fatigue have found 46 dead in the flood-ravaged city of Johnstown, Pa. Dozens are missing, and damage is put at more than $200 million. Here is an account of how two families survived the disaster:

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) - When the rains began, Richard Stantz was drinking Black Velvet and Mountain Dew with the boys.

His fiance, Rita Jo Searle, had been swimming at Ideal Park with her three young sons and her mother. Richard's brother, Ray, was minding their three children, while his wife, Deborah, played bingo at the Knights of Columbus - recreation on her day off from the maid's job at the Enterprise Motel.

The two Stantz families lived in separate apartments, two buildings apart, in the Solomon Homes project, along Solomon Run Creek in Johnstown. Rita got home at 10:30 and put the kids to bed. Rich ar-

"It was already pouring rain so bad I felt like a fish," he Deborah, meanwhile, stopped off at a bar. As she prepared to leave, water already was coursing through the street, carbumper high. At 12:45 a.m. her girl friend Marian phoned to say if she was going home, now was the While Richard and Rita watched television the power went off. Their clock stopped at 11:52. Rita switched her radio to battery power.

Deborah arrived home at 1:30 to an apartment lit only with candles. They invited Marian, who had no candles, to come over with her five children. Lightning stabbed at the darkened city.

"Marian looked out the window and said, 'Oh, my God, the bridge over Solomon Run just washed away," said Deborah. The lawn outside their apartment building, three feet above sidewalk level, was under water. By now the radio station was warning motorists to stay off roads. But nothing more. Then the saga of Solomon Run began.

"I said, 'My God, look at the cars floating down Solomon Street. There are people screaming for help," Richard recalled. "They were going so swift, no one could help Rita: "I was stunned, it was too unbelievable to know water was deep enough to carry cars."

By 12:30, cars were tumbling down Solomon Street, a Through the lightning flashes, Rita saw half of the office building that serves the housing project being washed away. On nearby Widman street, she could see a fire truck

About that time, Ray and Deborah joined neighbors outside to see what help they could give.

They woke an elderly woman in a first-floor apartment and Ray carried her to a higher building. Across Solomon Street, water swept away a house. A father and son went with it.

"We couldn't get across the street," Ray said "Boulders were rolling down the river and Solomon Street. The water was washing telephone poles and trees down. After one boulder the size of a house came down, half the highway collapsed."

Pennsylvania Route 56 is beside Solomon Run, curving past the housing development.

"When the highway collapsed, the water changed course and started washing other buildings out," Ray said. "It began coursing between the buildings, smashing cars against them. Some of the foundations began collapsing." All the while there was continuous rain and unearthly

At 2:30 a.m. Deborah heard people shouting for help in the Glenn Graham house across Solomon Street. The occupants were on the second floor, because the ground level was under water.

"We made several attempts to help them," Ray said. shaking his head at the memory. Somehow the six members of the family made it 10 feet across the roof to Margie's Bar, next door. Minutes later the house washed

The people in the bar then put a ladder to the roof of the Mack bungalow on the other side, Ray said. Just as Mack and his wife got down, their home was swept off.

