Shootings

SANFORD — Sheriff's investigators are looking into two shooting incidents this past weekend in the Sanford area. A drive-by shooting was reported at approximately 12:30 Saturday afternoon at Southwest Food Market on Southwest Road. Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough says a black male in a 1972 Chevrolet drove by the market and fired 13 9mm rounds at Gregory Mills, 24, who was in the parking lot. One round reportedly hit Mills in the leg and he will reportedly require surgery.

The vehicle the shooter was said to be driving, was later found abandoned on Center Street in Sanford.

The other shooting occurred outside Lee's Market on S.R. 46 in Midway, within just a few minutes of the Southwest Road shooting.

McDonough says 23 year old James Walker was shot in the leg by a man who fled on foot. Walker was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital for his injuries.

McDonough said there is no indication at the present time that the shootings were related.

Who pays for Sun Drive? Lake Mary may have to pick up the tab

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Who will pay for the paving of Sun Drive in Lake Mary? If the property owners along Sun Drive don't pay, the city may have to bear the brunt and use taxpayer money.

The question has been posed for many years and still has not reached any final determination.

In 1986, the city commission voted to make improvements on Sun Drive, including installation of water lines, a realignment of part of the street, paving, and various improvements from the western end of Feather's Edge property to Lake Mary Boulevard.

Initially, SunBank, located on Sun Drive, paid the total amount for the project which was $400,286. The city was to reimburse the bank, including interest on the amount.

No move was apparently made to recoup the money from land owners at that time, however, as the repayment was reportedly to be made after more of the land was developed. Actual development has occurred only in the past few years.

The city has a new mayor and new commissioners now. The question, however, is where to get the money to repay the bank for the paving and other improvements.

Several months ago, the city contracted with a special consultant to determine how to assess property owners along Sun Drive. An assessment scale has been subsequently forwarded to the commission for consideration.

In October, it was suggested that the city assess a total of $226,657.20 to the 11 property owners on Sun Drive.

The amounts, however, were determined to be too high, and since that time, a revised schedule has been compiled.

Last Thursday night, a resolution was presented for consideration to the city commission to approve the latest assessment list.

Because the matter has drawn a great deal of disagreement on the amounts or the actual assessments, however, the city has postponed any further action toward obtaining the money. A special work session has been scheduled for Jan. 19, to hear public input on the matter.

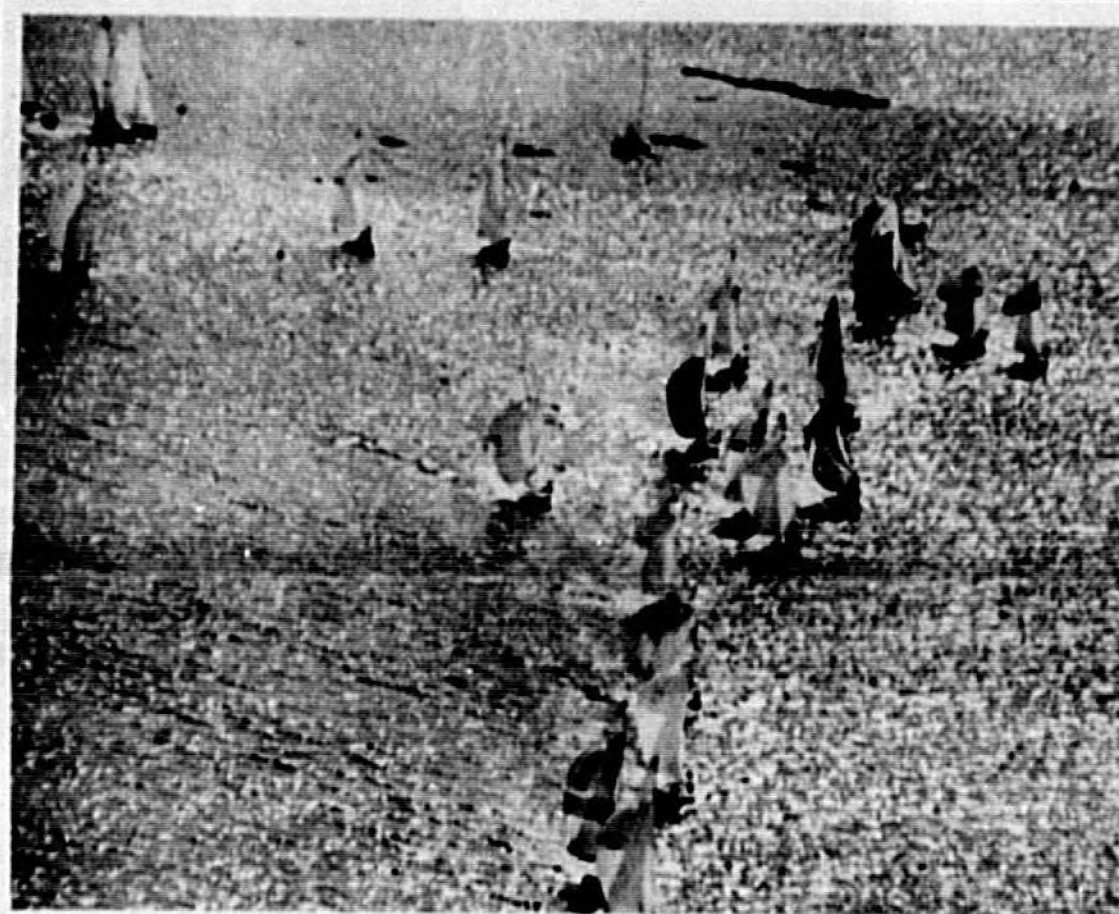

Public input was also accepted at Thursday night's meeting, however, and several property owners stepped forward or were represented by counsel.

Attorney Michael Marlowe, representing two family trusts which both have property along Sun Drive, attempted to convince the commission that no money should be paid, because the property owners were not originally notified that they would be assessed for the cost of the road improvements.

City Manager John Litton acknowledged that while it is policy for the city to notify property owners of such a circumstance in advance, he

McClanahan: What goes around comes around

By J. MARK BARFIELD

SANFORD — A supporter of District 3 candidate Kerry Lyons filed a complaint with the Sanford Police Department last Friday against incumbent A.A. "Mac" McClanahan, saying the 69-year-old man threatened him with the words "What goes around comes around."

"I took it as a threat," said George "Steve" Yancey, 47.

"That's a colloquialism I say a dozen times a day," said McClanahan this morning.

According to Yancey, he was exiting the elevator of City Hall shortly before 10 a.m. on Friday when he met McClanahan. Yancey, in his statement, wrote "At this time Commissioner McClanahan boisterously and with anger said "Buddy, what goes around comes around."

Yancey said when he asked for an explanation, McClanahan told him "What do you think you are doing jumping on the band wagon, putting those signs on your truck and trying to get him elected?"

Yancey said he felt threatened by the remark and felt McClanahan had the ability to carry out the threat.

"I'm a citizen with signs on my truck," said Yancey. "I feel we need a change."

Yancey said there was a witness to the confrontation

No rocking chair retirement figures in Judge's plans

SANFORD — The sunny corner office on the courthouse second floor is decorated in shades of blue with an occasional accent of orange. A couch, desk, book shelves and several chairs add to the professional, business atmosphere but there are homey, welcoming touches too.

An old-fashioned style wooden rocking chair with its blue and white striped chair pad sits near a window and a glass and wooden pendulum clock hangs on the wall, ticking away the hours.

Several items including a needle point pillow, framed art and even a small brass paperweight of an alligator with its head drawn back, mouth wide open, signal those who stop by, this is the office of a real Gator fan.

Services held for Christina Holt

POOLESVILLE, Md. — Hundreds of friends and relatives packed a small Methodist church to pay their final respects to a girl whose mother and stepfather concocted a tale of her abduction to cover up her beating death.

During a 45-minute ceremony Saturday, 7-year-old Christina Holt was remembered as a child who brought happiness into the lives of many people.

Outside the church, friends embraced great-grandmother Dorothy Money and grandmother Judith Holt who alternately raised the girl in their Pooleville homes after she was abandoned as an infant by her mother.

"We'll miss her laugh, her smile and her enthusiasm," the Rev. Lewis McDonald said of the girl, whose pajama-clad body was found buried behind a Tequesta, Fla., shopping center Oct. 28, six weeks after her death.

