It's not an earthquake, but close

SANFORD — U.S. Navy bombing tests in Ocala National Forest are rattling windows in west Seminole County, more than 20 miles away. Local residents west of Interstate 4 reported feeling the precussions this week. Sgt. Leroy Oliver of the Lake County Sheriff's Office said the tests out of Cecil Field will be conducted throughout the week. The aircraft are dropping 500-lb. bombs which can be felt miles away, Oliver said. "They're dropping that heavy stuff," said Oliver.

Deputies seek suspect

Investigators from the Seminole County Sheriff's office Violent Crimes Section are looking for a suspect in the robbery of two men outside the Tuscaawilla Chiropractic Center last night. Sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said a black male armed with a small chrome handgun confronted the men as they were leaving the center about 7:15 p.m. Monday. He reportedly pointed the gun at them and demanded money. One of the victims was robbed of his Rolex watch, worth an estimated $13,000. The other gave up an undetermined amount of cash. Neither man was hurt. The suspect is described as approximately 19 years of age, five feet eight inches tall, 150 pounds with brown hair and a skinny build. He was reportedly wearing blue shorts, a dark T-shirt and a dark cap.

Elderly lady attacked

Sanford cops have some leads in midday robbery

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — It's a fairly quiet neighborhood in north Sanford, but crime has been on the rise there, according to police Commander Dennis Whitmire.

Still, an elderly couple who has lived in the same house in the 1200 block of Fourth Street for 20 years was not prepared for the violent attack that occurred in their home on Monday afternoon. It was the middle of the day, a little after 1 p.m., and the front door was unlocked. When the 75-year-old woman went to the door to respond to requests from an unidentified man about borrowing some lawn equipment, he opened the door and entered the house. Police said he grabbed her and dragged her down the hall to a bedroom.

When she made an effort to pull away, Whitmire said, the suspect punched her in the face and forced her to open an unlocked safe in the bedroom. He quickly escaped with the contents of the safe and left the home on a white bicycle. According to Whitmire, there wasn't much in the safe. See Attack, Page 5A

Road signs may be standardized throughout county

By NICK PFENPAUF

SANFORD — The Council of Local Governments at its next meeting will discuss overhauling sign regulations throughout each city in the county.

The March 2nd meeting will be held at Sanford City Hall.

Last Thursday, proposed sign regulations for U.S. Highway 17-92 were brought up for consideration at the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission meeting. They were initiated by the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce's Highway 17-92 Task Force, which had recently completed developing uniform sign regulations for that roadway.

Garbage plan may be scrapped, for now

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — With the prospect of even higher garbage rates under a mandatory collection program, county staffers recommend commissioners scrap their present cost-reduction efforts and wait until present contracts expire next year and start all over again. Following a series of negotiations last month, county officials report rates would rise for most residents under a countywide mandatory collection program which includes yard waste collections. The present voluntary system includes a "bag tag" fee. Haulers are also seeking a four-year extension on their contracts. "This will not fly," said commissioner Daryl McLain, who leads the rate-reduction effort. "If the haulers expect us to extend their contracts and do not come forward with a substantial reduction, we will rebid the contracts next year." McLain said he will ask commissioners to support the proposal tomorrow in a special worksession. McLain said he will recommend mandatory collection during the interim until contracts expire. In December, commissioners directed staffers to see if the county's four haulers would offer lower rates and yard waste collection. See Garbage, Page 5A

Longwood OKs new fire pumper trucks

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — City commissioners decided to buy two new pumper trucks for the fire department rather than buy one new one then spend $117,000 to refurbish an old one as they originally planned.

The commissioners agreed buying a new truck for about $130,000 was a better idea for the city than spending almost as much for the redo. The city may be able to sell the old equipment as surplus for about $40,000. After selling the two old pumpers, the new pumpers would end up costing about $220,000 financed over five years at 4.5 percent interest.

The commissioners also decided to mandate two businesses to hook on to the city sewer system within 180 days. Al Land Jr., of Land Engineering Company on County Road 427 and Nelson Davis, who also has a business in the Longwood Industrial Park on 427 requested additional time to hook up to the city sewers. The previous commission had allowed a one year extension. See Longwood, Page 5A

The awards are based on amount that is 25 percent of the commissioner's annual net paycheck.

Finding Romance on Lake Monroe

The rivership Grand Romance, left, may recall its past years as the cruising queen of Lake Monroe. The Romance, right, has now taken over the regular dinner cruise schedule while the larger ship prepares to leave Sanford for the Mississippi River, where it will become a gambling ship. Romance Cruise Lines President Nanci Yuronis says she still has not officially received a date for the departure of the Grand Romance, but expects it will be announced soon. After leaving Sanford, the ship will go to the Florida Panhandle, where it will be cut in half, then lengthened to eventually be twice as long capable of maintaining possibly 900 gaming tables.

Parents ask school not to resuscitate

KEISSIMMEE — School officials and the parents of a terminally ill child are trying to work out a compromise that will allow the 9-year-old boy to die a peaceful, natural death — even in the classroom.

The parents do not want teachers or administrators to call paramedics or resuscitate their son if he should stop breathing. They have threatened to sue the Osceola County schools if their wishes are disregarded.

But School Superintendent Chris Colombo and School Board attorney Larry Brown plan to meet with the parents to work out a suitable arrangement.

A court-approved plan appeared a likely course Monday. Meanwhile, school administrators have told the boy's teachers to disregard the parents' request, call the 911 emergency number and administer reasonable life-saving methods if the boy should collapse in school.

"Of course, our first obligation is to preserve the safety of the student, and that's the course we will follow" unless a court order said otherwise, Assistant School Superintendent Bill Vogel said.

The child, a special education pupil at an elementary school, has a degenerative nerve disease. Neither he nor his parents have been identified.

Six refugees found dead on coast

STUART — At least six bodies, two of them children, were found on the southeast Florida coast early today after a boatload of Haitian refugees landed from the Bahamas, authorities said.

At least 20 Haitians were picked up alive by various police agencies as search parties found four bodies on the beach in Martin County and two in neighboring St. Lucie County, said Sgt. Billy Chase of the Martin County Sheriff's Office. Officials said it appeared the victims drowned.

The Haitians who had landed were first spotted by waterfront condominium residents.

He said he believed everyone in the group had been accounted for, although police were on the lookout for additional survivors or bodies.

The survivors were turned over to the U.S. Border Patrol for processing by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Survivors told different tales as to how they wound up on the beach and the route they took to Florida, said Chase.

Youths save life of man pinned under car

HOLLYWOOD — In an area of the state known more for its rampant crime than its good Samaritans, a group of South Florida citizens joined firefighters and police in saving a life over the weekend.

Steve Saigh, 19, was working on the transmission of his Chevrolet Camaro on Sunday when the car rolled off the two metal ramps it was parked on and landed on his chest, Fire Lt. Gary Skinner said.

Two teen-agers heard his cries and called 911 for help. A group of firefighters, police, neighbors and strangers then lifted the car from the injured man's chest.

"He was kind of twisted so the car landed on his left breast. His right arm got caught underneath his chin and (he) was slowly asphyxiating himself," Skinner said. Saigh lost consciousness before help arrived.

Saigh actually owes his life to Hollywood residents Christopher Rounds, 15, who was walking down the street with friend Willie Morales, 18.

The two said they heard someone yell, "Help." Rounds then said he saw two feet sticking out from under the car and realized someone was trapped.

Order given on sunshine law

TALLAHASSEE — A judge has ordered the governor's new organization to promote the film business to stop violating Florida's government-in-the-sunshine law.

Dade County Circuit Judge Arthur Rothenberg imposed a temporary injunction on the Florida Entertainment Direct Support Organization to prohibit the group's board of directors from violating the law "during the course of its meetings, the taking of its votes or at any other time."

