Marine killed accidentally

SEOUL, South Korea — A 19-year-old U.S. marine temporarily stationed in South Korea was accidentally shot and killed when an M-16 automatic rifle discharged, the U.S. military said Wednesday.

Private David L. Jones, of Linn County, Iowa, was killed Monday at Yechon Air Base, 105 miles southeast of Seoul, while on guard duty, a U.S. military statement said.

10 die in Marine choppers crash

YUMA, Ariz. — Two Marine helicopters crashed in the Arizona desert while practicing night maneuvers, killing all 10 men aboard, authorities said today.

The accident came one day after a National Guard helicopter crashed in the California desert, killing all eight men aboard.

The Marine choppers, a CH-46 and a UH-1N, were on a training mission as part of a weapons tactics instructor course that brought together 81 Marines from bases nationwide, said Staff Sgt. Hal Wheeler of the Marine Corps Air Station at Yuma.

Israeli jets hit Lebanon again

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israeli warplanes pounded guerrilla bases near a Palestinian refugee camp today in Israel's third airstrike in southern Lebanon in less than a week, police said.

Two Israeli warplanes made two runs at low altitude, firing missiles into guerrilla positions manned by Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement in the Miyeh Miyeh refugee camp on the outskirts of the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, authorities said.

Smoke billowed from the bases as ambulances and rescue workers rushed to the scene. There was no immediate report on casualties.

Wednesday's air raid was the 18th in Lebanon this year.

Drug patrols suspended

OCOTILLO, Calif. — A new surveillance patrol aimed at detecting drug smugglers along the Mexican border has been suspended following the fiery crash of a National Guard helicopter that killed five sheriff's deputies and three guardsmen, authorities said.

The UH-1H "Huey" apparently hit a 500,000 kilowatt power line and spun out of control Monday night, crashing in the desert near Interstate 8 outside of Ocotillo, 85 miles east of San Diego. The chopper burst into flames so intense that the craft melted, and all eight men were killed instantly, Imperial County Assistant Sheriff Ted Whitmer said.

UCF star winds up career

ORLANDO — When The University of Central Florida women's soccer team ends their regular season this week, it will mark the end of an era.

The Michelle Akers era.

Akers, a 5-10 senior from Seattle, is considered "the greatest women's soccer player" in NCAA history according to Knights women's soccer coach Bill Barker.

In a college (UCF) where most of the team glory and individual honors in the past several years have come from the football team, Michelle Akers is the most honored and greatest athlete in the history of the University of Central Florida.

Doctors told to back Amendment 10 or leave association

United Press International

JACKSONVILLE — Physicians failing to pay $500 to the Florida Medical Association to help pass Amendment 10 will be dropped from the group's membership rolls, officials said Tuesday.

John Thrasher, the association's general counsel, said 80 percent of the 13,000 active members have paid and that he expects the other 20 percent to pay by the Nov. 8 election.

"If they don't pay the dues, they don't join. If they don't pay the assessment, they drop out," Thrasher said.

He said the group's 250-member board of directors voted September 1987 to assess each member to support a campaign for the proposed constitutional amendment to place a $100,000 cap on compensation for non-economic damages like pain and suffering in civil suits.

The assessment is in addition to the physician's $300 annual dues, Thrasher said.

The medical association, which supported a $300 assessment in 1984 to support a similar campaign, is requiring doctors to pay to fight a "vicious and distorted advertising campaign" by attorneys fighting the amendment with a well-financed campaign, according to a final notice mailed this week.

"It doesn't do any good paying for it after the fact," said Dr. Harold Norman, president of the Dade County Medical Association.

Thrasher said members received an initial notice in March and the association has sent out two others since then.

"You will have some disgruntled people, but those have been very few," Thrasher said.

The Florida Medical Association is a voluntary professional organization.

County to buy water, sewer plant

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners gave the go-ahead Tuesday to negotiate with Heathrow Land and Development Corp. to purchase the development's water and sewer treatment plants west of Interstate 4.

The county has been paying Heathrow $10,000 annually since 1984 under a 14-year lease agreement to operate and maintain the two plants, says Jim Bible, deputy county administrator. In return, the county receives more than $10,000 a month in user fees. Cindy Wright, acting county environmental services director, says the fees amounted to $15,308 for September.

Bible told commissioners the purchase of the sewer plant, currently permitted to pump about 200,000 gallons daily, would cost little. He said developers pay the county sewer impact fees, currently $3,000 per home. The amount is credited against the purchase price of the sewer plant. Bible said with the accumulated credits, he doubts the county would have pay anything additional for the plant.

Bible said he was uncertain how much the 400,000-gallon per day water plant would cost, although he estimated several hundred thousand dollars.

Bible said the lease agreement allowed the county to expand the plants, but with the Yankee Lake sewer treatment plant under construction, the smaller Heathrow plant was unneeded for those homes. He said after the Yankee Lake plant is operating, the Heathrow plant will be closed.

Eight taking aim at Lake Mary seats

By SANDRA BOUCHAMINE
Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY — Eight candidates will compete on Nov. 8 for four seats in Lake Mary's city election: mayor and commission seats 1, 2 and 4.

Lake Mary City voters will also see three city charter amendments on the ballot. There are 2,472 registered voters in the city this year as of Oct. 8, according to the elections office.

The candidates comprise a blend of accountants, educators and businessmen.

The issues involve growth and development, leadership and water conservation. Each of the candidates this year promises to use his field of expertise to improve Lake Mary.

All of the candidates say they are concerned with "quality of life" in a period of rapid growth and development.

The race for the mayoral seat pits incumbent Mayor Richard A. Fess against Commissioner Randall C. Morris for a two-year term.

Other candidates include William (Bill) T. Greene and Kenneth Wayne King for a one-year term on commission seat 1; Milt Geffen and David J. Meador for a two-year term on commission seat 2; and

Final assault launched to free trapped whales

United Press International

ABOARD THE ADMIRAL MAKAROV — Two big Soviet icebreaking ships launched what was hoped will be the final assault in the two-week battle to free a pair of stranded California gray whales from their ice prison off Barrow, Alaska.

With a cry of "Let us begin to cut ice" from the captain of the Admiral Makarov, the giant icebreaker and a heavy-hulled cargo ship began ramming a hole in a 35-foot high ridge of ice that forms the final barrier between the trapped whales and a channel to the open sea.

After hours of planning "Operation Breakthrough" with U.S. rescuers, the two Soviet ships sailed one-behind-the-other through ice-covered water to the ridge, which extends for several miles, leaving a long trail of broken ice behind them.

Only two of the scores of reporters who have come to Barrow from all over the world were allowed to accompany the U.S. delegation to the Admiral Makarov, an 11-story giant with its own swimming pool that Adm. Sig Petersen of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration called "a magnificent ship."

Petersen shook hands with Capt. Sergei Reshetov and said, "We appreciate your being here."

"Are they in good condition?" Reshetov asked of the whales, to which U.S. rescue coordinator Ron Morris replied, "Yes."

Reshetov seemed anxious to get started, saying he wanted to get as much accomplished as possible before the long arctic night settled in after a 5:45 p.m. sunset.

"Let us begin to cut ice," said Reshetov, whose ship is part of the Soviet Far East Steamship Co., based in Vladivostok.

"He runs an icebreaker, that's what he does for a living," Morris said after returning to shore. "Tell him where to go and he's going to go do it."

The Soviets and Americans sat at a table poring over the latest nautical charts and planning their attack. The Americans, including Capt. Joseph McClelland, of the U.S. icebreaker Polar Sea based in Seattle, explained the situation to the Soviets, pointing out the location of scientifically determined weak points in the ridge.

Reshetov appeared unworried about his encounter with the ridge.

"In the eastern part of our country," he said in excellent English, "the ice is very hard."

The meeting over, the icebreakers made the two-hour trip to the ridge. The 20,241-ton Makarov rammed the wall of ice, fell back and rammed it again and again at the weak spots between the house-sized chunks that make up

Save the whale ideas coming in by hundreds

United Press International

BARROW, Alaska — Hundreds of people from all over the world, fascinated by the dramatic effort to save a pair of trapped whales, are calling the tiny Eskimo village of Barrow with suggestions and best wishes — and sometimes just tears and prayers.

The suggestions have ranged from the inspired to the absurd, and one of them resulted in one of the most effective strategies of the entire rescue mission — the humming little machines that have helped keep the whales alive by keeping their air holes free of ice.

Other callers have suggested a bowling ball bombing run and the lure of soothing music. Some have suggested lighting bonfires on the ice to melt it, but those callers apparently did not remember their high school geography lessons: Barrow is 300 miles north of the Arctic Circle and there isn't a tree for

Scientists probe pelican deaths

PORT ORANGE — Veterinarians at the University of Florida examined the carcasses of brown pelicans Tuesday to determine what killed more than 100 of the birds and blinded dozens more on an island south of Daytona Beach.

Tests are expected to take several days or even weeks, but state biologists speculated a larval parasite attacked the birds' eyes and heads, said Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission Lt. Vinard Hill.

"It's almost like leprosy. It's eating away, rotting their skulls. The bone was almost exposed," said wildlife rehabilitator Carol Swain.

Officials said the more than 100 birds did not appear to have been poisoned, nor do they think pollution is to blame.

An anonymous caller alerted commission officials Sunday night to the deaths on Pelican Island, south of Daytona Beach. Wildlife officials said they had never seen such a large bird kill.

Man jailed for messing up his beer

JACKSONVILLE — James Harvey pleaded guilty and apologized Tuesday for putting a mouse in a Coors beer can this summer. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Harvey, 31, an unemployed construction worker, pleaded guilty to extortion and consumer product tampering and will start his prison sentence Nov. 1. Circuit Judge R. Hudson Olliff sentenced Harvey to two concurrent 18-month prison terms.

"With the outcome of the criminal proceedings, we've restored the quality image of Coors in the marketplace," Peter H. Coors, president of the Adolph Coors Co. brewing division, said in a statement.

Harvey's guilty plea came one day after Coors spoke to business and civil leaders and major retailers in Jacksonville to "correct some of the misconceptions in the marketplace," said company spokesman David Goldberg in Golden, Colo.

U. S. Customs returns Eastern plane

MIAMI — U.S. Customs officials returned a jumbo jet to Eastern Airlines Inc. late Tuesday after the airline filed a letter of credit for $690,000 to cover a federal fine for transporting illicit drugs.

Customs agents seized the Eastern L-1011 Monday when it returned from a flight to New York City. The 56 pounds of cocaine were found among the cargo carried from Colombia to Miami last Sunday.

Eastern, which had expected to win the release of the L-1011 earlier in the day, planned to use the jet for its Flight 21 to Lima, Peru, departing Tuesday at 6:05 p.m.

But the late release forced Eastern to scuttle those plans, said Karen Ceremak, a spokeswoman for the airline in Miami. Instead, the jet was scheduled to depart for Los Angeles as Flight 505 at 6:30 p.m.

Eastern officials were clearly perturbed by the delay, and by the seizure.

Millionaire's wife charged in murder

MIAMI — Joyce Cohen, a longtime suspect in the 1986 murder of her millionaire husband, Stanley, was held on first-degree murder charges Tuesday in a Virginia jail, officials said.

Miami detectives Monday arrested Cohen, 38, now living in Chesapeake, Va., for the March 7, 1986, murder of her 52-year-old husband.

Robert Rosenblatt, her lawyer, said Mrs. Cohen plans to waive her right to extradition proceedings.

Police already arrested the accused triggerman, Anthony Caracciolo, and an alleged accomplice, Thomas Lambert, son of reputed mobster Louis "Donald Duck" Lambert.

Both have pleaded innocent to the murder.

Radon guidelines approved

TALLAHASSEE — A university advisory council issued voluntary construction guidelines Tuesday that are intended to reduce the risk in new homes from deadly radon gas.

The next step is to field test the guidelines in a new housing development, so the findings can be incorporated in mandatory regulations the State University System Radon Advisory Board must recommend in 1990, said chairman Thomas Pugh, a professor of agriculture at Florida A&M University.

"The guidelines are a totally voluntary mechanism" because the state is reluctant to require new construction techniques until radon gas and ways it filters into buildings are better understood, Pugh said.

When the advisory panel issues its recommendations, the state Department of Community Affairs will have another year to incorporate the findings into the state building code," Pugh said.

Sisters split $31.5 million lottery prize

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Mary Ellen Snipes and Maxine Johnson, two sisters from Indian town who work in the same electronics plant, split $31.5 million Tuesday from a winning Florida Lottery ticket that Snipes nearly did not buy.

Snipes was tired from working Saturday and was about to skip the $10 lotto investment she made with her sister every week. It was her ex-husband, Lewis Snipes, who prevailed upon her to let him buy some tickets for her.

He filled out the winning ticket using numbers he found on that week's pay stub from his ex-wife's job — 3, 11, 14, 15, 27 and 40, the six numbers selected in the Lotto grand prize drawing Saturday night.

But the sisters had already gone to bed when the numbers were drawn and spent Monday as usual on the assembly line before they realized their good fortune.

When they learned for sure they had won, on Monday evening, "My mouth flew open," said Snipes.

"I almost fainted," said Johnson. "I did not even dream that we had the winning number," Snipes said. "When I saw it, I didn't believe it."

He (Lewis Snipes) filled out the winning ticket using numbers he found on that week's pay stub from his ex-wife's job — 3, 11, 14, 15, 27 and 40, the six numbers selected in the Lotto grand prize drawing Saturday night.

The sisters were still somewhat shaken Tuesday when they faced reporters and a crowd of cheering Lottery Department employees to receive a check for $15 million before taxes — the first of 20 annual payments they will share.

"Saturday evening I was not going to play Lotto at all. I was feeling bad. I had worked all day," Snipes said.

But at her ex-husband's insistence, she dug through her handbag to find her pay stub. "Usually, I throw that thing away — I don't have any use for it anyway," Snipes said.

"He was looking at that pay stub and he picked those numbers out and he gave them to me."

"I was just trying to fill the panel so I could get it in the machine," Lewis Snipes said.

It wasn't the first time the sisters won. Once Snipes picked three out of six numbers to win $4,500 — which she did not share with her sister, who had forgotten to put in her $5 that week.

"Luckily, I gave it (the $5 share) this time," said Johnson, flanked by her husband Bill Johnson and son, Craig, one of her three grown children.

Snipes said success won't spoil her — she'll remain at her plant job because she figures she would get bored in the new dream home she is planning to build in Indian town. She also said she would help her three adult children.