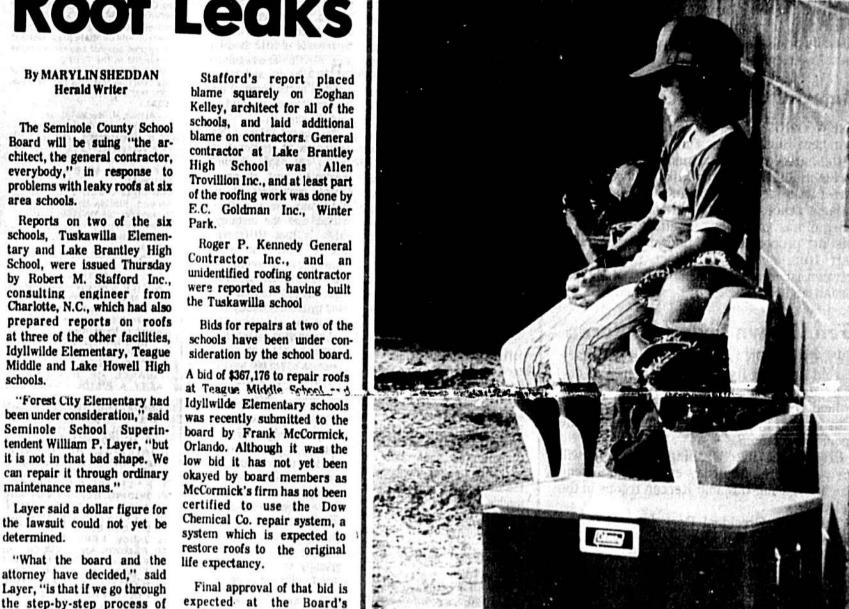

At 4:30 a.m. Ray and his wife were in another building. "I had a flashlight and saw something moving," he said. He reached down and pulled two women and a baby from waist deep water, miraculously alive.

Over the rain and the thunder they heard gunshots from the nearby MA Lounge, a tavern that seats about 50 "They were trying to signal for help," Ray said.

"People couldn't get to them. I don't know how many died Richard and Rita, meanwhile, stayed in their apartment on higher ground.

With the first light of day, they walked outside. "It was a lot worse at daybreak," Richard said, "because you could look out and see the lines hanging from light poies, the busted cars, the crashed buildings, the ripped off pavement with gas pipes on top.

White House: U.S. Steel

Price Hike Undercuts Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration, disappointed over U.S. Steel Corp.'s decision to raise steel prices, says the move may undercut the administration's antiinflation program. Charles L. Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, complained that the steel industry has raised its prices recently much faster than the other American industries.

Mideast Outlook Cloudy

NEW YORK (AP) - Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin seems almost overwhelmed by the harmony he has found with President Carter in his Washington talks. But although Carter has accepted Begin's blueprint for Mideast peace talks, the outlook is cloudy. Begin has proposed, in effect, to shelve existing proposals for Mideast peace, and start from scratch in direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab states of Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

Egypt, Libya Swap Charges

CAIRO (AP) - Egypt and Libya accused each other of provoking an air and armor battle Thursday on their border in the North African desert. Cairo said Libyan forces had invaded Egypt from the west and were repelled. The Libyans said Egyptian troops had attacked a Libyan village, killing women and children. The Egyptians said they destroyed 40 tanks and two Libyan warplanes. Libya made no report on losses.

Woman Minister Ousted

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) - In a stunning election landslide, the opposition United National party today ousted Prime Minister Sirimavo Bandaranaike, the world's only woman chief of government. The vote, continuing a Sri Lankan tradition of unseating incumbents, made 70-year-old opposition chief Junius Richard Jayewardene the new leader of this island nation south of India.

MOTICE OF INTENTION TO FLORIDA

Loudd Back In Prison

After Bail Bid Denied

ORLANDO (AP) - Rommie Loudd was back in prison today following a judge's denial of a request for bail while the former pro football player-executive awaits an appeal Circuit Judge W. Rogers Turner ruled

Thursday that a 1976 state law prevented Loudd's freedom pending appeal of his 14-year sentence imposed in 1975 for a drug conviction. Turner said the law states that a prisoner cannot be granted a bail bond if he committed another crime prior to the one for which he was jailed in Florida. Loudd is also serving a two-year federal sentence for a similar conviction in Boston. "This court is totally without any discretion as to whether bail should be granted or not," the judge said.

Spy Suspects May Get Bond

MIAMI (AP) - Two men accused of " ding Soviet bloc spies who wanted information on the top-secret U.S. cruise missile may have bond set for them today at a U.S. magistrate's hearing, an FBI spokesman says.