The organization's 15-member board is made up of film industry representatives and government officials. It was formed last summer as part of Gov. Lawton Chiles' broader efforts to shift state-run economic development efforts to public-private partnerships.

The suit against the organization was filed last year by Al Crespo, an independent film producer, a former bank robber, and a critic of the governor's efforts to get the private sector to take a larger role in promoting the state's film industry.

Crespo's suit claimed the group's board of directors violated the sunshine law when they voted on secret ballot for a chairman and a treasurer, engaged in private conversations and other activities.

State-of-the-State Opens '94 session against political backdrop

By BRENT KALLESTAD
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Florida lawmakers hit the ground running today with one ethics rule already scheduled for a vote in the full House, where Gov. Lawton Chiles hoped to persuade legislators to forget about politics and find more money for new prison beds.

While money is normally scarce in an election year, lawmakers must also whittle through hundreds of proposals before agreeing on how to pay for the space needed to remove more adult and juvenile criminals from Florida's streets.

"I doubt if there's going to be a quick resolution," said Chiles, scheduled to deliver the last State of the State speech in his first term. "I think that it will take some time because there are an awful lot of different approaches out there."

But the House was expected to need little time before signing off on a rules change sponsored by Rep. Peter Rudy Wallace, D-St. Petersburg, that would keep members from taking campaign money during the session.

"It's important that we send a signal that there will not be a conflict between the contributions that we receive and the votes that we make," said House Speaker Bob Johnson, D-Milton.

Money raised through environment auto tags sitting in bank

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Most of the $14.3 million raised through the sale of specialty license tags to benefit endangered animals still sits in bank accounts, and critics say bureaucratic bungling is to blame.

"I think there's a legitimate question about where this money is going," Sen. Rick Dantzer, D-Winter Haven, told the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale for a story Monday.

Dantzer, chairman of the Senate's Natural Resources Committee, said he believed citizens would stop buying the plates if they feel they've been tricked.

Tags bearing a Florida panther or manatee became the state's best-seller out of 37 specialty plates — passing the Challenger shuttle tags that had topped sales for six straight years.

But that popularity isn't paying off for the environment. State agencies have spent only $6.1 million to date — less than half the amount earned from the sale of almost 350,000 tags since they were introduced four years ago.

The Florida Advisory Council, which manages money from both tags, gave out no tag money for environmental grants, despite having up to $4.1 million in the bank.

"I'm sure there are environmental purposes for which this money could be well spent ... rather than just accumulating," said Rep. Vernon Peoples, D-Punta Gorda.

But officials say they are just being cautious with a money source which could wane in coming years.

"We could spend more," said Tom Logan of the state Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. "But we want this money to last. We have to plan on the income from the tag eventually declining."

The commission has $2.5 million in the bank but spent only $600,000 on panther research and protection last year.

Meanwhile, officials say the Florida panther population continues to struggle with 30 to 50 adult cats — the same numbers as four years ago when the tags were introduced.

Manatee deaths last year were down sharply, to 145. But environmentalists credit the decline to slower boat speed limits — not the research and rescue efforts financed by the tag program.

The state Legislature authorizes how the money is spent but has to act on the recommendations of the Department of Environmental Protection, the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, the Department of Community Affairs and the Florida Advisory Council on Environmental Edu-

Former teacher kills superintendent, self

By Associated Press

FORT MYERS — Less than four months after resigning from his teaching job because of stress, Larry Shelton wrote a suicide note saying he would make the evening news in a "public service message."

He got in to see his former superintendent after claiming to be an old friend and gunned down the educator who had reached out to shake his hand.

Shelton shot Lee County Schools Superintendent James Adams five times outside his office, reloaded the .38-caliber handgun and fired one more shot into the back of his head as he lay on the floor Monday, police said.

Then, he went outside to a parking lot and shot himself.

Police did not have a motive, and the connection between Shelton and Adams was not immediately clear.

School district spokesman Allen Caraway said Shelton had resigned last October from his job teaching special education students at Cypress Lake Middle School after citing class overcrowding. But Caraway had few details about his teaching record except that the gunman had taught for many years at Lee County schools.

"This man obviously had some serious personal problems; no one has even hinted that this attack had anything to do with anything other than his personal situation," Caraway said.

Shelton, 48, had recently applied for a teaching job at an elementary school in the district but the position had not been filled yet, Caraway said.

He left a suicide note with his longtime girlfriend. The last line of the note said, "Check out the local news tonight for a public service message."

Caraway described Adams, who would have turned 58 next month, as a workaholic, "extremely loyal and very supportive of his staff."

Adams had presided over a pivotal period in Lee schools during which the magnet schools concept was introduced to ensure better racial balance countywide. He was hired in 1990 partly because he had a good plan to settle a longstanding desegregation lawsuit.

Gov. Lawton Chiles expressed shock over the slaying.

"We are especially troubled that the people of Lee County lost one of their outstanding leaders as a result of a single, senseless act of violence," Chiles said in a statement.

Caraway said schools would be open today but flags would be at half-staff. He said security would be tightened in administration buildings and counselors would be made available for teachers and students.

"School personnel these days are highly visible; much of what goes on in public schools these days can be controversial at times," Caraway told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Monday night. "Any educator ... is vulnerable — always has been — but these days with a handful of people who are more and more willing to solve differences by taking a life, (it) is a growing threat."

Adams, who was divorced with two grown daughters, had been superintendent for the Indianapolis Public Schools from 1982 to 1990. He also had been a superintendent in Winston-Salem, N.C., and Saginaw, Mich.

Assistant superintendent Bobbie D'Alessandro will serve as acting superintendent for the 48,000-student school district.

Convenience store robbed

A convenience store in the 1200 block of W. 13th Street, Sanford, was robbed at gunpoint Saturday night. According to Sanford police reports, two men burst into the store shortly before 7:30 p.m., one brandishing a handgun. Police said the man with the gun went to the rear of the store while the other jumped over the counter and demanded money from the register. The clerk reportedly gave $250 in currency before the men ran from the store. The man with the gun was described as approximately five feet eleven inches tall, with a slender build, wearing a green striped shirt and a black mask. The other man was said to be about six feet two inches in height, wearing a white T-shirt with a cartoon of the Tasmanian devil on both the front and back of it, as well as green shorts and a cap.

Man taken to Tampa

A Sanford man filed a stolen vehicle report Saturday. Police said the man told them that two black men and a white man approached him shortly before midnight on Jan. 31 in a parking lot near 15th Street and French Avenue in Sanford, and took his 1973 Dodge van. One man reportedly had what was identified as a .32 caliber handgun. He said the men forced him into the van and drove him to Tampa where he arrived last Tuesday, after which he told police he made his way back to Sanford on 1-4, arriving Saturday. The license number of the vehicle was listed as QCP-87W. The man was not said to have been injured.

Car theft

James Cress, 24, of Casselberry, was arrested on U.S. Highway 17-92 by Longwood police Saturday. Police said they were investigating a suspicious vehicle reported in a parking

During the interrogation, a computer check revealed the vehicle had been listed as stolen from Winter Springs. Cress was charged with grand theft, auto. Although the report indicated that Jonlin was also arrested, no specific charges were immediately revealed.

- Deputies reported finding two men Friday, removing the engine from a 1979 Caprice, which had been listed as stolen. Deputies said the men, located in the 1300 block of 3rd Street, said they had been paid $75 to remove the engine by a man claiming to be the vehicle's owner.

SANFORD — Michael Scott Erb, 30, 705 Pasadena Avenue, Longwood, was being held in the John E. Polk Correctional Institute Friday on a charge of carrying a concealed firearm. It didn't take long before another similar charge was made.

