THE MAN OF THE HOUR
GEO. H. BRIDGE JR.
CANDIDATE FOR REPRESENTATIVE GROUP 2

Once in a thousand times we have the opportunity to nominate a man for representative whose sterling character, unquestioned integrity, and business ability should appeal to every thinking voter in the county.

One of the chief ills of our whole country is legislation enacted for the few instead of for all of us.

Our chance is now at hand to place into this very important office a man who did not seek this office, but was urged by his friends, who know of his unselfish views as to the needs of the people of the county and state, and who will give untiring energy to put through legislation that will benefit all of the people.

With his dynamic personality, Mr. Bridge will make men listen to him when he presents a bill to legislature, for the benefit of his people.

When we elect Mr. Bridge, we will then have two representatives, he and Mr. Lehman, that will make a team that will be second to none in the state as to integrity and business ability.

Vote for Mr. Bridge and urge your friends to do the same.

Czech Tension Grows As Sudetens Suspend Peace Negotiations

Reports Of Break Are Heard As Henlein Abruptly Abandons Czech Conferences

Loyalists Launch Offensive Drive

Several Killed, Many Hurt In New Jerusalem Terrorism

Suspension of peace negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and Sudeten Germans kept Central Europe under tension, while in China, the Japanese continued their great offensive along the railway lines that may lead them to Hankow, China's provisional capital.

The Czechoslovakian-German discussions were interrupted when Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Nazi leader, abruptly departed for Asia on what was officially described as private business.

However, private reports indicated there had been a break over the basis for starting negotiations.

Premier Milan Hodza and Henlein, talked for more than two hours last night but arrangements for conferences today were called off.

The Japanese offensive to gain control of China's railway network advanced toward Kafeng, ancient capital of China 40 miles east of Chengchow.

In Spain, the government's attack on insurgent positions between Tremp and Balaguer gained momentum.

The insurgents were reported driven back at several points. East of Teruel, the Insurgent offensive against Valencia progressed slowly. The Mexican uprising appeared to have lost some of its dangerous aspects and President Lazaro Cardenas' government was confident the movement of General Salazar Cedillo in San Luis Potosi would not get beyond control.

Reports from Jerusalem told of two Arabs and a Jew being killed and 20 injured in a new outbreak of terrorism.

He expressed the appreciation of the club for the invitation of the Atlantic Ale and Beer Co.

Discussion was held on the annual convention of the Jaycees to be held in Miami June 2, 3, 4. A letter was read about the program which is being arranged at the McFadden Douglas Hotel where the convention headquarters will be.

Clyde Ramsey had charge of the program for the day.

Chinese Launch Counter Attack Against Invaders

KaiShek Is Furious At Hitler's Action Of Recalling Advisors

By Associated Press

SHANGHAI, (Tuesday) — Irritated by the action of Adolf Hitler in withdrawing all German advisers to the Chinese Army and cutting off German munitions to China, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek today threw his personal divisions into a series of smashing counter offensives against the Japanese which at dawn had resulted in the recapture of three important cities and 40 dozen villages by the Chinese.

A spokesman for the generalissimo in Hankow, confirming withdrawal of all Germany's supplies for China, said that Chiang's own troops were in a series of counter-attacks in the Sichuan Province which had resulted in re-capture of Lan-Peng, Yi-Feng and Tang-shan—all key cities in the fortified Long-Hai railway line defending Hankow, the provincial Chinese national capital.

The spokesman said withdrawal of the German military advisers, headed by General von Falkenhagen, a World War veteran, was "unfortunate" but would not influence Chinese resistance.

He refused to reveal the amount of munitions China has been receiving from Germany, which was known to have been considerable, and said this was not important since "we simply will buy now from other countries."

Secretary Ickes Marries American Woman In Dublin

WASHINGTON, May 24. — (AP) — Harold L. Ickes, secretary of interior, surprised the capital today by calling from Dublin Ireland, that he had just been married.

The cabinet officer, 44, disclosed through his press chief, that he and Miss Jane Dahlman, 25, of Milwaukee, were married in the Irish capital's Adelphi Road Presbyterian Church in a morning ceremony.

Only a few intimates knew he was gone from Washington; few or still that he had left the capital.

The Secretary's new wife, his second, is a niece of John Cadbury, U. S. minister to Dublin whom she was visiting. She also is sister of Mrs. Wilmuth Ickes, widow of Winona, Ill., widow of the Secretary's stepson who died in 1936.

Continued Rain Is Relief To Growers

Although but little rain fell in Sanford yesterday, an overcast sky at least protected residents from the blistering sun which prior to the shower sent the mercury soaring to a maximum of 86 degrees.

Yesterday's shower, and the overcast sky today with possibility of continued showers offered relief to Central Florida growers whose crops have been affected by the continued drought.

