Midway water rate increases

MIDWAY — Residents of this community east of Sanford will be paying $2 more a month for their basic water bills as of July 1.

William Royster, who was appointed receiver for the Midway Canaan Water Association in 1992, announced at a Thursday night meeting that the basic water bill charge will be $14.20 for the first 1,000 gallons. Currently the rate is $12.20. For every additional 1,000 gallons, the new charge will be $3 as compared to the current $1.70.

Royster said the rate hike was necessary because the association, which buys water from Sanford, has been operating at a deficit. He also noted, Sanford has increased its water rate two times in the last two years but there have been no rate increases for Midway water customers over the same period.

Although the increase will appear on the bills mailed July 1, the rate hike will be for water used during the May 15 to June 15 billing period.

The following individuals were elected to the water association board of directors: Prince McKinney, Reginald Lowery, Willie Cummings, Willie Merkeson, Alton Glenn, Fannie Martin, Bernard Hudley and Janice Perry.

Correction

LAKE MARY — The giant treasure sale being held by the Lake Mary chapter of AARP, will be held Saturday June 5, rather than "this Saturday" as listed in Thursday's Sanford Herald. The event will be from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. at the corner of East Lake Mary Boulevard and Ridge Drive.

Clarification

Seminole County sheriff Don Eslinger and Orange County sheriff Kevin Beary had made a gentleman's agreement during a recent March of Dimes Walk America walk-a-thon. Recently, Beary washed Seminole County patrol cars after Eslinger raised more money than he did in the event.

Florida gets more prison beds

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Before adjourning a special session early today, the Legislature approved a 10,500-bed prison program representing only part of a mammoth construction plan needed if criminals are to ever serve most of their sentences.

"We need to shoot over the next five years for roughly 6,000 beds a year," said Sen. Robert Wexler.

Convicted killer on probation will be returned to Seminole

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A man serving lifetime probation for the murder of a Longwood woman was arrested in Columbus, Ohio and will be returned to Seminole County for violating the terms of probation.

Donn Morris Durham, 28, will face up to 10 years in prison. Durham was convicted in 1987 of second-degree murder in the strangulation death of 20-year-old Karen Barkley. Barkley was killed in 1986 and her body stuffed in a car trunk. Her jewelry was also stolen. Durham served four years of his 17-year prison sentence before being released and placed on probation for life.

A warrant was issued for Durham in February after he failed to

House OK sends Clinton tax bill to Senate floor

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Democrats gave President Clinton a badly needed triumph when they muscled his massive deficit-reduction tax increase through the House. But the measure faces a much sterner test in the more conservative Senate.

"Tonight, the House said no to gridlock, no to the status quo and no to the special interests," Clinton said Thursday night, shortly after the House approved the $340-billion mix of tax increases and spending cuts on a 219-213 vote.

"Tomorrow we go on to the Senate and we go back to the country," he said.

The bill represents the very backbone of Clinton's economic program: tax boosts on the wealthy, energy users and others, and spending cuts for Medicare, veterans and other benefit programs.

The tax increases would exempt most low-income people, cost middle-income families up to about $400 a year and fall heavily on the well-to-do. It also includes an energy tax the White House said may be subject to compromise in the Senate.

SANFORD — While Sanfordites aren't pleased with President Bill Clinton's tax package, they say that it probably won't really be that much of a burden on them personally.

The bill, passed last night by the congress in a close vote, is the basis of the president's whole economic program. It boosts taxes on the wealthiest Americans, on energy users and others.

Hopper's May Day fest set

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Community Improvement Association (CIA) is continuing to work toward the day when it can return the old Hopper Academy to its place of honor as the centerpiece of the Georgetown community.

The building at the corner of 11th Street and Pine Avenue has been long abandoned. Windows are cracked or broken and paint is peeling from the walls.

But the people in the community have dreams for the facility and hope that, one day, it will be a community center for young and old alike to take part in a variety of activities.

Before those dreams can come true, however, the CIA needs to raise capital to make the necessary repairs and renovations to the building that was once the school in that east Sanford community.

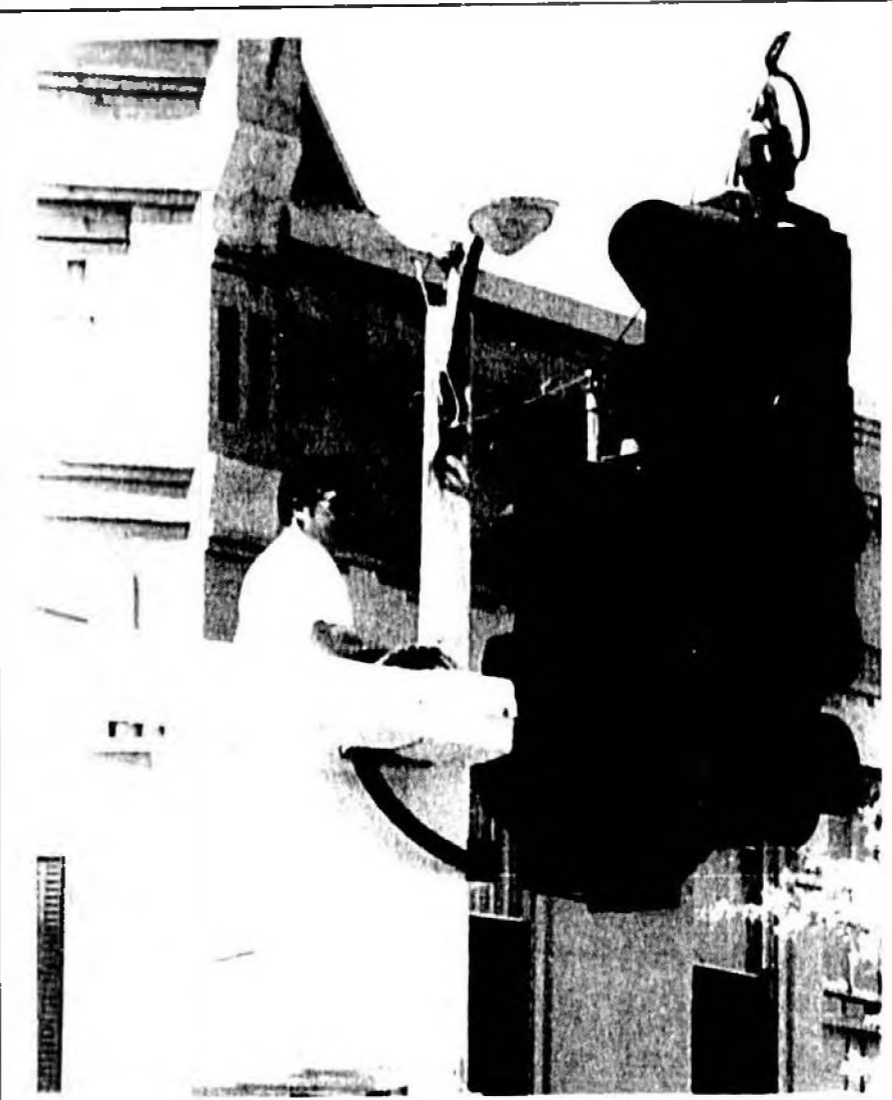

On Saturday, May 29, the CIA is sponsoring the Hopper's May Day Festival on the property and on the street in front of it. The celebration will take place from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Proceeds from the event will help the effort to make their dreams a reality.

Hundreds of people, mostly families with children, attended the last festival sponsored by the CIA to help out the academy's cause.

LSD arrest in downtown Sanford

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — An Ocoee woman who police say was dealing LSD out of her family's business in Sanford was arrested Wednesday.

Mary Florence Pittle, 40, 1513 Mona Ave., Ocoee, was arrested in Sanford and charged with sale and delivery of LSD by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Wednesday.

Pittle, a waitress at RG's restaurant, 12 S. First St., Sanford, was charged with selling 100 dosage units of Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD) to an undercover agent.

Agents said that on Dec. 9 of last year, they entered the restaurant, which is a family-owned and operated business, to attempt to purchase a quantity of the drug. Agents said they were equipped with remote audio devices during the encounter.

Agents said that after customers left the restaurant in the mid-afternoon, Pittle sat at a table with the agents who asked her about purchasing a sheet (100 dosage units) of the drug.

She told officers, they said, that she had that much and left the table to get it for them. Agents said that she returned with 98 units a short time later.

When agents asked for the full 100, they said, she left again and returned with two more units.

She accepted payment of $200 for

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Improper chemical use charged

ORLANDO — A lake-cleaning company and two of its officers were indicted on charges of improper chemical use and mail fraud.

The Lake Doctors Inc., James Williams, 45, of Longwood and Albert Johnson Semago, 44, of Bradenton were named in a 33-count indictment on Thursday charging them with violating federal pesticide, fraud and conspiracy laws.

Lake Doctors, which has offices throughout the state, is used by developers, condominium associations and golf courses to control unwanted vegetation and algae in various bodies of water.

The federal statute makes it a crime to use pesticides in a manner inconsistent with their labels.

The defendants are accused of applying the chemicals Direx and Karmex to aquatic areas when the chemicals' labels specifically prohibit their use in water.

If convicted, Williams and Semago face up to 86 years in prison and $4.3 million in fines. Lake Doctors could be fined $8.7 million.

Prostitutes, pimps, Johns have their say

ST. PETERSBURG — Prostitutes, pimps and Johns will get free time on cable television under a city council vote to combat their crimes with public humiliation.

The plan that approved 5-2 on Thursday will televise the names of people convicted of prostitution-related crimes on the government access channel.

The city also will send letters about sexually transmitted diseases to people arrested, close down known houses of prostitution and keep prostitutes out of certain parts of the city.

Arrests and fines have so far been ineffective in stopping prostitution, said Police Chief Darrell Stephens, who pushed for the TV campaign.

The list is expected to debut in about two weeks with the names of 21 men convicted of soliciting prostitutes in a recent sting operation. While the list is showing, Stephens will talk about the dangers of sexually transmitted diseases, AIDS and other dangers of sex for money.

Judge refuses to dismiss piracy charge

MIAMI — A Haitian security guard charged in a hijacking has not been singled out for prosecution, despite defense claims that Cubans in similar circumstances are not prosecuted, a judge ruled.

On Thursday, U.S. District Judge Federico Moreno refused to dismiss the air piracy charge against Woody Marc Edouard, 24, saying his attorneys failed to show that the conduct of others who have not been prosecuted was similar to his own.

Public defender Paul Rashkind claimed Edouard was the victim of discriminatory prosecution.

