SHDWA meeting

SANFORD — The Sanford Historical Downtown Waterfront Association, SHDWA, will meet at 5:30 this afternoon at the Colonial Room Restaurant, 115 E. First Street. Guest speaker is Carol Kirchhoff, who will give a marketing survey conducted for this area of Central Florida.

According to SHDWA President Rod Layer, "This survey has been presented before during certain special meetings in the area, but this is the first time people will have an opportunity to hear what has been discussed at those meetings."

Layer urged all SHDWA members and any interested persons to attend the meeting this afternoon.

Fire truck, a NEW one

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission approved purchase of a replacement fire engine during the regular meeting Monday night. The city had retained $179,377 in the fiscal year 1994-95 budget for such a purchase.

Fire Chief Tom Hickson had requested that the city piggy-back its bid for the truck by joining with Volusia County in a similar request. Hickson says the only problem is that the new pumper would be $180,000, a net shortage of $10,600.

Hickson asked the city to approve the additional money as an emergency issue, as effective in mid-November, the price for the same unit would increase by three percent.

The commission approved the purchase by a unanimous vote.

In doing so, it was made clear that this is a new unit, and not connected with the purchase of the antique 1921 LaFrance fire truck, which has been financed through private donations.

Business leaders increase grants to area schools

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County school officials want to see more of the good news out of the classrooms get to the public.

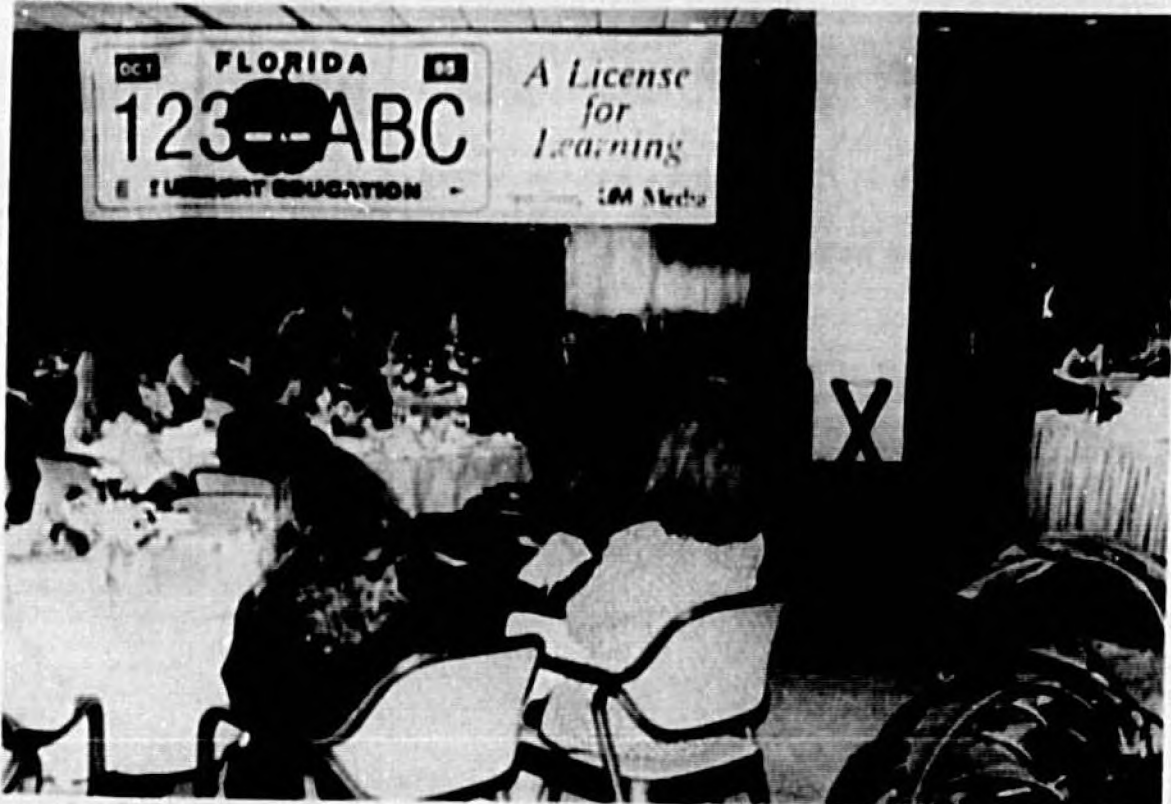

The connection between schools and the business community, they believe, is the best news to come along in years. At a breakfast this morning, sponsored by the Foundation for Seminole County Public Schools (formerly FACTS) district representatives and business leaders highlighted that partnership as the answer to many of the district's educational woes.

Supt. Paul Hagerly readily admits money is tight in the district. There are, he said, two philosophies on how to deal with the problem.

One approach, he said, is to draw attention to the problem by showing how bad things are.

"You know, cut out athletics, eliminate third grade, things that really get attention," he said. "Then you have a whole lot of people saying that it's 'about time we cut out all those frills.' But it's the kids who are hurt, the kids who are served by those programs."

SANFORD — Heathrow tax protester Grant McEwan was released from custody on $100,000 bond yesterday by U.S. Magistrate Judge Donald P. Dietrich.

McEwan, 57, was jailed last Thursday on federal charges of making false claims for compensation from the federal government and interfering with administration of the Internal Revenue Service. Due to the holiday, McEwan was held during the weekend until he made his first appearance in court Monday. Dietrich released McEwan Monday night after a four-hour hearing.

Puttin' on the Ritz

Teachers' union asks for safe schools

TALLAHASSEE — Teachers' union leaders who said their backing helped reelect Gov. Lawton Chiles have called on him to make safe schools and teachers' salaries the top state-spending goals.

"While more than a dozen other states fell victim to a clean Republican sweep, the education community united behind our governor who promised to make education a top priority," Pat Tornillo, president of Florida Education Association United, said Monday.

Tornillo was joined by Aaron Wallace, president of Florida Teaching Profession National Education Association, at a news conference where the groups called on Chiles to "remember November."

Tornillo attributed Chiles' victory to his opposition to vouchers that would let parents obtain taxpayers' dollars for private school tuitions, a concept Republican Jeb Bush had favored.

The teachers' unions also had endorsed Democratic Education Commissioner Doug Jamerson, who was defeated by Republican Frank Brogan.

Securities exec sentenced

MIAMI — An executive for a security firm that claimed Fortune 500 companies as clients has been sentenced to 37 months in prison and ordered to pay more than $21 million to investors he fooled with inflated revenue reports.

