Police nab suspect at gunpoint

Smith a one-man crime wave; from burglaries to carjacking

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

SANFORD — A Maitland man, arrested a week ago on burglary charges and wanted in connection with other house burglaries in Maitland and Seminole County was apprehended at gunpoint Monday after a weekend that included his involvement in a carjacking and a wrestling match with a Casselberry homeowner.

At about 1 p.m. Sunday afternoon, Lawrence Henyezc of Winter Park was fueling his mini-van at a 7-Eleven on U.S. Highway 17-92 and O'Brien Road. Henyezc's wife and two children were inside the vehicle when Christopher Smith, the burglary suspect showed up on the scene with Seminole County deputies in pursuit.

After a physical struggle with Henyezc, Smith was able to commandeer the vehicle and drive a short distance before he crashed it into a light pole, injuring two of the Henyezc family members. Mrs. Henyezc suffered a broken ankle and one of the children received a bruised nose in the crash. Smith then jumped out of the vehicle and scrambled over a fence to elude police.

Seminole County deputies set up a perimeter but could not locate him. Casselberry homeowner David Lovett, Jaffa Drive, spotted Smith wandering the neighborhood clad in only shorts and socks shortly after 7 a.m. and called 911.

Smith had apparently spent the night in the garage of another Casselberry resident, making a makeshift bed and helping himself to food from a freezer.

A second neighborhood resident, Jon Bolander, 201 Temple Avenue, spotted

Lengthy agenda faces Longwood commission

Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Longwood city commissioners face a lengthy meeting tonight following the Labor Day weekend.

The commission normally meets on Monday but the meeting was rescheduled at 7 p.m. tonight because of the holiday.

Among agenda items up for discussion is a proclamation to include 13 original charter amendments on the fall ballot as a result of a successful citizen's petition drive. In all the board will vote on authorizing ballot language for a total of 21 amendments to go before Longwood voters on Nov. 2.

The charter initiatives are certain to become campaign issues for three incumbents and any challengers. Longwood's qualifying period for the fall election began Friday and ends on Sept. 10. Voters will decide on commission seats in District 1 currently held by incumbent Rusty Miles, District 2 currently held by incumbent Dan Anderson, and District 4 currently held by Annamarie Vacca. All three have publicly stated they intend to seek reelection.

As of the first day of qualifying only two official challengers have emerged. Longwood businessman Butch Bundy will challenge Vacca in School officials still must address space concerns at Crooms Academy

By Bill Kerns
Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Seminole County School Board is no longer considering a proposal to convert Crooms Academy into an elementary school in time for the 2001 school year.

However, debate over the school is not finished.

Superintendent Paul Hagerty on Friday removed the proposal to convert Crooms into an elementary school from options the board will consider in order to ease overcrowding in Northwest Seminole County elementary schools. Crooms will remain an alternative school for students in grades 6 through 12.

However, there are 20 portables on the Crooms campus, and the portables will not meet state portable standards that will take effect in July of 2001. The existing capacity at Crooms Academy, without counting the portables, is for 680 students.

"I'm very concerned that we still need to address the future needs of Crooms," said board member Diane Bauer. "Crooms has a lot of portables that won't meet new standards, and that's going to be an issue. We're going to have to address it soon. We can't wait five to six years down the road."

Parents attending town meetings to discuss the future of Crooms Academy said they want the alternative school to remain as it is, with the addition of vocational and technical training courses.

"We will look at adding to the Crooms programs," said board member Jeanne Morris.

Holiday traffic sweep results in 90 citations

Multi-agency effort aimed at removing drunk-drivers from the streets

By Joe DeSantis
Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A Friday night traffic sweep, concentrated in the Longwood area as the Labor Day weekend unfolded, netted a total of 90 traffic citations issued to motorists.

Virtually every municipal police agency in Seminole County joined the Seminole County Sheriff's department, Florida Highway Patrol, and Seminole County Traffic Engineering department in saturation patrolling designed to strictly enforce a zero-tolerance policy aimed at getting drunk and drug-impaired drivers off the road. Authorities were also on the lookout for improperly registered vehicles, improper equipment and illegal drivers.

During the sweep, which took place primarily in Longwood, 90 traffic citations were handed out to drivers for unsafe equipment, lack of child restraint seats and other assorted violations.

The police agencies combined to arrest 10 drivers on charges of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. Another five motorists were arrested on various drug charges. Two others drivers were picked up on outstanding warrants and another was arrested for operating a motor vehicle on a revoked or suspended license.