Edouard forced his way aboard a DC-3 operated by West Palm Beach-based Missionary Flights International and fired a shot through the aircraft floor as the hijacking began Feb. 18 in northern Haiti.

He surrendered his weapon during the flight, gave up when the plane landed at Miami International Airport and claimed he was fleeing a repressive government.

Boy wins battle with coma

WEST PALM BEACH — Things didn't look good for the 12-year-old Port St. Lucie boy, a month into a deep coma and on life support, after hitting his head in a bicycle accident.

But at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday, he awoke, spoke a few words and responded to commands. And that day, just October marked the start of Robby Nichols' arduous task of relearning how to walk and talk, how to read and write.

Robby went into the coma September 12, 1992, when he got hit by a car while riding his bike. He was transferred to St. Mary's Hospital here and put on full life support.

He showed almost no response, responding only to pain, doctors noted.

But on Oct. 13, Robby began waking up, a slow process that ended up taking four whole days.

At first, he knew only a few words. And he began learning everything he had lost from his 12 years of life, all over again.

The sixth-grader was discharged last December after spending 65 days in the rehabilitation unit at St. Mary's.

Now, back home and walking again, Robby is reading at a fourth-grade level and improving every day, according to his parents.

Stowaways found on barge

TAMPA — After a tug boat captain heard voices coming from the empty barge he was towing Thursday, he called a Coast Guard boarding team that found five stowaways.

The men, whose nationality was not immediately known, were transported to Tampa General Hospital suffering from dehydration and stomach cramps. One stowaway told authorities they ran out of food and water 10 days ago.

Both the tug Janet Graham and the barge Pearle Jahn are U.S.-registered. Their last port of call was Abidjan, Ivory Coast, the Coast Guard said.

The stowaways were turned over to the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

It's OK now to sue spouse

Supreme Court throws out antiquated spousal immunity

By JACKIE MALIFAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The idea that a husband or wife can't sue their spouse, a common-law concept that dates back to 1736, no longer has any place in Florida, the state Supreme Court ruled Thursday.

Some 32 states already have done away with the doctrine of interspousal immunity first articulated by 18th century British jurist Matthew Hale.

In Florida, the state Supreme Court and the Legislature have limited the doctrine in recent years to cover only negligence suits. But with Thursday's 4-3 decision, the underlying premise is discarded.

Five years ago, Florida's high court said interspousal immunity was limited to cases when litigation could "disrupt the family or foster marital discord" or when it's likely the husband and wife are trying to commit fraud.

But even those two factors no longer carry enough weight to keep the immunity doctrine, Justice Gerald Kogan wrote in the majority opinion.

"Both public necessity and fundamental rights require judicial abrogation of the doctrine," he wrote.

First of all, married couples are no more likely than other people to try to defraud insurers. And safeguards against fraud apply equally to both married and single people, he wrote.

"Second we do not believe that the types of lawsuits prohibited by the doctrine of interspousal immunity, if allowed, are likely to foster unwarranted marital discord," Kogan wrote.

He pointed out that husbands and wives already can file criminal charges against each other, sue over property interests and file for protective injunctions.

The decision stems from a lawsuit filed by a Miami woman whose husband was convicted of attempted murder after a 1984 machete attack on her and other members of her family.

Joyce Waite still walks with a limp, but Beres Waite was released from prison a few months ago after an eight-year sentence.

After the attack, Ms. Waite divorced her husband and then sued him, seeking damages against a homeowner's insurance policy. But the trial court dismissed the lawsuit, ruling it was barred under the doctrine of interspousal immunity.

A few weeks after oral arguments before Florida's high court in January, Ms. Waite settled with the insurance company for $250,000. The parties offered to dismiss the case but the court refused, according to Frank Abrams, Ms. Waite's attorney.

"I believe it was a doctrine that had no place in modern law ... and did not serve the ends of justice," a jubilant Abrams said Thursday.

Insurance 90-day ban extended

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida lawmakers sent Gov. Lawton Chiles a bill to double a 90-day ban on homeowners' insurance cancellations by companies trying to avoid hurricane losses in the state.

"I would submit that everybody in this chamber has had a significant impact because of the crisis in property and casualty insurance," House Insurance Committee Chairman John Cosgrove, D-Miami, said Thursday.

The House approved the insurance measure (HB 89) shortly after 11 p.m. on a 109-0 vote. A few minutes later, the Senate passed the measure 37-0.

The bill fell short of Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher's goal of setting up a fund to help insurance companies pay for catastrophic losses in Florida, but did establish a panel to recommend how to keep insurers from leaving the state.

"This bill does what we need to do," said Senate Commerce Chairman John Grant, R-Tampa.

The House defeated an amendment that would have forced insurers which had already sent cancellation notices to notify policyholders by certified mail that the action had been reversed.

Gallagher issued an order May 19 freezing cancellations for 90 days after Allstate said it would cancel 300,000 policies in 18 coastal counties to avoid raking future losses in disasters. Hurricane season starts Tuesday.

The bill would extend Gallagher's moratorium until Nov. 15.

It would also establish the Property Insurance Study Commission to look for long-range solutions to an insurance crunch gripping the state since Hurricane Andrew caused more than $15 billion in insured losses Aug. 24 in South Florida.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $3,000 bond.

Jury gets racially charged case

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — The city of Miami waited as a jury 230 miles to the north deliberated in the manslaughter retrial of a police officer who shot a speeding black motorcyclist, igniting a 1989 race riot.

In closing arguments Thursday, Officer William Lozano's defense attorney claimed he acted in self-defense when he fired the fatal shot — an assertion dismissed by prosecutor Gerald Bagley.

"He points, he aims, he tracks, and he fires one shot," Bagley said, standing before the six-member jury with his hands together and arms outstretched. "That's an intentional act."

Lozano lawyer Roy Black appealed to the jurors' emotions about the dangers to police officers in high-crime areas such as the predominantly black Overtown neighborhood where the shooting took place.

"Today, it seems the criminal is right and the police officer is wrong," Black said. "That's the 'Alice in Wonderland' world that our police officers operate in. If the demagogues and politicians succeed in making this a crime, God help us all."

The 33-year-old Colombian-born officer wiped away a tear while a handkerchief as Black wound up his argument.

The jury of three whites, two Hispanics and one black recessed after deliberating three hours without reaching a verdict. Jurors were to resume deliberations this morning.

Circuit Judge W. Thomas Spencer has ordered a four-hour delay in the reading of the verdict. But if it is reached after 5 p.m. on any day, it won't be announced until the next morning. The jury will deliberate through the Memorial Day weekend if needed, court officials said.

Lozano was charged with two counts of manslaughter in the deaths of the motorcyclist and his passenger, with each count punishable by five years in prison.

He was convicted by a Miami jury in December 1989, but an appeals court ordered a new trial, ruling the panel was influenced by the possibility of riots.

The retrial ultimately was moved to Orlando in hopes of getting a more impartial jury.

In Miami, torn by riots four times in the 1980s, television offices, schools and restaurants have been tuned to live coverage of Lozano's retrial.

National Guard troops, activated late Wednesday by Gov. Lawton Chiles as the case headed to closing arguments, trickled into a downtown armory to pick up riot gear.

A National Guard commander would not say how many troops were sent to Miami.

"It's going to be an adequate show of force," said Lt. Col. Ken Forrester. "If they don't need us — and we hope they don't need us — we'll pack up and go home."

Prosecutors contend Lozano was criminally negligent Jan. 16, 1989 — the day Overtown observed the birthday of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. with a parade.

A motorcycle was speeding away from another officer in a patrol car when, according to five witnesses, Lozano stepped into the street and fired into the opposite lane of traffic. The single gunshot killed Clement Lloyd, 23. Instantly, Passenger Allan Blanchard, 24, died from the ensuing crash.

Lozano's lawyers did not call any defense witnesses, unlike the first trial where the officer was on the stand for more than three hours.

Professional propagandist: Flooding Germany with fascist literature

By J.L. SCHMIDT
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. — From a house where he lives with his elderly mother, Gerhard Lauck peddles neo-Nazi propaganda — lots of it.

Dubbed the "Farm Belt Fuehrer" by the Anti-Defamation League of a head birth and considered a headache by German officials half a world away, Lauck keeps to himself in this university city of 200,000.

"I don't like the spotlight. I prefer to avoid crowds. Basically, I'm anti-social," Lauck said, devouring lunch with the same zeal he uses to explain building a neo-Nazi propaganda machine in Europe from a base on the Great Plains.

In Cologne, Germany, Eckart Werthebach, head of the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution, said Lauck is the biggest supplier of fascist propaganda to German neo-Nazis.

"I don't want to sound like I'm bragging, but as early as the 1970s they said that 95 percent of the propaganda came from us," the 40-year-old Lauck said in an interview Wednesday.

Werthebach voiced frustration over the fascist literature being shipped to German neo-Nazis. Including a newspaper called "NS Kampfruf," which means "Nazi Battle Cry."

The newspaper is one of several published in 10 languages by Lauck's group, the National Socialist German Workers' Party-Foreign and Development Organization. Lauck's group also sells anti-immigrant and pro-Nazi bumper stickers and other National Socialist literature and paraphernalia by mail.

The freedom of speech and press guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution allow him to publish material that would be illegal to print in Germany. Lauck said his organization relies on gifts, donations, subscriptions and the sale of merchandise such as books, bumper stickers and cassette tapes of German marches.

Two video programs, "Race and Reason" and "White View Point" are filmed partially in Lincoln and distributed to at least 12 public-access cable TV stations across the United States. His speech slipped in and out of a German accent, but Lauck bristled at the suggestion that it's feigned.

A German major who left the University of Nebraska-Lincoln after two years, Lauck said he started his organization in the early 1970s so ethnic Germans abroad could support the movement in Germany.

Toyota: Top ratings in new vehicle survey

By ALAN L. ADLER
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT — Toyota Motor Corp. got top ratings for quality cars and trucks in a widely watched survey of the automotive industry.

Toyota and other Japanese automakers dominated the survey released Thursday by the marketing information firm J.D. Power & Associates, but Big Three carmakers improved their standing, further narrowing the quality gap that remains a deterrent to some American consumers shopping for a new car.

The Lexus LS 400 and the SC 300-400, built by Toyota, finished one-two in a measure of the fewest problems per 100 vehicles. In an assessment of light trucks, Toyota won five of six categories. There was no maker above the industry average in the best full-size van category.

