Tax revolt imminent

TALLAHASSEE — Officials are fearing a tax revolt after jacking up property taxes to recover from state and federal spending cutbacks. Hikes of up to 42 percent are expected in some areas of the state, aimed mainly at new residents and new home construction. Some local governments are considering moratoriums on growth to help ease the tax burden on those already living in the district.

A day to honor workers

County school bus drivers to resume picketing tomorrow

By LAURA L. SULLIVAN
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — When Labor Day was first established as a federal holiday in 1894, it was more than just an eight-hour reprieve from the workday routine. The day was set aside as a tribute to the Americans who wait tables, drive trucks, grade papers and to all the laborers in the national work force.

Today's holiday honors nearly 158,000 people working in Seminole County, according to Florida Department of Labor statistics for July. Another 10,000 people in the county, accounting for Seminole County's six-percent unemployment rate, may spend Labor Day circling ads in today's want ads.

Tomorrow, a local union of Seminole County's 340 school bus drivers will return to daily demonstrations at the school board transportation department after a week of protesting management decisions.

The bus drivers' protests demonstrate the division between management and labor that has been so visible in Seminole County during recent months. Last month more than 100 Eastern employees from the Orlando area marched through the county as part of a 3,000-mile picket line to Washington, D.C. And Amtrak employees held an information picket June 30 at the Perimmon Avenue station during a statewide demonstration.

Local union leaders believe their organizations are growing in strength and numbers. Unions representing several segments of the work force are becoming more active in Seminole County, according to union representatives.

Fourteen dead on Florida roads, highway patrol says

From staff and wire reports

Americans in Florida and elsewhere commemorated the world of work today by relaxing at beaches, on boats, and in backyard cookouts, attending parades, and, of course, congesting highways in bringing summer to its unofficial conclusion.

In Florida, the Highway Patrol reported 14 fatalities as of 6 a.m. today. No fatal accidents were reported in Seminole County. The patrol had predicted 36 fatalities statewide over the long weekend.

The celebration of Labor Day nationwide has returned to the time when it meant more than just the traditional end of summer and the return to school. United Steelworkers union President Lynn Williams said in a speech in Pittsburgh.

"There's been a revival of interest in Labor Day in the last few years," said Williams of the first Monday in September, a legal holiday honoring labor in the United States and Canada. "Labor Day is much more significant right now than it was a few years ago."

Williams said he believes the change in attitude about the celebration of a holiday honoring labor is rooted in the 1980s and the resulting depression economy.

"This is why working people have come to understand again the need to work together and to support each other and to have an effective and meaningful labor movement," Williams said. "The seeming importance of events like Labor Day causes workers to come together and

School lunch planners try to trim the fat

By VICKI BOSCHNER

SANFORD — Cutting the fat from school lunches is no easy task. While less fat in foods is good, it also makes the job of planning and preparing meals harder.

Eidon Chambers, food service director for the Seminole district schools, said his department is trying to help students be healthy by cutting back on some fat in the food preparation and offering more low-fat options with meals.

Chambers said his food service directors have been cutting back in the area of preparation and are also giving students alternatives that include more fruit and vegetables.

"We use only vegetable oils and low fat dry milk in our cooking," he said, adding that pizza, once a mainstay of school lunch menus, is now offered only about twice a month. "We also offer the option of salads for those students who want

Raid 'Roach Coach' helps victims make peace with Florida's bugs

SANFORD — If you've lived in Florida for more than a couple of days, you know how bad the roach and flea infestation problem can be. The ugly creatures will rear their dirty heads in even the cleanest house.

"The environment in Florida, with high temperatures and even higher humidity, is the perfect place for insects, especially roaches," explained entomologist Dr. John Randall, a senior research scientist with the Raid Center for Insect Control in Racine, Wis.

Randall helped create the Raid Mobile Insect Expo, a $90,000 high tech vehicle containing a prototype of the Center for Insect Control, which parked outside the Winn-Dixie on French Ave. in Sanford Thursday.

SANFORD — When the Raid Mobile Insect Expo, affectionately called the "Winne-bug-o," pulled up in front of the Winn-Dixie on French Ave. Thursday, some people were fascinated, others wanted to look from a safe distance, some recoiled in disgust and others just hurried as quickly as possible into the store and back to their cars.

"We do get their attention," said Jennifer Atkinson who was manning the display.

Two year old Rodney pushed his nose against the display case which contained a four inch long Madagascar Hissing Cockroach.