Authorities finished the sweep by towing 11 vehicles.

The saturation sweeps are conducted periodically throughout Seminole County.

Throw out the umps

A long time ago when boys played baseball for the fun of it - before Little League - there was no need for umpires. A kid batted until he hit the ball or swung and missed a strike three. No one walked.

"Give me something to hit, pitcher" - walks are for sissies. Get it over, bobo, or your arm will fall off.

Is there anything as boring as seeing a batter take ball four - especially an intentional ball four?

As soon as baseball does away with the walk, it may as well do away with umpires. Walks and umpires cause four-hour games. No one pays to see walks and umpires. Eliminate 'em.

"Swing, batter, swing" - batters won't be able to take good pitches because no one is calling them, either. If they do, they'll forfeit their pensions.

Another thing - those whiny

Little Leaguers, who cry when they're called out on strikes, need to grow up. Baseball players don't cry. Doing away with umpires and called third strikes will uproot the cry-babies.

Russ White

You've probably heard that a couple dozen major-league umpires lost their jobs. They were given an intentional walk for complaining too much. What a shame, no one likes the replacement umps. Umpires should never be allowed to strike. Never again hold the game up on or off the field. If they need to be involved in arguments and controversy, give them school board jobs. Get them off the field.

Bill Klem was such a good umpire, he was called the "Great Arbitrator." There's no record of how many balls and strikes The Great Arbitrator called. Baseball doesn't keep umpire stats. So why keep the umps.

The most entertaining ump to work in the bigs was Emmett Ashford. He was also the first Afro American ump. Ashford was good show. No one liked his calls but they loved the way he made them. Baseball got rid of him, of course.

Umpire Ron Luciano had fun with his job - not so much on the field but in writing best-selling books about his experiences. One of the books was called, "The Umpire Strikes Back." Richie Phillips, the union boss who led the big-league umpires off-base, isn't very popular these days. Many umps are asking themselves why they listened to Richie Phillips. They're out of work. Their ball-strike indicators aren't of much use in the real world.

The advice here is to keep those whisk brooms handy, guys.

Russ White's column appears Tuesday through Saturday in the Seminole Herald.

Don't forget to practice safety when grilling

By Richard H. Middleton, Jr.
Special to the Herald

For many, the first few weeks of September are Summer's last hurrah, and a popular time for friends and family to gather for a barbecue. With that in mind, it's imperative for adults to set a good example early on for children regarding grilling safety and the basics of safe food handling.

Both charcoal and gas grills pose safety hazards, but knowledgeable use can make the difference between an enjoyable picnic and a perilous one. The word "grilling," naturally, makes one think about fire. Flames and glowing coals are visible elements, so we tend to be mindful of them.

However, we cannot forget about a potentially deadly side effect of grilling — carbon monoxide. When burned, charcoal produces carbon monoxide, a colorless, odorless gas that can reach toxic levels in areas without sufficient ventilation.

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety

Commission (CPSC), each year charcoal grills cause about 20 deaths and more than 300 emergency room treated injuries from carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning. To reduce CO poisonings, the CPSC recommends:

- Don't burn charcoal inside your house, vehicle, tent or camper.
- Don't use charcoal indoors, no matter how much ventilation is provided.
- Don't store the grill indoors with freshly used coals. Charcoal continues to produce CO until the coals are completely extinguished.

Each year, gas grill use causes more than 500 fires. Gas grill fires and explosions injure about 20 people annually. According to the CPSC, these fires and explosions occur when people use a grill that has been unused for some time, or just after they've refilled and reattached the grill's gas container. To reduce risk, The CPSC recommends:

- Check tubes that lead into the burner for blockage. Use a pipe cleaner or wire to push insects, spiders or food through to the main part of the burner.
- Check hoses for cracks, brittleness and holes. Tubes should not be sharply bent.
- Move gas hoses far from hot surfaces and dripping hot grease, or install a heat shield over them.

• Replace scratched and nicked connectors — they will eventually leak gas.

• Keep lighted cigarette, matches and flames away from a leaking grill.

• Use the grill at least 10 feet away from any building. Never use it indoors, in a garage, carport, or porch, or under a surface that can catch fire.

• Keep the grill top open when lighting.

• Never try to repair the tank valve or the appliance yourself.