John and Pauline Zile are charged with first-degree murder in her alleged beating death Sept. 16. Both are being held without bond in Palm Beach County jail.

The case attracted nationwide attention when Pauline Zile reported her daughter missing following a shopping trip at a Broward County flea market. The child had lived with a grandmother in Pooleville, and in June moved in with the Ziles.

Dorm will remain closed

BOCA RATON — The Florida Atlantic University dormitory where mercury was found will remain closed through the end of the semester, officials said.

The second floor of the three-story Seminole Hall is still registering "significant" levels of mercury vapors, said FAU spokeswoman Lynn Laurenti.

"We don't anticipate reopening the dorm until next semester," she said.

The current term ends Dec. 16.

Two students have been suspended for allegedly taking mercury from a physics lab and leaving droplets around their dormitory, a lab and a pond last week.

University officials have not identified the students, who are the subject of a criminal investigation expected to last two more weeks.

Hazardous-waste workers closed the building Nov. 26 after students found tiny pools of mercury on stair landings and called campus police.

It was the third discovery of the toxic element on campus in a week.

Cleanup crews have been flushing out the air in Seminole Hall with fans and filters, hoping to bring the mercury vapor to a less hazardous level, said Vincent Finelli, FAU's director of environmental health and safety.

Birthday party benefits symphony

MIAMI — Singer Maureen McGovern, former "Married With Children" co-star David Garrison and the New World Symphony helped conductor Michael Tilson Thomas celebrate his 50th birthday at a black tie gala.

"I didn't feel 50 until just now," Tilson Thomas said as he took the stage to thank 600 friends and fans who turned out for the musical tribute Saturday night. Tables sold for $5,000 and $10,000.

The program ranged from Debussy and Copland to a medley of Tilson Thomas' favorite '60s tunes performed by McGovern, Garrison, Broadway's Marilyn Caskey and opera singer Robert Osborne.

"Once upon a time, Marilyn Monroe sang 'Happy Birthday' to a president," Garrison said. "And tonight Maureen McGovern is singing Gershwin to Michael Tilson Thomas. What a lucky guy!"

The event raised $250,000 to benefit the Miami Beach-based New World Symphony. Tilson Thomas' academy for graduates of prestigious music schools. The conductor, pianist and composer will turn 50 on Dec. 21.

Revenge could have sparked fatal fire

FORT LAUDERDALE — Angry at his roommate, a resident of a group home for the elderly and mentally disabled started the fire which spread and killed five of his housemates, officials said.

"The cause of the fire was a resident setting fire to the belongings of another resident," said Robert Lombardo, a senior official with the state Health and Rehabilitative Services Department's Tallahassee headquarters. "There was an argument between two of the residents, and one of them ran."

Though HRS didn't identify the roommates, former residents of the Assisted Living Community Home told The Palm Beach Post the fire broke out in the bedroom shared by James Johnson, 57, and Nathaniel Charleston II, 49.

The Broward County Sheriff's Office hasn't determined the exact cause of the Thursday morning fire.

"HRS is not investigating these deaths of this fire," BSO spokesman Ott Cefkin said Sunday. "We have come to absolutely no conclusions whatsoever."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Florida tops U.S. in crime

FBI report ranks Dade County nation's leader

By The Associated Press

Florida had more crimes than any other state last year and Dade County was the nation's leader in total crimes among the largest metropolitan areas, FBI statistics show.

Broward and Palm Beach counties ranked fourth and sixth in overall and property crime, helped by a surge in recent property crimes, according to the FBI's "Crime in the United States," report released Sunday.

Jacksonville ranked sixth for violent crimes, 10th in property crimes and seventh in serious crimes. Tampa-St. Petersburg came in 10th in violent crimes.

The statistics come as Florida recovers from a barrage of tourist attacks, the report had a sobering effect on tourism officials.

Though it's one of two highly publicized crimes that keep tourists away, a high daily crime rate can still have a negative effect, acknowledged Mark McDermott, vice president of the Greater Fort Lauderdale Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"Of course, we wish statistics like that were not widely publicized," he said.

"In the wake of the crimes against tourists last year, we heard people who were leery of sending people here," said McDermott. "October was our first good month in the entire previous 12-month period."

A total of 135 property and violent crimes were committed for every 1,000 Dade residents, the figures show.

The increases in Dade and Broward worsened their crime rankings from the previous year. Dade moved past New York for the top position in violent crime, and Broward moved from seventh to fourth in total crime.

Some experts complained the statistics were flawed, citing variations in how rigorous police are about keeping records.

"We have one of the most aggressive systems in the country in terms of uniform crime reporting," said Tim Moore, commissioner of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Also, the population figures count only permanent residents, penalizing areas like

South Florida that have millions of tourists, illegal immigrants and seasonal residents. Florida might have 40 million visitors, but the crime rates are computed only against the 12 million residents.

"It's grossly overstated because of the transient phenomenon," said Steven Wisotsky, defense attorney and Nova University law professor.

To curb crime, Florida experts urge intervention efforts when potential criminals are younger and increased punishment for criminals.

"You've got to start early and work with at-risk children," said Charles Massey, chairman of the criminal justice department at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton.

Wisotsky, also a defense attorney, said the focus should be on hardened criminals.

"For many crimes — robberies, burglaries, rapes — you have hard-core predatory criminals who rack up hundreds of crimes," he said. "They should be the top priority of any sensible community that wants to protect itself."

State board acts against doctors

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — The State Board of Medicine has fined a doctor $4,500 and ordered he take refresher courses after he amputated an elderly woman's fractured arm because it wouldn't heal.

The board also criticized Dr. Jose L. Ferrer of Daytona for failing to get a second opinion. Ferrer said he avoided other doctors because he and his partner were ostracized by the medical community.

"I think this is a disgrace," said board member Dr. Fuad Ashkar Saturday at a meeting of the group. "I'm really horrified by how the elderly are still treated."

The board on Saturday also fined and gave a six-month suspension to a doctor who made sexual comments to patients during a pelvic examination.

Members of the board agreed with Ferrer that the woman's 1992 case was a difficult one. The 79-year-old had advanced Alzheimer's disease and was uncooperative, making it difficult to ensure the arm remained immobilized.

The patient also had severe osteoporosis, which made it more difficult to attach implants to help immobilize the fracture.

But the board criticized Ferrer for failing to ask for a second opinion before deciding to amputate — even though the patient's son-in-law had agreed to forgo a second opinion.

The board also fined Dr. Grayson C. Snyder $5,000 and suspended his license for six months. The Blountstown physician was accused of making sexually explicit remarks during pelvic examinations on four female patients.

Expired tax will cut school funds for new buildings

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Counties will lose nearly half their state school building money next year unless lawmakers find a way to replace a declining utility tax.

The state Office of Educational Facilities estimates the money for construction at colleges, universities and public school districts will shrink from $981 million for the 1994-95 school year to $490 million next year.

The state trust fund that provides the money comes from a tax on monthly electric and telephone bills. But the temporary increase lawmakers enacted in the utility taxes expires this year.

A 21-member task force was set up early this year to come up with replacement money-raising ideas for the 1995 Legislature. Some include:

—Expanding utilities taxes to cover cable television, water and sewer.

—Letting local governments increase taxes on real-estate sales.

—Using state gasoline tax money to help pay school transportation costs.

—Raising student fees at colleges and universities.

—Encouraging school districts to raise more money through penny sales taxes and impact fees.

The task force will debate the proposals at a Dec. 19 meeting in Orlando and compile a report for lawmakers.

The state money has never fully paid for school building. School officials have had to find other ways to build classrooms and manage crowded campuses, such as voter-approved bond issues and year-round classes.

POLICE BRIEFS

DUI arrests

• Fernando Duarte, 24, 556 Sabal Palm Cir., Altamonte Springs, was arrested by Sanford Police on charges of driving under the influence on Friday evening.

• Edward Gomez, 25, 748 Suncrest Loop Apt. 212, Casselberry, was arrested by Sanford Police on charges of driving under the influence on Saturday morning.

Domestic violence charged

David Eugene Armstrong, 37, 521 Clemson Drive, Altamonte Springs, was charged with domestic violence by Seminole County Sheriff officers on Saturday.

Deputies said Armstrong had been involved in a verbal dispute with his mother at the home they share.

According to deputies, he struck his mother and she called for emergency assistance.

When deputies arrived to investigate, they said, Armstrong became uncooperative. They said they handcuffed him and led him away.

