Blockade Cuts Japanese Off From Asia Aid

Major Fighting May Begin Soon On Continent As Chinese Rush Their Training

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3. (AP)—American air raids have destroyed forewarned Japanese cities and were denounced as "barbaric" by the enemy radio network today, but it predicted they will be carried out fiercely to "wipe out the Japanese people."

No hope that the advertised raids could be prevented was mentioned in the broadcast, monitored by the Federal Communications Commission.

No comment regarding the Japanese people's reaction to the warnings which were referred to only as "extremely elaborate propaganda." Widespread destruction was reflected in the statement.

A complete aerial blockade has cut off Japan from any aid from Asia where a huge Allied offensive is expected soon, American commanders said today after reporting 119 more Japanese vessels sunk or damaged.

The blockade was announced at Superfort headquarters where a spokesman said every harbor in Japan and Korea has been virtually closed by history's most extensive air-borne mining operations. Whatever shipping is left is being kept from the continent.

Warning Issued Against Careless Handling Of DDT

A warning that DDT, the wonder insecticide andbane of mosquitoes, is not harmless to human beings, and that precautions should accompany its use, is contained in the following report from the U. S. War Relocation Authority, chemist in charge of the Culex Investigation Laboratory:

Numerous requests have been received as to whether certain products sold under various trade names and claiming to contain DDT actually did contain this compound. Compounds of DDT are now being sold under a number of trade names such as Deo Dee Tee, Deentee, Gesarol, Neonol, and Santobane and probably others that the writer has not heard of. The only sure way you can be certain of getting a product containing DDT is to read the label giving the ingredients if you see a certain percentage of other of the following listed (Dichloro-diphenylethane or 2,2,4-trichlorophenyl)-1,1,1-trichloroethane you can be sure that you are getting DDT.

While DDT has given remarkable results in the control of insects pests, certain precautions should be observed when using products containing this compound. In the first place it is not safe to human beings and while the dry powder is not absorbed by the skin, care should be taken not to breathe too much of the dust. In all solutions it is quickly absorbed through the skin. Thus caution should be used not to spill it on the skin and if spilled to wash it off with plenty of soap and water.

As it is likely to kill honey bees and other beneficial insects, it is found desirable to use it on such plants to kill insect pests it should be used before the flowers open or after they have matured and bees are no longer visiting them.

If used according to directions there will be no more danger in eating vegetables sprayed with it than in eating vegetables sprayed with sprays that have been used in the past.

European Food Famine Foreseen For Next Year

By MORSE SALINBERY WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Every indication points to the worst food shortage in Europe next winter that has been experienced in modern times. Destruction of the means of production and transportation has rendered most of the liberated countries helpless to provide for their minimum needs.

Alarming as the situation is now, it will grow progressively worse throughout the summer and fall.

Despite the heroic efforts of the people of these distressed countries, this year's harvests will be at an all-time low. At the end of November, it is estimated, they will be nearing exhaustion. After that and until the 1948 harvests are available, the liberated countries will be largely dependent on food imported from abroad.

Throughout the fall of last year and as late as the spring of this year a vast area of the continent was still a battleground. Both the autumn and spring plantings of cereals were heavily affected. Moreover, throughout the whole period of the war, it was practically impossible to obtain needed fertilizers. For a century and a half, Europe's soil has been depleted from centuries of cultivation. This has proved a major catastrophe. Furthermore, the seizure of the animals for military use and the loss of tractors or their immobilization for lack of fuel or repair parts has imposed an enormous handicap on all farm operations.

In cereals it is unlikely that Europe this year will achieve more than half its normal crop. Dairy production is suffering from a lack of all seed to furnish protein supplements in dairy rations, and cannot recover rapidly enough to meet next winter's needs. Most production will be low because a large proportion of the herds and flocks has been destroyed. Sugar will be far below normal, and, while there is a better prospect for vegetables and potatoes, even these will be affected by a lack of fertilizers.

Of importance second only to food production is food distribution. Europe's inland transportation facilities are in chaos. The damage done to railroad tracks (Continued on Page Two)

Most production will be low because a large proportion of the herds and flocks has been destroyed. Sugar will be far below normal, and, while there is a better prospect for vegetables and potatoes, even these will be affected by a lack of fertilizers.

European Food Famine Foreseen For Next Year

By MORSE SALINBERY WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Every indication points to the worst food shortage in Europe next winter that has been experienced in modern times. Destruction of the means of production and transportation has rendered most of the liberated countries helpless to provide for their minimum needs.