It is also imperative to be equally careful when preparing and cooking food. Foodborne illness occurs more frequently in warmer weather. According to the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), data on the incidence of foodborne diseases from 1996-1998 show an increase in laboratory-confirmed infections caused by E. coli, Campylobacter and Salmonella during the Summer months. Bacteria are literally everywhere — in the soil, air, water, people and animals — and summertime heat means faster bacteria growth. We can prevent foodborne illness by keeping a few simple rules in mind: Cleanliness, separation and temperature.

According to FSIS, unwashed hands are a prime cause of foodborne illness. Wash up with hot, soapy water after using the bathroom, changing diapers and handling pets. If you're eating away from home, pack wet, disposable washcloths and paper towels for cleaning hands and surfaces.

If you've carried out raw meat, poultry or fish on a platter for grilling, once you've emptied the platter, wash it thoroughly before reusing. The same goes for utensils and cutting boards — if they have touched raw foods, wash them before re-using for cooked foods.

Most importantly, make sure you are cooking everything completely. It's a good idea to invest in a meat thermometer, and use it. The FSIS recommends:

• Cook hamburger and other ground meats to an internal temperature of 160 degrees F (ground poultry to 165 degrees F).

• Cook steaks and roasts that have been tenderized, boned, rolled, etc., to an internal temperature of at least 160 degrees F.

• Cook whole steaks and roasts to 145 degrees F for medium rare; whole poultry to 180 degrees F in the thigh; and breast meat to 170 degrees F.

The good news is that people seldom get sick from contaminated food because most people have healthy immune systems. However, children, elderly people and those who have compromised immune systems are typically at higher risk if contamination is present. It is reassuring to know we can help keep our families and friends safe by taking a few crucial extra steps, even during leisure time activities.

District 4. Bundy is a member of the city's Codes Enforcement Board and served this past year as a member of the Charter Review Committee that recommended 13 changes to Longwood's governing document.

John Mango will challenge Miles in District 1. Mango works for Island Pride in Longwood, a company specializing in landscaping, fencing, and maintenance. He previously served on Longwood's Comprehensive plan committee and is vice-chairman of the Codes Enforcement Board.

Commissioners will also nominate three people to fill vacancies on the Codes Enforcement Board and another to the city's Business Advisory Board.

City administrator John Drago is expected to provide the board with a status report on controversy dealing with the eligibility of commissioners to be under the city's health insurance plan.

Drago is also expected to provide the board with a status report on a lake maintenance contract with Aquatic Biologists. With little notice, Aquatic Biologist informed the city two weeks ago that it was no longer interested in providing maintenance for controversial Mudd Lake. That move prompted some commissioners to suggest the city might shop other contracts it has with Aquatic Biologists around.

Drago will also recommend to the board a title reading or Ordinance 99-1493, which fixes the rate of ad valorem taxation for the fiscal year budget commencing Oct. 1 and ending Sept. 30, 2000 at 5.0601. That figure represents $5.06 for each $1,000 of assessed property value and reflects no increase, the seventh straight year tax millage rates have remained stable in Longwood.

The board will also consider Ordinance 99-1494 which establishes revenues, expenditures, and fund balances for the next fiscal budget.

Commissioners will also undertake a title reading of Ordinance 99-1495 which amends the Pay and Classification Plan.

At the commission's last regular meeting three weeks ago, the board voted unanimously to increase the proposed budget by $69,000 to bring 29 employees at the lowest end of a county-wide comparison pay scale up to competitive levels.

Commissioners also voted to approve the hiring of two new police officers and three fire-fighter/paramedics pending final budget approval.

The board is also expected to approve several vendor contracts for city services, and will pass a proclamation declaring Oct. 16 as Longwood's Inclusion Day. Tony Tizzio is expected to accept the proclamation on behalf of the Seminole County Disability Advisory Council.

Smith scaling a fence moments later while he was feeding his baby. Bolander ran Smith down and tackled him in the street, but after a brief struggle Smith broke away. Moments later a Seminole County deputy arrested Smith at gunpoint.

Smith, 33, was arrested Aug. 27 as a suspect in a string of burglaries to occupied dwellings in Maitland and South Seminole County. Maitland police made the arrest and booked him into the Orange County jail.

Before Seminole County authorities could file additional burglary charges against him, Smith bonded out of Orange County jail on Aug. 29. Seminole County deputies believe that since he bonded out, he's been involved in nine more residential burglaries in the Maitland and Seminole County areas.

During the past few burglaries Smith has allegedly worn a bandanna over his face, and talks to his victims, telling him he wants money and won't hurt them if they cooperate and promise not to call the police.