"Roach!" he said cheerfully. His mother nodded from about six feet behind him. She backed away further when Rodney asked Atkinson to let him hold the roach.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Doctors oppose compensation program

ORLANDO — Florida Medical Association leaders have voted to oppose a program that forces all doctors to pay $200 a year to compensate the parents of brain-damaged children.

The assessment had been supported by the FMA when it came before the Legislature last year. The money is designed to cut malpractice insurance and legal costs by establishing a $48 million pool to care for children who are brain-damaged at birth.

But most doctors in the state reacted angrily, since most do not deliver babies. The response forced the FMA to change its stance on the assessment, and the Legislature now is being asked to repeal the program.

Fugitive arrested for homicide

TAMPA — A fugitive from Ohio has been arrested for the weekend murder of a drug store clerk in the Tampa Bay area, authorities said.

Police charged William Lee Reed with first degree murder and armed robbery in connection with the Saturday shooting death of a 71-year-old Carrollwood pharmacy clerk.

Reed was arrested without incident at his home early Sunday. Police said he is wanted for robbing a drugstore in Ohio.

Authorities said the victim, Osmon "Deacon" Jones of Lotz, died of a gunshot to the head after a struggle with his assailant.

Boat kills sleeping woman

ISLAMORADA — A Jacksonville woman was killed early Sunday when a 18-foot runabout boat sliced through the houseboat on which she was sleeping, authorities said.

"The runabout went straight through the houseboat, like a cannonball almost," a spokesman for the Coast Guard said Monday.

Four other people on the houseboat escaped serious injury in the accident, which occurred at about 1:25 a.m. Sunday while the houseboat was anchored off Cotton Key in Florida Bay to the northwest of Islamorada.

The victim was identified as Barbara Bradford, 38, of Jacksonville.

The driver of the power boat apparently ducked at the last minute, avoiding serious injury.

Inmate demands no-smoking unit

RAIFORD — A Florida prison inmate wants authorities to set aside separate no-smoking cells or blocks for inmates who are bothered by cigarette smoke.

The prisoner, Danny Sokol, is serving a 75-year term for second-degree murder at the Union Correctional Center in Raiford. Sokol claims smoke from other inmates gives him headaches and causes him sinus trouble.

Officials have told him to stay in his cell if he does not like the smoke.

Professor arrested in wife's death

MELBOURNE — A college administrator has been arrested after the body of his wife was found in a shallow grave near the Missouri-Illinois state line, authorities in Brevard County said.

Officials say Brevard Community College continuing education dean Rogers David Mansfield is accused of killing his wife Lillian. She was reported as missing by Mansfield two weeks ago.

The body was found in a grave early Sunday by officials who had been searching near Hannibal, Mo., for about two hours.

Mansfield was arrested at his attorney's office in Titusville. Investigators suspect that Mansfield killed his wife in mid-August in western North Carolina, where the couple had been vacationing.

Mansfield reported his wife missing August 19, the day he returned home from North Carolina. He said she went shopping and did not return.

Miami U. profs wants decision

MIAMI — Fifteen months after the dean of the University of Miami's School of Business Administration left his post, several professors at the school say it's time to find a permanent replacement.

Although UM business professors praise the efforts of two colleagues who stepped in to take the job temporarily, they worry that the school is drifting without a permanent leader.

Deputy wounded with own gun

OCALA — A Marion County sheriff's deputy was recovering from a gunshot wound today after being shot in the shoulder with his own gun.

Officials said deputy Mark Mitchell was shot once following a traffic stop early Sunday. Authorities said Carl Fuller, 38, of Tallahassee, was charged with attempted first-degree murder in connection with the shooting.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Officials brace for tax rebellion

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Local officials who have been approving property tax increases to make up for state and federal spending cutbacks are bracing for a new round of tax revolt.

The alternative to the increases, they say, is to shut down development.

The state's Growth Management Act says that beginning next year, construction of new housing and businesses must be tied to the availability of roads, schools and other services for the new residents.

Taxpayers across Florida are none too happy about the situation.

"We're stirred up hot and heavy," said Dale Martin of Merritt Island, who recently learned his property taxes are going up 37 percent. He immediately instigated a protest petition and hopes to gather 8,000 signatures.

"I'm retired. I'm 70 years old and on a fixed income. My Social Security went up 4 percent this year. That's why I really get active in this," Martin said.

The increases are the biggest in a decade, and bills are likely to get higher before

"This is not one-year blip. This is the beginning."

—Mike Sittig
Fields League of Cities lobbyist

Things get better, officials add.