Alarming as the situation is now, it will grow progressively worse throughout the summer and fall.

Despite the heroic efforts of the people of these distressed countries, this year's harvests will be at an all-time low. At the end of November, it is estimated, they will be nearing exhaustion. After that and until the 1948 harvests are available, the liberated countries will be largely dependent on food imported from abroad.

Throughout the fall of last year and as late as the spring of this year a vast area of the continent was still a battleground. Both the autumn and spring plantings of cereals were heavily affected. Moreover, throughout the whole period of the war, it was practically impossible to obtain needed fertilizers. For a century and a half, Europe's soil has been depleted from centuries of cultivation. This has proved a major catastrophe. Furthermore, the seizure of the animals for military use and the loss of tractors or their immobilization for lack of fuel or repair parts has imposed an enormous handicap on all farm operations.

In cereals it is unlikely that Europe this year will achieve more than half its normal crop. Dairy production is suffering from a lack of all seed to furnish protein supplements in dairy rations, and cannot recover rapidly enough to meet next winter's needs. Most production will be low because a large proportion of the herds and flocks has been destroyed. Sugar will be far below normal, and, while there is a better prospect for vegetables and potatoes, even these will be affected by a lack of fertilizers.

Of importance second only to food production is food distribution. Europe's inland transportation facilities are in chaos. The damage done to railroad tracks (Continued on Page Two)

State Guard Takes Tavern In Big Upset

Score Is 13 To One; Frierson's Triumphs Over Yowell Team

In one of the biggest upsets of the season a greatly strengthened State Guard softball team trounced Frank's Tavern team by a score of 13 to 1 Thursday evening, ending Stinson Knickerbocker's reign as Sanford softball ruler was replaced by Earl Evans.

The Guard team started right off by scoring three runs in the first inning; got five in the second, one in the third, two in the fourth and two in the sixth. The Taverners got their lone run in the fifth. But, pitcher, four for the guards with four strikeouts.

In the second game, the Frierson "Master Minsters" defeated Shorty Buckler's Yowell team by a score of 8 to 2. Red Williams of Lake Monroe set out an strange collection of plants which Buckler's Navy boys could not solve, while the Master Minsters, which consisted of Posty Broome, Brooklin, Short and Huff, made their way out at bat after their first half hour of play.

Both teams scored in the first inning. Brumley for Friersons and Kinsey for Yowells. In the fourth inning, Broome's double scoring Griffin and Williams two (Continued on Page Two)

President Truman Has Short Visit With King George

Meeting Is Held At Plymouth On Battle-scarred Renown

By ERNEST R. VACCARO WITH PRESIDENT AUGUSTA, Aug. 3. (AP)—Obviously in high spirits, President Truman started home aboard this famous warship today after concluding the Big Three conference and holding a 20-minute luncheon conference with King George VI of England.

The talk with the British monarch was held aboard H.M.S. Renown off the war-scarred port of Plymouth, England, as the world prepared to receive a communique on the historic Big Three sessions at Potsdam.

The President had flown to England from Potsdam aboard the famous U.S.S. "The Sacred Cow." He landed at Harrower airport about eight miles north of Plymouth.

Accompanied by Secretary of State Byrnes and Admiral Leahy, chief of staff, he drove to the Plymouth area to the cheers of British crowds who spotted the distinguished guests.

Lead by Harry.

The president, God of Harry from a simple conference, seemed to have a much as the more formal occasions after about the battle-scarred Renown.

A light-green barge flying the presidential flag carried the President, Byrnes and Leahy out to the Renown. Truman wore a light blue blazer and checked with red and light grey hair.

As the vessel alongside the Renown, the shell of ship was followed by the Star Spangled Banner played by Royal Marines, and the President stood barge-headed at the top of the ladder until it was hoisted.

The king, who had been waiting at the rail with the Earl of Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, shook hands and departed with the President on the quarterdeck. Later after inspection of the guard of honor, they adjourned to the admiral's quarters for further talk and luncheon. The king then dined in the uniforms of an admiral of the fleet.

It was the first meeting between an American president and a British monarch since President Wilson's visit to the first World War.

Change of Plans

During the flight from London to the Plymouth, the change had been made at the last minute because of weather. The party had arranged to land at St. Margaret's airport about 40 miles from Plymouth. An official welcoming party waited there, but they altered their plans when they advised that weather there was unfavorable.