If the two have not retained attorneys by the time of the hearing, counsel also may be appointed, the spokesman said late Thursday. The two, Carl Weischenberg, 33, of West Germany, and Carl John Heiser, 32, of Highland Beach, Fla., were ordered held without bond after their arrest Wednesday. "It is most unusual," U.S. magistrate Peter Palermo said then of the Justice Department's request that the two be held without bond. "I can't remember my granting anything like that before."

Profs May Picket Regents

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - Professors are talking about putting aside their treatises and picking up picket signs in the latest round of their dispute with the Board of Regents over pay raises.

Ken Megill, president of the United Faculty of Florida, said union members would demonstrate during today's Regents meeting to reinforce demands for full funding of the pay raises negotiated by the board.

But Regents Chairman Marshall Criser said the issue was settled by the legislature, which appropriated some $2.25 million less for pay raises than the $10.5 million agreed on by union and Regents officials

Longwood Fire Chief: More Blazes, Please

Maybe communities around the nation have more local fires than they need, but that doesn't seem to be the case in Longwood. Not, at least, according to Fire Chief Charlie Chapman, who says his department needs more fires to fight.

Councilmen instructed Chapman to include the costs of such a structure in his proposed budget for a determination. Chapman also wants a new fire truck And, he wasn't kidding, and color TV for the department.

Chapman asked city One councilman asked the chief: "What would council Thursday night for funds to construct a two or your choice be between a three-story, single room color television, a new fire truck, or the practice concrete building so his men can practice fire The chief said he'd take fighting and rescue techniques on a regular the practice building.

The firemen need the building, the chief said, "because we don't have enough fires, and my men don't get out enough," indicating Longwood firefighters may be getting stale from inactivity. Chapman made his comments during a city

The Poor Saga Of Broken Hill

One of the funny legends that today's anticapitalists promulgate is that old horror about the "company town." You know: dirty faced workers are permitted only three or four hours of each day away from the sweat shops and mines; the company controls all land, all credit, every decision governing community life. Some union ideologues still manage to make the image stick, even though company towns have been virtually out of the picture for the better part of the century.

Now comes a story from down under of how a union goes about controlling human behavior in Broken Hill, a prosperous mining town in New South Wales. Described in a dispatch by the Manchester Guardian's Sydney correspondent Ronald Kaye, the story is enough to make civil libertarians gnash their teeth.

A motor pool foreman, Mr. Noel Latham, reported to his superiors the failure of a mechanic to clean the radiator of a bulldozer as ordered. That is what foremen are supposed to do ore would mink, but not in Broken Hill, which trade unions have controlled with immunity from Canberra and Sydney for the past 60 years.

"In doing so," writes Kayes, "he violated the most important commandment of Broken Hill: thou salt not harm worker solidarity. His action was eventually brought to the attention of Broken Hill's 'government,' the Barrier Industrial Council, the coordinating body of the unions which operate

In Broken Hill, union membership is mandatory, so the Council's power is best described as arrant absolution.

For 90 minutes Mr. Latham defended his action before the hostile council. No, he was not an enemy of the community. No, he did not mean to undermine the authority of the union . And so on. He had meant merely to correct an instance of shop insubordination, which, funnily enough, he had imagined was his duty. His defense availed naught. He was fined 32 pounds.

But that was not the end of it. He appealed against the verdict a month later, declaring he would not pay the fine if it was upheld. He was in no serious jeopardy until Badge Day - the company. er, union town's most important calender event. Badge Day comes four times a year when quarterly union dues are paid and barrier Industrial Council inspectors check each resident for a union

Because Mr. Latham had failed to pay a fine he was no longer entitled - if that's the proper word - to pay his union dues and collect his badge. Badgeless, as you might imagine, is a Bad Thing in

In fact, Noel Latham became the premier pariah in town. When he went to his job at the motor pool, other city workers walked off the job. Continues Kaye: "In the nine days that followed, garbage piled up in the streets and the city came to a halt. Services provided by union members to Mr. Latham were cut off, which meant all services. No one could sell him beer or food or petrol.