They said Armstrong spit on his mother when he was being taken away. Police also said Armstrong kept making verbal threats against his mother and the arresting officers even after he was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

He was held without bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Strong arm robbery alleged

Mark Lamar Williams, 21, 603 Lake Mobile, Altamonte Springs, was charged with strong arm robbery by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Saturday.

Deputies said he entered the Texaco food mart on E. Altamonte Drive and purchased two sodas at closing time. After the doors were locked, he tried to gain entry into the store claiming there was a problem with the soda, they said.

When the clerk opened the door, they said, he grabbed her by the arm and forced her to give him cash and several $300 money orders.

He escaped, but was caught a short distance away.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Multiple charges filed

Michael Anthony Mitchell, 39, 203 Johnson St., Sanford, was charged with battery on a law enforcement officer, resisting arrest with violence, driving with a suspended license and with possession of drug paraphernalia by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Friday.

Deputies said they tried to pull him over for a traffic violation and had difficulty doing so.

When he finally stopped, they said, he could not produce a driver license. They said they asked him to put his hands on the hood of the patrol car and he told them he "didn't want to do that."

After calling for backup from other officers, deputies said, they tried to handcuff him. He began swinging his arms and attempting to flee, they said. They said he scuffled with them, punched them, kicked them and knocked them to the ground. They said he was sprayed twice in the face with pepper spray, but to no avail.

They reported that he dragged two officers into a nearby swampy area where they were "knee deep in water, mud and weeds."

Deputies said they believed Mitchell was under the influence of some sort of substance because he showed extreme strength and violence. In the past, they said, he had always been "cordial" even in arrest situations.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Warrant arrest

• Karen Renee Hurst, 36, 919 S. Oak Ave., Sanford, was charged with violating the terms of her probation on charges of selling marijuana. She was held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Incidents reported to authorities

• A 1988 Hyundai was reportedly burglarized Thursday, parked at an auto sales lot in the 3500 block of U.S. Highway 17-92 near Lake Mary. Sheriff's deputies said a cassette radio valued at $100 was stolen from the vehicle.

• Sanford police said a power saw and drill, with a total value of $57, were said to have been taken Thursday from a residence in the 200 block of Jessamine Avenue in Sanford.

• Several TV sets, a microwave oven and other items with a total value of $1,750 were reportedly stolen Thursday from a residence in the 400 block of Myrtle Avenue in Sanford.

• A residential burglary was reported Thursday at a home in the 1600 block of West Third Street. Police said several packages of meat were taken from the refrigerator, and other items were initially reported missing. Police reported some of the items were later located in bushes across the street from the residence, as well as in a wooded area south of Mangoustine and Third Street.

Rockin' rollin' at Sailfest '94

Rock 'n' roll came to Sanford Saturday night. Derek and the Slammers performed nearly four hours at the Sanford Civic Center in conjunction with Sailfest '94. Sailors, crew and fans crowded into the center for a fun-filled evening with music, food and drink.

Listing of sex offenders grows

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE -- Law enforcement officials are facing a dilemma as names are added to Florida's public list of sex offenders and their addresses: Protect citizens or risk vigilante action.

Florida is one of about 10 states that compile publicly accessible lists of sex offenders, and the roll has grown to 87 since lawmakers enacted the requirement in 1993.

Those convicted of sex crimes against children or violent sex crimes against elderly people since Oct. 1, 1993 must keep the Florida Department of Law Enforcement informed of their whereabouts.

FDLE notifies local police and sheriffs if an offender moves to their area, and can release the list to anyone who asks.

Names go on the list when an offender is released from prison or the court system, so many convicted since October 1993 haven't reached that stage.

For example, none of the names so far has an Alachua County address, Gainesville Police Chief Wayland Clifton told The Gainesville Sun for a story Sunday.

"The law only took effect in 1993," Clifton said. "They probably would not be out of the criminal justice system yet. But I think we will be seeing some in 1995."

Though the list is helpful in keeping track of offenders, law enforcement officials said it has its flaws.

Most sex offenders remain under Department of Corrections supervision for a few years after release because they have some kind of parole to serve, said Ritchie Grant, FDLE criminal justice systems administrator.

After that, offenders are required to keep law enforcement informed through the local sheriff's office, Grant said. "But there is no enforcement by FDLE in regard to that."

Also, police are "between a rock and a hard place" when it comes to releasing names on the list, said Jack Espinosa, a spokesman for the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Department. Ten names on the list have Hillsborough County addresses.

"On the one hand, everybody wants to know that somebody who's been convicted of a sexual crime is living in the neighborhood," Espinosa said. "But they've served their time, they've paid their dues and they're out."

People also need to respect the law concerning treatment of the offender, and police don't want to have to make arrests for harming an offender or vandalizing property, he said.

Man charged with abuse to infant

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Douglas Lee Krause, 18, 4220 S. Orlando Drive, Sanford, was charged with aggravated child abuse on Saturday by Sanford Police.

Sanford Police said they were informed by Arnold Palmer Hospital in Orlando of a possible case of child abuse of an 8-eight-week old child from Sanford.

According to police, the child was admitted to that hospital from Central Florida Regional Hospital suffering from respiratory failure. The medical staff performed a CT scan and found two separate skull fractures.

The injuries, they said, were consistent with strikes to the head and with shaken infant syndrome.

Krause and the child's mother, Amanda Beall, were taken to the Sanford Police Department and interviewed separately.

Police said the mother told them that the father had struck the child in the head on two separate occasions about two weeks before and recently. They said she said he had prevented her from helping the child. They said she was threatened by the father that she would be hurt if she revealed the incidents.

Police said the father had told them that the child had fallen from the couch and he had found the child crying on the floor.

Police said Krause later admitted to hitting the child.

Krause was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Domestic violence

Can domestic violence be stopped? It appears we are placing more concern over listening to people tell us who is right and who is wrong, than being concerned over the beatings people are giving and taking.

There was a conference on domestic violence recently in Tampa. The only thing that came from it was a continuation of the question regarding who is right and who is wrong.

Sarah Buel, an assistant district attorney in Quincy, Mass., is leading a "Zero Tolerance" campaign. It calls for stricter punishment for people who beat relatives or others in domestic violence situations.

Hillstarough State Attorney Harry Lee Coe complained that it is nearly impossible to prosecute abusers when their victims refuse to testify against them.

Buel said that unless prosecutions increased, "You'd better open a lot more funeral parlors." She said the homicide rate is going to increase.

Buel told Coe that victims often refuse to prosecute because they fear for the lives or safety of themselves or their families.

To cite a typical example, let's assume a man beats his wife. She refuses to report it to police because she knows, even if he is convicted, he will be out on the street within days, and she could again be a victim.

It must be noted that males aren't the only persons who resort to this type of violence. A study of the crime reports carried regularly in the Sanford Herald will show that many wives and girlfriends are arrested for assault or battery in domestic violence cases.

Even if the police are called by someone, such as a neighbor, the abused spouse or friend refuses to sign any charges. The officer has the authority in most cases to file the charges without that support, but again, the person who has been beaten fears for her or his life, and refuses to testify in court.

What will resolve this situation is to make punishment much more severe. If a man beats a woman or a woman beats a man, there should be a strict jail sentence given, possibly followed by probation which prevents the abuser from coming in contact with the victim.

Certainly, there is no assurance that a person wouldn't repeat the beating the second time after he or she has been in jail for two years, compared to being let go with nothing more than a warning as we have now in most cases.

But the threat of being incarcerated for any length of time, with the possibility of loss of employment or other problems it may create, would be an excellent deterrent.

Buel's "Zero Tolerance" program took domestic homicide rates from 20 a year down to zero after she introduced it in her home town of Quincy.

We believe this should be closely examined by Florida officials, as it may well be one of the biggest steps toward reducing this type of violence that has been suggested.

LETTER

Hiring fired deputy

I don't find it hard to believe that Sanford Police Commissioner A.A. McClanahan and Police Chief Ralph Russell have pulled another boner and riled the community. You would think that with Sanford having such a large black population that these two would have thought that hiring Steve Martin would be a political bombshell.

I find it unfortunate that the residents of our community do not know the whole truth behind Steve Martin's firing at the Sheriff's Department. For I believe that if the full story were known, residents would be demanding the firing of someone high up in the sheriff's administration. I do know the truth but I will save it for a more appropriate time.