Johnson planned to wait until her next paycheck arrives to decide whether to embark upon a life of leisure.

Did Snipes plan to share with her ex-husband? "That's still in question," she said.

"Perhaps she would consider remarrying him now?"

"No way," Snipes replied.

Landfill closures foreseen

United Press International

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — About 30 of the state's 170 landfills could close by next year if they fail to meet state requirements designed to reduce solid waste, a University of Florida researcher said Tuesday.

James O. Bryant Jr., a professor of environmental engineering sciences and head of the new Center for Solid and Hazardous Waste Management at UF, said Florida is among the leaders in solid waste management, but could face trouble in the future.

"We have only 23 places in the state that take water from surface water sources. All others use groundwater sources. If solid wastes aren't properly disposed of, they can be environmental problems that can become health problems," Bryant said.

UF bid competitively with the state's other universities for the center, which grew out of the Florida Resources Recovery and Management Act passed in the 1986 legislative session. Under the law, Bryant said, about 30 of the 170 landfills could close.

Discovery astronauts welcomed home

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — The Discovery astronauts brought the first post-Challenger shuttle flight full circle Tuesday, returning to the Kennedy Space Center in triumph to thank the thousands of workers who made the mission a success.

"It's special for us to be here today because, ladies and gentlemen, not only are we the crew back, but America's back," Discovery co-pilot Richard Covey told about 3,500 space workers at an outdoor homecoming ceremony. "And that's because of the work that you all have done.

"If there's a heartbeat to the American space program it's right here at Kennedy and it's our pleasure to be here today. Our congratulations to you for your part in pulling off this very successful mission."

For Covey and his crewmates — commander Frederick Hauck, John "Mike" Lounge, David Hilmers and George "Pinky" Nelson — Tuesday's ceremony was their first visit to the Florida shuttleport since Discovery's Sept. 29 blastoff on the first post-Challenger flight.

The astronauts, dressed in blue flight suits and sporting aviator-style dark glasses, took turns addressing the crowd — thousands more watched on closed-circuit television — from a flatbed truck decked out in red, white and blue bunting. A sign on the platform read "America's Pride: The Journey Continues."

"What really makes that rocket lift up off the launch pad is not the solid rocket motors or the main engines," Nelson said. "It's the work and the dedication and the care that you people and everyone else in the program who works on it gives to us."

"And when we lift off, what's really pushing that thing up is all your good feelings and all the good work that you've done on it and we appreciate that. It's the best ride in the world."

Before blastoff, the astronauts were given a book containing the signatures of more than 15,000 space center workers, symbolizing the personal responsibility each person had as a member of the launch team for the historic mission.

Hauck returned the book to space center director Forrest McCartney on Tuesday to the cheers of an enthusiastic crowd.

He was also charged with careless driving, resisting arrest without violence and driving without a drivers license.

Man accused of stealing shotgun

SANFORD — The discovery of a shotgun during the investigation of a report of a battery resulted in the arrest of Howard W. Carter, 38, of 1809 Southwest Road, Sanford, on a charge of grand theft of a firearm. Deputies said during the investigation it was reported that Carter had a shotgun. Upon questioning Carter, he showed them the gun. A check of the gun's serial number showed it was reported stolen in Longwood on Aug. 10.

Arson fire investigated

SANFORD — Police are investigating a minor fire which appeared to have been deliberately set early Wednesday. Sanford firemen were called to a vacant house at 214 Woodmere Blvd. about 2:15 a.m. and found a small fire in a flowerbed. A soft drink bottle nearby had the odor of gasoline.

Money stolen from Elks Lodge

SANFORD — About $300 was stolen from the safe at the Elks Lodge, 1006 E. Second St. A door was also kicked in behind the bar but nothing appeared to be missing except the money. There was no sign of forced entry and all the doors were locked.

Several arrested on drug-related charges

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald city editor

City County Investigative Bureau agents arrested four suspects on drug related charges during an undercover operation in Altamonte Springs Tuesday afternoon, and Sanford vice officers arrested five others on drug-related charges Tuesday night, two in assisting CCIB officers.

Ernest J. Holmes, 25, of 303 Teakwood Drive, also identified as Cleveland James, was arrested on charges of possession of cocaine and resisting arrest without violence. Officers reported Holmes showed a CCIB agent a bag of cocaine in Holmes' residence about 9 p.m., but for some reason declined to sell the agent the cocaine. A few minutes later other CCIB agents moved in and Holmes fled on foot and threw the bag of cocaine into a bush, officers said. The bag was recovered.

Anthony Lee Wilson, 32, of 600 Pine St., was arrested at 1:27 p.m. after an undercover officer reported he found three pieces of crack cocaine in his possession while he was standing on Magnolia Avenue in Altamonte Springs near the corner of Imperial Avenue. He was charged with possession of cocaine.

Charles F. Thornton, 18, of 117 Salem Court, Altamonte Springs, was arrested at 9:06 p.m. and charged with possession and sale of cocaine. He reportedly sold $20 worth of crack cocaine to an undercover CCIB officer at the corner of Teakwood Lane and Jackson Street.

Jonnie F. Realford, 24, of Salina Avenue, Altamonte Springs, was arrested on a charge of possession of eight grams of cocaine after he ran from officers after seeing one of the other arrests. He was pursued by officers who said they confiscated a film canister containing the cocaine.

Sanford police officers assisted CCIB agents in making two other drug-related arrests Tuesday. Stephen Davis, 27, of 1815 W. 15th St., Sanford, was arrested at 6:30 p.m. at the corner of 18th Street and Southwest Road and charged with selling $20 worth of crack cocaine to an undercover officer.

Thomas Williams, 34, of 2461 Center St., Sanford, was arrested on Sipes Avenue in Midway about 7:30 p.m. and charged with selling cocaine to an undercover officer.

Sanford vice officers arrested the following persons on drug related charges:

James Lewis Platt, 36, of 127 Yale Drive, was arrested at 5:09 p.m. Tuesday at the corner of Cypress Avenue and Seventh Street in Sanford on a charge of

City Commission postpones telephone bid

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald City Editor

SANFORD — City commissioners have postponed accepting a bid for a new telephone system, gave preliminary approval to two rezoning and one annexation request, and gave final approval to another rezoning request.

The commission agreed at a work session last week to award Southern Bell the contract for a new telephone system after city staff had narrowed down its list of bidders on the system to three.

However, at Monday night's regular meeting, commissioners John Y. Mercer, Bob Thomas Jr. and Whitey Eckstein said more information had become available since the workshop. Mercer moved that the telephone system be discussed at another work session Nov. 21 and the motion passed 3-2, with A.A. McLanahan and Mayor Bettye Smith voting against it.

The commission also unanimously approved the rezoning of property on the east side of Hidden Lake Drive between Lake Mary Boulevard and the city limits from single family residential to multifamily residential at the request of Bruce Tuttle.

Preliminary approval was given to a rezoning request from Edward J. Lachtara. He requested rezoning of property between French Avenue and Cordova Drive, and between Colonial Way and Katherine Court from single family residential to restricted commercial use.

Preliminary approval was also given to a request from B. Viravong to annex a lot at the northeast corner of Princeton Avenue and Mattie Street.

The commission authorized a preliminary engineering study for the Mill Creek-Cloud Branch drainage project. Eckstein asked how the project would be financed and questioned whether a study should be authorized before financing of the drainage project was available.

Bill Simmons, director of engineering and planning said the project was estimated to cost about $4 million. He said he and consultants agreed a preliminary engineering study of the entire project should be completed first, even though the actual project may be completed in segments. Simmons said $170,000 in Community Development Block Grants from Seminole County is available for the project this year and future block grant money as well as part of the city's gasoline tax revenues are planned as financing for the project.

Part of the project includes replacing open ditches with drainage pipes and Commissioner McLanahan questioned why this area was picked when there are open drainage ditches in many parts of the city.

Simmons said a 1988 study had estimated replacing all open drainage ditches in the city with piping would cost about $4 million at that time. He said if the council wished, he would update that study, but estimated the cost of doing that work now would probably be in the $10 million to $12 million range.

City Attorney William Colbert was ordered to draw up an ordinance requiring mandatory garbage pickup for all residences beginning Dec. 1. The ordinance also is to include provisions for exempting households below a certain income from the garbage pickup charges. The charges, $9.78 per month, will begin in January if the commission passes the ordinance.

The commission also gave a car dealer an exemption from the city ordinance requiring display cars to be set back 25 feet from the street, overturning a staff recommendation to deny the request.

Martin Motors, 601 S. French Ave., asked for the waiver. Simmons said a city ordinance required the setback, although the ordinance had not been strictly enforced until the last year or so. Commissioners Eckstein and Mercer said the commission had already set precedents by allowing previous waivers and the council unanimously granted the waiver.

The commission also unanimously passed a resolution supporting Amendment No. 7 to the Florida Constitution, at the request of Mayor Smith. The amendment, dealing with victims' rights, will appear on the general election ballot Nov. 8.

Construction on chambers to begin next week

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Construction on new parking spaces and new commission chambers are expected to be underway next week at the County Services Building.

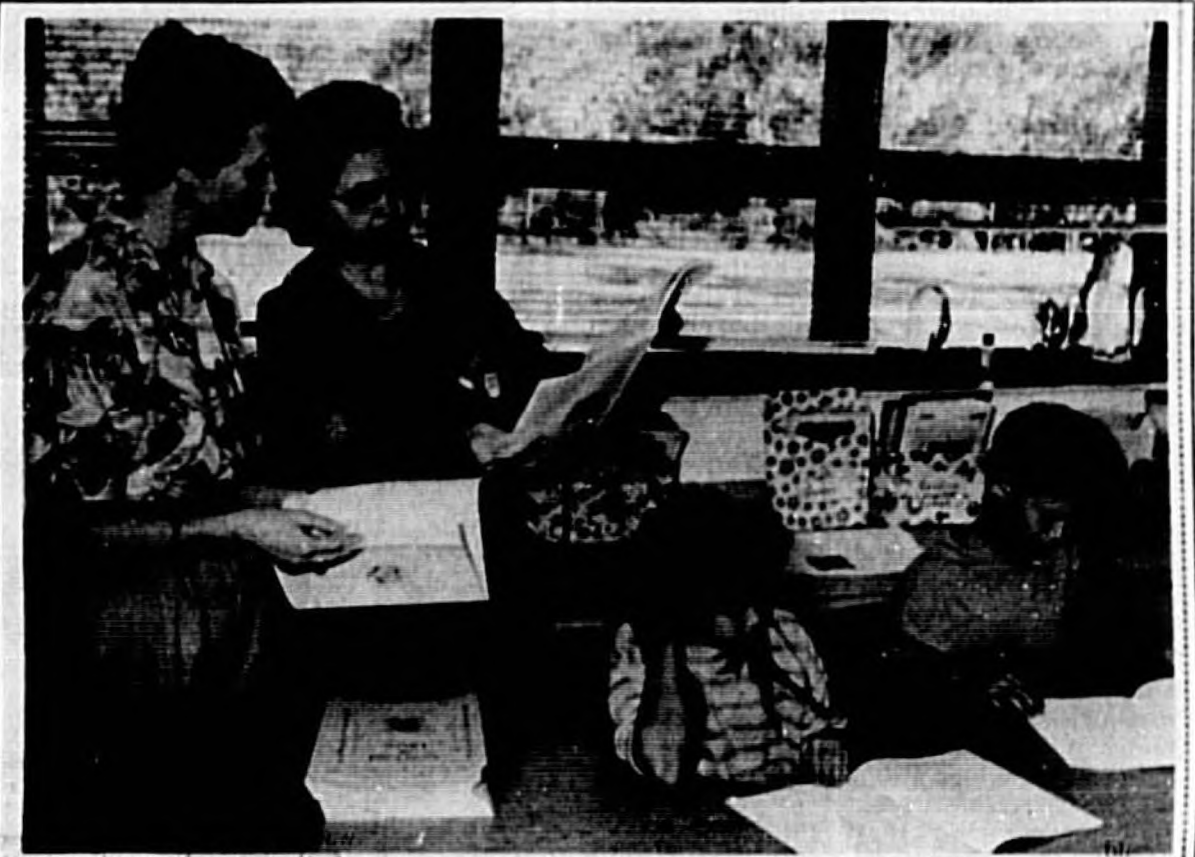

The work was approved by Seminole County commissioners earlier this year to allow more citizen participation in meetings and to reduce parking strains at the building.

A new north parking lot, with 37 spaces, will be built at the northwest corner of Melonville Avenue and First Street. Another parking lot, with 30 spaces, will be built on county property southeast of San Carlos Avenue and Second Street. Both projects, budgeted to cost $10,800, will be begun next week and completed in about 30 days.

The two new lots were needed because the new commission chambers will take up 14 of the parking spaces in the current parking lot on San Carlos Avenue next to the County Services Building.

On Nov. 26 and 27, county crews will modify the current county commission chambers to accommodate about three wheelchairs on a raised platform in the back of the room and provide stairs to a new fire exit on the east wall of the room. County officials say future plans call further renovations to alleviate crowding in the building.

By Dec. 1, construction will begin on the new county commission chambers, featuring a fan-shaped seating arrangement to allow the public a better view than the current row seating.

Coloring kids

Students at Wilson Elementary School on Paola Road in Sanford received coloring books yesterday from the local ladies auxiliary chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The books entitled "Sweet Land of Liberty" depict historic moments in U.S. history. Children can color the pictures and on the following page offer their interpretation of the event.

Economic growth slows to 2.2 percent

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy slammed on the brakes in the third quarter with total economic growth dropping to 2.2 percent because of slower exports and drought-related farm losses, the Commerce Department said today.

Real gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, increased $22.1 billion in the third quarter, a 2.2 percent increase that was the lowest since a 1.4 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1986, the department said.

Most economists had predicted the advance report would show the economic growth curve began to flatten out during the third quarter, but not so abruptly.

Amendment 6 not needed

Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 6 would, if adopted, establish a Taxation and Budget Reform Commission to review matters relating to state and local taxation and the budgetary process. It would be established in 1990 and report every 10 years thereafter. It may propose statutory changes to the Legislature and submit proposed constitutional changes to the voters. Its first proposals would be on the 1992 ballot.