He has normally gained entrance to the dwellings by cutting screen doors to gain access. He's also been known to cut exterior telephone lines.

Crooms

Parents and alumni of Crooms Academy have been organizing to oppose the proposal. Parents said the small classes and individual attention available at the school of 400 middle and high school students offer a positive alternative to larger schools.

"Part of their anger was the violation of trust," Bauer said.

Tina Moore-Juska, who's daughter Crystil is an 8th grade honor student at Crooms Academy, said that the fight to save Crooms may be what was needed to raise activity in the PTA.

"This may be the catalyst to make this work, and to get Crooms very well known," Moore-Juska said.

Bauer said she is hopeful that Crooms Academy parents will remain active, and attend a School Advisory Council training session with district staff on Sept. 23 at 7 p.m. in the school board's Educational Support Center.

"The more knowledge you gain the better you will be able to serve your school," Bauer said. "Something good can come of this. When people come together in a situation like this, they usually stay together."

Alumni and black community leaders, including the Seminole County branch of the NAACP, said the former all-black high school is an important part of the community's heritage.

The school board will consider other options to provide additional student capacity, including the construction of a primary learning center at Wilson Elementary and a primary learning center on the Master's Cove property next to Millennium Middle School. The Master's Cove property would be an annex to Wicklow Elementary School.

The learning centers would serve 500 students in total. In addition, the board will consider expanding the Wicklow annex into a full elementary school in five years, serving another 500 students.

The board will also consider building a new elementary school in the Sanford-Lake Mary area, then building a primary learning center at Wilson Elementary School.

Hagerty said that a decision needs to be made on how to increase elementary school capacity in the Northwest section of the county by Sept. 28, in order to meet a deadline for submitting a proposal to the Department of Education.

There is funding in the board's five-year plan for two elementary schools to be built in Seminole County, said Dianne Kramer, director of facilities and planning.

The school board will still hold a Sept. 14 work session to discuss available options to expand elementary school capacity in the area. However, changes to Crooms Academy are not scheduled to be discussed.

WIN AT BRIDGE

Another brace of possibilities

By Phillip Alder

Yesterday's deal featured two ways to make a six-spade contract, depending upon the opening lead. Well, someone once claimed that all good things come in twos, so here is another, from the 1975 Desauville Festival. How would you declare six spades against the opening lead of either the club two or the diamond 10?

In this auction, North bid aggressively, first upgrading his hand to two clubs, deeming it worth 33 points. Then, after supporting spades and hearing his partner cue-bid the heart ace, he took control with Blackwood.

Dense Alex Koitcheff displayed that six spades is easy to make after a club lead. He won with dummy's ace, drew trumps, cashed three rounds of hearts, discarding his last club, and ruffed the club six in hand. Now a diamond to dummy's six (or covering West's 10 with the queen) endplayed East. He had either to lead back into dummy's remaining diamond tenace or to concede a ruff-and-discard.

Martin Hoffman, an Englishman who has lived in Florida for a few years, received the diamond 10 lead. He finessed the queen, losing to East's king. Back came the club king. Hoffman won with dummy's ace, drew trumps, and cashed the three hearts discarding a diamond from hand. Declarer played off the diamond ace, then called for the diamond nine. If East had played low, Hoffman was going to discard his club loser. Yet when East covered with the jack, declarer ruffed, played a trump to dummy, and threw his last club on the established diamond six. Watch the spots!

ASK DR. GOTT

Do Big Macs now mean big trouble later?

DEAR DR. GOTT: A high-fat, fast-food diet is popular among young people. Does such a diet lead to health consequences in adulthood?

DEAR READER: In 1953, researchers reported the autopsy findings of young servicemen killed during the Korean conflict. A significant proportion of these late adolescents had fatty streaks lining their arteries. Fatty streaks are the initial development in the chain of events leading to arteriosclerosis, strokes and heart attacks.

In the intervening 45 years, there have been few large studies of this phenomenon. Now, however, in the Journal of the American Medical Association (Feb. 24, 1999) scientists from several medical centers reported on almost 3,000 white and black men and women, ages 15 to 34, who died of accidents, suicides or homicides. The results were shocking. At autopsy, more than half the subjects had fatty streaks in a major coronary artery; ALL the young people had significant lesions in their aortas, the major artery carrying blood from the heart. The streaks were more prominent in smokers, in the presence of elevated blood cholesterol levels, in hypertension, in obesity and in diabetes. In other words, the same risk factors were evident in healthy young people as in older adults. Thus, the researchers concluded, arteriosclerosis begins in youth and increases rapidly in early middle-age. The scientists pleaded for a role of primary prevention in childhood and adolescence.

