CHAPTER NINETEEN

ETHEL returned and for a moment she stood beside the worktable. One hand touched it with a lingering caress.

"Perhaps," Lois suggested, "you will be willing to help me. Probably no one is as familiar with Mr. Brindle's method of work as you are. We'd be so grateful."

"Well," Lois said cheerfully, "that's what I'm here for."

"Don't you mind," Ethel asked, "when someone else gets the credit?"

Lois laughed. "That's the number one question asked of ghosts. The answer is no, I don't mind." She added in her warm, eager voice, "But do please think about it and let me know something about Mr. Brindle's way of attacking his column. It would be a help because people are interested in things like that. And I know, of course, from the way he wrote, how highly he thought of you."

A dull red stain mottled the petted face. "He was—he was like sunshine. You know that he? You came and the sun came after. I don't know who wrote it. But he always made me think of it. When he came into a room it—'Brightened.' He struggled for expression, tried to speak, gave it up. After a moment she walked to the Dutch door so that her face was hidden from Lois. She said abruptly, "He made me feel attractive."

"What a wonderful thing—to go through life without making anyone's life brighter," Lois said and heard Ethel draw in her breath sharply.

Something moved at the window and Joe Hattery, lifting a pane of glass, smirked. "The guy who could do no wrong."

Ethel wheeled and went out of the cottage. As he used the petty knife Joe began to whistle.

Lois returned to the photograph album, grateful that the picture were arranged chronologically. There was Roger at fifteen, already ready very big, towering over other boys. Roger and a small, scrawny looking kid who stared up at him with worship in his eyes. Underneath was written, "Roger and Albert." This must be Albert

Kibbee. Roger at eighteen with a small, pale, bespectacled Albert. Roger graduating from high school. Roger on a bicycle. Roger with Albert again. Roger and a tall girl sitting on a fallen tree, laughing. Underneath was written, "My beloved Jane, the day she promised to marry me."

Lois lingered over that picture for a long time. Something of the relationship between those two surprised her. They were not touching each other but in their expression there was a completeness for which she had not been prepared. They belonged together, she thought. In some essential way they supplemented each other, the tall girl and the small one, recognition of familiarity, which faded little by little.

She began to turn the pages more rapidly. There were pictures of townpeople, later of men and women famous in their various fields. He had the rarest of abilities, that of communicating his own excitement, his own warm interest in daily life and the people around him. True, he had made them a little more than life-size, endowed them with qualities they had not possessed. Albert, the dreamer, had had more than a touch of it. Francis, Bessie might have stepped out of Dickens; Ethel, faithful and devoted and helpful, bore no relation to the passionate, pocket-marked woman who had hovered at the worktable; Joe, the unfortunate, was no reasonable facsimile of the innumerable bird of prey who had wanted to tell her something and had not dared. Carol, the child wife—oh, no, no!

And yet—she reached once more for the book of pictures and looked at the one which ended the look! Roger smiling down at his bride with protective tenderness. And yet he had believed what he had written. That was why his writing had carried such conviction. Until those past few months and, increasingly, the past few weeks. Then the writing was no longer easy, no longer exuberant. He had tried too hard, striving to recapture a magic that was gone. Somewhere he had lost just most of us lose in youth, the sense of wonder. He seemed constantly with untiring effort, to be attempting to reanimate himself. And he sounded tired.

of money in writing."

She made no comment.

"The first Mrs. Brindle's done well, hasn't she? Made a pot out of those articles."

"That's a fine writer," Lois replied, hoping that he would go on.

"That's what I figured." She heard above her head a creak as he shifted position. "Successful. Costs quite a bit to stay at the inn."

Hours later, when she found herself straining to decipher the printed pages, Lois switched on the big desk lamp. She straightened up, the back of her neck aching but still so absorbed that she was only dimly aware of her discomfort.

"What a gift the man had had! After a somewhat fumbling beginning, in which he groped his way toward his own style and subject matter, he had handled his material with a vividness that impressed her by its cumulative effect. He had the rarest of abilities, that of communicating his own excitement, his own warm interest in daily life and the people around him. True, he had made them a little more than life-size, endowed them with qualities they had not possessed. Albert, the dreamer, had had more than a touch of it. Hollywood Studios Improving Quality Of Films For TV

NEW YORK (AP)—It seems to me there's a slow but steady improvement in the quality of films which the big Hollywood studios are turning out for television.

Even so recently as a year ago Hollywood appeared to feel that television was still a boyeman; if it paid no attention, the monstrous upstart might go away. Finally however, it recognized the ghost had substance.

For a time there was one of those vacant-minded arguments: If people saw the best that Hollywood could do on their T Vets, would they bother to go and see the best in a movie theater? As a result, it sometimes seemed the studios were giving up even of their second best but only of their third-best on television.

Now, I believe, the tide has turned. Hollywood recognizes that a best effort in TV film entertainment and a best effort in movie theater entertainment are not mutually exclusive.

Warner Brothers has buckled down and is turning out better movies on its ABC-TV show, Tuesday.

Twentieth Century-Fox, which makes television versions of past movie successes, has struck a high level of entertainment on its program which appears on alternate Wednesdays on CBS-TV.

MYSTERIOUS ATTACKER?

TALLAHASSEE (AP)—Florida State University officials have marked off the mysterious "woman in white" case as a hoax. The student, who was not identified, awakened others in her dormitory with screams last week. She displayed a superficial cut on the arm which she said was inflicted by a mysterious attacker.

wood films on TV. And, because the British have been able to provide feature-length films never before seen in this country, they have made quite an impact on that discriminating TV public.

Report Is Heard Eisenhower Must Face Total Strain

WASHINGTON, (AP)—A single statement of triple significance—that a convalescing Eisenhower still must face the "total strain" of the presidency—resounded with dramatic emphasis through a Denver news conference this week.

Over and over, in one variant or another, it was repeated by Dr. Paul Dudley White, the eminent Boston specialist who is top consultant on President Eisenhower's heart case.

Medically, it means the doctors attending "the chief executive don't know yet how his damaged but mending heart will bear up under reumung around Jan. 1 the full pressure of what has been called the world's toughest job.

Politically, the physicians said it means that Eisenhower can't be sure before late January or even February whether the heart can stand another election campaign in 1956 and four more years in the White House.

Thirdly, it means something White didn't put into precise words: Regardless of the way they commanded maximum publicity, all the conferences, all the pronouncements, proclamations and signing of papers at Denver were far off the presidential pace required in Washington.