Toyota's Georgetown, Ky., assembly plant, where the Camry sedan is built, was judged the best of more than 80 assembly plants in North America. The Camry finished fifth in initial quality — the highest of any car assembled in North America.

The Infiniti J30 and Q45 finished third and fourth, respectively. Infiniti is Nissan Motor Corp.'s luxury division. All Infiniti and Lexus cars are imported from Japan.

Rounding out the top models were: the Acura Legend and Ford Crown Victoria in a tie for sixth place; the Lexus ES300 in eighth place; the Toyota Paseo in ninth place and the Buick Park Avenue, Toyota Corolla and Toyota Tercel in a tie for 10th.

The survey showed domestic cars had the greatest improvement over last year, up 19 percent. European quality improved 17 percent and Asian quality improved 10 percent.

The statistics are based on questionnaires answered by more than 45,000 consumers and have become a benchmark for rating vehicle quality in the automotive industry. Automakers scoring well in J.D. Power surveys often use the information to tout their vehicles in advertisements.

Hats off to Supt. Hagerty

The Seminole County school board has given Supt. Paul Hagerty high marks for his first year as the district's first appointed superintendent.

For more than seven decades, the superintendent in this district had been elected by the people and some were less than enthusiastic about giving up their say in the retention or ousting of the person in that position of authority.

Hagerty's fine performance has put the minds of many of those people at ease.

In their evaluation of Hagerty, the board offered comments about his skills in 15 critical areas.

They did not simply say that he was "performing adequately" or not, as they case may be. Criticisms, praise and advice were included on the evaluation form for all to see.

We believe that Hagerty has done an admirable job in the face of hard economic times.

While he has faced no big crises during his first year, Hagerty has treated employees, administrators and the community fairly and consistently and with sensitivity to their needs and wants.

He has met with community and business groups, listened to and used their input. He has made himself available to parents' and teachers' groups and has even made time to listen to the concerns and suggestions of students.

He has not, of course, been perfect. No one is.

But he has performed well in all areas, making some needed changes and turning the district in a new direction that allows for more efficient use of tax dollars while keeping the students as the top priority.

Speak English

There is no apparent reason to quarrel over language in this country. English is the international language and its derivative is spoken in the United States. That's it! Plain and simple, non-Spanish speaking taxpayers can find no fault with the system that millions of other non-English speaking immigrants have successfully dealt with and still maintained their cultural identity (along with language skills). In addition, by creating jobs that require bilingual skills, you limit your resource pool to only those who meet that criterion, hardly fair to the many whose ancestors toiled and sacrificed to develop this country.

Don't make the same mistake as other good intentioned programs gone awry, like affirmative action (a program that would have leveled the playing field for blacks if administered properly and not turned into a quota system).

If Hispanics, African-Americans, and Native American nations want to preserve their heritage like Greeks, Italians and others, I think it's great. Take the money that would create unemployment for non-Spanish speaking people and help develop learning resource centers that would address most of the social needs of a culturally defined community.

Bottom line is — assimilate in the basic social sense or leave the country. For those who immigrate here, being an American is a privilege not a right. If you don't love it — leave it!

JOSEPH SPEAR

Hang health cops higher than Haman

Come the rebellion, says a Shakespeare character in "Henry VI," the first thing to do is "kill all the lawyers." Come the rebellion, says Joe Spear, the first thing to do is hang the Health Police.

Well, maybe not all of them. But certainly the ones who warned us off delectable food and drink and later turned out to be wrong. Those people should be hung higher than Haman, the evil Persian in the Book of Esther who plotted to destroy all Jews and was strung from the gallows of his own construction.

That used to be a saying: Heinous transgressors should be hung higher than Haman. So I have been taking names, and I keep them in a file labeled "Haman," to remind me of the lot that will be theirs if I am put in charge of the Health Police purge.

Well, maybe I won't hang them by the neck. But the women will be hoisted by their scrawny thumbs and the men will have their wispy little beards plucked out follicle by follicle.

I'm not talking about people who alerted us to truly dangerous things like calamari in cream sauce and snails dipped in butter. I'm not even concerned about the people who warned us about whole milk, eggs and marbled steaks. I've gotten used to skim, substitutes and turkey loaf. I miss my french fries and my country ham with red-eye gravy, but I can live without them.

No, I refer here to those dour souls who cannot stand to have somebody enjoy something. I speak specifically of:

— The people who told us we shouldn't eat nuts because they were full of fats. Do you know how many nuts I didn't eat because of that? I tried those godawful soybean substitutes and they tasted like styrofoam popcorn. But now comes some researcher from Loma Linda University in California who says that nuts, and walnuts in particular, are good for the heart. When volunteers ate them for prolonged periods, their cholesterol levels actually fell.

I think the people who cast aspersions on nuts should be hoisted an inch for every nut I didn't eat.

I think the people who cast aspersions on nuts should be hoisted an inch for every nut I didn't eat. Higher than Haman.

— The people who said even moderate amounts of spiritis would kill our brain cells, rot our livers and give us chilblains or whatever. Then came "60 Minutes" and a report on the French who maintain cheese and cream sauces and survive because they also drink goblets of wine, which somehow acts as an antidote. Now doctors are discreetly suggesting that a couple of moderate drinks a day keeps angina away.

I can't say I ever denied myself a glass of nectar because the Health Police didn't approve, but I have friends who did. It is for them that the booze bashers are in the Haman file.

The people who scorned processed cheese products as tantamount to arterial cork. Then came a group of scientists at the University of Wisconsin who said that Cheez Whiz is good for us because it contains fatty acids that inhibit cancer in tests on mice.

The cheese critics go in the Haman file.

Millions wasted on federal office space

WASHINGTON — Imagine coming home one night and discovering some burned-out light bulbs, a leaky upstairs faucet and peeling paint in the bedroom. The average person would invest in some modest repairs, but the federal government's landlord, the General Services Administration, might unleash the wrecking ball.

"The GSA approach would be to build a new home from scratch — and pay top dollar," according to Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine. "Any private landlord who operated the way the government is operating would long ago have gone bankrupt."

If "downsizing" is the buzzword of the '90s for government and most corporations, the GSA still lives in the boom years. The nation is currently awash in 400 million square feet of unoccupied commercial office space. But the government has $11.4 billion of office construction under way that will, by the end of the decade, add another 23 million square feet of space to an already overbuilt market.

Dallas, for example, is still digging out from the real estate boom and bust of the 1980s, which left an office vacancy rate of more than 25 percent. Despite bargain prices on commercial real estate, the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas just spent more than $100 million to complete construction on its new office building.

In depressed Atlanta, reeling under a 30 percent commercial vacancy rate, the federal government has agreed to lease a new 1.9 million-square-foot building from a private developer. But the government will vacate more than 1.2 million square feet currently being rented by federal agencies in six buildings, and the result is a 73 percent jump in the annual rent from $15 million to $26 million.

If the GSA abandons its plan to move to a new federal center in Atlanta, according to a study by the accounting firm Arthur Anderson, the government could save $166 million over 30 years by moving into modern existing space, or $505 million by scrapping the move altogether.

Sen. Cohen is crusading to stop the GSA from "building buildings we don't need, leasing space we can't afford, and making decisions which anyone in the private sector with a speck of common sense wouldn't make." His concerns are echoed by the General Accounting Office, which has declared that government policy in this area is in "disarray."

Cohen blames part of this on old-fashioned pork-barrel spending — fueled in part by political pressure from developers, unions and members of Congress who can claim bragging rights over bringing new office buildings to their states and districts. "I think perhaps self-interest is going on ... it becomes difficult for Congress to resist," he said.

"That does happen," says David Bibb, assistant commissioner for planning at GSA. "Look at the history of the country. In last year's appropriations there were projects in there we did not request funding for." Bibb added that most of the construction in recent years has been for courthouses and border stations.

Government auditors also single out arcane accounting rules that give the GSA perverse incentives to lease and build rather than buy existing structures, and the result is that the government has become America's biggest renter. In 1989, the federal government owned 90 percent of the buildings it occupied — but that figure has fallen to 58 percent today.

The GSA already has jurisdiction over 260 million square feet of office space in more than 7,500 government-owned and leased buildings.

The GSA approach would be to build a new home from scratch, and pay top dollar.

Clinton on campaign financing

WASHINGTON — While the White House campaign-finance reform package does not go as far as candidate Bill Clinton had promised, it does offer real reform and closes some of the worst campaign financing loopholes.

Clinton's plan largely follows the outline of plans offered by Capitol Hill Democrats over the past several years. It seeks to close loopholes that currently allow the wealthy to funnel considerable funds into the election process; it tries to reduce the influence of political-action committees and lobbyists; and it seeks to level the playing field between incumbents and challengers through spending limits and the partial federal funding of congressional campaigns.

Few doubt reforms are needed. Just before Clinton's plan was announced, the Federal Election Commission released figures on spending in Campaign '92. Congressional candidates raised and spent record amounts; and more than ever before, those dollars came from PACs.

In 1992, House and Senate candidates raised a staggering $659 million. They spent even more — $678 million. This was the first election in which candidates, in aggregate, spent more than they raised.

In 1992, total PAC contributions to House candidates were $127.3 million; to Senate candidates, $51.1 million.

The use of expensive consultants, frequent polling and heavy TV advertising have pushed campaign costs through the roof. As recently as 1984, a $2 million Senate campaign was unusual, and a $1 million House campaign almost unheard of. In 1992, every winning Senate candidate spent more than $2 million. Ten spent more than $5 million.

In 1992, by far, the most expensive campaigning was in California. In the state's two Senate contests, Democrat Barbara Boxer spent $10.3 million to defeat Republican Bruce Herschensohn, who spent $7.6 million. Democrat Dianne Feinstein spent $8 million to defeat GOP incumbent Sen. John Seymour, who spent $7.8 million.

In House campaigns, Republican businessman Michael Huffington spent more than $5 million of his own money to win California's 22nd district, and Democratic businesswoman Jane Harman reached into her own deep pockets for more than $2 million to take California's 36th district.

The cost of campaigning has made it increasingly difficult for challengers. Incumbents have a vastly easier time raising money. In 1992, 71 percent of all PAC money went to incumbents. Only 11.7 percent went to challengers, and 16.7 percent went to candidates for open seats.

Clinton's plan proposes to do several things about this. It would limit House candidates to raising only one-third of their funds from PACs. Another one-third would be made up of contributions over $200. In the Senate, no more than 20 percent of contributions could come from PACs.

Lobbyists would lose out under the Clinton plan. They would be prohibited from contributing directly to a member of Congress they lobby or from lobbying those to whom they contribute.