"This is not a one-year blip," said Mike Sittig, lobbyist for the Florida League of Cities. "This is the beginning."

For example, the Lake County commission is pursuing a 42 percent increase in tax rates. Osceola County is looking at a 34.5 percent hike and Orange County has proposed an increase of 18.5 percent. Orlando city commissioners are considering a separate 19.7 percent increase.

School boards are looking at increases of about 10 percent.

Washington has dramatically reduced aid to local governments and Gov. Bob Martinez is opposed to any major new increases in state taxes. Florida's growth rate of 800 new residents a day is adding to the pressure on local officials, who must provide most of the services the new Floridians will demand.

Under the 1985 Growth Management Act, officials must make sure infrastructure including roads and schools are in place or planned before new developments may be approved. Impact fees paid by developers — and passed along to people buying houses — are expected to help meet some of the needs. But many local governments are considering moratoriums on growth, which could also dramatically push up housing costs.

The state permits local sales tax increases of up to 1 percent provided local voters approve. Local officials have been trying to get the referendum requirement repealed, but the effort has been stalled in ongoing battles between Martinez and the Legislature over tax, growth and budget policies.

The result is increased local reliance on property taxes. Since property taxes amount to about 25 percent of local government revenue, steep increases are needed to produce the money the governments say they need.

"If you need to increase your general revenue by 3 to 5 percent, you may have to increase your property taxes by 20 percent," Sittig said.

Police find girl mother hid

United Press International

ST. AUGUSTINE — A 4-year-old girl whose mother went to jail for defying a court order to turn her over for unsupervised visits with her father has been found staying with relatives of the mother near St. Augustine.

Police from Marion and St. Johns counties recovered the child around noon Saturday by staking out the residence of the child's uncle, about 4 miles south of St. Augustine.

The child's grandmother, Evelyn Kaye, tried to flee with the child on foot and faces charges of interfering with child custody.

The mother, Evelyn Hayes, 34, of Ocala, was jailed Aug. 2 for defying a court order to produce her daughter. She had been ordered to permit visits with the father, Steven Hayes of Albertville, Ala., but hid the child instead.

By late Saturday, the girl was back in Ocala and being kept in an undisclosed location, said Lt. Larry Jerald of the Marion County Sheriff's Department.

"This is clearly a case where we can't comment," said Steve Konicki, spokesman for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. "I don't think that it would be responsible to disclose anything that might lead to the child or

Trio splits $12 million Lotto jackpot

UPI report

TALLHASSEE — A trio of millionaire winners will split last week's estimated $12 million Lotto grand prize jackpot, state lottery officials announced Sunday.

"This has been a summer of multiple winners. This week's group of three grand prize winners marks the eighth set of multiple Lotto winners this summer," Lottery Secretary Rebecca Paul said in a statement.

Two of the winning tickets were sold in Jacksonville, but at separate locations, while the third ticket was sold in Miami, officials said.

Each of the tickets matched all six winning numbers drawn Saturday in the weekly contest. The winning "Lotto" numbers were 9, 14, 22, 23, 38 and 43.

Ros-Lehtinen hailed as Cuban voice

United Press International

MIAMI — Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, the first Cuban American to be elected to Congress, is being hailed as a voice for Cubans nationwide, but some observers say that role could cause problems for the newly elected legislator.

Ros-Lehtinen, who won election Tuesday to the 15th Congressional District seat (she held the seat for a year), said she will not be a divisive figure. She said she will not try to downplay her role as the Cuban-American in Congress.

"Just being in Congress is an important job," the Republican said.

"The feeling here is she is our representative, too," Luis Arencibia, a director of the Chicago office of the Cuban American National Foundation, told The Miami Herald.

"She will be the spokeswoman for Cubans worldwide," he added.

Miami commission shipped to Haiti during embargo

United Press International

MIAMI — The Miami City Commission gave 22 garbage trucks and pickers to Haiti last year, after Congress cut off direct aid to the military-run country and a coup had recently taken place, a published report said Monday.

The donation was made without fanfare. Exile leaders in Miami's Haitian community did not find out about it until several months later, when opposition leaders watched government officials fight over the equipment on the docks of Port-au-Prince, said a report in The Miami Herald.

"For us it was a slap in the face," said Jacques Despinose, president of the Haitian American Democratic Club. He compared the act to the city of Miami doing business with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

The equipment shipped to Haiti was estimated to be worth $114,800 used and about $1 million if purchased new. The city commission originally planned to auction the equipment in Miami.