So the "Sacred Cow" landed at Harrower about four hours after the "A. M. Mowea" king's departure from Berlin and a few minutes later another ship carrying Byrnes came down.

The President had to spend about 40 minutes killing time while the dignitaries hurried over to the Harrower airport. In the meantime he shook hands with three WAAs and others on duty at the airport, posing for a picture with the excited girls.

During the ride from the airport, little knots of people at highway intersections and along city streets waved and cheered.

"Oh, there he is!" screamed a woman in the crowd. At one point a man held up a slate on which he had written in chalk, "Good luck, Mr. President." The procession missed many of the more heavily damaged streets of Plymouth, but the scars of war were visible to the American chief executive.

King's Welcome

King George greeted Truman with outstretched hand and the words, "Welcome to my country." The ceremonies in the blue harbor aboard trim man-of-war had favored both by the Missourian and the British king.

Mrs. Marie Washburn Tells Of Paris Life

Mrs. Marie E. Washburn, stationed as a WAA at the office of language in Paris, and a resident of Sanford, recently wrote Mrs. L. E. Fox of Lake Mary about the big Independence Day celebration of France on July 14.

This was the first time since 1919, she wrote, that France has been allowed to celebrate this holiday. All of the factories and places of business were closed except cafes and places of amusement, and they held a three-day celebration. There was dancing on street corners all day and night, and there were parades with a number of GIs and WAAs with the French Army.

On Sunday a great display of the Allied air corps was staged, including paratroopers and an imitation of the invasion of Normandy. At night there were fireworks. One night services honoring the dead were held, and every night they would go to the tomb of the unknown soldier at the Arc de Triomphe to pay tribute to their lost loved ones.

The weather in France is very hot and oppressive, even though a good breeze blows most of the time, added Mrs. Washburn. The WAAs are still wearing their winter uniforms and drill on the avenues just a few yards from the Arc de Triomphe, and Saturday during inspection draw a large crowd of spectators.

Mrs. Washburn, who was born in France, has contacted her family, she wrote, and spends her days off with her brother and his family. The brother was a German prisoner for four years and his health is not good, but he has stated he does not want pity and does not complain. Mrs. Washburn added that she often thinks of Sanford and of her many friends and acquaintances here.

Germany Is Stripped Of Territory And Is Limited To Farming, Peaceful Industries

(By Associated Press) London diplomatic observers agreed today that the Big Three decision to strip Germany of territory and limit her power to farming and peaceful domestic industries would serve as a guarantee against German aggression for a long time to come.

Special dispatches said it was the expected Potsdam declaration that stripped Germany of her Polish, French and Dutch possessions and limited her power to farming and peaceful domestic industries.

Railroad Achievements

If anyone thinks the American railroads have not made a good record in this war, he will do well to consider their relative achievements and handicaps in comparison with the last war. Here are the figures, as submitted in a current issue of Railway Age:
"During World War I the railroads and Pullman Co. owned passenger-carrying cars as follows: Coaches and combination cars, 33,241; sleeping cars, 8,681; total, 41,922. In 1918, with this amount of equipment, the railroads rendered 43 billion passenger-miles of service, or about 1,000,000 passenger-miles per car. In 1941 the railroads and Pullman Co. owned only 20,329 coaches and combination cars and 7,378 parlor and sleeping cars, total of 27,707, and rendered over 29 billion passenger-miles of service, or about 1,060,000 per car.
"When this country entered the war there were on order 389 passenger-carrying cars and the carriers desired to acquire many more, but the government prevented it. In consequence, in 1944 there were only 20,524 coaches and combination cars and 8,136 parlor and sleeping cars, a total of 28,660. With this amount of equipment the railroads in 1944 rendered a service of almost 96 billion passenger-miles—3,335,000 per car, or about 235 per cent more per car than in 1918 or 1941. The 1945 passenger load is expected to be more than 100 billion passenger-miles—two and a half times the load carried in 1918, and four times the load in 1941; and yet the railroads are expected to carry it with 80 per cent less cars than in 1918 and about the same number as in 1941."
In view of the obvious handicaps, the latest records seem to leave small reason for complaint.

Important Baseball

It looks as though there will be a World Series this year, after all. No less eminent personages than Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and Admiral Nimitz are engaged in seeing to that.

The Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet and the Navy Secretary have asked Commissioner Chandler to send the winning team "of a tour of the Pacific Ocean to play army and navy teams at advance bases." It seems that, in the view point of these men who should know, such a trip would be the best morale booster they can think of. And, inasmuch as you can't have a World Series winner without a series, a series there probably will be.