In some sections of the county, precipitation was heavier than the .06 inches recorded. The mercury last night dropped 23 degrees to record a low of 72, G. P. Paxton, local meteorologist, reported,

City's Heads Hold Regular Routine Meet

Sanford Avenue Merchants Make Plea To Prevent Holding Of Rummage Sales

A petition signed by most of the merchants on Sanford Avenue requesting the prevention of rummage sales in that district was presented to the City Commission last night at its regular meeting.

The petition declared that these merchants paid taxes on licenses to the City, whereas those who conducted rummage sales paid neither, consequently the petition pointed out, the conductors of such rummage sales have an unfair advantage over those whose lawful right it is to sell merchandise on that street.

The Commission decided to investigate the matter and deferred action until the next meeting.

The Eickeron Clothing Co. requested the City Commission to close a blind alley near its plant because as it is planning to purchase property adjacent to the plant and the alley would divide the property. The company contended that since it was blind alley and would be entirely within private property, there would be no need for the alley.

City Attorney Fred Wilson had prepared an ordinance for closing the alley but some of the commissioners felt that by closing it the City would be hampered in approaching sewers in the plant and the alley would divide the property.

Finally the commission decided to permit the closing of the alley and instructed Mr. Wilson to insert into the ordinance a clause or clauses to reserve the City's rights of ingress and egress to the sewers.

Rey Pharras as an unofficial representative of the Sanford Baseball Association approached before the commission and declared that Sanford was in danger of losing its franchise unless about $100,000 raised. He told the commissioners that he had no personal interest in the club, but that he would like to see Sanford have a baseball team. He asked the Commission to do whatever it could to help the team.

New Requisition Is Given REA Approval

The Rural Electrification Administration has approved a new requisition totaling $4,615,83 from funds available for the construction of 50.6 miles of lines in Orange, Seminole, Highlands and Volusia counties which will serve 241 new customers.

This requisition is from an allotment of $16,500 to the Florida Public Service Company and the money will be available for use as soon as the Treasury Department clears the vouchers. According to information on a Progress Bulletin by the REA, this makes more than $34,000 which has been advanced for the new lines.

The article states that about 95 percent of the supplied 76 received from the Sanford market comes from 25 Florida counties but a large proportion comes from within 50 miles of the market. Within about a 30 mile radius farmers usually bring in their own produce while dealers on the market usually send out trucks to bring in supplies from outside this 30-mile radius.

The annual volume of business transacted on the market, the article states, is the equivalent of about 1,200 carloads. Truckers who come from other states prefer to bring loads on their way to the market, often disposing of them before reaching Sanford, but 80 to 75 carloads of out-of-state commodities are brought to the Sanford market annually. The main commodities brought in are apples, hay, corn, potatoes, onions, and bananas, mostly non-competing products.

"To guide the development of such markets," the article states, it is important that some study be made to assist in deciding for a region how many such markets there should be, where they should be located, what equipment is needed, how the market should be arranged and operated, and in answering other questions of a similar nature.

The satisfactory development of markets of this type as concentration points in producing areas will adapt that part of the marketing system to the truck."

Citizens Trek To Polls To Vote In Run-Off Primary

Early Check Indicates Heavier Vote Than Had Been Expected

Seminole County voters went to the polls today to cast ballots in the run-off election in three county races and one state wide contest. Despite the heavy rain this afternoon and the apparent lack of interest in the races, indications shortly after noon to day revealed a heavier vote than had been expected.

Shortly after noon approximately 1,000 ballots had been cast in Precinct 3 while the residents in this precinct total 1,891. In precinct 1, the other city precinct, slightly more than 400 persons of a possible 1,500 had cast ballots.

The South's Position

to the wage and hour bill which we have seen anywhere was presented by Walter Lippmann in his syndicated newspaper column appearing last Sunday. The article deals with the bill in its present form, which applies only to industries engaged in interstate commerce and requires them to pay the same minimum wage and work the same number of hours in the South as in the North.

The fact that the bill is supported largely by Northern congressmen and senators regardless of party affiliation and is opposed almost exclusively by Southern Democrats and that the opposition is far stronger in the Senate where the proportion of Southern representation is larger than in the House should at least indicate to those who have not bothered to study the bill itself that it might contain some features more harmful to the South than to the North.

The bill is regarded with considerable favor by Northern employers and workingmen in those industries, like textiles, which are in competition with the South," Mr. Lippmann writes. "The most conservative Republicans like Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Davis of Pennsylvania are among those who are in favor of it. They regard the bill as the equivalent of an internal tariff to protect Northern industries by excluding the products of the cheaper Southern labor from the national market."

"The South is in an earlier stage of industrial development than is the North," Mr. Lippmann writes. "It has many handicaps. Since the Civil War it has been the victim of a tariff system which forced it to buy in a protected market and to sell its cotton and tobacco in a free market.