"No one would deliver to his home, hardly anyone would even talk to him. As a man of independent principles, Mr. Latham refused several offers to pay his fine, which by now had grown to 320 pounds because of the nine days he worked during the walkout. The union council in turn refused to accept payment from anybody except Mr. Latham."

The upshot is that Noel Latham finally took a leave and the mayor and city council members resigned " in a mixture of protest and nelplessness." But the man who couldn't get his mail or milk delivered has promised to return to carry on his fight with the union town.

Anybody still want to buy the blarney about unions being our saviors from the company town?

Seminole County budget director Pat Glisson was smiling last Friday afternoon, more from a sense of resigned futility than anything else. That was the day he hoped to have the county's proposed budget printed and ready for distribution to the Putting together a budget is a more difficult process than most people realize. preoccupation of this one-industry town, has finally met its comeuppance. As a topic of conversation, nothing can compete with the weather in this sweltering summer of '77.

Even in a good year, the Washington summer should be avoided if at all possible. And this is not a good year. Eng weeks up end, the mercury has been mired in the 90-to-100 degree range. The humidity seems permanently stuck in the uffocating 60s.

It is too hot for picnics. It is too hot for gardening. It is too hot for shopping, sightseeing or simple strolls around the block. It is definitely too hot for thinking.

Congress, with its impeccable instinct for self-preservation, is already plotting a monthlong escape to cooler climes in August. Its members cleverly fled the worst of the heat wave during their 10-day Fourth of July recess. The rest of us are stuck, cursing and sweating, wishing the entire government would just go away and leave us to our misery.

President Carter continues to carp about the energy crisis, prodding Congress to approve his program. Ordinary mortals couldn't care less. The real question is whether the air conditioning will conk out.

The fate of the farm bill may fascinate folks in Kansas, but inhabitants of the nation's capital are fretting about the sad state of our our backyard tomato plants.

A growing number of sportsmen are concerned with the inland coastal fishing. It appears that many of the saltwater species that were once plentiful have suffered a tremendous decline over the last several years.

Inland Coastal Problem At Hand

Outdoors

By HERKY HUFFMAN

Human nature dictates that we place the blame on something or someone. There are those who would point an accusing finger at commercial fishing interests. Or those who would blame pollution, along with man's ability to change natural surroundings in a short span of time.

There is no question that as the population has grown and with the affluence of the average family with ability to purchase more and more seafood, we have placed tremendous demands on the source. In a nation based on free enterprise the name of the game is if there's a demand someone will supply.

The big question in my mind is when do we hit a point of over harvest and move into a situation of diminishing return? Also as in any facet of business we have the outlaw element to contend with. Individuals who care not where, when or how they harvest

But probably the main problem that confronts the fisheries is park and Sanford's hope for an pollution and physical damage to the estuary which is the cradle early victory ended. of the largest percentage of game and edible fish. According to a The homer was the fourth symposium conducted by P.A. Douglass in 1971"...well over half against Von Herbulis in the of the marine fisheries resources of the Continental Shelf adjacent game. He allowed only three to the U.S. Land mass is fully dependent upon estuaries as other hits. spawning and-or nursery areas."

The estuarine-tidal marsh system is not unlike a natural factory with the end product being stocks of fish and shellfish in the readily accessible, shallow nearshore waters. Brackish backwaters of the estuary receive and hold minerals from the upland. Plants and grasses store nutrients in one season and release them strikeouts in the first three by death and decay in the next.

Then through an intricate system of events including phytoplankton, filter feeding mollusks and crustaceans a food chain is created that ends with the large fish which seek shelter in the estuary.

This is a very basic description of the estuary, and I'm sure if a marine biologist were to evaluate my attempt at describing same on a scale of one to ten I'd get a zero.