But when Haitian exile businessman Henri Cayard suggested to commissioner Miller Dawkins in November that the equipment could be used to clean Haiti's cities, Dawkins took the matter up as an emergency item during a regular commission meeting.

When Dawkins asked department heads where surplus equipment could be found to be sent to Haiti the commission made him a committee of one to take on the job.

Dawkins and a city department head went to Port-au-Prince and returned with a list of 22 items that Haiti could use. The commission approved the donation.

The equipment was sent in two shipments after the Haitian government paid $67,000 in repairs the country had requested.

At neither meeting where the plane was discussed did the commission bring up the September coup that replaced Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy with Lt. Gen. Avril Prosper, the Herald said.

The commission also did not talk about the refusal of Con-

Sniper bullet hits plane

United Press International

PORT LAUDERDALE — A twin-engine commuter plane was hit by a bullet Sunday while on final approach to Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport, the Broward County Sheriff's Office said.

One passenger was grazed by the bullet, which authorities believe was fired from the ground. A search was conducted for the gunman, but none was found. The plane was recovered, and sheriff's spokesman Jim Letjedal said.

"This is certainly an isolated incident. It could have been an accident," he said. "But we are conducting an investigation to see if we can determine who fired the shot and why."

USAir Flight 4943 from Eleuthera and Governors Harbour in the Bahamas was flying at less than 1,000 feet on final approach about 1:40 p.m. with the landing gear down when the bullet hit the plane. The twin-engine turbo prop Hinson commuter plane was carrying 10 passengers and three crew.

Injured was Edward Clark Wright, 42, of Dove Canyon, Calif., who was taken to Broward General Medical Center, where he was treated for a superficial scalp wound and released. He and his family then continued their trip home to California, Letjedal said.

"The bullet entered through an exit door on the plane's right side, ricocheted off the top of the cabin and hit the victim, who was sitting on the left side," he said.

He said Wright reported hearing a popping noise before feeling a thump on his head.

"He first thought something had fallen and struck him, but he saw nothing," Letjedal said. "When Wright touched his head with his hand he found that he was bleeding."

Woman jailed in burglary, battery

LONGWOOD

A woman from a neighbor's home was arrested Sunday for burglary and battery.

Nancy Ann Pruitt, 38, of 900 W. 10th St., Longwood, was arrested at 12:10 p.m. Sunday at the home of the victim Charles Hubbard, of 1031 Alameda Way.

According to police, Hubbard was at 1041 Alameda Way when he saw Pruitt come there to tell her that Pruitt and Pruitt's husband were at the Hubbard home. Pruitt and Pruitt's husband had been taking trophies out of it at that location in December, police reported.

Police said when Hubbard came out of her neighbor's home, Pruitt allegedly yelled at her and threatened her. Pruitt allegedly entered Hubbard's garage without permission and showed Hubbard, to try to keep her from entering the garage house. The victim pushed past the suspect and went to the police. She came out armed with a pistol and told the Pruitts she had called police. When Longwood police arrived they arrested Pruitt. Bond is $5,000.

Purse snatching brings chase, arrest

SANFORD — A man who allegedly snatched a woman's purse from a shopping cart at White Oaks, U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford, was chased by store workers and tracked down by Sanford police.

Ephraim Cotton, 31, of no address, was arrested on a charge of grand theft at 4:35 p.m. Saturday after he was brought back to the store after allegedly fleeing into woods behind the store.

A police dog was used in the chase and the woman's discarded purse, which still contained $107, was found. Police said the suspect had a 9000 silver pin chain from the purse in his possession when he was captured. Bond is $2,000.

Stunt pilots collide at air show

Witness says missing pilot's action averted a catastrophe

United Press International

TORONTO — Two Canadian air force jets collided and crashed into Lake Ontario on Sunday, but witnesses said one pilot appeared to avert catastrophe by steering his crippled jet away from crowds of horrified spectators.

That pilot went down with his plane and was pronounced dead, but the second pilot ejected and parachuted to safety.

Canadian National Exhibition spokesmen said no spectators were injured.

The two aircraft — two-seater Tutor CT-114 jets — clipped wings during a stunt called the upward-downward bomb-burst maneuver by the Snowbirds squadron at the Canadian International Air Show along Toronto's waterfront, police said.

A videotape taken by an amateur photographer showed both planes spinning out of control after the collision. One exploded in flames and plunged directly into Lake Ontario, and police said its pilot, Cpt. Shawn Antaya, 24, of Stratford, Ontario, was pronounced dead.