Since the World War its free world market has been closing, partly as a result of the Northern tariff policy. The South suffers from high railroad rates. It has not until recently had access to the private capital market. But it has cheaper labor and this labor lives nearer the raw materials and nearer a considerable part of the national market.

"If the South is to raise its standard of life," Mr. Lippmann continues, "it must turn away from its dependence on the export of a few staple crops, like cotton and tobacco, and it must diversify its agriculture and develop local industries. To do this it must compete with the older and more favored industrial regions, and the one real advantage it possesses in the competitive struggle is the fact that Southerners are willing and able to work for lower wages."

The fact of the matter is, to put it brutally, that in the long period of Republican rule after the Civil War, the South has had the status of a colony; and the no effect of the Nation's commercial policy has been to keep the South impoverished. Tariff policy, railroad policy, and the toleration of trusts and monopolies, and the concentrated control of credit, have worked one and all to retard the industrial development of the South and to keep it in the position of a colony producing cheap raw materials. It seems to me the irony of ironies that a Democratic Administration should be insisting on a wage and hour bill that will place one more handicap on the South's struggle to raise its standard of life."

Just how true what Mr. Lippmann has to say is, should be well known to us here in Sanford where we have depended for our existence on the one staple crop of cotton and where our civic leaders have struggled desperately to induce new industries to locate here and provide our working people with jobs. In this struggle for industrial development it is inevitable that our people will have to work harder than the workingmen in the established industrial sections of the country more favored by tariff, railroad, and easy credit policies.

If they do not work harder, they cannot compete, and there will be no industrial development, hence, no jobs.

Dirigibles in War

Germany's denial of the military value of her Zeppelins, made by Commander Hugo Eckener and others recently in their efforts to obtain American helium, are shown as entirely false by an amateur of dirigibles by Lieut. George W. Campbell, U. S. N., an expert on airship operation. Writing in Collier's, Lieut. Campbell, who served on the Los Angeles and the Akron and was officer of the deck of the Macon when she plunged into the Pacific, states that the popular belief that the big dirigibles are ineffective military weapons is based on ignorance of the facts.

"The airship's most important American contribution in post-war maneuvers," he writes, "is as a flying aircraft carrier, to be used as a scout in advance of the fleet. Consider two fleets seeking an engagement. The tactical advantage is with the fleet commander who first establishes the presence, strength and disposition of the enemy. The fleet commander with an airship scouting 1,000 miles ahead of his surface formation has the advantage because as a scout only, one airship and her brood of five planes are equal to twenty destroyers. In one hour, the airship's five planes will have scouted an area 6,250 miles in extent, a little better than what the 20 destroyers have done.

"Reduced to dollars, 20 destroyers cost about $100,000,000 against $5,000,000 for the airship and her five planes. Reduced to man power, 2,000 men are required for the destroyers while only 90 men are necessary for the airship and five planes. Until airplanes can operate in advance of the fleet and maintain a continuous patrol night and day the airship is in a class by itself—and the growing efficiency of the patrol-bombing plane is recognized. In such scouting operations used in the example given, it is assumed the atmosphere is clear with greatest visibility. Suppose we have fog—and our West Coast has plenty of it—then what?"

"In such weather the airship has a great advantage. There were many times, on both the Akron and the Macon, when the airship flew along in the fog and above it while airplanes from surface ships could not be launched. Even the fog did not prevent the airship from scouting. Upon numerous occasions the Macon flew above the fog and released her planes. After they were released, the planes flew over the fog until they found a hole in it. Then they spiraled down and opened on their scouting operations."

SILENT VERSE FOR TODAY

BLESSEDNESS OF DIVINE
COMPANIONSHIP: I will see
you again and your heart shall rejoice.—Joshua 16:22.

Not everybody can reach the top of the ladder of course, but everybody can try.

Another trouble with business
in this country is that too many investors have bought Mexican bonds.

If you pulled the sheets off
those modern Ku Klux Klan signs, well, but they'd have brown shirts on.

J. P. Calas, prominent local farmer, built into the Tampa Tribune's editorial page with his
plan on legalized gambling.

It looked as if Paul McNutt was a safe thing for the new presidential candidate until some one discovered that he didn't like to fish.

Business men in the United States complain of the "uncertainties", but then not many of them ever tried to do business in Czechoslovakia.

Of course there may be no
danger of war in Europe, but we certainly hope to goodness no political joke yell "Reat" all of a sudden.

The trouble about keeping your wife to the grindstone is that somebody's liable to give you a good kick in the pants while you're bent over that way.

To Spain they get rid of the unemployment problem by using bombs and machine guns. In this country we buy 'em all autumn and turn 'em loose on the highways.

Reports from Pinellas county indicate that no less than 25 percent of the citrus crop has been lost as a result of the drought.
Well, that's better than plowing
'em under.