According to Undersheriff Steve Harriett, "On Jan. 18th, Michael Erb was arrested by Casselberry police on a charge of carrying a concealed firearm. He was also charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and resisting arrest without violence."

He was still confined to the jail this Friday, when deputies found Erb was also wanted on two warrants issued in Volusia County, for violation of paroles on previous convictions of driving under the influence of alcohol, and driving with a suspended/revoked license.

At 5:14 p.m. Friday, Erb was bonded out of jail by a bonding company, for a total of $4,000, on the two warrants as well as the concealed weapon charge.

Saturday, Seminole County sheriff's deputies were called to a bar in the 3700 block of E. S.R. 46, in response to a disturbance. When they arrived, they found Erb, with a handgun reportedly concealed under his shirt.

"Apparently," Harriett commented, "he must have this thing about carrying concealed firearms." He added, "This is a situation where it only took 24 hours after he was released from jail, before he was back under the exact same charge."

In connection with the Saturday incident, Erb has again been arrested on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon/firearm, and returned to the county jail.

This time, his bond is set at $1,000.

Kids were home alone

LONGWOOD — Longwood police discovered why two children had been left unattended at their home Sunday. Their mother was in jail.

The two children were found home alone at their residence, 664 Pasadena Avenue in Longwood. Police said they were responding to a 9-1-1 call from an eight-year-old girl who said her mother was missing.

Officers said when they arrived, they found the eight-year-old girl and her one-year-old brother in the house alone. They said the children were in dirty clothes, with the baby in a soiled diaper, and the home in poor condition.

The girl reportedly told police her mother had left on a bicycle to go to a store approximately an hour and a half prior to that time.

Police began a search and located the bike, abandoned, near a store three hours later.

Following an intensive search, police found the mother, Abby T. Kaminski, 29, had been arrested earlier by a deputy sheriff and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Deputies said the woman was seen apparently trying to hide from them before she was apprehended. No specific charge was immediately listed for that arrest.

When Longwood police visited the mother at the jail, they said they were unable to obtain information from her regarding leaving the children unattended. The arrest report indicated Kaminski told officers she had gone to find her husband, rather than to the store as she had told her children.

Police have now charged her with negligent treatment of a child. She is being held in jail in connection with that charge, with no bond.

Balancing nature and progress

The Florida Legislature is now in session. It is incumbent upon each of us to pay close attention to discussions and decisions which will be made.

In addition to crime, prison beds, and other highly serious matters, a number of items pertaining to the environment and wildlife will also come up.

This issue is highly controversial. It breaks down to differing opinions between people who are strong supporters of animal rights and wildlife preservation against those who say the people should come first.

Rep. Bert Harris is proposing legislation regarding the rights of property owners to develop or sell property, even though there may be some wildlife on it. His suggestions are not expected to be strongly supported.

We believe however, that some type of compromise must be made. Because of the environmentalists and wildlife enthusiasts, the rights of the people are being more and more diminished.

As a case in point, because of restrictions for developing property on which gopher tortoises are found, the City of Lake Mary had to pay a total of $18,000, or $200 per tortoise, to have them removed before the massive Sports Complex construction could get underway.

Lake Mary, and other cities have enacted billboard regulations. They are designed to prevent the structures from increasing along our highways in such number as to restrict the scenic view.

Yet some billboards in rotting condition are forced to remain, even though a few consist of only unsightly old posts. They are still standing because some type of bird had a nest on the top.

Certainly, no one is suggesting that we fail to give consideration to our wildlife. It is one of our natural resources and we must continue to preserve and protect them.

Interference in the progress of the human population however, is another matter.

Harris referred to people who invested their life savings on property which was to be developed, only to find they could neither sell nor build on their land. Some type of creature moved in, and environmental laws now prohibit the people from doing anything with their property.

A number of bills are being passed around in Tallahassee. Some contain logical solutions to this animal versus man battle. Others may provide solutions, but not in the best interests of the people.

Natural resources must be saved. Yet we cannot allow people to become unwilling victims of animal behavior problems.

Society's breakdown

Your editorial in the paper for Wednesday, Jan. 26, 1994 tells of a shocking situation in our country about serious crimes committed by young people. To have 5,356 children and teens killed by firearms in one year (1991) is almost unbelievable and certainly was and is a tragedy for thousands of their relatives and friends.

So many in our country today seem to have no respect for human life which is a precious gift, given only once.

There are many reasons for this lack of respect but the millions of abortions performed in this country have to be one of the reasons. When women and doctors can legally kill an unborn innocent baby it lessens respect for all life. Scientists know that life begins at conception. Doctors can now operate successfully on an unborn child. It's necessary for parents, the churches, schools and everyone to work to correct all these things that help create such serious problems for our young people.

Lorena the Ripper: Guilty, guilty

Lorena Bobbitt sauntered out of a Manassas, Va., courtroom two weeks ago as if she had just won the Miss America pageant. She cradled a bouquet of roses. She waved to her legion of fans. She paused for a photo-op.

The Ecuadorian-born manicurist succeeds Anita Hill as the darling of the moment of the feminist left. After she completes her 45 days of court-ordered observation in a mental hospital — her penance for severing her husband's penis as he lay sleeping — we can expect Lorena the Ripper to be feted at feminist gatherings throughout the country.

It is not because of castration anxiety that I wonder how 51 percent of women — according to a USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll — can say that Bobbitt was justified in her actions. Her husband may have been a bastard, he may have been guilty of spousal abuse, but dismemberment hardly was the appropriate punishment.

The feminist left obviously does not see it that way. "It's hard for anyone who watched the trial to believe that Lorena Bobbitt was not a woman who was pushed over the edge by years of abuse," said Kim Gandy, executive vice president of the National Organization for Women.

In the present milieu, men are re-

Lorena supporters who kept a noisy vigil outside the courthouse, holding aloft wieners on forks in solidarity with their sister on trial.

As time goes by, the 1990s may be remembered as the decade when the war between the sexes turned especially ugly. First there was the William Kennedy Smith trial, in 1991, which brought to the fore the issue of date rape. Then there was the Clarence Thomas inquisition, in which the issue of sexual harassment captured the national spotlight. Now we have the Bobbitt spectacle, which raises the issue of — what? Bedroom vigilantism.

In the present milieu, men are regarded as sexual predators and women a innocent prey. Whenever questions arise as to whether a man has committed some gender offense or another, the man almost always is presumed to be guilty.

We can expect Lorena the Ripper to be feted at feminist gatherings throughout the country.

This makes even the most gender-sensitive man a little paranoid. If a man makes a flattering remark to a woman, particularly in the workplace, does that constitute sexual harassment? If a woman has sex with a man, but she's regretful afterward, might he be accused of rape? If a man compels his lawfully wedded wife to have sex with him, is she now justified to cut off his penis?

That is not to say that sexual harassment and date rape and spousal abuse are not authentic problems. They are. And men who knowingly and willfully commit such offenses should have the full weight of the law brought against them.

But most men are not harassers. They are not rapists. They do not beat their wives or girlfriends. Most men endeavor to be gentlemanly. Most treat the women in their lives the way they would want their mothers or sisters or daughters to be treated. Yet, this never comes across during discussions about gender crimes.

SARAH OVERSTREET

Men certainly are funny valentines

Another Valentine's Day approaches and my boyfriend and I consider a romantic dinner-and-movie evening, newspaper spread before us on the floor without luck. He'd rather do the entire Jane Fonda workout tape in a neon pink leotard than go to "The Joy Luck Club." I can't abide "The Unforgiven," even after he assures me, meaningfully, that it contains a "hidden meaning."

The same thing happens at the video store. We split up and search the aisles, then come together to show what we've plucked from the shelves: I have "Moonstruck." He has "The Three Stooges Festival."