In a natural estuarine environment, free of encroaching dense human populations, fresh water input is normally moderated by runoff across marshes, mangroves, and uplands; thus rainfall is delivered to the estuary over a period of days to months. Though the estuary is a rigorous habitat, requiring highly specialized adaptations to wide variations in salinity and temperature, overall it is a system of relatively moderate and gradual change which encourages a "steady state of productivity." If. however, one end of the system (fresh water input), is depressed permanently or for extended intervals, the entire system becomes unbalanced. Changes resulting from this imbalance may be subtle and slow to appear, but eventually saltier water intrudes farther into the estuary and shoreline vegetation is altered or destroyed. Then emerges an awareness that certain species are no longer readily available. By the time that realization dawns, it may be too late to save this valuable resource and rich habitat, or it may cost us dearly to do so. While we're on the subject of pollution, the friends of the St.

'Prisoner' Plans Escape

After 7 Weeks In Hospital

Toni Workman may never have been in jail, but she certainly knows what it feels like to be a prisoner. She's not behind bars, but the ropes and wires and pulleys that keep her confined to her hospital bed are just as restricting. And like any other prisoner, she spends most of her time planning for the day she can escape; the day she is finally free again to go home.

"I've got just one thought on my mind," says the young woman."The day I get out of here. I can't wait." That is no reflection on the care she is getting at Seminole Memorial Hospital, she adds hastily. "Everyone has been wonderful. The nurses, the personnel, even the ambulance drivers come up to see me."

It's just that Toni has been in the same hospital room for seven weeks now. She misses her five-year-old son, Mike. She is anxious to get on with the business of making a new life for herself in Florida (she recently moved here from Ohio). And most of all, she wants to be on her feet again and walking around.

To be able to walk again. That single thought has haunted Toni every day of the seven weeks she has been in the hospital. "At times I've been so depressed I didn't care if I got out of here or not," admitted Toni. "But now I'm determined I'm going to walk out of here. No wheelchair for me. I'll walk out." With her world shrunk to the size of half a hospital room, and her normally active young body immobilized Toni has been doing a lot of thinking. And her overriding thought, despite the pain and discomfort and tedium, has been "I'm just glad to be alive."

Toni Workman came pretty close to death in the automobile accident in which put her in the hospital the day before Memorial

"It was just before the Osteen bridge. We were coming back from New Smyrna Beach at about five in the morning. We'd been fishing all night," she recalled. "I guess the driver fell asleep at the wheel. The car left the road and hit a palm tree. I can remember the guy who was in the back with me shouting. When I woke up, I was lying on the ground about 20 feet from the car and I knew I was hurt bad." It seems the force of the impact had thrown Toni from the back seat through the front passenger window, knees first. Her right leg and hip were broken, her left leg smashed at the knee and both her arms were broken. Her eyes were blackened, and she was cut

"I felt I had to keep my eyes open. I had to keep looking up or I'd die. I knew I'd die if I let go for a moment," said Toni. "And I kept talking the whole time. My girlfriend was lying not far from me, and we just kept talking until the ambulance came about 45 minutes later." The two men in the car were not seriously injured, and were able to get a ride to a telephone and call the ambulance. It took 15 hours of surgery - three sessions in all - to set or rebuild all her broken bones. "The doctor says I'll be out in another two to three weeks, but I say it'll be sooner," says Toni with new-found cheerful deter-

"I've been here two months now, and I don't even know what this hospital looks like," she complained. Her mother, Mrs. Delbert (Clara) Gamble rushed to Sanford from Ohio when she learned of the accident, and has been at her daughter's bedside throughout her long ordeal. "Mom found this post card in the gift shop with a picture of the hospital. That