Clearly, attention must be paid to the diets our children consume. Young people customarily view themselves as invincible when considering diseases such as stroke and heart attack. However, food that is high in saturated fats is almost certainly setting the stage for the serious problems of arteriosclerosis in mid-life and beyond. Moreover, those youngsters who are raised on unhealthy diets become accustomed to them; their tastes become dangerously modified. As we all know, such eating habits are difficult to break.

DR. GOTT

more selectively. When one considers the enormous cost of treating the ravages of premature arteriosclerosis, this is certainly an instance where an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Eating Right for a Healthy Heart." Other readers who would like a copy should send $3 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10154. Be sure to mention the title.

Am I suggesting that fast-food burgers, fries and ice cream be banned for children? Of course not. But the experts urge that such high-fat foods be consumed much less regularly and that parents take responsibility for teaching their children how to eat

Learning about the Florida Master Gardener Program

Master Gardeners are adult volunteers trained by the County Extension Service personnel and University of Florida staff. The program is being offered in 43 out of Florida's 67 Counties and their mission is to educate and provide research-based information to Floridians about gardening.

In a single year, more than 1,600 Florida Master Gardeners donated over 125,000 hours teaching citizens how to create and maintain sustainable plant and landscape communities.

Seminole County Master Gardeners: The Volunteer Master Gardener program has been in existence for approximately 17 years in Seminole County. During that time, volunteers have donated thousands of hours of answering phone questions on lawns, plants, and insects; assist in plant clinics; conduct soil tests for pH; man information booths at fairs; sponsor plant sales; do program presentations for garden clubs, Homeowner's Associations, and school children.

All Master gardeners attend an intense 50-75 hours of training that covers all aspects of gardening, including subjects such as soil science, plant nutrition, fertilizers, vegetables, fruit trees, ornamental herbs, and plant pest and disease management.

Volunteers also receive a basic training in computers to give them access to the latest information available through the use of computer technology. Master Gardeners are on duty every day from 9 a.m.-12:00 noon, and 1:00 p.m.-4:00 p.m. to answer questions and help with problems you may be experiencing in your landscape or garden.

The Master gardener program is under the guidance of the Seminole County Urban Horticulturist.

New Master Gardener Training: There will be a new Master gardener multi-county training class starting October 12, 1999, from 9:30 a.m.-4:00 p.m. and continuing every Tuesday for 15 weeks. The graduation ceremony is scheduled for February 8.

Classes will rotate between Orange, Seminole and Osceola Counties. If you are interested in becoming a Master Gardener, stop by and pick up an application, or give us a call and we will mail you one. We will start interviewing applicants October 5-7, and you must have an application on file to be considered. If you are interested in our Master Gardener training please don't delay, we have a limited number of class spaces. Our address is: 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, FL 32773. Our telephone number is (407) 665-5550 and our FAX number is (407) 665-5563.

All Seminole County Cooperative Extension Services are open to all regardless of race, color, sex, handicap, or national origin.

At Ferrer is Seminole County Urban Horticulturist. Inquiries may be directed to him at the Cooperative Extension Service, 250 W. County Home Road, Sanford, FL 32773 or phone 325-5550, Ext. 5555.

Hosts struggle to make drop-in guests drop out

DEAR ABBY: My family attends a local church, and we have made many friends within this congregation. However, there is one family in this congregation who wears out the welcome mat at our home, and I don't know how to handle it without making enemies.

For Memorial Day, we were having a picnic in our back yard with some friends. "Mr. Uninvited" drove by and, seeing that we had guests, "stopped in" and invited himself for dinner after asking, "What do you have for me to drink?" When a beer was offered, he responded, "Oh, this cheap brand — don't you have anything else?"

It upsets me that he has the nerve to invite himself when it is obvious that we're having company and he was not invited. I would never do that to him. Then, the insults we hear if we're serving only hamburgers and hot dogs and not having surf and turf, really put the icing on the cake. He always comes "empty-handed," which does not improve the situation.

This is a family of four. The father and son are the worst offenders. They are a middle-class family, like us, so it's not a case of "the won't eat tonight if I don't feed him." In addition, they have never once invited us to their home.

I have on several occasions made remarks, trying to drop the hint that they are not welcome to barge into my home on all occasions, but he just doesn't "get it." I don't want to make an enemy, but I cannot tolerate his rudeness anymore. Any suggestions?