Secretary Forrestal even has a completely new angle on the business. He is reported to have written to Commissioner Chandler, "It may persuade more Japs to surrender, because the one thing they all want to know is: 'who's leading the leagues?' The idea being, we presume that surrendering Japs would be entitled to one distant glimpse per Jap of real world champions."
A bit of home to travel-weary fighters, and enemy surrender-bait into the bargain. Who says baseball players are not essential to the war effort?

Matter - Of - Fact Folks

Like most of our war heroes, Technical Sergeant Charles E. Kelly of Pittsburgh, "Commando Kelly," is really a simple and forthright man. If he has been unduly expanded and exploited, that isn't his fault. Discharged now from the army with a long string of ribbons and medals, he says: "Commando, hell! From now on they can call me mister."
He furthermore expands his military philosophy to include his buddies, as follows: "Forget the wishy-washy 'Be Kind to Veterans Week' stuff. The time to treat a man decently is when he's in uniform. We're grown-up men, and we can take care of ourselves when we become civilians."
Presumably the great majority of war veterans feel likewise about their military experience and status. There is very little posing among them. They don't strut around and they don't flaunt their uniforms and their honors. In general, all they ask for is to resume their places in civilian life and live up to the principles for which they fought.

Over 150 Attacks Against German Subs Made Off Florida Coasts

MIAMI, Aug. 3, (Special)—American naval and air forces launched 157 attacks against German submarines off the coasts of Florida in 1942 and 1943, hit 12 of them, and probably sank three, Coast Guard headquarters in Miami announced today. The subs sank 24 vessels in Florida waters, from which more than 500 passengers and crewmembers were saved.

The announcement was made on the eve of the Coast Guard's 155th anniversary which occurs on Aug. 4.
The Coast Guard was responsible for 31 of the 157 attacks, and for five of the 12 successful actions. All three of the subs which were credited to Seventh naval district forces as "probably sunk" were attacked and killed by Coast Guard cutters.

The three probable kills were scored in May, June and July of 1942. The first was by the cutter Nike under Lieut. Comdr. George Bynon off Jupiter Light. The second was by the cutter Agulha under Lieut. N. C. McCormick off Key West, and the third was by the cutter Nemesis under Lieut. L. C. Houston Jr., of Tampa, Fla. The Nemesis' kill was off Cayo Francis, Cuba.

The Nemesis' victim was first attacked early in the afternoon of July 6, when the submarine was sighted and bombed by a patrol plane. Results of the attack are unknown, but at 5:30 that afternoon Houston received orders to take the Nemesis into that area. Fighting a schooner, the Nemesis started to go alongside to check its identification when a sound contact was made about 300 yards astern.
"That was all they needed, Forrestal said the schooner, Houston swung off his course into a depth charge run. Five times the Nemesis reversed its course to drive its attacks home. Meanwhile the sub was frantically trying to escape the hail of death which was plummeting down from the Nemesis' decks. After each attack the Nemesis changed their course, darting first in one direction, then another, with the Nemesis doggedly clinging to their tail. But finally the sub escaped. But Houston received a report that the sub had been sighted again,

Women Are Used To Man Airways During Wartime

MIAMI, Aug. 3, (Special)—"Woman's place is in the home," the oft-quoted and antiquated assumption, is an idea which has lost its meaning, perhaps permanently, during the last four years of all-out effort on the home front to win the final victory for the democratic way of life.

Pan American World Airways, like many another essential industry beleaguered by shortages of manpower, called on women to move into its shops and offices and training schools in vast numbers.

The day after Pearl Harbor, women began applying at Pan American World Airways offices all over the system, and within a week as free nations hastily mobilized for total war, women were replacing men at vital desk jobs and donning coveralls to work in the maintenance shops which keep PAA's Clippers flying.

The PAA Pacific-Alaska Division operated its planes under contract to the Naval Air Transport Service while the Atlantic Division's 74-passenger, Clippers flew military and diplomatic mail, cargo and personnel exclusively. PAA's oldest and largest division, the Latin American, continued its commercial operations over a 50,000 mile network in the 37 countries and colonies of the Americas. The Africa-Orient Division was set up in Miami under contract to the Army Air Transport Command, flying the famed Cannonball route to Karachi, India, where personnel and vital war material were transferred to the critical China-Burma-India theatre.

