SINGLE VERSE FOR TODAY

GOD'S PURPOSES WILL FINALLY TRIUMPH: And he shall judge among the nations, and rebuke many people; and they shall beat their spears into plowshares, and their arrows into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

SONNETS

The wind is chill, and on the chattering weed The moon-washed hearst thickens into light. One Grievous cricket, chafing in the night, Whispers. One quick-foot mouse in search of seed Moves through a shallow fall of moon-drowned leaves. From pool to pool the brook's cold water rings. One ruffled, round bird neither moves nor sings. And my heart tries its locks and my mind grieves.

Firmer than earth, than earth's firm moon more clear, More light than water loud and light in brooks, You enter with the breath that feeds my blood; And so my heart leaps, and my mind in fear Of so much wonder, chatters like the stocks. Of that dead cornfield there beyond the wood.

What use are words? They are mere comforters, Not food, nor fuel. They cannot keep from harm That which, being life, by living blood made warm, Is stricken when love's agony occurs. No, put no trust in words, it's with no word That I to you my love and self commit. Love is too deep for breath to measure it. Breath hears love's voice, but love is never heard.

It is but with yourself—that through my strength Moved with your blessing—by my mind returned Filled with what you and I in trust combine, That I am bound to you for all time's length. This is my word, like mellow metal turned To wear upon your hand and mark you mine. —RAYMOND HOLDEN.

Adolf Hitler says Germany must have more trade or die. My, my, we know just how he feels.

Perhaps one reason there is not as much common horse sense as there used to be is that there aren't as many horses.

The Rome-Berlin Axis, it seems, is about to be given some more emphasis. We see where U.S. friends are about to be initiated into the brotherhood.

McCall got another receipt. If that was going to do him any good, there might be some things in it, but it is, in some of his conventional guilt, the very shadow of the whole is too much like a cat crying with a rat.

President Roosevelt says opposition to the draft should be discouraged. It might be a good idea to have a few more of those kind of people around.

Reckless Driving

Adolf Hitler, the German chancellor, said something the other day which, it seemed to us, showed remarkably good sense for one who has on so many previous occasions demonstrated a surprising lack of intelligence for one who is supposed to be at the head of a great nation.

In opening the 1939 automobile show in Berlin, where the German "dream car", or people's wagon, selling for around $400 and expected to be ready for delivery by 1941, was seen for the first time, Hitler declared that in his opinion a speed of 50 miles an hour was fast enough for the average driver.

In Germany, it seems, it is not necessary for the State to enact laws, or even decrees. If Mr. Hitler merely expresses an opinion that 50 miles an hour is fast enough, then 50 miles an hour it will be, even for the most rugged individuals among the German populace; 50 miles an hour, or else.

It seems to us that 50 miles an hour is fast enough. Even in this country where everyone apparently has too much to do even though there are ten million unemployed, and must hurry along in order to get everything done, there isn't much need for faster speeds. As a matter of fact, 50 miles an hour will often get you there much more quickly than 70, 80, or 90 miles an hour.

But what struck us as peculiarly inconsistent in Hitler's admonition to those who are driving little two- and five-passenger cars with only the lives of a handful under their control, was that he should so completely overlook the fact that he is perhaps at the present time the world's most reckless driver himself.

He is in the driver's seat, and he is not driving a little $400 "Volkswagen", but a huge country of 70,000,000 people, and a gigantic military machine whose reckless handling might cost the lives not of three or four persons, but of millions. Hitler too should drive carefully. He too will find that he will get there more quickly if he does not drive too fast.

What America Is Meant To Be

A beautiful picture of future American life is found in one of Walter Lippmann's columns published in hundreds of newspapers throughout the country. The description is not Mr. Lippmann's, though undoubtedly he subscribes to it. The actual author is Judge Learned Hand, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, who describes the American ideal of what America is meant to be, as seen by the recently retired Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

"How does he see the Good Life", Judge Hand writes. "He sees it, I think, in terms of the dignity and the independence of the individual, to be secured by deliberately disabusing ourselves of the obsession of bigness. I see his Commonwealth of the Future as a society made up of much smaller units than those we have. The great cities will either have given place to small, or they will be so divided that within their present areas there will be many sub-cities, each self-sufficient. Speed and change will no longer infatuate us: men will be born, will live and die in the same place, perhaps in the same house. The individual will not be a wandering atom without permanent associations or local ties, ever agitated, ever seeking to better himself, ever aspiring to leave off what he is doing in the name of a progress whose pursuit irritates, without satisfying, him. His tentacles will reach out to those about him and grip them hard, as they in turn will grip him.