The second plane, which appeared to be increasing its altitude when the crash occurred, veered out over the lake and its pilot, Maj. Dan Dempsey, ejected and parachuted to safety.

Dempsey, 36, of Edmonton, the squadron commander, was picked up by a police boat and taken to Toronto General Hospital, where he was treated for facial cuts and minor burns and released.

The two red-and-white jets, which were among nine jets of the Canadian Forces' elite Snowbirds aerobatic team, plunged into the lake about 1:45 p.m. EDT, just 15 minutes after the air show began before thousands of spectators on Toronto's islands and lake shore. Antaya's wife, mother and other family members were among those who witnessed the crash.

Several witnesses said Antaya appeared to gain some control over the plane after the collision, preventing it from crashing into the spectators.

"He did it to save us," said Danielle Tremblay, 25, of Toronto. "He might have had a chance but he took it straight down."

She said it hit the water about 200 feet from the boat she was on.

"It was the most horrible thing," Tremblay said. "I feel sorry for everyone who was there and had to see that."

Another witness also insisted Antaya had averted a catastrophe.

"You could tell that he was really trying to get out into a clearing," he said.

The Metropolitan Toronto Police's marine unit and the Department of National Defense conducted an underwater search of the wreckage for the missing pilot.

Cuban jet crashes killing 126

United Press International

MEXICO CITY — A Cuban jetliner crashed in a thunderstorm Sunday while trying to take off from Havana, killing at least 126 people aboard, injuring at least 65 others on the ground and destroying 15 houses, Cuban officials said.

The chartered Soviet-built Ilyushin-62, bound for Milan, Italy, with a refueling stop in Cologne, West Germany, smashed into power lines and careened into the Boyeros neighborhood less than a mile from Jose Marti airport at 7:05 p.m. EDT, the radio said.

"It looked like a scene out of a war. Wreckage was everywhere," Manuel Guerrero, a reporter for the official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina, told RCM radio in Bogota, Colombia.

Cuban president Fidel Castro rushed to the crash site, which was cordoned off by police. Gen. Rogelio Acvedo, chief of Cuban civil aeronautics, led an investigation into the cause of the accident.

"This was the biggest air accident in the history of Cuba," Acvedo said.

Firefighters battled blazes on the ground. Taxi drivers were conscripted to take the injured to hospitals. Bodies were scattered throughout the crash site. Victims were taken to hospitals in Havana.

The airport was blacked out by the crash in heavy rain, lightning and thunder. All air traffic was diverted to Varadero, about 100 miles away. Only a single landing strip remained illuminated on emergency power.

The Cuban radio said all those aboard the Cubana Airlines flight — 115 passengers, of which 113 were Italian tourists, and 11 crewmembers — were killed. The other two passengers were Cuban, the radio said.

Radio Havana said at least 63 people were injured on ground, several suffering severe burns. The radio also said 19 houses were destroyed in the crash.

Moments after the airliner took off, its fuselage appeared to break in two and it crashed to the ground and exploded in flames, a Cuban immigration official told Cuban Army radio.

In Rome, Italian Foreign Ministry officials said the Italian passengers were on a tour to Cuba organized by a Cuban-Italian firm, Zodiaco, which has offices in Milan.

Cuban television broadcasts showed scenes of the devastation and the charred wreckage of the Ilyushin-62, a long-range airliner powered by four turbofan jet engines mounted in pairs on either side of the tail.

The last major accident at Havana's airport occurred in 1985, when a Cubana plane heading to Managua, Nicaragua, crashed and killed 40 people, according to the Cuban news agency.

Group wants to solve Amelia Earhart mystery

United Press International

PORT WATSON BEACH — A retired Navy pilot hopes that an expedition leaving Monday for a tiny, uninhabited island in the Pacific Ocean will solve the 52-year-old mystery of the disappearance of pioneer aviator Amelia Earhart.

Thomas Will, 60, and another military retiree, Tom Gannon, both of Port Walton Beach, are accompanying a research group that is headed for Gardner Island, where the two men believe Earhart's twin-engine plane went down on the final leg of her attempted around-the-world flight.

The two were instrumental in developing the theory about the whereabouts of Earhart's plane that prompted the expedition. In an interview with UPI more than two years ago, Will said he was convinced it went down near the 2-mile-by-1-mile dot of land that is the westernmost of the Phoenix islands.

Earhart, who set several aviation records during the 1920s and 1930s, and navigator Fred Noonan vanished without a trace in the Pacific July 2, 1937. There have been a host of theories about their disappearance, including one that claims they were captured and executed by Japanese soldiers after crash-landing their plane.