John Kuczek, a Youngstown, Ohio, financial advisor and securities dealer, was the last of eight defendants in the case of the now defunct Sahlen & Associates Inc.

Five defendants, including Harold Sahlen Jr., pleaded guilty and three others were convicted of various counts of conspiracy and securities, mail and wire fraud. Sahlen pleaded guilty to 29 counts of an indictment and was serving one year in federal prison.

Sahlen grew into the world's fifth largest security company by creating the illusion of success with a long trail of fake billings used to attract investors and loans, federal prosecutors charged.

The company collapsed in 1989 after inventing $45 million in phony revenues.

Defense attorneys charged their clients were manipulated and deceived by Sahlen, but prosecutors charged the defendants were committed to the fraud.

Kuczek, 51, was convicted Feb. 28 on a single count of conspiracy to commit securities mail and bank fraud. He was acquitted of a charge of filing a fictitious document with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Cubans with visas to enter U.S.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — About 1,500 Cubans who have Dominican visas bought by relatives in Miami will be allowed to travel here, Chancellor Carlos Morales Troncoso has announced.

Morales Troncoso said Monday the Cubans would be allowed to enter in small groups. A group of 75 already had been authorized he said.

The government of President Joaquin Balaguer banned the massive entrance of Cuban immigrants after officials found a smuggling ring was buying visas in the Dominican Republic and selling them in Miami for $3,000.

Dominican visas are issued by the Ministry for about $20, a fee that includes stamps and forms.

Most of the Cubans, who came here last year with visas acquired in Miami, traveled in boats to Miami or to neighboring Puerto Rico to seek U.S. asylum.

President Clinton reversed the U.S. policy of giving asylum to Cuban refugees coming to the United States after Cuban President Fidel Castro dropped shore patrols in early August, producing the biggest exodus of Cubans since the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

Florida man charged in Ohio killing

WILLOUGHBY, Ohio — A man accused of killing a school custodian and wounding three other adults at a middle school has been ordered held without bond.

Keith Ledeger, whose last known address was in Venice, Fla., made his first appearance in court Monday after spending about a week under police guard in Richmond Heights General Hospital.

Ledeger, 37, was being held in the Lake County Jail in Painesville charged with the aggravated murder of Wickliffe Middle School custodian Pete Christopher.

He also is charged with three counts of attempted aggravated murder in the wounding of a Wickliffe police officer, a school teacher and a school administrator.

Police said Ledeger entered the school while it was in session Nov. 7. Witnesses told police he began firing a shotgun in the school office and then fired more shots in school hallways as police confronted him.

Wickliffe Police Chief James Fox said Friday no motive had been determined.

Opening arguments set to begin

Teen accused in shooting watches in silence

By ADAM YEOMANS
Associated Press Writer

MONTICELLO — While his mother donned a brown paper bag to avoid being seen on courtroom cameras, the teenager charged in last fall's killing of a British tourist watched the proceedings in silence.

What John "Billy Joe" Crumitie learned Monday was he wouldn't be put to death if convicted of first-degree murder in Gary Colley's fatal shooting. Crumitie is one of four teenagers charged in the Sept. 14, 1993 killing, which prompted international headlines and tarnished Florida's image as a tourist haven.

Just as jury selection began Monday, prosecutors agreed to waive the death penalty for Crumitie in exchange, defense attorneys agreed to drop their legal challenge to the selection of grand jurors who indicted the four teenagers.

A 12-member jury was scheduled to be sworn in and opening arguments were to begin today.

Crumitie would face a life sentence with a mandatory 25 years without parole if convicted of the murder charge. The 17-year-old is one of two suspected shooters in the botched robbery at an Interstate 10 rest stop outside Monticello that left Colley dead and companion Margaret Jagger wounded.

Jagger, who traveled from her home in West Yorkshire, England for the trial, is expected to testify. Outside the courthouse Monday, she would not comment on the state's decision not to seek the electric chair, but has said she opposes capital punishment.

Colley's murder hurt Florida's $31 billion tourism business. It also prompted lawmakers to post 24-hour guards at interstate highway rest stops and beef up the state's juvenile justice system. Colley was the ninth foreign visitor killed in Florida within a year.

Crumitie's trial has been delayed several times since he rejected an agreement in August that would have sent him to prison for 40 years for pleading guilty to second-degree murder and attempted first-degree murder. He has pleaded not guilty.

All four suspects were charged with first-degree murder and first-degree attempted murder.

Two of the teens, Deron Spear, 18, and Cedrick Green, 14, already have pleaded to lesser charges and are awaiting sentencing. Spear is expected to testify against Crumitie.

A fourth suspect, 15-year-old Aundra Akins, is supposed to stand trial after Crumitie. The trial date for Akins, the other suspected shooter, has not been set.

Before jury selection began, Crumitie's lawyers challenged the legality of the pool of 225 prospective jurors called for Crumitie's trial.

Attorney Dwight Wells asked Circuit Judge F.E. Steinhilber to reject the entire jury pool because the Jefferson County Clerk's Office failed to issue summons for residents over age 70. State law allows anyone over 70 to automatically opt out of jury duty.

By failing to issue summons to older prospective jurors, Crumitie was denied an opportunity to have a jury chosen from a cross section of the community, Wells said.

The same procedure was used in selecting the grand jury that indicted Crumitie and the other teens last year, said Mina Morgan, another lawyer representing Crumitie.

"That taints the entire grand jury panel," Morgan said.

Death row inmate fights execution in three courts

By BILL BERGSTROM
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A federal appeals court has refused to delay Wednesday's scheduled execution of a death row inmate convicted of fatally beating a South Florida florist 16 years ago.

Paul William Scott, 38, convicted in the 1978 slaying of James Alessi of Boca Raton, was pursuing appeals in two other courts today. His plea for a stay of execution was refused Monday by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta.

The court rejected his argument that his case was similar to an earlier one in which the court granted a new trial because of a constitutional error in the judge's instructions to the jury.

Scott was also asking the state Supreme Court for a stay so he could raise new claims of improper jury instructions.

And he asked U.S. District Judge Kevin Michael Moore in Miami to delay the execution because he had litigation pending in an effort to overturn a prior conviction in California.

According to court records, Alessi's nude, blood-covered body was found at his home Dec. 4, 1978. His hands and feet were tied with electrical cord.

Commissioner plans bureaucracy cuts

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — While teacher unions pressed Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles for more school spending, new Republican Education Commissioner Frank Brogan said he wants to cut the education bureaucracy in half.

