the program should be broadened
to include recent recommendations by President Truman:

Briefly, the bill authorizes the use of $380.000,000 in federal funds, plus $5,000,000 for immediate surveys of hospital needs, and $75,000,000 each year for the next five years for resonable one. States, counties, communities and non-profit hospitals would have to match this amount. The sum actually would be a little less, amounting to an estimated $320,000,000 at a rate of $64,000,066 annually.

amount. The sum actually would be a little less, amounting to an estimated $320,000,000 annually.

A complication appears in sharing the federal funds fairly. Because some states are rich and others poor, a complicated formular is used to determine what shares should be meted out from Uncle Sam's coffers. Here's an example: the government would contribute only 33 and one-half percent in Connecticut. Nevads. California and New York. The week for the remaining states, their share would range between these two extremes. In all cases, federal assistance is determined on the basis of the state's percapita income and population.

Senator Hill fathered the bill through the Senate, and said the measure has the endorsement of the American Medical Association and numerous hosnital groups. The Alabama legislator is pround of the legislation, and elected it commanded more nearly universal support than any bill he had known in a long time. In fact, he said, in the long course of preliminary hearings, not one voice was raised in opposition to the measure's objectives, Of course, if the bill becomes law, Hawail and Alaska will benefit by its provisions also.

Under the bill, Florida would receive $1.697.000 weavis in fed-weavis $1.697.000 we under the bill, Florida would receive $1,687,000 yearly in federal aid for hospital construction between 1947 and 1951.

HEALTH INSURANCE
NEV YORK, Dec. 12, (A)— President Truman's compulsory health insurance proposal has inceived a boost from Surgeon General Thomas Parran. In an address before the United States conference of mayors in New profession for its negative attitude toward the problem. If an effective plan is to be worked out, Parran said, the medical profession should come forward with slutions, not fejections The American Medical Association has been strongly critical of the

"Well, do you just sit there, or are going to ask questions" "I-hah-didn't want to interfere with any important shop talk," I stammered, turning on a guile-less grin.

I had been thinking; I'll just sit here unobtrusively and see what comedians' conversation is like during an ordinary, work-day buncheon. Start the quips, gentlemen. Their spokesman had promised "a gag with every walp." It ought to be a rare experience, I had decided. Well, it was medium rare anyway.

There was loud cross-talk about newspapers, politics, strikes, football. Harpo went to a telephone and called somebody about a coming game. "He's giving ten to one," cried the wool-headed screen screwball who never talks in pictures.

"I suppose everybody calls you Handshaker and thinks he's being very funny," Groucho said. I nodded.

"It's the same way with us," he sympathized, "They say, 'Well, you fellows certainly have made your Marx in life. Ha! Ha!" "

Pleasures Ahead

"Deglamorizing" schools for brides of GI husbands have been set up in several parts of England to undo the false impressions of America left in the English women's minds by Hollywood films. This is told by a recently returned worker of the American Red Cross who was in charge of setting up such schools.

In all fairness to the American movie industry, the Red Cross man added that home of the most fantastic ideas had been planted by the American soldiers themselves. In fact, he said, it was hard to tell which had spun the more fanciful tales about this country, the movies or the men. The schools taught rudiments of United States geography and history, and attempted to show how to live on $35 or $40 a week, a sum that in America would command less purchasing power than a like amount in-England. There are about 50,000 brides eager to come to this country, and most of them will have to wait until next spring or summer for Perhaps it's all right to take out the romance so brutally and factually. But it is to be hoped something went into the teaching to make this country still seem attractive and worth the long wait. Something like how to make good American coffee, for instance. If the brides once mastered the formula and then drank some of the results, this alone ought to be bait enough to make them want to sail westward-that is if they had ever tasted the English variety.

there could have been such a bold and ruthless rascal at

and probably dramas of his life enacted, down to remote

Hanging, which is his fate is too good for him, but his captors and judges are too civilized to torture such a villain to death as he and his followers did with so many other stuff of grief.

How shall I use it? Shall I build it is enough, perhaps merely to judge and hang him in due form, and preserve his evil memory as extra special evidence that crime and cruelty do not pay.

Presence Of Jap Planes Overt Act

Marshall Testifies U. S. Justified In Bombing Them When InU.S. Waters

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13, (AP)—General Marshall to day expressed belief that the country would have backed the air force had it bombed any Japanese ships appearing in Hawaiian waters before the war began. The former Chief of Staff declared that the presence of Japanese ships in our waters, as well as a flight of their planes overhead, would have constituted an overt act. And he added we would have been justified in bombing them.

The subject came up when Republican Representative Frank Keefe of Wisconsin noted that Marshall's warning of Nov. 27, 1941, expressly told the Hawaiian commander that the United states wanted Japan to commit the first overt act. Murshall said again that those instructions were sent to Lieut. General Walter Short by President Roosevelt's order. Marshall explained that any sudden unannounced appearance of Japanese vessels or planes could be considered an overt act and that the country would have supported an attack on them.