Chances bombing planes carrying pamphlets containing propaganda on Japanese villages the other day. However, we doubt if they had enough dynamite in them to do any good.

David Rubinoff, who proved very popular with Central Floridaans when he played his violin in Orlando recently, is reported to be in a critical condition in Battle Creek following two major operations.

To our exchange table from Washington comes a publication
a probably called "Little Business", edited by famed Leslie Strode.
Amongst of Winter Haven and Orlando, in the interests of "Little Business". All we can say is that "We" about time, brother,
about time.

When the Green Shirts of Brazil tried to seize possession
of the palace grounds, President Vargas himself grabbed a plane and practically put down the revolution single handed. We can conclude from this incident a surprising requirement of the times: how well can he shoot a plane?

Of course one of the strongest arguments in favor of the crew is that this state has nothing against it; that is to say, that the crew even if the walls are destroyed. However, we've seen the crew with the aircrafts and irrigation trains in the case with the brook during this year for weeks.

The South's Position

One of the clearest explanations of Southern opposition to the wage and hour bill which we have seen anywhere was presented by Walter Lippmann in his syndicated newspaper column appearing last Sunday. The article deals with the bill in its present form, which applies only to industries engaged in interstate commerce and requires them to pay the same minimum wage and work the same number of hours in the South as in the North.

The fact that the bill is supported largely by northern congressmen and senators regardless of party affiliation and is opposed almost exclusively by Southern Democrats and that the opposition is far stronger in the Senate where the proportion of Southern representation is larger than in the House, should at least indicate to those who have not bothered to study the bill itself that it might contain some features more harmful to the South than to the North.

The bill is regarded with considerable favor by Northern employers and workingmen in those industries, like textiles, which are in competition with the South," Mr. Lippmann writes. The most conservative Republicans like Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Davis of Pennsylvania are among those who are in favor of it. "They regard the bill as the equivalent of an internal tariff to protect Northern industries by excluding the products of the cheaper Southern labor from the national market."

"The South is in an earlier stage of industrial development than is the North," Mr. Lippmann writes. "It has many handicaps. Since the Civil War it has been the victim of a tariff system which forced it to buy in a protected market and to sell its cotton and tobacco in a free market. Since the World War its free world market has been closing, partly as a result of the Northern tariff policy. The South suffers from high railroad rates. It has not until recently had access to the private capital market. But it has cheaper labor and this labor lives nearer the raw materials and nearer a considerable part of the national market."

"If the South is to raise its standard of life," Mr. Lippmann continues, "it must turn away from its dependence on the export of a few staple crops, like cotton and tobacco, and it must diversify its agriculture and develop local industries. To do this it must compete with the older and more favored industrial regions, and the one real advantage it possesses in the competitive struggle is the fact that Southerners are willing and able to work for lower wages."

"The fact of the matter is, to put it brutally, that in the long period of Republican rule after the Civil War, the South has had the status of colony; and the no effect of the Nation's commercial policy has been to keep the South impoverished. Tariff policy, railroad policy, and the toleration of trusts and monopolies, and the control of credit, have worked one and all to retard the industrial development of the South and to keep it in the position of a colony producing cheap raw materials. It seems to me the irony of ironies that a Democratic Administration should be insisting on a wage and hour bill that will place one more handicap on the South's struggle to raise its standard of life."

Just how true what Mr. Lippmann has to say is, should be well known to us here in Sanford where we have depended for our existence on the one staple crop of cotton and where our civic leaders have struggled desperately to induce new industries to locate here and provide our working people with jobs. In this struggle for industrial development it is inevitable that our people will have to work harder than the workingmen in the established industrial sections of the country more favored by tariff, railroad, and easy credit policies.

If they do not work harder, they cannot compete, and there will be no industrial development, hence, no jobs.

Dirigibles In War

Germany's denial of the military value of her Zeppelins, made by Commander Hugo Eckener and others recently in their efforts to obtain American helium, are shown as entirely false in an analysis of dirigibles by Lieut. George W. Campbell, U. S. N., an expert on airship operations. Writing in Collier's, Lieut. Campbell, who served on the Los Angeles and the Akron and was officer of the dock of the Macon when she plunged into the Pacific, states that the popular belief that the big airships are ineffective military weapons is based on ignorance of the facts.

"The airship's most important American contribution in post-war maneuvers," he writes, "is as a flying aircraft carrier, to be used as a scout far in advance of the fleet. Consider two fleets seeking an engagement. The tactical advantage is with the fleet commander who first establishes the presence, strength and disposition of the enemy. The fleet commander with an airship scouting 1,000 miles ahead of his surface formation has the advantage because as a scout only, one airship and her brood of five planes are equal to twenty destroyers. In one hour, the airship's five planes will have scouted an area 6,250 miles in extent, a little better than what the 20 destroyers have done."