"We have a new philosophy coming into Tallahassee," said Brogan, who takes office in January.

Unions that unsuccessfully backed Brogan's Democratic opponent, Doug Jamerson, appealed to Chiles on Monday to keep pushing for more spending on school safety, juvenile crime prevention and teacher salaries.

Brogan said his goals include less government interference, and asking lawmakers to set up a pilot program in a local school district to test a private-voucher plan that would give parents taxpayer dollars for private school tuition.

Chiles opposed vouchers in his successful gubernatorial campaign against Republican Jeb Bush who supported the concept.

Brogan said he wants to expand Florida's Blueprint 2000 program to give greater power to local communities to run schools.

Because he won without the teacher unions' support, Brogan told the St. Petersburg Times, "I can walk into Tallahassee completely unthroned when it comes to any of the power brokers that have to do with public education."

But he said he was still open to meeting with the unions.

Brogan said he didn't plan to let the unions call the shots.

Mayor brings back police 'pat-downs'

By BRIGITTE GREENBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Four years ago, city officials hoped that a new community policing policy would build trust between officers and the neighborhoods they patrol.

Police say the program is working, but Mayor John DeStefano has decided that a little more suspicion could reduce the homicide rate. He has ordered police to physically search suspicious people on the streets for guns and drugs.

The new "pat-down" policy — for which officers don't need a warrant — follows seven killings in the last three weeks. There have been 28 murders in the city so far this year; last year there were 21.

"The common thread is use of guns by younger people. We decided to try something to stem the number of guns on the streets," said DeStefano, who announced the new policy Oct. 25.

The mayor's office attributes 30 drug-related arrests and the seizure of two guns, including an Uz-style machine pistol, to the reinforced searches.

But some residents say the searches are discriminatory because they target young black men and teenagers who live in certain neighborhoods.

"How do you determine who is doing something wrong and who isn't?" asked David Richson, 37, who was standing outside a liquor store in the high-crime Hill section of the city.

"I may have a buck knife in my pocket, and what's going to happen if they search me? I'm going downtown and for no reason. They're doing it on appearance," said Richson, who is black.

Others in this city of nearly 128,000 are grasping for any solution to the frightening violence that plagues their lives.

"No idea is a bad idea. We need all the help we can get," said Christina Dempsey. She favors pat-downs because guns are common in her neighborhood and she is afraid to let her 8-year-old granddaughter out of the house.

"Innocent people have nothing to fear," said Dempsey, who is black. "The police know who they want and why they want them. I live on a drug street, and I'm afraid."

Since Police Chief Nicholas Pastore took office in 1990, the department has used community policing in an effort to build trust and halt crime through a combination of social service referrals and low-key, non-confrontational tactics. Pastore said police are not targeting specific neighborhoods or minorities with the new policy, and that his officers know he wouldn't stand for abuses of power.

The philosophy of community policing will prevent that kind of thing from happening because we're going to bend over backwards to see that it doesn't happen," he said.

DeStefano said to significantly reduce crime, the pat-down policy must be supplemented by more education, job and drug programs and other forms of intervention.

"What this is about," he said, "is trying to maintain order and safety in neighborhoods and at the same time try to deal with longer term solutions."

WASHINGTON — Led by car and truck buying, retail sales surged 1.1 percent in October for the fifth straight advance.

The Commerce Department today also revised upward, from 1.1 percent to 1.4 percent, the increase in total sales for August. Sales in September were up a moderate 0.5 percent, revised down from an earlier 0.6 percent estimate.

The October gain was far greater than analysts' expectations and could contribute to fears the economy is expanding too rapidly as Federal Reserve policy-makers meet to consider increasing interest rates again.

The Fed's policy-setting panel, the Federal Open Market Committee, was to meet today behind closed doors to review the state of the economy. The Commerce Department said sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $191.2 billion in October, up from $189 billion.

Retail sales have risen every month since May, when they were unchanged. They are 7.5 percent higher than a year ago.

Sales of cars and light trucks led the way, increasing 2.9 percent in October after rising 0.6 percent in September and 3 percent in August.

While consumer spending has slowed somewhat this year, as interest rates have climbed, it continues to show surprising strength. Retail sales represent about half of consumer expenditures.

Sales of durable goods — including appliances, auto and other goods expected to last more than three years — rose 2.3 percent in October following a 0.6 percent advance.

Excluding autos, all sales were up 0.6 percent last month compared to 0.5 percent in September.

All major durable goods sectors posted gains. Sales of building materials, hardware and garden supplies were up 1.7 percent on top of a 0.7 percent advance in September.

Picking on the elderly

It seems to be the thing to do. Try to bilk the elderly out of their money. It's being done all across the nation, and right in our own cities.

Why try scams against the elderly? The criminal minded probably believe the elderly have more money stashed away. They can be more easily duped, and they aren't smart enough to know when they have been taken.

Recent situations locally involve the defrauding of people by a group pretending to represent Publishers' Clearing House Sweepstakes. Another scam involved people making phone calls for contributions, saying they represented the Chiefs of Police National Drug Task Force.

Still another involves people falsely claiming to be associated with AT&T, focusing their calls on the elderly, and again, trying to clean them out of as many dollars as possible.

Nationally, there are probably hundreds of scams being conducted against senior citizens. Those mentioned here however, are hitting us right here at home, in Sanford, Lake Mary, and Seminole County.

We hope senior citizens will become more aware of just how many ways someone can try to take their money.

We also hope seniors, knowing that too many people consider them as nothing more than victims to be fleeced, will exercise the utmost caution when told they have won something or their money will be going to a good cause. Hopefully, younger members of the family will also be cautious about what is happening to grandma and grandpa.

There are several points to remember to help avoid these problems. Don't believe any get-rich-quick schemes told over the phone, or in person by a door-to-door traveler. If it is easy to get rich quickly, they would be doing it, and not trying to tell our seniors how to do it.

Don't give anyone one red cent until you have checked and double checked. Avoid acting hastily. Perhaps a call to law enforcement or chambers of commerce may be needed.

For the younger generation, watch what is going on. Don't let the older folks lose everything they have worked their entire lives to obtain.