There is no present study commission, statutorily or constitutionally, which examines the tax structure and revenue needs of the state. Such matters are handled by the Legislature. The commission would be composed of 25 voting members, 11 appointed by the governor, and seven each by the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House. The governor would appoint the chairman. Four legislators would serve as non-voting members. Any proposal for a statutory change would require an affirmative vote of each of the three sections of the commission. A two-thirds majority of each section would be required for a constitutional change to be submitted to the voters.

This commission would supplement the responsibilities of the Constitution Revision Commission which meets every 20 years, and does not deal with budgetary and taxation matters.

Opponents of the amendment cite a usurpation of the direct responsibilities for budget and taxation from the legislature, thus lessening the accountability of elected officials in those two areas.

Proponents assert that such a commission, composed of private citizens rather than politicians, would allow for reasoned and deliberative review of budget and tax policies with a minimum of political pressures.

The Constitution Revision Commission established in 1978 was such a body. It was truly a blue-ribbon panel with leading business and civic leaders from throughout the state serving. The commission submitted eight constitutional amendment proposals to the voters containing numerous changes — one contained 57 changes within itself. Voters rejected all eight amendments.

Enactment of this amendment will open the door to buck-passing by the Legislature for proposals such as a resurrection of the sales tax on services, personal income tax and alterations in the Homestead Exemption act. Certainly Florida must explore creative means for revenue enhancement but the creation of special commissions is not justified to achieve that end. Legislators are elected to represent the people and, when necessary, make hard and unpopular decisions. It is more effective, and less costly, to reject Legislators at the polls, than defeat amendments on the ballot. The experience with the Constitution Revision Commission should have taught that lesson.

The Herald recommends a no vote on amendment 6.

What Bush should say before election

I realize it's asking a lot of a man within inches of the presidency, but here's what I wish George Bush would say to the American people in a television address on Sunday evening, Nov. 6:

"My fellow Americans: The polls indicate that on Tuesday you are very likely to elect me as your president. I have sought that high honor, and if you confer it on me I will of course do everything in my power to serve you honorably and well.

"But, my friends, no president can serve you really well — can serve you as you deserve to be served — if he is compelled to work with and through a Congress dominated by his political opponents.

"Every president comes to that office with a program: a series of things he hopes to do, and which presumably you hope he will do. Almost all of these things, however, require the approval of one or both houses of Congress. If his opponents dominate the Congress, it follows as night follows day that the president will be unable to implement many parts of his program.

"Now, I certainly do not criticize the Democrats in Congress for this fact. Indeed, it is precisely the function of the opposition party, under our system, to subject the president's proposals to sharp scrutiny, to make alternative suggestions, and to thwart him (if they can) when they believe he is wrong.

"But ordinarily in our history the voters have elected a president and Congress of the same party, in the expectation that they would work toward essentially the same ends. It is only in recent decades that we have fallen into the habit of routinely electing a president of one party and a Congress of the other.

"At first this may even strike you as a good idea — as an extension of the familiar principle of the separation of powers. But do you really want to cripple your government in this way? Wouldn't it be better to let one party take charge of both the presidency and the Congress and do its very best for you — and then replace it, if you felt the other could do better?"

"Accordingly, I am asking you tonight to consider most seriously the structure and composition of your government. If you want me to be your president, and to do for you the very best that I can do, I ask you to elect also a Republican Senate and House that will work with me and not against me.

"I realize that there are many Democratic members of both Houses who are splendid public officials. I know, moreover, that every Democratic candidate will promise to support me 'when I am right' and oppose me only 'when I am wrong.' But we also know that every Democrat elected to either the House or the Senate on Tuesday will vote to place that body under the control of his party, and that his party would inevitably use its power to thwart my program and diminish the success of my administration. Unfortunately that administration would also be your administration — the only one there was.

"If, therefore, you are unwilling to give me a Republican Congress that will work with me, I suggest in all sincerity that you consider voting for Gov. Dukakis, who will at least not be thwarted routinely by a Democratic Congress. I cannot in all conscience recommend that you again put political opponents in control of the legislative and executive branches and compel them to fight like two scorpions in a bottle.

Consider most seriously the structure and composition of your government.

GEORGE F. WILL

Distinct choice for senate

MIAMI—Florida—vibrant but aging, booming but environmentally stressed—foreshadows much of America's future. Florida's Senate contest, which illustrates the synergism between this year's presidential campaign and other campaigns, is a snapshot of present political choices.

Republican Rep. Connie Mack III, 47, and Democratic Rep. Buddy MacKay, 55, both came to Congress in 1982 and made interesting optional choices. Mack joined with Jack Kemp (Mack was Kemp's Florida chairman this year), Newt Gingrich and other young congressmen in the Conservative Opportunity Society, dedicated to making conservatism a fighting faith beyond the Reagan years.

MacKay joined with Dick Gephardt (MacKay supported his presidential bid), Chuck Bobb, Sam Nunn and others in the Democratic Leadership Council, which (to put the matter more plainly than the DLC puts it) wanted to strengthen Democratic moderates to prevent the nomination of presidential candidates as liberal as Michael Dukakis.

Mack lived in Philadelphia until 1951, when his father sold his interest in the Athletics baseball club that Mack's famous grandfather founded. In 1981, Mack was running a bank near Fort Myers when the political bug bit.

MacKay's deep Southern accent sounds strange in south Florida's condominium country. MacKay, whose family came to Florida in the 1870s, says that if he asks an audience in his central Florida district how many of them were born in Florida, he will see "maybe three hands in 100."

For five decades, Florida has been a funnel filling up from the north. For 25 years, Spanish-speaking immigrants have poured in from the south. Michael Barone, author of "The Almanac of American Politics," says Florida "has seen almost as many cultural collisions as the Hapsburg empire in the late 19th century."

Florida, says MacKay, is like a six-foot-two-inch 16-year-old who has grown six inches in a year. It is awkward and uncoordinated. It is "less like the old South than a composite of eastern America—and perhaps I should take out the word 'eastern.'"

Since 1980, an average of nearly 900 people have moved to Florida every day. It now has the nation's highest crime rate, fourth-highest murder rate and fifth-largest number of toxic-waste dumps targeted for cleanup. It ranks 47th among the states in terms of state and local taxes as a percentage of personal income, and 50th in per capita expenditure for human services.

MacKay says an aggrieved constituent recently sent him a book of poems and a note: "These poems don't rhyme and they don't make sense. I think they will appeal to you." One made sense to MacKay.

"The thing wrong with looking in a mirror is... You can't tell how you look when you're not looking in the mirror."

MacKay does not like many things about the way Florida looks, and he says Mack is not looking at Florida but at a national ideological agenda.

Bush's campaign, by stressing the liberal-conservative polarity, has served MacKay's campaign, which is summarized by the tag line on his television ads: "Buddy, you're liberal." MacKay stresses MacKay's national-security record, including votes against the MX, B-1 and contra aid. MacKay is getting help from the Great Reassurer, Sam Nunn, whose life these days is a series of laying-on-of-hands ceremonies in which he assures Southerners that this or that Democrat is not anti-defense.

MacKay stresses Florida's three big issues—its principal commerce (if exaggerate only slightly), drugs, senior citizens; and that which the influx of seniors and others has imperiled, the environment. While Mack stresses that he led Florida's congressional delegation in support for Reagan proposals, MacKay replies, Yes, but that has involved supporting spending cuts for environmental and anti-drug agencies, and for services for the elderly.

As to Mack's charge that he is a liberal, MacKay says his district has never elected one and that he (MacKay) was elected when (as now) Reagan was highly popular here.

Mack, an intelligent, idea-driven Catholic from the fourth largest state (Pennsylvania), is regarded by conservatives as a rising national star. His campaign is testing the willingness of voters to will the means (spending cuts) that he believes are necessary for the end (economic growth) they desire.

MacKay is the kind of Democrat who must rise in his party if it is to be competitive nationally. His campaign is testing voters' willingness to pay the price of ameliorating the damage done by the growth they desire, and the price he says is necessary for public investments to sustain growth.

JEFFREY HART

Did Jim Baker Go To Sleep?

The behavior of the Bush campaign in the wake of the Bentsen-Quayle debate raises some serious questions.

Obviously the Dukakis people were programmed to claim victory for Bentsen, whatever happened on the TV screen. And, yes, there was Michael Dukakis running all over Texas with his teeth in Bentsen's coat tails.

But what do we see on the Republican team? The only player with real political instincts at this critical juncture was Ronald Reagan. He immediately took the field and slammed Bentsen for his "You are no Jack Kennedy" remark.

But the Bush campaign had no prepared orchestration in support of Quayle, who performed well under difficult conditions.

Incredibly, we had TV footage of George Bush doing stretching exercises preparatory to jogging — and, incredibly, refusing to comment on the debate. Mr. Quayle certainly deserved more support than that.

In any efficient campaign, the spin control would have been in place for weeks. There would have been people in every state, nay, in every hamlet and farm, phoning in and writing letters to the editor praising Quayle. Congressmen would be hitting the road, praising Quayle's performance. After all, he did quite well. Why not claim victory?

Instead, the Bush campaign allowed — in football terms — the other team to steal the ball.

Ronald Reagan was right when he said that Senator Bentsen had pulled a "cheap shot." Already on the political circuit rowdy replies to "You're no Jack Kennedy" are making the rounds.

"Yeah," they are saying, "I'm no Jack Kennedy, I'm Dan Quayle. At his age, 39, I haven't slept with all those call girls, stewardesses, starlets, prostitutes and even Nazi spies. In that respect, he certainly did have more experience than I have had. And, as a matter of fact, I don't think I would need amphetamines to jerk up my courage to face Khrushchev at Vienna, as Jack Kennedy did. I think I could face the Russian leader drug-free." The Famous Doctor Feelgood from New York, who almost killed Truman Capote with his potions, actually accompanied Jack Kennedy to Vienna for the "summit." Khrushchev there formed an opinion of Kennedy as such a weakling that he decided to put his missiles into Cuba, thus bringing the world to the brink of nuclear war.

"No, I'm no Jack Kennedy. I have never been in bed with Marilyn Monroe."

"No, I don't share bed mates with Mafia capos. I don't know Sinatra or any other member of the Rat Pack, and I certainly have never put men ashore at the Bay of Pigs and abandoned them there."

"I never tried to kill Castro with exploding sea shells or poisoned wet suits. No, I'm no Jack Kennedy."

"No, I didn't drop Marilyn Monroe after being warned off by J. Edgar Hoover, and turn her over to my younger brother, the Attorney General. You're absolutely right, Senator Bentsen. I'm no Jack Kennedy. I know who I wake up with in the morning."

"You say you knew Jack Kennedy and served with him. Oh yeah? Did you know Judy Exner?"

"You knew Jack Kennedy. I can give you the names of 50 women who also knew Jack Kennedy."

"All I meant to say is that I, at the same age as Kennedy, have had more experience in government as congressman and senator."

"I'll tell you, buster. I'm no Jack Kennedy."

The Bush campaign had no prepared orchestration in support of Quayle.

Trading light, prices mixed

United Press International

NEW YORK — Prices opened mixed today in light trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 3.02 Tuesday, was off 0.89 to 2172.47 shortly after the market opened.

However, advances led declines 365,329 among the 1,105 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 6,935,000 shares.

Before the market opened, the government said the real gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, rose 2.2 percent in the third quarter. The report was in line with other recent economic indicators that suggest a slowing economy.

Stock prices closed narrowly mixed Tuesday in moderate trading after takeover issues continued to dominate the market and anticipation of the GNP report kept many investors at bay.

"There hasn't been much activity in the market," said Sid Dorr, vice president of block trading at Robinson-Humphrey Co. in Atlanta.

"Basically, we had a recovery high last week and we're backing off a little bit," said Durr, noting the Dow's surge to a post-recovery high last Friday.

Dollar dips on GNP news; gold, silver open higher

United Press International

The dollar tumbled in active trading today in New York following a government report on the nation's gross national product for the third quarter.

The Commerce Department reported the nation's economy expanded at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 2.2 percent in the third quarter, after inflation is taken into account.

Forecasters had been calling for increases between 2.5 percent and 3.2 percent.

Tim Seala, Treasury manager of Manufacturers & Traders Trust Co., said dealers were looking for an excuse to sell dollars and the GNP report gave them a reason to sell.

Before the report was announced, the dollar was slightly firmer in New York against major currencies in extremely quiet trading.

Elsewhere, the dollar opened mostly lower on major European money markets. Gold was slightly higher.

In Frankfurt the dollar opened at 1.79 West German marks, up from 1.788, and the dollar was unchanged in Zurich at 1.518 Swiss francs.

The dollar opened lower in Paris at 6.117 French francs, down from 6.137, in Brussels at 37.83 Belgian francs, down from 37.85 and in Milan at 1,333.50 lire, down from 1,334.05.

In London the pound opened at $1.7535 compared with $1.754.

In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar fell marginally against the Japanese yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market, closing at 126.80 yen, down 0.07 yen from Tuesday's close of 126.87 yen.

Church's considers Popeyes buyout

United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — Church's Fried Chicken Inc. has announced it is considering a buyout offer of $8 per share from Popeyes Famous Fried Chicken and Biscuit founder Al Copeland.

The proposed acquisition by A. Copeland Enterprises Inc., the parent company of Popeyes, would increase the number of Popeyes outlets from 705 to 2,178 and give it combined sales of more than $1 billion.

Popeyes, with annual sales of $485 million, is the third largest fried chicken chain. Church's is second with sales of $520 million and Kentucky Fried Chicken is the leader with sales of $4.3 billion.

Copeland said he hoped to revitalize Church's, which has seen earnings slip from a high of $43 million in 1984 to an estimated $3.5 million this year.

"We hold a master key to business success," Copeland said Tuesday.

So many people want to help that the borough set up a fund to accept donations to help cover the borough's $300,000 cost for rescue workers and fuel for helicopters, Matumeak said.

People have suggested freeing the whales by using lasers to cut through the ice, dropping bowling balls onto the ice from a plane, picking the whales up in a sling and flying them to open water, using dynamite to blow up the ice blocking the whales' migration path, and attaching a cyclonic torches to snowmobiles and driving across the ice to burn a path.

One person wanted to communicate with the whales using music in Pied Piper style to lure them along a channel being cut. Jim Nollman of Interspecies Communication in Friday Harbor, Wash., showed up with an underwater sound system — but the whales apparently were in no mood for the South African music Nollman played for them.

Another idea man who showed up was Rick Skuzacek of Lakeland, Minn. Like many hundreds of others, his idea did not sound feasible to rescuers who discouraged him from making the trip when he called.