But Will, who operates a navigation school in Fort Walton Beach, thinks the specially equipped Lockheed 10E Electra went down just southwest of Howland Island, Earhart's intended destination. She was trying to reach Howland to refuel for the final leg of her flight to Hawaii.

Will and Gannon, a retired Air Force navigator who got involved after reading about Will's theory, studied records of radio transmissions — presumably made by Earhart in the four days immediately after her disappearance — and weather data, and then incorporated "pilot's logic" about the aviator's likely actions.

The two believe Earhart and Noonan under-compensated for wind, missed Howland to the south and were forced to put down at Gardner. The U.S. Navy conducted a 16-day search over a vast area of the Pacific for the missing plane, but found nothing.

"I had always thought what I read was true about the search the Navy put on," Will said. "But what they really did was, they launched three search planes, and those airplanes flew over Gardner once, circled it a couple or three times and left." Even the Navy's analysis showed Gardner the most likely place to search, Will said, but no land parties were ever put ashore and no ship ever returned to search.

"It wasn't much of a search," he said.

Will believes the plane may be in the reef around Gardner, where the depth of the water is between 100 and 300 feet. Some 200 yards out the water depth drops to 18,000 feet.

Last year, Will and Gannon contacted The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery in Washington, Del., to explain their theory.

"They invited us to come up in July 1988 and present our findings," Will said. TIGHAR became interested, he said, "so we signed some agreements and became TIGHAR members ourselves."

TIGHAR Executive Director Richard Gillespie said there are two reasons TIGHAR went with the project.

"One is, for the first time someone came to us with a general hypothesis that seemed reasonable," he said. "The other reason is that for TIGHAR, the foundation, it provides an excellent vehicle with which to demonstrate responsible aviation historical research methodology."

Additional incentive came, Will said, when TIGHAR looked into his research on its own and learned that one of the pilots who participated in the 1937 search for Earhart and Noonan "made a report of the search and he said that he saw signs of recent habitation on that island." According to Will, "that statement never got in the official report."

TIGHAR has budgeted $200,000 for the six-week expedition and has already spent $60,000 for research. The 19 team members were scheduled to meet in Los Angeles Monday for a flight to Fiji, where all but Will and Gannon will sail for Gardner Island a week later on the Pacific Nomad, a research vessel.

Because they are older than the other team members, Will and Gannon will remain at the communications base in Fiji, about 1,000 miles from Gardner Island, in radio contact with the ship.

"The idea is that this island (Gardner) is so remote that if anyone gets sick the entire expedition would have to come back," Will said. "I was disappointed at first because I always thought it would be nice to walk that island."

It ain't the last roundup — but maybe it outta be

United Press International

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Driving home last night when it started to rain, I saw a sign that said "It ain't the last roundup — but maybe it outta be."

I was in '88 a fall just back down home, and I was up and start driving those days down a highway, dusty trail toward a cowboy roundup.

The only real women were cowboy rounders, and they were driving those days down a highway, dusty trail toward a cowboy roundup.

around a camp fire," Kullbom said. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity — something we will be talking our grand grandkids about."

But many local ranchers worry about mosquitoes and say the whole thing may be an embarrassment. Some refused to let the herd cross their land.

Other critics cite organizational and money problems as massive that the drive had to be scaled back from 10,000 head of cattle, and noted that the drive's paid executive director and public relations chief quit and were replaced by volunteers.

It all began in 1987 when three men sitting on the hood of an old pickup truck figured a big cattle drive was just what Montana needed to celebrate its 100th birthday.

The idea by cartoonists Barry McWilliams and Stan Lynde and rancher Jim Wempe led to the formation of Lotigo Corp., a non-profit group in charge of the drive. The drive is named for Lynde's cartoon strip.

At Lotigo's branch office in Billings, organizers have spent months completing little details that cowhands of 100 years ago didn't have to worry about: Dealing with animal rights' groups complaints, fielding reporters' questions and negotiating with highway officials and police.

In 1989, cattle drivers were actually paid and didn't have a lot of rules to worry about.

Gabrielle on power track toward land

UPI report

MIAMI — Hurricane Gabrielle, the most powerful storm so far of the 1989 season, held steady on its west northwest path across the Atlantic today, and forecasters said it may still threaten the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

"Over the next 72 hours we expect it to maintain this west northwest track, which would take it somewhere north of the Leeward Islands," said Jim Gross, a hurricane forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Meanwhile, Tropical Storm Felix drifted west early today with top sustained winds of 40 mph.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the center of the storm was located near latitude 34.8 degrees north, longitude 46.9 degrees west, or about 910 miles southwest of the westernmost Azores.