At the end of this millennium, when historians try to enumerate the greatest inventions of the last 1,000 years, the multi-plex theater ought to be right up there with the printing press and manned flight. A couple can go out to eat with another couple, go to the movies, and the women can go one way and the men another with not one harsh word exchanged among them.

I believe this disparity in movie tastes is at the heart of why so many of our romantic relationships are doomed to fail. How can a gender that believes The Three Stooges are the funniest comedians in the history of mankind be expected to mate successfully with a gender that sees nothing funny about three almost-elderly boy-men punching and clanging on each other?

I participated in a lively discussion on this phenomenon last year at the Ash Grove, Mo., Chamber of Commerce Christmas banquet when I was the guest speaker. For the last 10 minutes of my speech, the women were whooping and elbowing each other. The men sat there politely, yet with an expression on their faces that communicated this unmistakable message: "When is she going to start the humor part of this little talk, anyway?"

By some stroke of luck, I happened to mention The Three Stooges. Sleepy men in their best suits and Christmas ties suddenly snapped to life and started clicking their fingers into their hands, poking fingers into imaginary eyes and going "wooo-wooo-woo." Then it was the women's turn to sit there with the same look the men had just had on their faces.

Several of the women commented that they were completely bewildered that someone could see anything funny about men poking each other in the eyes and hitting each other with shovels, dropping blocks of ice on each other's toes, or baking things into cakes to make them blow up. The men offered no explanations.

Since then, I've found an entire article devoted to The Three Stooges Syndrome in an issue of "The Doltlittle Report," a wonderful little newsletter devoted to (and I'm not making this up): "Answering the universal question, 'Why can't a man be more like a woman?'" Peter Sinclair, who edits a contemporary men's humor magazine entitled (and I'm not making this up, either) "King, Warrior, Magician, Weenie," thinks a lot of the appeal of the Stooges comes from the emotional release men receive from watching them.

"Men are not allowed to express their emotions, feel empathetic pain or express their own pain," Sinclair postulates. "Therefore, great catharsis comes when somebody gets their nose pinched or their head bonked."

OK, this makes perfect sense to me. I have within a period of a few days watched a man whom I had just begged to share his feelings with me, and who had replied with stolid answers ranging from "I'm not very good at this" to "I like to play my cards close to the vest," reduced to convulsions and tears after a few minutes of the Stooges antics.

DONNA BRITT

People should know we exist

MAUI, HAWAII — It isn't remarkable that Mimi finally married John.

My Los Angeles friend had been seeing her now-husband for nearly eight years — a courtship so long that its duration became a running joke here among friends, who repeated it endlessly during toasts at every pre-nuptial event.

What may seem remarkable is where she did it. And who was watching.

When John clasped Mimi's hand, listening to the minister's instructions to tell her, "I free you with my loyalty," he heard the words over the "music" of white-edged waves lapping rocks on the beach yards away. When Mimi repeated, "I love you for who you are, and even more for what you mean to me," the witnesses included a host of palm trees and a volcanic mountain ringed by clouds.

Like a growing number of lovers, Mimi Wood, a wildlife specialist, and John Harris, a vice president of Friskies Petcare, figured that enough of their friends would welcome a midwinter break in the tropics to justify having their nuptials in Maui.

Seventy showed up. Some, like Faye, came only to attend the wedding. Others came for more: Eric to golf; Gene to earn his first-level scuba certification; Bud and Ken to change the setting of their tennis rivalry; Michael to meditate to the sound of the surf. That all six — in fact, that Mimi, John and most of their guests — are black is unremarkable.

Or is it? It doesn't seem remarkable to some guests and service people of every hue. These are the people who smile, converse and seem pleased to see us in that great "I'm-vacationing-so I-love-the-world" way.

Then there are those whose stares feel different, who seem startled to see us, who chat us up just to learn how we can afford to be here. Who assume that every black guest at the resort must be with the wedding — some aren't.

But why wouldn't people be misled, when often, we surprise ourselves? It's something black folks rarely discuss in "mixed" company. Our occasional awe at our own success, and the complications that can accompany it, doesn't always sit comfortably.

Staring at the Pacific, I felt the questions wash over me. Why would it surprise anyone that 70 party-hearty black folks would attend a friend's wedding in Maui?

Why would I, a middle-class sister who should know better, be wowed by the group's collective oomph? By Monique's job as an executive for the L.A. Dodgers, by her husband, Bud, being a Citicorp investment banker, by Eric's successful TV career?

Is it a big deal that Faye manages marketing for the 11th-largest U.S. insurance firm, and Gene and Ken are top execs at Nestle Corp.?

What about the fact that Mildred, 81, once ran a 75-bed home for autistic adults in Detroit before opening a facility in L.A.?

How "remarkable" is it that our hostess, Mimi — who spent months coordinating bird rescue operations in Alaska after the Exxon Valdez mess — founded a business that takes wild animals into schools for kids who otherwise might never touch an iguana?

If such black men and women seem surprising, in Hawaii or anywhere else, it's because they aren't supposed to exist. That we do sometimes floors even us, although successful, talented black contributors are everywhere. In '92, I attended a wedding in Jamaica with a different, equally impressive crowd.

In a way, it makes sense. Like most contributors, these folks mostly choose to work, raise families and live without fanfare.

But people should know — not intermittently suspect, but know — they exist. And people should realize that the same media and weary stereotypes that often render successful blacks invisible — and that make African Americans out to be victims, problems or fools — are wrong.

The skin that makes us noticeable at a Maui resort doesn't just give white people false expectations. Sometimes, black folks feel self-conscious about their own accomplishments, how they set them apart from less-fortunate blacks.

Sitting poolside, Monique Brandon considers this. What her blackness also does, she adds, is make her and her friends "involuntary example setters."

"Being born black means that everywhere I go, whether I like it or not, I set an example," says Brandon, 34, the Dodgers' community relations director.

"And this is the example I choose to set today — showing, at a wedding in Maui, that we are not about poverty and crime, but about intellect and class and everything else that society says is important. That we can successfully enter into all that has been held privately out of our reach."

What may seem remarkable is where she did it. And who was watching.

Fair-goers get a taste of Seminole County life

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

TAMPA — At a time when a person's travel experiences might have taken him no more than 20 or 30 miles from home, the county exhibits at the Florida State Fair were a window to exotic places around the state.

Today, designed to entice fairgoers to travel to new and exotic places around the state for pleasure, business, or a place to live the exhibits are giant brochures for chambers of commerce.

Not all counties in the state make the effort to make a presentation, though most do. For several years, Seminole County had no exhibit.

"No one had done it for several years," Barbara Hughes Gregg, director of the county's extension service, said. "Last year there was an article (in the Sanford Herald) that said that and Mr. Rabun (county manager Ron Rabun) called me and asked why."

That, she said, is how it all got started. A company was hired to help create an exhibit with moving parts and colorful, dancing lights.

"It was going to be an award winner," Hughes-Gregg said. Unfortunately, the company folded up and left town without a forwarding address.

"It was right before any money exchanged hands," Hughes-Gregg said, breathing a sigh of relief.

The Florida State Fair Authority provides each county with $1,500 with which they can create their display. The money can be used for any purpose in creating a display.

When the company charged with creating this county's exhibit disappeared, Hughes-Gregg said the County Extension Service and volunteers gathered their resources and put a display together.

"We started pretty late and we spent every penny they gave us," she said, "but I think we came up with a very nice display."

Celebrating the natural diversity of the county, the display centers around a canoe (provided by Hughes-Gregg's son) making its way through bright palmettos and scrub brush. On a nearby hill, sporting equipment represents the recreational diversity of the area.

Business and industry in the area are also honored in the display.

Also included in the display are two photos of exhibits created by the county in the 1920s and the 1930s.