Unquestionably, Eisenhower got in some jabs on such things as his January State of the Union message to Congress. The work

Notices for the meeting were Mrs. E. H. Kibbee, Mrs. Mattie Adkinson and Mrs. Hugh Braddy, who served refreshments of coffee, tea, cookies, and minis. Approximately 30 attended.

Mrs. Lucille Morlan left Friday for New York to spend a few days. Mrs. John Williams, Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Yarborough and Mrs. George Lindsey attended the demonstration of ship covering at the sewing center Thursday.

Mrs. George Lindsey spent Monday with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hakes on Lake Harney.

was far ahead of normal schedule, before things really jelled, but it gave him something concrete to do during seven weeks in Fitzsimons Army Hospital.

Those were an eventful, unusual seven weeks.

Never before had a heart attack sent an American president to the hospital.

Flat in his sick bed, the chief executive told an amiable, sometimes temper flashing Irishman to take over Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerly obeyed orders. For a time, more than any other individual he was at the administration helm.

Five days after Eisenhower's Sept. 24 heart seizure he said with a tired smile that yes, he guessed he was what a reporter termed the "Number 1 government official in Denver," doing things far beyond his press secretary duties.

Last Monday, Dr. White and the President's personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, agreed that on the basis of physical condition alone, Eisenhower would have to wait until late January or February to make the crucial decision himself—after he has "exposed himself to a considerable more strain that he has yet."

Some political analysts think that is when the announcement may come—by early February, in time to let other Republican hopefuls hop into 1956 primaries if the answer on a second term is "No."

Of course, here is the intriguing possibility that the President already may have made up his mind, although White and Snyder said he hadn't hinted it to them.

Around the Denver White House, the impression grew, and remained unchanged, that the chances were that Eisenhower's first term and political career would end together.

From the hospital and the White House offices there was only polite silence. Nobody denied that the political future probably was examined in the privacy of family circle gatherings at the hospital bedside.

But from the President's official family there was only consistent insistence that no politics had been mentioned. A procession of official visitors declared it an entirely "inappropriate" subject.

The quicker food cools after processing, the better the texture and less chance of spoilage.

BOAC Introduced First Jet Airliner

By VERN BAUGLAND
Associated Press Aviation Writer

Three and one-half years ago British Overseas Airways Corp. proudly introduced the world's first jetliner, the De Havilland Comet 1, into scheduled service.

BOAC called it the dawn of the commercial jet age. Passengers thrilled at the speed and comfort and quiet of the Comet's flight.

Then, in horrifying succession, one Comet after another crashed—seven altogether in a year and a half—with 110 persons killed. The beautiful jet was ordered off the airways. The jet age darkened.

Meanwhile, American manufacturers worked to catch up with British jet producer Boeing Aircraft Co. of Seattle, gambled 15 million dollars on the Jet 707 and struck pay dirt in August 1954 when the air force ordered a number of tanker craft to refuel the Boeing B52 heavy bomber.

Douglas Aircraft Co. of Santa Monica, Calif., announced it, too, would have a jet design, the DC-8.

One airline after another announced it was considering the merits of both the DC-8 and the 707.

Last month came the long-awaited announcement. Pan American World Airways largest intercontinental airline, announced it had ordered 45 four-engine jets for 280 million dollars.

The order included 20 Boeing 707s costing 107 million dollars and carrying 104 first class passengers or 125 second class, to be delivered between December 1954 and November '59, and 25 DC-8s costing 180 million dollars, carrying 104 first class or 131 coach passengers and with slightly greater range than the 707.

The 707s are to begin delivery a year after the 707s. Both will cruise at 575 m.p.h. Both will have Pratt & Whitney engines. The 707 will have the J-57 engine, the DC-8 the more powerful J-75.

Donald W. Douglas, builder of the DC-8, said his was "the largest and most significant single contract in the history of commercial aviation opening a new chapter in global aviation."

William M. Allen, president of Boeing, said introduction of the 707 on Pan American routes "will in effect, make the world 40 per cent smaller."

Pan American President Juan Trippe said the jets will provide a new standard in speed and passenger comfort on Transoceanic routes. They will fly above the weather, their passenger cabins will be bright and virtually free of engine noise.

Two weeks after Pan American's announcement came an order by United Air Lines for 30 DC-8s and 10 707s for about 171 million dollars. United will cancel the order for a total of 10 Pan American 707s—its first class 140 coach 160—when it starts in May, 1959.

Some sample flight times, as estimated by Pan American and United for the DC-8s:

New York Paris 6 hours 35 min
New York London 6 1/2 hours
New York Buenos Aires 11 1/2 hours
London Tokyo 8 1/2 hours
Tokyo Seattle 4 1/2 hours
New York Los An-

gles 3 1/2 hours
Chicago San Francisco 3 1/2 hours

European operators, worried about future competition of U.S. jets, also are looking into the market. Officials of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines have studied both the 707 and 707 and may announce an order for this year.

Yoshio Koshima, vice president of Japan Air Lines, said Japan soon must enter the jet age in its search for new world markets and is trying to decide how many U.S. planes—probably DC-8s—he buys.

Many foreign airlines reportedly are finding it financing a problem, especially since they must continue to order conventional craft until the jets are available.

Why did America lag behind Britain in the early production of jet commercial craft?

DeWitt C. Ramsey, president of the U.S. Aircraft Industries Association, said it was because U.S. companies by necessity had to concentrate on piston engine production in World War II.

No other action among the airlines could even approach the piston engine production requirements of war," Ramsey wrote recently.

Despite this, Frederick R. B. Stille, chairman of United Aircraft Corp., has termed a shortage of jet propaganda to the contrary. American industry spokesmen feel this country has now forged comfortably ahead in commercial jet development.

But there has been no lack of competition on the domestic front.

Braves 'Floating' Franchise Coming Down To Earth Soon

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The Milwaukee Braves' "floating" Toledo franchise may come to earth by March next spring and if so, will be a replacement of the late, national Toledo and the American League.

"There's a good possibility we will locate in Miami next spring," Stille said. "I assume the Braves' franchise will be sold to a local group."

Stille said he planned to go to Florida Thursday and meet with officials about buying the Braves' American League franchise.

He said he expected to know his own mind within a week, but that the deal would be announced in a few days.

Stille said he had been in Toledo for a week, but that he had not yet decided on a franchise. He said he had been in Toledo for a week, but that he had not yet decided on a franchise.

