A CHIEF IS AMONG YE TAKING NOTES AND FAITH. "HE'LL PRENT 'EM"---SO SAYS SAUNTERER.

Mr. Henry Ford has published a brochure, which is an indictment against the cigarette made by the leading business interests of America.

For instance, the Cadillac Motor Car Company posted the following notice in its factories: "Boys who smoke cigarettes we do not care to keep in our employ. In the future we will not hire anyone whom we know to be addicted to this habit. It is our desire to weed it entirely out of the factory just as soon as practicable. We will ask anyone in our factory who sees the seriousness of this habit to use their influence in having it stamped out."

The J. C. Ayer Company, Lowell, Mass., has just put the ban on cigarette smokers: Believing that smoking cigarettes is injurious to both mind and body, thereby unfitting young men for their best work, therefore, after this date we will not employ any young man under 21 years of age who smokes cigarettes."

Marshall Field & Co., the greatest department store in America, has adopted the policy for years, of not engaging boys who smoke cigarettes.

Mr. Wanamaker's stores in New York and Philadelphia invariably reject applicants for position where there is evidence of excessive use of cigarettes.

Mr. Thomas A. Edison employs no person who smokes cigarettes. He says that degeneration of the brain, which results from this habit, is permanent and uncontrollable. Victims of the habit become unreliable. The leading scientists, as well as the great business men agree in their opinion that the young man who makes a practice of smoking cigarettes soon becomes a slave to the habit. In many business offices where men are employed the fingers of applicants are first examined and if the tell-tale signs of cigarette smoking are evidenced the applicants are rejected at once. Apopka News.

"There are so many of my friends here in Sanford that cannot swim especially men and the following article is given to them in the hopes that they will repent and endeavor to master this art that should be known to every man, woman and child in the world:

The popular idea that swimming is a dangerous art and should be shunned because if you can swim you'll get in the water and if you get in the water you will probably drown is characterized as "rubbish" by G. H. Corsan, swimming instructor.

Every year Mr. Corsan travels around the North American continent—his home is in Canada—giving short courses in swimming in the larger cities. In the last five years he has had one month's vacation. He has taught more than 100,000 persons how to swim.

The way to avoid drowning, according to Mr. Corsan, is to learn how to swim. Good swimmers don't drown. They might die of chill or starve to death, but as for drowning—pooh!

How about cramps, he was asked. Even good swimmers have cramps that bugaboo of those who aren't at home in the water.

His answer was reassuring.

"Cramps needn't cause a moment's worry. I've seen thousands of good swimmers seized with cramps and never a one was drowned. All they did was to turn on their backs and either wait for help or paddle in with their free limbs. I've never heard of a swimmer having cramps in both legs and arms. Even then his case would not be hopeless.

"There never was a case of drowning that was caused by cramps. That may seem surprising after the countless water tragedies that have been blamed on cramps. Death in the water is caused by chill or strangling.

"People strange to death because they are ignorant of the proper method of breathing. When they sink beneath the water they hold their air passages shut. When they come to the top they have to breathe out the air they've used while under the water. As breathing out takes fifty times as long as breathing in they have no time to get a fresh supply of air before they go under again. This keeps up until they breathe in under the water and thus strangle to death.

"This process should be reversed. Breathe in for the second you are above water, then breathe not through the nostrils while under the water and you can keep it up until you starve to death. A knowledge of this reversed process of breathing would have saved hundreds who died when the Lusitania sank.

"When you know all the factors in the case you will wonder how any one ever drowned. Only a deplorable ignorance can explain it. Look at the buoyancy of the human body. After the Lusitania tragedy hundreds of bodies were found floating hours after they had died. The body weighs but a few ounces in the water. What then is needed but a little common sense, a cool head and a knowledge of swimming to keep afloat indefinitely? "Recently Great Britain started a campaign to teach the methods of life saving. I say, teach them to swim properly and they will get better results. Let every man be his own life saver.

To swim properly, however, as Mr. Corsan admitted, is different from mere swimming. Many swimming experts in the past have drowned. People argued that if experts drowned, an ordinary swimmer would have no chance at all. Mr. Corsan explains that they weren't experts at all and when they were seized with cramps they lost their heads just like inexperienced swimmers and were strangled to death, because they didn't know how to breathe properly.

This business of breathing is very important, according to Mr. Corsan. "Nine-tenths of swimming is breathing and movement is only one-tenth, he says.

This in spite of the fact that when he illustrated the Australian crawl, breathing occupied nearer one than nine-tenths of the time he was in the water. Most of the time he kept his head completely submerged.

Another point in breathing emphasized by Mr. Corsan is the way to avoid that disagreeable experience of getting a mouthful of water instead of air when the swimmer encounters short, choppy waves, spray or splashers. When breathing in, he holds the tip of his tongue just behind the upper front teeth as a sort of curtain. This is so effective that Mr. Corsan is willing to lie flat on his back and let fifty persons throw buckets full of water on his face.

Not a drop will get in his mouth. Women should be the greatest swimmers in the world, Mr. Corsan asserts, because of their greater buoyancy. A woman's feet will not sink below the surface of the water. That is why many women who couldn't swim have drowned in shallow water. They couldn't get their feet to bottom.

An example of how well a woman can swim was mentioned by Mr. Corsan. One of his pupils had another pupil, a little fourteen-year-old girl, who was on the Empress of Ireland when it went down in the St. Lawrence. The little girl swam around in the water and swam so well that she had to try to get on nine lifeboats before they would rescue her. She almost died of chill.

"Swimming should be the easiest thing in the world," he said. "It ought to be less tiring than walking. It's nothing but a one-step on the horizontal anyway. By learning the proper movements and method of breathing you can swim for almost indefinite periods."

Nice Distinction.

John Drew once had occasion to mention to a Frenchman, with whom he was engaged in conversation in the hotel lobby, that a certain public speaker, whom they both knew, was a good deal of a bore. "Ah," said the polite Frenchman, "rather let us say he is a raconteur."

MODERN MEDICAL PRACTICE

(State Board of Health)

Throw physic to the dogs!

In other words, avoid the doctor excepting in cases of extreme emergency and let every man, and woman be the judge of what constitutes an emergency.

That was a kind of motto whose observance in the past has brought premature obsequies in many a saddened family, in the times when doctors were fewer in proportion to the total population than now, and when they were not so well equipped for the battle against disease and death.

In the good old times our grandmothers were fairly good doctors themselves; probably they were better equipped than we in these days with first aid remedies. But they applied their remedies to the treatment of injuries and disease far beyond the first stages, and too often with serious results.

There must have been a large element of faith helping these dear old ladies in their amateur practice. From their individual experiences from their inheritances they accumulated vast stores of "sure cures", and the more disagreeable their concoctions of mustard and pepper and turpentine and the herbs of the field, the worse they smelled and tasted, the more certain was their efficacy in the minds of their much-suffering patients.

Is the practice of medicine a more exact science than it was fifty years ago?

With no disparagement to the grand old men who rode their endless rounds, who carried the sufferings of their patients very close to their hearts, who brought cheer and comfort into hundreds of homes and who took their long-delayed pay in potatoes and bacon, or never collected it at all, medicine and surgery have made wonderful strides. The old time doctor had to be surgeon and physician and dentist and occasionally had to prescribe for the cow. His time was too full of his never ending daily work to keep track of the general development of his profession, excepting through the journals he was too busy to read. He had no opportunity to become a specialist.

The difference between the old time and modern practice is the development of the specialist and the growing importance of preventive medicine. The idea of these days is that the prevention of disease is quite as important as its cure.

The education of the people to the value of cleanliness, of proper sanitation, is the keystone of prevention. Whereas, medicine used to be classed among the mysteries and its operative effects a secret that the public had no right to know, the theories of the causes and spread of disease and the operation of remedies are now put into language stripped of technicalities, so that the man of ordinary intelligence may understand.

The day of the doctor, of the specialist, has come in a new and larger sense than ever before. His work, with the cooperation of the sanitarian and of the people themselves, is bringing lower sick and death rates, higher standards of living, through cleaner surroundings and better personal hygiene. More than this, the importance of the doctor, his necessity to the community are being recognized as never before.

The remedies left over from the time when Pa was sick two years ago, are not kept to be administered when he or some other member of the family shall have another attack.

ASSAILANT OF MORGAN COM-MITS SUICIDE WHILE IN JAIL

MYSTERIOUS TAKING OFF OF THE MAN WHO TRIED TO MURDER CAPITALIST

Mineola, N. Y., July 9.—Frank Holt, the Cornell University professor, who shot J. P. Morgan in his home near Glen Cove last Saturday, committed suicide in the jail here Tuesday night.

The jail authorities declare that Holt killed himself by climbing through the opening at the top of his cell door and then plunging to the narrow court below. The attendant said he was positive Holt killed himself in his own cell, where he found the body. Though there are conflicting reports as to the manner in which Holt met his death, it was definitely established through Dr. Cleghorn, the jail physician that Holt died of a fractured skull.

Several of those about the jail said they heard an explosion, the report coming from Holt's cell. This noise, it was believed, was due to the fall of boards from the top of the cell.

Jeremiah O'Ryan, the keeper detailed to watch Holt, said he was fifteen feet away from the cell when he heard a loud report. He looked in the direction of the cell, but it was dark. He said he found Holt's body in a pool of blood in the corner.

The excitement that followed the noise brought Warden Hulse and other jail authorities to the scene. District Attorney Lewis J. Smith and Dr. Cleghorn, together with several constables, were soon on the scene and immediately began an investigation. Dr. Cleghorn denied a report that Holt had killed himself by chewing a percussion cap.