NEEDS HELP WITH THE VISITORS

DEAR NEEDS HELP: I've often said, "If people take advantage of you once, shame on them — if it happens more than once, shame on you."

You are being impudently upon, and it will continue until you take a firm stand. The next time the freeloader drops by when you are entertaining, say: "It's not convenient to have you visit us now. We'll see you another time."

If it costs you a friendship, you haven't lost much.

DEAR ABBY: I was very disappointed in the advice you gave "Brenha" in Late For Me, II. You advised her to put a rubber band around her wrist and snap it each time she thought about her boyfriend because the pain inflicted on her wrist would distract her from the pain in her heart.

Abby, I work with a population of people who use this approach to the pain in their lives. They cut on themselves to take away their mental pain. It becomes very addictive and they cannot stop doing it.

A snap of a rubber band to remove the other pain is alarmingly close. It can lead to further self-abuse or mutilation.

Please offer the woman better advice: to take a long walk, deep breathe, hot baths, or to count the many things she has to be thankful for!

BRENDA HENDERSON, COEVALLE, ORE., MENTAL HEALTH ASSOCIATION

DEAR BRENDA: Although the rubber band technique is a very old one for behavior modification, the letters I have received from you and several people who identified themselves as "outlets" were eye-openers. While the majority of people are not masochistic, in the future I'll recommend positive, rather than negative, reinforcement.

DEAR ABBY: I recently watched a country music award given to two men. The first to speak hogged the mike, gabbed about his sick child at home, thanked everyone in the music business and then invited his partner to speak. As the other man approached the mike, the first remembered he hadn't thanked his wife, shouldered his way back in and droned on about how many years they had been together, yadda-yadda-yadda.

The partner looked sad as the music came up and they went to commercial. I felt angry that he wasn't acknowledged and didn't get to say a word or two. It happens so often, I wanted to comment.

At every Oscar, Emmy, Grammy, etc., award ceremony, every double or triple award has one windbag who grabs the mike, tells his kids to go to bed and thanks everyone from his kindergarten teacher to his mailman while the others wait patiently until the allotted time runs out. It hurts to see the pained expressions on the faces of the partners whose finest hour is ruined by a selfish, egotistical microphone hog.

Since we know we can't teach them to be considerate and to share, maybe the awards committee could make new rules that would stifle the selfish windbags and eliminate those endlessly long programs. What do you think?
RUTH W., VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.

DEAR RUTH: Take a bow. You deserve a standing ovation for saying what a great many members of a captive audience have long been thinking. In the days of vaudeville, a long-handled hook was used to remove lingering performers from the stage.

The Way We Were

Remembering some of the early newspapers in Sanford

Again we turn to Mary Leffer Strong's book "The Story of Sanford on the St. John's River in Florida" for her memories of Sanford's early newspapers. Remember that some of her remembrances may not be factual, but she did try to be so through many references.

The South Florida Journal
In the 1870's, a Mr. Robinson was publishing a paper called the South Florida Journal and the printing office was located on the upper floor of the building, which stood on the northwest corner of First Street and Park Avenue.

In 1877, Mr. Ray and Mr. Osborne (brothers-in-law) purchased the paper and continued publication in the same location. At one time Mr. Ray and Mr. Whitner operated a grocery store on the first floor.

The Sanford Journal and The Mascott

About 1880, Mr. J.J. Harris grandfather of F.E. Roumillat, Jr.) moved his family to town from Tusawilla on Lake Jessup and began publishing The Sanford Journal, a weekly paper. He was assisted by a daughter who later became Mrs. M.H. Fowler, and a young English girl, Allie Trafford, who set the type.

When Dr. Harris was elected mayor, he leased the paper to Mrs. Lucy Vanever. When her lease expired, Dr. Harris again took over its management and with the assistance of Mr. E.W. Peabody, edited the paper as a daily.

The Florida Advocate, organ of Methodism in Florida, was for a time printed on the Journal press.

About this time, Mr. J.D. Smith and his son Artie began publishing The Mascott. They rented offices in a building on the west of Sanford Avenue between First and Second Streets from Mr. J.E. Spencer. The rent was $15 a month; $7.50 in cash and $7.50 in advertising. They owned no machinery so it was printed on the Journal's press. This paper lasted less than a year and Smith and son took positions with Harris and Peabody of the Sanford Journal.