BEN WATTENBERG

Why the loss? It's values, stupid

The Republicans won big the Senate, the House, the governorships. But why? Losers always have excuses, excuses, excuses. This time the Democrats are in full throat. And so we hear: "It's what happens in an off-year election." "The turnout was wrong." "It was negative advertising." "There was hate in the air." "It was Clinton's unpopularity." "It was bad communications." "It was the Religious Right." "The voters want change." "It was a dirty campaign." "It was anti-incumbent." "It was anti-government." These are the same people who in 1984 said Reagan beat Mondale because Mondale didn't look good on television.

Rarely will losers say the obvious. Which is: "We lost because people don't agree with our ideas." They will almost never say: "If we don't change our ideas our situation will get still worse." When things get still worse it's called "political re-alignment," which is uptown language for a new era.

But ideas do matter in elections, as in life. The pattern of thinking reflected in Tuesday's landslide was fairly clear, generally wise, and in recent years identified with Republicans. The driving force was "values," a rubric about which the public believes, with some merit, the Democrats are squishy.

Consider some recent public opinion polls:

A Wall Street Journal poll asked: "Please tell me which of these statements comes closest to your point of view: STATEMENT A: The social and economic problems that face America are mainly the result of a decline in moral values. STATEMENT B: The social and economic problems that face America are mainly the result of financial pressures and strains on the family." The results: Moral values, 54 percent. Financial Pressures, 34 percent.

A Newsweek poll asked: "How much do you blame each of these people and groups for the problems that make you dissatisfied? Do you blame (BLANK) a lot, somewhat, only a little, or not at all?" The results (Answering "a lot") "Republicans in Congress" 25 percent; "Large corporations" 28 percent; "President Clinton" 32 percent; "Democrats in Congress" 36 percent; "The news media" 43 percent. "The moral decline of people in general" 57 percent.

A Washington Post-ABC poll showed 68 percent of the public regarded "social issues" as "the most important problem," while only 13 percent said it was "economic issues." Other more specific surveys showed that crime or the deterioration of family values was the No. 1 issue.

A front-page story in The Washington Post headlined "Disillusioned Public Puts Social Issues at Top of Campaign." Or, to put it more tersely, "It's not the economy, stupid."

Much has been made of the idea that the vote was "anti-government." I don't believe it. Voters are not idiots. They voted a anti-what-government-does" on the issues they care most about. Thus, they oppose new taxes mainly because those taxes will buy more of what they don't like. And while American liberalism has made some great contributions, in recent years it has fostered the social erosion that voters fear.

DONNA BRITT

Who knows what the message is?

Terrance, who just turned 2, wears his father's features as casually as his headful of braids and tiny black hiking boots. Sitting on his mother's lap, he squirms, fusses.

Maria Washington, lost in memories of Oct. 9, is oblivious.

"Kevin," Maria, 35, is saying, "hated to do laundry." But that's what she and her husband were doing that Sunday-Kevin, 28 carting clothes to the local Laundromat, Maria putting in the detergent, watching loads spin.

She recalls that her husband of one year kept slipping out to "chitchat with vendors" about the Dallas Cowboys game that evening. But he kept checking in-to sport clothes, to bring her a tam-and-bunche. When he didn't return after a hanging-a bunche home, Maria hardly noticed. Until the shots.

She saw a crowd down the street when she reached the doorway. Craning her neck, she saw no sign of Kevin, and said, "Thank God." Then she looked down.

"I started at his feet," she says of the man lying there. When I got to his shorts, I knew."

Her words would be jarring anywhere. They seem especially so in this immaculate living room, coming from this composed woman seated beneath a pastel of 19th century women frolicking in a garden.

But today, increasing numbers of women find themselves reliving the sudden deaths of healthy young men. Men like Washington, described as an affable man devoted to his five children—three from Maria's first marriage. He's one of thousands who've left dazed women behind, men whom we read about, shake our heads over, and forget.

Maria can't forget. Crying, screaming, she made it to Kevin in time to tell him she loved him and to see him nod. "Yes." A hole had sprouted in his neck, flowing red. Covering it with her hand, she could feel his pulse.

When an ambulance took her husband to Washington Hospital Center, she asked police, who'd told her to sit in a police car, to take her there. Instead, she was driven to police headquarters, where she answered dozens of questions about a shooting she hadn't seen. When she heard her sister suddenly sob, she realized that Kevin had died "and that I couldn't be there."

She says she'll never forgive the police—but it's a small indignity compared with the rest:

The weeknights that Kevin doesn't come home from his job at a printing company, grab his CDs and listen to music alone before the children overwhelm him.

The mornings that she can't hear her husband for setting the alarm too early and rising too late.

That she can't hear him coaxing her for a kiss or saying, "—I love you, baby," and waiting for her to say it back.

Even worse is the wondering. She insists that Dallas Cowboys fan who was her supportive friend as her first marriage fell apart, who became her lover, the father of her two youngest children and her husband was the type to die on a sunlit sidewalk from bullet wounds.

"Kevin was a good person. ...When he asked me to marry him, I knew I was ready. But I had to point out this was a lifetime thing—me and the five children. He said, 'Maria, this is what I really want to do.' I saw a lot of love. ... It made me feel so good."

The telephone interrupts.

Answering it, Maria suddenly says, "Thank God."

A police detective, she later explains, had just told her that a 34-year-old man was a charged Wednesday night with Kevin's slaying.

According to a U.S. attorney's affidavit, an eyewitness said the suspect had told him that Washington had ripped him off. "A second suspect is being sought."

But Maria says she doesn't know the suspect and believes her husband didn't either.

"Was it mistaken identity? ... Maybe Kevin said something to him?" she asks. "He was the type of person who said what was on his mind. ... I'd tell him, 'You can't do that nowadays.'"

So Maria—like too many other left-behind women—will wait and wonder, much as she did four years ago when her brother, Robble, died at 22 in a still-unsolved shooting.

Meanwhile, she says, she will work on her goal of getting licensed to care for children in her home.

She will guide her children through this impossible period. She'll ask a thousand questions.

"But I don't want to question God," who, she says, "gave Kevin to me for six years. ... But I still feel like—to take Kevin, and leave me with the five children? I don't know what the message is."

Maria stares out the window, her face washed in light.

"We saw this old couple, holding hands, walking down the street," she says. "I said, 'Kevin, that's going to be us one day.'"

"And it's not."

Her words would be jarring anywhere.

Nuclear top gun still dangerous

UNITED NATIONS — Saddam Hussein's ill-conceived show of force near the Kuwaiti border couldn't have come at a better time, top United Nations officials here acknowledged to us.

Until recently, these officials — including some from the U.N. Special Commission for the Disarmament of Iraq (UNSCOM) — were combating a rising tide of sentiment among some U.N. member nations to lift the international sanctions against Iraq.