He reported that death was caused by a fracture at the top of the skull. An explosion would have blown his head off would have followed an attempt by Holt to chew a percussion cap, the physician said.

A thorough examination of Holt's cell failed, according to the jail authorities, to disclose any weapon or implements of any kind which Holt could have used to kill himself.

Coroner Walter R. Jones, after viewing the body said: "Undoubtedly a suicide, and undoubtedly the man jumped. I cannot give an official version until autopsy is performed by the jail physician, Dr. Cleghorn."

The body was then taken to the morgue in Hempstead, where Dr. Cleghorn was prepared to perform an autopsy immediately. The autopsy disposed of a report current here immediately after the finding of Holt's body that he had been shot and killed from the outside. This was only one of a number of reports.

New York, July 9.—Frank Holt, Morgan's assailant, had planned to destroy the liners Saxonia and Philadelphia by dynamite which it is believed he had placed aboard the vessels before they sailed from New York to Liverpool July 3. Holt so advised his wife in Dallas, Tex., in a letter which was transmitted to the navy department in Washington.

Wireless warnings were sent broadcast over the Atlantic from the eastern seaboard, advising the Saxonia and the Philadelphia to steer toward each other.

The Philadelphia captain advised the American Line offices today that everything on board had been identified and that all is well. At both the Cunard and American Line offices it was said that it would be virtually impossible for anyone to pass the lines of guards at the pier to place explosives aboard the ships. It is believed the Saxonia is beyond the zone of wireless communication.

Three Massachusetts citizens today positively identified Holt as Erich Muentzer, who was wanted for wife murder.

Tornado Hits Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O., July 9.—Twelve persons are known to be dead and eight buildings were blown down and destroyed as a result of a fierce tornado which swept over the city late Wednesday night. A dozen persons are missing in the debris left by the storm.

Owing to the fact that all wires were blown down and traffic paralyzed throughout the Ohio valley the extent of the damage and the destruction of life is impossible to discover.

The ruin wrought in the towns along the rivers in this section is yet impossible to know. From the last reports it is known that much damage has been done in Dayton and Bellview, Newport, Covington, Ludlow, on the Kentucky side, and Lawrence, on the Indiana side.

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Hill and family who have been living on Sanford Heights for the past three years have sold their home place to George Ballard and left today for Oklahoma where they will make their future home. Meeting was called to order by Hon. Forrest Lake, President of the Sanford Commercial Club, who explained the object of the meeting to be to ascertain whether or not it was the wish of the citizens of the County to build hard surface roads and if so whether it was desired to bond for the amount approximating $450,000.00 or to issue interest-bearing time warrants to the extent of $100,000.00.

THE WIRELESS STATION AT SAYVILLE HAS BEEN SEIZED

GERMAN STATION SENT MESSAGES HEN UNCLE SAM WAS NOT LOOKING

Washington, July 9.—The government today took over the Sayville wireless station, the only direct means of communication between the United States and Germany.

Secretary Daniels announced that Captain Bullard, in charge of the naval radio, had gone to take over the station, and would continue its operation with naval forces.

There will be no change so far as the public is concerned. Messages will be accepted as heretofore. The only difference will be that naval operators instead of commercial employees will man the keys. The charges collected by the navy will be paid to the owning company.

Today's action was deemed necessary because of alleged violations of neutrality by the Company's operators. It has been charged that when the navy censors had left the wireless room for a minute or two, unneutral messages had been sent.

The wireless station at Tuckerton, N. J. was taken over last September by the government. Both stations now are able to communicate directly with Germany.

Originally the object of the censorship was to prevent communication with belligerent ships at sea and the censorship has been continued, it was said, in naval quarters, because of a conviction that German submarines were able to receive wireless messages from Sayville.

COUNTY HAPPENINGS

A BUNCH OF INTERESTING ITEMS FROM CORRESPONDENTS—EVENTS OF SEMINOLE COUNTY—EFFICIENT REPORTERS COVER TERRITORY FOR HERALD

LAKE MARY

Miss Helen Iserman of Monroe spent the week end here the guest of Mrs. H. D. Durant.

Johnny Evans, R. N. Poston and T. A. D. Marris made a business call to Sanford Monday.

The picnic and fish fry here last Saturday was well attended and everybody seemed to enjoy the day.

Several of the Lake Mary people took in the barbecue at Kissimmee.

R. N. Poston made a trip to Maitland first of the week.

A. R. Sjoblom shipped a car load of watermelons this week.

Of all the absurd names bestowed on an article of food, grapefruit is the worst. All grapes are fruit. The article which goes by this compound-worded name is a fruit, but quite a little resembling a grape as anything that grows, to call it orangefruit, or peachfruit, would be more appropriate; but why use a general name for purposes of qualifying a specific one? If a new breed of donkey should come into use, ought we to call it a cow-animal or a mackerel fish? And with some such ideas in view the Department of Agriculture is making an appeal for us to apply the name pomelo instead. This is distinctive. It is a single word. It is common sense. If hotel keepers will only push it along they will be doing a service to our language by relieving it of a needless absurdity. The names of our great food products have, besides a place in the poetry and song of the world. Imagine the chorus of the Greek play in the stadium the other day chanting of "grapefruit", but how admirably pomelo would lend itself to such uses.

PAOLA POINTS

News was received here Sunday of the death of Mrs. L. C. Leggett, sister of Mr. M. C. Cleveland of this place. Mrs. Leggett spent a winter here at her brother's home two years ago and made many friends who will regret to hear of her death.

Mr. Oscar Pearson and wife left for Sanford Monday where he will work at his trade during the remainder of the summer. They are at present located with Mr. and Mrs. Clark Pearson.

Mr. and Mrs. George D. Bishop of Sanford were pleasant visitors at "The Turtles" for the week end.

Misses Frances and Flora Pearson spent Monday at Monroe, the guests of Miss Helen Iserman.

Mrs. A. W. Keeley of Lake Mary is spending a few days at the Buchanan's pleasant home on Sylvan Lake.

Mr. M. S. Garwood arrived from California last week, is now with his son George Garwood and family here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Johnson spent the "Fourth" with friends at Monroe.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Patton were delightfully entertained on the 5th by Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Buchanan.

Miss Blanche Garwood is again at home from Winter Garden.

Paola certainly spent a "safe and sane" Fourth this summer. One would have judged by the silence that enveloped our town that all inhabitants had joined the crowd at Kissimmee. Not a firecracker, or noise of any kind was heard inside the city limit.

WOODLAND PARK NOTES

Thursday, July 1st, rain until 1 P. M. prevented people from coming, but after that they came with a rush. Some of the visitors were Mrs. Paxton and son, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Henry and children, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler and Mr. Barry, Mrs. Hurt, Messrs. Yonts, Betts and Williams, Mr. Wickham and party of ladies and the usual lot of children.

Sunday, July 4th, the Monroe people who came to show they were not mixed up with that "Blue Law" bunch, were: Mr. Lock, J. M. Oglesby and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Oglesby, Mrs. Albert Hawkins and children, Mrs. Mattie May Hawkins, the Misses Miles and Ahearn, Mr. Osteen and others, Mr. and Mrs. Fernald from Enterprise Junction, came as usual accompanied by friends. Other visitors were: G. W. Spencer and family, Mrs. Theo Schaal and children, Mr. Wickham and Miss Hunt, Mrs. Fry and Mrs. Vanderhook, Mrs. LaRoque, M. Mrs. Campbell and Reg Holly. There were nearly a hundred people in all.

Monday, July 5th a number of picnic parties came in the morning. Mrs. Barlow, Miss Bessie White, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Wesley and seven or eight friends made up one party that came on the jitney; two big wagon loads from Upsala consisted of Henry Lundquist and family, the Bergquist family and friends. They had a big time of it, taking in the pool and everything else. Mr. and Mrs. Kent, Mrs. Shipp, Jim Harris, G. W. Spencer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Forest Lake, Fred Williams and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hurt, Mrs. Higgins and children, Mrs. Strong, A. King and family, Mrs. Fry and boy, Rex Parkard and family, W. R. Fell and family, the two Boleys and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. E. Wildson, Miss Katie and Jack Fox, Mrs. Theo Schaal and children, Mrs. LaRoque and children, Mr. Newton and family, Frank Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Fernald and friends, Mrs. Cobb and friend Mr. and Mrs. Henry and children, Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Jr., Messrs. Bett, Mc-Gaggin, McClintock, Harry Kanner, Bradford, M. C. Maxwell and C. H. Smith were just a few of the big crowd of Woodlanders. The pool was crowded and "save the next room for me" the regular cry. Sheriff Charley Hand determined to arrest the whole crowd, looked at the bathers awhile stern and solemn, but gradually those grim features relaxed and broadened out and when someone called "Come in Charley, the water is fine," he almost fell over everybody in his eagerness to get a room; plunged in and was reformed. Deputy Lee rushed in, saw how helpless he would be with Charley conquered, so surrendered his sixteen inch gun and took a swim also. Lake, about to call a special meeting of the Legislature, to prohibit such wickedness as is carried on at Woodland, was helpless when Mrs. Lake joined the bathers; besides Serita who is a regular Woodland visitor would object also. Rev. Strong made no protest as his children went in.

You may talk about your medicinal springs etc, but that Woodland Pool has a reputation for removing a grouch also.