The Way We Were

The Sanford Journal went on the rocks soon afterwards and the press was sold to a company in Tampa. It was of the cylinder type known as Campbell. The company of Tampa was unable to assemble it and Artie Smith was sent down to do the work. Since he was a meek boy and small for his age, they looked him over and said that they had sent for a man, not a boy. However, Artie had the machinery in running order in a couple of days and returned home with $15,000 in his pockets and all expenses paid.

The South Florida Argus

In 1887, Mr. Adolphus Edwards began the publication of the South Florida Argus, a Republican organ. It was printed in the Old Fort Road Building on First Street; the above mentioned Sanford Journal, a Democratic paper, was located next door in the same building.

Mr. Edwards became the local postmaster later, so he ceased publication of his newspaper.

When gold was discovered in Alaska, Mr. Edwards, Mr. Charley Beck (father of Jay and Barney), Eugene Miller and others traveled to the gold fields never to return. Mr. Beck was killed in the historic avalanche of April 1898 and Mr. Edwards died the next year in Seattle of pneumonia. Mr. Miller remained in the west for the remainder of his life.

The Gate City Chronicle

Mr. Thomas J. Appleyard, who had moved here from Oakland, Fla., began publishing the Gate City Chronicle about 1892. It occupied the building on Palmetto Avenue known as the Labor Temple. The newspaper offices were on the first floor and the family occupied the rooms above. Mr. Appleyard soon secured the services of Miss Allie Trafford and Artie Smith, one to set the type and one to work the press.

Mr. Appleyard was an ardent politician and attended state and national meetings frequently. In his absence, his daughter Annie, Miss Allie and Artie got the paper printed.

Business firms liked to pay for ads with merchandise, but sometimes cash was needed. Annie, who did the collecting, would sometimes see the proprietor disappearing out the back door as she came in the front.

The Chronicle was issued weekly and did not subscribe to the Associated Press. During the Spanish American War, the Chronicle would circulate a small sheet in the afternoons containing the war news which they obtained from that morning's Jacksonville Times Union.

After some years, Mr. Appleyard moved to Tallahassee where he became State Printer.

Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Backer from Kentucky bought the Chronicle and continued its publication. After Mr. Backer's death, his wife and sons carried on, moving across the street next to the fire station. When Mrs. Backer remarried, she sold the equipment to Mr. Robert J. Holly.

The Sanford Herald
Mr. P.M. Elder built a building on Magnolia Avenue for Mr. Holly who moved the Chronicle there and changed its name to The Sanford Herald.

Mr. W.M. Haynes, Mr. Zeb Ratliff and Mr. O.D. Farrell became associates of Mr. Holly. The first issue, Aug. 23, 1908, See Newspaper, Page 8A

Jerry Lewis overcomes meningitis to push telethon to $53.1 million

LOS ANGELES — Jerry Lewis opened his 34th annual Labor Day Telethon singing "Sitting on Top of the World," partnered with Martin Short to create an extraordinary comedic moment with a "No Business Like Show Business" duet, had fun being politically incorrect with Bill Maher, and soloed with "They All Laughed". Then, double vision, debilitating head pain and blood pressure elevation caused by the viral meningitis he's been fighting since Aug. 1 forced him to leave the stage.

Thanks to Telethon anchor Ed McMahon, as well as Telethon cohorts Jann Carl, Cynthia Garrett, Norm Crosby and Walter Anderson, Jerry's inability to continue after completing the first three hours of the Labor Day tradition he initiated in 1966 progressed seamlessly. Jerry returned at 11 a.m. (PDT) to close the last four hours of the 21 1/2-hour broadcast reaching some 75 million television viewers. The Telethon raised a record $53.1 million ($53,116,417) in pledges and contributions. It was broadcast by some 200 television stations, as well as Webcast live on the Internet as multilingual programming in English, Spanish, and Japanese, Sept. 5-6.

Lewis conducted the Young Musicians Foundation orchestra in a spirited rendition of "Eine Kleine Nacht Musik" by Mozart. He treated the audience by performing some of his great physical comedy routines. He made several passionate appeals for public support, and closed the show with his signature song "You'll Never Walk Alone."

"I'm thrilled and grateful for the support of our viewers, and filled with hope that the dollars we've raised will translate into new research breakthroughs to help us conquer the muscle-wasting diseases," said Lewis, MDA national chairman and Telethon star.

"Just this week MDA investigators at Ohio State University and the University of Pennsylvania began the world's first gene therapy safety trial for muscular dystrophy. It could very well be the payoff we've all been working so hard to achieve, and Telethon contributions will help make this dream a reality."