To reduce the advantage of incumbency, the bill sets up voluntary campaign spending limits — in the Senate, based on state population; in the House, a flat $600,000. Candidates agreeing to these limits would receive "communication vouchers" redeemable for radio and TV ad time and for mailings. The vouchers would be paid for by raising the check-off amount on tax returns to $5 from the current $1, and by eliminating the tax deductibility of businesses' lobbying costs.

The bill would also prevent millionaires from simply reaching into their own pockets for vast amounts as Huffington did last year. It would limit personal spending on a campaign to $250,000 in the House, and to 10 percent of the total in the Senate.

The White House admits the bill does not go as far as Clinton wanted. During his campaign, Clinton promised to limit PAC contributions to $1,000 for any single candidate. However, under considerable pressure from House Democrats, he agreed to leave the current $5,000 ceiling. Also, in a last-minute change, he agreed that the starting date of the new rules would be 1996, rather than 1994.

White House sources say the president also wanted to bar contributions not only from lobbyists to members of Congress they lobby, but also from their employers, workers in companies they represent and their own co-workers. This was eliminated from the final proposal.

This package puts Republicans in a bind. They have come out swinging against it, on the purely partisan basis that it helps Democrats more than Republicans.

Few doubt reforms are needed.

Telltale rental car tags voted out

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Legislature voted unanimously early today to remove telltale rental car license tags in an effort to protect tourists.

"Let's take away that bullseye from a tourist that says, 'I'm a tourist. I'm a great target,'" said Sen. Mario Diaz-Balart, R-Miami. Under the bill (SB 10B), Florida's 620,000 rental cars could no longer carry tags beginning with "Y" or "Z" or the word "lease," which crooks often use to target tourists for robbery or other crimes.

Gov. Lawton Chiles previously suspended a law requiring rental cars to carry identifying plates and encouraged companies to exchange them for new tags. About 220,000 of the vehicles already have gotten new plates.

The bill, which passed the House 105-0 and the Senate 37-0, also prohibits rental car companies from attaching "conspicuous identifying letters or phrases" such as advertising bumper stickers to the vehicles.

"Hopefully, this is going to save lives," said Sen. Howard Forman, D-Pembroke Pines.

But the House added an amendment leaving a bar code sticker on the cars, which Sen. Ken Jenne, D-Fort Lauderdale, said would still enable criminals to easily target tourists.

"We haven't eliminated the danger to the tourists who are coming to the state of Florida," Jenne said. "We will still have deaths."

Rental car companies complained they need the stickers to inventory the cars easily and that removing them would cost too much money.

Sen. John Grant, R-Tampa, said the bar codes aren't the problem.

"It's the Mickey Mouse hats in the back and the kids — you don't have to be too bright to figure out who's rented a car to go to Disney World," Grant said.

At one point, lawmakers voted to remove all county names from Florida license plates in favor of the statewide label "The Sunshine State." But that change was removed by a House amendment, leaving the county labels intact.

The vote came as lawmakers wound up a one-week special session on prisons and public safety.

And, it proposes spending cuts for Medicare, veterans and other benefit programs.

Tony Russi, owner of Tony Russi Insurance in Sanford, believes it will hurt more people than it will help.

"It will affect everyone," Russi said this morning. "We'll all pay for it."

Russi said that he believes the new tax is "just more of the same tax and spend that has been going on in Washington for years."

The tax increases in the bill would not affect most lower income Americans at all.

The biggest burden will be on the most well-to-do, supporters said.

"It's going to hurt all of us," Russi said. "There's going to be less money to put into the businesses."

Harry Kniffin of Sanford, eating a hearty breakfast of eggs, bacon and grits in the Colonial Room this morning, said he didn't think much of the plan.

"It's going to cost too much and it's going to put more people out of work," he said. "Most people can't afford it now. This ain't much of a plan."

Kniffin said, however, he believes the tax plan "will help in the long run" if people can "survive" it.

Clyde Robertson, Kniffin's neighbor and breakfast companion, said he is opposed to Clinton's plan.

"It isn't worth it," he said. "It's not going to reduce the debt one dime."

Chico Davis, on-the-other-hand, believes it is a good plan.

"It is going to stimulate the economy, I think," Davis said. "I haven't read the full thing of it, but I think it'll be good for the economy."

D-Boca Raton. "We've got to assume that this Legislature is going to fund these beds."

The $211 million expansion program (SB 8B) was sent to Gov. Lawton Chiles on a 33-5 vote Thursday night in the Senate. The House earlier passed the plan 110-0.

The House and Senate also passed a hard-fought agreement (SB 26B) to overhaul sentencing practices and make more inmates eligible for early release — both aimed at keeping more hardened criminals behind bars longer. The deal would abolish automatic credits that reduce all inmates' sentences.

That bill passed the Senate 31-6 and the House 86-18. Lawmakers then adjourned the special session at 2:15 a.m., a week earlier than initially planned.

Black lawmakers opposed the sentencing initiative, saying it does nothing to rehabilitate people, does not address the underlying social causes of crime and would simply warehouse criminals in an ever-larger prison system.

"If we continue building, we'll have a city the size of Clearwater surrounded by fences and barbed wire," said Rep. Les Miller, D-Tampa.

Even with the 10,500 additional prison beds, the new sentencing structure and release policy means Florida will need about 24,000 more beds over the next five years if early releases are to end. Lawmakers insist they'll find the money to do that.

"We're going to have to belly up and pay that price," said Sen. Curt Kiser, R-Palm Harbor.

But other legislators said the expansion, which opens space for 3,480 more prisoners in the coming fiscal year, is simply a stopgap measure. There are now about 48,000 inmates in Florida prisons.

"We've put another Band-Aid on it," said Sen. William Turner, D-Hialeah. "It's not going to be right until we put some money in it and spread it over 10 years."

When Chiles called the special session, he sought a cigarette tax increase to build about 22,000 new prison beds over five years. But that plan foundered when a welfare caseload overestimate freed $188 million to spend elsewhere.

Chiles was cautious Thursday about the plan emerging from the Legislature.

"We'll look at any package that comes before us," he said at a rally of crime victims. "We had to find a permanent solution to the criminal justice problem."

The expansion plan, coupled with a proposal to make about 5,600 nonviolent inmates eligible for early release, is intended to avert prison gridlock in the fall.

Pintle's mother, Geraldine Lovett, owns the restaurant and works there with her daughters, including Pintle.

She did not know about the drug transaction, she said. "I certainly did not know that that was going on," she said. "I don't want to make no comment, but I did not know that this was happening in here."

Following the purchase, the alleged LSD was sent to the Drug Enforcement Administration where it tested positive as the drug with a total net weight of 4.34 milligrams.

This past Wednesday, agents returned to KOs and made contact with Pintle and asked about purchasing more LSD.

Agents said that she told them that her supplier had been recently arrested and that she was not dealing in the drug at this time. She was arrested for the December sale and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held in lieu of $5,000 bond.

Seminole County Sheriff's spokesman George Proechel said when Durham waived extradition, county officers will go to Ohio and pick him up.

"He hasn't waived extradition yet," he said, "so it will probably be sometime next week."

The victim's family blamed Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey when Durham disappeared. Dickey did not send Durham back to prison for violating probation last year for taking an unauthorized out-of-state trip. At that time, the judge sentenced him to the 53 days in jail, time served while awaiting the VOP hearing.

Durham was arrested for disorderly conduct (public intoxication) Wednesday by Columbus area police. A computer check revealed the Florida warrant, so Durham was also charged as a fugitive.

The victim's mother, Dee Barkley has been critical of the handling of the case and has expressed the desire that Barkley be returned to prison. Durham claimed he never intended to kill Barkley, but lost control and strangled her after she called him a loser, Barkley tutored Durham in high school.

who has been dogged of late by a series of embarrassing revelations about his Hollywood haircut and his clumsy efforts to fire the White House travel staff.

"A loss would have been very damaging, and a victory is clearly a great plus," said House Budget Committee Chairman Martin Sabo, D-Minn. "And it focuses attention back on substance."

But it's going to take more to push the measure through the Senate than appeals for public support such as Clinton made before the House vote.

Awaiting the bill were several conservative senators — chiefly Sen. David Boren, D-Okla. — who would like to change or kill Clinton's proposed energy tax, and bolster the legislation with additional spending cuts.

"Democrats are going to be wise enough to see that if we don't want to slip back to the mode of being a tax-and-spend party, that we'll help reshape this package," Boren said on CNN just minutes after the House vote.

Even Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, has conceded that changes are likely in the energy tax and that extra spending cuts may be added.

Senate committees were expected to finish writing their own version of the bill by mid-June. Democratic leaders would like the full Senate to approve it before July 4.

Democrats cheered and whacked each other on the back when the House approved the measure, which is designed to pare $340 billion off budget deficits over the next five years. Republicans cheered as well, as if to reaffirm their solid opposition to Clinton's tax increases.

All 175 Republicans and 38 Democrats opposed the bill, but furious lobbying by Clinton and party leaders got the votes of 218 Democrats and the chamber's lone independent.

The vote even drew a curious George Stephanopoulos to the Capitol. The former aide to House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who has evolved into Clinton's chief spokesman and a cover-boy celebrity, watched quietly from just off the House chamber until he was surrounded by reporters.

"This sends a strong signal to the Senate that the American people are ready to end gridlock and bring the deficit down," Stephanopoulos said. But conservative Rep. Tim

Tony Russi

Penny, D-Minn., said the narrow vote could do just the opposite — especially because some House Democrats supported the bill assuming the Senate would change it.

Several southern lawmakers came aboard when Clinton offered concessions to peanut and tobacco farmers. And Democratic leaders and conservatives agreed to a procedure that will pressure — but not force — Congress to cut benefit programs such as Medicare, if they exceed annual spending targets.

Indoor life may be hazardous to your health, study says

By KIM I. MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans on average spend 93 percent of their time indoors, where exposure to dust mites, fungi, pet dander and cockroach feces may cause allergies, a government-sponsored study says.

The 308-page report, released Thursday, examined the magnitude of allergies and disease caused by indoor allergens and recommended ways to improve the diagnosis and treatment of such illnesses.

It also suggested ways that engineers and architects can change buildings to decrease the incidence of indoor allergies.

"Allergies play a key role in triggering some cases of asthma, and treatment for asthma-related illnesses costs more than $6 billion a year," said Roy Patterson, chairman of the Institute of Medicine committee that produced the report.