"Those were really interesting," she said. "The state fair people had those. That was a neat touch."

Hughes-Gregg said she enjoyed the challenge of creating the display. She said the county will "definitely" have a display next year. She said 50 percent of the display must be different from this year's, so they are already starting to make plans.

Meanwhile plans are in the works for displays at the Seminole County Fair (which will take place at Seminole Greyhound Park from Feb. 24 through March 6) and at the Central Florida Fair in Orlando in March.

"We keep busy," she said.

Longwood—Signs

City administrator Gerry Korman noted the city code requires mandatory hookup to the city sewer system by commercial and industrial buildings. Auditors commented in last year's audit an effort should be made to get businesses to comply. The auditors had made the same recommendation in the 1992 audit.

In a letter to the commission, Korman noted Longwood Industrial Park is in the process of being brought on line. The 27 businesses in that complex received notices in August, 1993 that they should make arrangements for sewer hookup by Feb. 20, 1994. Six of the businesses have made the necessary arrangements. Korman warned, "Whatever decision is reached by the commission for the two extension requests, will be setting a precedent for the other businesses scheduled to hook up in February, 1994."

Both businessmen cited financial reasons for being unable to hook on to the sewer.

Three businessmen were appointed to the Equity Study Committee which will review the various fees the city assesses businesses. Curtis Donahou, Security Works, Kent Richter, Am Fed Mortgage and James Kleinmann, State Farm Insurance will serve on the committee. More appointments will be made by the commission at a later date.

The commission also set a March 7, 6:30 p.m. hearing for the Board of Equalization. At that time, property owners along Oak Street, Reider Avenue and Second Place will appear to review assessments for improvements on the streets.

In other business the commissioners approved spending money from the Confiscation Fund requested by Police Chief Greg Manning for Project Gradd, initiating a bicycle patrol, and upgrading an investigative instrument.

planning and development. "The intent is to have all local governments implement the same sign standards in order to provide long-term consistency and a better looking roadway."

Marder said the measure was considered by P&Z Thursday, but will now go to CALNO, where it will be closely examined, with the hope that it will be given as a recommendation for adoption by each of the cities represented in the organization. CALNO was originally a south county organization representing Casselberry, Altamonte and North Orlando, but has been expanded to include all cities in Seminole County.

If the recommendation is adopted Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood, as well as other members, will eventually have a similar sign ordinance presented at upcoming city commission meetings.

Proposals for uniform sign regulations are not new. An interlocal agreement between Seminole County and the cities of Casselberry, Lake Mary, Longwood, Sanford and Winter Springs, was drafted on July 8, of last year. It pertained only to U.S. Highway 17-92.

Now however, the aim appears to be enacting an agreement which will handle signs at more than just that one highway.

In Sanford, Marder sees the sign height issue as being the most significant impact of this new proposal.

At the present time, the city's sign height limitation is 25 feet. The proposed standard is 15 feet.

Marder noted that most local governments in the county have already adopted a 15 foot standard.

The city of Lake Mary adopted a sign ordinance pertaining to the area known as the Interstate-4 corridor late last year. With the expansion of the regulations to cover more than just specific roadways however, consideration would also have to be given to new restrictions in that city.

The Sanford P&Z has examined the proposals.

The city of Sanford's representative on CALNO is Commissioner Whitey Eckstein. In Lake Mary, it is Commissioner Gary Brender.

tion if all unincorporated residents were required to pay for the service. Of the 48,127 unincorporated households, nearly 24 percent of them do not subscribe to garbage collection.

Commissioners are considering mandatory under the theory haulers could provide collection at a lower per household charge with everyone paying for the service.

It didn't turn out that way. After a series of 12 negotiating sessions with the four contract haulers, staff found rates would rise for most customers to an estimated $14.10 per month. The service would include two unlimited-quantity garbage pickups, one unlimited recycling pickup and one unlimited yard waste collection each week.

Rates are now a weekly $14.16, $13.51, $13.28 and $13.21, depending on the hauler. Current service includes two garbage pickups, each limited to two containers, and one unlimited recycling pickup. Yard waste collections are an extra $1.27 per bag, which would be eliminated under the proposed plan.

Also, haulers are seeking a four-year extension on their contracts to 1999. Earlier requests for contract extensions left commissioners cold because commissioners felt they were not accompanied by significant rate reductions. Some haulers could also not agree on limiting collections to the five weekdays, a condition sought by commissioners.

charges its employees for health insurance.

The Commissioner's Choice Award is given each year to one student from each of the district's six high schools and from the Crooms School of Choice, who the schools select as the "hardest working senior."

The students do not have to be tops in their class, but they have to show diligent effort to be successful. They must be registered voters (or be pre-registered if they are younger than 18) and they must be planning to attend classes at a post-secondary institution of their choice.

Furlong explained that the change in his pay came on a suggestion from Commissioner Darryl McLain. The county began an Internal Revenue Service Code Section 125 Premium Conversion Plan on January 1 of this year.

Section 125 allows employers and employees to save money by paying group health insurance on a before-tax basis.

Furlong said the county saves payment of Social Security taxes on the premiums of participating employees. The employees save on social security and income taxes because their taxable pay is reduced by the amount of their premiums and only the balance of their wages is taxed. Furlong explained.

If all the eligible employees enroll in the program, Furlong said, the county could save as much as $100,000 per year. Employee savings could be as much as $300 to $500 annually.

"A premium conversion plan is a good deal for everybody," said Furlong. "The taxpayers save money, the employees get a little more in their paychecks and some very deserving high school students will be better rewarded for their efforts."

He added that he wished all the commissioners' decisions were as easy to make as the one they made regarding Section 125.

Furlong reminded interested seniors to go to their school's guidance department to pick up an application for the scholarship which will be awarded later this year.

Attack

"There were a few rolls of pennies and some Canadian bills," he said. "I think there were a few old coins, but nothing extremely valuable."

He said the police investigators looking into the case have a few suspects in mind and they are on the lookout for people matching the suspect's description who are looking to exchange the foreign bills.

"We think we know who our man is," he said.

The victim was taken to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford and treated for lacerations on her face.

"Because of her age the fire department paramedics were real concerned about her," Whitmire said.

According to hospital officials, she has remained there for continued observation. She is listed in fair condition, that is, her vital signs are stable and within normal limits but she is experiencing some pain.

"She's going to be OK, they think," said Susan Prather, spokeswoman for the hospital. The victim's husband was not available for comment this morning, but police said he told them they were thinking about leaving their home as a result of this incident.

Police describe the suspect as a black male, 25 to 30 years old. They said he is about six feet tall and between 180 and 200 pounds with a stocky build. They said he has a "real broad" face.

Police said he was last seen wearing a dark blue or a black shirt with yellow stripes and dark pants.

Whitmire said that anyone who has any information about the crime or possible suspects should call the Sanford Police Department at 323-3030.

Thrift Etc.
Dorthea Hadley, Henry and Bambi Schumann say, "With your help and donations you can give them a chance."
A New Idea In Thrift Store Shopping

If you think Shaquille O'Neal is big, you should see Florida's newest and largest thrift store! Thrift Etc. recently moved from a small store in Deltona to 419 E. First Street in Sanford and the thrift store shopping adventure will never be the same. Thrift Etc. is located next to Family Dollar in the space formerly occupied by Family Thrift Mart.

Whether it's a warm coat you're looking for to ward off the chilly nights, work uniforms, that just-right pair of jeans or that perfect something for your home, Thrift Etc. has it. The store sells everything from clothing for the entire family, shoes, books, toys and knick-knacks to furniture and electrical items.

Managers Gene and Bambi Schumann say their goal is to keep the merchandise fresh, the quality high and the prices low while providing a friendly shopping atmosphere complete with customer service.