"Reduced to dollars, 20 destroyers cost about $100,000,000 against $5,000,000 for the airship and her five planes. Reduced to man power, 8,000 men are required for the destroyers while only 80 men are necessary for the airship and five planes. Until airplanes can operate in advance of the fleet and maintain a continuous patrol night and day the airship is in a class by itself—and the growing efficiency of the patrol-bombing plane is recognized. In such scouting operations used in the example given, it is assumed the atmosphere is clear, with average visibility. Suppose we have fog—and our West Coast has plenty of it—then what?"

"In such weather the airship has a great advantage. There were many times, on both the Akron and the Macon, when the airship flew along in the fog and above it while airplanes from surface ships could not be launched. Even the fog did not prevent the airship from scouting. Upon numerous occasions the Macon flew above the fog and released her planes. After they were released, the planes flew over the fog until they found a hole in it. Then they spiraled down and spied on their scouting operations."

Same bolt of cloth . . .

Thirty years ago a blushing young bride-to-be walked into Harry Long's dry goods store in Leaven, Iowa, and asked to see some material from which to make a wedding dress.

Mr. Long smiled and took down from the shelf the bolt of cloth which he had stocked for just such a purpose.

"It's a beautiful!" The girl said. Mrs. O. L. Frazier of Davis City, Iowa, bought enough for her dress and happily went home to work on it.

Just the other day another blushing young bride-to-be walked into Harry Long's store.

She said: "I'd like to know if you can match the material in this dress. I tried to get some like it in Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, but there doesn't seem to be any."

Why, I believe that's the same cloth I sold to Mrs. Frazier when she got married back in '24," Mrs. Long said. "Here, I'll still get the same bolt up on the shelf same place I let you take it last."

Strange as it seems, the same old bride-to-be daughter of Mrs. Frazier, bought material for her wedding dress from the same bolt of cloth her mother obtained her original wedding dress material from.

Now, Mrs. C. K. Reger, she lives in Iowa City and is happily married. In one of the strands of her wedding dress are record.

Pasture Subsidies Bring Improvement To Grazing Lands

GAINESVILLE, May 24.—Pasture improvement—something that means better cattle and more money for Florida cattle men has been given a big boost during the past year by the agricultural conservation program workers of the State Agricultural Extension Service and the State Experiment Station.

By spending a large percentage of the cost, the government's conservation program encouraged and enabled cattlemen in various sections of the state to seed approximately 60,000 acres of permanent pasture during the past year, according to H. G. Clayton, Extension district agent in charge of the program in Florida. Pasture improvement is one of the major phases of the conservation program, the government has paid or is paying cattlemen $3 an acre for establishing permanent pastures.

The government subsidy covered practically the entire expense of preparing the land, buying grass seed, and planting operations for a very small number of the cooperating cattlemen whose lands were already crowded or abounding growth, according to W. E. Hinckley, Experiment Station agronomist.

On lands where it was necessary to use heavy machinery to rid them of palmetto, gallberry, sea myrtle, and other tough obnoxious growth, the government payment of 50 percent of the cost of planting permanent pastures. A large percentage of the pasture improvement work has been done on lands of this character, particularly in Glades, Highlands, Charlotte, Polk, and Hardee counties, Mr. Hinckley said.

In addition to the actual seedling of pastures, many farmers have adopted the recommendation of the Experiment Station and are cutting the weeds and brush on their pasture lands, thus giving the grass a better chance to grow. More than 10,000 acres of weeds have been cut this year.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

BLESSEDNESS OF DIVINE
COMPANIONSHIP: I will see
you again and your heart shall rejoice.—Joshua 16:22.

Not everybody can reach the top of the ladder of course, but everybody can try.

Another trouble with business
in this country is that too many investors have bought Mexican
bonds.

If you pulled the sheets off
these modern Ku Klux Klanists, well bet they'd have brown knights on.

J. J. Gates, prominent local financier, burst into the Tampa
plan on legalized gambling.

It looked as if Paul McNutt
was a sure thing for the next presidential candidate until some one discovered that he didn't like fish.

Business men in the United States complain of the "unfriendly" attitude, but there isn't many of them ever tried to do business in Czechoslovakia.

Of course there may be no
danger of war in Europe, but we
certainly hope to goodness no practical joker yells "Halt" all at once.

The trouble about keeping your sheep to the ground is that nobody's liable to give you a good kick in the pants while
you're bent over that way.

In Spain they got rid of the unemployment problem by using bombs and machine guns. In this country we buy out all automobiles and turn 'em loose on the highways.

Reports from Pinellas county indicates that no less than 25 percent of the citrus crop has been
lost as a result of the drought.
Well, that's better than plowing
mine in there to do any good.

Dave Rubinoff, who proved very popular with Central Fla-milians when he played his violin in Orlando recently, has reported to a critical condition in Battle Creek following two major operations.