One in five Americans will experience allergy-related illnesses at some time during their lives, according to the report. A significant number of those will be triggered by exposure to indoor allergens — biological or chemical substances that cause an allergic reaction.

Although most cases will be mild or moderate, some people will die as a result of allergic diseases, the study noted.

Americans on average spend 93 percent of their time indoors, 2 percent outdoors and 5 percent in transit between the two, the report said, citing two National Research Council studies.

The major sources of indoor allergens are dust mites, fungi, pets and cockroaches, according to the report.

The dust mite is a microscopic organism that lives primarily in carpeting, pillows, mattresses and upholstery. Fungi release allergen-containing spores and other substances. Pet dander can persist in buildings even after the animals are removed. And roach parts and feces are an indoor health hazard in urban areas.

Several changes in the way Americans live indoors may have affected the level of indoor allergens, the report suggested. These include higher indoor temperatures, reduced ventilation, wall-to-wall carpeting and cool-wash detergents that have led to laundering bedding in temperatures too low to kill dust mites.

The report offered several things people can do in their homes to reduce indoor allergens, including: removing wall-to-wall carpeting and replacing it with polished floors; covering mattresses and pillows with plastic; washing linens weekly in hot water; and lowering the relative humidity.

For people who have indoor allergies, "environment control is always the first thing to try because it's the least damaging to the person," said Harriet Burge, vice chairwoman of the study committee and an associate professor at the Harvard School of Public Health.

"It has no side effects, certainly no physical side effects," she said. "It might have emotional ones if you have to get rid of your cat or not have a carpet on your floor, but it isn't like taking steroids."

For building designers and engineers, the report recommended better ventilation of buildings and use of filters in heating and air conditioning systems that can trap the tiniest allergen particles, such as cat dander and fungi fragments.

For health care providers, the report recommended better training in the diagnosis and management of allergic diseases.

The study was sponsored by several government agencies, including the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Institutes of Health.

Microsoft, office product makers uniting on interface, Gates says

By EVAN RAMSTAD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Microsoft Corp. is spearheading the development of software to link personal computers with copiers, fax machines and printers that would radically change the machines' roles in the office, chairman Bill Gates says.

Microsoft, the nation's largest software company, and several large office product makers on June 9 will announce the new standard that could eliminate the overlapping functions of printers, copiers and fax machines.

"Everyone who makes a fax, printer, copier or phone should be aware of this and take a hard look at participating in making products that conform to this architecture," Gates said in an interview with The Associated Press on Thursday.

The standard is the first step to a "digital office" that distributes documents more efficiently and securely, he said.

The road to the software standard is being paved by some advances in infrared technology led by Hewlett-Packard Co., analysts say.

"They've got some very good patents that they have received in the area of infrared that they're licensing to the competition to help assure there's an open standard," said Ken Jacobsen, consultant with Stanford Research Institute in Menlo Park, Calif.

Hewlett-Packard unveiled some palm-sized computers that incorporate the infrared technology this week.

"Today, it exists in some small products. You're going to see it in some large products down the road," said Roy Brealaui, an HP product line manager in Corvallis, Ore.

Although many office machines can already "talk" to computers, the new standard will be based on Microsoft's Windows operating system, popular in many personal computers.

Fax manufacturers Ricoh and Muratec, formerly Murata Business Systems Inc., have said they would participate in the Microsoft announcement. Sharp, Panasonic, Canon and several others are also planning products incorporating the software, the trade journal Infoworld reported this week.

"We'll have a pretty good critical mass of fax, copier and phone-type makers," Gates said.

A common standard will allow software writers to develop applications tailored for different office settings.

"You allow for some more differentiation that just isn't there today with the devices," he said.

Products with the interface will carry a trademark Gates said would be unveiled at the time of the formal announcement.

Microsoft and Intel Corp., the leading maker of chips that are the brains of personal computers, earlier this month announced they were working on a standard interface that will allow a telephone to be operated from a personal computer.

The two companies are also working on a specification they hope becomes the standard for cable-converter boxes that will make TVs interactive information tools.

Earlier this week, Microsoft formally unveiled its next-generation Windows NT operating system for the desktop computer, where the company's fortune was made. An operating system controls such basic computer functions as opening files.

The NT system, able to link PCs into networks that sometimes as powerful as a mainframe computer, is Microsoft's first step into an arena of very advanced corporate computing.

GARAGE SALE GUIDELINES

1. Advise what people want: Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.
2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale by sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs clear directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors.
3. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location preferably with a calculator or adding machine.
4. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask. "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start bargaining.
5. Get an early start. Set up displays the evening before, if possible.
6. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly ones. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar merchandise.
7. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5", another for "Under $1". Consider having a batch of items that are "FREE" with purchase of $5. Remember the youngsters, too. Encourage the sale of small, low-priced items that are appropriate for the purpose.
8. Time your sale carefully! Have it at a time when most people are at home and unaccompanied with special events.
9. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact.
10. Be organized! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list the items. Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers.

Giving up, getting along and glorying in life

By AIDA CERREZ
Associated Press Writer

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — At the devastated train station, two women weep in tearful farewell to a sister they expect never to see again. Across town, a maimed athlete glories in life. Nearby, artists drink to forget.

All three groups represent the texture of life in a city besieged and battered by a year of war.

Some have given up, their spirits rent. Among them are 350 people who left from the train station early Thursday on buses bound for Macedonia, whose government agreed to accept them.

The mood was somber. Most were saying farewell to friends and relatives who chose to stay behind.

"I'm old, and I'm almost sure I will never come back," said Fatima Avdagic, 60, who was leaving with her sister, Safeta Abazovic, 54. "I am probably seeing my sister for the last time."

The third sister, 57-year-old Evers Pilav, broke down and hugged her departing sisters. "I have two sons here, and they are all I have left," Mrs. Pilav said. "I lost everything else. I can't lose them, too."

Those who remain face the daily threat of random, violent death.

As the refugees were leaving for Macedonia, Mayor Mohammed Kresevljakovic and a few other officials gathered for a brief ceremony honoring those killed a year ago when two mortars slammed into a crowd of people lined up for bread.

At least 16 died immediately, and an undetermined number of others died later of injuries.

In a city where death is part of everyday life, few people turned out for the ceremony on Vase

Miskina Street, now commonly referred to as the Street of Defiance since what has become known as the Bread-Line Massacre.

Two elderly women, who refused to give their names, shuffled silently to the spot where the first shell landed and placed a potted flower in memory of a sister who died there. Dressed in Sunday finery, they said it was the first time they had ventured from their home in a year, except to collect food packages.

Nearby, Kasim Kabahija, 47, leaned on his crutches and watched the ceremony. Kabahija lost his leg in the attack.

"I didn't hear anything," he recalled. "I didn't see anything. I just heard this zoom in my ears. When I opened my eyes, I saw I didn't have a leg."

His voice choked for a moment. "I survived because I played soccer for 30 years, and my body was strong enough to endure." It's painful, but you cannot believe how happy I am to be alive."

Actor Miodrag Trifunov also survived the massacre, but he chose not to attend the ceremony.

Instead, he and fellow artists gathered in the bar of the nearby Kamerni Theater 55 to drink, socialize and prepare for a play.

He and others prefer to carry on with their lives as best they can and find ways to pretend the war is simply a bad dream.

"Maybe it's a big deal for foreigners, but not for us," he said of the anniversary. "We live with it every day."

For Trifunov and his friends, forgetting was more important than remembering. As he spoke, actresses did their makeup, and an actor adjusted his drum-major costume.

Bullying in school: Teenager silences tormentor with gunfire

By WAYNE WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

RED HILL, Pa. — At 6-foot-5, Michael Swann was the biggest teen in his high school. He had a reputation for toughness to match his size.

Almost every student knew him; few say they feared him.

Jason Michael Smith was an exception. He had a reason — for years, Swann had bullied Smith, pushing, punching and kicking him.

On Monday, Smith took a semiautomatic pistol to his first-period biology class and shot the 16-year-old Swann twice in the head in front of 22 students at Upper Perkiomen High School. Smith got the gun at home, from a cabinet that was supposed to be locked.

The solution Smith chose was extreme, but the abuse he endured is a common problem often overlooked at schools, said George Butterfield, deputy director of the National School Safety Center based at Pepperdine University in Westlake, Calif.

"Bullying in schools is American as can be," he said. "A lot of people haven't taken it seriously. But it's really crime, assault, extortion and robbery."

Classmates of Swann and Smith, both 10th graders, said the bullying was common knowledge among students, but school officials said they knew of no problems.

"They've been in conflict since seventh grade," classmate Tyler Schaffer said. "I guess he just finally got under his (Smith's) nails."

Smith, 15, is being held without bail on a charge of murder and faces trial as an adult. If convicted, he could get life in prison.

The soft-spoken, 5-foot-4 Smith never told his mother about being bullied by Swann, who was more than a foot taller.

But he left his family a note the morning of the shooting indicating he had planned the killing for at least three days, said Police Chief Thomas J. Liott in the Upper Perkiomen Valley, a region that includes Red Hill and several other small towns north of Philadelphia.

After the shooting, Smith ran 300 yards and sat calmly under a tree with the gun in his hand. When police came, he threw gun over his shoulder, knelt and put his hands behind his back.

Smith attended church youth group meetings, played ball on neighborhood streets and was not involved much in school activities.

"He was a cool kid. He wasn't an outcast," said classmate Jason Moses.

Swann's family has not commented publicly about the case.

To Cynthia Venturini, whose son committed suicide after being bullied, Smith should not be judged too harshly.

"He's not a criminal," Venturini said. "It's sad that he took it to those extremes. But what he needs is help, not prosecution."

Help is what Venturini said her son, Justin Hancock, needed but didn't get.

Hancock, 14, shot himself in the head with his grandfather's pistol on what would have been his first day of ninth grade in September 1987.

The previous school year, classmates tormented the slight, bookish boy at his school in West Leechburg, Venturini said.

Since her son's death, Venturini said she has participated in forums with the Pittsburgh-based group Teens At Risk, which works with schools to recognize the problems that bullies create.

After Justin's suicide, "I realized the school didn't see what was happening," Venturini said. "Were they blind?"

Bully victims often feel that their plight is unnoticed by teachers, Butterfield said.

When it is noticed, "a lot of times, the message is, 'If you're a real man, you will handle this yourself,'" Butterfield said.

"Most of us would be sympathetic if an adult took the matter in his own hands. A student shouldn't be put in that position," he said.