Thrift Etc. works with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (S.P.C.A.) and all donations of reusable items are tax deductible. The store accepts donations daily during business hours (9am - 6pm Monday thru Saturday and 10am - 4pm on Sunday). You can also call (407) 324-7519 to schedule a home pick-up.

The store even uses recycled bags to keep prices low. Employees encourage customers to donate used bags of any type. It's environment-friendly and frees kitchen pantries from shopping bag clutter.

Thrift Etc.'s able staff, Dorthea (Toone) Hadley, Joann Kemper and Abe Wichter add hundreds of new items daily and the store's mascot dog, Henry is a favorite with the customers.

The Schumanns are adding a new and exciting service slated to open by the end of February. Each Friday Sanford residents will be able to indulge themselves with fresh produce and other treats from the new Community Farmer's Market located in front of the store. Local growers are welcome to participate.

So the next time you're in downtown Sanford or on your way to Billy Boy's for an old-fashioned malt, stop by Thrift Etc. It's truly a browser's dream come true. Who knows? Maybe even the Shaq himself will be there!

Prisoners in Orlando now pay for medical services

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Jail inmates cost taxpayers a lot of money for medical care, and Orange County is trying to cut down on its $6 million yearly tab by charging prisoners nominal fees for medical services.

Inmates are paying $3 to go on sick call and be attended by a nurse, and $5 to visit a doctor or dentist. If they insist on visiting their own private physician, the cost for transportation will be $80.

The county jail — the 10th largest in the nation with 3,500 inmates — joins others trying to reduce medical budgets. Some like the fee system, others don't.

State Sen. Patricia Grogan, D-Merritt Island, has introduced legislation to have all state prisoners pay for their health benefits.

The vice chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice committee said prisoners average six visits to health care providers each month and require 21 prescriptions a year.

"We believe they should be responsible for their own medical costs," said Ed Royal, Orange County's deputy corrections director. "It should not be any different than it is on the outside."

The jail will deduct the charges from personal accounts prisoners use to pay for snacks and hygiene items, or from money they were carrying when arrested.

Prisoners who cannot afford the fees will not be refused treatment.

One immediate impact is a reduction in number of prisoners seeking treatment.

"What we are seeing is a decline in the people who are using the medical services for frivolous reasons," said Royal on Monday.

Casino proposal would let lawmakers decide locales

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Miami Beach would get a casino first under a proposed constitutional amendment, but the author says lawmakers could allow them in other cities later.

"We're going to probably give the Legislature the opportunity to authorize a limited additional number," former state Supreme Court Justice Arthur England said Monday.

Eight years after voters trounced a constitutional amendment to allow casinos in major hotels, a group called Proposition for Limited Casinos has hired England to draw up another amendment.

Chairman Pat Roberts has said the group expects racetracks, hotels and casino companies to back its plan, which would allow casinos where gambling already goes on — at race tracks and jai-alai frontons — and a free-standing casino to help draw tourists to Miami Beach.

"It may be that there are other locations in the state of Florida — a limited number — in which there ought to be an opportunity for this kind of economic opportunity, but there may not be a parimutuel facility," England said.

For example, the Panhandle region faces the toughest competition for tourists from casinos already operating in Biloxi and Gulfport, Miss., and opening soon in Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans, Roberts said.

"There are only two dog tracks in the entire Panhandle. So if Pensacola needs more help in that area, that will allow the Legislature to address that issue," he said. "In Tampa Bay, if they think they are being given a disadvantage if Miami gets something they don't have, it would let the Legislature make that decision."

England said he hopes to finish drafting the proposed amendment within two weeks so backers can begin collecting signatures.

The group needs nearly 430,000 signatures by Aug. 9 to put the amendment before voters on the November ballot.

Clinton visits auto plant to pitch health care plan

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

SHREVEPORT, La. — Looking to blunt business criticism of his health care plan, President

Clinton is pitching the program to blue-collar workers and taking aim at insurance companies he says have too much power in making medical decisions.

With the annual budget debate now under way in Washington, Clinton also is reminding his audiences that recent progress in cutting the deficit will be wiped out if health care costs are not controlled.

"There will be no ultimate solution to the federal deficit until we reform the Medicare and Medicaid expenses and get them closer to the rate of inflation," Clinton said Monday. "That cannot be done, in my opinion ... until there is some system by which all Americans have access to basic primary and preventive health care."

Today, Clinton was making his pitch to General Motors workers at a light truck plant in Shreveport, an event designed to salute the cooperation between the company and the United Auto Workers union in working through health care problems.

At the same time, aides said Clinton would look to give his plan a boost by suggesting the current system leaves too much power in the hands of insurance companies and that his plan would do the most to give consumers more say while guaranteeing universal coverage.

"He wants to talk about why we need to take control out of the hands of the insurance companies so they just don't pick and choose people who get covered," White House spokesman Jeff Eller said.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton sounded that theme Monday during an event in Maine promoting the administration's health care plan. She said insurance companies control a health care system "rigged against families and small businesses."

Rebutting Republican criticism that his plan would restrict patient choice because people would have to pick coverage from the options offered by a regional health alliances, Clinton said most people are now given little choice because employers pick health care providers.

"Consumers are rapidly losing choice in the present system," Clinton said. "Only about one in three workers today insured at work has any choice at all over who the medical provider is."

As Clinton arrived in Shreveport, he was greeted a handful of people who wrote to Mrs. Clinton about family health care problems, including Sigrid Poole, who said her husband died of lung cancer weeks after being refused medical treatment because he did not have insurance.

"I need your help," Clinton told her after she wished him luck on his health care efforts.

As Clinton talked to the families, he got a boost of sorts from Louisiana Sen. John Breaux, a sponsor along with Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., of a rival health plan.

The Cooper-Breaux plan won the backing last week of the Business Roundtable, a group of corporate chiefs who rebuffed a last-minute White House lobbying effort. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers also were sharply critical of the Clinton plan.

White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Clinton's goal as he promoted his plan was to "show how people who are against health care reform are very much interested in protecting the status quo."

Cooper, trying to use the actions by the business groups to generate more momentum for his plan, met with Ross Perot supporters over the weekend and called Clinton's plan "the big-government approach." Cooper also said Clinton was counting on a new bureaucracy to cut costs, "but we all know that bureaucrats don't lower costs, they raise them."

Breaux, in an interview Monday night after he greeted Clinton, called on Cooper to "lower the rhetoric and start talking more about what we have in common and less about where we differ. This is something that cries out for a compromise."

Breaux also criticized Cooper for appearing before the Perot group and said, "I certainly wouldn't stand up there with Ross Perot."

Reorganization and crop insurance in 1995 budget

By ROBERT GREEN
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Crop insurance will become more of a bargain for growers under a key proposal in the 1995 agriculture budget.

The proposal is one of several calls for legislation in the Agriculture Department's $60.3 billion budget, released Monday. The budget cuts 1994 spending by 7 percent.

Congress also will be asked to approve user fees and a reorganization plan for the department.

Under the proposal, crop insurance would replace disaster payments as the main method of helping growers through droughts, floods and other calamities.

If the proposal had been in effect last summer, some of the $2.1 billion in disaster money that Congress approved for victims of Midwestern floods and Southern droughts would have been covered by insurance instead.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corp., however, hasn't been doing well. It had a $3.6 million deficit coming into 1994 because losses have exceeded premiums.

One reason is that too few people take part, and those who do are in states with the highest risks. Also, Congress has been too willing to come through with disaster payments, which don't count against the deficit.

"This year's flood demonstrated over and over again that it is time to create a single crop protection system that works," said Agriculture Secretary Mike Espy. "Right now we have a crop insurance program and congressional disaster appropriations, both of which are too expensive and self-defeating."