What else does she do through the interminably long days to stop going crazy from frustration, boredom and anxiety? "There's nothing much I can do," said Toni. "I can't sew. can't hold a book to read. So I just do my exercises and thini about the day I go home." Her exercises are simple calesthenics which are supervised by the hospital's physical therapy department. "The doctor really scared me one day. He got down on his knees and crawled around the room, and said that's how I'd be walking the rest of my life it I didn't do the exercises," said Toni. It takes a tremendous mental effort to psych herself up to make the smallest movements, because of the pain. "But then I just think about that doctor down on the floor, and I know I don't want

Toni admits she still has a few low moments when she worries that the movement will never be restored to her right arm - she can still barely move her fingertips. "And I still fear I'll walk funny, maybe with a limp. Everytime the doctor comes in he has to reassure me that everything is going to be okay."

But more and more, as her body mends, the low moments are giving way to high spirits. The end is in sight. She's almost sad at the thought of the friends she will be leaving behind-the nurses, and the six roommates who have befriended her during their much shorter hospital stays.

She's almost sad - but not quite!

Answer: By letting your will decide that you are going to be happy rather than giving in to your feelings. By relating to God, just as quickly as possible. My favorite way is to begin each morning by saying, "Hello, God." And then by feeding your spirit with the Word of God, which is quick and powerful and stands

Say you wake up feeling depressed. Nourish your spirit by saying — "This is the day which the Lord has made; I will rejoice and be glad in it." (Psalms 11:24) - then this helps overcome your feeling. If you feel you just can't get out of bed, say, "The joy of the Lord is my strength" (Nehemiah 8:10). When you are iscouraged, remind yourself that God says, "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you" (Psalms 50:15). I like to speak the promises of God aloud, because saying plus hearing equals twice as much strength for my spirit and my faith.

You can build up your inner man by telling God, "I believe your Word. I know I can count on you forever. I trust you more than? trust myself or any other person. Missionary Alliance Pouring Back The Ocean

I once met a man with a magnificent philosophy of life. He believed very simply that life should be concentrated on trying to give back what we gain. Our problem seems to be that so much of our time and effort has to be devoted to gaining, that we have little incentive for returning what we work so

When my daughter poured a bucket of water back into the ocean I began thinking about our churches. They seem to preach my friend's philosophy. As a matter of fact, that's where he learned it . . . From God!

MELLONVILLE

Those working folks looking forward to an easy, sunny weekend had a rude, wet awakening Saturday as torrents of rain fell on Seminole County - including on Mellonville Avenue, Sanford, where this lone motorist tried to rough it through. It was even rougher for 2,000 customers of Florida Power Co. in south Seminole as lightning caused outages for a few hours in several communities, including Longwood, Oviedo and Forest City. Some traffic signals also were affected.

By JANE CASSELBERRY Herald Staff Writer

To provide an adequate blood supply required for surgery, emergencies and treating illnesses, blood of every group and type must be available at all times, recruiter at the Seminole County Blood Bank. There were 1,622 pints transfused last year at Seminole Memorial. Donors often respond to appeals when there is a special need or emergency, but blood banks depend much more on the donors who are willing to give to meet day-to-day blood needs on a regular basis.

No substitute for blood has ever been developed. The only source is still the human body. As long as blood cannot manufactured, to assure an adequate supply blood banks must rely on people willing to share this vital gift to save a life, blood bank officers explain. At the nine branches of the Central Florida Blood Bank enough blood was given by 25,000 donors during 1976 to make possible a total of 50,000 blood transfusions. At the two Seminole branches there were a total of 2,595 donors last year.

Mrs. Linda Osburn, R.N., supervisor of the Seminole County Blood Bank, says the number of donors here averages 190 a

A one pint donation is less than 10 per cent of the body's blood supply and the red cells will be replaced in about two to three weeks. While it is true blood must be used within 21 days of the time given, newer technological methods enable blood banks to preserve components of the blood for a longer time. In the laboratory, blood can be divided into at least four parts and each can be used to treat a patient's specific deficiency. The red cell portion of the blood can be See DRY, Page 3A