RIVERVIEW

JACKSONVILLE'S FAMOUS SUBURB

The continued growth and development at RIVERVIEW has created a steady demand for this property and caused an increase in values of 3 to 5 hundred per cent in the past 3 years and the $10,000 which has just recently been spent by the owner for public and civic improvements, and the $20,000 water system which is now being installed will cause another decided advance in values in the near future.

TAKE MY ADVICE

Invest in a few RIVERVIEW lots. Now $10 down and $5 per month. No interest or taxes for 2 years. No lots sold to colored people. Not more than 4 lots sold to one party.

Rev. Catts, who is a candidate for Governor says that Texas had it's Hogg as Governor and Florida should have it's Catts. He promises if elected to be a "bear cat".

Key West Journal
We want no hogs or cats. A Knott is good enough.

Residents of Sanford and Orlando are determined to see to it that the "world do move" in spite of adverse action by their only railroad. It appears that the railroad has taken off all trains which formerly gave local conveniences between the two cities, making it necessary for those wishing to go from one to the other at certain times of the day to hire automobiles for the trips. As a result an automobile line has been inaugurated, with daily schedules, and rate of four cents a mile.—Miami Metropolis.

Some of the newspaper highbrows of this state are continually offering suggestions as to how other newspaper editors should conduct their publications. We have but one suggestion to offer, either to friend or foe, among the press gang of the state, to-wit: Run your newspaper according to the dictates of your conscience—in other words, as you durn please. "To thine own self be true, and it will follow as night succeeds the day that thou canst then be false to no man."—Arcadia-Enterprise.

One of the jokes of the early political campaign is Catts posing as a martyr, defying the Catholics to kill him, and not a Catholic lift his hands to smite even his noble brow. We do not want a man for Governor who will not be Governor for the whole people. And this is written by one of the strongest Protestants in the State of Florida. Catts is a "bluff." In Clearwater he stated that if he had been Governor Slaton he would have let Frank hang. There was a dead silence after he shouted this to the crowd. Then he hedged. He would hedge on any question to get a few votes.—Clearwater Sun.

SOME PUMPKIN

J. Fred DeBarry, editor of Sunrise, certainly hates himself as the following self effacing article would indicate:

"Sunrise leads, others follow—Listen!

Sunrise asked Legislature to investigate Marianna Reform School fire—GRANTED.

Sunrise prophesied Sheriff William C. Spencer would be safe, and Sunrise was right.

Sunrise asked William Jennings to resign, and we predicted he would.

Sunrise asked the Legislature to spare the buzzard, and he was. Of course the lawmakers grant the privilege of shooting him, but the prize money for shooting him was cut out, as we desired, and with no alternative, the buzzard will stay. You can't eat him, and who wants to kill him for sport?

Sunrise asked Governor Slaton of Georgia to commute the sentence of Leo M. Frank, and he did so.—It still remains for Fred to command the warring nations of Europe to stop fighting and they will probably do so.

PUBLIC DEMANDS BRIDGE

With the building of good roads throughout Florida, particularly Central Florida, motor traffic has tripled in the last year, and within another year it may increase enormously.

Central Florida is building brick highways and before many months there will be a network of bricked thoroughfares throughout the state connecting all of the more important cities and towns with one another.

In view of this improvement it is of importance that counties and cities should do everything possible to facilitate travel. The motorist from the North or from some distant corner of the country is coming to Florida because the fact that Florida is building brick highways is being advertised extensively. By the end of another year there should be several hundred miles of newly completed brick or improved highways added to the enormous total now in the state.

The large increase of motor traffic demands that improvements be begun immediately and completed before many months. One of the important matters that should be attended to is the bridging of the St. Johns river connecting the Sanford and Delands roads. The Ferry at the St. Johns should be done away with and a new, modern toll bridge constructed. The public will demand this bridge sooner or later, so why not commence plans now to get the project into definite form before the close of another year.—Orlando Sentinel.

Orlando Has Street Dance

Orlando last evening witnessed her first street dance. It was a maskee affair put on as the climax of the day's festivities held at Joyland by the Woodmen of the World.

All day at the amusement park there was probably an average of two thousand persons who took part and looked on the program of events that made the day a merry one. The McIntosh orchestra made music all the afternoon and dancing was enjoyed by many. In addition to the water sports and the special events that were entered into by a large number of competitors. There were prizes for all novel contests, some of them handsome, and some ridiculous, the latter being designed to revive good humor if it happened to be flagging at any period, but this was not necessary. High spirits prevailed throughout and reached the bubbling point in the evening when the scene of the festivities was switched to the block on Orange avenue between Church street and Central avenue. As a matter of fact the crowd concentrated between Church and Pine, but the merry makers covered all the intervening space between the extreme limits, and created fun for the large assemblage that lined the curbs and banked the sidewalks. Business was well suspended during the several hours of the dance. Some of the maskers were tardy in making their appearance, but in the end there was a large number and a great variety of costumes.

A great quantity of burnt cork was used in the makeup of many. There was an entire family of negroes, whose Ethiopian black was blacker even than Erebus, and whose fanciful dress not only attracted attention but brought forth exclamations of wonder and amusement from all sides. There was the inevitable clown, with his parti-colored dress, one half of black and the other of yellow. One wash-woman danced the entire evening with a basket of clothes on her head, but how she managed to keep it there remained a mystery. It could be seen bobbing up and down, swaying back and forth over the heads of the great throng. The Gold Dust Twins attracted much attention, and were busily engaged the entire evening in doing your work for you, according to the legend of the advertisement. There was a great variety of nondescript costumes and some very clever ones, but there was no unmasking and the originators of them were not disclosed. The McIntosh orchestra discoursed music from a truck stationed at the corner of Pine and Orange, playing in the course of the evening all the popular airs in time that gave all ample opportunity to fox-trot, one-step and tango to their heart's content. The street dance made such a hit with those who saw it that it will probably be repeated on a much larger scale during the coming winter.—Orlando Reporter Star.

Sand-Asphalt Roads in Florida

While the Engineering Record always prefers to encourage rather than to throw cold water upon attempts to solve road or any other engineering problems, it is felt that a word of warning should be uttered in regard to the sand-asphalt construction in Florida that was the subject of an article in the issue of May 15, page 622.

The work at Eustis was not laid on a compacted sand base as described by the writer of the article in question, but on a clay base; and we are informed that the sand-asphalt surface is kept constantly covered with an inch of sand to protect it. The work at Dade City is described as a complete failure. This, however, may be explained by the fact that the sand-asphalt mixture was mixed by hand on boards. At Tarpon Springs the grass is growing through the sand-asphalt pavement. At Sarasota the pavement of this description is showing. The sand-asphalt pavement at Mount Dora was laid in April and its short life hardly permits of any inferences as to what it will do.

The author's statement that a considerable mileage is "now under construction and more is in contemplation," the Engineering Record is informed, is somewhat misleading, although it is true that two counties have voted considerable sums for sand-asphalt construction. This has been done by reason of the encouragement afforded from the Eustis experiment; but the fact should be again emphasized that the latter pavement is not laid on a sand base as has been done and is proposed elsewhere, but upon a stable clay. While a sand base may be satisfactory for a pavement of types such as is represented by grouted brick, as is argued by Mr. Blair in the letter on page 691 of this issue, we should hesitate to approve it for types such as the sand-asphalt road. If, therefore, sand-asphalt roads have "an excellent opportunity to achieve a high distinction," the opportunity is based upon hopefulness rather than demonstration; and all that we know about sheet asphalt construction and the absolute necessity in connection therewith of the most stable foundation, should lead us to doubt the future of sand-asphalt

C. and was so very ill that it difficultly he could get here. was unconscious from Monday until his death. Bush as called by his friends was born in Union County N. C. 43 years ago and lived there until his removal here about six years ago. He was a very successful trucker had just recently bought an improved farm in Beardall Ave. Left to mourn are his wife and seven children, five brothers and three sisters. Mrs Hasty and children wish to thank friends and neighbors for sympathy kindness and help.

The work of gathering B. A. Howards crop of Summatra cigar tobacco is still going on. There was a far greater yield than was looked for and all of the available buildings in Cameron City have been utilized as tobacco houses. Some leaves have been cured and rolled into cigars and burned fine. Have been pronounced by experts as a very high grade of tobacco. Five acres of this crop was grown on land that had produced a splendid crop of lettuce. The one acre grown under half shade on J. C. Ellsworth's farm had been seed. That grown under shade is said to be a finer grade than that grown in the open. About three months is the time it took to make the crop. A specially good point is that it can be grown at a time of year when farm work is slack, if it can be said that there ever is a slack time in the Celery Delta.

This no doubt will mean the beginning of another new industry here. With great credit due Mr. Howard there has been a great deal of interest displayed. Many tobacco growers and others have visited the fields as this variety of tobacco is an experiment here.

The work of preparing seed beds ground is now going on. Many have new land as it is said to grow better and stronger plants.

Road Bonds in Polk

Bartow, Fla., July 9.—At a meeting of the board of county commissioners of Polk county here Tuesday the Polk County Good Roads Association presented the matter of a bond issue of $2,000,000 to them for consideration and after considerable discussion the board asked that a petition signed by 25 per cent. of the qualified voters of Polk county, asking for an election on this question be presented to them. The Good Roads association went further, and offered to present a petition containing the signatures of 51 per cent. of said voters. The matter of the location and widths of the roads, for lack of time, was not considered. The commissioners, with but one representative from each commissioner's district, will consider these matters in executive session on Friday. Heretofore the Polk County Good Roads association agreed upon a system of roads to be recommended and had a map prepared showing the location of them. It is believed that with possibly a few exceptions, the roads as recommended by the county commissioners as the ones to be built with the bond money.