In all these divisions, women workers played an ever-increasing role. They worked in drafting rooms, in control towers and as aircraft dispatchers. They learned to overhaul delicate flight instruments, to assist meteorologists, to act as instructors on ground training devices for pilots and navigators, such as the Link trainer and the automatic direction-finder.
They held down jobs in traffic clearance and operations, learning all the complex factors which make up the vast PAA network. Women chemists worked in the fuel testing laboratories; women learned to weld, to rivet, to tear down engines, to overhaul rubber lift-rafts and cover rudders, all sorts and other control surfaces of aircraft with fabric.

Pan American had always thought its longhaul, overwater routes too difficult to use women stewards; but as more and more stewards enlisted, girls took their places. A PAA stewardess, unlike those on domestic airlines, must act as pursuer, handling international travel documents for passengers, crew and the aircraft. She is responsible for mail, baggage and express carried in the Clipper.

One proud girl worker earned a certified Civil Aeronautics Administration control tower operator's license. Another was the only woman in the southeastern United States to hold a CAA aircraft mechanic's license.

To Winston Churchill
(From The Sunday Times of London)
When half the world was dead and mute
You told of wrath to come
When others flinched on the drum
You thundered on the drum.

When fierce the fires of slaughter burned
And Earth's hopes were few
Those who had mocked your warning turned
Almost too late to you.

You promised only what you gave
As refuge from the blood
You knew what only you could save
Through sweat and tears and blood.

Your words upheld our courage yet,
Through five remorseless years,
You gave us glory in the sweat
And fight-nerve through the tears.

The storm blew by—the light broke through—
The World reclaimed its form.
Then all our hearts went out to you—
The man who rode the storm.

In England's cloud swept history
Never so great a debt
Was owed by all to one—and we—
God grant—will not forget.

When half the world was dead and mute
You told of wrath to come
When others flinched on the drum
You thundered on the drum.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 3. McCall, local chairman of the clothing drive, who received the report, made it public today. The report included a statement by President Truman that the local clothing collection committees throughout America "have rendered a service to world peace." President Truman added: "My meeting and exceeding their goal of 150,000,000 pounds of clothing the American people sized to them by Franklin D. Roosevelt in a cause that was close to his heart. It is good to know that the clothing is now on its way overseas to relieve the suffering war victims in Europe and the Far East." Over 11,000 Vets Placed In Jobs In Florida This Year

Figures on veterans placement and training under the G. I. Bill of Rights in Florida were given out today by Boyce A. Williams, state director of the War Manpower Commission. Mr. Williams stated that the USES in Florida had placed during the first six months of this year 11,589 veterans of World War II, an increase of 3,000 over a like period in 1944. This showing by the United States Employment Service, Mr. Williams said, "reflects credit on local managers and members of the staff." As the number of returning veterans increases, tax on the service, he said, "will increase proportionately." According to Mr. Williams, the Employment Service is being geared to handle the rapidly increasing load by careful assignment of personnel in the Veterans Placement Service according to approved pattern and the best practice in other states.

Mr. Williams stated that the "record shows that many of the returned veterans are selecting some form of training under the G. I. Bill. Many are being placed with industry on-the-job training program, while many others are entering college, professional or technical schools for refresher courses or with the idea of completing a college course. This important assignment especially to the younger men whose education was interrupted by reason of their having been inducted into the Service."

Apprentice training likewise appeals to younger men who desire to become skilled in a trade. Apprenticeship training covers a period of years, usually four years or 4,000 hours with 144 hours in related classroom study. Continuing Mr. Williams stated that those who select training on-the-job receive a subsistence from the government $50 per month if single and $75 per month if married. Veterans with dependents "These amounts are in addition to wages paid the veteran which must not be less than those paid to other workers in the establishment. His grade is added to his subsistence in the amount named. Eighty and 75 veterans attending college, university or technical school will have their tuition paid, laboratory and other fees, together with the cost of text books, the total not to exceed $500 for the school year."

It is believed, according to Mr. Williams, that Florida as well in advance of other states in the Region in progress made under the education and training program provided for veterans in the G. I. Bill. He stated that 2,042 veterans have been developed as returned and several hundred veterans placed in training. The establishments approved represent practically every type of industry.

Returning Soldiers Want Home News

Camp Blanding, Aug. 3 (Specials) Subscriptions for local daily newspapers throughout the state of Florida, to be delivered for use by men being processed for Army discharge at Camp Blanding's Separation Center, would be purchased by local civic groups under a Red Cross sponsored program. A. J. Kassay, state secretary of the Southeastern Chapter of the American Legion, announced today.