The hurricane center said Felix probably would continue to drift westward before making a gradual turn to the northwest.

If Gabrielle maintains its present course, the storm would pass about 180 miles to the north of the northeastern Caribbean islands, Gross said. "That is, if it maintains this course. There is a lot of uncertainty," he added.

Even then, Gabrielle's effects would likely be felt in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, Gross said. "Gabrielle is a very large storm, and the gale force winds extend out almost 150 miles," he said.

The Category 3 storm was packing maximum sustained winds of about 125 mph early Monday, and forecasters said some strengthening was likely over the next several days.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the center of Gabrielle was located near latitude 17.5 degrees north and longitude 53.6 degrees west, or about 540 miles east of the northern Leeward Islands on the eastern edge of the Caribbean.

Gabrielle's forward speed had slowed by about 2 mph early Monday to 15 mph.

Data from a reconnaissance aircraft sent to monitor the storm Sunday afternoon indicated that Gabrielle's maximum sustained winds had increased 10 mph to 125 mph.

Daring times exist for Baltic states

Aug. 23 was the 50th anniversary of the Soviet-German non-aggression treaty commonly called the Hitler-Stalin Pact. As the Soviet Union recently acknowledged — after 40 years of official denials — the pact provided for the partition of Poland between the Soviet Union and Germany and assigned Latvia and Estonia to the Soviet sphere of influence and Lithuania to the German sphere.

A subsequent agreement, on Sept. 23, 1939, assigned Lithuania to the Soviet sphere. The next year, the three independent Baltic nations were occupied by the Red Army. After Soviet-sponsored "free elections," they were transformed into constituent republics of the Soviet Union, the same status they have today.

The remarkable recent announcement from a Soviet government commission declared the secret agreement "immoral." The commission said it should be declared null and void.

Just as remarkable, Lithuania's parliament is now preparing the legal basis for seceding from the Soviet Union. Estonia and Latvia aren't too far behind in their efforts to achieve some measure of independence from Moscow.

On Aug. 23, to mark the bitter anniversary of the Hitler-Stalin Pact, citizens of the Baltic states joined hands in a 370-mile "human chain across the Baltics." At least a million people — out of a total Baltic population of eight million — took part in the demonstration.

These are heady times in the Baltics, just as they are in Poland where the nation's first non-communist prime minister since the early postwar years was sworn in Aug. 24. Headly times, but also dangerous ones. The Soviet Union, which so far has tolerated intimations of Baltic independence, will not tolerate the complete dissolution of its empire or the dissolution of the Warsaw Pact. And, Soviet internal affairs — where the economy grows ever more desperate and Gorbachev critics ever more restive — will have much to do with the ultimate fate of the Baltic states. Those sober facts must be uppermost in the minds of Baltic leaders.

What the West would like to see, of course, are three independent Baltic nations — three small Finlandia, in other words, coexisting peacefully with their giant neighbor. Given the course of current events in Eastern Europe, that's not an altogether unrealistic possibility, but it's more likely to be a gradual change to freer institutions than a sudden dramatic shift.

This country should be offering cautious and careful encouragement, with emphasis on cautious and careful. That seems to be the prudent course the Bush administration is following and must continue to follow in the daring and dangerous days to come.

Why Labor Day has lost respect

Like Rodney Dangerfield, Labor Day "don't get no respect." Or at least, very little. And, if the recent anti-United Auto Workers vote in Nissan's Smyrna, Tenn., plant presages the future, labor unions, in the words of an old blues number, "are in a world of trouble."

Labor Day is the day that once psychologically divided summer from fall, unofficially authorized reopening schools, and stamped a mythic imprimatur on Democratic presidential campaigns. No more. The greenhouse effect has altered seasonal balances. Many public school systems and colleges now return students in the last week of August (which is about as un-American a change as I can envision). And the recent Democratic presidential mediocrities, coupled with labor's declining political clout, has rendered the Labor Day campaign kickoff moot.

But the real reason Labor Day suffers from a Rodney Dangerfield complex are a national change in attitude toward labor unions and an international change in the competition of the marketplace. More and more workers are opting not to join labor unions. Between 1975 and 1982, for instance, the national percentage of union members in the work force declined from 28.9 percent to 21.9 percent.

That's why the Nissan Smyrna vote was no aberration. During the bitter 18-month campaign, the UAW trotted out its big artillery, only to be humiliated by what a USA Today page one story called a "crushing blow," 1,653 to 718 against unionization.