"The fabric of these small societies will be tough; it will not be possible to pull away any part of them without leaving some of its fibres behind and tearing away something from what is left. Reputation will not depend upon manipulated publicity; it will be based upon mutual acquaintance and mutual understanding; each will be judged by those who really know him, and none will be called on to judge those whom he does not know. The individual will not be an anonymity, a number, the empty sign of membership in a class.

"Industry will be more genial; among those who have personal contacts, discipline and enforced conformity lose some of their alien and imposed bitterness; the harsh dominion of the machine is assuaged. The industrial units themselves also will be much smaller; for even technologically it is a mistake to suppose that the huge concentrations of modern times are efficient. What they seem to gain in economy of method and eliminating duplication, they lose because their management and even their comprehension pass the measure of men's minds. Responsibility cannot be successfully divorced from continuous touch with detail; in our present aggregations the direction is either without adequate information, or it lacks the initiative which only responsibility can give.

"Amenity and courtesy will be the order of that day, for at close quarters men must learn to live with mutual consideration: one cannot be socially quite intolerant when retribution comes so swiftly. There will be no dominating power, financial or political; individual differences there will be a plenty, but no one will be able to become master. Traditions will arise to correct, to chasten and to inform the hasty and crude conclusions which now sweep resistlessly over our vast undifferentiated societies. There will be no great accumulations of wealth, not only because they will be impossible, but because, no longer submerged in a multitude, the individual will be valued not for what he possesses, but for what he is.

"Something like this in bare outline is that society in which, I think, he (Justice Brandeis) believes that life would be gentle and gracious and noble and free."

Jap Fishermen Cause Alarm in Caribbean

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21 (AP)—Appearance of west coast Japanese fishing boats in the Caribbean sea where the United States Coast is engaged in its annual war games was reported in official quarters here last night.

United States District Attorney Robinson, who had been directing an extensive drive against illegal fishing boats, principally Japanese, last reported information that several boats had been seen in the Caribbean.

Robinson said that these boats should be fishing there for the first time. Robinson said. According to the information reaching his office, he said, several Japanese boats had been observed watching fleet units through "long range glasses."

TRIUMPHAL ARCH?

Hitler's Former Officer Is Now Consul In U. S.

By The AP Feature Service. During the World War, Germany's first, suave, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann had under him a heavy but bedraggled private with a lamellar mustache. The private, Adolf Hitler, admired his captain.

Today Hitler gives the orders. One of his latest was to send his former commander to San Francisco as Consul General. Captain Wiedemann's new assignment surprised diplomats who knew how close he has been to Hitler as his personal adjutant.

But Germany post-war suggestions that he may engage in propaganda work—the official explanation is that he wants to go and that Hitler is rewarding him for past services. Those past services seemed to be leading to more than a consular post.

Hitler was clamoring for the "freedom" of Germans in Czechoslovakia. England was getting nervous. The king and queen were going to France as a demonstration of Anglo-French friendship.

To head off any interference of his plans by the democracies, Hitler hurriedly dispatched Wiedemann to London. There the captain had a heart-to-heart talk with Lord Halifax, the foreign minister.

What Wiedemann said has never been revealed, outside of an assumption that Hitler "desired to achieve a peaceful settlement of outstanding questions." But evidently he was impressed.

History May Not Repeat, But It Regurgitates

The old saying that "history repeats itself" is a dangerous one, Oliver Twist, demanding more. We are surprised and shocked. But that same thing happens with a familiar ring and a dream-like feeling that "this has all happened before." But to argue "it happened thus once, therefore it must happen so today" is dangerous.

Nevertheless, we are all prone, preoccupied as we are with the tumbling events of our day, to feel that nothing like this ever did happen before; the world was never so topsy-turvy.

That simply is not true. Almost all people seem to have felt that their own times were out of joint. Hence it is interesting to turn for a moment from today's preoccupations to certain letters written in Paris in May of 1905. The writer was Henry Adams, who for 50 years bent his glacial gaze down from an ivory tower on what seemed to him a mad and brutal world.

In this May of 1905, Adams looked about him from Paris into what many people now look back to as a sort of recent "golden age" of peace and stability. This is what he reported to John Hay:

"I see precipices all round, and dread every morning to open a newspaper. The situation is frightfully dangerous... Europe is an awful nightmare. It scares me."

Then Henry Adams, 24 years ago. True enough, 16 years after he wrote, Europe was seeing in a death-struggle as mad as any he had foreseen. It survived, after a fashion.