People are calling the military, oil companies, the environmental group Greenpeace, federal, state and local government agencies and the media — anyone they can reach in Barrow.

The North Slope Borough, which covers more area than any other local county-type government in the nation, had to assign people just to answer the telephones that never stop ringing, borough spokeswoman Marie Adams said.

These whales are not in a fishbowl," National Guard Sgt. Ian Robertson said of suggestions they simply be netted and flown to freedom. "Even if the CH-54 (Skycrane helicopter) was working, the downdraft from the rotor blades would prevent these animals from being scooped up in a net. I don't see any possibility of that."

A guard at the North Slope Borough who answers telephones from 5 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. said of the suggestions, "If it doesn't sound too far fetched, we transfer them to the wildlife officer."

The guard, who declined to give his name, said he tries to respond to as many suggestions as he can. He told a woman calling from Michigan that building fires on the ice could not be done because the Arctic tundra is treeless — there is no wood and the nearest trees are hundreds of miles away.

He said an elderly lady from England wanted to talk to somebody about the whales and agreed to stay on hold, even though she was in line behind eight other callers on hold.

"I've talked to ladies that are crying and others start saying prayers," the guard said. He gets an average of 150 calls per shift. "Two other people brought in to answer telephones during the weekend, when the government office normally is closed, also each took 150 calls per shift."

One lady called and vented her anger at Canada because it was not helping. People have called to ask why Jacques Cousteau was not on the scene.

But a determined Skuzacek packed up six deicing machines that his family company makes and flew to Barrow, and the devices worked so well that rescuers ordered a dozen more, placing them in a series of breathing holes being cut for the whales.

Other ideas, like picking up the huge mammals in a sling, were examined and rejected.

Klan ordered to pay one million

United Press International

ATLANTA — A lawyer on the winning side of a nearly $1 million verdict against two Ku Klux Klan factions and 11 individuals for the violent disruption of a 1987 "brotherhood march" said the case shows it can be costly to tread on civil rights.

U.S. District Judge Charles Moyer Jr. on Tuesday ordered the Southern White Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan to pay $400,000 each in punitive damages to 53 civil rights marchers who were pelted with rocks and bottles.

Klan leader David Holland was ordered to pay $50,000 punitive damages and Klan leaders Edward Stephens, Daniel Carver and Marion Franklin Shirley were ordered to pay $30,000 each. Seven other defendants were ordered to pay $1,000 or $2,000 apiece.

Each plaintiff will receive $50 in compensatory damages from the defendants.

A defense lawyer for some of the Klansmen said the verdict, returned Oct. 5 but not unsealed until Tuesday, would be appealed.

pealed. Morris Dees, the veteran civil rights lawyer who filed the lawsuit, said the case sends a message to anyone who would attempt similar acts. "The message is," he said, "if you're going to go out and intimidate people and throw rocks and bottles at them and physically hurt them, then you're going to have to pay for it."

Bible said the Heathrow water plant could prove to be a valuable county asset because it could be used to supply water to much of the rapidly developing northwest area of the county. He said the Heathrow water plant could also be connected to the water treatment plant at Hanover Woods and used as a backup or reducing the needs to enlarge both plants for future growth needs.

Wright said she expects negotiations to be complete by January.

the ridge. The Vladimir Arseniev, a 13,514-ton icebreaking cargo vessel, worked to clear the ice that the Makarov blasted off the ridge.

If all goes according to plan, the icebreakers will smash a hole up to a mile wide in the ice today, meeting the U.S. Archimedeon Screw Tractor, which was expected to finish a shushy path today to the ridge from the side where the whales have been trapped since Oct. 7.

The 11-ton oil company tractor, flown to the scene aboard the world's biggest plane, was out of action Tuesday while crews built a piece of equipment to help clear the chunks it leaves in its wake.

Whale experts feared the whales would shy away from swimming through the tractor's 16-foot wide channel if it was too clogged with chunks. The tractor's pontoons are equipped with screw-like ridges that auger through the ice.

The Russian ships can go no farther than the ridge because the water is too shallow on the other side, Petersen said he believed there was only a foot of water beneath the big ships.

After three days of refusing to swim around a shoal in their 250-foot long breathing hole, the whales finally advanced Tuesday after Eskimos cut a semi-circular path around the high spot on the sea floor that the mammals were apparently afraid would beach them.

After advancing about a mile by swimming from Eskimo-cut ice hole to ice hole, the whales were still between 4 and 6 miles from their escape route, a 220-mile channel leading to the North Pacific.

Three of the endangered whales lingered too long in their summer arctic feeding grounds, and surfaced one day to find they were surrounded by ice about 18 miles from Barrow in the Beaufort Sea.

Their plight has made headlines all over the world in a drama that became more desperate last week when the third whale vanished beneath the ice and is believed dead.

The Soviets responded to requests for help from the U.S. government and the environmental group Greenpeace. The closest American icebreaker, which had been defeated by the same thick ice last month on its way back to Seattle, was not close enough to come to the rescue.

Morris said the United States will supply the Soviets with the latest satellite maps and weather forecasts to help them get through the ice-choked Chukchi Sea and Bering Strait on their way home.

Pepe's North of the Border in Barrow, the world's most northerly Mexican restaurant, planned to give each Soviet crew member a restaurant T-shirt today and a bag of goodies, including alcohol and cigarettes. There are 78 men and women aboard the Makarov.

Study: Bentsen top PAC recipient

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice presidential nominee also seeking re-election, has received $2.3 million in political action committee funds, more than any other candidate, a Common Cause report shows.

The report released Tuesday showed Bentsen had raised $12.4 million overall for his Senate campaign, second only to the $12.5 million for Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif. Bentsen is the fourth-biggest spender at $5.1 million and had the most cash on hand, $3.2 million of all incumbent senators as of Sept. 30.

The study indicates the current financing system for congressional campaigns is unfair for challengers, making it difficult for them to compete with incumbents, said Common Cause President Fred Wertheimer.

"The congressional campaign finance system is patently unfair to challengers and has made it extraordinarily difficult for challengers to run effective and competitive campaigns for Congress," Wertheimer said.

"The system must be reformed by restricting PAC money, establishing overall campaign spending limits and increasing resources available to challengers," Wertheimer said. The study by the citizens lobby showed that by a wide margin, sitting senators running for re-election raised more money, spent more money and received more contributions from PACs than their challengers.

The 27 incumbent senators raised $102.2 million, compared to $38.1 million for the challengers, spent $69.1 million, to $30 million for their opponents; and received $28.5 million in PAC contributions, compared to $6.7 for their adversaries.

In addition, incumbent senators had $33.4 million on hand for the final six weeks of the campaign, compared to $7.4 million for challengers.

The totals, however, reflect all money raised since their last campaigns. Challengers started the fund-raising drives much later.

Senate Democrats tried to re-vamp campaign finance laws during the just-adjourned 100th Congress but they could not break a Republican filibuster despite eight attempts at cloture.

Bentsen's opponent, Republican Rep. Beau Boulter, given little chance of winning, has raised $1.1 million, spent $1 million, received $80,961 from PACs and had $79,538 on hand as of Sept. 30.

The only challenger to raise more money and receive more PAC contributions that his incumbent opponent is Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich, a Republican who is in an uphill battle against veteran Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio.

Voinovich has raised $7.1 million, the third most among all candidates, to $7 million for Metzenbaum, who ranked 9th. Voinovich has received $1.1 million in PAC contributions and Metzenbaum $643,438. But Metzenbaum had more on hand for the stretch, $3 million to $1 million.

Common Cause based its study on filings with the Federal Election Commission and said the most expensive races based on combined spending are:

—California, where Wilson and Democratic Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy have spent $13.3 million.

—Ohio, where Metzenbaum and Voinovich have spent $10.8 million.

—New Jersey, where incumbent Democrat Frank Lautenberg and former Army general, Heisman Trophy winner and Rhodes Scholar Pete Dawkins have spent $8.7 million.

—Minnesota, where incumbent Republican David Durenberger and Attorney General Hubert Humphrey III have spent $7 million.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen

—Texas, where Bentsen and Boulter have spent $6.1 million.

—Wisconsin, where Milwaukee Bucks owner Herbert Kohl and his Republican opponent, Susan Engelleiter, have spent $5.6 million.

The top five money raisers are Wilson, $12.5 million; Bentsen, $8.5 million; Voinovich, $7.2 million; Lautenberg, $7 million; and Metzenbaum, $7 million.

The top five in PAC contributions are Bentsen, $2.3; Wilson, $2 million; Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., $1.5 million; Lautenberg, $1.4 million; and Durenberger, $1.4 million.

Bush criticized for not responding to scandal reform questionnaire

United Press International

WASHINGTON — George Bush's apparent decision to ignore a questionnaire about government reforms is drawing criticism from its authors, the attorneys who led congressional probes of the Watergate and Iran-Contra scandals.

The lawyers received responses from Bush's presidential opponent, Democratic Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, while a spokesman for the Republican vice president told them Tuesday not to expect a reply. The Bush camp expressed its concern that there might be a partisan purpose behind the questionnaire.

Nonsense, countered Sam Dash, chief counsel to the 1974 Senate Watergate Committee, and Bush does not deserve to be president if he refuses to reply.

"If we're being stifled, the American people are being stifled, and if the American people are being stifled, their response ought to be in the polling place," Dash told a news conference.

"Whether Republican or Democrat," he said, "all Americans are entitled to know where (Bush) stands."

The inquiries about government reforms were put to Bush and Dukakis and all 1988 congressional candidates in an eight-point questionnaire by the Special Committee for Iran-Contra and Watergate Reform, composed of lawyers involved in both those investigations.

Dukakis, in his written response, generally supported ideas such as extending the independent prosecutor law, bolstering oversight of intelligence agencies and limiting activities of the National Security Council staff.

Bush, however, despite repeated assurances of a response from his campaign, did not give any answers, according to Marc Gary of the Washington Council of Lawyers, which sponsored the project. Gary said he was told just a half-hour before Tuesday's news conference that "they were still working on them."

Later, Bush campaign spokesman Mark Goodin said a decision apparently had been made to ignore the questions to avoid their use politically.

The issue conceivably could have become "caught in the machinery," Goodin said. "But we probably made a conscious decision not to answer that. It was fairly obvious to me they would be used in a partisan way."

The legal group denied any partisanship and noted its membership included Republicans. It conceded, though, that of the more than 900 questionnaires sent out Oct. 3, only 110 were returned.

John Nields, chief counsel to the House committee that probed the Iran-Contra scandal, said he still hoped Bush would reply. He suggested "one of the most significant issues raised" in President Reagan's worst crisis "was whether this administration or any must abide by the rule of law."

"It would be interesting to learn both candidates' positions," Nields said.

One of the questions concerned presidential pardons for people indicted but not yet tried as a result of the work of an independent prosecutor. Dukakis said he is opposed to such action "in general" and said both Reagan and Bush owe Americans "a commitment" not to pardon those now awaiting trial in the Iran-Contra case, such as retired Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, the ex-White House aide at the heart of the scandal.

Doctors call for reduction in caesareans

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Doctors seeking to stop unnecessary surgery called today for fewer repeat caesarean section births, advising women who have undergone the operation to attempt normal labor and delivery in future pregnancies.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists issued guidelines to the medical profession designed to end the dictum "once a C section, always a C section," which it said has been the general rule in obstetrics since 1918.

"Under these new guidelines, if there is not a specific medical reason for a caesarean birth after the expectant mother has had one baby by caesarean, a woman should be encouraged to attempt labor in her current pregnancy," said Dr. Mary Jo O'Sullivan of the ACOG's maternal and fetal medicine committee.

Of the more than 3.7 million babies born each year nationwide, public health officials now estimate 24 percent are delivered by caesarean, and one in three are repeat operations. ACOG spokesman Morton Lebow said the guidelines should cut down on unnecessary major surgery, medical costs and hospital stays.

In a C section, an incision is made in a woman's lower abdomen and into the uterus, through which the baby is delivered. Most are conducted under general anesthesia, and the surgery carries risks common to any major operation. The woman's recovery takes longer than with a normal delivery.

The ACOG called on medical facilities to develop a protocol on repeat C section patients that "clearly emphasizes patient safety." The organization noted the number of caesareans has increased during the last two decades, primarily to insure the safety of the baby when complications arise.

O'Sullivan, however, said the smallest annual increase in C sections was reported last year, and she concluded, "We have some indication that we may be ready to reverse the trend of increasing C section rates. ... (It) will depend on how quickly these new guidelines are adopted."

Two types of incisions are used in caesareans; the more common low transverse incision, in which doctors cut horizontally across the lower abdomen and uterus, and the classical incision, in which doctors cut vertically. Classical incisions are made in only 1 or 2 percent of all caesarean deliveries.

O'Sullivan said her organization found women who had low transverse incisions from previous births succeeded with normal deliveries in 50 to 80 percent of all cases.

Teenager convicted of killings

LOWELL, Mass. — A teenager convicted of fatally shooting a pregnant church nursery school teacher and killing her two small children was sentenced by a judge who ordered three consecutive life terms and "no parole, no commutation and no furloughs."

"There are some who would say that you should receive the same sentence that you imposed on the Gustafson family — that is death by ligature or hanging," Superior Court Judge Robert Barton said Tuesday in sentencing Daniel LaPlante, 18. "But we have no death penalty in Massachusetts," Barton said.

The sentence was imposed immediately after a Middlesex County jury convicted LaPlante of first-degree murder for shooting to death Priscilla Gustafson, 33, and drowning her children, William, 5, and Abigail, 7, on Dec. 1, 1987, in the family's Townsend home. The children's bodies were found in separate bathrooms.

A life sentence was mandatory but the prosecution asked for consecutive terms while the defense asked they be concurrent.

The five-man, seven-woman jury received the case at 1:10 p.m. Monday and deliberated about five hours over two days before returning the verdict in a packed courtroom shortly after noon Tuesday.

LaPlante smiled and talked with his lawyer, Robert Sheketoff, just before the jury returned but showed no emotion as the verdict was read.

Barton, a 1978 appointee of Gov. Michael Dukakis, said despite his explicit comment about no furloughs for LaPlante he intended no reference to the political issue raised by Vice President George Bush, who supports capital punishment in some cases.

Judge rejects non-jury trial

ATLANTA — Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga., got a harsh reminder from the judge hearing his trial on 10 counts of lying about a deal involving laundered drug money: "You have more important concerns right now than the Nov. 8 election date."