Noveland's First Cinemascope Showing—On Wide Screen Sunday & Monday

THE BODY OF WILLIE BIOFF, 38, former Oklawaha labor racketeer, lies under a blanket before the wreckage of his pickup truck outside the garage of his $40,000 home in Phoenix, Ariz. Bioff (inset) was killed by a dynamite blast as he stepped on the starter of the vehicle. His body was hurled 25 ft and the wreckage was strewn 300 yards around. Investigators believe that the thoroughness of the "job" done on Bioff was evidence his killing had a gangland revenge motive.

MRS. NANCY MAE HATHAWAY

Nancy Mae Hathaway Reveals Engagement To Marion Butler

Mrs. J. P. Cullen, Mrs. Henry Russell Give Exhibition.

The home of Mrs. Henry McLaulin Sr. was the scene of the Azalea Circle of the Garden Club Thursday evening at 8 p. m. with Mrs. Henry McLaulin as hostess and Mrs. E. P. Dossy as co-hostess.

Mrs. Jay Young presided over the business session. Plans for the sale of orchids from the L. E. Spencer nurseries were discussed and Mrs. J. P. Cullen moved that the circle sponsor and orchid booth at the forthcoming flower show.

Mrs. J. R. Jennings seconded the motion which was carried. Circle treasurer Mrs. L. E. Spencer was instructed to purchase fifty orchid plants for the booth.

Mrs. E. E. Anderson, flower show chairman, requested members to make entries in the show and received promises of many from the members. She also made appointments to volunteers to work at the booth.

Mrs. Jennings, garden therapy chairman, appointed Mrs. McLaulin and Mrs. Cullen to take arrangements to the local hospital for the month of December.

Plant sale chairman, Mrs. Roy Tullis requested plants for the sale be brought to the Mayfair Inn Friday Dec. 2 prior to the opening of the show.

Members were asked to wrap containers in foil. Mrs. Cullen demonstrated making of Christmas corsages using dried pitted leaves, brazilian pepper berries, and cedar. Also displayed were coffee table arrangements, and center pieces for the mantel. Mrs. Henry Russell displayed a novel door decoration in a beautiful violin cut from foam plastic with trim colored beads.

The hostesses served sandwiches, treats and coffee during the social hour which followed. Those attending were Mrs. Cullen, Mrs. O. P. Herndon, Mrs. M. Hayes, Mrs. O. Tullis, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. J. Clark, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. W. P. Field, Mrs. P. P. Campbell, Mrs. Earl Turner, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Dossy and Mrs. McLaulin.

Sanford Grammar School 4-H News

By CAROL CLEVELAND

Wednesday the 4-H Club at Sanford Grammar School met for a regular session. Song leader Diane Tony led the group in singing "America".

Devotional was given by Diane Nickle. Roll call was made and minutes from the last meeting were given.

New business was discussed and plans were announced about how to make pot holders, dish towels and a sewing bar. We also had a discussion on National 4-H Day which was Nov. 12.

The presentation was given by Pat Dutton and Billie Jean Tait. It was about how to arrange furniture and pictures. A point brought out was the fact that you have to balance heavy and light furniture on the room wasn't look "topsy".

The game was on famous TV people. Meeting was adjourned at 8 p. m.

Gail Biting Given Supper By Kirchhoff's

A buffet supper was given Saturday evening for Miss Gail Biting by Mrs. W. E. Kirchhoff and her daughter Gretchen.

An autumn theme was carried in fall flowers. Candles were used with the different creations to bring out the fall effect.

The serving table was covered with a gold cloth centered with bronze chrysanthemums and fruit. The honoree was presented with a white orchid corsage during the evening.

Those invited were Miss Debra Griffin, Miss Jamie Pasquello, Miss Joan Wright, Miss Patty Raligan, Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. Patricia Stenstrom, Miss Kay Ivey, Mrs. John Ivey, Miss Marilyn McDaniel, Mrs. T. F. McDaniel, Mrs. Harry Tooke, Mrs. W. V. Biting and the honoree.

Garden Nook

By SADIE R. GUT

Sanford Garden Club of F. F. G. C.

Late fall and winter is the planting season for Florida as the cool weather discourages top growth and the root systems to develop and become established before spring growing season arrives.

We have so much material from which to choose that it is difficult to make a wise selection. Naturally we'll want to include the many beautiful flowers we see blooming right now such as the yellow cactus and elder, Chinese Hat plant (Holmskioldia), Golden Rain tree (Koehneuteria), Powder puff bush (Calliandra), Hibiscus and the myriad Chrysanthemums in full fall color.

However, don't overlook the spring bloomers which include dogwood, redbud, and tabebuia trees, azaleas, camellias, ligustrum and viburnum in shrubs, and amaryllis, Easter lilies, narcissus, gladi, wisteria and stokesias in bulbs and perennials.

Next come the summer bloomers of Jacaranda, Peltophorum, Golden Shower (Cassia fistula), and Crepe Myrtle trees, hibiscus, Felio and plumage shrubs, day-lilies, gladi and glorious lilies for perennials and bulbs.

There are numerous other desirable shrubs and trees, not listed here for lack of time and space. An extremely good book that should help new and older gardeners is "Your Florida Garden" by John W. Watkins and Herbert R. Wolfe of the University of Florida.

It pertains to Florida gardening exclusively and includes lists of trees, shrubs and vines, annuals and perennials, fertilizers, insecticides, etc. Two copies of this book are available at the Public Library, along with other good gardening books.

An unusual shrub seldom seen in our gardens is called "Mock Orange" because of the small yellow fruits clustered at the leaf axils. This is not the Mock Orange or Philadelphia of Northern gardeners, but rather is one of the many Solanums, and has smooth dark green leaves with no prickles and tomato-like seeds which germinate readily. We hope to have a specimen branch on display at our Flower Show Dec. 3 and 4 and a few seeds for distribution.

It's too bad we overlooked mentioning Pyracantha shrubs above. This red-berried shrub is making a gay show all over town, and is wonderfully attractive to birds also. It too may be raised from seed taken from the ripe berries, though they may not come true to the parent plant. Cuttings are difficult but air layers are probably easier. Pyracantha Island has orange fruits and P. Coccinea has red. Pyracantha means "firethorn" so do not be confused when someone insists that the shrub is a Firethorn.

Mrs. Ruth's Sixth Grade Room Presents Veterans Day Pageant

Veterans Day was commemorated at Sanford Grammar School Friday when the pupils of Mrs. Sybil Ruth's Sixth Grade Room were presented in a colorful musical pageant, "Dixie", depicting America's struggle for liberty, since the time of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock up to the present day.