Lewis praised the many celebrities who appeared with him on the broadcast. "They're the best of the best, and they're more than happy to lend their talents in support of MDA's urgent cause," he said.

Many performers appeared live with Lewis at CBS Television City in Hollywood, while others appeared courtesy of satellite feeds and taped segments from New York, Las Vegas, Chicago and elsewhere. Featured celebrities included LeAnn Rimes, Jason Alexander, Celine Dion, Frank Sinatra Jr., Three Dog Night, Maureen McGovern, Monica Mancini, and Charo. Special VH-1 segments featured such performers as Sheryl Crow, Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers, Mariah Carey, Dave Matthews, Tina Turner, the Goo Goo Dolls, Cyndi Lauper and Sugar Ray.

The Telethon also featured historical highlights including Jerry Lewis performing with Johnny Carson, Robert Goulet, Mel Torme, Sammy Davis Jr., Whoopi Goldberg, Robin Williams, Billy Crystal, Tony Bennett and the historic Dean Martin/Jerry Lewis reunion that Frank Sinatra orchestrated in 1976.

This year, the Telethon became the world's first live multilingual Internet event, as streaming video in English, Spanish and Japanese, the three most common languages of the Web. CyraCom International provided the United Nation's-style translations, and the streaming audio and video were courtesy of RealNetworks' Real Broadcast Network.

"Who could have predicted a decade ago that people in Japan, New Zealand, Venezuela and dozens of other nations would be able not only to access our Telethon live via home computers, but also to hear it in their own languages?" Lewis said. "This weekend, that's exactly what happened."

Along with the entertainment, the broadcast featured profiles about families fighting progressive muscle-wasting disorders, as well as reports on the status of MDA-funded research into gene therapy and other potential treatment methods to combat these diseases.

MDA is a voluntary health agency working to defeat 40 neuromuscular diseases through programs of worldwide research, comprehensive services, and far-reaching professional and public health education. The Association's programs are funded almost entirely by individual private contributors.

For information about MDA, and/or referrals to MDA clinics, call (800) 572-1717, or visit MDA's Web site at www.mdausa.org.

contained under the heading "The Voice of the People," articles by R.H. Whitner, and K.R. Murrell. It was revealed in a news column that S.O. Chase, J.N. Whitner, Frank P. Foster, A.K. Rossiter and A.P. Connelly had applied to the city council for permits to operate a Street Railway.

The population of Sanford at the time was 3,000.

During World War II, Mr. Holly went overseas with the Red Cross and in his absence Mr. Walter Haynes became temporary editor. Later Mr. Neal became editor until he bought the Weekly Gazette in Kissimmee.

Haynes and Ratliff subsequently withdrew and replaced the ownership by Printing Company. Mr. Holly became postmaster, a position he held until his death. Mrs. Holly became acting postmistress until Joel Field was appointed.

Mr. Rolland Dean, Reece Combs and R.H. Berg purchased the Herald in October 1923. Mr. Combs sold his interest, but Mr. Berg remained until 1930 when he moved to Melbourne. Mr. Gordon Dean joined the staff in 1927 and the Dean brothers carried on through a land boom, a Depression, two wars and a political fight.

During the Depression, the machines wore out and the paper became scarce, so the sheet was often printed on wrapping paper. Sometimes there was only one issue a week, but the news was always printed. According to Mrs. Stone, the editorials were outstanding and often copied by the most influential publications of the nation.

The Times

Known as "Mr. Lake's Paper," The Times was organized as a medium of combating assertions made by other publications. It was financed by the Chapman Brothers; its life was short, but eventful, as they lost money on the project.

At the end of Mr. Lake's career, The Times was taken over by Mr. T.R. Higgins who changed the name to The Signal. Later, Charles Britt, a former employee of First National Bank, became publisher, but soon Mr. Higgins took over. It finally closed publication.

In all, a field of 144 pros will go to the tees on Disney's Magnolia and Palm courses in the $2.5 million Classic, final stop before the Tour Championship. Following a two-day program, the field will be cut to the low 70 pros and ties for the 36-hole windup on Disney's Magnolia course.

Last year Huston emerged from one of the strongest fields in Classic history -- 6th strongest of all 1998 Tour events including the majors. Down four strokes heading into the final round, he wrestled the lead from Davis Love III, claiming victory by one stroke and a winner's check of $380,000.

In 1999, the players will be shooting for a winner's share of $450,000.