To our exchange table from Washington comes a publication,
a weekly called "Little Business", edited by famed Leslie Handerfordly of Winter Haven and Orlando, in the interests of "Little Man Business". All we can say is that it's about time, brother.
about time.

When the Green Shirts of Brazil tried to seize possession
of the palace grounds, President
Vargas himself grabbed a pistol
and practically put down the revolution single handed. We can
conclude from this incident a
surprising requirement of the times: how well can he shoot a pistol?

Of course one of the strongest arguments in favor of the cross roads would be that this state has nothing anyway to take out of the corps even if the walls were destroyed. However we've seen that the connection with the crossroads did bring down systems in the past, so the broadest policy during the year few weeks

The South's Position

One of the clearest explanations of Southern opposition
to the wage and hour bill which we have seen anywhere was presented by Walter Lippmann in his syndicated newspaper column appearing last Sunday. The article deals with the bill in its present form, which applies only to industries engaged in interstate commerce and requires them to pay the same minimum wage and work the same number of hours in the South as in the North.

The fact that the bill is supported largely by northern congressmen and senators regardless of party affiliation and is opposed almost exclusively by Southern Democrats and that the opposition is far stronger in the Senate where the proportion of Southern representation is larger than in the House, should at least indicate to those who have not bothered to study the bill itself that it might contain some features more harmful to the South than to the North.

"The bill is regarded with considerable favor by Northern employers and workmen in those industries, like textiles, which are in competition with the South," Mr. Lippmann writes. The most conservative Republicans like Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Davis of Pennsylvania are among those who are in favor of it. They regard the bill as the equivalent of an internal tariff to protect Northern industries by excluding the products of the cheaper Southern labor from the national market."

"The South is in an earlier stage of industrial development than is the North," Mr. Lippmann writes. "It has many handicaps. Since the Civil War it has been the victim of a tariff system which forced it to buy in a protected market and to sell its cotton and tobacco in a free market. Since the World War its free world market has been closing, partly as a result of the Northern tariff policy. The South suffers from high railroad rates. It has not until recently had access to the private capital market. But it has cheaper labor and this labor lives nearer the raw materials and nearer a considerable part of the national market."

"If the South is to raise its standard of life," Mr. Lippmann continues, "it must turn away from its dependence on the export of a few staple crops, like cotton and tobacco, and it must diversify its agriculture and develop local industries. To do this it must compete with the older and more favored industrial regions, and the one real advantage it possesses in the competitive struggle is the fact that Southerners are willing and able to work for lower wages."

"The fact of the matter is, to put it brutally, that in the long period of Republican rule after the Civil War, the South has had the status of a colony; and the effect of the Nation's commercial policy has been to keep the South impoverished. Tariff policy, railroad policy, and the toleration of trusts and monopolies, and the concentrated control of credit, have worked one and all to retard the industrial development of the South and to keep it in the position of a colony producing cheap raw materials. It seems to me the irony of ironies that a Democratic Administration should be insisting on a wage and hour bill that will place one more handicap on the South's struggle to raise its standard of life."

Just how true what Mr. Lippmann has to say is, should be well known to us here in Sanford where we have depended for our existence on the one staple crop of cotton and where our civic leaders have struggled desperately to induce new industries to locate here and provide our working people with jobs. In this struggle for industrial development it is inevitable that our people will have to work harder than the workingmen in the established industrial sections of the country more favored by tariff, railroad, and easy credit policies.

If they do not work harder, they cannot compete, and there will be no industrial development, hence, no jobs.

Dirigibles In War

Germany's denial of the military value of her Zeppelins made by Commander Hugo Eckener and others recently in their efforts to obtain American helium, are shown as entirely false in an analysis of dirigibles by Lieut. George W. Campbell, U. S. N., an expert on airship operation. Writing in Collier's, Lieut. Campbell, who served on the Los Angeles and the Akron and was officer of the deck of the Macon when she plunged into the Pacific, states that the popular belief that the big airships are ineffective military weapons is based on ignorance of the facts.

"The airship's most important American contribution in post-war maneuvers," he writes, "is as a flying aircraft carrier, to be used as a scout far in advance of the fleet. Consider two fleets seeking an engagement. The tactical advantage is with the fleet commander who first establishes the presence, strength and disposition of the enemy. The fleet commander with an airship scouting 1,000 miles ahead of his surface formation has the advantage because as a scout only, one airship and her brood of five planes are equal to twenty destroyers. In one hour, the airship's five planes will have scouted an area 6,250 miles in extent, in little better than what the 20 destroyers have done."

"Reduced to dollars, 20 destroyers cost about $100,000,000 against $5,000,000 for the airship and her five planes. Reduced to man power, 8,000 men are required for the destroyers while only 90 men are necessary for the airship and five planes. Until airplanes can operate in advance of the fleet and maintain a continuous patrol night and day the airship is in class by itself—and the growing efficiency of the patrol-bombing plane is recognized. In such scouting operations used in the example given, it is assumed the atmosphere is clear with average visibility. Suppose we have fog—and our West Coast has plenty of it—then what?"