$2,000 spent to do Hillary's hair and face

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — There's news behind the photograph of Hillary Rodham Clinton on the cover of Family Circle magazine: The publication spent $2,000 to fly Beverly Hills hair stylist Christophe and a makeup artist to Washington to groom the first lady before the photo session.

The two have traveled to the White House at least twice to coif and colorize Mrs. Clinton for magazine covers. The New York Times reported today.

For the May issue of Family Circle, the magazine paid fees and airplane travel costs for the hair and makeup stylists amounting to $2,000, the editor in chief, Jacqueline Leo, told The Times.

And the Los Angeles Times Magazine paid $750 to cover some of the costs of flying in the California duo for the portrait of Mrs. Clinton that adorned a cover last Sunday, the newspaper reported.

In both cases, the publications paid for the hair and makeup at the suggestion of Mrs. Clinton's press secretary, Lisa Caputo, or Neel Lattimore, a deputy press secretary, The Times said.

The practice is common among magazines, although the $2,000 paid by Family Circle, which is owned by The New York Times Co., "exceeded the industry average for editorial photographs," Leo said.

Cristophe last week trimmed President Clinton's hair on Air Force One as the plane waited on the runway at Los Angeles International Airport, forcing a few planes to circle.

Caputo confirmed that the White House had on occasion brought in Christophe and a makeup artist from Los Angeles to work on Mrs. Clinton for a magazine photo, according to The Times.

The Times said it also was asked by Lattimore to pay $750 to help cover cosmetic costs for its own magazine cover story on the first lady last Sunday. But the newspaper says it declined.

"I said we don't pay for hair and makeup for photographs of legitimate news subjects, such as the first lady," said Kathleen Ryan, the magazine's photo editor.

Top U.S. military job up to Clinton

By SUSANNE M. SCHAPER
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — Sometime this summer, President Clinton will reach into the celestial ranks of America's military and pluck four stars to help guide him through his presidency.

The current chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell, is scheduled to retire Sept. 30, and it will be up to Clinton to choose his successor.

Public maneuvering for the president's favor has begun already, surprising veteran officers more attuned to a low-key battle for attention among the military's uppermost ranks.

Normally, top candidates don't even want their names mentioned for fear of being viewed as publicly lobbying for the job.

"Please, if you mention my guy, just put the names in alphabetical order, OK?" an aide to one top officer pleaded when the subject was raised.

The universe from which Clinton must choose his top military adviser is small: By law, only the 15 four-star generals or admirals on active duty are eligible for the post. A president can, in rare circumstances, turn to a retired officer who has held a top command post.

"It's an absolutely crucial decision," former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said in a recent interview. "It is essential to helping a president perform his mission as commander in chief."

Cheney said Clinton should ignore pressures to follow the tradition to rotate the post among the four services. That would put an Air Force general in line to be chairman.

"The most important thing is to get the best individual for the job," Cheney said.

Only these people are eligible for the JCS chairmanship: Powell's No. 2, Adm. David Jeremiah; the chiefs of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps; and the commanders of the unified and specified commands (those in operational control of U.S. combat forces).

It is a two-year term, subject to confirmation by the Senate, but most chairmen are reappointed for another two years.

Many who follow the race for chairman favor Air Force Gen. Lee Butler or Adm. Paul Miller, with Army Gen. John Shalikashvili as a dark horse. These observers caution that their musings reflect Pentagon insider talk — not Clinton's thinking.

Few who follow the race for the chairman's slot would disagree that Powell — the nation's first black chairman — will be a tough act to follow, given his breadth of experience in the military and the White House.

Nevertheless, there are plenty of candidates for the job given that the next chairman will be able to forge the military of the future in the post-Cold War era.

The chairman also serves as the president's top military adviser, a crucial slot given Clinton's lack of military experience and his administration's bruised relationship with the armed forces over budget cuts and allowing homosexuals to serve in uniform.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin has pledged to make sure that Clinton meets and gets to know the candidates for the position, and a few of the top candidates already have had that chance.

Clinton has met several times with all the top military officers of the services: Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon Sullivan; Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Frank Kelso II; Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill McPeak; and Marine Commandant Gen. Carl Mundy Jr.

But their initial introduction was a stiff White House session on Clinton's plans to lift the ban against homosexuals in the military.

SSC hosts national qualifier

From Staff Reports

SEMINOLE COUNTY — Set two more places at the table.

As it turns out, 56 girls' slowpitch softball teams will be in town this weekend to play in the Seminole Softball Club's Memorial Day Tournament. Originally, it was projected that 54 teams would be participating.

The event serves as a qualifier for the National Softball Association's Youth World Series, which will be played in Jupiter the weekend of July 22-25. Last year, the Seminole Softball Club 14-and-Under Eagles went on to win the national championship.

The second, third, and fourth-place teams in each of the five age groups will qualify for a berth in the state tournament, which will be played in Coral Springs over the 4th of July weekend.

Each age bracket will play through a round-robin bracket, which will serve to seed the single-elimination championship tournament. To get in the nearly 150 games, the tournament will be played at Soldier's Creek Park (home to the Seminole Softball Club), the Oviado Sports Complex, and Central Winds Park.

Soldier's Creek Park is located on State Road 419 southeast of U.S. 17-92. The Oviado Sports Complex is on State Road 419 in Oviado while Central Winds Park is on State Road 434 in Winter Springs.

Admission is free. The concession stands will be open at all three locations.

10-AND-UNDER

A field of 10 teams will play in the round robin portion of the tournament at Soldier's Creek Park on Saturday. With the single-elimination finals scheduled for Sunday at Soldier's Creek Park.

Playing under the name of the Seminole Warriors for the Seminole Softball Club are Kelly Manning, Ashley Scott, Lauren Seay, Kelly Cruz, Julie Keefe, Megan McCarthy, Melanie Pace, Rebekah Colon, Lauren Watts, Jamie Anderson, Leslie Helms, Jamie Pace, Kristen Schrupp, and Alayna Dontrich.

12-AND-UNDER

The 12 teams in this division won't begin play until Sunday, when they will play their round-robin bracket at Central Winds Park and Soldier's Creek Park. The finals are scheduled for Monday at Soldier's Creek Park.

The Seminole Softball Club will be represented by two teams, the Seminole Hawks and the Seminole Making up the Tomahawks are Jennifer Brown, Pam Gerie, Lindsey Bell, Jennifer Nolan, Cassie McCrae, Ashley Webster, Carrie Elliott, Angie Henton, Cindy Marcotte, Samantha Seales, Katie Griffin, Jessica Voltz, Renee Nicholson, Julie Johnson, and Tiffany Wiggins.

14-AND-UNDER

Not only does this division boast the largest number of teams (14), it features the defending NSA national champions, the Seminole Eagles.

On Sunday, the division will play its round-robin bracket at the Oviado Sports Complex and Central Winds Park. They will return to Central Winds Park on Monday for the finals. Representing the Seminole Softball Club will be the defending-national champion Eagles and the Seminole Savages.

Playing for the Eagles are Jeannie Manz, C.P. Springfield, Jonnie Boland, A.B. Simmons, Carrie Woods, Lindsay Merrell, Jennifer Davis, Maggie Bernsien, Melissa Barney, Branna Van Swearingen, Jennifer Gillespie, Jamie Sharpe, Yira Segarra, Heather Wightman, Sarah McWenney, and Becky Letzkus.

The Savages are made up of Stephanie Thomas, Lori Brosemer, Vilmarie Toro, Heather Ethridge, Jennie Smith, Shantelle Crosby, Lisa Colon, Jenny Smith, Debbie Duber, Carol Wyler, Monica Camardese, Nicky Dix, and Renee Nieves.

16-AND-UNDER

Three Seminole County teams — the Seminole Softball Club's Seminole Falcons, the Sanford All-Stars, and the Winter Springs Red Hots — make up a quarter of the division's 12-team field.

They will play their robin-robin bracket at Central Winds Park on Saturday and their finals at Central Winds Park on Sunday.

Representing the Seminole Softball Club on the Falcons will be Samantha Boyce, Traci Brown, Elizabeth Davidson, Caralee Dowling, Jamie Dugan, Cheri Green, Erin Majjub, Maggie Majewski, Jaime Mendelsohn, Jill Mendelsohn, Lara Richeard, Lisa Richeard, Brittany Scott, Jesse Smith, and Nadine White-Davis.

The rosters of the Sanford All-Stars and the Winter Springs Red Hots were not available.

18-AND-UNDER

This is the only division that will not have a Seminole Softball Club-based team in the field. Seminole Quicksilver, a traveling team made up primarily of local athletes, will represent the county in the eight-team draw.

Because of the small number of teams, the division will play its round-robin bracket at the Oviado Sports Complex on Saturday morning, then come back at 2 p.m. Saturday afternoon at OSC for the finals.

IN BRIEF

Seniors to go Hawaiian

Sanford Senior Citizens are reminded to bring a covered dish Tuesday, June 1 at 11 a.m. at the Senior Center. There will be a covered dish luncheon.

After the luncheon the Brain Towers Kitchen Band will entertain with a Hawaiian show. Wear your mu-mus. All members are encouraged to attend.

'Adopt the Ag Center Day'

The volunteer master gardeners of Seminole County have started an "Adopt the Ag Center Day" where they weed, clean and mulch all the flower beds, vine and perennial gardens and landscape around the Ag Center. Mulch is very inexpensive and helps to retain moisture in the soil for plants, according to Tricia Thomas, urban horticulturist.

The perennial and vine gardens were started by the master gardeners to help the public in selecting plants and vines that do well in the Florida landscape. The gardens are open to all and a listing of the perennials and vines may be obtained at the master gardeners' desk in the lobby.

Poets to talk verse

First Florida Poets meet at 10 a.m. every Monday at the Deland Public Library. Interested poets are welcome.

Sanford Rotarians to meet

Rotary Club of Sanford meets every Monday at noon, at the Sanford Civic Center.

Cancer support group meets

Support, Hope and Recovery, S.H.A.R., meets every Monday afternoon at 5 p.m. at Central Florida Regional Hospital in the far corner of the dining room. This is a self help support group for all cancer survivors, whether in treatment now or finished with it. Call 324-8737 or 322-7785 for more information.

Trash pollutes environment

Floridians generate 8.3 pounds of solid waste daily

Garbage, waste, rubbish, trash — we, the people, are producing too much of it! On the average, a Floridian generates 8.3 pounds of solid waste every day, 4.7 pounds more than the national average estimated by the Environmental Protection Agency. The municipal solid waste found in the home and office garbage can is a product of natural resources used to manufacture it. This includes energy resources both as a base material (feedstock) and as power for processing and transportation. The mining, refining and consumption of these energy resources creates a variety of pollutants. Given this information, it is easy to see how municipal solid waste is a triple whammy.