To even consider hiring Steve Martin is asking for trouble. It makes the police department and city look callous and insensitive to the needs of the black community. As Reverend Rucker stated at the commission meeting, it would be a slap in the face to those in the black community for this hiring to take place.

It is imperative for residents to understand that there were other applicants for these jobs. But we all must understand that if one is not one of Ralph Russell's fair-haired boys they're not going to be hired. If the city had been smart they would have hired one of the very qualified women who applied. But the Neanderthals that run our city are so pig-headed that it's impossible to see beyond their own egos. I think Ralph Russell's hatred of women in law enforcement is so strong that he will go to any extreme not to hire one, and do everything in his power to try to run the ones already on the department off the force.

Regardless of the outcome of this mess I find it highly disturbing to hear certain members of the black community threatening violence. This type of language and behavior play right into the hands of people like Russell and McClanahan. Violence is not the answer to this. The black community has a lot of voting power and they should exercise it vigorously in the Dec. 6 election.

Voters must remember that Commissioner A.A. McClanahan was the main driving force in putting Ralph Russell in command of the police department. As it has turned out, Russell has become a real albatross for the city. This alone should make people question McClanahan's ability to make competent decisions. Ralph Russell and A.A. McClanahan are like-minded people, and as such, are like birds of a feather who flock together.

The war against offensiveness

Rick Guy is a member of Syracuse's Common Council and when he was a student, he had been elected to the National Honor Society. Accordingly, the council member was invited to be the keynote speaker at Nottingham High School's National Honor Society induction dinner. Susannah Jackson, vice president of the society at the high school, had the authority to choose a speaker and thought there would be no controversy.

She was wrong. Some students at Nottingham have apparently taken an advanced placement course in political correctness so they can move smoothly into college. The Post-Standard, a Syracuse newspaper, reports that Rick Guy has been disinvited because of his conservative views, among them his opposition to abortion and his criticism of homosexuality.

"People," says Susannah Jackson, "thought he would be offensive." There is a growing demand - in many areas of schooling - to cleanse language and ideas of "offensiveness."

At Nottingham High School, the vote in the National Honor Society chapter on whether Rick Guy might be too offensive for these bright, young students to endure was: 23 against his coming, 20 in favor, and 30 students abstaining. What were the abstainers afraid of?

"I was very upset," Susannah Jackson said, "that people rejected him as a speaker because of his views." She added that her choice of speaker would have been routinely accepted - if he or she had "the same beliefs as our members." In the same Post-Standard story, Rick Guy noted that his rejection illustrated what many of the young are being taught about the value of free speech. He went on to say that "many of the same folks [who bar him from speaking] would be the first to accuse me of intolerance." Also in upstate New York, a billboard high above the expressway has been vandalized four times. The intensity of the perpetrators' desire to censor was impressive as they found perilous ways to climb onto that billboard.

The defacers were abortion-rights activists scandalized by the effrontery of the Western New York Chapter of Feminists for Life in putting up this message: "Abortion has two victims - one dead, one wounded." A phone number was added, and it provided, as alternatives to abortion, access to eight different agencies providing prenatal care, housing, free financial and medical assistance, parenting classes and adoption counseling. Each time the billboard was attacked, the phone number was crossed out.

And each time the billboard was defaced, there were reports in some of the local papers of what the vandals had done, and money came in to repaint the billboard from people whom the Feminists for Life chapter had never heard of. So far, $2,500 has been sent, an unexpected amount for a very economically depressed area.

ELLEN GOODMAN

It's not anger, it's anxiety

BOSTON - It's been nearly a month since the political artists sketched a new composite profile for the Great Hall of American Stereotypes. Today, The Angry White Man has taken a permanent place beside Susan Smith's rendering of the black carjacker.

Endless analysts and exit pollsters have told us how white men fumed off to the polls this year and pushed the lethal levers. How they committed not-so-random acts of violence on Democrats.

This ubiquitous portrait has not only generated political fear. It's produced endless soul-searching about how best to appease and appeal to this mad man. The Democrats have begun to sound like battered family members telling each other not to get Daddy mad again.

Well, forgive me, but a lever is not a trigger. The post office is a more dangerous place to work than the polls. And voting is still a non-violent protest.

We all know the topography of the 1994 gender gap by now. We know that a majority of men voted Republican and a majority of women voted Democrat. We know that it was men who switched parties this year. And yes, they moved with something approaching vehemence.

But the chief operative word here isn't anger. It's anxiety.

Before we frame the picture of The Angry White Man, we ought to study the penitence, the deeper image shining through the paint. As Robert Reich said in a speech to the Democratic Leadership Council last week, "the old middle class has become an anxious class."

The biggest drop in Democratic support on Election Day was among men who lack college degrees. This group includes three out of four working men, and has suffered a 12 percent decline in average real incomes in the last 15 years.

But that doesn't explain why working men were more anxious/angry than working women who were earning still less. The answer is partly in their sense of direction.

By and large, women still see their lives as better than their mothers. This is the generation that has traded depression for stress - not a wholly bad bargain. They have more options and more power as well as more obligations.

On the other hand, working men, especially young, white, non-college graduates, see themselves as doing worse than their fathers. Those fathers were heads of households. They aren't able to be. The gender gap in wages between men and women is closing - because men's wages are going down. So are their prospects. Meanwhile they are expected to do the dishes.

At the risk of moving from the gender gap into the canyon, I would suggest that some men and some women sometimes have somewhat - add your own qualification - different senses of self and self-worth. Men have traditionally hinged more of their identity on their economic role as provider. Women have seen their economic worth as one piece of a larger life as juggler and caretaker.

In the old tension between the American values of self-reliance and those of interdependence, men are more likely to think they have to pick themselves up by their own bootstraps. Women are more likely to believe in a network of relationships.

So in a pinch, or in an anxious moment, men may be more attracted to the call of getting government off our backs. Women may be more hopeful about or less dismissive of government as a necessary source of connection and even help.

Then too, at every turn of the dial this year, there were the talk shows, which became what analyst Ann Lewis calls a "national electronic consciousness-raising session for men." On these shows men (mostly) participated in a speak-out that said "something is wrong with society."

None of this is meant to replace political analysis with psychoanalysis. More men and women - especially married ones - voted alike than voted differently. Even down in the gender gap, many women shared dismay about government but didn't like the Republican answer. The same was true for African-Americans.

But the difference between anger and anxiety is more than a syllable or two. Anger looks for a target. Anxiety looks for reassurance. Anger can only yell. Anxiety can still listen.

Are there angry white men? Sure. I can name three - Dole, Gingrich and Helms - who were part of the elected, not the electorate. But The Angry White Man is much too pat a moniker for my taste. This was no drive-by shooting. Just an ordinary attack. An anxiety attack.

But the chief operative word here isn't anger. It's anxiety.

JACK ANDERSON

Uranium buy not such a hot deal

WASHINGTON - The recent American mission to whisk bomb-grade uranium out of the Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan is not meeting with accolades from all corners. That's because the price paid for it - around $30 million for 600 kilograms - may well have set a record America will be unable to match in the future.

"The mission, codenamed Project Sapphire, was no jewel of a deal," one Pentagon official quipped.

The nuclear experts we talked to are worried that the United States won't be able to afford the price of peace. The U.S. government is currently trying to arrange the purchase of 500 metric tons of highly enriched uranium from Russia. If the deal with Kazakhstan is any indication, it's an offer we might have to refuse.

There is, naturally, only one reason for America to buy nuclear materials from Russia or Kazakhstan - to reduce the stockpiles, often poorly guarded, of bomb-grade material to prevent terrorists or unfriendly nations from gaining access to it.

"We may have set a precedent for paying an exorbitant amount," a top Department of Energy official familiar with the deal told our associate Dale Van Atta. "If the same price holds for Russia, they'll be able to balance their budget by selling enriched uranium to us into the next millennium. We ought to have concerns about that."

Last month's deal came about after Kazakh officials told the American ambassador that they'd be willing to sell their nuclear material to the United States. Kazakh officials say they have no interest in maintaining their own atomic arsenal.

During a private meeting in July with American officials, Kazakh Science Minister Vladimir S. Shkolnik made clear his country's stance on nuclear proliferation. According to the notes of one attendee, Shkolnik said: "We want to be an example to the rest of Asia on how you should handle your nuclear weapons. We want to have everything that we do with nuclear materials out in the open."