Lynn Crabtree opened the program by reading passages from the Bible pertaining to peace, and leading in the pledge to the flag. Lynn also acted as narrator or as the tabloids appeared. Allyson Lee played the musical score. The play opened with Pilgrims, Roy Wright, Raymond King, Ann Shoemacher, Jackie Berryhill, Linda McLellan, and Douglas Stenstrom, accompanied by a lone Indian, James Sipes, going to worship. Doug led the group holding a girl-edged Bible dating back to the 1800's. They worshipped to the strains of "God of Our Fathers" and "Sweet Hour of Prayer".

Next was the tabloid of George Washington (Jerry Hill) and crossing the Delaware, accompanied by his two aides (Curtis Barnes and Harry Smith). "The Spirit of '76" was authentically portrayed by John Lewis Wright, Billy Phagan, and Harry Nelson. "The Stars and Stripes, Forever" brought out Patty Turner as Betty Ross in white organdy cap and apron busily sewing on America's first flag.

Bill Palmer made an authentic Abraham Lincoln, complete with beard and top hat in the next scene followed by a dignified, graying Robert E. Lee (Lisa Cash), shown strolling with a hoop and ruffled Southern Belle (Allyson Lee) as the familiar "Dixie" was played.

Billy Johnson looked on like the virile Teddy Roosevelt as he charged onto the stage to the strains of "Battle Cry of Freedom" that it brought gasps from the audience of teachers, students, and parents.

A medley of World War I songs was played as Salvation Army Girls, Flora Miller and Corinne McMinimer, and the Red Cross Nurses, Nancy Goetz, Kay Beasley, and Susan Tilly, appeared.

Mrs. Richards, Sixth Grade teacher, led the group in singing the "Caucasian Song" as khaki-clad Soldier Boy (Danny Brambley), flanked by two WAC's (Gertrude Stafford and Sandra Estridge), marched out in salute. Marie, Charles, Elizabeth, and the WAVES, Mary Helen Washburn and Penny Pulver, and Sailor, Charlie Carlson, closed the drill.

Circle Sam (Kenneth Gustafson) and the Goddess of Liberty (Sandy Averitt), impressively costumed in red, white, and blue brought cheers as "God Bless America" was heard.

All the characters returned to the stage to stand with bowed head and sing the stirring "Onward Christian Soldiers". Mrs. Ruth closed with a prayer that future generations would not break faith with those who had gone before in the never-ending search for Peace, and that new Flanders Fields would ever

Harold Kastner Gives Colorful Talk To Circle

The Palm Circle of the Sanford Garden Club met Thursday morning at the home of Mrs. Wade Garner, Mrs. H. J. Finch was emcee.

Plans for the December Flower Show were discussed, a coffee table to be entered in competition by the Palm Circle. Poinsettia arrangements and Florida flower arrangement calendars are to be sold by this group. An orchid exhibit will be shown also.

Mrs. Garner, chairman, announced that a Flower Show School is to be held at the Garden Center Jan. 25 and 26. Those interested in attending should contact Mrs. Karlyle Housholder for reservations. The Orlando Flower Show is scheduled for Dec. 9 and 10.

Harold Kastner gave a colorful talk on packaging vegetables at the garden spot, thus insuring the homemaker more vitamins and enjoyment of lettuce, spinach and greens.

After the business meeting Mrs. Garner and Mrs. Finch served coffee and cakes. The next meeting will be a covered dish luncheon and picnic at the Palm in Kissimmee where the Palm Circle have been totally entertained before. Hostesses for this occasion will be Mrs. H. H. Duncan, Mrs. W. W. Lint and Mrs. Arthur H. Parker Sr.

Adapted from the Italian cuisine, cold sliced veal served with a dressing of olive oil, wine vinegar, crushed garlic, mashed tuna fish and capers. Wonderful dish for a buffet supper table.

Professionals Have Special Softeners For Laundry Water

Washing clothes in hard water reduces the life of the clothing, causes colored articles to lose their brightness and may cause laundry to become stiff and discolored. Furthermore, technicians at the Seminole County Laundry maintain that hard water washing requires more soap.

M. L. Raborn Jr. of the Seminole County Laundry points out that while water is found in comparative abundance all over the world, there are relatively few areas where naturally soft, uncontaminated water is found. "That's why professionals have special softeners for water used in laundering."

The local textile maintenance authority explained, "When fabrics are washed in hard water, insoluble calcium and magnesium soaps are formed that adhere to the fabric. Eventually, this causes a stiffened and discolored condition accompanied by an odor of rancidity. The same condition causes colored articles to lose their brightness."

Raborn said that in hospitals and hotels where linen replacement can be studied closely, the substitution of soft water washing for hard water washing has increased the life of linen as much as 20 to 50 per cent. "Thus, professional laundries using soft water can produce cleaner clothes and at the same time give longer life to those items of clothing."

Soft water washing also requires less soap than hard water washing, says Raborn. It has been shown by tests in the research laboratories at American Institute of Laundering, educational and research center for the professional laundry industry, that washing with hard water, each 1,000 gallons of water requires up to one and one-half pounds of soap for each gram of hardness. This is merely to soften the water. More soap is needed beyond this amount to do the actual cleaning, he explained.

Schelling until her home is in readiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ward of New York City who have been spending the past month at Fort Myers, have arrived in town to spend some time with the latter's sister, Mrs. Charles Morrison and Mr. Morrison. Word has been received from Miss Ann Weigle of Long Island, N. Y., that she will arrive in town the 25th. Miss Weigle has been the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morrison for the past two winters. Mrs. Cassie Maier left for Brookline, Mass., Monday morning accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Evelyn Nicklenson, who had been her guest for two months. Mrs. Maier will return after a short stay in Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Moore of Grandy, Conn., who are visiting in Orlando, spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Leighton on Maine Street. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dayeu of Lithia, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Stewart of Maine St., and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Blanchard of Wildmere Ave. The Dayeu's also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hall and friends in Orange City and Apopka.

FLORIDA MAY HAVE 'FIELD DAY'

LAKELAND (AP)—Lack of competition from California fruit in the next three weeks may give Florida orange shippers "a field day" in the big Christmas market, Florida Citrus Mutual says. The big cooperative said it has been informed the California navel orange crop is so slow to mature that California orange shipments for this period are expected to be the smallest in 35 years.