Hugh and Stanley Walker were returning from Clearwater in the Garner car and in rounding a corner of the road near Tampa dropped a wheel spilling the car and the two boys. Hugh was pinned beneath the car one of the seats resting on his hand. The gasoline caught fire burning his arm badly, the glass from the windshield cut him in the breast and the gun from the battery almost ruined one of his eyes but aside from this he was all right although he was forced to go to the hospital. Stanley was thrown clear of the car and suffered several minor bruises. It was a miracle that Hugh was not instantly killed and his many friends here are glad to see him able to be around again.

Orlando was visited yesterday by several of the representative citizens of Sanford and surrounding country, including the board of county commissioners and other officials of Seminole. They were here for the purpose of going over the newly paved highways of Orange and getting acquainted with our system of building better roads. After being shown over the "system" by Mr. M. O. Overstreet, chairman of the Orange county board, the party left here to inspect the recently constructed oil roads near Eustis. The party was composed of C. W. Entzinger, Thos. McLain, H. H. PEOPLE AND EVENTS

Wings Review Prize.

This competition had the endorsement of the general federation of lenomics department. The following announcement explains the conditions of the competition, which was most successful in every particular: A competition for women's clubs Pictorial Review offers $500 in prizes for the best definition of "Home."

By request of the chairman of the home economics department of the general federation of women's clubs, Pictorial Review hereby announces a competition opened to all federated clubs, for the best definition of the word—HOME.

What Does Home Mean to You? What is home? What is the purpose of home? Why does home exist?

The American coming back from Europe is thrilled at the first sight of the statue of liberty. America is home to him. To the New York society woman, home means Fifth Avenue and Broadway-life, electric lights fashions and society. A multi-millionaire goes back to the little country town where he was born. The tumble-down hack reaches the old home, and within is rest and quiet and peace. This means home to him. To the little child, home means mother. You see that home means a whole lot more than just the place you live in. This contest was open to all federated clubs. Mrs. Frank Jennings of Jacksonville won the fifth prize and her club has been sent a check for $25. Her answers will all be printed in the August Pictorial Review.

Mrs. Jennings is most delightfully known in this city.

Chaperones, Daughters.

Sister Esther Carlotta, of St. Augustine, the well known and beloved state president of the U. D. C., will chaperone a party to the Pacific coast in the early fall, the party leaving Jacksonville on October 5th and returning on November 6th. The trip will be made through New Orleans, Houston, El Paso and Los Angeles, with many interesting side trips en route. A week will be spent in San Francisco and the return will take the party through Salt Lake City, Colorado Springs, Denver, Chicago, Birmingham and Montgomery. This party will have a special train with no charges made between Jacksonville and San Francisco or return. Sister Carlotta will take young girls under her personal chaperonage. Some references will be required from people unknown to Sister Carlotta, which will insure a congenial and happy party. There will doubtless be a large number of Daughters going in this party and while in San Francisco they will be shown special courtesies. The opening exercises of the general convention will be held on the evening of October 19th, the sessions of the convention will be continuing through October 23rd. U. D. C. members will be cordially invited to attend these sessions. Ocala Star.

Bride and Groom Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleybourne DeVane are in the city the guests of Mr. DeVane's sister, Mrs. Hayes at her home on Magnolia Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. DeVane were married in Tampa last Saturday morning and on their wedding trip. The Tampa Times has the following account of the wedding:

Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of Congressman S. M. Sparkman, Nebraska and Michigan avenues, his youngest daughter, Miss Eugenia Sparkman was united in marriage to Mr. Cleybourne DeVane, the ceremony being very quietly performed by Dr. W. E. Thompson, in the presence of immediate members of the two families only. The wedding was very quiet on account of the recent bereavement in the Sparkman family.

The bride is one of Tampa's most attractive and popular daughters, being a member of one of the most prominent and well known families in the state. She is an accomplished and charming young woman and her friends will be glad that her marriage does not take her from the city.

Mr. DeVane is a young attorney, who gives promise of making an enviable name for himself in his chosen profession. He is a younger son of one of South Florida's best known families and since coming to Tampa has made a number of friends. The young couple has the best wishes and congratulations of their many relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. DeVane left on the noon train Saturday for a short trip their destination not being made known. They will make their home in Seminole Heights upon their return, having already purchased a pretty bungalow in that suburb.

Mrs. Monroe Honored.

Mrs. A. Leight Monroe has received the notable honor of being appointed a member of the home economics committee of the general federation of woman's clubs. Since the general federation embraces all federated clubs in the United States, the honor conferred upon Mrs. Monroe is an exceptionally high one, the members of the general federation committee being chosen club women throughout the United States.

Miami has the distinction of having three club women on committees in the general federation, Mrs. Monroe has made a number of friends. The SYNOPSIS.

The New York police are mystified by a series of murders and other crimes. The principal clue to the criminal is the warning letter which is sent to the victims, signed with a "clutching hand." The latest victim of the mysterious assassin is Taylor Dodge, the insurance president. His daughter, Elaine, employs Craig Kennedy, the famous scientific detective, to try to unravel the mystery. What Kennedy accomplishes is told by his friend Jameson, a newspaper man. Enraged at the determined effort which Elaine and Craig Kennedy are making to put an end to his crimes, the Clutching Hand, as this strange criminal is known, resorts to all sorts of the most diabolical schemes to put their out of the way. Each chapter of the story tells of a new plot against their lives, and of the way the great detective uses his skill to save this pretty girl and himself from

SEVENTH EPISODE

The Double Trap.

Mindful of the sage advice that a time of peace is best employed in preparing for war, I was busily engaged in cleaning my automatic gun one morning as Kennedy and I were seated in our living room.

Our door buzzer sounded, and Kennedy, always alert, jumped up, pushing aside a great pile of papers which had accumulated in the Dodge case.

Two steps took him to the hall, where the day before he had installed a peculiar box about four by six inches, connected in some way with a lens-like box of similar size above our bell and speaking tube in the hallway below it. He opened it, disclosing an oblong plate of ground glass.

"I thought the seismograph arrangement was not quite enough after that spring-gun affair," he remarked, "so I have put in a sort of telescope of my own invention—so that I can see down into the vestibule downstairs. Well—just look who's here!"

"Some new-fangled periscope arrangement, I suppose?" I queried, moving slowly over toward it.

However, one look was enough to interest me. I can express it only in slang. There, framed in the little thing, was a vision of as well as a "chicken" as I have ever seen.

I whistled under my breath.

"Um!" I exclaimed shamelessly. "A peach! Who's your friend?"

I had never said a truer word than in my description of her, though I did not know it at the time. She was indeed known as "Gertie the Peach" in the select circle where she belonged.

Kennedy had opened the lower door and our fair visitor was coming upstairs.

"Go in there, Walter," he said, seizing me quickly and pushing me into my room. "I want you to wait there and watch her carefully."

Kennedy opened the door disclosing a very excited young woman.

"Oh, Professor Kennedy," she cried all in one breath with much emotion. "I'm so glad I found you in. I can't tell you. Oh—my jewels! They have been stolen—and my husband must not know of it. Help me to recover them—please!"

"Just a moment, my dear young lady," interrupted Craig, finding at last a chance to get a word in edgewise. "Do you see that table—and all those papers? Really, I can't take your case. I am too busy, as it is, even to take the cases of many of my own clients."

"But please, Professor Kennedy—please!" she begged. "Help me. It means—oh, I can't tell you how much it means to me!"

She had come close to him and had laid her warm, little soft hand on his, in ardent entreaty.

From my hiding place in my room, I could not help seeing that she was using every charm of her sex and personality to lure him on, as she clung fondlingly to him.

Gertie had thrown her arms about Kennedy, as if in wildest devotion. I wondered what Elaine would have thought if she had a picture of that!

"Oh," she begged him, "please—please help me!"

Still Kennedy seemed utterly unaffected by her passionate embrace. Carefully he loosened her fingers from about his neck and removed the plump, enticing arms.

Gertie sank into a chair, weeping, while Kennedy stood before her a moment in deep abstraction.

Finally he seemed to make up his mind to something. His manner toward her changed. He took a step to her side.

"I will help you," he said, laying his hand on her shoulder. "If it is possible I will recover your jewels. Where do you live?"

"At Hazlehurst," she replied, gratefully. "Oh, Mr. Kennedy, how can I ever thank you?"

She seemed overcome with gratitude, and took his hand, pressed it, even kissed it.

"Just a minute," he added, carefully extricating his hand. "I'll be ready in just a minute."

Kennedy entered the room where I was listening.

"What's it all about, Craig?" I whispered, mystified.

For a moment he stood thinking, apparently reconsidering what he had just done. Then his second thought seemed to approve it.

"This is a trap of the Clutching Hand, Walter," he whispered, adding tensely, "and we're going to walk right into it."

"But, Craig," I demurred, "that's foolhardy. Have her trailed—anything—but—"

He shook his head, and with a mere motion of his hand brushed aside my objections as he went to a cabinet across the room.

From one shelf he took out a small metal box and from another a test tube, placing the test tube in his waistcoat pocket and the small box in his coat pocket with excessive care.

Then he turned and motioned to me to follow him out into the other room. I did so, stuffing my "gatt" into my pocket.

"Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Jameson," said Craig, presenting me to the pretty crook.

The introduction quickly over, we three went out to get Craig's car, which he kept at a nearby garage.

That forenoon Perry Bennett was reading up a case. In the outer office Milton Schofield, his office boy, was industriously chewing gum and admiring his feet, cocked up on the desk before him.

