Child's Eyes Are Closely Related To His Stomach

By CHARLES MERCER NEW YORK UP -Small flats cienched lightly, eyes closed, he was yelling his head off. His mother stared at him with a mixture of irritation and amazement. He didn't want that, he cried He wanted that, and he pointed to a different kind of cereal or the shelves of the supermarket. Anyone who spends much time prowling around supermarkets knows all about it. A child's eyes always have been closely related to his stomach. But only since the advent of commercial television has a child insisted on having a role in the weekly marketing.

The cereal endorsed by his favorite cowboy and the candy advocated by his TV seroen pal have become very important to him and her, In the nation's markals these days you see the kids using various techniques in getting what they want.

Some use the direct approach of demand. Others raid the shalves boldly, tossing the products they've seen advertised on television into their mothers' shopping backstal A few try to smeak them in.

It sometimes seems that the only thing kide retain from watching television is the commercials. They chant them in the streetsand they remember the product when it's time to go to market "It's really disgusting," a mother said the other day, "The influence of TV advertising on children is truly a shame."

The woman couldn't say exactly why. Basically it seemed that she was morely suffering battle fatigue from semiwooldy engagements with her young at the cereal, coolds and candy shelives of the supermarket. These seem to be the fundamental spots where eyes most stomosche though I have enen one precoclous youngeter arguing with his mother over a brand of sauce. Personally I don't think that commercials -- purely as commercials -- eas possibly be "bad" for young children. It's my observation that you can only sell a shild on something he slready likes. We can look at beer commercials all day without raising a thirst for the stuff. If he decided to try a bottle, nobody would sell it to him anyway. A child knows when he's boing spoken to. When the character on the home screen is talking to his parents, he rapidly loses interest. But I fail to see what's wrong in an advertiser talking to children about cereal and candy and such things which interest them mighti-

Perhaps, for all any adult knows a child's awareness of commercials is a symptom of quick perception and a good memory. At least that's something to think about the next time the kids want to take over the weekly marketing.

BASEBALL DIAMOND IN

THE ROUGH
SAN DIEGO, Calif. Of The baseball diamond at the Pacific Coast Loague's Lane Field has been out of kilter for nobody knows how long, Bob McGiveron, new ground keeper, discovered.

He said the distance between home plate and pitcher's slab was 87 instead of the standard 90 feet; that the slab was off angle with the plate by several degrees; that none of the bases were exactly 90 feet apart and that home plate pointed to leftcenter field, instead of center. The field has been used by the San Diego padres since 1936. Me Giveron has straightened It out.

claim that the new paint keeps the family car "showroom shiny" for eighteen months without polishing.

Of course, it's just possible that this special-effect auto lacquer was developed without a thought for the ladies, but that would be a rare thing in automobile circles today. And it's not just because women now account for one-third of all the drivers in the nation.

Women have a subtle instinct for combining style and usefulness, and they've influenced car design even before they start driving-witness perhaps the first glove compartment, back seat hand straps and floor carpeting.

What we are wondering however is this -do you think that they'll slow down the speed of these new-fangled buggles to the point where we can stand on the sidewalk and witness the changing of the colors?

This year about 20 million people in this country will have hospital care. But between 40 and 50 million-at least one out of fourwill be x-rayed, and altogether will have 100 to 120 million x-ray pictures made which does not include dental examinations or an estimated 35 million chest pictures taken annually by mass survey.

Most will be x-rayed at their doctor's orders. Some, however, will voluntarily seek x-ray check-ups, through a clinic, hospital public health facilities, or by privately practicing physicians who specialize in radiology,

There is no such thing as permanent homestead exemption. The law provides that an application in the following prescribed form (and sets forth the form) be made each and every year by the taxpayer in order to be eligible for the exemption. Ask any public official or your lawyer to show you the law on this most important matter.