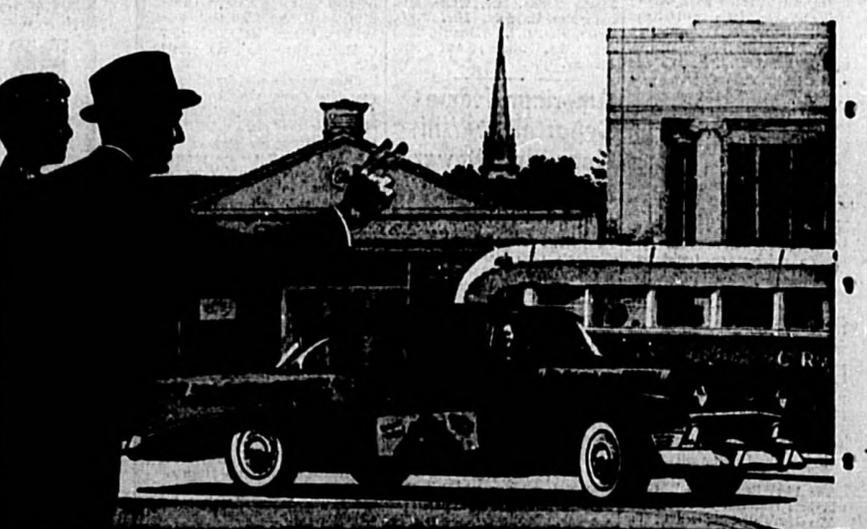

SAFETY SERVICE EMPLOYEES

PARIS (AP)—A strike of safety service employes today paralyzed Paris' two big airports. Foreign airlines had to cancel their flights or divert them to airports outside return of Sultan Mohammed Ben France. The strike was called by 3,600 radar station and control tower operators. The strikers are asking for 10,000 franc — $28.37 — month bonus on salaries averaging 40,000 francs.

In addition to the formal presentation of papers, "classroom" type of discussion programs are also on the agenda. Tentative plans for the general scientific program include presentation of 24 papers.

Following the discussion theme a number of luncheon panels, led by authorities in their respective fields, are scheduled. The Association's National Clearing House plan will form the basis for one luncheon panel.

Doctor R. R. A. Coombs, Department of Pathology, University of Cambridge, England, an international authority, will be a guest speaker at the meeting.

Doctor Ruth Sanger, Blood Group Research Unit, The Lister Institute, London, England, will also address the meeting.

Several Administrative Sessions are planned at which papers relating to the various administrative aspects of blood banking will be given. A breakfast for state representatives of the Association is planned for Monday morning, Nov. 21, at the Palmer House.

Principal speaker for the annual banquet on Sunday evening, Nov. 20, will be Doctor Morris Fishbein, Professor of Medicine and Contributing Editor of Post-Graduate University of Illinois College of Medicine. Doctor Fishbein's subject will be "Blood-The Most Important Fluid."

The Association this year will for the first time present the Karl Landsteiner Award for distinguished contribution in the field of blood banking. The recipient of this award will be announced at the annual banquet of the Association on the evening of Nov. 20. In addition, awards for scientific and administrative exhibits will be presented.

Doctor J. J. Griffiths of Miami will be inducted as President of the Association at the annual banquet.

Attending from Central Florida will be Doctor Louis Pohlman, Orlando, President, Florida Association Blood Banks; Mrs. M. M. Rand, manager, Central Florida Blood Bank; and Mrs. Roberta J. Briggs, R. N. from the laboratory of Central Florida Blood Bank.

put on the taxes needed to give services to the public as fast as the others."

Thompson said he had noticed that men and women in all parts of the country now are running for municipal offices because they want to do a good job.

In the long run, he said, only those doing such a job survive although "politics is the only profession where no preparation is thought necessary."

Thompson said good people work at government only in spurts but that the bad influences always are there.

A constitutional amendment proposed to give home rule to Dade County is considered controversial because of misunderstanding, said W. C. Herrell, Miami Springs mayor and member of the Florida House of Representatives.

It would only give Dade cities the powers which the league has sought for all Florida municipalities, he said.

The league was told, "It is imperative that those elected to the Legislature be fully aware of the needs of our municipalities and pledged to support program for betterment of citizens through municipal government."

ed." I congratulate you on your new designation."

Major Roy Green, representing the 48th Armored Division, in introducing the principal speaker for the occasion, Lt. General Joseph C. Hutchison (ret), said, "His record reflects glory on the National Guard." And as Major Green cited the General's record, achievements, awards, and popularity, he quoted an often repeated phrase, "I'd fight under his command anytime, anywhere."

General Hutchison reviewed the many changes that he has seen in the Sanford Unit of the National Guard since his enlistment in the organization in 1917. "I enlisted and was mustered into service the night it was founded," General Hutchison said.

"The Sanford Units have always been good," the General said, "As a matter of fact, the company was so good it was called the Colonel's Pets."

Hutchison said, "The 12th Infantry has been the outstanding infantry in the Division, now its going to be up to you to carry on."

The General pointed out, in his talk to the local National Guard Company, "You look good tonight and I know you can perform as well as you look." Citing the support of the community for the company, General Hutchison said, "The unit could not have been maintained without the community back of it."

Concluding his address, General Hutchison said, "You can be a soldier, and do your duty as a soldier, right here at home. The National Guard makes men." And he added, "I want to congratulate you on the work you have done."

A rifle squad attack was demonstrated, with 2nd Lt. William N. Nunn describing their ability to advance in the face of machine-gun fire. The mock warfare was carried out with blank cartridges to create realism in the problem.

A colorful display of rifle grenades firing and mortar firing concluded the ceremonies officially designating the local unit as an armored infantry company. Under the direction of 2nd Lt. John Keeling 37mm recoilless rifles were fired sending flames into the air to light up the terrain. 80mm mortars were also demonstrated with illuminating rounds over Lake Monroe.

The law, which was supported by the Post Office Department, provides that the most economical type of bond available be procured through competitive bidding.

The Post Office Department pointed out, before enactment of the new law, that it has spent at least $300,000 a year to handle paperwork and other administrative costs incident to employee bonding, even though employees themselves paid the premiums.

The saving of this $300,000 will now go a long way towards paying the Post Office Department's premium for the new blanket bond, Summerfield noted.

Witte's report said, "cucumbers led in volume the past week with pickle cucumbers bringing up to $4.35 a bushel and regular cucumbers up to $3. Tomato, eggplant and squash volume continue light, though should increase considerably in the next few weeks."