"Of course one of the strongest arguments in favor of the cross roads would be that this state has nothing anyway to take

SAME BOLT OF CLOTH

Thirty years ago a young bride-to-be walked into Harry Long's dry goods store in Linton, Iowa, and asked to see some material from which to make a wedding dress.

Mr. Long snatched a bolt down from the shelf, a big bolt of cloth which he had stocked for just such a request.

"It's so beautiful!" the girl said. Mrs. O. J. Reiger of Linton, Iowa, bought enough for her dress and happily went home to work on it.

Just the other day another blushing young bride-to-be walked into Harry Long's store. She said: "I'd like to know if you can match the material in this dress. I tried to get some like it in Des Moines and Chicago but none there seemed seem to be any."

Why, I believe that's the same cloth I sold to Mrs. Reiger when she got married back in 1908! Here I've got the same bolt up on the shelf, come where let me see a look."

Strangely, it seems, the same bride-to-be is daughter of Mrs. Reiger—bought material for her wedding dress from the same bolt of cloth her mother obtained her original wedding dress material from!

Now Mrs. C. K. Reiger, she lives in Iowa City and is happily married to one of the strongest and handsomest men in town.

She said: "I'd like to know if you can match the material in this dress. I tried to get some Anything for the Good of Optometry" was the subject for the open discussion of the 30th annual convention of the Florida State Optometric Association held in Orlando this week at which discussion Dr. Henry McLain, Jr. suggested that the State Board of Optometry be appointed by the association and made a law-enforcing body.

This Dr. McLain believes, would make it possible to prosecute quickly unlicensed practitioners who now offer a "gray market" to the public and a "red market" on the optometric profession.

The annual banquet and dance of the convention was held last night at the Orlando Country Club.

KINGSTON, JAMAICA, May 24 (UPI)—Two warships steamed from Bermuda to assist the Jamaican government in controlling a disastrous outbreak of strikes in which workers demanded higher wages. Kingston was tied up by the general strike.

In addition to the actual members of the strike, many farmers have adopted the recommendations of the Experiment Station and are cutting the woods and brush on their pasture lands, thus giving the grass a better chance to grow. More than 10,000 acres of woods have been cut this year.

Foes Back Bill For Wages, Hours, E. E. Cox States

Congressman Says Industrialists Seek To Shackle South

WASHINGTON, May 23.—A congressman from the South has promoted a bill to prohibit the states from passing laws which would set so much as a minimum wage when Negroes are employed in Florida, and he is supported by large numbers.

Congressman Cox's statement to the press follows:

"Events on the last week have brought to light to us who represent Southern states how far we constantly contend in our fight against the minimum bill. This bill is designed to serve no purpose other than to put handicaps and restrictions on the work of Negroes in Northern industries."

Congressman Cox's statement in full is as follows:

"Events on the last week have brought to light to us who represent Southern states how far we constantly contend in our fight against the minimum bill. This bill is designed to serve no purpose other than to put handicaps and restrictions on the work of Negroes in Northern industries."

"The progress of the Southern states in industrial legislation is to be retarded and handicapped if it can be brought about via Northern action."

"The same interests that plot for a wage-hour law with rigid horizontal minimum wages and maximum hour provisions, because their heart bleeds for the 'underpaid' workers of the South, are the very same ones who desire a parity of pay under WPA to Southern workers compared to Northern workers."

"No argument of either reasoning can dispense the glaring fact that not only have WPA expenditures been vastly greater in the Northern than they have in the Southern states, but that the differentials between the pay for Southern workers on WPA and of Northern workers doing the same kind of work come in excess of 100 per cent while that in the North pay $10 a month, in the South will pay $19 a month. This is conclusively known that this whole campaign for a wage-hour bill is not to benefit Southern workers at all but to handicap the South, stop her industrial progress, deprive her workers of jobs in order that other sections of the United States may thrive at the expense of the South."

Violators Tried By F. L. Miller In Session of Court

Only one white person was tried before City Judge Frank L. Miller yesterday in Municipal Court. Ruben Hardy, charged with drunkenness, was sentenced to pay $5 or spend 10 days in jail.

The following negroes were tried: Willie James, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed; Leola Redding, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed; Henry Stewart, charged with disorderly conduct, estranged a bond of $15. Katherine Johnson, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed. Katherine Johnson, also charged with contempt of court, was found guilty and given a 5-day suspended sentence.

Leroy Ward, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was sentenced to pay $20 or spend 60 days in jail. George Barnes, charged with drunkenness, was given a suspended sentence of 10 days.

Warren Cleveland, charged with drunkenness, was sentenced to pay $15 or spend 40 days in jail. Charlie Lawrence, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was sentenced to 90 days in jail.