● Natural resources are used up, decreasing the quantity of these irreplaceable materials.

● Energy is consumed, leaving less for the future while creating more pollutants and increasing the potential for global change, and

● Efforts at municipal solid waste disposal are contaminating the environment in which we live.

There are three major methods of dealing with the solid waste generated: landfills, incineration and recycling. Each method has capacity limitations. Therefore, the best means of subduing the problems associated with municipal solid waste is to reduce the amount created.

The first line of defense — Source reduction, also called

CONSUMER FOCUS

waste minimization, means to decrease the amount of garbage generated per person per day. It is pollution prevention activities of manufacturers and consumers aimed at reducing the toxicity or quantity of products before they are purchased. This article discusses opportunities for consumer waste prevention.

When fewer products are manufactured, less energy is consumed to make and transport them and, ultimately, less energy ends up in the garbage can.

Expanding energy — In 1984, people in the United States discarded 59.8 billion pounds of paper packaging (Selke, 1990). Approximately 660 million trees for paper pulp were harvested and the energy equivalent to 17 billion gallons of gasoline was consumed in the processing and transportation of this paper packaging. Seventeen billion gallons of gasoline could keep the 60-watt bulb on your back porch lit for over 400 million years.

In 1987, 4.4 billion pounds of plastic film were thrown away in the United States (Selke, 1990).

The production of this plastic consumed the energy equivalent of 2.8 billion gallons of gasoline. This same energy could have run your 2-cubic foot refrigerator continuously for over 5 million years.

If source reduction measures were used to decrease the amount of plastic and paper packaging used by 10 percent, 8.4 billion pounds of municipal solid waste would be removed from the waste stream and the energy equivalent of almost 2.0 billion gallons of gasoline would be conserved. Two billion gallons of gasoline is greater than the energy it takes to operate your television for 170 billion hours. One hundred and seventy billion hours is over 850 million years of Star Trek reruns.

Operation source reduction — Source reduction is about making choices 365 days a year at home, at work, in the car, and at the store. Any reduction in the amount of municipal solid waste generated by one individual is a successful waste minimizing mission. The following provides descriptions of a few source reducing game plans that illustrate the enormous energy and resource savings and environmental benefits that can happen from the actions of concerned people.

Julies: Buy the gallon. A household of four people can drink more than 45 gallons of Florida orange juice in one year if each person drinks a typical 4-ounce serving with breakfast every morning. Unless this orange juice comes from freshly squeezed, backyard oranges, it must be purchased in some type of container at the grocery store.

Orange juice can be purchased in 16-ounce, 32-ounce, and 64-ounce wax-coated paper containers. The selection of container size significantly affects the energy and environmental impact of the purchase. Buying 45 gallons of orange juice during the year in 64-ounce containers costs $272, while buying 45 gallons of orange juice in 16-ounce containers costs $433. Therefore, buying orange juice in bulk can save $160 annually. In addition, since bulk buying reduces the quantity of containers used per fluid ounce, buying orange juice in bulk can save enough energy to power the hall night-light for 490 nights.

Paper consumption at the copier: In an office of 50 people, it is easy to imagine the office copier making 500 copies per day. If all 500 copies per day are one-sided, energy equal to 430 gallons of gasoline is consumed at the paper mill to make the 1,250 pounds of paper per office per year.

Many copy machines are able to make double-sized copies automatically. If half of the copies made in only one office were double-sided, the office would save $150 a year, because it would save 85 reams of paper annually. At the same time, 300 pounds of waste paper and energy equal to 100 gallons of gasoline would be removed from the waste stream annually. The energy in 100 gallons of gasoline could power a computer for 434 work days.

Conclusion: If the problem isn't fabricated, a solution doesn't have to be found. Municipal solid waste can't be completely eliminated, but the size of the problem can be decreased through source reduction. Source reduction includes energy conserving strategies because it takes energy to make things, it takes energy to dispose of things, and the expenditure of energy itself makes municipal solid waste. Some examples of how source reduction saves energy have been illustrated in this article, but there are more energy-saving source reduction strategies just waiting to be discovered.

Tranquilizer abuse calls for treatment

DEAR MARY: I started taking tranquilizers a few years ago when we were going through some tough times. But I kept right on taking them after things settled down because I liked the way they made me feel.

When my regular doctor refused to give me any more refills, I started going from doctor to doctor, making up wild tales and getting more prescriptions. I'm off the tranquilizers now, but I'm using other stuff to make me feel better, and sometimes I get an almost out of control urge to get just one more prescription for tranquilizers.

I'm on a vicious merry-go-round and I want to get off. Do you think a regular counselor could help me? I don't want to get involved with any type of drug program if I don't have to. Do NOT tell me to talk it over with my doctor. He'd throw me out of the office if he knew what I've done.

HOOKED AND NEED HELP
DEAR HOOKED: I think you're grossly underestimating your doctor, but if you refuse to talk to him about your drug problem, I'll give you my opinion. I feel that you need to start doing some research to find the best drug abuse counseling service available to you.

Begin your search by checking your medical insurance policy to see what, if any, coverage is available to you. There may be a list of preferred providers assigned for mental, emotional and drug-related problems. I feel that it's beneficial to use a counseling service that specializes in the field of addiction if at all possible.

DRUG COUNSELOR

You wouldn't go to an eye doctor for an appendectomy. It's the same thing with addictions: go somewhere where they have specialized training in recognizing all the various facets of the addiction problem. They know the right questions to ask and can help you recognize when you're showing symptoms of addictive behaviors in your mental processing. A big part of the addictive disorder is the impaired thinking that most often is more difficult to overcome than the actual physical addiction.

(Mary Balk is a Certified Addiction Prevention Professional and counselor. Write her at the Sanford Herald, or call the Seminole County Schools' Drug Prevention office, 322-5558.

Receiving line is obsolete in 'new' wedding tradition

DEAR ABBY: In reference to receiving lines at weddings:

Twenty years ago, when my children were married, receiving lines were considered a must. Just before one of the weddings, my husband was told it wasn't required that the father of the bride stand in line. He was relieved, so he went around greeting everyone. I wanted so to join him, but felt obligated to suffer through the receiving line.

Since that time, many Chinese and Vietnamese have moved into our city of Garden Grove (Calif.). They work hard at learning our language and customs.

I have attended several of their weddings, and they have a lovely custom: After everyone is seated for the dinner, the wedding party goes to each table and greets the guests. That way, none of the guests are left out, and it is very gracious having the bride and groom come to greet you.

BETTY LANDEY
DEAR BETTY: Thank you for sharing that sensible and charming custom of the Garden Grove Vietnamese and Chinese citizens. We can all learn from others.

DEAR ABBY: Now that we are into the wedding season, I'd be ever so grateful if you would put this in your widely read column.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

When a couple receives an invitation to a wedding, and the invitation reads, "Adults only, please," they should not take offense.

Last year, we gave a party at our home. We have a swimming pool in our back yard. Well, a couple brought their 4-year-old son, Johnny, along. (We didn't think we had to put "no children" on the invitation, but now we are sorry we didn't.)

Everyone was having a good time, when Johnny jumped into the deep end of the pool — white suit and all. His father jumped in after him, as Johnny is no swimmer. Needless to say, it put a damper on the party.

Henceforth, our party became "the party where Johnny jumped into the pool."

PALM SPRINGS
DEAR PALM SPRINGS: The fault belongs to Johnny's parents who brought him, uninvited, to an adult party — and failed to keep an eye on him.

DEAR ABBY: My experience with UPS is entirely different from those of your readers who had experienced problems. I, too, am handicapped like the gentleman from Portland, Ore. I am alerted to a UPS delivery by a ring of the doorbell followed by "Frank" calling out "UPS." Frank then brings the package upstairs, makes his way past my large dog and puts the parcel on my kitchen counter, taps the delivery code into his handheld computer, and is on his way.

I have never asked for this service. Frank started doing it on his own. Perhaps those who have had problems should move here to Seymour, Wis., or maybe get a Frank of their own.

Incidentally, my computer — delivered by Frank — arrived in perfect condition.

Perhaps ...

A cannonball detonates a scream muted by death. North or South ... blue or gray ... what could have been is no more. Perhaps an infant is fatherless. Perhaps a bride is a widow. Perhaps ...

1915 ... World War I. One hundred twenty-eight Americans perish as a German submarine sinks the British Lusitania. In 1917, the United States declares war. American blood floods European trenches. Perhaps a book is never written. Perhaps an invention remains incomplete. Perhaps ...

December 7, 1941 ... Japan bombs Pearl Harbor. World War II is declared. Thousands die in the European and Pacific theatres. Perhaps a painting remains undone. Perhaps a song remains unsung. Perhaps ...

Conflicts in Korea, Vietnam, the Middle East ... more lives lost. Perhaps a planet exists in obscurity. Perhaps cures for cancer and AIDS are delayed. Perhaps ...

Perhaps the world has learned war has no "winner," that the fruits of peace are the true "victory." Perhaps ...

An open door for children

Pastor Smith fills a need through Grandmother's Club

By SHIRLEY BAKER
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Pastor Mary Smith officially opened the doors to Sanford Christian Worship Center, at 1509 W. 13th St., with a week long revival which resulted in "the acceptance of Christ by 28 people," according to Pastor Smith.

The decision to open this church did not happen overnight.

"It all started when my dedication to the Lord and concern for children led me to organize the Grandmother's Club, and at the suggestion of Sanford black historian and club member, Alfreda Wallace, the Grandmothers started visiting the Seminole Juvenile Detention Center.

"Looking into the eyes of these children and seeing a plea for help, it was clear that these boys and girls were malnourished from the absence of love."

In addition to the spiritual food delivered by Pastor Smith, the Grandmothers proved how much they loved the youngsters by giving each of them a birthday party each month, "something many of them admitted never having," said Smith.

The weekly visits of the Grandmothers also resulted in Pastor Smith being named the first Chaplain of the center. "My ministry at the center has led hundreds of these youths to the Lord. Their conversions have made them A-1 citizens and living testimonies of what a knowledge of the word of the Lord can do."

Known as the "Bonnet Lady," Smith explains, "I wear a bonnet and long dress because I wore a long apron and bonnet the first time I visited the center, and I want my children (those ministered to at the center) to be able to recognize me whenever and where they see me after their release."