Swindall, facing an uphill campaign for a third term and frustrated Tuesday by the slow pace of jury selection in his trial, asked U.S. District Judge Robert Vining to hear the case without a jury in an effort to resolve the case before Election Day.

Vining refused. "I'm not going to try this case without a jury," he told Swindall, a lawyer who is defending himself against charges that could cost him up to $100,000 and put him behind bars up to 50 years.

Steinberg's ex-lover called 'satanic'

NEW YORK — Lawyers for accused child killer Joel Steinberg say his common-law wife, the prosecution's star witness, has dabbled in satanism and pornography and cannot be relied upon to give a clear account of events surrounding the death of their 6-year-old daughter, Lisa.

Steinberg, 47, a disabled lawyer, is charged with murder in the Nov. 5, 1987, death of the first-grader he helped raise with his former lover, Hedda Nussbaum, in the couple's Greenwich Village apartment.

Prosecutors argued in opening statements Tuesday that Steinberg's "vicious obsession" with dominating others drove him to beat his lover into slave-like submission and ultimately to kill the young girl.

Defense lawyer Ira London told the jury in state Supreme Court that the prosecution's case is based on circumstantial evidence that will likely be bolstered by Nussbaum's testimony. But he warned that Nussbaum, testifying for the state, should not be viewed as a credible witness.

London further sought to impeach Nussbaum's credibility Tuesday, saying witnesses would testify about her "self-destructive romance with satanic cults, sadomasochistic behavior outside of the home and her involvement with pornography."

Gabel: 'I'm not trying to trap you'

NEW YORK — Sukhreet Gabel, the daughter of the judge charged in the alimony-fighting trial of Bess Myerson, assured her mother "I'm not trying to trap you" while taping a family conversation later used as evidence in the case.

Gabel, 39, daughter of retired state Supreme Court Justice Hortense Gabel, acknowledged Tuesday under questioning by Myerson's lawyer that she told her family the meeting would be confidential.

Myerson, the 64-year-old former Miss America, her jailed boyfriend, Carl "Andy" Capasso, 43, and Gabel's 75-year-old mother are being tried on bribery-related charges.

Helicopter crash kills 8

Patrols suspended after deaths of five deputies, three guardsmen

United Press International

OCOTILLO, Calif. — A new surveillance patrol aimed at detecting drug smugglers along the Mexican border has been suspended following the fiery crash of a National Guard helicopter that killed five sheriff's deputies and three guardsmen, authorities said.

The UH-1H "Huey" apparently hit a 500,000 kilowatt power line and spun out of control Monday night, crashing in the desert near Interstate 8 outside of Ocotillo, 85 miles east of San Diego. The chopper burst into flames so intense that the craft melted, and all eight men were killed instantly. Imperial County Assistant Sheriff Ted Whitmer said.

The victims were the first air surveillance team involved with Operation Border Ranger, a joint anti-drug operation involving sheriff's departments in six Southern California counties, the National Guard and federal authorities, Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. Bryan Williams said.

Operation Border Ranger was suspended Tuesday pending an investigation into the crash. National Guard Staff Sgt. Phil Jordan said, "but there is no doubt we will resume operations at a future date."

The crash occurred on a training mission on the first night of the surveillance and just a week after California National Guard officers told a state Senate hearing that Guard helicopters with night-vision equipment would start patrolling the border looking for drug smugglers.

The Huey was one of three Guard helicopters deployed for the patrols.

Jordan said the helicopter had spotted a vehicle parked with its lights off on a remote road and was going down to take a closer look when it hit the power line. The car turned out to be a Border Patrol vehicle on routine patrol.

All that remained on the hillside of boulders, sagebrush, cacti and yucca plants was a gear shaft and scattered pieces of molten metal.

"The aircraft ... was immediately consumed by fire," Imperial County sheriff's Lt. Kenneth Koon said. "All aboard died instantly."

Authorities said a pursuit helicopter patrolling with the Huey reported the crash. Investigators from the Army Safety Center at Fort Rucker, Ala., and the National Guard Safety Office planned to inspect the crash site.

Feds dare cocaine kingpin to leave Colombia

United Press International

NEW YORK — A federal prosecutor dared one of the reputed leaders of Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel to leave that country, vowing that he will be brought to the United States to face drug-smuggling charges.

Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, 47, whose dizzying wealth accumulated as a top leader of the cartel prompted Fortune magazine to feature him on a recent cover, was named in a federal indictment announced Tuesday charging he and four others tried to smuggle $18 million worth of cocaine a week into New York.

Gacha is believed to be in his native Colombia, but if he is ever caught in the United States, he could be sentenced to life in prison, officials said. Colombia does not have an extradition treaty with the United States.

"If he leaves Colombia, he risks life imprisonment and we have reason to believe he travels frequently," said U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney at a news conference in his Brooklyn office. Maloney said Gacha also was named in a second indictment Tuesday returned by a federal grand jury in Miami.

The Medellin cartel — named for the Colombian city where it is based — is a loose federation of drug trafficking groups that claims to control 80 percent of the cocaine exported from Colombia and has terrorized the South American nation.

Officials say the cartel was behind the killing Colombia's minister of justice in 1984 after he pledged to crack down on the drug trade, and is responsible for the killings of scores of judges, narcotics agents.

"Gacha is the most active member of the Medellin cartel and the Medellin cartel is the most significant cartel in Colombia," said Robert Stutman, Drug Enforcement Administration special agent in charge.

Minor violence in South African voting

Radio reports low voter turnout in election crucial to right-wing

United Press International

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Demonstrators stoned and burned buses in black townships at the start of important municipal elections today, but authorities reported generally peaceful polling nationwide under unprecedented security measures.

State-run radio reported a low voter turnout but said it was expected to pick up later in the day.

The elections are deemed crucial to President Pieter W. Botha's white minority government, testing the growth of the right-wing white electorate, which opposes Botha's policies of limited racial reform.

Botha's government also is hoping for a high voter turnout in black areas as an endorsement of its policies.

For the first time, blacks in urban townships, minority whites and people of mixed-race are voting on the same day for segregated city, town and township councils.

Police said at least nine Molotov cocktail attacks occurred in black townships on the eve of the election and said one man had been killed in Durban and two other people injured in sporadic incidents of unrest elsewhere.

The Public Transport Co. said bus traffic through black townships in the Johannesburg-Pretoria area was generally normal Wednesday, with the exception of the Emdent district of the sprawling black satellite city of Soweto and the eastern township of Thokoza.

In Emdent, mobs of blacks stoned three buses this morning, smashing windshields and setting one ablaze after dragging its driver outside and beating him, a transport spokesman said. The driver was not seriously injured, he said.

In Thokoza, police sealed the only entrance to the township and authorities had no immediate comment on the situation there.

In Durban, official sources reported several buses were stoned in the black townships of KwaMashu, Umlazi and Claremont to discourage people from voting and supporting a call for a one-day protest.

Overnight, witnesses said dissidents in Indian townships erected signs in fluorescent paint calling for a boycott of the elections.

But Brig. Leon Mellet, spokesman for Law and Order Minister Adriaan Volk, said the unrest was relatively minor.

Unprecedented security measures were in force to protect blacks who wanted to vote despite calls for a boycott and warnings the outlawed African National Congress intends to disrupt polling, officials said.

"We've got foot patrols all over the place," Mellet said. "The police presence at the polling booths is very high."

Anti-government church leaders, among them Archbishop Desmond Tutu, appealed for calm amid security clamps on dissent and opposition calls for protests.

"The South African police will not tolerate any form of intimidation or violence," National Police Commissioner Hennie de Witt said Tuesday.

A limpet mine explosion Tuesday in a shopping arcade in Potchefstroom southwest of Johannesburg marked the 20th such terrorist attack this month. It came 23 hours after a powerful car bomb killed two black men and wounded 42 other people in Witbank, a coal-mining town west of Johannesburg.

Vlok, echoing warnings that radical groups planned to disrupt the polls, blamed the outlawed African National Congress for the Witbank attack.

Analysts deem the elections crucial to Botha's minority white government in the face of vote-catching campaigns for a return to harsher apartheid policies by the right-wing white Conservative Party.

Treu, a Calvinist cleric Andries Treurnicht, a former minister in the Botha government, the breakaway right-wingers worked white concern at Botha's softening of apartheid to become the official opposition in a general election last May for the white chamber in the segregated three-house Parliament.

Equally telling for Botha's government, which is stalling further reforms for fear of right-wing gains, will be the extent of black participation in today's local council elections. Such polls have in the past been largely ignored by residents of the squalid, segregated townships.

Dissenting church leaders, including Archbishop Desmond Tutu, warned Tuesday that the government ban on protests will provoke further violence and appealed for peaceful opposition to the election.

Citing a call by dissidents for daylong protests, Tutu said: "Whatever expression is given to the call — organizations and individuals should be free to act without fear of violence."

Tutu and other dissenting clerics defied emergency measures on Sept. 4 and called for a boycott of segregated councils.

Yugoslavian regional government resigns

United Press International

BELOGRADE, Yugoslavia — The government of Yugoslavia's southern republic of Montenegro has resigned in the wake of widespread unrest and a no-confidence vote by the regional parliament, official news reports said.

Montenegrin Prime Minister Vukobratovic submitted his "irrevocable resignation" at a parliament session in the regional capital of Titograd late Tuesday after he learned five of his cabinet members, including Interior Minister Lazar Djodjic, had failed to win a confidence vote in secret balloting by Montenegro's three-chamber parliament, Belgrade radio said.

Vukobratovic said his 25-member cabinet resigned along with him, the broadcast said. The Montenegrin parliament was expected to consider the resignations Wednesday.

The republics of Serbia and Montenegro have been hit by massive protests in the past three months as part of a wave of political, economic and ethnic unrest sweeping much of Yugoslavia, an uneasy federation of 23 million ethnically diverse people residing in six republics and two autonomous provinces.

The unrest has propelled the country into its worst crisis in 40 years, with the annual inflation rate soaring to 217 percent and the standard of living plunging by 50 percent in the past eight years.

About 40,000 protesters, including striking workers and students, staged a massive rally outside the regional parliament in Titograd Oct. 7, demanding economic and political reforms and the resignation of incompetent leaders.

Montenegro's government and Communist Party leadership rejected the demands, and at dawn the next day unleashed scores of club-wielding riot police on the protesters.

The Montenegrin Communist Party Central Committee voted confidence in its politburo shortly after the Oct. 8 demonstrations, and the Montenegrin parliament scheduled a confidence vote on the Montenegrin presidency and government for Tuesday.

Following a daylong debate, the parliament voted confidence in the presidency but voted no confidence in Djodjic and four other government members, prompting Vukobratovic to resign, Belgrade radio said.

The demonstrations in Titograd Oct. 7 came only a day after the Serbian Communist party leadership, backed by 100,000 militant Serbian demonstrators, forced the Communist leadership of Serbia's Vojvodina province to resign.

The unrest in Serbia stemmed in part from allegations of persecution of ethnic Serbs by ethnic Albanians.

Last week, in a move seen as a major shakeup in the national Communist Party leadership, five politburo members resigned during a plenary meeting of the ruling Communist Party Central Committee in Belgrade.

Party leaders at the plenary session also announced plans for introducing limited capitalist-style reforms in Yugoslavia's socialist economy.

Iran, Iraq asked to resume peace talks Monday

United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar asked Iranian and Iraqi officials to return to Geneva next week to resume stalled peace talks, urging them to focus on prisoner of war exchanges and troop withdrawals.

Perez de Cuellar said Tuesday that he expected to mediate the talks, beginning Monday, for "four or five days." His said his special representative, Swedish U.N. Ambassador Jan Eliasson, would carry on after he returns to New York for the General Assembly session.

West German U.N. Ambassador Count York von Wartenburg, the president of the Security Council, said the council fully supported Perez de Cuellar's mediating efforts, but voiced concern at the "slow pace" in the peace negotiations.

Both U.N. officials appeared in a news conference to announce the resumption of talks to settle the 8-year-old Persian Gulf war.

"I am going to Geneva with the tremendous support and encouragement of the Security Council," Perez de Cuellar said after consulting with the 15-nation body.

"I am encouraged by the fact that both sides appeared ready to show good will by proceeding with some repatriation (of prisoners of war) in the near future, and for the sake of those concerned, I really hope that this will be possible in the near future," he said.

Perez de Cuellar said he sent out invitations Tuesday to Foreign Ministers Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and Tariq Aziz of Iraq and hoped the two will be in Geneva for the start of their third round of talks Monday.

Velayati and Aziz met face to face for the first time in Geneva Aug. 25 for talks that lasted until Sept. 13. They met again at U.N. headquarters Oct. 1 for about a week. The discussions were conducted through Perez de Cuellar.

Perez de Cuellar said the cease-fire between the two warring nations, which took effect Aug. 20, "cannot be consolidated until there is withdrawal of troops from both sides."

He said reports from aides who monitored Iranian and Iraqi military positions along the border showed that troops in some areas were as close as 6 yards apart.

"There are small incidents, but no dramatic incidents, but the fact that they are so close is a matter of concern," he said.

Perez de Cuellar said there had been "some movement, which for us is really encouraging" on the issue of prisoner exchanges and he hoped that the Geneva meeting will produce "serious movement ahead."

Von Wartenburg said the council, after reviewing a report from the 350-strong U.N. cease-fire observer team in Iran and Iraq, believed that there should be "clearly the urgency of a consolidation of the cease-fire in the best way through a rapid troop withdrawal."

"Security Council members are concerned of the slow pace of the talks so far," he said. "Therefore, they urged the parties to display maximum cooperation and expressed their expectation that substantial progress will be made."

The cease-fire, troop withdrawal and repatriation of prisoners are included in the first three points of Security Council Resolution 598, issued by the council July 20, 1987.

The Aug. 20 truce and ensuing peace negotiations followed Iran's acceptance of Resolution 598 last summer. Iraq had already accepted the resolution.

One obstacle in the talks has been Iraq's insistence the Shatt al Arab, the clogged waterway dividing the two nations, be cleared for navigation before substantive talks on troop withdrawal and POWs can begin. The waterway leads into the Persian Gulf.

Investigators probe Andes plane crash

United Press International

LIMA, Peru — Aviation officials today investigated whether engine failure may have caused an Aeroperu jetliner to crash in the southern Andes, killing at least 12 people, including an American, and injuring 44 others.

The Fokker F-28 jetliner crashed Tuesday a mile from Manco Capac Airport, one of the world's highest commercial airfields, in the city of Juliaca, 515 miles southeast of the capital of Lima.