Hussein's arrogance and diplomatic stupidity appear to have silenced the countries that were eager to resume trade and diplomatic relations with Iraq. Most diplomats here are now convinced that sanctions will never be lifted as long as Hussein remains in power.

One of the strongest arguments against lifting sanctions — but one not often heard — is the claim that Dr. Jaffar Dhia Jaffar continues to have in Baghdad. As long as Jaffar remains in Iraq, officials say, Iraq will have the will and the brains to build a nuclear whiz-kid.

Jaffar is the nuclear whiz-kid of Iraq, the Robert Oppenheimer of Hussein's Manhattan Project. Intelligence experts now believe that Jaffar was the mastermind behind a bombing-buffard effort that spent up to $12 billion and employed some 20,000 people at its peak. Prior to the Gulf War, and the sanctions that followed, the plan's goal was to produce up to 20 nuclear weapons per year.

Although international experts had long suspected that Hussein wasn't harboring nuclear ambitions, it wasn't until after the Gulf War that inspectors learned just how close the Iraqi leader had come to achieving his dream. Most of the program was so secret that, despite President Bush's claim that Hussein's nuclear program had been destroyed, Desert Storm bombers hadn't even touched some of the biggest installations because the allied coalition didn't even know they existed.

UNSCOM officials believe they've now destroyed more than 95 percent of Hussein's nuclear weapons complex. But they readily concede that they can't be absolutely certain.

Until recent years, UNSCOM officials didn't even know about Dr. Jaffar. He first emerged, in dramatic fashion, during a July 1991 meeting between U.N. inspectors and Iraqi nuclear engineers in a Baghdad hotel room. One participant from the Los Alamos National Laboratory recently recalled the meeting for our associate Dale Van Atta:

"They were finally starting to tell us about their secret uranium-enrichment efforts. But they had a couple of junior engineers up there talking. And we kept asking them questions they couldn't answer. Pretty soon, this immaculately dressed guy stood up and said, 'Well, I will answer your questions.'"

The official continued: "He was very articulate and spoke English very well. ... Very knowledgeable. He knew exactly what they had done, what had happened. He was technically very qualified. I noticed that all the other Iraqis showed a lot of respect for him. It wasn't fear; it was clearly admiration."

The man wouldn't give his name or title during that meeting, but inspectors soon found out it was Jaffar, a genius physicist who received a Ph.D. from the University of Birmingham in England. But he and other Iraqi officials initially downplayed his importance.

U.N. inspectors continued to hunt for the missing mastermind of Iraq's nuclear program, sometimes with Jaffar at their side assisting where he could.

Most diplomats here are now convinced that sanctions will never be lifted as long as Hussein remains in power.

McEwan's business partner pledged personal assets for the release, a spokesman in Dietrich's office said.

No hearings were scheduled, although a grand jury indictment or preliminary examination of the evidence by Dietrich will occur within 20 days.

Last month, McEwan filed a $1.1 million lien against the IRS, seeking payment for tax record keeping for his bonded check collection business, Loss Recovery Services Inc. Of the amount, $728,646 is 50 percent — Loss Recovery's collection fee — of employee taxes and $378,000 for bookkeeping expenses.

When the IRS did not respond to McEwan's initial Sept. 27 demand for payment, he filed the lien in the Seminole County Courthouse. McEwan said if the IRS did not pay him in 21 days, he would seize and auction the contents of the Longwood IRS office.

According to an affidavit filed in U.S. Middle District Court in Orlando by Timothy P. Camus, an IRS internal security inspector, McEwan renounced his citizenship in a document filed saved about $2 million by simply adding one student per classroom. While he admits that adds to the stress felt by the individual teachers, it is to the benefit of the students.

Each year, small things like budget cuts or even maintaining the status quo, are eroding the foundation of support for the schools.

The Foundation for Seminole County Public Schools, through the monetary support of area businesses, is able to support a variety of incentive and enrichment programs for teachers.

The mini-grant program provides money for teachers who have unique teaching programs in mind that might not fall into the standard curriculum, but which will help students gain new skills.

Tom Butler, an eighth grade science teacher at Rock Lake Middle School in Longwood, recently earned a mini grant from the Foundation to start a ham radio project to get students at his school licensed in amateur radio communications.

"The mini grant program helps enthusiastic teachers reach their dreams, the dream of helping students achieve their potential," he said. "And an enthusiastic teacher is a very valuable asset."

The Teacher of the Year program is another incentive for teachers to bring their utmost to work.

Greg Register, the 1995 Seminole County teacher of the year, said that the support of the business community enables teachers to keep sight of the needs of the most important people in the school district: the kids.

"The good teachers have a lot of good ideas about bringing knowledge to their students," Register said. "A lot of those ideas and dreams can not be reached without your support."

The school district and businesses have pledged to continue joining forces for the benefit of the students who are, they said, the most important asset of the community.

The Foundation has budgeted $75,000 to support programs in the schools over the next year, an increase of about 30 percent over last year.

"We need to keep getting money back into the schools where it can help the kids," Bill O'Toole, chairman of the Foundation said.

GOP House family friendly

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Fed up with missed anniversary dinners and kids' birthday parties, the new Republican leadership says it is going to try to make the House's work schedule friendlier to families.

Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who is in line to become House speaker, said Monday that the legislative workday has been "very destructive" to family life among members and that making the schedule more rational will be one of his first goals.

He said Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., will head a bipartisan Family Quality of Life committee, comprised of spouses and children and well as members, that will make recommendations on improving the House schedule.

Wolf, a longtime campaigner for changes that will allow lawmakers to spend more time with their families, said he will poll all members and staff on such matters as how to better coordinate House recesses with school vacations.

Making the House more efficient, he said, will "be both good for the country and good for families."

Gingrich, speaking at a news conference, said Republicans can't talk about improving the quality of public life in America without doing something about the current House schedule that "brutalizes and damages families by its intensity and its pace."

Members have long debated how to improve a schedule that normally has them spending Tuesday through Thursday in Washington, with committee hearings beginning early in the morning and floor sessions often running until late in the evening. Lawmakers typically spend the rest of the week meeting constituents in their home districts.

Cake

When time came for discussion of the books, she had the students dress up like the subjects of their books.

"It was great," she said. "They loved it."

But most recently, Sawyer decided to let them eat cake.

Not a study of the French Revolution, but a study in world literature enhanced by the promise of some tasty, homemade sweets at the end for the students in her sophomore Honors English class.