The door to the waiting room opened and an attractive woman of perhaps thirty, dressed in extreme mourning, entered with a boy.

Milton cast a glance of scorn at the "little dude." He was in reality about fourteen years old, but was dressed to look much younger.

"Did you wish to see Mr. Bennett?" asked the precocious Milton, politely, on one hand, while on the other he made a wry grimace.

"Yes—here is my card," replied the woman.

It was deeply bordered in black. Even Milton was startled at reading it. "Mrs. Taylor Dodge."

He looked at the woman in open-mouthed astonishment. Even he knew that Elaine's mother had been dead for years.

The woman however, true to her name in the artistic coterie in which she was leader, had sunk into a chair and was sobbing convulsively, as only "Weepy Mary" could.

It was so effective that even Milton was visibly moved. He took the card in, excitedly, to Bennett.

"There's a woman outside—says she is Mrs. Taylor Dodge!" he cried.

If Milton had had an X-ray eye he could have seen her take a cigarette from her handbag and light it nonchalantly the moment he was gone.

As for Bennett, Milton, who was watching him closely, thought he was about to discharge him on the spot for bothering him. He took the card, and his face expressed the most extreme surprise, then anger. He thought a moment.

"Tell that woman to state her business in writing," he thundered curtly at Milton.

As the boy turned to go back to the waiting room, Weepy Mary, hearing him coming, hastily shoved the cigarette into her "son's" hand.

"Mr. Bennett says for you to write out what it is you want to see him about," reported Milton, indicating the table before which she was sitting.

Mary had automatically taken up sobbing with the release of the cigarette. She looked at the table on which were letter paper, pens and ink.

"I may write here?" she asked.

"Surely, ma'am," replied Milton, still very much overwhelmed by her sorrow.

"Weepy Mary" sat there, writing and sobbing.

In the midst of his sympathy, however, Milton sniffed. There was an unmistakable odor of tobacco smoke about the room. He looked sharply at the "son," and discovered the still smoking cigarette.

It was too much for Milton's outraged dignity. Bennett did not allow him that coveted privilege. This upstart could not usurp it.

He reached over and seized the boy by the arm, and swung him around till he faced a sign in the corner on the wall.

"See?" he demanded.

The sign read, courteously: "No Smoking in This Office—Please. PERRY BENNETT."

"Lemme go my arm," snarled the "son," putting the offensive cigarette defiantly into his mouth.

There was every element of a gaudy mixup, when the outer door of the office suddenly swung open and Elaine Dodge entered.

Gallantry was Milton's middle name, and he sprang forward to hold the door, and then opened Bennett's door, as he ushered in Elaine.

As she passed "Weepy Mary," who was still writing at the table and crying bitterly, Elaine hesitated and looked at her curiously. Even after Milton had opened Bennett's door, she could not resist another glance. Instinctively, Elaine seemed to scent trouble.

Bennett was still studying the black-bordered card when she greeted him.

"Who is that woman?" she asked, still wondering about the identity of the noble outside.

At first he said nothing. But finally, seeing that she had noticed it, he handed Elaine the card, reluctantly.

Elaine read it with a gasp. The look of surprise that crossed her face was terrible.

Before she could say anything, however, Milton, who was seated with the sheet of paper on which "Weepy Mary" had written and handed it to Bennett.

Bennett read it with uncontrolled astonishment.

"What is it?" demanded Elaine. He handed it to her, and she read: "As the lawful wife and widow of Taylor Dodge I demand my son's rights and my own."

MRB. TAYLOR DODGE. Elaine gasped at it.

"She—my father's wife!" she exclaimed. "What effrontery! What does she mean?"

Bennett hesitated.

"Tell me," Elaine cried. "Is there—can there be anything in it? No—no—there isn't."

Bennett spoke in a low tone. "I have heard a whisper of some scandal or other connected with your father—but—" He paused.

Elaine was first shocked, then indignant.

"Why—such a thing is absurd. Show the woman in!"

"No—please—Miss Dodge. Let me deal with her."

By this time Elaine was furious.

"Yes—I will see her."

She pressed the button on Bennett's desk, and Milton responded.

"Milton, show the woman in," she ordered, "and that boy, too."

As Milton turned to crook his finger at "Weepy Mary," she nodded surreptitiously and dug her fingers sharply into "son's" ribs.

"Yell—yow little fool—yell," she whispered.

Obedient to his mother's commands, and much to Milton's disgust, the boy started to cry in close imitation of his elder.

Elaine was still holding the paper in her hands when they entered.

"What does all this mean?" she demanded.

"Weepy Mary," between sobs, managed to blurt out, "You are Miss Elaine Dodge, aren't you? Well, it she had been married.

Meanwhile, before a little country church in the town, a closed automobile had drawn up.

As the door opened a figure, humped up and masked, alighted.

It was the Clutching Hand. The car had scarcely pulled away when he gave a long rap, followed by two short taps, at the door of the vestry, a secret code, evidently.

Inside the vestry room a man well dressed, but with a very sinister face, heard the knock and a second later opened the door.

"What—not ready yet?" growled the Clutching Hand. "Quick—now—get on those clothes. I heard the train whistle as I came in the car. In which closet does the minister keep them?"

The crook, without a word, went to a closet and took out a suit of clothes of ministerial cut. Then he hastily put them on, adding some side-whiskers, which he had brought with him.

At about the same time Elaine, accompanied by "Weepy Mary" and her "son," had arrived at the little tumble-down station and had taken the only vehicle in sight, a very ancient carriage.

It ambled along until, at last, it pulled up before the vestry room door of the church, just as the bogus minister was finishing his transformation from a frank crook. Clutching Hand was giving him his final instructions.

Elaine and the others alighted and approached the church, while the ancient vehicle rattled away.

"They're coming!" whispered the crook, peering cautiously out of the window.

Clutching Hand moved silently and snakelike into the closet and shut the door.

"How do you do, Doctor Carton?" greeted "Weepy Mary." "I guess you don't remember me."

The clerical gentleman looked at her fixedly a moment.

"Remember you?" he repeated. "Of course, my dear. I remember everyone I marry."

"And you remember to whom you married me?"

"Perfectly. To an older man—a Taylor Dodge."

Elaine was overcome.

"Won't you step in?" he said suavely. "Your friend here doesn't seem well."

They all entered.

"And you—you say—you married this—this woman to Taylor Dodge?" queried Elaine, tensely.

The bogus minister seemed to be very fatherly. "Yes," he asserted, "I certainly did so."

"Have you the record?" asked Elaine, fighting to the last.

"Why, yes. I can show you the record."

He moved over to the closet. "Come over here," he asked.

He opened the door. Elaine screamed and drew back. There stood her arch enemy, the Clutching Hand himself.

As he stepped forth, she turned wildly to run—anywhere. But strong arms seized her and forced her into a chair.

She looked at the woman and the minister. "It was a plot!"

"A moment Clutching Hand looked Elaine over. "Put the others out," he ordered the other crook.

"Now, my pretty dear," began the Clutching Hand as the lock turned in the vestry door, "we shall be joined

Saved Girl's Life

"I want to tell you what wonderful benefit I have received from the use of Thedford's Black-Draught," writes Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky.

"It certainly has no equal for la grippe, had colds, liver and stomach troubles. I firmly believe Black-Draught saved my little girl's life. means that your father married me when I was only seventeen and this boy is our son—your half-brother.

"No—never," cried Elaine vehemently, unable to restrain her disgust.

"Weepy Mary" smiled cynically. "Come with me and I will show you the church records and the minister who married us."

"You will?" repeated Elaine defiantly. "Well, I'll just do as you ask. Mr. Bennett shall go with me."

"No, no, Miss Dodge—don't go. Leave the matter to me," urged Bennett. "I will take care of her. Besides, I must be in court in twenty minutes."

Elaine paused, but she was thoroughly aroused.

"Then I will go with her myself," she cried defiantly.

In spite of every objection that Bennett made, "Weepy Mary," her son and Elaine went out to call a taxicab to take them to the railroad station where they could catch a train to the little town where the woman asserted

TO THE FLORIDA CITRUS GROWERS:

We do not object to competitors talking about Chase & Co., provided they state facts. If they state facts, it will result to our advantage.

In speeches made by representatives of the Florida Citrus Exchange at annual meeting in Orlando June 11th, Chase & Co. were mentioned as a Marketing Agency; then disparaging remarks were made in reference to Marketing Agencies, which remarks we feel justified in contradicting in so far as they relate to us and they seem to have been aimed at us.

1st. The statement was made that Marketing Agencies assigned their shipments to commission houses in the North.

This statement in connection with Chase & Co. is absolutely incorrect. Chase & Co. make positive sales at definite prices and do business on a positive sale basis with the largest and best purchasing Jobbers in the United States and Canada.

2nd. The statement was made that the Auctions supplied only 20,000,000 people; that there were 80,000,000 people who were unsupplied last season; that only the 20,000,000 had ever seen Florida citrus fruits, and that the 80,000,000 had never seen a Florida Orange or Grapefruit.

This is incorrect, as is proven by the fact that Chase & Co. during season 1914-15 sold in private sale markets, to the 80,000,000 people, 69 per cent. of their citrus output, and sold at auction only 31 per cent. This probably considerably less than half the percentage sold at auction by the Exchange. MR. GROWER, think well over this.

3rd. The statement was made that Marketing Agencies are in business for a profit.