Director Lewis of the Florida Farmers' Market system said, "a slight optimism due to a slow upward price trend is noted in reports from market managers," as he summarized the various reports of the past week from markets over the state.

organizations." The catalog lists 37 films, several of which are in full color.

One of the films, "Family Affairs," portrays interesting everyday family situations centering around the use of the telephone in a busy household. Another, "Music in Motion," combines the beautiful music of Zino Francescatti, famed violinist, and the Bell Telephone Orchestra with a dramatic story of research in the field of sound. Another, "For Progress... Call Dixie," deals with Southern postwar progress and the part played by telephone service. Another, "The Translator," tells the dramatic story of the translator, mighty electronic marvel invented by the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Also described in the booklet are many other movies as well as interesting lecture programs in which telephone personnel demonstrate communications and electronics equipment. The catalog describes several educational booklets on the history of the telephone, how the telephone system operates, and telephone courtesy.

Rothwell explained that persons interested in the movies, lecture-demonstrations or educational booklets should contact the telephone business office.

lowest-salaried employees to approximately $100 for highest-salaried postmasters.

In addition to regularly employed personnel, the blanket bonding will cover all part time and temporary employees, including those employees put on temporarily for Christmas work. However, since the bonding is not effective until the start of 1956, it will not cover such temporary employees hired during this 1955 Christmas season.

The Post Office Department mailed the invitations to bid Nov. 14. Additional copies are available and may be obtained upon request, addressed to the Chief of Procurement, Post Office Department, Washington 25, D. C.

The new bonding arrangements are being made under authorizations provided in the new Public Law 323, which requires each Executive Department of the Federal Government to obtain surety bonds for such employees as are required by law or administrative decision to be bonded.

The law, which was supported by the Post Office Department, provides that the most economical type of bond available be procured through competitive bidding.

The Christmas Club, Tucker commented, is a method of saving for the individual looking forward to Christmas shopping. Some thrifty people will lay aside their Christmas Club money in further savings, but the bulk of the amount, said Tucker, will be spent with Sanford merchants for Christmas gifts.

Both Tucker and Bauman emphasized that as the checks for the 1955 Christmas Club go into the mail, the new Christmas Clubs will be opening at the same time. Said Tucker, "The Christmas Club is a simple, planned, easy way to save money for Christmas shopping."

According to figures released by both banks, a total of more than $20,000 will be mailed to Christmas Club members of the Sanford Atlantic National Bank while approximately $40,000 will go out to members of the Christmas Club members of the Florida State Bank.

sent directly to Price, Waterhouse & Co., certified public accountants. These nominations were made from lists of eligible pictures and personalities submitted by all major producers in this country and the distributors of the country. The results were tabulated by the accountants and the leaders in each of the five categories were certified and printed on the public ballot.

Each theatre participating in the poll was asked to appoint a committee of local citizens to verify the count of its public ballots, and certify the results on a printed form which also will be sent direct to Price Waterhouse & Co. Theatres in remote spots will wire their results to the accountants for receipt before the deadline, midnight Nov. 10. The national tabulation will be kept secret by Price Waterhouse & Co. until sealed envelopes with the names of the winners are handed to the national chairman of the poll to be opened on the night of the awards ceremony.

"With these precautions," Manager Ruller said, "we are assured that the selections will be a true expression of the preferences of the movie-going public whose generous support has made the motion picture the greatest medium of mass entertainment."

Delivery Of Christmas Seals To All Residents Is Announced By Karns

Memberships Over Total Of Available Seats For Concert

The traditional delivery of Christmas Seals will take place this afternoon when postmen will carry some 9,219 letters to county residents from the Seminole County Tuberculosis and Health Association.

The letters, signed by Robert E. Karns, chairman of the 1955 Christmas Seal Sale, constitute the only appeal made for funds to support the association's fight against tuberculosis.

"Our post office is proud to handle the Christmas Seal letters," said Postmaster Joel Field. "We hope people will read them carefully and decide to increase their regular contribution to the tuberculosis association."

He pointed out that great advances in medical science in recent years have made the eradication of tuberculosis a real possibility for the future.

"Part of the money we give every year for Christmas Seals goes into medical research to find out more about the disease, the germ that causes it, and the way our bodies react to it," he said.

"Even now some scientists may be coming close to a fact that will lead to a simple means of controlling tuberculosis. Tuberculosis research must be continued up to and the terrible cost of TB in money and human lives, your Christmas Seal dollars will help it."

"Memberships in the Seminole Mutual Concert Association now exceeds the number of seats we have available in the auditorium," Frances Roumillat, president of the local association said this morning.

"Phone calls and requests for additional memberships are being turned down now because of the lack of additional seating space," Roumillat said.

"There is an intense interest showing in the coming appearance of artists scheduled for Sanford in the three-concert series," he said. Cornelia Otis Skinner will appear here on the evening of Dec. 1, he said, and we are expecting a full auditorium at that time.

"The Dec. 1 concert will be held at the Southside School auditorium since the auditorium of Pinecrest School will not be completed in time for the first one," Roumillat stated this morning.

In commenting on the number of memberships, Roumillat said that 811 memberships have been sold and there are only 510 seats available.

"We are certainly well pleased at the response evidenced in this year's concert series," said the local president of Seminole Mutual Concert Association.

APME Opens Meet In Colorado Today

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Newspapers "provide the very essence of democracy" and "must get the news, however difficult it is to obtain," Coleman A. Roswell of the Nashville Tennessee told the Associated Press Managing Editors' Assn. today.

"Insofar as one newspaper in America falls in its responsibility, democracy is by that much weakened," Roswell said. "And the voice of democracy loses that much of its effectiveness everywhere."

His speech opened the annual meeting of the APME at the Broadmoor Hotel here. Roswell is chairman of the APME Continuing Study Committee. In this program, managing editors examine annually the reporting job of the Associated Press, seeking ways to help The Cooperative News Gathering Agency improve its service to its member newspapers and broadcasting stations.

The duty of newspapers is to be "strong and clear voiced" applied not only in national affairs but in "the hundreds and hundreds of city councils and school boards and tax lodges and other public groups throughout America," Roswell said.

"This entails getting and reporting the news in a way that occurs in 'human places,'" he said.

In this aim, he said, "we must look to our own papers as sharply as we look to AP" and "to the extent that we have kept in view this dual responsibility to APME, the year's work will have been successful."