After reading books from the class reading list, including titles like Lord of the Flies, Crime and Punishment and Rabbit Run, the students went home and created cakes to represent some aspect of the book.

"It's not exactly something you'd find in Cliff Notes, but that's what Sawyer wanted."

"I really want them to read the books," she said. "I want them to read the book and look forward to doing it. I want reading to be fun for them."

The reading was Sawyer's idea, but the cakes were the brain child of Steve Pipitone, a student in the class.

"Let them brainstorm to come up with what they wanted to do to illustrate their discussions of the books," she said. "Steve came up with this idea."

Some students, who for whatever reason felt uncomfortable making an edible visual aid, chose to create a three-dimensional diorama.

"Cake is not everyone's favorite medium," Sawyer said.

The students' presentations were not limited, of course, to sweet nothing.

"They had to be able to tell the class about what the cake represented and how that related to the book," Sawyer explained.

Reading, she emphasized, can be a lot of fun for students, if they have the right motivation.

"After a while, though," she noted, "getting them to read is a piece of cake."

revision includes revenue projections that reflect for the redevelopment area an overall decrease in the ad valorem tax revenue in 1994 from 1993.

According to Sanford's Director of Planning and Development, Jay Marder, who serves on the Waterfront committee, the changed figures are due to the timing of the group's initial research which occurred in May, at which time the county property appraiser had tentatively issued fluctuating and preliminary values which are no longer appropriate.

For example, the figures used to this point in the CRA development have not necessarily reflected recent developments, especially the Towne Center Apartments.

Other items on the agenda include a continuation of the midge study, waterfront sign project, and the marketing/recruitment efforts.

The meetings are held beginning at 4 p.m. in the City Manager's Conference Room, on the second floor of the Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

Civics education proposed to begin in kindergarten

By CAROLE FELDMAN
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — Schools should begin as early as kindergarten teaching children about their future responsibility to vote and about other ways they can influence government, according to proposed national standards on civics and government education.

"The strength and vitality of American democracy depend on ensuring that our young people develop the knowledge, skills and dispositions necessary to become informed and responsible participants in our system of self-government," said Charles N. Quigley, executive director of the Center for Civic Education, which developed the standards being released today.

With turnout in last week's elections a paltry 38.7 percent, educating children about civics, citizenship and their duty to vote can only help, says Curtis Gans of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

Along with being taught about government and politics, children should become involved in school government and in community political projects in which they can make a difference, Gans said.

"But until we change the conduct of our campaigns and the increasing cynicism in the media, the degree to which it can help will be limited," he added.

The civics standards were developed with funding from the Education Department and the Pew Charitable Trusts and is part of a broader effort to fulfill the national education goal setting voluntary standards for what children should know in academic subjects by the time they leave fourth, eighth and 12th grades.

Conservatives have attacked the standards, saying they are set too low to encourage children to learn to their highest potential.

The civics standards address five central issues: civic life, politics and government, the foundations of the American political system, how the government reflects the values of American democracy, the relationship between the United States and other nations and the role of citizens.

"If citizens want their views to be considered, they must become active participants in the political process," the standards for grades kindergarten to four say. "Although elections, campaigns and voting are at the center of democratic institutions, citizens should be aware of the many other participatory opportunities available to them."

The standards say these young students should be able to identify ways people can monitor and influence government, including but not limited to voting.

For grades five to eight, the standards state, "If citizens do not understand the political process and how to deal with it effectively, they may feel overwhelmed and alienated."

Gans said polls indicate that young people who don't vote tend to have no confidence they can make a difference.

"Part of it is because they haven't been trained to be involved," he said. "Partly it's because they've grown up in an era of political cynicism, partly it's because of the politics they see."

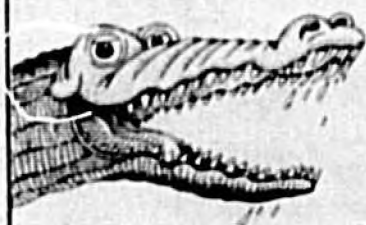

The standards say children in grades five to eight should be able to explain what is meant by the public agenda and describe how it is set, including the role of special interest groups, the media, the courts and individual citizens.

In grades nine to 12, the standards say students should know the meaning of citizenship, the rights it confers and the responsibilities it carries.

These older students, it says, should be able to evaluate, take and defend positions on civic responsibilities, including the importance of obeying the law, paying taxes, voting, serving as a juror in the armed forces and performing public service.

The Center for Civic Education, based in Los Angeles, is a nonprofit group focused on improving civics education. More than 3,000 people were consulted in developing the standards.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Ruffin rules SHS finale

By DEAN SMITH
HERALD SPORTS WRITER
SANFORD — It was a great way to end a high school career. Seminole High School senior star running back Robert Ruffin capped a four-year varsity career in high style Friday night, rushing for 136 yards and a touchdown on offense and coming up with a game-clinching 99-yard interception return as the Tribe concluded its season with a 16-0 shutout of the Lake Mary Rams.

Robert Ruffin

Seminole High School's Robert Ruffin is the Sanford Herald Player of the Week. Also considered were: Lake Brantley's Heath Ritenour, who rushed for 257 yards and one touchdown. Lake Brantley's Dee Brown, who rushed for 66 yards and three touchdowns. Lake Howell's Brad Butterfield, who passed for 80 yards and a touchdown. Lake Mary's Reolon Jumpy, who ran for 85 yards. Lyman's Tom Dixon, who ran for one score and passed for 195 yards and a TD. Lyman's Alvin Cummings, who rushed for 124 yards. Ovidio's Mike Glummo, who ran for two TD's, and caught a 14-yard pass. Seminole's Cliff Branch, who rushed for 126 yards.

'Amazing Blake' continues to wow Cincinnati

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer
CINCINNATI — The only one not overwhelmed by Jeff Blake's implausible story might be the Sanford resident himself. While everyone else gushes over Blake's three-week rise from third-stringer to star, the Cincinnati Bengals' quarterback criticizes himself for not doing better. His four-touchdown performance Sunday in a 34-31 victory over the Houston Oilers had joyous players rolling on the field and giddy fans honking their horns as they drove away from Riverfront Stadium. Only Blake and David Klingler were subdued, Klingler because it cemented him as backup, Blake because he didn't play perfectly. "This was one of the worst games I've had mentally," Blake said. "Mentally I made a lot of mistakes, but people don't see that. I made four or five mental mistakes and that's something you can't do."