Is Hitler's drive for expansion some new, unheard-of dream which this war alone devised? Not at all. Adams, sitting in his quiet room in Paris, saw the same forces moving in 1905 that are on the move today.

"I hope," he wrote to John Hay, "France and England will try to let Germany have her way. As yet she has asked for nothing very serious. The time must come when she will ask for Holland or Austria or the Baltic provinces or a strip of Poland. Her numbers are almost as bad as those of England or France were, 100 years ago... yet war would be fatal to everyone, except perhaps to us, and victory would only raise greater dangers and more enemies."

So a wise man reflected in 1905. And the war came which he forecast, and was nearly fatal to everyone, even to us. And victory did raise only greater dangers and more enemies. Now Germany again knocks at

Don Ameche Stars In Film At Ritz

With Don Ameche as a singing, leaping, fighting D'Artagnan, and The Ritz Brothers as phony mucksters more at home with a carving knife than a sword, 20th Century-Fox, in the musical comedy version of "The Three Musketeers," has found a new way of presenting the Alexandre Dumas story which has captivated and enchanted audiences and readers from the day it was conceived almost a century ago.

Opening Tuesday at the Ritz Theatre, with a brilliant cast of supporting players, the film is hailed as one of the happiest entertainments since the movies began to move, a splendid allegory with horseplay, royal romance and secret intrigue, the far interest with the antics of three Falmy buffoons, and through it all ringing songs ring out.

Darryl F. Zanuck in charge of production selected Allan Dwan to direct the film.

British File Protest To Jap Bombing

London, Feb. 20 (AP)—The British government today filed a protest with the Japanese government over the bombing of the British liner, the Castrol, in the Indian Ocean.

The protest, which was filed in Tokyo, stated that the Japanese government had failed to take adequate steps to prevent the attack on the liner.

The Castrol was carrying 1,000 British troops and 1,000 tons of supplies. It was en route from Bombay to Ceylon.

The Japanese government had previously denied any involvement in the attack.

The British government also announced that it would take appropriate steps to protect its shipping in the Indian Ocean.

The attack on the Castrol was the first of its kind since the outbreak of the war.

The Japanese government had previously announced that it would not allow its ships to be used for military purposes.

Anti-Nazi Stage Protest To Bund Meet In New York

Threats believed to be from drunks, that it would be bombed. Portable typewriters and packages brought into the garden were examined by 300 members of the bond and criminal alien squads, some of whom had been on duty since last night's hockey game as a precaution against the setting of time bombs.

Outside the garden Nazi sympathizers and anti-Nazi exchanged lines as police broke up several attempts by small groups to picket. One such group of about 25 young men and women, who bore placards proclaiming themselves members of the Socialist Workers Party, a Trotskyite organization, was driven back by mounted police but remained at Fifty-first Street, in the next block, shouting "We demand the right to picket" and "Down with the Nazis."

Shortly after eight o'clock, the crowd, estimated at 2,000, tried to march toward the garden. Several persons were trampled before the police returned. Their faces and clothes proclaimed "Back to the Bund" and "Down with the Nazis."

The speakers' platform was decorated with a picture of George Washington, standing between a banner of American flags and Nazi swastikas.

The hall also was decorated with banners which proclaimed such slogans as "1,000,000 Bund members by 1940," "Swastika Jewish Communism" and "Stop Jewish domination of Christian America."

In the lobby youths hawked copies of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's publication "Social Justice" and a newspaper called "National American," whose banner headlines proclaimed "Franco victory matters," "F. D. R."

Mass Meeting Of Celery Men Is Scheduled

Control Of Shipments To Be Major Topic At Court House Affair Thursday Night

General Collapse Is Feared Soon

Steady Celery Market Anticipated Fails To Materialize

Declaring that immediate action of the Seminole County celery industry is imperative in order to save the industry from a general collapse, Gus Schmah, president of the Seminole County Agricultural Association, today called a mass meeting of growers and shippers to be held in the Court House tomorrow night at 8:00 for the purpose of discussing upon a program of controlling shipments.

The light upward trend of the market which was anticipated last week and because of the apparent drop in holdover cargo in principal markets and a slight increase in inquiry for celery in Chicago, failed to materialize and the market has become even more demoralized with the increase in holdover cargo accompanied by a corresponding decline in the price.

Declaring that growers soon will be forced to curtail their shipment of celery freight bills unless a voluntary control program is adopted during the current season's marketing, Mr. Schmah stated that he was hopeful of a voluntary action in controlling shipments of celery to an extent to get some return on the crop.