But such cooperation carried a price. According to one American official, the Kazakh government originally wanted $50 million for its uranium, while another source claims the original asking price was close to $100 million. At the request of the Kazakh government, the final figure has not been made public, though one Kazakh official put the number at "more than $10 million, but not many tens of millions."

One source familiar with the deal says the final price was in the neighborhood of $30 million in direct aid and incentives, which also happens to be the approximate market value for 600 kilograms of highly enriched uranium. When sold to responsible governments on the open market, highly enriched uranium has a fair market value of about $50,000 per kilogram.

Despite the glad-handing over the successful mission, Kazakh officials now say the material we bought may not be as deadly as American officials suggest. Kazakh officials have said that only about 5 percent of the total - or 30 kilograms - is of the highly enriched, bomb-grade variety. The rest of the payload, they claim, is of lower quality, some of it mixed with other alloys that made it far less valuable. If that's correct, then America just paid more than 20 times the market value for 30 kilos of bomb-grade material. That might still be a good deal if it was a one-time purchase. But by all indications it isn't.

The price paid for it may well have set a record America will be unable to match in the future.

Mize

holder for years. Mize attends home football games and occasionally goes to away games as well, to watch his alma mater's team.

The judge attributed his hoarse, raspy voice on the day of this interview to a "bug" rather than overuse by a Gator fan who watched his team's four-touchdown lead Nov. 26 melt away in the final quarter to a 31-31 tie with upstate rivals, the Florida State Seminoles. The two schools will face off again in the Sugar Bowl after the Seminoles defeated Alabama for the SEC championship Saturday.

As his 16 years as a circuit court judge draw to a close, Mize has no intention of racking away his retirement. He has already put his name on the list of judges called to handle court duties for judges who become ill or have case scheduling conflicts.

"The day after I retire," Mize said, "I'll start back to work in the juvenile division so in essence I'm deferring my retirement by two weeks." Mize retires from the criminal bench at the end of December but will serve on the juvenile bench for two weeks while incoming Judge Gene Stephenson receives training. Stephenson was elected a circuit court judge Nov. 8 and will get a week of orientation and a week of school after he takes his oath of office in January.

Along with serving as a judge emeritus, Judge Mize intends to take civil mediation training and become a certified mediator.

"I also want to do some volunteer work," the 62-year old judge explained. Mize said county court Judge John Sloop, who is involved in Habitat for Humanity has sparked his interest in the group.

"I'm not a skilled carpenter or anything," Mize said, "but as Judge Sloop said, I can go out and push a wheelbarrow or lay sod or something like that. I'd like some good physical activity like that."

As a hobby, the judge and his wife, Mary, grow roses and retirement from the bench will afford him the opportunity to tend the couple's 120 or so bushes. Mrs. Mize operates three child day care centers in Sanford and recently sold a fourth center.

Spending more time with his grandchildren is also in the judge's plan. There are four grandchildren in the Mize clan with a fifth one on the way. The couple may also do some traveling.

"In other words, I want to keep real busy," Mize said. "I don't want to go brain dead as I've told a lot of people. I think many people make the mistake when they retire of not keeping active."

Mize came to Seminole County in 1959 after Gainesville grew too large for his liking.

"While I was growing up and going to law school, Gainesville got to be a bigger community than what I liked. I was looking for a small town," the judge recalled, "and in 1959 Sanford certainly filled that bill. It was a small community. I thought it was a nice place to raise a family. I liked the location of it in the Central Florida area."

Mize practiced law with attorney Ed Shinholser for 16 months, then in April 1960, he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of a county judge who died in office. He was elected county judge in his own right in the fall of 1960.

After one four-year term, Mize opted not to seek re-election as county judge and went into private practice for 16 years in a partnership with attorney Mack Cleveland.

In January, 1981, Mize was appointed circuit court judge upon the retirement of Judge Volie A. Williams Jr. He was re-elected twice without opposition.

Of all the circuit court divisions in which the judge has served, he liked general civil best.

"I've found the general civil cases were more interesting," Mize explained. "You get some unique cases there. Where more of the criminal cases are more routine."

One of three judges presiding in the criminal division, Mize said there is more violent crime today than when he first took office. The larger population and increased drug use contribute to the violent crimes, he said.

In order to stem the escalating crime rate, Mize said a long-term remedy including providing better education and better parenting for children may be the key. Parents need to really care about their children and give them proper guidance as they grow, he noted.

"The majority of people who are in the criminal court system," Mize said, "do not have a lot of education and do not have good job skills. Many of them are from very dysfunctional families. That's not their fault, in most cases, that's just what it is. Until we can have in our society, better educated people with better job skills from good family backgrounds, I'm afraid it is going to get a lot worse. And for that cycle to work, we're talking about another generation before it would really take effect."

Fostering good self-esteem in their children is another key role parents have, he added. "So many of them are abused, not just physically, but sometimes emotional abuse is worse. When a child doesn't have any self-esteem and is constantly badgered and harassed about their faults, they have no real reason to try to achieve."

Making all prisoners serve more of their sentence will not necessarily reduce the crime rate in the judge's view.

"I believe we've got in excess of 50,000 people incarcerated here in Florida right now," Mize said. "A large number are incarcerated for non-violent crimes. We need to have diversionary programs for people (charged) with non-violent crimes rather than sending them to prison, so we can free up prison space for the violent and habitual offenders...so they will serve a longer portion of their sentence."

The interesting cases and the variety of lawyers have made his years as a judge enjoyable. Mize said, along with working, the courthouse staff and support personnel.

"You don't enjoy having a heavy caseload," he noted, "because you often can't devote the time that's needed."

Mize sees us becoming a more litigious society, with more and more people taking their disputes to the courts.

"A lot of civil cases are filed today that you wouldn't have seen when I first took office," he commented. "The publicity about some of the real big verdicts gives a lot of people unrealistic expectations when they bring a case." For every million dollar verdict, there may be 100 cases with little if any monetary recovery.

was unable to locate any official documents indicating that all of the property owners had indeed been given advance notice. "This should have been done," he said, "but at this time, I can't find any papers to show that it was."

Rev. Paul Hoyer, pastor of Holy Cross Lutheran Church, also located on Sun Drive, said, "When the church received its CO (certificate of occupancy), we were under the impression that we had paid all of the fees and charges, and that there wouldn't be anything further regarding building the church at that location."

Under the revised schedule the church would be assessed $9,072.38. The original suggested amount before the revised listing would have been $19,084.54.

Robert J. Schmidt, who lives on Sun Drive, told the commission he would like to sell his property. "But with this assessment," he said, "it may be impossible to sell it, and I may end up having to continue living there and continue paying the interest for 10 or more years."

Schmidt's property, under the revised schedule, would be assessed at $12,066.23.

Nicholas Pastis also spoke against the assessment. His property would be charged $21,692.49.

The total amount being sought at the present time, and under the present revised assessment level, is $117,745.23.

Several of the speakers suggested that the road project should be included in as any other city street paving project, and be financed by the city, rather than paid for by only the property owners on that street.

The new resolution specifies that in addition to the property owners paying the $117-plus amount, the city would pay $282,540.77 out of the total original amount of the project.

The resolution was approved by the commission following the public discussion. Beforehand, however, City Attorney Donna McIntosh assured the commission that any decision made could be changed following the public meeting on the situation scheduled in January.

Commissioner David Meador, who moved to accept the resolution, commented, "We need to get this matter resolved and wipe the slate clean. But because of procedural errors made in the past, I see there is a chance the city may have to eat the total cost."

volunteer were checked at the Central Florida Regional Hospital, no serious health problems have been reported.

Zoo officials say the fumes were the result of ten pounds of a granulated chlorine, used as a disinfectant, were poured into a bucket which contained a few drops of mineral oil. The bucket was supposed to be clean before the chemical was used.

The mineral oil is used in the care of the elephants. When the two came in contact, they burst into flames.

Zoo spokesperson Andrea Farmer said the keeper staff acted very quickly in extinguishing the flames, and there was no property damage.

She commented that the granulated chlorine is the same as that used in most swimming pools. "People actually have this in their homes," she said, "and when you consider it will ignite when it comes in contact with just a little bit of mineral oil, it shows how dangerous it is without proper care."

Farmer said the incident occurred at 8:20 Sunday morning, before the zoo opened at the usual time of 9 a.m. "We closed off the southern portion from the hippopotamus to the elephant area until just before 11 o'clock," Farmer said.