No good man works for nothing. It is true that Chase & Co. expect their business to show a profit. Chase & Co. operate their own expense packinghouse facilities which are at the disposal of the growers; field force; Railroad Claim Department, and Sales Department an organization which is generally considered by well posted people throughout the country as one of the most complete and highly organized in this line of business.

If by able and efficient management, Chase & Co. can give the Growers the most economical, as well as unequalled service, secure for the Growers highest average net results on the tree, and at the same time have their business show a fair profit, it is unquestionably to the Grower's advantage to appoint Chase & Co. their Marketing Agent.

4th. The statement was made that Marketing Agencies compete with the Exchange in the markets of the country.

This is true. Chase & Co. do compete with the Exchange. Our competition, however is to secure a wider distribution and higher prices than the Exchange. WE MAKE GOOD.

5th. The statement was made that Marketing Agencies have nothing at stake, consequently are not interested in working for highest prices.

Chase & Co's business during the past thirty years has shown a steady growth. Our business is built along conservative lines and is not secured by making extravagant or unreasonable promises to the Growers. We have no hold on the Growers. The business comes to us voluntarily and because the Growers receive highest average net prices through Chase & Co.

If Chase & Co. did not keep its packing and selling organization up to the highest state of perfection and efficiency and failed to secure satisfactory results for the Growers, not only would its business drop away, but its assets, in the way of packing houses, equipment, etc., would decrease in value.

Who has the most at stake—Chase & Co., which has large investments in packinghouses and equipment throughout the state, or the management of the Florida Citrus Exchange, who have nothing at stake excepting their positions?

6th. The statement was made that the Exchange markets five times as much fruit as any single Agency in Florida.

This is incorrect as applied to Chase & Co.

7th. The statement was made that Marketing Agencies solicit business from the Growers have no interest in the growing of the fruit.

This is incorrect as applied to Chase & Co. The members of this Company have large citrus grove holdings in Florida and are vitally interested as Growers in the welfare of the Florida Citrus Industry.

8th. Great stress was laid by the President of the Exchange on the fact that production of Citrus Fruit in Florida was increasing, and fears were expressed as to the future of the industry.

Chase & Co. go on record as optimists. We believe in the future of the Florida Citrus Industry. We make this statement not only as Marketing Agents but also as Growers.

9th. The Sales Manager of the Exchange stated that as soon as he was able this season to advise the Trade that the Exchange controlled the bulk of the oranges remaining in Florida, prices doubled.

Such a statement is an insult to the intelligence of the Florida Growers. This is proven by the fact that Mr. G. H. Powell, General Manager of the California Fruit Exchange, recently stated in interviews in the Northern Trade Papers that since April 1st, prices on California Oranges this season have ruled higher than during the early part of the season, and higher than during a period of years.

Remember, California has been shipping heavy since April 1st, and that it would be impossible for the Florida Citrus Exchange, or any other Marketing Agency, with only a comparatively small quantity of Florida oranges remaining, to establish values for the entire country, not only on Florida but also on California.

When the Exchange makes claims of this kind they should at least be consistent and also admit that they were responsible for the lower prices which ruled earlier in the season.

10th. The Exchange officials told of what they would be able to do when they control 60 per cent of the Florida Citrus Crop.

We ask the Grower to appoint Chase & Co. his Marketing Agent, not because we are going to do this or that when we control two or three times our present percentage of the Crop, but because Chase & Co. have in the past realized for the Growers highest average net tree returns—giving unequalled service at minimum cost.

11th. One speaker warned his hearers to beware of the "stool pigeon," the man who received through independent Marketing Agencies higher prices than those realized by the Exchange Growers, and insinuated that the Grower who received higher prices through the Independent Marketing Agency sold his manhood, etc.

Such statements do not appeal to the intelligent Grower. There are a few Growers in Florida who consider their Groves a hobby and do not care particularly about results. Most Growers, however, desire to realize highest possible net tree results for their fruit. If through superior facilities, greater experience, more capable and efficient management, an Independent Growers Marketing Agency succeeds in realizing for the Growers higher net tree result than the Exchange, it is unquestionably to the Grower's advantage to ship his fruit through the Independent Marketing Agency.

Chase & Co. have been engaged in the marketing of Florida products since 1884; have this season handled the largest volume of shipments in the history of their business, and now have signed up for the next season more fruit than at the same time a year ago.

Chase & Co. not only maintain packinghouses in different parts of the State, which enables them to offer the Growers packing as well as selling services, but also act as Marketing Agents for Associations or individuals maintaining their own packinghouses.

We suggest to the Exchange officials the motto, "MAKE GOOD NOW." Knocking does not buy anyone anything.

Yours very truly, ers had stepped from the back room and two more from the bay window. We were surrounded. Seven guns were aimed at us with deadly precision.

"Gentlemen," he said quietly. "I suspected some such thing. I have here a small box of fulminate of mercury. If I drop it, this building and the entire vicinity will be blown to atoms. Go ahead—shoot!" he added, nonchalantly.

The seven of them drew back rather hurriedly.

Kennedy was a dangerous prisoner. He calmly sat down in an arm chair, leaning back as he carefully balanced the deadly little box of fulminate of mercury on his knee.

"Gertie ran from the room."

For a moment they looked at each other, undecided. Then, one by one, they stepped away from Kennedy toward the door.

The leader was the last to go. He had scarcely taken a step.

"Stop!" ordered Kennedy.

The crook did so. As Craig moved toward him, he waited, cold sweat breaking out on his face.

"Bay," he whined, "you let me be!"

It was ineffectual. Kennedy, smiling confidently, came closer, still holding the deadly little box, balanced between two fingers.

He took the crook's gun and dropped it into his pocket.

"Sit down!" ordered Craig.

Outside, the other six parleyed in hoarse whispers. One raised a gun, but the woman and the others restrained him and fled.

"Take me to your master!" demanded Kennedy.

The crook remained silent.

"Where is he?" repeated Craig.

"Tell me!"

Still the man remained silent. Craig looked the fellow over again. Then, still with that confident smile, he reached into his inside pocket and drew forth the tube I had seen him place there.

"No matter how much you accuse me," added Craig casually, "no one will ever take the word of a crook that a reputable scientist like me would do what I am about to do."

He had taken out his penknife and opened it. Then he beckoned to me.

"Here his arm and hold his wrist, Walter," he said.

Craig bent down with the knife and the tube, then paused a moment and turned to tube so that we could see it.

On the label were the ominous words

Germ Culture 6248A

Bacillus Leprae (Leprosy)

Calmly he took the knife and proceeded to make an incision in the man's arm. The crook's feelings underwent a terrific struggle.

"No—no—no—don't!" he implored.

"I will take you to the Clutching Hand—even if he kills me!"

Kennedy stepped back, replacing the tube in his pocket.

"Very well, go ahead!" he agreed.

We followed the crook, Craig still holding the deadly box of fulminate of mercury carefully balanced so that if anyone shot him from a hiding place it would drop.

No sooner had we gone than Gertie hurried to the nearest telephone to inform the Clutching Hand of our escape.

Elaine had sunk back into the chair as the telephone rang. Clutching Hand answered it.

A moment later in uncontrollable fury he hurled the instrument to the floor.

"Here—we've got to act quickly—that devil has escaped again," he hissed. "We must get her away. You keep her here. I'll be back—right away—with a car."

He dashed madly from the church, pulling off his mask as he gained the street.

Kennedy had forced the crook ahead of us into the car which was waiting, and I followed, taking the wheel this time.

"Which way, now—quick!" demanded Craig. "And if you get me in wrong—I've got that tube yet—you remember."

Our crook started off with a whole burst of directions that rivalled the motor guide—through the town, following trolley tracks, jog right, jog left under the railroad bridge, leaving trolley tracks, at the cemetery turn left, stopping at the old stone church.

"Is this it?" asked Craig incredulously.

"Yes—as I live," swore the crook in a cowed voice.

He had gone to pieces. Kennedy jumped from the machine.

"Here, take this gun, Walter," he said to me. "Don't take your eyes off the fellow—keep him covered."

Craig walked around the church, out of sight, until he came to a small vestry window and looked in.

There was Elaine, sitting in a chair, and near her stood an elderly-looking man in clerical garb, which to Craig's trained eye was quite evidently a disguise.

Elaine happened just then to glance at the window and her eyes grew wide with astonishment at the sight of Craig.

He made a hasty motion to her to make a dash for the door. She nodded quietly.

With a glance at her guardian she suddenly made a dash.

He was at her in a moment, pouncing on her, callitike.

Kennedy had seized an iron bar that lay beside the window where some workmen had been repairing the stone pavement, and with a blow shattered the glass and the sash.

At the sound of the smashing glass the crook turned and with a mighty effort threw Elaine aside, drawing his revolver. As he raised it, Elaine sprang at him and frantically seized his wrist.

"Steady, steady!" she cried, "steady!"

For a moment they looked at each other, undecided. Then, one by one, they stepped away from Kennedy toward the door.

The leader was the last to go. He had scarcely taken a step.

"Stop!" ordered Kennedy.

The crook did so. As Craig moved toward him, he waited, cold sweat breaking out on his face.

"Bay," he whined, "you let me be!"

It was ineffectual. Kennedy, smiling confidently, came closer, still holding the deadly little box, balanced between two fingers.

He took the crook's gun and dropped it into his pocket.

"Sit down!" ordered Craig.

Outside, the other six parleyed in hoarse whispers. One raised a gun, but the woman and the others restrained him and fled.

"Take me to your master!" demanded Kennedy.

The crook remained silent.

"Where is he?" repeated Craig.

"Tell me!"