The association president, Vincent S. Jones, Rochester, N.Y., executive editor of the Gannett newspapers, said the meeting brings to a climax "one of the most massive and monumental study projects" in the organization's history. He noted, 120 members worked on a study of the Associated Press report.

"As working editors," Jones said, "we are interested in every phase of newspapering and we have tried to recruit distinguished specialists in the fields of defense and research in addition to have laid a heavy emphasis upon the 'how-to-do-it' of our own field for the broadest possible menu of shop talk."

Boy Alive After Being Clinically Dead For 2 Hours

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Paul A. Abbond, 14, is alive today after being clinically dead for two hours 24 minutes—all because 18 "inhalable" persons were at Union Hospital to bring him back to life.

The youth, gravely injured Monday in an explosion of a propane gas torch, had been on the operating table less than three minutes when his heart stopped beating.

A surgeon immediately opened his chest and squeezed his heart like a sponge at the rate of 60 squeezes a minute.

The heart began to respond feebly in 40 minutes and the message was continued two hours 24 minutes.

During the crises, 14 pints of whole blood were transfused into Abbond and he also was given oxygen.

Dr. Eugene A. Gastos, Framingham surgeon, said of the operation:

"What we did was not remarkable. It has been done before in other hospitals. The miraculous thing is that all the experts are there to do it. At least 18 people who were indispensable were available for immediate action."

One Time Reporter For Sanford Herald Dies In Hospital

A former reporter for The Sanford Herald died Monday at Duke Hospital in Durham, N. C.

Actor-musician, Sam Byrd, while reporting for The Herald collected material for his book, Small Town South. He first gained national prominence in playing the part of Jester Loster in the original cast of "The Show Boat."

R. T. Milwee Tells Of Public Schools At Lions Luncheon

"Schools are big business," R. T. Milwee, Superintendent of Public Instruction in Seminole County, told the Sanford Lions Club at its noon luncheon meeting yesterday.

"Besides building the future citizenship of our county," Milwee told the local civic club. "The schools pour the amount of $77,500 per month into the economy of our county."

This amount, he said, is for instructive salaries alone and does not include the salaries of various personnel connected with our school system.

Milwee reported that there was an increase of 9.08% in enrollment in white schools and an 8% increase in the colored schools for the 1955-56 school year.

He also said that construction is being completed for new classrooms at several schools and beginning Jan. 1, 1956 there would be no doubt sessions in any of the county schools. The total enrollment of the county schools exceeded 8,500 pupils, he said.

Milwee stated that the new auditorium at the Pinecrest School will be completed and ready for use by Jan. 1. "This is the largest and most modern auditorium in the county," he said. The acoustics are such that any speaker or program being presented from the stage could be clearly heard in the back seats without the use of a public address system.

Superintendent of Schools Milwee urged that all parents and citizens visit these new school buildings and additions to our school system.

Kenneth Boyd Gives Notice Of Appeal

TAMPA (AP) — Kenneth Boyd, 30, of Miami, sentenced to five years by Judge L. A. Grayson in Criminal Court yesterday upon conviction of breaking and entering, has given notice of appeal.

It was in connection with this case that Judge Grayson peppered Dade County Sheriff Thomas J. Kelly last summer with complaints that Kelly was negligent in failing to serve a subpoena on the state's principal witness.

The witness, Shelley Kane, was located in New Orleans after it developed she had been in Tampa part of the period covered by Judge Grayson's complaints.

Miss Kane, a strip tease dancer, testified Boyd was a close friend and had told her he broke into the Perry Pipe and Salvage Co. here Kelly last summer with complaints that Kelly was negligent in failing to serve a subpoena on the state's principal witness.

Nick Fallier Is Given Opportunity

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — The Florida Game and Fresh Water Commission has hired as a wildlife officer a former employe of the state comptroller's office who was charged with stealing building materials.

Director A. D. Aldrich of the game agency said yesterday Nick Fallier had been hired from a merit system eligible list "to give him an opportunity to prove himself."

Fallier entered a plea of no defense last year in a charge of stealing building materials from houses under construction. A presentence investigation was made but he was never sentenced.

"We are quite familiar with Fallier's background," Aldrich said. "He came in and made a clean breast of things and we liked his attitude."

Aldrich said the game commission had decided Fallier is worth taking a chance on and is "ready to give him an opportunity to prove himself."

Utility Department Gets Pickup Truck

A new Ford pickup truck was delivered today to the City of Sanford for use in the Utility Department, said City Manager Warren E. Knowles.

In the usual city color, yellow, the truck has been painted with the city's seal and the designation of the department.

The truck is a six cylinder, half-ton Ford.

FSU Will Place Fragment Of Armor On Exhibit Soon

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Florida State University soon will place on exhibit a fragment of Spanish armor which is a possible relic of an early 16th century expedition to Florida.

A 10-inch long scrap was found on a beach of the Choctawhatchee Bay in northwest Florida by Van Ness Builer of Point Washington, Fla.

Dr. Hale G. Smith, head of the FSU department of anthropology, said the armor may have been brought to Florida by a Spanish expedition headed by Pampilio de Narvaez. The expedition was in the state at some time between 1514 and 1519.

The fragment has been given a date of no later than 1533. Harold L. Peterson of the National Park Service identified it as of probable Italian manufacture but said much Spanish armor of the period was produced in Italy or Germany.

Smith said the armor fragment, which might be part of a breast plate, "is the largest I have seen from Florida."

Blood Tests Scheduled

A partial list of places where residents of Seminole County can get their blood tested during the first two weeks of the County Health Unit's county-wide Blood Test Survey was made public by Dr. Terry Bird, County Health Officer, this morning.

Four special Health Unit blood testing teams will operate testing stations throughout the county from November 17 through December 2.

Although the four teams will operate at more than 50 stations in the various communities throughout the county during this period, an effort is being made to place one of these stations within easy reach of every one in the county.

"An effort is going to be made in Seminole County during the next three weeks to speak about Diabetes and Syphilis in the language that everyone will understand and not in the language of the doctor, because the man on the street does not have to know all that the doctor has to know about these diseases," said Dr. Bird.

"If after a blood test and further diagnosis shows a person needs treatment, this can be had either from his own doctor or he Health Unit Clinic," stated Dr. Bird. "The program is aimed at finding and bringing to treatment persons who may have either of these diseases and are not aware of it," he said.

Dr. Bird feels that this is not a departmental but a community program, for unless the community cooperates in the control of these diseases, the Health Unit can do very little. "This program will be continued on page two."