Picky, picky. He can go right on making those mistakes and no one will care as long as he keeps making it all right in the end with plays that leave everyone dazzled. "He's the magic man," running back Derrick Fenner said. "I told him he's got the magic working." Does he ever. In his first three NFL starts, the 186th pick in the 1992 draft has just gotten better and better. He nearly upset Dallas in his starting debut, threw for 387 yards a week later to beat Seattle, and threw three of his four touchdowns on a bum ankle. What can he possibly do for an encore? He's already thrown for 350 yards twice. He's led the woeful Bengals to two wins. He's got a four-touchdown game and a come-from-behind win that was great theater — hopping off the X-ray table to lead his team to a win. "I'm not stopping now," Blake said. "I've gotten this far." It's a sign of the times that nobody doubts him. "If people don't want to believe in him, they've got a problem," lineman Bruce Kozerski said. After Sunday's show, it's hard to find any doubters. Blake brought Hollywood to the Ohio River. He severely bruised his ankle in the first half and limped between plays. The pain was so bad that he had to change his throwing style. "In the second half, I had to throw off my back foot," he said. He had to be helped off the field after throwing a 50-yard touchdown pass to Carl Pickens in the fourth quarter. They carted Blake off to the X-ray room as fans gave a standing ovation. No fracture was found, so Blake rode back to the rescue — and another standing ovation. Naturally, he led the Bengals on two drives that won the game. Could it have ended any other way? "In other weeks, we would have found eight different ways to lose," said Doug Pelfrey, who kicked a game-winning 40-yard field goal as time expired. "This week we found a way to win." Blake's luck is still holding out. The ankle injury isn't as serious as initially feared. Doctors thought he might have broken the ankle or damaged ligaments when a pass ruster fell on it in the first half. Trainer Paul Sparling said more X-rays Monday found no severe damage. The injury, now described as a deep bruise, shouldn't force Blake to miss practice. He's expected to start next Sunday against Indianapolis.

Good News Jail Ministry has its rewards

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Working for the Lord doesn't pay much but the rewards are out of this world. This little saying shares Joyce Dunlap's sentiments exactly. Grading Bible correspondence courses for the Good News Jail Ministry has occupied her time and her love.

Dunlap has been in the Sanford area for some 20 years. She said, "I'm a housewife. I'm employed by my husband, Jim." They have five children, Debbie, Skip, Jimmy, Kathy and Ralph and 13 grandchildren. The family have been members of the Sanford Alliance Church for 13 years. "I teach Sunday School or work wherever I'm needed," she said. "I worked with AWANA for six years."

Dunlap's present work involved her with the Good News Jail Ministry. "I had to slow down so the jail ministry became my main priority. I've been in the jail ministry for 11 years."

She told of how she became involved in this field. "I met Roland Boyd. He and his wife invited me and my mother to a luncheon. We now meet once a month. Sometimes they have inmates that give testimonials of what Christ has done for them."

Often Dunlap can be found on a Wednesday morning among many others with piles of Bibles and paperwork grading courses for inmates. "We are kept posted on the inmates and their progress," she said. "They become Christians because of the jail ministry. It's really a mission in our own country being used for the glory of God."

Dunlap began initially just grading papers as a volunteer. Now she oversees that grading through the Good News Jail Ministry. "I get the courses," she said. "I sort them. I write the names down. I grade papers. I give a grade. I record the results."

Joyce Dunlap grades papers in her volunteer work with prison ministries.

She spoke of the specifics of the courses offered. "There are eight lessons in a unit," she said. "There are 136 lessons to finish. Then they receive a large certificate. They really work hard for the Bibles they receive for their work on the courses too. The discipleship course is what they complete in order to receive a Bible."

She continued to elaborate concerning the courses. "We average about 450 lessons.

We've done 17,000 lessons so far this year. It's exciting to see the men picking up on the Bible."

Much discussion was given to the people taking the courses. "The men are much more open than the women are to the courses," said Dunlap. "Not only do they learn the word but they go out and share what they've learned. We've found 80 percent of the people that are in the inmate cell that are taking the Bible courses and have accepted Christ don't return to jail. It's life changing. Jesus came to save souls and he wants us to spread the gospel and come to know him."

Dunlap recalled a gentleman who made an impression on her. "One example of the great work that is done is a man from Louisiana. He was 80 years old and from the Bayou. He had never heard the word of God. When he left he couldn't help but tell others and he couldn't wait to do so. There's so many wonderful examples. I could talk forever."

She encouraged anyone interested in working in the jail ministry to call the Chaplain at the jail at 324-5221. She concluded by saying, "My mother who is 84 years old works with the ministry. I also have a 90 year old woman. Age isn't a factor just a love of the Lord."

Christmas gifts a burden to retirees

DEAR ABBY: My husband will be retired at Christmastime this year. We will then be on a fixed, limited budget, and our Christmas funds will be much smaller than in the past.

We have eight grown sons and daughters, and 15 grandchildren. The grandchildren are now getting married, so there will be wedding gifts to buy.

Our children protested the suggestion of putting everyone's name in a hat, then everybody buying a gift only for the person whose name he or she draws.

Some of our children ask for cash instead of gifts. We have even been asked, "How much will you and Dad be giving us for Christmas this year?" And, "May I have it now so I can buy what I want?"

A couple of our grandchildren have already come over to get their money and gifts, and we probably won't see them again until it's their birthdays.

We had some big medical bills this year, and my husband's retirement benefits nowhere compare to his former salary. I said, "Let's forget the Christmas gifts this year — Dad and I want to invite the entire family out for a nice Christmas dinner." That idea was voted down. Do you have any suggestions, Abby? We are already ...

WORRIEDSICK

DEAR WORRIED: Yes, you and your husband should treat yourselves to a nice trip somewhere; then telephone your children and wish them a Merry Christmas. And don't come home until you're good and ready.

DEAR ABBY: As an electrical engineer, I must take exception to your answer to "A Young Widow" concerning the tragic death of her husband who was killed when he touched a "live" electrical wire while standing in a swimming pool.

The electrical installation had absolutely nothing to do with it. The accident would have occurred in these circumstances even if the installation had been done by the very best of electricians.

Your answer should have been: "Never touch anything that carries electricity — be it a wire, connector, appliance or other equipment — while any part of your body is in water. It does not have to be a swimming pool or bathtub; standing on wet, or even damp, ground is enough because the current will always flow to the ground—even if it has to do so through your body."