As of this morning, Mary, the older of the two elephants was still showing signs of reacting to the chemicals she apparently breathed, but was expected to not have any serious problems. The other elephant, Maude, was not effected.

130,000 vehicles travel on the three major roadways in the city daily. He also said the number of traffic tickets written declined by about 450 this year over a similar period last year. He attributed the drop in citations to the reduction in the motorcycle force. Revenue generated from traffic fines would help fund the additional officers.

Manning estimates the total cost per motorist at $38,660.

In other business, three ordinances amending the city comprehensive zoning plan will be introduced on first reading tonight at the Longwood City Commission meeting.

The Land Planning Agency approved the rezoning on three parcels, one on West Wildmere and two on Longwood Hills/Lake Emma roads which would bring the properties into compliance with the comprehensive plan or future land use designation. The rezoning of the West Wildmere property is from R-1A to R-3 which would enable the property to be developed for single family homes, if desired. The LPA has also recommended approval of rezoning three parcels Intom property, parcels I and II from C-2 to R-1 and a third parcel from R-1A to R-1 to accomplish unified density of the parcels.

The property owner of the corner lot of Longwood Hills/Lake Emma road told the LPA he has been approached by a retail company to purchase his property. Currently, the land is zoned low density residential.

In order for the land to be used for a commercial purpose, the owner was advised the Comprehensive Plan would have to be amended. The LPA members were only discussing options, not making such a recommendation, according to minutes of the meeting.

Further, the commissioners will review an agreement with the Florida Department of Transportation for the relocation of water and sewer lines along U.S. 17-92 during a road widening project slated for 1997. The project is expected to cost the city about $100,000.

Prior to the regular commission meeting which begins at 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of city hall, the commissioners will sit as the equalization board for paving projects on Bistline and Georgia avenues at 6:30 p.m.

gave him the name "Lily White," but he did not get the person's telephone number.

McClanahan doesn't deny the words, but describes the event a little differently.

"He stepped out of the elevator at the same time I stepped in," said McClanahan. "He said 'You know I'm doing my best to elect your opponent.' I just said, 'What goes around comes around.' It's something I probably say a dozen times a day. I didn't mean anything by it."

McClanahan said the complaint represents a last-minute attempt to discredit him before tomorrow's election.

"It's regrettable," said McClanahan. "I tried to keep this on a positive note."

Wedding bells or jail cell?

Fate of man who bilks wives still unclear

By CLIFF EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — He was a suave horse trader from Kentucky. She was a wealthy plastic surgeon. He met her, wooed her, married her. She married him, investigated him, left him.

Now he's in jail, accused of arranging the killing of one wealthy heiress and bilking a dozen well-to-do women. A federal judge says he can get out of jail if, among other things, his ex-wife remarries him.

Is it any wonder the bride has had cold feet?

"I don't think there ever has been a case like this," Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Safer said Friday. "Some of the actions here are inexplicable."

But greed seems as good an explanation as any, prosecutors say.

The often tangled, mostly sordid investigation in the death of candy heiress Helen Voorhes Brach and a series of show-horse killings has revolved around one Richard J. Bailey.

Prosecutors say he arranged Brach's death in 1977 after she became suspicious he was fleeing her.

Annette Hoffman, a tough-talking plastic surgeon with a practice on Chicago's posh Gold Coast, married Bailey in Las Vegas on April 9 after a whirlwind romance. But Hoffman, who is in her 50s, soon received unexpected news from a private investigator: Bailey had lied about his age and had cheated several women out of money.

Their marriage was annulled April 22.

After Bailey, 65, was arrested July 27 and ordered held without bond on charges including racketeering, mail and wire fraud, money laundering and solicitation of murder, Hoffman appeared again.

"She comes to court Aug. 1 and says, 'Well, I don't know what I feel about this guy,'" said Safer.

Days later, she said she wanted to remarry him.

Bailey's attorney, Patrick Tuttle, told U.S. District Judge Milton Shadur that marriage would tie Bailey to the community and that he should be freed pending his May 9 trial. Hoffman also agreed to put up her $500,000 home as collateral. Tuttle called it a case of love conquering all.

The prosecutor isn't so sure. He gave the judge a taped phone conversation between Bailey and Hoffman in which the two discuss making money on potential movie deals.

"You've got to look at this with a suspicious eye," Safer said.

But the judge said earlier this week that despite "what might be seen as a bizarre resumption of their relationship," if marriage was OK with her, it's OK with him. He set the conditions for Bailey's release, including the marriage, electronic home confinement and no plastic surgery.

Bailey remained in jail today while lawyers straightened out real estate papers putting up properties as collateral.

On Wednesday night, Hoffman called a federal agent to say she wasn't so sure about the marriage part. But in an interview with The Associated Press on Friday, she said she had obtained a marriage license and planned to marry Bailey in a matter of days.

She blamed her cold feet on frustration over the slowness of the court case, and said now "it looks like it will happen."

"It's just been a very bellicose, bellicose experience," said Hoffman, who has watched the proceedings with a stony expression and perfectly coiffed hair after being chauffeured to the courthouse each day. "I pretty much said I was going to back off until everyone else got their act together."

Asked if she loved Bailey, she said: "Yes, very much so. I don't think he is going to be found guilty."

Bentsen to resign?

NEW YORK — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen plans to resign soon. The Wall Street Journal reported today, citing unidentified administration officials.

The newspaper said that President Clinton had not formally accepted Bentsen's resignation and that Bentsen would not comment Sunday. But his associates in the administration said he had indicated an eagerness to retire from politics this year and go into business, the Journal said.

First elected to the House in 1948 and to the Senate in 1970, Bentsen was Clinton's first Cabinet choice as a reassuring senior economic policy maker. Bentsen, 73, ran unsuccessfully for the presidency in 1976 and was the Democratic nominee for vice president in 1988.

There has been speculation over the last few weeks that Bentsen might resign early next year. The Journal indicated that he sees the timing as favorable now because that he can claim credit for successes with free-trade, deficit reduction and interstate banking legislation in the outgoing Congress, while the furor over the Treasury Department's handling of the Whitewater affair has died down.

The Journal said speculation on a successor centers on Robert Rubin, 57, the head of Clinton's National Economic Council and the former co-chief of Goldman, Sachs & Co.

'Santa' still top film at national box office

LOS ANGELES — Moviegoers are evidently caught up in the Christmas spirit — Tim Allen's "The Santa Clause" dominated the box office again this weekend, earning an estimated $11.5 million.

"Star Trek Generations" followed "Santa" with $5.5 million, industry sources said Sunday.

"Junior," in which Arnold Schwarzenegger gets pregnant, and Tom Cruise's "Interview With the Vampire" earned about $5.35 million and $5.3 million, respectively.

"Trapped in Paradise," starring Dana Carvey, Nicholas Cage and Jon Lovitz as hapless thieves, debuted in seventh place with $2.8 million.

The figures are based on estimated ticket sales Wednesday through Sunday. Final figures were due out today.

1. "The Santa Clause," $11.5 million.
2. "Star Trek Generations," $5.5 million.
3. "Junior," $5.35 million.
4. "Interview With the Vampire," $5.3 million.
5. "A Low Down Dirty Shame," $4.9 million.
6. "The Lion King," $3.1 million.
7. "Trapped in Paradise," $2.8 million.
8. "Stargate," $2.5 million.
9. "The Professional," $2.3 million.
10. "Miracle on 34th Street," $2 million.

Racism common in jury room

By JACKIE HALLIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Derrick and Eugena Powell don't think they got a fair trial when they sued their insurance company for $235,000. Especially after the black couple learned their all-white jury compared blacks to chimpanzees before awarding them only $10,500.

Jurors also told "nigger" jokes, speculated the Powells' children were drug dealers, and said white people made better employees than blacks, according to a troubled member of the panel who called their lawyer a day after the verdict.

"The level of bigotry and racial intolerance demonstrated by this jury cannot be condoned," said the Powells' lawyer, Robert Gray.

The Powells appealed, and the state Supreme Court agreed to hear their request for a new trial Tuesday.

Allstate Insurance Co. says the decision should stand despite "irregularities" in the deliberations, since what goes on in the jury room is private and that the alleged comments didn't necessarily affect the decision.

"Although anyone would be incensed by the comments alleged to be made by the jurors, public policy does not allow invasion into the privacy of the jury room," Allstate attorney Sharon Lee Stedman said in court papers.