The aircraft split in two on impact and the tail section "exploded in flames," a survivor said.

Fifteen Aeroperu and federal investigators led by Transportation Minister Camilo Carillo flew to Juliaca following the Tuesday morning crash and were looking today into reports that one of the jet's two turbine engines failed, Aeroperu spokesman Freddy Chirinos said.

Aeroperu said a stewardess and 11 passengers, including an American, a Swiss priest and two French citizens, were killed.

The domestic flight carried a crew of four and 65 passengers, 18 of them foreigners, the airline said. The passengers included seven Americans and citizens from Britain, France, Spain, Switzerland, Italy and Australia.

Chirinos said 44 survivors, including the six Americans, suffered cuts, broken bones or severe burns and were hospitalized in Lima, Arequipa and Juliaca.

The plane lost altitude in clear weather shortly after takeoff and crashed despite the pilot's efforts to keep the aircraft aloft with one engine, survivor Juan Benitez, 23, a Peruvian teacher, said in a telephone interview from Juliaca.

The pilot "was trying to lift off again when we felt the final impact," he said. "The plane split in two."

The tail section "did a somersault and exploded in flames," he said, coming to rest more than 50 yards from the fuselage, which was flipped upside down.

Aeroperu identified the dead American as Douglas Harris, address unknown, and the Swiss Roman Catholic priest as Kurt Lenz, a French couple, Erver and Ingeborg Pfiffer, also were killed, it said. Three bodies had not been identified.

Among the injured Americans were newlyweds Michael Riley and Elizabeth Dunning and another married couple, Mark Green and Catherine Krauss. No hometowns were given.

The two couples were hospitalized in Lima. Their medical conditions were not released.

Persian Gulf countries to hold meeting on Lebanon

United Press International

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates — Foreign ministers of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council will hold emergency talks in Saudi Arabia next week to discuss ways to resolve the political crisis in Lebanon, the official Emirates News Agency said Wednesday.

The news agency said GCC members Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Bahrain and Oman will assess efforts currently under way to "save Lebanon from its dilemma" at the meeting scheduled for Tuesday.

UAE President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan last week called for an urgent Arab summit to try to prevent a formal partition of the Middle East nation torn by 13 years of sectarian violence.

Lebanon has remained without a president since former President Amin Gemayel's term expired last month, and two cabinets — one Christian and the other Muslim — are competing for foreign recognition as the legitimate government.

Nahyan renewed his call for an emergency meeting Tuesday night during talks with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouq Sharaa, who arrived in Abu Dhabi on a surprise visit.

"It is the Arab deteriorating situation that has prompted me to call for an urgent Arab summit, especially after Lebanon has reached to complete paralysis in all aspects of life," the agency quoted Nahyan as saying.

The news report said Nahyan told the Syrian envoy Arabs will "blame their leaders — for the present divisions."

Bonn, Moscow agree trade, space measures

United Press International

MOSCOW — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signed agreements calling for greater cooperation in trade, nuclear power, ecology and space exploration on the second day of Kohl's four-day visit to Moscow.

With the bulk of his official work now out of the way, Kohl was scheduled to meet today with the head of the Russian Orthodox Church Patriarch Pimen before traveling to the ancient religious centers of Vladimir and Suzdal about 125 miles northeast of Moscow.

Kohl, underlining his concern for human rights in the Soviet Union, met Tuesday with prominent dissident and Nobel Peace-Prize winner Andrei Sakharov before joining Gorbachev for talks and a treaty-signing ceremony in the Kremlin.

The two leaders signed a series of seven agreements outlining cooperation in the fields of nuclear-power plant construction and design, health, culture, ecology and farming. The Soviets also agreed to allow a West German to join Soviet cosmonauts in the orbiting Mir space station some time in the 1990s.

The two leaders also agreed to a policy of regular contacts between the countries' defense ministers. A protocol for avoiding dangerous incidents at sea between the Soviet and West German navies also was decided.

Soviet officials and West German bankers, meanwhile, signed a mostly ceremonial agreement granting the Soviet Union a $1.67 billion credit line to help Moscow rebuild its outdated consumer goods industry.

The Germans agreed to help modernize more than 200 aging Soviet factories involved mostly in the light manufacturing and consumer goods spheres — areas Gorbachev has insisted must be revitalized quickly.

Both sides expressed hope that Kohl's visit, the first state visit by a German chancellor to Moscow in five years, will open a new chapter in Soviet-West German relations and lead to increased trade between the two countries.

WORLD BRIEFS

Vietnamese anti-communists sentenced

BANGKOK, Thailand — A Vietnamese court convicted 21 members of an anti-communist "Free Vietnamese Force" of violating national security and sentenced the two leaders, former Buddhist monks, to death, a military-run Vietnamese newspaper reported.

The court said the force, particularly active among the Buddhist clergy, received funds from abroad to create "secret zones" and to publish "counter-revolutionary propaganda," according to the Oct. 9 edition of the Army newspaper Quoi Doi Nhai Dan, which was translated and made available to United Press International on Wednesday.

The article gave no date for the trial but said that after three days of hearings all 21 defendants were found guilty of "dangerous crimes violating national security."

It said leaders Pham Van Thuong, a former Buddhist monk, professor and author, and Le Manh That, also a former monk, were sentenced to death.

Two other leaders, identified as Phan Van Ty, a former commando lieutenant in the South Vietnamese army, and Ton That Ky, a former South Vietnamese army captain, were sentenced to life imprisonment. The other defendants were given prison terms ranging from 4 1/2 to 15 years, it said.

Hundreds battle Singapore refinery blaze

SINGAPORE — A raging oil refinery fire whipped by fierce winds ignited a third tank Wednesday and threatened a fourth containing a highly flammable jet fuel.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed and are hopeful that it doesn't spread any further," said a Singapore Refining Co. spokesman while 500 firefighters battled the blaze for a second day. The fire sent funnels of pungent smoke over Singapore.

With flames soaring 400 feet, there were also fears the huge tanks might burst. The immediate task was to "contain the fire by spreading water and foam on the tanks," a fire official said.

The refinery was shut down, but nearby sea lanes remained open. Singapore is one of the world's busiest shipping ports and the third largest oil refining center.

All non-essential staff were evacuated from the island of Merlimau where the fire roared in three tanks, each with a storage capacity of 120,000 barrels of naphtha, a byproduct of crude oil used in paint thinner and solvents.

No injuries were reported, but firefighters feared the southwest gusts would sweep flames to a tank containing mogas, a highly flammable jet fuel. Another nearby stretch of facilities contained kerosene.

The Singapore Refining Co., owned by British Petroleum, Caltex Petroleum Corp. and the Singapore Petroleum Co., maintains more than 20 tanks on the island two miles southwest of Singapore.

Protesters rock U.S. cultural center

SEOUL, South Korea — Radical youths attacked a provincial American Cultural Center office Wednesday with rocks and Molotov cocktails, causing minor damage but no injuries, U.S. officials said.

The attack on the center in Taegu, 150 miles southeast of Seoul, was carried out by 80 to 100 youths who snatched the center's signboard and threw stones and Molotov cocktails, the U.S. Embassy in Seoul said in a statement.

Police firing tear gas drove the crowd away from the building, but not before three cars were damaged and several windows broken, news reports said.

The embassy said none of the Molotov cocktails exploded.

The American Cultural Center, operated by the U.S. Information Service, was evacuated for a short time, the embassy said.

The assault on the cultural center was the second serious attack on a U.S. facility this month. Anti-American sentiments are strong among politically active college students and young dissidents.

On Oct. 14, about 100 students attacked the USIS building in Kwangju, 170 miles south of Seoul, torching two vehicles and smashing windows.

Walesa refuses new terms for talks

WARSAW, Poland — Solidarity founder Lech Walesa rejected a demand that two activists be dropped from the outlawed union's negotiating team in planned talks with the government and warned of further strikes if the negotiations are not held.

"I fear new strikes can occur if the talks are not held," Walesa said Tuesday by telephone from the northern seaport of Gdansk, where Solidarity was born in 1980.

The Warsaw government, in an attempt to end a rash of strikes and civil unrest brought on by Poland's worsening economy, agreed earlier this year to hold talks with Walesa, the Catholic Church, the Communist Party-dominated unions and independent intellectuals.

Soaring consumer prices triggered labor unrest by workers who demanded wage increases and the re-legalization of Solidarity, which was banned in 1982.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said at his weekly news conference Tuesday that Walesa should hold a "preparatory meeting" with Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak today to decide on the composition of the Solidarity team that will participate in the talks.

Israel disciplines three journalists

JERUSALEM — Israel suspended the press credentials of three foreign journalists after they filed stories about an alleged Israeli undercover hit squad without first submitting the articles to a military censor.

Israeli authorities, including Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin, have strongly denied the allegations in the reports carried by the Reuters news agency and the London-based Financial Times.

The press credentials of Reuters correspondents Paul Taylor and Steve Weizman, and Andrew Whitley of the Financial Times were suspended Tuesday.

Weizman's dispatch Sunday quoted Arabs as saying the Israeli military was using undercover death squads in the occupied territories. Weizman also quoted security sources as saying that the squads had orders to shoot to kill fugitive organizers of the uprising "with blood on their hands."

Whitley said he told government officials the references to Israeli intelligence operations were in the context of a broader story on the way the army had handled the Palestinian uprising.

100,000 protest India's farm policies

NEW DELHI, India — More than 100,000 farmers demanding economic relief today occupied a grassy mall near Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's office for a second day, their numbers swelling as their leaders awaited a response from the government.

"This place is nice. I am enjoying the sunshine and have no plan to move until our demands are met," said Mahinder Singh Tikait, the charismatic president of the Bharatiya Kisan Union, Hindi for the Indian Farmers Union, which organized the protest.

Tikait evaded questions on talks his aides held Tuesday evening with Textile Minister Ram Niwas Mirdha and Shyam Lal Yadav, a junior agriculture minister, who were presented with the farmers' demands for lower electricity rates, higher produce prices and cancellation of outstanding loan payments.

Nine officers arrested in coup attempt

United Press International

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Nine noncommissioned officers have been arrested on charges they plotted to blow up a notorious prison in a failed coup bid last week against the month-old military government of Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

Maj. Isidor Pongnon, commander of the Fort Dimanche prison, said the nine soldiers were arrested Thursday for their role in the alleged coup attempt against Avril 11 days ago.

Diplomatic sources said the arrests could be another sign of unrest over the slowness of

This is part of the aborted coup under the leadership of Sgt. Patrick Bochar, Maj. Isidor Pongnon change under Avril, who was installed in a Sept. 17 coup by reformist enlisted men.

Independent Radio Haiti Inter has reported another 18 soldiers were being held at the National Penitentiary for their role in the purported coup bid. The Ministry of Information and prison officials refused to answer questions about that report.

Pongnon, in an interview watched by about 35 soldiers and officers, said the nine noncommissioned officers were stationed at the prison and "wanted to blow up the fort and to arrest the commandant. This is a part of the aborted coup under the leadership of Sgt. Patrick Bochar."

The government has said

Bochar, head of the national Gaming Commission, and retired Col. Samuel Jeremie were arrested as they tried to seize a National Palace arsenal Oct. 15.

Official details of the alleged coup attempt remain murky and Avril did not comment on the incident in a Friday speech on plans for elections in the impoverished Caribbean nation.

Troops shooting into the air broke up a march in downtown Port-au-Prince Monday by hundreds of demonstrators demanding the ouster of Avril's government because of the reported arrests.

Dalai lama may begin talks with China

United Press International

NEW DELHI, India — Responding to a Chinese offer, representatives of Tibet's exiled spiritual leader, the dalai lama, have proposed the first official talks with Beijing on the future of the Himalayan region to be held in Geneva in January.

"We are approaching the talks with sincerity and hope the Chinese side will respond accordingly," Kalon Jigme Lhundup, a deputy of the Kashyag, the self-proclaimed Tibetan government-in-exile, said Tuesday.

The dalai lama, revered as a godking by Tibet's 6 million

Buddhists, fled to India in 1959 with tens of thousands of followers after an unsuccessful insurrection against Chinese rule, which began in 1951. He lives in the northern hill town of Dharamsala.

Tibetans have pressed their demand for independence for their Himalayan homeland and an end to the migration there of millions of ethnic Han Chinese, who have reduced the native population to a minority.

Anti-Chinese demonstrations in the Tibetan capital of Lhasa have left at least 11 people dead since September 1987.

Beijing last month renewed its offer to negotiate the status of Tibet with the dalai lama or his representatives. China seized control of Tibet in a 1951 military takeover.

China had proposed that the unprecedented talks be held in Beijing, Hong Kong or any of its missions around the world, but said the Tibetan exile side could choose its own location. The Tibetans chose Geneva.

In a prepared statement, Lhundup said a nine-member Tibetan delegation "would like the talks to be held in Geneva, Switzerland, which is the most convenient and neutral venue. We would also like the first round of talks to be held in January 1989."

There was no immediate response from the Chinese Embassy, to which Lhundup conveyed the plan verbally earlier in the day.

In June, the dalai lama addressed the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, and outlined a new proposal for his homeland, saying Beijing should relinquish control of Tibet except for foreign affairs and, for a limited period, defense.

He also named at that time the nine-member delegation to represent him in any negotiations with the Chinese.

Marshall, Flint play key roles for Lyman

By CHRIS FISTER
Herald sports editor

LONGWOOD — With the top-ranked senior, junior and sophomore in the state, it is easy to see why the Lyman Greyhounds are favored to repeat as Seminole Athletic Conference champions.

But the destiny of the 'Hounds does not lie completely in the hands (or legs) of senior Nick Radkewich, junior Teddy Mitchell and sophomore Kevin Padgett. It is a pair of senior "team players" who are the key to Lyman's pulling through in the big meets in 1984.

Darren Marshall and James Flint is the senior duo who coach Fred Finke will be counting on Friday afternoon in the SAC meet at Lake Mary High.

"They will be the ones who determine if we win the conference," Finke said of Marshall and Flint. "They are the people who rise to the occasion when we need them the most. Every team lives and dies by those types of people."

Neither Marshall or Flint has been at his best this season as both have been out either with injury or sickness. Both have run in only three meets this year.

Still, Finke and the rest of the Lyman team have faith in the senior duo, who are also two of the schools top track athletes.

"How the kids react in big meets is a key," Finke said. "Marshall ran 16:58 as a sophomore and didn't improve on that until the district, region and state last year when he went 16:20.

