today. Make the most of every opportunity with an ambitious and positive attitude.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not use surrogates today except when absolutely necessary. Endeavors you either originate or personally direct will have the best chance for success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to succeed today, visualize yourself finishing a difficult project. Self-doubts could deprive you of success, self-assurance will ensure victory.