The judge in the May 1993 case refused the Powells' request that he question the other jurors, saying Florida law did not allow such an inquiry.

A three-judge panel of the 5th District Court of Appeal overruled the judge, but the full court then overruled the panel, sending the case to the state Supreme Court.

The Powells had sued Allstate, their own insurance company, to cover medical bills and lost wages after an underinsured motorist broadsided their Lincoln Continental in January 1989. Powell, then a 51-year-old electrician, suffered back injuries.

Rams dominate JV tourney

OVIDO — Led by Anthony Bravo, selected the tournament's outstanding lightweight, the Lake Mary Rams were the class of the field at Saturday's Oviedo Junior Varsity Christmas Wrestling Tournament.

While there were no team scores, Lake Mary did have 10 finalists (out of 14 weight classes) and came away with six crowns.

Bravo collected three pins in winning the title at 130 pounds. Other Lake Mary champions were Scott Whitefield (135), Paul Razzari (140), Sam Richardson (145), Matt Raneck (171), and Andy Staples (220).

Titusville Astronaut had three champions — Creed Fleming (103), Carl Kidd (160), and Kevin Harris (Heavyweight), who earned the tournament's "Most pins in the least time" award.

For Lake Howell, which was represented by five finalists, Adam Woodburn (112) and Ruben Hernandez (119) claimed championships.

Robin Smith (125) and Ramer Baker (189), voted the Outstanding Heavyweight, won crowns for Kissimmee-Osceola.

Lyman's Joey Giola was the champion at 152.

SCC men win opener

TAMPA — The sophomore guard duo of Mike Sheppard and Don Tillman scored 22 points each and freshman William Fitzgerald added 18 more as the Seminole Community College men's basketball team dumped host Hillsborough Community College, 81-72, in the opening game of the Hillsborough Holiday Classic in Tampa Friday.

The Raiders, who were to have played Florida College Saturday, have won three straight games and are now 6-3 on the season. Head coach Bernard Merthie's charges will travel to Ft. Pierce on Tuesday for a 7:30 p.m. contest with Indian River Community College.

Sheppard also handed out seven assists and grabbed six rebounds. Tillman pulled down six rebounds and Fitzgerald corralled nine rebounds. Also contributing were Sanford's Roger Gaston (two points, six rebounds) and Winter Park's Dwayne Richardson (five points, five rebounds).

Table with 2 columns: Team, Points, Rebounds, Assists, Steals, Blocks, Fouls. Rows include Seminole Community College (81-72) and Hillsborough Community College (72-81).

Two straight for Bucs

TAMPA — Craig Erickson's quarterback sneak with 32 seconds remaining gave the Tampa Bay Buccaneers a 26-21 victory over the Washington Redskins and consecutive wins for the first time since September 1992.

Erickson capped an 11-play, 80-yard drive featuring the running of Ernie Rhett, who gained a Tampa Bay rookie-record 192 yards.

The Bucs improved to 4-9. Washington (2-11) has lost five straight.

Erickson was 18-for-35 for 251 yards and one touchdown. Rhett, who has gained 774 yards, also broke Tampa Bay's season rookie rushing record of 690 by Jerry Eckwood in 1990.

Bills stay alive

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins missed their best chance yet to put away the Buffalo Bills.

With their playoff hopes dimming, the Bills took advantage of several lucky bounces and rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit to beat Miami 42-31 Sunday night.

Jim Kelly threw four touchdown passes, including a 72-yarder to Don Beebe that sparked the comeback in the third quarter, when Buffalo outscored Miami 21-0. Andre Reed scored on receptions of 21 and 83 yards, and completed the first pass attempt of his 10-year career to set up another touchdown.

A loss would have pushed the four-time defending AFC champion Bills (7-6) to the brink of elimination from the playoffs. Instead, they overcame a 17-7 halftime deficit to complete a season sweep of first-place Miami (8-5).

Flirting with disaster

Late rally clinches tie for First United Methodist

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — If not for one big inning, Saturday would have been a complete disaster for the top three teams in the Sanford Church Softball League Fall Season at Chase Park.

After seeing the Lake Mary Church of the Nativity Catholic Crusaders and Sanford Central Baptist (tied for second place) drop the first two games, the league-leading Sanford First United Methodist Flames found themselves trailing the Deltona Trinity Assembly of God-Majesty 8-0 entering the bottom of the fifth inning.

But six hits, three walks and one error later, Brian Burke ripped a two-run single to cap a nine-run inning for the Flames, who later added two insurance runs in the sixth to topple Majesty 11-8 and clinch a tie at repeating as fall champions.

The day had opened with Sanford First Nazarene scoring two runs in the third inning to break a 4-4 tie and holding off the Crusaders

The Flames are now 6-1 on the season, while the Crusaders and Central Baptist are both 4-3. Completing the standings are Nazarene (3-4) and Majesty and Sanford Christian (both 2-5).

Next Saturday, the Flames take on the Crusaders at 9 a.m.; Sanford Christian battles Majesty at 10 a.m.; and Nazarene challenges Central Baptist at 11 a.m.

After a quiet day on the water Saturday, the Seminole County Sailfest fleet took advantage of good wind conditions Sunday to get in a full day of racing. In this division, the race is often won at the marker buoys, where sailors must work quickly to get their spinnakers (the large front sail) up for the downwind run.

Sailfest: Schumaker sweeps at home

By ROGER HARNACK
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Kurt Schumaker cruised to an easy victory in the Sailboard Unlimited division of Seminole County Sailfest this weekend on Lake Monroe.

Not only did Schumaker, a resident of Sanford, capture his division title, he also took the overall sailboard title by sweeping all seven heat races, a feat nobody else in any division accomplished.

Schumaker said that sailing before the home crowd gave him a slight advantage.

"I gave some advantage, but I don't normally sail here," Schumaker said. "But I know the water real well."

Another factor Schumaker cited in his sweeping victory was having better equipment and the backing of local fans.

Schumaker was not shy about his victory. "I love it," he exclaimed after receiving his first place plaque. "I always like to win at home. This is my home town. I like it and I'm proud of my hometown here."

Even though Schumaker was the top Seminole County sailing enthusiast, he was not the only one to capture an award.

Other local competitors that put in top performances include Steve Gromated of Casselberry (fifth place in the Hobie 16 class); Thomas D'Arcy of Longwood (third, Open Hobie); and Larry Millikan of Longwood (fourth, Catalina 22).

Officially, the regatta boasted the largest attendance of any in the United States with 700 entries. Sailors came from all over the United States and five countries to vye for awards in the prestigious regatta.

For the most part, competitors described Lake Monroe as "tricky" to sail on.

Kelly Kemp, 10, of St. Petersburg said the reason she found the sailing here tricky was because the "wind keeps shifting."

Diamonds deal ice two losses

From Staff Reports

APOPKA — Winners of four in a row to end the first half, the Sanford Ice stumbled out of the box to start the second half of the Women's Baseball League season, dropping a pair of games this past weekend to the Apopka Diamonds.

Playing at Apopka High School's J. Barnes Field, the Diamonds bested the Ice 8-3 on Saturday and 4-1 Sunday.

The sweep vaults Apopka (9-5) into a possible first-place tie with the Florida Tornados (8-5 going into Sunday's game at Daytona Beach). Sanford (8-5) drops from first to third, trailed only by the Daytona Beach Sandsharks (1-1).

Sanford squandered a fine pitching performance by ace Stephanie Reed (5-1), who suffered her first loss of the season.

"It was the best game she's pitched all season and she lost," said Sanford manager Mike Ferrell. "She pitched eight scoreless innings. In that other inning, a couple things happened where we could have gotten out of it, but we didn't make the plays behind her."

Oviedo High School softball coach Anna Hollis singled and scored the Ice's only run on a fielder's choice by Diane Brumett. Adrea Hernandez added a double for Sanford. Lani Cahral hit two singles. Melissa Garcia and Susan Stahley each had a single.

Reed allowed four runs, two earned, on nine hits. She struck out three and walked one.

Patty Lawlor was the winning pitcher for the Diamonds, whose record is 2-1.

Get a real life? Not until after The Game is over

It's easy to act superior as long as there isn't a mirror around.