"Flint didn't run under 17 the whole year last year until the conference meet where he ran a 16:40," added Finke. "By region, where it had to be our best team race, he ran in the 16:20s."

Marshall and Flint initially used cross country as a means to stay in shape for the track season. Marshall was the state runnerup in the 330 intermediate hurdles a year ago while Flint is a 22.5 long jumper. Both are also among the top decathletes in the state.

Cross country is still a good way to stay in shape for the two, but the championship meets is where their competitiveness comes out. And Finke is anxious to see that competitiveness again this Friday.

"In the early part of the season, it is just a method of training," Finke said. "But their dedication to the team and their competitiveness really come out in the big meets.

"They are very good team players," added Finke. "And there is no doubt in the other runners' minds that, when it comes time, Darren Marshall and James Flint will be there."

Sutton hopes to reach potential

United Press International

GULF BREEZE — Hal Sutton has had a solid career on the PGA tour but not spectacular enough to live up to expectations he created when he was named PGA Player of the Year in 1983, his second year on the tour.

He never assumed the dominant position many of the sport's observers and fans predicted, and critics questioned his desire and mental toughness. They cited a tendency to be distracted by outside problems and elements of a "spoiled rich kid" syndrome in his personality.

Two failed marriages during that period added to the turmoil in Sutton's life.

This season, following an 11-week stretch in which he played only twice, including a disappointing tie for 66th at the PGA Championship, talk about Sutton's "unrealized" potential began anew.

His performance in the Pensacola Open over the weekend didn't help matters. Sutton finished the $400,000 Tour event at 9-under-par 279, and a tie for 21st place.

What neither critics, fans or fellow golfers knew was that Sutton's concentration and competitiveness had been sapped by the near-tragic illness of his fiancée, Jennifer.

A July 23 wedding date was set, but on July 19 at his farm in Hope, Ark., Sutton was forced to rush Jennifer to the hospital after she complained of severe headaches.

Doctors performed a spinal tap and the initial diagnosis was meningitis. After a short hospital stay Jennifer, 21, seemed to improve, but that was only the first in a series of false recoveries she was to experience over the next two months. Within a week more severe symptoms began to surface.

"She was losing a lot of weight, her balance was way off and her head was killing her," Sutton, 30, explained Monday.

"Some of the time she couldn't even walk. She's an aerobics instructor, so you knew it was serious."

Sutton decided to take Jennifer to see a neurologist and an infectious disease specialist in his home town of Bismarck, La. Once again the first diagnosis was spinal meningitis, but after a series of tests it was determined that she had contracted Rocky Mountain spotted fever from a tick bite suffered while horseback riding.

They were married Sept. 3 and Jennifer experienced a series of improvements and relapses that only added to the strain Sutton was under.

"I'd been off for several weeks and she seemed to be doing a lot better so I played Memphis and did fairly well, then went to play the PGA," recounted Sutton. "Saturday at the PGA they called me and said they'd put her back in the hospital and that if her spinal pressure rose much more they would have to perform emergency brain surgery."

Sutton shot a 77 in the final round at the PGA and then dropped out of the sport for seven weeks.

A recurrence of double vision led to a brain scan which showed that several areas of Jennifer's brain were inflamed.

"I knew it was serious the whole time, but now we realized she was fighting for her life," said Sutton.

PGA THIS WEEK
Tournament $700,000 Walt Disney Golf Classic at Magnolia Palm and Buena Vista Golf Courses, Lake Buena Vista, Fla., Oct. 27-30.

Top money — Winner $126,000, second $75,000, third $47,000.
Par and yardage: Magnolia Par 36-72, Yardage 7,190; Palm Par 36-72, Yardage 6,967; Buena Vista Par 36-72, Yardage 6,706.

Last year's champion: Larry Nelson tied a Magnolia course record with a final round 63 to finish at 28 under par 308, edging Mark O'Meara and Morris Melsthy by one stroke. Nelson, who also won the Disney Classic in 1984, is defending.

Previous winners in field: Ray Floyd (1983), Payne Stewart (1982).

Leading contenders: Nelson, a two-time champion; Jay Sindelar, the leading money winner on the PGA Tour; PGA Championship winner Jeff Burdick.

Missing stars: 1983 Disney champion Larry Wadkins, 1982 Disney champion Hal Sutton and Curtis Strange.

The course: Each player competes over 4 different courses for the first three rounds following a 54-hole cut. The surviving pros finish on the Magnolia. Magnolia No. 14 has been especially difficult at a water hazard left of the fairway was extended across the front of the green, forcing an approach shot over water. At Palm No. 3, golfers must hit over water from tee to green on the par 3 hole. Buena Vista No. 4 is in danger, requiring a tee shot over water.

Fast highlights: Last year, Nelson came from six shots down at the start of the final round. Melsthy had a chance to force a playoff but he missed a 16-foot putt for birdie at No. 18. In 1983, Ray Floyd rolled in a 28-foot birdie at 18 to force a three-way tie with Lon Ninko and Mike Sullivan. Floyd then held a 6-holer for par on the first extra hole to win $80,000.

Patterson, Catanach part of new trend

By TONY DeBORNER
Herald sports writer

"Proud of our past — Confident of our future."

That saying appears on all the literature produced by the Rollins College sports information department about the Lady Tar volleyball team. But it could just as easily apply to the state of volleyball in the United States.

You see, the cover story in the recent issue of American Volleyball, the publication of the American Volleyball Coaches Association, concerned the new wave of young coaches at the college level and how that trend should lead the sport to a higher level competitively and in popularity.

As a matter of fact, Tuesday night's Sunshine State Conference match at Rollins between the Lady Tars and The University of Tampa Spartans matched two of the members of that vanguard of young coaches: Suzanne Patterson of Rollins and Tampa's Chris Catanach.

Despite their different backgrounds — Patterson having played at Rollins while Catanach, a native of the Virgin Islands, started as a student assistant at UT — they share a philosophy about the sport's growth.

"There's a new crop of coaches," said Catanach, who has been named SSC Coach of the Year three times and was South Region Coach of the Year last season. "The game has progressed so much. Young coaches have to come in and keep it going."

Patterson agreed and cited American Volleyball's story about how Title IX has helped produce more young woman coaches.

"That (the increase in young woman coaches) was prompted a lot by Title IX," said Patterson, who coached at the University of North Carolina — Asheville for four years before returning to Winter Park.

"One thing about college volleyball in the Southeast is that women don't have the competition for the jobs within the schools from men. There are not as many male volleyball coaches in the Southeast."

Catanach knows and said that, more than his youth, made for a difficult transition when he took over for Sandy Patton in 1984.

"The toughest thing was being male," said Catanach, who had a 144-22 record entering this year. "The first two years, I would say things that I shouldn't have said. I wasn't experienced in politics."

"It was very tough breaking in to Division II volleyball."

Now, Catanach is one of the top three coaches in terms of seniority within the conference. And with three appearances in the NCAA tournament (and probably a fourth this year, the Spartans improving to 23-1 with their 15-9, 15-12, 16-14 win over Rollins Tuesday) comes a certain amount of respect and acceptance.

For Patterson, her maiden season leading the Lady Tars has been a learning experience.

"In a way, the first half of the season was very difficult because I didn't know the competition," said Patterson. "I had to spend a lot of time going out and seeing other teams. It was very time consuming."

"On the other hand, volleyball is volleyball anywhere in the country. And being the new coach, I was an underdog. There's not a whole lot of pressure."

Looking ahead, both Catanach and Patterson are expecting good things, both for their teams and their sport.

"In 1984, when the United States women won the silver and the men won the gold in the Olympics, we had a clinic at The University of Tampa," recalled Catanach. "We had to turn people away."

"After that, it died off a little bit. But after this year (when Olympic volleyball received a lot of prime time television exposure), interest is back up again. At Tampa, the baseball players go out between practices when the net is still up and play."

"I'm glad I'm in it."

Tampa got a sideout on Hittle's kill and the Lady Spartans put on their best rally of the game with five points on Wollam's serve for a 12-11 lead.

Tampa made it 14-11 on a pair of dumps to the short middle by Solis but Rollins refused to fold in the late going as it came back to tie on the serve of Bolling with Douglas getting in a kill for the 14th point.

Tampa, though, would not let the Lady Tars gain an advantage as Wolmesjo got in a spike for a sideout and she then served out the match.

"Tampa really has a great team," Patterson said. "But we also played a great match tonight. We proved we can be competitive against the top competition."

Akers

continues to excel. Akers, who leads the team with 24 points (14 goals-10 assists), talks of her decision to attend UCF in 1984.

"I was a senior in high school (Seattle), and I got a call from coach Rudy that he wanted me to play for him. And he was ready to offer me a full scholarship (which UCF rarely gave because of their financial situation at the time). So I flew to Orlando, got a tour of the campus, and I decided that UCF was the place for me because of three reasons."

"One was coach Rudy; two was the weather; and three a place to get a good education."

Akers, who is a Liberal Studies/Health major, wants to be a paramedic or possibly go on to a coaching career in soccer.

But her plans as of now are winning the national title, and playing professional women's soccer in Sweden. And as good as Michelle Akers is, does she have a weakness? Yes, according to coach Barker. "She isn't the fastest player," he said. "But she has so much great field vision, she can think two or three moves ahead of the other players."

And Michelle, because of her outstanding work as a student-athlete, is in the running for the prestigious NCAA Top Six Award, which is the student-athlete equivalent of college football's Heisman Trophy (men and women are eligible for any sport).

Michelle Akers has proven through hard work, and God given talent that she's one of the best in the game of soccer. And the University of Central Florida has been the beneficiary of the talent for four excellent seasons.

with the Tampa coaches and the Tampa players, that will seem strange," Don Shula said. "You realize that there's something special, but after that your concentration is such and your responsibilities are so demanding, that just takes over."

Both David and Mike inherited their father's competitive nature, although the two had different personalities growing up.

"Both of them were very, very competitive," Don Shula said. "David in a different way than Mike. David was flying head first into everything. Mike was more like (former Dolphin quarterback) Bob Griese. He'd sort of look over everything and evaluate the situation."

Asked to evaluate who he thought his mother would be rooting for Sunday, Mike Shula answered quickly.

"Think? I know she's going to be rooting for me," he said. "Rooting for her boy."

Don Shula, who talks on the telephone to Mike twice a week, had a slight difference of opinion.

"I'm sure she's going to root for Mike to do well," he said, laughing. "But that's a tough call for Dorothy. That's what you call a real dilemma."

SEC gets equal access rule

United Press International

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee athletic officials cheered the Southeastern Conference for establishing a policy that gives women sportswriters the same access to players as their male counterparts.

Bud Ford, sports information director at the University of Tennessee, said the Vols have had an equal access policy in place for all sports since 1981, giving women writers the same opportunities to interview players as men have always had.

"I think it's something that we have to do," Ford said Tuesday. "We have had women writers cover UT sports in the past and we felt it was important to offer them the same access that male writers have for covering sporting events. Therefore, we went to an equal access policy in all sports in 1981."

Southeastern Conference Commissioner Harvey Schiller ordered all SEC schools to adopt the equal access policy in response to complaints from an Atlanta sportswriter who claims Vanderbilt Athletic Director Roy Kramer slammed a lockerroom door on her foot.

Karen Rosen of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution complained to the SEC that Kramer told her "no girls allowed" and shut the lockerroom door on her foot three weeks ago.

NFL limps to halfway point

United Press International

The National Football League has limped through half its season, which means a few observations are mandatory and the one that jumps to mind before anything else has to do with clothing.

What might the temperature be during the New Year's weekend, one wonders, in Chicago, Cincinnati and Buffalo.

Those three franchises are trying to run away with their division and a host spot in the divisional playoff round — which will be played on Dec. 31 and Jan. 1.

Buffalo and Chicago seem to be a lock. And even if Cincinnati goes fall to a late Cleveland charge now that Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar is back, the substitution of Cleveland Stadium for Riverfront Stadium would not improve the weather prospects.

The other front runner for a divisional round game is New Orleans and its indoor facility.

Parkas in Buffalo or gumbo in New Orleans. Not a real tough choice to make.

At the midway point, however, Buffalo is as logical a selection as any for the AFC representative in the Super Bowl.

And even if the Bills fall along the way, the AFC is almost certain to field a team that has never won the Super Bowl before.

Neither Buffalo, Cleveland, Houston nor Seattle have ever been to the Super Bowl before and all of them have a chance this year. The other major possibilities from the AFC — Cincinnati and Denver — have lost all three of their combined Super Bowl appearances.

Unless New Orleans makes it from the NFC, that conference will almost certainly send a team that has already been to the big game. Washington, the New York Giants, Chicago and San Francisco, winners of the last four NFL titles, are again would-be challengers.

The Los Angeles Rams and Minnesota Vikings, still on the potential list, have been to the Super Bowl and lost.

At this stage of the season, coach of the year honors would likely fall to Sam Wyche at Cincinnati. Wyche was a solid top choice to be the first coach to be dismissed this year. Now his team is 7-1 and with the year quarterback Boomer Esiason is having there is little reason to feel the Bengals will collapse.

The second half of the season starts out with a key meeting between Cincinnati and Cleveland and if the Bengals win that one, the AFC Central race will be virtually over and Wyche will have taken a huge step toward postseason honors.

Another mid-season thought has to do with parity, or whatever word the NFL is using these days to describe the fact that anybody can beat anybody else anytime they line up.

Teams in the NFL are so close to being equal that it takes a person with cool nerves or a great deal of cash to risk wagering on the outcome of any game. And it takes only the slightest shift of fortune to alter a team's status in the NFL standings.

Take the Indianapolis Colts, for example. They have a 3-5 record at the midway point and four of those losses have come by 3, 3, 6 and 4 points. The Dallas Cowboys have lost four games by a total of nine points. The Kansas City Chiefs have lost four by a total of six points.

Five of the San Francisco 49ers games have been decided by three points or less (winning three and losing two).

Green Bay floated along in a sea of setbacks and suddenly beat New England by 42 points and Minnesota by 20.

The Houston Oilers look powerful for a while, then lose to the New York Jets by 42. They start to look powerful again, then give up 44 points to Cincinnati.

Therefore, halfway through the season, the NFL looks about the same as it has for the past several years.

Bowl talk builds up in Miami

United Press International

CORAL GABLES — Jimmy Johnson's problem is that no one wants to talk about Miami's upcoming game with East Carolina.