Under the crop insurance proposal, farmers would have to sign up for basic catastrophic coverage in order to take part in farm programs or receive aid from the Farmers Home Administration. The basic coverage would be free, except for a paperwork-handling charge of $50.

The plan would pay farmers only if they lost more than 50 percent of their crop. Then they would get only 85 percent of the value of those crop losses that exceed 50 percent of the normal yield.

Unlike current crop insurance, prevented and delayed plantings would be covered. Many growers lost insurance coverage during the heavy rainfall and flooding in the Midwest last year because they never got their crop in the ground.

Farmers could buy more coverage at government-subsidized rates.

The details won't be ready until later this month. And one key question is how to force Congress to refrain from handing out more payments.

All the department can promise now is provisions that "will reduce the likelihood" of further ad hoc assistance.

Because disaster payments have been off budget, lawmakers will have to agree on how to add some of those payments to the crop insurance program's costs when calculating the deficit.

In other parts, the budget proposal makes no changes in core farm programs. It assumes normal weather, improved trade and earlier program cuts will cause a $3.6 billion drop in spending for subsidies and other mandatory payments to farmers.

Some $78.6 million would be spent to bring 300,000 more acres of farmed or cultivated wetlands out of production by paying easements to farmers.

Proposed user fees include enough to raise $103 million for the Food Safety and Inspection Service. The service plans to hire about 200 more inspectors and increase research on food safety.

The budget would increase spending for targeted research into food safety and pesticide alternatives. But Congress would have less to spend for favorite research and building projects.

Administration expects NATO allies to act on Sarajevo siege

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Moving to extend protection to Sarajevo's battered civilians, the Clinton administration is set to ask its NATO allies to authorize air strikes if Bosnian Serbs persist in their attacks or if they do not remove their artillery from the hills around the capital.

A new package of military options mixed in with a call for more vigorous diplomacy was approved Monday night by top U.S. policy makers for presentation to the North Atlantic Council in Brussels, Belgium, on Wednesday.

Approval by the Council would require a change of heart by many of the European governments that have been reluctant to use force against the Bosnian Serbs. But administration officials said the allies seemed to be ready to embrace more aggressive measures after the bombing Saturday of a Muslim marketplace that left 68 people dead and some 200 injured.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who presented the basic package to other policy makers at the 2 1/2-hour White House meeting while President Clinton was in Texas, has sounded out several of the foreign ministers by telephone.

Clinton, who in Houston on Monday declared that there would be no more empty threats, was being briefed by Anthony Lake, his national security adviser and one of the participants in the White House meetings.

The most striking element in the package was the French suggestion that NATO issue an ultimatum to the Bosnian Serbs to remove their artillery or risk a NATO attack.

"We're lining up with the French on this," said an administration official who described the results of the White House meeting on condition he would not be identified.

The overall aim is to lift the siege of the Bosnian capital while mediators pursue a diplomatic settlement among the warring Serbs, Croats and Muslims. In this regard, the Clinton administration is seeking some territorial concessions to the Muslim-led government, which has been forced by the Serbs and Croats to surrender most of the former Yugoslav republic.

Clinton was asked why the Bosnian Serbs should take another threat of air strikes seriously, given the West's empty saber-rattling in the past.

"Let's see what happens in the next couple of days," the president replied. "You know what I feel about that. I don't think we should have any more empty threats."

The NATO allies last year blocked a U.S. appeal to both lift an arms embargo against Bosnian government forces and to bomb Bosnian Serb artillery and mortar sites if attacks continued.

Partly out of concern U.N. peacekeepers might get caught in the cross-fire, the allies shied away from forceful intervention. France, Britain and Canada have large peacekeeping contingents in the Balkans.

But continued bloodletting in what Christopher called "unacceptable actions" by the Serbs this time could result in allied unity.

"We expect the North Atlantic Council will decide on a course of action, on an overall strategy, within the next few days," Christopher said.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on Sunday asked the NATO allies to authorize use of air power in response to the shelling of Sarajevo.

Clinton, in a speech in Houston, said he had long hoped the U.N. official would take the step. The president said, though, that "until those folks get tired of killing each other over there bad things will continue to happen."

Christopher said he expected the NATO Council to approve Boutros-Ghali's proposal to give commanders on the ground authority to call for air attacks. But beyond that "narrow" request, Christopher stressed the allies would consider a range of other actions.

"We will not be limited by that," Christopher told reporters.

Christopher said Boutros-Ghali's proposal "fills a gap" in that it would authorize NATO air strikes to retaliate for harming civilians in Sarajevo as the allies already have approved the bombing of Serb artillery and mortar positions if humanitarian missions are impeded.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence, said "there is only one way to stop the aggressor — and that is by force. It is time for those NATO jets to deliver a clear and long-overdue message — we will not allow aggression and genocide to continue any longer."

Jordan signs with White Sox

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan, saying he isn't worried about failure, agreed today to a minor-league contract with the Chicago White Sox and will go to spring training.

Jordan signed with the Nashville Sounds, the White Sox affiliate in the Class AAA American Association. Jordan, who says he will try to make the major league club this spring, is willing to go to the minors if the club thinks he can make it to the majors.

Another FSU coach leaves

COLUMBIA, S.C. — John Eason, the Florida State assistant coach responsible for recruiting Charlie Ward, has switched to South Carolina.

Eason is the third Seminole assistant recruited by new Gamecocks head coach Brad Scott. Florida State's former offensive coordinator, Eason will be the Gamecocks' assistant head coach with responsibility for wide receivers, the spot he held at FSU since 1982.

Along with Eason, Wally Burnham, a defensive assistant, and Mark Salva, a grad assistant, have left Tallahassee for Columbia.

Hillsman shines in loss

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Janice Felder scored 20 points to lead Southern Mississippi (16-2) to a 74-71 victory over No. 19 Auburn (15-6).

Four Lady Tigers scored in double figures, including 10 by Sanford's A.D. Hillsman.

Lightning strike Toronto

TORONTO — Tim Bergland and Randy Poeschek each had a goal as the Tampa Bay Lightning beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1.

Bergland scored in the first period and Poeschek in the second to give Tampa Bay a 2-0 lead before Dave Andreychuk scored for Toronto, which failed to get a shot on goal in the first 14 minutes of the game.

Tampa Bay goaltender Pat Jablonski, who hadn't won since Dec. 15, faced 25 shots to give the Lightning their second win in six games.

Rams seniors' prayers answered in final seconds

From Staff Reports

LAKE MARY — Now that's ending your career in style.

Playing their final regular season before the home fans, Lake Mary seniors Richard Roche and Jimmy Newberry combined to score seven points in the final 19 seconds as the Rams erased a five point deficit to pull out a 61-60 victory over Lyman in a Seminole Athletic Conference boys' basketball game Monday.

The game was scheduled for this Friday, but had to be moved because the girls' district semifinals will be played at Lake Mary that night.

The Lake Mary junior varsity also closed out its home portion of the schedule with a win, drubbing the Greyhounds, 68-43, to raise first.

Wymore thumps Orangewood

From Staff Reports

MAITLAND — The Wymore Career Bobcats showed why they are the No. 5 ranked team in Class 1A, withstanding a strong third-quarter charge and going on to dump visiting Orangewood Christian, 86-65, in a boys' basketball game Monday night.

"We put up a good effort to cut the lead to eight points (47-39) in the third quarter," said Orangewood head coach Dave Hogan. "Then they put on a run and put us away. We just couldn't do a lot with them. They are a very good team."

The Bobcats junior varsity made it a clean sweep for the home forces, bopping the Rams, 79-56.

Sophomore Terrance Harmon led the way for Wymore, which improved to 22-5 on the season, with 24 points. Also in double figures were Kevin Gordon with 14, Gregg McClain with 13 and Kevin Roundtree with 12.