Municipal Parking Lot Nearly Finished

More than 150 cars will be able to park soon in the new municipal parking lot located just off Commercial Ave. where the soft ball field was formerly situated.

Limerock is being placed on the lot now, said City Manager Warren E. Knowles, and should be completed with this part of the foundation possibly tomorrow. "We are planning on having the area graded by tomorrow night so that it can possibly be opened to traffic temporarily, Friday morning."

"In case of rain," said Knowles, "we would suggest that motorists not use the lot until it is fully completed since the limerock will be cracked everywhere."

The lot will have 22 foot roadways between the car lanes with 12 foot parking stalls allowing 3 feet between cars. "This will allow ten cars to open their doors wide and not bump into one another," said Knowles.

The old parking lot, combined with the new area, will park 235 cars. Entrances will be from the south end of the lot and the exit on Seminole Boulevard.

This is possibly the largest municipal parking lot in Central Florida, allowing shoppers and business people to park in wide stalls and as long as they wish in stay in order to complete their shopping or complete their working day.

Traffic Safety Report Reviewed By Patrolman

The annual inventory of traffic safety activities analysis report for 1954 was given last night at the Sanford City Hall when Trooper Chuck Saunders of the Florida Highway Patrol reviewed the lengths and complete report.

Prepared by the National Safety Council, the analysis covered every phase of the traffic program in Sanford for the 12-month period of 1954.

Before City Officials, members of the Sanford Police Department, and citizens interested in the safety program of the city, Trooper Saunders made the annual report pointing out both the good accomplishments of the city's safety record, and the corrections needed to improve the city's record.

Stressing mainly the recommendations of the National Safety Council, Trooper Saunders said that it is suggested that a program be initiated with coordinated official action and public support to secure more complete reporting of traffic accidents.

The analysis recommended that a traffic engineering unit be established, preferably under the direction of the department of public works, the city engineer or some member of his staff, to perform the functions of traffic engineering.

Covering the sections devoted to police traffic supervision, traffic control, school traffic safety education, public safety education, and safety organization were included in the lengthy and complete analysis of the city's safety and traffic needs.

Brazil's 5-Day-Old Polity Might Be Faced With Crisis

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Brazil's five-day-old government was faced with a possible new crisis today when cafe Filho may return from sick leave and try to take back his old job as president.

Close friends said he is so far recovered from his heart attack Nov. 3 he may be ready to resume the presidency as early as Nov. 18. Others said he may wait till later.

Under the constitution, he is entitled to end his sick leave and take back the office when he chooses, but if and when he does he will run into the opposition of the same military forces that ousted his temporary successor Carlos de Luz, in a coup last Thursday.

Luz was ousted because, his opponents charged, he and his associates planned a coup to prevent President-elect Juscelino Kubitschek from assuming office Jan. 31. These opponents now charge Cafe Filho feels the same way as Luz.

The gravity of the situation was reflected in the publication of a front page editorial in the influential morning newspaper Correio da Manhã demanding Cafe Filho resign or be impeached. The paper suggested that as an alternative Cafe Filho could continue on sick leave and stay under his oxygen tent until his term expires in January.

Pressure Of Modern Day Education Big

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — The pressure of modern day education is so great that it's cutting heavily into the time of school principals whose big job is obtaining improvement in instruction.

State School Supt. Thomas D. Bailey told supervising principals of the Florida Education Assn. yesterday that he felt instruction plans are good but regardless of how well trained teachers may be, no one can take the principal's place in supervising instruction.

Pressures on the principal include such things as making up budgets, public relations and extra-curricular activities, Bailey explained.

Such specialized tasks have forced the principal to delegate to others the improvement of instruction "which is the most important job," Bailey said.

"If we can't find time to work with our facilities I don't know what good can be accomplished for the children. The improvement of instruction is no good unless the principal is a party to it."

Company Is Told To Discontinue Use Of Pull Card Device

WASHINGTON (AP) — A money-back guarantee the Federal Trade Commission ruled today, is no defense to a charge of promoting the sale of merchandise through a lottery.

As a result, it ordered that the City Sales Co. of New York City, discontinuing supplying its agents and distributors "pull cards" to aid in the sale of jewelry, eyeglasses and similar products.

The company's "pull card" device, the commission said, listed 40 items of merchandise ranging in price from 16 to 88 cents. Each tab on the card, when pulled, revealed the name and price of one of the items, which the buyer then was to purchase.

Some of the merchandise was worth more than the price on the tab, some less, but the commission said, induced purchasers to try their luck for the bargain items.

And even though the company gave the purchaser the privilege of returning the article if he was not satisfied, the commission said that does not "remove the element of chance which alone determines the item of merchandise to be received."

The company had argued that the notice to purchasers that they need not buy the merchandise listed on the tabs had removed one of the essential elements of lottery, that of chance.

Services Are Held For Mrs. Marsh

Municipal Parking Lot Nearly Finished

More than 150 cars will be able to park soon in the new municipal parking lot located just off Commercial Ave. where the soft ball field was formerly situated.

Limerock is being placed on the lot now, said City Manager Warren E. Knowles, and should be completed with this part of the foundation possibly tomorrow. "We are planning on having the area graded by tomorrow night so that it can possibly be opened to traffic temporarily, Friday morning."

"In case of rain," said Knowles, "we would suggest that motorists not use the lot until it is fully completed since the limerock will be cracked everywhere."

The lot will have 22 foot roadways between the car lanes with 12 foot parking stalls allowing 3 feet between cars. "This will allow ten cars to open their doors wide and not bump into one another," said Knowles.

The old parking lot, combined with the new area, will park 235 cars. Entrances will be from the south end of the lot and the exit on Seminole Boulevard.

This is possibly the largest municipal parking lot in Central Florida, allowing shoppers and business people to park in wide stalls and as long as they wish in stay in order to complete their shopping or complete their working day.

Pressure Of Modern Day Education Big

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — The pressure of modern day education is so great that it's cutting heavily into the time of school principals whose big job is obtaining improvement in instruction.

State School Supt. Thomas D. Bailey told supervising principals of the Florida Education Assn. yesterday that he felt instruction plans are good but regardless of how well trained teachers may be, no one can take the principal's place in supervising instruction.

Pressures on the principal include such things as making up budgets, public relations and extra-curricular activities, Bailey explained.

Such specialized tasks have forced the principal to delegate to others the improvement of instruction "which is the most important job," Bailey said.

"If we can't find time to work with our facilities I don't know what good can be accomplished for the children. The improvement of instruction is no good unless the principal is a party to it."