G. P. SCHUCKI-KOLBEN, WEST COLUMBIA, S.C.

DEAR G. P. SCHUCKI-KOLBEN: Thank you for pointing out what I should have figured out—but failed to do so.

DEAR ABBY: Do you have room for one more "udder" story?

A bee flew into a cow's ear. The next day, it showed up in the milk can.

A simple case of "in one ear and out the other."

Cancer patients subjected to radiation

By M. JOSEPH WINTER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The government is conducting a study to determine whether cancer patients are being subjected to radiation in the treatment of their disease. The study is being conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The study will determine whether the radiation is being used in a safe and effective manner. The study will also determine whether the radiation is being used in a manner that is consistent with the best interests of the patient.

Dr. John H. T. Owen, a senior researcher for the Atomic Energy Commission, said that the study is being conducted because of the increasing number of cancer patients who are being treated with radiation. He said that the study will determine whether the radiation is being used in a safe and effective manner. The study will also determine whether the radiation is being used in a manner that is consistent with the best interests of the patient.

Few addicts on welfare get the required treatment and recover

By JENNIFER DIXON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — For too many drug addicts the federal disability rules to do or go to jail. Only 1 percent ever recover or get a job, according to a government study. The study, by the Inspector General at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, shows that the government's failure to make sure substance abusers are in treatment as a condition of collecting a monthly disability benefit is costing the government $1 billion a year.

More than 80,000 drug addicts and alcoholics receive benefits under Supplemental Security Income, a welfare program run by the Social Security Administration. But the program is not working as well as it should. Only 10 percent of substance abusers are in treatment, and Social Security does not even check to see if they are. The Inspector General said that the program is costing the government $1 billion a year.

Study: Low-fat diets safe for growing kids

By DANIEL G. MANNY Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Suitable low-fat diets can reduce children's cholesterol levels without reducing their growth, a new study concludes. All youngsters over age 2, watch the amount of fat they eat, especially those with high cholesterol levels in their blood, pediatricians are cautioned. The study, by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, shows that a low-fat diet can reduce cholesterol levels in children without affecting their growth.

Shingles outbreak can appear again at times

DEAR DR. GOTT Please explain the virus shingles. My granddaughter had chickenpox and I assume I acquired the disorder from her. Almost four weeks into it, I still have some ugly scabs and the remnants of the rash. The most unusual sensation is extreme numbness that still lingers. Is there a better treatment than hydrocortisone salve and Vicodin? Most important, can I get it again?

DEAR READER The varicella/zoster virus causes chickenpox in children; this is the first manifestation of the infection. Once the pox blisters have dried up, the viruses remain dormant — in a state of suspended animation — within certain nerves in the body's skin. This period of dormancy lasts many years, even a lifetime.

However, in some people, for no known reason (or during exposure to active chickenpox), the viruses become reactivated, reproduce astronomically fast and cause the skin to break out again — this time painfully and on one side of the body only. People can experience shingles from injury (such as sunburn), stress and fatigue.

Because the infection is much more common in the elderly, many authorities believe that shingles results from a malfunction of the immune system, a ubiquitous consequence of aging. That is, the body becomes unable to contain the viruses in their dormant state. Further, shingles may be the first sign of a hidden malignancy somewhere in the body and may require further testing.

Ordinarily, anti-viral drugs, such as Zovirax and Famvir, will halt the progression of shingles. If prescribed early in the course of the disease, Vicodin and other powerful analgesics will control the pain of the infection.

A single attack of shingles usually produces immunity from subsequent infections, although in rare instances second and third eruptions can occur.

DEAR DR. GOTT I recently received an advertisement in the mail for a general health tonic that contains various herbs and other supplements. The medicine is claimed to reduce aging and many illnesses. What bothered me was that the letter came from Canada and it indicated U.S. doctors would deprecate this treatment. Please comment.

DEAR READER I, too, disparage this supposed therapy. However, this is not pure provincialism; responsible physicians elsewhere — even in Canada — discourage its use.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

Would you like to try duplicate but don't fancy the trauma of completing the convention card? Have you tried duplicate bridge but been put off by trying to decipher everyone's convention card, including your own? Do you wonder about some of those conventions mentioned on the card? If so, a book has been published that will make your life much more pleasant.

"Everyone's Guide to the New Convention Card" by Marty Bergen (812-95, Natco Press, 181 Longhill Road, Bldg. 1-6, Little Falls, NJ 07424) describes how to complete the card and includes brief descriptions of the most common methods you will encounter when playing in North America. The book ends with some useful information about playing in a duplicate, like the requirement to make the opening lead face-down and the alert and skip-bid procedures. There is also a glossary.

Today's deal features two unusual conventional! It starts with Stayman and moves into Blackwood.

South won the opening club-queen lead in the dummy, cashed the heart ace and took the heart finesse. However, West won with the queen and flashed back his last heart. Now declarer couldn't win more than 11 tricks.

The trump finesse was a mirage. South should have cashed two rounds of trumps with the ace and king before embarking on a crossruff. He wins three spades, two top hearts, two diamonds, two clubs and three ruffs. West overruffing once.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Nov. 16, 1994

Don't just talk about your ideas in the year ahead, put them to work for you. The results could be more than worth the initial effort to get the ball rolling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might face an unusual amount of opposition. If this is the case, there is probably a good reason for it. Examine and correct your behavior. Scorpio, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your attitude could make assignments unnecessarily complicated. Lighten up and try to see the positive aspects in your tasks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone with whom you share a mutual dislike may be in your circle of friends today. Avoid this person. Nothing will be resolved and old wounds might be reopened.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Today, try not to tease someone who is important to your future. You may come off as rude and abrasive, and he/she might not laugh it off.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you talk to a person you don't respect about a matter concerning you, keep an open mind. He/She might surprise you today and teach you something valuable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your jealousy of friends is self-defeating. It could be particularly destructive today because you may want to say something you'll regret.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you want to have your way today, leave plenty of room for others to do the same. If you don't show a little empathy, your usual supporters may decide to throw tacks in your tracks.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Resist lazy inclinations today. Do not try to delegate your responsibilities; those you ask may say no. Don't try to sweep everything under a rug, either; you're not fooling anybody.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let the majority rule today. If your ideas differ from your friends', be flexible and try to follow their lead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your support system might not be as solid as you think today. It could be surprisingly easy to alienate your friends, so don't rock the boat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Chart a course for today or you may find yourself running around in circles. A wasted day is more than likely if you don't plan ahead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Bewary of your financial judgment today. The shots you may be tempted to call could be disastrous.