Still the man remained silent. Craig looked the fellow over again. Then, still with that confident smile, he reached into his inside pocket and drew forth the tube I had seen him place there.

"No matter how much you accuse me," added Craig casually, "no one will ever take the word of a crook that a reputable scientist like me would do what I am about to do."

He had taken out his penknife and opened it. Then he beckoned to me.

"Here his arm and hold his wrist, Walter," he said.

Craig bent down with the knife and the tube, then paused a moment and turned to tube so that we could see it.

On the top of the steeple was a great gilded cross, considerably larger than a man. As the crook clambered outside, he scaled the steeple, using a lightning rod and some projecting points to pull himself up, desperately.

Kennedy followed unhesitatingly.

There they were, struggling in deadly combat, clinging to the gilded cross. The first I knew of it was a horrified gasp from my own crook. I looked up carefully, fearing it was a stall to get me off my guard.

Just then I saw a Woman's Face Tense With Horror; It Was Elaine.

There were Kennedy and the other crook, struggling, swaying back and forth, between life and death.

There was nothing I could do.

Kennedy was clinging to a lightning rod on the cross.

It broke.

I gasped as Craig reeled back. But he managed to catch hold of the rod farther down and cling to it.

The crook began to exult diabolically. Holding with both hands to the cross he let himself out to his full length and stamped on Kennedy's fingers, trying every way to dislodge him. It was all Kennedy could do to keep his hold.

I cried out in agony at the sight, for he had dislodged one of Craig's hands. The other could not hold much longer. He was about to fall.

Just then I saw a face at the little window opening out from the ladder to the outside of the steeple—a woman's face, tense with horror.

It was Elaine!

Quickly a hand followed, and in it was a revolver.

Just as the crook was about to dislodge Kennedy's other hand I saw a flash and puff of smoke, and a second later heard a report—and another—and another.

Horror!

The crook who had taken refuge seemed to stagger back, wildly, taking a couple of steps in the air.

Kennedy regained his hold.

With a sickening thud the body of the crook landed on the ground around the corner of the church from me.

"Come—you!" I ground out, covering my own crook with the pistol, "and if you attempt a getaway I'll kill you, too!"

He followed, trembling, unnerved.

We bent over the man. It seemed that every bone in his body must be broken. He groaned, and before I could even attempt anything for him, he was dead.

As Kennedy let himself slowly and painfully down the lightning rod, Elaine seized him and, with all her strength, pulled him through the window.

He was quite weak now from loss of blood.

"Are you—all right?" she gasped, as they reached the foot of the ladder in the belfry.

Craig looked down at his torn and soiled clothes. Then, in spite of the smarting pain of his wounds, he smiled, "Yes—all right!"

"Thank Heaven!" she murmured fervently, trying to stanch the flow of blood.

"This time—it was you—saved me!" he cried, "Elaine!"

Involuntarily his arms sought hers—and he held her a moment, looking deep into her wonderful eyes.

Then their faces came slowly together in their first kiss.

 DO BRIDESMAIDS WED SOON?

Oh, had I but loved such an angel as you! Oh, had I but my own been a quarter as true!
 To miss such perfection, how blinded was I!
 Sure now they were excellent company!

Where is the girl who is not anxious to be bridesmaid when she hears a girl friend is soon to wed? Passing up the aisle to the strains of the wedding march, knowing that she in turn gets her full measure of admiration from hundreds of eager eyes, is almost as delightful as being the bride.

And, then, it is known to be lucky to take part in such a ceremony. Nine times out of ten the entire group of bridesmaids have married within the twelvemonth. Especially is this said to be true if the bridesmaid tucks a four-leaf clover in her bodice unknown to anyone, as she sets forth for the altar. In the dancing and feasting that follow, though there be hundreds of pretty girls as guests, all the eligible young men are eager to dance with the pretty bridesmaid, just for luck, as they will tell you. Some young man, who has never thought of her seriously before, will suddenly become conscious of her attractions, and think how pretty she would look in bridal array, wishing he might be fortunate enough to win her.

This is the romance factor. It is a question of wonderment among the girls as to which shall be the next bride. It is a moment of delightful excitement when they all band together to watch the departure of the bride, each eager to catch the bouquet which she flings among them. For this it terrifies the maiden who will be the last one to be left by a happy groom.

Of course only one girl gets the bouquet. But that does not hinder the rest from having high matrimonial hopes. Each girl has a piece of wedding cake for her to eat under her pillow and dream over, secretly hoping that she will see in her vision one of the ushers who seemed to be particularly attracted toward her. To have a girl's permission to call upon her.

But girls should not seek to be bridesmaids too often. There is a superstition connected with it, which is not pleasant to learn of, yet one which as well know about. It is that the bride who is asked to be a bridesmaid should not be asked to do so again within a year. If she is asked to do so again, it is said that she will never marry.

Now that the wedding season is in full swing, every girl will want to be a bridesmaid. But bridesmaids are not to be had for the asking. A girl must be popular, and a girl must be popular with her girl friends. If you can make your own bridesmaid gown every stitch of it with your own design, you will see a young man's heart with the tucks and dainty ruffles. My what "sewing bees" will start up! Every girl will want to know how to make a bridesmaid's gown. She who is popular with her girl friends may need it sooner than she expects.

HOW MUCH IS A WIFE WORTH?
 He said when first he saw me
 Life seemed at once divine.
 Each night he dreamed of angels
 And every day was mine.
 Some time a year he was saying
 "Would all the loves be hid!
 And then I'd wish you were gone—
 Do you really think he did?"

When a man falls in love with a girl sufficiently to wed her, the thought of money does not enter into his consideration. After marriage he loves her more devotedly than before. If children bless the union, he is indeed a happy man. If offspring is denied, a wise man looks at it philosophically.

Life flows contentedly onward with the pair. A man may be a very good husband and yet forget the first duty he owes to the woman who has chosen him from all others, to make good his vow at the altar—namely, to endow her with an equal half of his worldly goods. He has promised to give her all. The average wife is not so covetous as to take over his business and attempt to run it. She is usually willing to accept the amount he doles out to her for household expenses, etc.

What wife would think of asking a statement of her husband in regard to his business at the end of each year? If the marriage bark glides smoothly, all is well. She has nothing to fear. But if there a trouble to the matrimonial camp, and the husband becomes parsimonious toward his better half, she has every reason to fear.

Many a man's fortune is based on the prudence of a saving wife. She may have eked along on a sum which barely enabled her to keep body and soul together that her spouse might have the more money to put into his business. She may have added her own little mite, which she had earned by sewing during those years of struggle, to swell his profits.

Should serious disagreements arise between husband and wife, which would cause the parting of their ways, the question of how much is a wife worth no matter how rich her husband may be, will cause many a wife a perturbed heart when she hears what the law has to say about it. A learned judge has decided that the wife cannot, by law, gain from her husband any part of his fortune, even though the half of it should rightfully belong to her. If the man whom she married wishes to be mean with her, he can see her face the world, broken in spirit, penniless. After this, who can blame parents for having a satisfactory understanding with a rich suitor who comes a-wooing their daughter? A father who is looking after his child's fortune should not be called mercenary, if he insists that the husband should give the wife a certain amount each year, if they are prosperous, which may be absolutely hers. She would never press the claim if he had business reverses. Love should cause husbands to provide for their wives. The faith of a true wife is the most valuable of a husband's possessions.

SHOULD GIRLS KNOW HOW TO WORK?

Love, exacting nothing back,
 Never knowing any lack,
 Love, compelling love to pay,
 Sees him bankrupt every day.

No matter how poor a woman is or how hard she has to work in her struggle to keep the wolf from the door, if she has a daughter she will work her fingers to the bone rather than to permit the girl to seek other than "rented" employment. If the mother had her way about it, the girl would do fancy things, painting, embroider sofa pillows, or teach music lessons. She has denied herself even the necessities of life to send the daughter to school. Her dreams of what she would become have been the brightest she had ever known.

She determines that the girl shall be a lady at any cost. She would as soon think of flying as permitting the girl to get up first on a cold winter morning and make a fire, getting the breakfast for the family.

Does her daughter wash up or ironing? "Never, while I'm able to do it," the mother declares to the neighbors when they suggest the girl should help her. Her daughter is not initiated into the art of baking, housekeeping or sewing. Her dresses are made by a seamstress who is tidy, but works cheap.

If misfortune overtakes the struggling family, if they lose the father or the mother falls ill, the girl is helplessly at her wits' end to know what to do to earn the money for the rent and the upkeep of her little brothers.

It is the same with china painting. She's lucky if she secures a position behind a counter in a store. If a young man forms her acquaintance, she would lose him if she invited him to her untidy home. If he puts the question bluntly to her, as to whether or not she could cook a meal, she would have to acknowledge she couldn't.

She isn't a helpmate for a poor man. It is more likely than not that she would never come in contact with a rich man who would want her for his wife. The girl who does not know how to do anything well is mercilessly elbowed to one side by girls who have been taught by their mothers many useful things from which they could gain a livelihood, if need be. Knowing how to work never spoils any girl.

About the Crocodile.
 There is no escape from the jaws of a crocodile when they have once closed upon the victim. The 68 teeth, long and sharp-pointed, fit exactly into the interstices between them, making a most effective trap.
 In shooting these reptiles a very accurate rifle is necessary, as there are only two points that are immediately fatal, just behind the eye and exactly through the center of the shoulder. The latter shot will break both joints of the fore legs and pass directly through the lungs. The hard scales of crocodiles are said to be proof against a rifle bullet. This may have been so years ago when rifles were loaded with only one dram of powder. But a hardened, solid bullet, propelled by six drams of powder, will drive through a crocodile as through a sheet of paper.