Pastor Smith said, "The Lord gave me a great burden when he revealed to me, in a vision, that a place for the children to remain under her ministry after their release, was needed." The Sanford Christian Center is the result of this revelation. "I was able to purchase, on my terms, the building from Mr. Dewey Smith, and with the donated services of Mr. B.C. Conklin, an engineer, I was able to meet city codes for the building." Now in addition to the children, she also ministers to a segment of Seminole County's population that is unable to provide financial assistance to the church. To adequately furnish the building, Pastor Smith needs $5,000 to pay for furniture already ordered. She has faith in Seminole County residents and knows they will come to the aid of the church.

Donations may be made to Pastor Mary Smith, 1703 W. 13th St., Sanford, FL 32771.

Jewish community celebrates Feast of Weeks worldwide

LONGWOOD — The Feast of Weeks, so named because it occurs 49 days, or a "week of weeks" after the Passover, was celebrated by the world Jewish Community and the Jews of Seminole County this week.

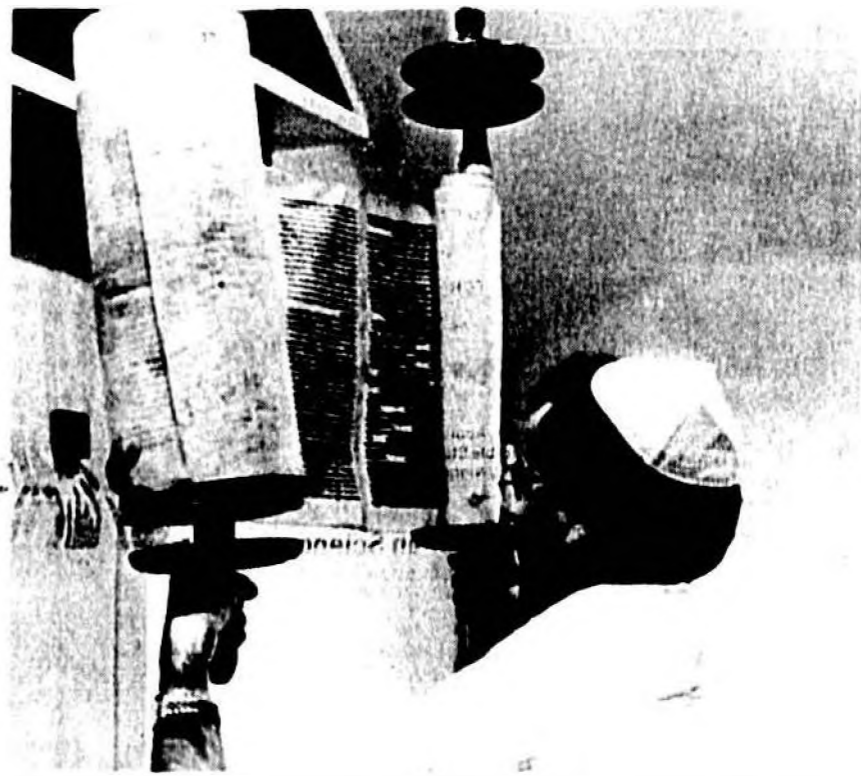

One of the three pilgrimage festivals during which Jews from the earliest times until today ascended to Jerusalem, the holiday is called Shavuot in Hebrew and is also known as Pentecost since it marks the 50th day after the exodus from Egypt as described in the Five Books of Moses. The festival is also an agricultural celebration known as the Holiday of the First Fruits harvested at this time in the Land of Israel.

In Jewish tradition a most important additional meaning has been attached to Shavuot, the time when God gave the Law and Commandments on Mount Sinai and is thus also called the Season of Giving of the Torah or Five Books of Moses. A description of the events at Sinai as described in the 19th and 20th chapters of the second book of the Bible, Exodus, is read from authentic Torah Scrolls in synagogues throughout the world. The scrolls are painstakingly maintained in the ancient traditions, copied, even today, on parchments bound together in a scroll. A specially trained scribe writes the text with a leather quill and an ink created from goats. The scribes' intensive training leaves them knowing the text of the Five Books of Moses by heart, yet they must always copy the Torah from another Torah scroll and not rely on memory alone.

Such scrolls are taken from the Holy Arks placed in each synagogue on the Sabbath and a portion is read in such a manner that those in attendance for an entire year will have the opportunity to hear with their own ears the entire Torah or Five Books of Moses during the course of that year. Upon concluding the final chapter of the fifth book, Deuteronomy, the scroll is rewound immediately to begin the process all over again with the first chapter of the Book of Genesis.

Because of its association with the Torah which has been given for Jews to study and learn carefully, Jewish learning also plays an important part of the celebration of Shavuot, the Feast of Weeks.

Traditionally religious school graduations and closing exercises take place during worship services. Congregation Beth Am in Longwood will celebrate its Jewish educational program by honoring its 17 middle school graduates, the faculty and staff of the school as well as all 150 students who attend five hours each week to learn Hebrew, Bible, history and Jewish customs and traditions. All are welcome to attend those services at the synagogue on 3899 Sand Lake Rd., 2 1/2 miles west of Brantley High School.

Given in gratitude

The Rev. Nolan T. Pitts, pastor of Historic St. James A.M.E. Church, extends a hand of gratitude to Cab Bookman, a foreman in the maintenance department of the Seminole County school system for his devotion and attention to the buildings and grounds of the church. Bookman, a financial officer of the church, member of the steward board and a member of the Eavloy and McCoy Male Chorus, was given a plaque by fellow church associates for his volunteer work.

Beware of mouthwash that's high in alcohol

DEAR DR. GOTT: I've recently read that alcohol-containing mouthwash is an unrecognized cause of poisoning in young children. Listerine is touted to have a 26.9 percent alcohol content, the highest of some 12 brands tested. Is anything being done to alert the public of this potential hazard?

appropriate treatment for PVCs that cause symptoms. Only you and your doctor can judge its effectiveness, however, by determining whether it has reduced or stopped your PVCs. If so, fine; if not, you might be helped by changing to a calcium channel blocker. From the information you supply, I believe you needn't worry.

DEAR READER: You're right that mouthwashes containing alcohol can be toxic for small children. In fact, the American Association of Poison Control Centers recently reported that during the past five years, more than 10,000 children under the age 6 ingested such products. One ounce of a high-alcohol mouthwash can cause serious side effects, such as seizures and brain damage, in a toddler. Several organizations, including the American Academy of Pediatrics, have petitioned the Consumer Product Safety Commission to require child-resistant packaging for all mouthwashes that contain more than 5 percent alcohol. DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm in my early 40s and have PVCs. I underwent a stress test, an echocardiogram and a 24-hour Holter monitor. I'm on Tenormin 50 mg daily, and my doctor feels this is adequate control. Do you agree or should something else be done?

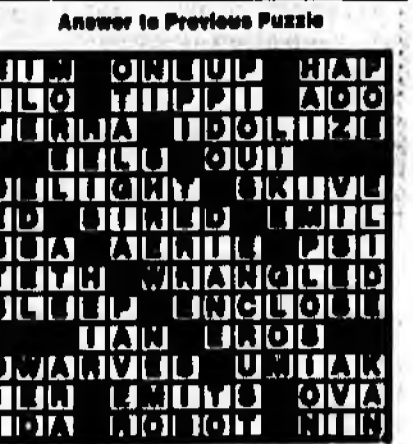

DEAR READER: Premature ventricular contractions are extra heartbeats that, in the main, are innocuous. Most people experience them on occasion, especially during periods of stress or fatigue. Caffeine and other stimulants, notably nicotine, may worsen them. Evidently, your PVCs were frequent and numerous enough for your doctor to order tests to make sure that your heart is normal. I gather that it is. (Arteriosclerotic heart disease can sometimes cause PVCs that could be dangerous in the presence of a cardiac disorder.) Tenormin, a beta blocker, is

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Every year a surprisingly large number of bridge books appear. But recently, perhaps for economic reasons, there has been an upsurge in booklets. These contain around 24 pages and give information about one specific topic. Last year saw the appearance of the 10-volume Bridge Mini Series by Norma Sands and Jan Jantschke (Devyn, $37.95, 800-274-2221). The set concentrates mainly on bidding topics, but there is advice on opening leads and defensive signals. Today's deal comes from the booklet on defensive signals. West leads the diamond four. After declarer wins with dummy's ace, how should East plan the defense? I would open that North hand with one no-trump, not one club, if my range were 15-17 points. It is an excellent 14-point hand with a strong five-card suit and good intermediates. I would treat it as 15. West was right to lead his lowest diamond as he hadn't supported his partner's suit. East had to find four defensive tricks. Well, there was probably one available in diamonds. And if West won a trump trick, a heart switch at that point would hopefully net the required two more tricks. But how do you get West to switch to a heart? The authors recommend East's playing a discouraging diamond five at trick one. An alternative approach is to drop the queen, which technically denies holding the king. Placing South with king doubleton of diamonds, West will have no reason to continue the suit. A heart switch will stand out like an elephant train in the Kentucky Derby.

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
May 29, 1993
In the year ahead you might become involved with two distinct groups of friends. One group will share your interest in worldly events, the other your interest in social areas. Each will offer unique benefits. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Domestic matters should be given priority over your other activities today. After these obligations are met, you will be free to spend your time any way you like. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker Instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. CANCER (June 21-July 22) In matters where you let your emotions dictate your behavior, the results might not be to your liking. However, you will appreciate results when you logically work out the details of the project.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If there is something special you want and you have been looking for a good buy, do your shopping early in the day. Your chances for getting it at the right price look good. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Situations you personally control should work out rather well for you today, but you still might overlook some minor factors that could make things even better. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are basically a compassionate and tolerant person who is ready to help others whenever possible. When you exercise these noble qualities today, keep your good deeds to yourself. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Assess developments in a logical manner today, but also give credence to your intuitive insights. Your perceptions could fill in blank spots where your practicality can't. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you are involved with people today who share your work-world interests, it's OK to talk shop. But if you try to do this with pals, they might find you boring.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Activities that offer elements of friendly competition might be extremely appealing for you today. The important thing is to involve pals who like games as much as you do. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you find yourself in a competitive situation today, don't despair, because you have mental and physical reserves upon which to draw in these areas that your opposition lacks. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't jump at the first offer today if you are negotiating an important contract. If you hold fast to your terms, you might eventually get them. ARIES (March 21-April 19) New knowledge of a practical nature that you've been unable to utilize to your advantage will be better understood today. All of a sudden the light may go on. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Things in general look very favorable for you today with one exception — the management of your resources. Be cautious in this area.