Jamie Hart tossed in 21 points, grabbed five rebounds and handed out five assists for Orangewood Christian. Jeremy Parke chipped in with 12.

The Rams, who fell to 18-10, will close out the regular season portion of their schedule with a game at Daytona Beach-Warner Christian Friday night. Junior varsity action opens play at 6 p.m. with varsity set for a 7:30 p.m. start.

Seminole in Polls

By DEAN SMITH

SANFORD — It's about time. It has taken a full season but the Seminole High School boys' basketball team has finally got some long overdue recognition from the Florida Sportswriters Association, as Arrow Force II, which had previously not even received a vote, was ranked No. 8 in the Class 4A poll.

The lady and her car. Longwood's Leigh O'Brien was among four women who drove this Chevrolet Camaro to a 47th place finish in the Rolex 24 at Daytona this past weekend. Despite problems, the team ran 219 laps and was one of only 32 teams that ran the entire event.

DAYTONA BEACH — When you are racing in the Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona, the rules are different. It's not whether you win or lose and its not how you play the game.

In the International Motor Sports Association (IMSA) event, the most important thing is survival.

Longwood's Leigh O'Brien found out this weekend just how difficult the grueling 24 hour race is for both the team and the vehicle.

While O'Brien and her team were forced to pull off the track for repairs several times throughout the race, 33 cars were unable to be fixed and dropped out of the race.

Although the No. 3 Chevrolet Camaro, sponsored by American Woman Motorsports, spent more than 12 hours in the pits with cooling system and rear end problems, the team was among the 32 that finished the race.

O'Brien drove the car across the finish line, completing the 219th lap the team ran in the 24 hour race.

The team accomplished another goal, running the race with an all-woman team, the first all-woman team in more than a decade and the sixth in the history of the race.

O'Brien was joined by Linda Pobst, Kat Teasdale, Margy Eatwell and Tami Rai Busby, all taking turns in the drivers seat.

The last team to compete was in 1983. During that race, Deborah Gregg, Kathy Rude and Bonnie Henn drove their Porsche 924 to a sixth place GTO finish, the best ever for an all-woman team.

As dawn broke Sunday on the Daytona International Speedway, O'Brien's pit crew was working feverishly to get a problem with rear differential bearing seals fixed and get the car back on the track.

As soon as the problem was thought to have been corrected, the new seal was damaged and gear oil ran from the car, forcing the team off the track for the eighth time.

Once a new bearing seal was installed, the team re-entered the race. O'Brien took the wheel from teammate Pobst of Melbourne. She nursed the car around the track for the remaining three hours of the race in order to finish, averaging around 20 laps per hour.

O'Brien described the opportunity to compete in the prestigious international event as "awesome."

"It was just an awesome race. It was great," O'Brien said. "But if it wouldn't have been for my hard-working crew, we wouldn't have completed the race."

She was ecstatic about the team and optimistic about the future.

"We are going to compete in Sebring. You can count on it," O'Brien said.

Dian Pattison, a crew member, was sure they would fair better in the Sebring race set for March 19.

"We did not have enough time to prepare. If we wouldn't have spent so much time in the garage, I think we would have placed here. The next race should be easy."

What is source of nighttime vomiting?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 77-year-old mother has bouts of severe vomiting several times a year. They occur a few hours after eating or quite often around midnight after a few hours of sleep. She also experiences heartburn. Her doctor has eliminated an ulcer or hiatal hernia, yet is at a loss to explain what has happened.

DEAR READER: Nighttime vomiting is an unusual symptom that may be caused by peptic disease or hiatal hernia, both of which have apparently been ruled out by your mother's physician. Yet, her heartburn suggests either an intestinal cause -- or angina (heart muscle cramping).

In the first instance, your mother may be suffering from gastro-esophageal reflux, a common condition associated with the backwash of irritating stomach acid into the esophagus. Although frequently seen in conjunction with hiatal hernia, reflux can exist by itself. Symptoms include indigestion, excess gas and nausea. The disorder, which may not be apparent on standard X-rays of the stomach, is diagnosed by endoscopy (where a gastroenterologist examines the upper intestine with a lighted tube) or by special tests that measure respective pressures in the esophagus and stomach. Treatment with gastric-acid blockers, such as Prilosec, usually relieves symptoms.

In the second instance, the heart may be deprived of oxygen and nutrients, leading to nausea, vomiting and the perception of heartburn. Angina is diagnosed with a cardiogram or, in some instances, a stress test.

Your mother should start her diagnostic odyssey with a gastroenterologist, who will employ the tests I mentioned -- or, if necessary, refer her to a cardiologist for further evaluation.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband smokes a pipe and cigars and chews tobacco. He would like to believe that only cigarettes are really dangerous. Who's on the right track, since I disagree?

DEAR READER: While cigarettes are associated with a risk of lung cancer, pipes, cigars and smokeless tobacco often cause malignancies of the mouth, tongue and throat. Hence, your husband has merely chosen the risk of one type of cancer over another. You are correct. Tobacco in any form is dangerous and unhealthy.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Leading through old bridge magazines occasionally turns up real gems. Today's deal was in the April 1965 issue of the American Contract Bridge League Bulletin. It reminded me of a couplet from "The Winter's Tale":

If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

How do you think the play will go in seven diamonds?

South opened with an old-fashioned strong two-bid, which surprised East. He doubled North's negative response of two no-trump to show a good hand. He doubled seven diamonds on principle. No one could make a grand slam against him while he held 19 high-card points.

Things look too easy, don't they? After ruffing the spade lead, South cashes the diamond ace and the A-K of clubs. Then he leads a low club. If West follows, South has an awkward guess whether to ruff low or high. But here there is no problem. When West discards, declarer can claim.

However, East saw this coming. Under the club ace at trick three, East dropped his queen.

Now look at things from South's point of view. If that queen was the singleton it seemed to be, the contract was assured. After another round of trumps, West's club jack could be neutralized via a ruffing finesse. So South cashed the diamond king. Pull! The contract had just evaporated. East had to score a trick with his club jack.

When you cannot see any legitimate chance to beat a contract, try dropping an honor out of the blue. It might deflect declarer to defeat.

HOROSCOPE

By Beralce Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Feb. 8, 1994

In the year ahead you might become involved with an interesting partner in an endeavor which is large in scope. Your probabilities for success are good, provided both are always aiming for the same objectives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There are indications you might behave in a manner today that is diametrically opposed to persons who are trying to help you. Be grateful, not grumpy. Aquarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best not to say anything if you can't say something nice about others today. This could be especially true in dealings with in-laws or relatives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't try to overpower others today with your bright ideas or suggestions. If they're not buying, applying pressure might only stiffen their resistance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not expect peers to be supportive of your positions today if what you're espousing conflicts with theirs. Self-protection takes priority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to appease the demands of associates today, you might change course too often to be effective. Making changes for change sake is a bad policy.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful today that you don't do something out of spite in order to even accounts with another. This could have a boomerang effect with you being the one who takes the hit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Do not point the finger of blame at others today regarding something which was your responsibility and should have been taken care of by you. Bite the bullet and correct the situation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Co-workers might do as you do today, so provide them with a positive example. However, if what you do is negative, they'll emulate this as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your financial aspects continue to look encouraging, provided you operate along prudent, practical lines. If you depart from this course and take foolish risks, you could be asking for trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Guard against inclinations today to think problems can be completely resolved through nominal efforts. Unfortunately, resolutions aren't apt to come as easily as you like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If matters don't go exactly as you think they should today, you might make a counterproductive, negative decision which could really make things worse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today if you have to do any critical work which deals with facts and figures, you'd be wise to have someone double check your output. Big mistakes could result from small oversights. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