C. D. Davis, charged with disorderly conduct, was sentenced to pay $25 or spend 50 days in jail. Mandy Davis, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed. Aletha Hatcher, charged with disorderly conduct, was sentenced to pay $15 or spend 10 days in jail.

FACTS DISCLOSED

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Federal officials yesterday disclosed facts indicating that Dr. Ignatz T. Griswold, former American Nazi leader now in Germany, deliberately planned to dodge questioning as an ace witness in the government's international spy inquiry.

Traveling Around America

SPANISH ACCENTS

There is glamour and color in every Spanish colonial days. It is fitting to many parts of the New World. This lovely señorita was photographed in front of one of the colonial landmarks of the Casa de España, the spot where the town of Aguilas now stands—was to rush the waters ashore. The discoverer is said to be the newly found land "Isla de la Bautista," "Saint John the Baptist." Later, however, the name became to be known as Puerto Rico. Rich Port. After bestowing a name upon this island and taking possession of it for Spain, Columbus continued his voyage to Santo Domingo and the colonization of the island was left to Ponce de Leon, who returned fifteen years later and ruled as governor until his death, which resulted from a wound inflicted by the Seminoles during the third of his famous trips to Florida in search of the fabled Fountain of Youth.

According to some of the earlier reports, Columbus discovered the island none too soon, for the drinking water carried on his battered rocks was beginning to grow foul—the island was an oasis in a desert.

PLANNING FOOD SUPPLY

Planned food production is an important project this year.

Planting an adequate garden will help to provide a good supply of food but it also relieves each other of the same time that it insures a good diet.

The Florida food supply budget should include the kinds of food needed for well-rounded diet which can be grown here. It also should show how much of each kind should be planted in order to have a well-filled pantry and storage cellar for next winter's needs. The size and habits of different families is taken into consideration, too.

The vegetable garden does not take care of all the food needs.
Fruit trees and vines enter into the picture, also poultry for eggs and meat, meat animals, and provision for milk and milk products.
If the family has a definite plan for producing food, based on its actual requirements, the chances are good for an abundant food supply which will be sure to insure enough of the important types. Home demonstration agents can help in planning food budgets.

Nazi funeral honors paid to two Sudeten Germans slain in Czechoslovakia aggravated the threatening central European situation while Japanese were consolidating their control of central China's railroad system and warring factions in Spain continued their grim, shifting conflict.

Czechoslovaks were highly irritated over the honors paid by Adolf Hitler at the funeral for the two Sudeten Germans who died in the frontier shooting last Saturday created an international crisis.

Germany, meanwhile, protested to Prague of alleged instances of Czech military planes flying over German territory.

In the Orissa Japanese announced control of the important Tigray-Pukow railway and expected to resume traffic over it next month. They continued their offensive westward along the longest railway, aiming at Hanoi. In Spain the government made frontal attacks against Barca, Trem and Balaguer in northeast Spain in an effort to sustain its military and government supporters and took of scattered guerilla skirmishes.

Bagwell Describes Orlando Meeting As Great Success

Ralph Bagwell, secretary of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, declared today that the convention of the Florida Commercial Retailers Association held in Orlando Sunday, Monday and Tuesday was one of the most successful he has ever attended.

Fred J. Lee, secretary of the Clearwater Chamber of Commerce, was elected president of the association yesterday afternoon when the organization closed its 19th annual convention which was held at the Orange Court Hotel.

Mr. Lee took over the office which has been held for the last year by James T. Daniels of Jacksonville.

Other officers chosen were: August Burkhart, Fort Lauderdale, vice president and C. D. Davenport, Panama City, secretary-treasurer.

Panama City was tentatively selected by the association for its 1939 meeting place.

United Airlines Ship Inexplicably Plunges To Earth Near Cleveland Airport

CLEVELAND, May 25.—(AP)—Firemen lay the bodies of nine men and a woman on the bottom of a muddy ravine today alongside the town and charred remains of a twin-motor airliner which plummeted inexplicably to earth only eight miles from its scheduled landing. Two pilots, a stewardess and all seven passengers died as flames leapt at wreckage of the United Airlines ship, bound from Newark to Chicago, via Cleveland.

Among the passengers was John Brostoun, Republican state chairman of North Dakota, returning home after a conference at Washington with his state's senators.

The plane, flying under a clear sky, swooped toward the earth within sight of the Cleveland airport. It ripped off tops of trees two feet thick and plunged into a natural grave in a wooded gully.

Firemen in suburban Independence village battled the flames for several hours and dug into the smoking debris for the bodies, from which the clothes had been burned almost entirely off.

The airliner was due at the Cleveland airport at 10:24 P. M. EST last night and the last radio message a few minutes earlier reported "everything ok."

An airline spokesman said the plane was directly on its course.