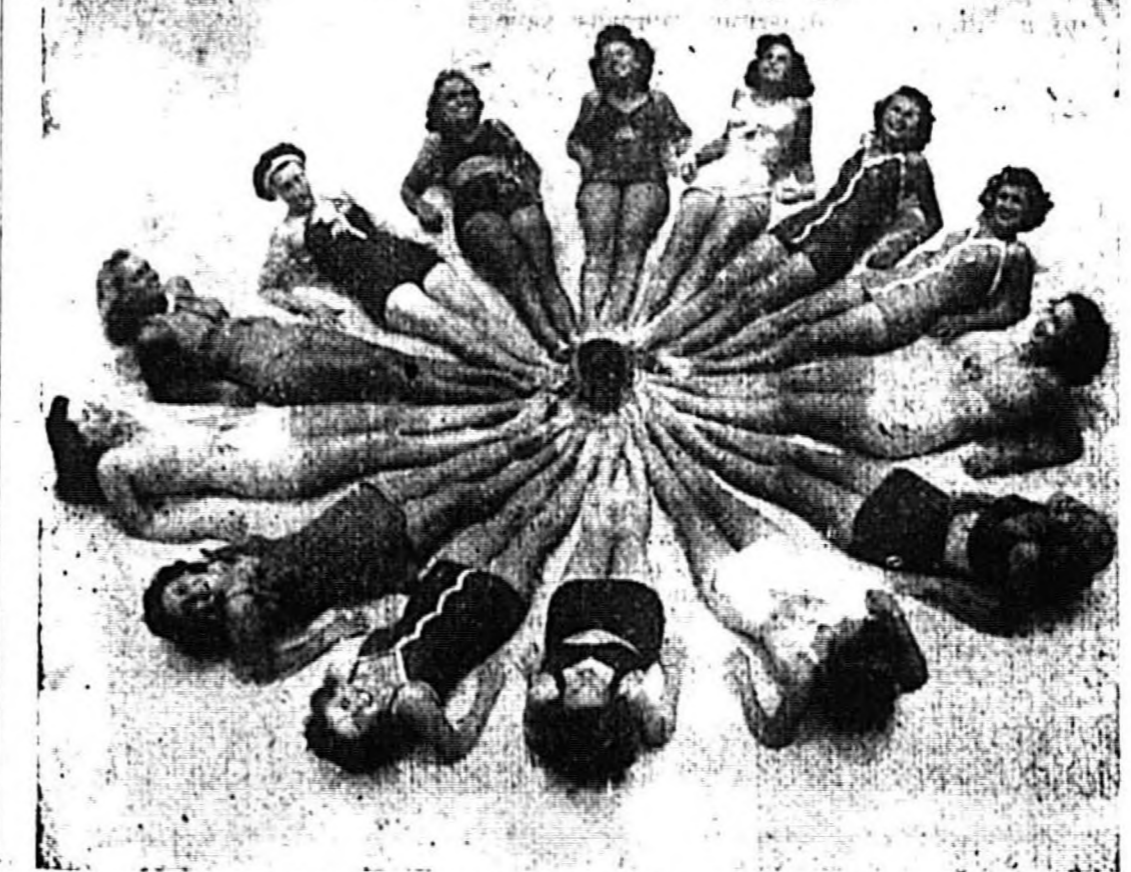

"Seeing the local newspaper the first big thrill of homecoming for many of the returned overseas veterans," Mr. Kassay said. "We would like to apply the campaign to local dailies and weeklies but the tremendous number of weekly papers would lead to such a large pile in Separation Center dormitories that the men would have trouble getting at them." Under the program envisioned by the Red Cross here, the various Camp and Hospital Commands are presenting groups of approximately a dozen newspapers would contact local chapters. The local Red Cross chapters would in turn offer the subscription plan as a project for local civic groups.

"It will be one step toward orienting the returned soldier to home, when he gets an advance peek at the home town newspaper," Mr. Kassay pointed out. "We know that the men go through the Separation Center for over 24 hours, but during late-evening hours, and during any delay for last-minute medical service, men will appreciate a preview of that precious link with home, the home-town paper."

crisis, which in other countries might have brought about big upheavals, has left the average Belgian calm. The traditional liberal and socialist parties retain the upper hand. A swing toward the right may develop in the next election but the Belgians are wary in this respect. The French and British are the right wing with the powerful enough to maintain the balance. The resistance movements have proved very durable and it is years that they will carry the weight of the nation in France.