Cooked Food Sale
The Ladies Union of the Congregational Church will hold a cooked food sale at Irwin and Giles Saturday (to-morrow) afternoon and evening for the benefit of the Christina fund. These ladies are famous for their toothsome cooking. Cakes, pies, salads and other good things to tempt the appetite, will be on sale. A liberal patronage will be appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hickson, of Sanford, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Williams, at Oxford, in Sumpter county, were in Orlando yesterday en route to their home in the Celery City. —Orlando Sentinel.

Over The Rainbow
Everything is in readiness for the charming little operetta, "Over the Rainbow," which will be presented Tuesday night at the Imperial under the auspices of the Junior Civic League of the Woman's Club. The public are earnestly requested to give a liberal patronage to the little folks and young people. The operetta is its-self pretty and bright and the rehearsals give promise of a charming production. The plot centers about four earth children who fall asleep in their nursery on a rainy day, their last thought being a wish to see the wonders over the rainbow.

The queen of Rainbowland overhears the children and decides to gratify the wish so on the wings of magic the children, Bertha, Clare, Anita and dear little Dorothy are spirited to Rainbowland and shown the wonders of that beautiful country. The songs are very sweet, the children and girls are lovely and the vaudeville features especially pretty and original.

Married at Miami
A quiet wedding was solemnized last evening when Miss Fora Louise Vaughn of Sanford, became the bride of Merilon Bledsoe, formerly of Sanford, but now of Miami. The young couple were married at 9 o'clock, at the home of the Reverend J. A. Wray, on avenue C, the ceremony being witnessed by a number of intimate friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fred V. Holmes for the past fortnight and is an attractive young woman, who has won a number of friends during her visit, who will learn with pleasure that she will make her future home here. Since coming to Miami several months ago, Mr. Bledsoe has been connected with the engineering work on the Deering place.

Among the many parties at Daytona Beach spending the Fourth and Fifth were Margaret Wight, Anna McLaughlin, George McLaughlin, Ralph Wight, Billy Hill and Joe Chittendon chaperoned by Mrs. C. O. McLaughlin and Misses Lillian Higgins, Ann Higgins and Adelaide Higgins chaperoned by Mrs. Margaret Barnes. The Sanford party was the most popular on the beach and not only had the prettiest girls, the best dancers and the most suave gentlemen but the fastest drivers in automobiles in Osborn Herndon. In fact Sanford was very much in evidence as usual.

Mayor Thrasher and Mrs. Thrasher left yesterday in their car for Clearwater and other points on the west coast and expect to be absent for the next week visiting relatives and enjoying the fishing and bathing of the Clearwater region.

Ruth Waldron returned to her home in Tampa yesterday after spending several weeks among her many friends here. She was the house guest of Margaret Strong and Edna Chittendon while here.

Mr. and Mrs. Deane Turner and little Deane left yesterday for Daytona Beach. Mr. Turner will return tomorrow but Mrs. Turner and little Deane will remain a few days longer.

Miss Gladys Reed of New Smyrna is the attractive guest of Mrs. W. E. Hawkins for the week end. Ere returning home she will also visit friends at Ocoee and other points.

Answered.
"Young man," said the irate old gentleman at the lunch counter to the hard-looking youth who was inhaling his soup with a gurgling sound and splashing it about the white, "what are you? A Colorado geyser?" "Naw," responded the soup juggler. "I'm a New Haven guy, sir!"

Optimistic Thought.
Resolutions taken without thought bring disasters without remedy.

Game Warden for Orange

Under the game law recently enacted the county commissioners have to select a county game warden and Mr. E. C. McDowell was yesterday chosen by the county commissioners to fill that position.

The game warden will work under the Gorpto law instead of the act which was in force last year, and the requirements are virtually the same. It seems the greatest change being that the new law does away with the state game warden.

Mr. McDowell made a good record as warden last year, and it was found we had probably fewer infractions of the law than any other county. He knows every nook and crannie of the county, and is well qualified to serve in this capacity.—Reporter Star.

Took Long to Develop Pens.

In the United States the first attempt to manufacture a gold pen was in 1835 by a watchmaker of Detroit. In 1860 an attempt was made in the United States to manufacture a fountain pen, but it was not until 1879 that they were constructed successfully.

THE LAST GERMAN NOTE DOES NOT SATISFY DEMANDS MADE BY THE UNITED STATES

Washington, July 13.—Germany's latest note has been received here and the general trend of feeling is that the note is no more satisfactory than those that preceded it.

"Several days will be required to measure fully the consequences and responsibilities the American Government will incur in framing a policy to meet the situation.

Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, intends to call on Secretary Lansing during the week to learn informally whether he can be of any service to the situation.

Today the official text of the German reply arrived and was made public. It differed only in unimportant words from the Associated Press copy which came from Berlin Friday night.

What the action of the American Government will be is doubtful largely in the sense that the means of expressing the ideas and purposes of the United States have not been decided.

There is no intention from indications from official quarters to free a situation but in whatever policy is followed the American action will put responsibility on the many for any breach of neutrality.

Editor Hetherington of the Lakeland Telegram is the gentleman who is so fortunate. He will catch a glimpse of the big canal, the big canyons, the big trees, all the yawning chasms of the Yosemite valley.

After visiting Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco, the Yosemite, National Park and other points of interest, he will return by way of Portland and Seattle, and Vancouver, B. C., thence through the Canadian Rockies, to Winnipeg, St. Paul, Chicago, stopping briefly in Kentucky and at Cincinnati.

Mrs. E. B. Brown of Tampa is expected to arrive in the city today for a visit with her sister, Mrs. R. J. Holly. The many friends of Mrs. Brown will be delighted to have her in the city again.

Commercial Club to Meet The Sanford Commercial Club will hold a business and general get together meeting next Friday in the City Hall.

Plenty of Restaurants Restaurants and hotels in this city recall the old adage of either a feast or a famine and from a few restaurants in Sanford we now have more than the average city.

LAKE FRONT BULKHEADING IS RAPIDLY PROCEEDING

GREAT WORK OF BEAUTIFYING SANFORD WILL BE COMPLETE IN THE NEAR FUTURE

The bulkheading is beginning to assume the proportions that demonstrates the great things of the future. Under the skillful manipulation of Martin Nickerson of Jacksonville the dredge is throwing dirt at a rapid rate.

The dredge is out quite a distance from the shore line now and is bringing up the black mud from the bottom of the lake and this being very soft is spreading over the entire front making a very noticeable fill.

With the new hotel, the Elks Club and several other proposed buildings at the foot of Park Avenue and the new building at the corner of First and Park Avenue, the beautifying work will be completed.

SANFORD ELKS WILL BUILD A FINE NEW CLUB HOUSE SOON

THE EUROPEAN WAR AND HARD TIMES DOES NOT DETER THE ELKS

At a meeting of the officers of the Elks Lodge last night it was decided to advertise for bids on the new building the same to be opened on October first.

The lodge room proper will occupy the greater part of the second floor and will be equipped in magnificent style. The floor of the lodge room will also be finished in such a manner that the dancers can enjoy dancing on the nights when the lodge is in session.

While the members of Sanford lodge are busy with their own work, they are also busy with the beautifying of the city.

Improvements at the High School The grounds at the Sanford High School building are being placed in first class condition.

Good Python Lodge The Python Lodge, No. 10, of the Grand Lodge of Florida, will hold its regular meeting on Thursday night.

Our State Institutions Among the visitors in the city last week might be mentioned Mr. J. Ernest Yonge, special representative of the University of Florida.

Before leaving Sanford Mr. Yonge in a talk with a representative of this paper, spoke enthusiastically of the interest which has been manifested by the young people of this section of the state.

The people of this state, said Mr. Yonge, are at last beginning to realize that it is no longer necessary to send their children out of Florida to give them a first class college education.

The State University at Gainesville now embraces the college of Arts and Sciences, the College of Agriculture, including the four year course in Agriculture, and many short courses for the practical farmer.

Improvements at the High School The grounds at the Sanford High School building are being placed in first class condition.

ANOTHER "PEACE ADVOCATE" IS READY TO STOP THE WAR BY USING BOMBS

New Orleans, La., July 13.—Federal officers here this morning had heard nothing from the British steamers Howth Head and Baron Napier, which cleared from here July 8 and sailed from port Eads the following day.

The first indication that the two steamers were supposed to have bombs aboard was contained in a letter received late yesterday afternoon by a local paper.

Hans Halle arrested here December 22 last, having in his possession at the time, a bomb containing forty pounds which, according to police he confessed he had prepared with the intention of consigning it to a French Line steamship at New York.

Halle at the time of his previous arrest, was held by the state authorities which endeavored to try him on a charge of having had in his possession an excessive quantity of high explosives.

Peace declared in a letter that he was a consoler with Erich Muentzer, Frank Hill, who recently shot and captured at P. Morgan, and who later called himself Hill. He asserted that it was Muentzer who warned the passengers on the Lusitania not to make the voyage.

Muentzer's object in going to Glen Cove, L. I. where Mr. Morgan was shot, was to harm Sir Cecil Sprigg-Ellice, the British ambassador, to the United States, the writer said.

New Cigar Factory Sanford now boasts of three cigar factories the latest one being the Seminole Cigar Co., recently opened on Fifth street.

Car Load of Fine Melons H. H. Hill has a fine car of Georgia melons that he is selling to the wholesale and retail trade of this city.