Local papers have been filled with reports of varying bowl scenarios for the fourth-ranked Hurricanes, 5-1, including a possible "Glasnost Bowl" next fall in Moscow.

The Miami Herald reported Tuesday that Miami and second-ranked Notre Dame have worked out a deal with the Orange and Fiesta bowls that gives the Fighting Irish the opportunity to pick one bowl, leaving the other for the Hurricanes. Johnson and the Hurricanes desperately want a rematch with Notre Dame, which ended Miami's 36-game regular season winning streak, but the Irish have nothing to gain from that matchup.

Orange Bowl officials said Tuesday no such deal has been reached, but with the Hurricanes likely to play in their sixth straight New Year's Day bowl game, speculating on where the Hurricanes will play in January is more fun than discussing 1-7 East Carolina. For the record, the major bowls will be played Jan. 2 to avoid conflict with NFL playoff games.

"This is too early to discuss bowl games, so I really have no comment about bowl games," Johnson said Tuesday at his weekly news conference.

As far as the possibility of playing a game in Moscow to open the 1989 season, Johnson said he is all for it, as long as the Hurricanes do not have to add an extra game to their schedule. He also would not agree to such a game unless Miami could have a week off following the game to recover from the trip.

Raycom Inc., a sports television syndicator out of Charlotte, N.C., announced last week it wants to stage a Glasnost Bowl in Moscow to kick off the season Sept. 2.

"I'm favorable for that particular game," Johnson said. "I am not in favor of extra games outside of the 11 games we have in the regular season. I would not want to give up a home game, but as far as the possibility of us playing an opponent in Moscow, I think it would be a great experience for our players."

"I think it's such an experience that I would maybe concede (in spite of my opinions personally, I think it's something that they would remember for the rest of their lives and of course it would be great for the two countries."

Johnson also is opposed to adding a 12th regular season game to the schedule. Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich has said there is a movement in the NCAA to discuss adding the extra game.

"I am not for adding more games to the season," Johnson said. "I am not for a 12th game. In fact, I think you'll find most coaches are opposed. You've got to remember that these are college students, not professional football players."

SACCA TO QB LIONS
UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Penn State is expected to stick with freshman quarterback Tony Sacca Saturday against No. 6 West Virginia because junior Tom Bill is not ready to return from a knee injury.

Bill, who underwent knee surgery earlier this season, was expected to be ready to play this week but Nittany Lions Coach Joe Paterno said Tuesday Bill has not started to run.

"He's got an outside shot for next week but he will not be ready this week," Paterno said during his weekly news conference.

Everyone's a cook in her family

By JANE HALE
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Lori Hartsock's family abounds with good cooking and good cooks, including her sister, wife and husband. Even her 6-year-old daughter has visions of sugar plum pies dancing in her head. Nevertheless, our Cook of the Week holds her own in the culinary department.

Hartsock, of Sanford, was born and raised in Tampa, graduating from high school there.

Hartsock's mother lives in Brandon, just outside of Tampa. "When I was little, Mom just stayed home with us kids and kept house and cooked all of our favorite dishes," Hartsock said. Her father is an optician living in St. Petersburg.

Hartsock has two sisters. "Betty Ann is 19 years older than I am," she said. "Lindy is also older than I am, but we were a lot closer than Betty Ann and I were."

Hartsock gives credit to her mother for teaching her how to cook. "Mom is an excellent cook. She cooks everything from scratch and is a real Southern cook," she said.

"I remember all the homemade cakes and pies that Mom made when I lived at home. When the family goes home for a visit, I always ask Mom to fix fried chicken and homemade mashed potatoes with lots of country gravy like she used to fix. Everything is delicious and fixed just like I remembered it."

Her sister Betty Ann also taught her how to cook, Hartsock said. "She cooks just like Mom and is a great hostess when it comes to having a large party," she said. "When we were growing up we didn't know that vegetables came in a can because we never had any in the house. Every vegetable we had was fresh and we always had plenty of them."

For a while, Hartsock attended a Tampa junior college. After meeting her future husband, her higher education pursuits got put on the back burner. She does have hopes of one day going back and continuing her education, she said.

Hartsock met Steve at a Methodist Church in Tampa. "We knew each other a couple of years before we started dating," Hartsock said. Steve was born to Harold and Louise Hartsock in Bedford, Penn., and the family moved to Sanford when he was in the ninth grade.

"Steve is a wonderful cook and much better at doing it than I am," Hartsock said. "While at FSU he lived in a scholarship house with 15 other boys and they had to take turns in doing the cooking. Now when he cooks, he cooks in quantities and we eat for several days!"

The Hartsocks have two children. Michael, age 8, is in the second grade at Hamilton Elementary School, enjoys playing soccer and is an avid FSU Seminole fan. A member of the children's choir at the First United Methodist Church, Michael also belongs to Patch the Pirate Club at the church.

"Belonging to this club has really helped Michael learn about the Bible," Hartsock said. Daughter Katie, 6, is in the second grade at Hamilton Elementary. "She tries very hard to keep up with her big brother," also belonging to the Patch the Pirate Club at church, Hartsock said. Katie likes to help her mom in the kitchen and is always there to help her with the cooking. "Katie loves to eat, so she is always ready to help me when it's time to fix something to eat," Hartsock said.

Katie thinks Mom is a great cook. "I hope I can cook just like her when I grow up," Katie said. Hartsock is chairwoman of the Sarah Circle at First United Methodist Church, is a substitute teacher at Hamilton Elementary School, is on the PTA board, is a room mother for both of her children's classes, and is on the board of management for the Seminole County YMCA.

"My philosophy in life is, 'Enjoy life to the fullest and enjoy your children because they grow up so fast and will be gone before you know it.'"

Listed below are some of the favorite recipes of the Hartsock family.

ALMOND TURKEY BAKE

- 1 cup, 4 ounces shredded cheddar cheese
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 cup sliced, toasted almonds
- 3 cups cooked chopped turkey
- 1-1/2 cups celery slices
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 2 pastry pie crusts
- Toss cheese in flour. Combine 3/4 cup cheese, 1/2 cup almonds and remaining ingredients except pastry. Mix well. Roll pastry into a 15-inch square. Fill pastry into a 11 1/2-by-7 1/2-inch

Cook up a cornucopia in a jiffy

What a delight to share in the harvest of the fall fruits and vegetables. The produce department counters and the farmers' markets are brimming with squash, cabbages, eggplants, peppers, turnips, parsnips, sweet potatoes and, of course, pumpkins and apples.

The microwave is perfect for cooking fruits and vegetables. Usually just a little extra water is needed, permitting the maximum amount of flavor, nutritional value and natural color to remain. Microwave your favorites and try some with which you are less familiar. You have a real taste treat in store.

The stuffing for green peppers makes them as nutritious as they are delicious. They're colorful and easy, too.

SAUSAGE-STUFFED PEPPERS

- 3 or 4 medium-large green peppers
- 1/2 pound Italian sausage
- 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1 cup herb-seasoned stuffing mix
- 1 cup shredded carrot
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 cup catsup
- Cut peppers in half; remove core and seeds. Rinse. Place peppers cut-side up in a 12-by-8-inch glass baking dish. Cover with waxed paper. M/W on 100 percent power 3-4 minutes or until heated through. Let stand, covered.
- Combine sausage, beef, stuffing mix, carrot, egg, water and catsup; mix well. Spoon into pepper halves. Cover with waxed paper. M/W on 100 percent power for 11-12 minutes or until meat is done.

Cabbage, steamed in the microwave oven, is a beautiful green. Shredded, with a small amount of water added, and covered, it will take approximately 5-6 minutes per pound on 100 percent power. Try this recipe for a medley of vegetables in a sour cream sauce.

CABBAGE WITH SOUR CREAM

- 3 strips of bacon
- 1 small onion
- 4 cups shredded cabbage
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 medium tomato, chopped
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon mustard
- Arrange bacon in 1-quart casserole dish. Cover with paper towel. M/W on 100 percent power for 3-4 minutes, or until crisp. Remove bacon and set aside. Reserve 2 tablespoons drippings in casserole. Add sliced onion to drippings. M/W on 100 percent for 2-3 minutes or until just about tender. Stir in cabbage and green pepper. Cover. M/W on 100 percent power for 4-5 minutes or until just about tender, stirring once. Add remaining ingredients; mix lightly to combine. Cover. M/W on 100 percent power for 1-1/2 minutes, or until heated through. Crumble bacon and sprinkle on cabbage.

Parsnips, turnips, and rutabaga are root vegetables that are delicious as well as nutritious. A very basic way to prepare parsnips and turnips is as follows:

- 2 to 3 medium parsnips
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- Salt and pepper
- Snipped parsley
- Pare parsnips. Cut each into 2-inch lengths. Cut each piece into halves or quarters to make pieces of equal size. Combine parsnips with butter in 1-quart casserole dish. Cover. Microwave on 100 percent power for 4-5 minutes or until tender, stirring once or twice. Season with salt, sprinkle with parsley.

DILLED VEGETABLE COMBO

- 1 medium rutabaga, peeled
- 2 small turnips, peeled
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon dill weed
- Cut vegetables into matchstick pieces about 2 inches in length. Place in 1 1/2-quart casserole dish; add water. Cover. M/W on 100 percent power for 7-8 minutes or until tender-crisp, stirring once. Drain; sprinkle with salt. Cover. M/W butter in 1-cup glass measure for 45 seconds, or until melted. Stir in lemon juice and dill weed. Toss butter mixture with vegetables until coated.

Acorn squash makes a perfect container for stuffing.

APPLE-MALLOW SQUASH HALVES

- 2 medium acorn squash
- Salt
- 1-2 medium apples, peeled, cored and sliced
- 4 tablespoons raisins
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup miniature marshmallows

Microwave whole squash on 100 percent power for 8-10 minutes or until just about tender, turning squash over once. Let stand 5 minutes. Cut squash in half, scoop out seeds. Place cut-side up on glass plate. Sprinkle with salt.

Divide apple slices and raisins among squash halves. Top each half with 1/2 tablespoon each brown sugar and butter. Cover with waxed paper. M/W on 100 percent power for 6-7 minutes, or until apples are tender. Sprinkle with marshmallows. M/W on 100 percent for 1 1/2-2 minutes or until marshmallows are melted.

Education halts sexual diseases

DEAR READERS: According to the National Adolescent Student Health Survey, says USA Today, most teenagers know how AIDS is transmitted, but they don't know how to avoid getting a sexually transmitted disease. More than 11,000 eighth-, ninth- and 10th-graders were surveyed. The facts are frightening:

- More than half do not know that taking birth control pills won't protect them from a sexually transmitted disease.
- Nearly four out of every 10 students don't know an adult they could talk to if they thought they might have a sexually transmitted disease.
- Half are either unsure or believe—wrongly—that washing after sex reduces chances of AIDS infection.
- About sexual behavior:
 - 94 percent of girls and 76 percent of boys say it's acceptable to say no to sex.
 - 62 percent of boys and 43 percent of girls believe it is acceptable for people their age to have sex with someone they've dated for a long time.
 - 18 percent of boys and 4 percent of girls say it's acceptable for people their age to have sex with several people.

So, now that we know the problem, what's the solution? Education. In the home. In the schools. In the churches. Ignorance is the enemy. What our young people don't know can not only hurt them—it can kill them. Being "careful" is not

ADVICE
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

67-year-old woman as "elderly" must have been in his—or her—mid-20s.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you from the bottom of my heart for appearing before the Maryland State Legislature last March to plead for a bill to end the use of live animals for testing cosmetics and household products. Even though that bill didn't make it, it was close, and it got national attention because of your celebrity status.

In there a list of companies that use live animals to test their products? Also, is there a list of companies that do not test their products on live animals? If so, it would be wonderful if you could publish both lists.

These poor, tortured animals need to be spared.

JESSICA BERMAN, BETHESDA, MD.

DEAR JESSICA: Space in my column is much limited to publish either list, but both lists are available. Write to PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals), P.O. Box 42518, Washington, D.C. 20015.

Send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope. PETA is a non-profit organization, so please be a dear, and enclose a buck.

(Problems? Write to Dear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

baking dish. Trim to 1 inch beyond edge; flute edge. Fill with turkey mixture. Top with remaining cheese and almonds. Bake at 400°F for 30-35 minutes. Garnish with lemon twists and parsley if desired.

CHEESE BALL
2 large cream cheese
2 packages smoked beef
1 bunch of green onions
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
Dash of Worcestershire sauce
Let cheese soften, slice onions thin, chop beef small. Mix everything into a ball. Chill over night and serve with crackers.

IDaho FATS POTATO SALAD
8 medium potatoes
8 hard boiled eggs, peeled and chopped
8 slices of bacon, cooked and crumbled
6 green onions, chopped
6 1/2 ounce can medium shrimp, drained
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon mustard
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup mayonnaise (or to taste)
Cherry tomatoes
Boil potatoes with skins for one half hour. Refrigerate until cool. Skin and dice. Mix potatoes with eggs, bacon, onion, shrimp, mayonnaise and seasoning to taste. Mix well. Refrigerate several hours for flavors to blend. Garnish with cherry tomatoes.

GRANDMA LYNN'S POUND CAKE
1/2 pound butter
1 1/2 cups sugar
6 eggs
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 teaspoon lemon extract
Cream butter and sugar well, add eggs one at a time. Beat well, sift flour before measuring add slowly and beat well. Add lemon and vanilla and mix well. Bake at 300°F for approximately 1 hour. Bake in angel food cake pan.

BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

1 can cream of mushroom soup
3 hard boiled eggs
3 tablespoons butter
Ritz crackers
Melt butter in bottom of 2-quart casserole dish. Cover bottom of casserole dish with crushed Ritz crackers. Next layer broccoli, then peas in dish. Mix one half can mushroom soup with sweet-pea juice and pour over vegetables. Slice eggs and place on top of casserole. Cover with grated cheese and more crushed Ritz crackers. Bake at 350°F for 30 minutes.

LEMON SQUARES
2 cups flour
2 sticks butter
1/2 cup powdered sugar
Blend together as you would a pie crust. Put in 9-by-13-inch pan and pat with back of spoon. Put in 350°F oven for 15 minutes or until brown.
Lemon Squares Filling:
While crust is baking, beat 4-5 eggs together with 2 cups sugar, 1 teaspoon baking powder, and the juice and rinds of two lemons. Pour over baked crust and bake for 20 minutes or until filling is set. When cool, sprinkle powdered sugar over them.