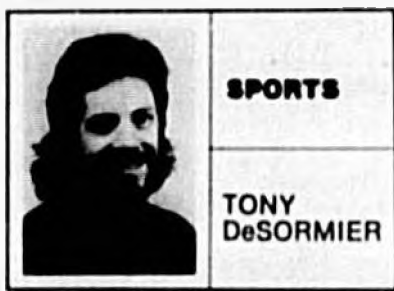

Saturday night, Vicki and I were wandering through a mall in Tampa, trying to find the couple of odds and ends to cap our Christmas gift list.

Like everyone else, wading through crowds is not high on my list of favorite things to do. Fortunately, the mob was surprisingly light with the exception of several large pockets of people.

Each of those pockets were loosely formed around televisions which were tuned to some football game between teams named after large reptiles and waves of red water.

"C'mon, people, get a life. It's just another football game," I muttered a little louder than under my breath, oh so snug in my indifference to the outcome.

It should be pointed out that after years of doing this, I'm largely indifferent to the outcome of almost every athletic event, including

SPORTS

TONY DeSORMIER

Super Bowls, Stanley Cups, etc. For example, I couldn't tell you who won the 1994 World Series.)

But before Vicki and I had crossed any other names off the Christmas list, I glanced at my wristwatch and saw we had just 30 minutes before The Game started.

What game?

SPARTANS WIN TITLE

TAMPA — Martin Nebrelus scored two goals in overtime as the University of Tampa Spartans won the NCAA Division II soccer championship Saturday with a 3-0 victory over Oakland, Mich.

Tampa (16-2) won its second national championship, the other was in 1981.

Nebrelus, a senior from Ystad, Sweden, broke a scoreless tie with 6:42 remaining in the first overtime minute when he took a rebound of his own shot and put it past Oakland keeper Amir Tal in the right corner of the net.

In the second overtime, Nebrelus took a pass from Anders Paulsson and made it 2-0 with 5:22 remaining. Adrian Bush scored a goal three minutes later for the final margin.

I fought traffic for parking, stood in line, paid for a ticket, and climbed the stadium stairs to the only available seats back along the top row, all tasks I detest and that I avoid in most cases with a wave of a press pass.

But just as Gator faithful (or Tide faithful, if there are any this far south of the state line) are willing to stand in the middle of mall and share a 19-inch TV screen with a couple dozen strangers, I was willing to fight crowds to watch my school, my alma mater, play for the national championship.

I wanted to be at this game because I missed the 1981 national championship contest. It was my senior year, my roommate was the team captain, and I had several other friends on the team, including Sanford's Mike Fall, but the game was played in Connecticut and I couldn't make the trip.

This time, I was there. And even though I don't know anyone on the team other than the head coach (who was the assistant in 1981), for the first time since graduating, I feel connected to the school, even in absentia, a feeling not unlike that shared by those people cheering at a television in a mall.

In all the excitement of my school winning a national championship, I almost slipped my mind... who did win that Florida/Alabama game?

Court denies vouchers to help Puerto Rican students

By KATHERINE HUYT
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — A court has struck down the largest school voucher program in the United States, leaving officials in this U.S. commonwealth searching for other ways to help the 2,013 poor students it benefits.

Puerto Rico's Supreme Court ruled that a program that gives public school students vouchers to attend private schools violates the commonwealth's constitution, which prohibits providing public funds to private institutions.

But Gov. Pedro Rossello vowed to seek alternatives to his administration's voucher program, which will end after the current school year.

The decision of the Supreme Court goes contrary to the interests of the children of our neediest families, who see — a good education as an element of progress and hope," Rossello said in a written statement last week.

Jose Elgujo Velez, president of the Teachers Association which filed the court challenge, hailed Wednesday's court decision as protecting the public school system. The San Juan Star reported.

"This law intended to disguise as free school choice the beginning of privatization and the elimination of public education," Velez was quoted as saying in Friday's editions.

Under the program, the commonwealth government paid a secular or religious private school $1,500 toward the cost of educating a public school student whose family earned less than $18,000 a year. The tab this school year was $2.7 million for 2,013 students.

The court ruling doesn't affect that part of the program under which low-income public school students transferred to the public school of their choice. The government's cost this year was $19 million for 12,677 students.

Yogurt relieves bowel problem

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband was diagnosed with IBS several years ago. We tried a course of yogurt with active cultures and the problem has all but stopped. One 8-ounce container daily seems to control the situation. Perhaps this will help some of your readers.

DEAR READER: The symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome — constipation, diarrhea and cycles of abdominal discomfort — are often difficult to treat, requiring dietary modifications and the use of stool-softening products, such as Metamucil.

If harmless lactobacilli (the germs that form yogurt from milk) are effective in controlling your husband's symptoms, fine. This therapy is safe and inexpensive and may be appropriate for other patients with irritable bowel syndrome.

Those considering this treatment may wish to consult with their doctors.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Irritable Bowel Syndrome." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have a cracking in my jaw that is sometimes painful, but always very embarrassing when I'm out with people. My doctor says the condition is TMJ. Is there any cure?

DEAR READER: The temporomandibular joint (TMJ) is the hinge that connects the jaw to the skull. Ordinarily, it opens and closes silently and painlessly.

However, in some people, the TMJ may be slightly displaced during movement. This can result from injuries, clenching and grinding the teeth at night, or from opening the jaw too wide, as during eating or singing. In many cases, no cause can be discovered.

Such a displacement of the TMJ often leads to a clicking sound when the jaw is opened. Eventually, this malfunction can cause jaw pain and headache, a common condition known as TMJ dysfunction.

Although the majority of patients do not experience loud cracking or severe pain, other patients are quite bothered by the abnormality. In these instances, treatment is necessary.

The first level of therapy is a bite plate, a prosthetic device made by dentists, that prevents damage to the jaw and teeth in people who clench their teeth at night. If this is not effective, various types of oral surgery on the TMJ may be required.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

How much do you think you could write about a simple takeout double? Five, maybe 10 pages? Include some examples and a quiz and you get up to 20 or 30 pages. Sound like a lot? Well, Michael Lawrence has just written a book totaling some 230 pages on the subject! "The Complete Book on Takeout Doubles," published by Magnus Books, is available for $14.90 from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124.

Here is a great deal from the book. Lawrence was sitting East, partnering Eddie Kantar.

Most Souths would open one spade, not one club. It would then be dangerous for West to double because he would have to correct clubs to diamonds at whatever level partner bids the suit. (Many experts, however, would indeed double, taking that risk. Sometimes it is safer to take action than to pass.)

Lawrence's three-heart bid over the redouble showed a weak hand with a long suit, playing strength without defense. Confident the opponents could make a game, Kantar applied pressure with his jump to five hearts.

Having got them to five spades, Kantar still had to find the defense to beat the contract. He led his singleton club. Declarer won with dummy's jack and called for the spade queen. Wanting a signal from his partner, Kantar ducked. On the second round of spades, Lawrence discarded the diamond three. Kantar won with the spade ace and led a low heart. Lawrence won with the queen and gave his partner a club ruff one down.

How did Kantar know Lawrence had the heart queen?

Because with only low hearts, Lawrence would have discarded his lowest heart, not a diamond.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernaldo Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Dec. 6, 1994

Try to establish a savings program for the year ahead. If you tuck a little away each week, the accumulation might amaze you later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to repeat a mistake today that you made recently in a complicated matter. Profit from experience, don't relive it. Astro-Graph year-ahead predictions make wonderful Christmas stocking stuffers for all signs of the zodiac. Mail $1.25 for each to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state the zodiac sign(s) of your choice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Unexpected changes might throw you off course today. Adjust to conditions as they shift or your odds for success will go down significantly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your best asset today is your ability to simplify complex developments. There is a chance this gift might be required more than once before the day is over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your initial assessment of a work problem could be erroneous. To get the true picture, take a hard second look and perhaps even a third.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Once you get in gear today, you'll work very productively. However, you might waste so much time getting started, you won't have enough time left to accomplish much.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If working on a critical assignment today, make sure you see it through to completion. Delegating it to someone else at the midway point could be disastrous.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Unfortunately, you might not find reliable help today with a complex development. Proceed rather than wait for aid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

Clearly spell out the numbers in financial commitments today. They might be thinking of a larger sum than you had in mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Resist the urge to find scapegoats for your problems today. When you start blaming others, they will become very angry.

VIROO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The methods you are tempted to use today may destroy your chances for success. Use more certain procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not make impulsive financial decisions today; they might stem more from emotion than logic. Take adequate time to study proposals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Timing is extremely important today. Persistence will give you an edge, but lack of preparation and impulsiveness may spell failure.