That vote may have represented a delayed reaping of a four-fold harvest — eight years of Ronald Reagan's staunch anti-labor unionism, unions pricing U.S. industries out of international competition, the globalization of America's economy, and a subliminal feeling among the high-tech computer generation that unions are passé.

Reagan signaled his unabashed anti-labor stance when he set out to break the air-traffic controllers' union (a union that paradoxically had supported him in the 1980 election) — and succeeded.

The Nissan Smyrna vote was no aberration.

Workers got the message. Work stoppages, which had averaged 276 days a year during the eight years before Reagan was elected, dropped dramatically to an average of 79 days during the eight years of the Reagan administration. When management knows that it has a strifefighting administration — allied with a sympathetic public — it can confidently hunker down and outwait the strikers.

When I was a teen-ager 50 years ago, "Made in Japan" was derided as a badge of inferiority. Today, "Made in Japan" guarantees a high-quality product at lower price. A comparison of hourly compensation demonstrates the disadvantage at which American manufacturers are forced to compete. In 1983, for example, the hourly compensation for U.S. workers was $12.31, the highest in the western world. For Japanese workers, the hourly compensation was $6.34, for Taiwanese workers, $1.61 and for South Korean workers, $1.30.

The increasing globalization of the American economy has devastated domestic steel and shoe production. Only American-made automobiles still compete with foreign-made counterparts. But the unemployment rate is down, and jobs are abundant, even if their wages don't match industrial rates.

GOP fumes over Dole furor

WASHINGTON — High-level Republicans remain furious with Kansas Sen. Bob Dole's criticism on the Senate floor regarding Israel's kidnapping of Shiite leader Sheikh Abdul Karim Obaid.

The recent statements by Dole, the Senate GOP leader, came after the announced killing of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins in retaliation for the kidnapping. Higgins was one of the U.S. hostages in Lebanon.

The GOP is planning a major effort aimed at wooing Jewish support away from the Democratic Party. A post-Labor Day kickoff is planned for the drive in which Republican planners hope to wean Jewish political donors from their habit of giving to Democrats.

The key to winning Jewish voters and donors, GOP planners believe, is stepped-up support for Israel and its West Bank policies.

The day Dole took to the Senate floor to castigate Israel, Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater and a GOP delegation were in Israel. They were being given high-level briefings by government officials and issuing strong statements of support.

That is why Atwater and his aides were so stung by Dole's remarks.

At a closed-door meeting of Republican leaders, Dole was chastised by both Atwater and HUD Secretary Jack Kemp, a man who makes little secret of his continued presidential ambitions. After the meeting, news of what transpired was quickly leaked all over town.

Atwater has now put out the word: No more open criticism of Israel.

(BU) Speaking of insider Republican politics, GOP sources say that in recent weeks a very quiet campaign has started — for the 1992 Republican vice presidential nomination.

President Bush will undoubtedly run for a second term in 1992, something that most in the GOP believe he will win easily. Therefore, whoever is his second-term running mate becomes the automatic front-runner for the 1996 nomination. The obvious question is whether Vice President Dan Quayle is up to the job of being GOP front-runner.

There is already a great deal of talk about someone replacing Quayle on the GOP ticket while the vice president is given some other high-visibility job. Becoming director of NASA to implement the start of a new long-range space program might be one possibility for Quayle.

Another scenario would have him changing jobs with Defense Secretary Richard Cheney or perhaps being replaced by either Secretary of State Jim Baker or HUD Secretary Jack Kemp. Cheney, Baker and Kemp are all expected to be contenders for the top spot on the GOP ticket in '96.

As some GOP insiders see it, Quayle has until the end of the 1990 off-year elections to prove he is worthy of being considered Bush's heir apparent.

Quayle is already taking a higher profile, appearing on national television shows and speaking out on issues like the defense budget, the proposed flag-burning amendment and the contra.

He is carefully positioning himself as the conservatives' No. 1 friend in the White House.

Next summer and fall, Quayle will campaign non-stop for GOP congressional candidates, hoping to build up enough IOUs to keep from being dislodged from the vice presidential mansion.

(BU) Into every political campaign a little rain must fall. But it has been pouring a little more than usual on the New York mayoral campaign of cosmetics heir Ronald Lauder.

After spending more than $10 million of his own money on the GOP primary campaign, he seems to be proving that you can't always buy competence.

Lauder recently staged a major campaign appearance in front of a shell of a building in the Bronx. He was there to decry how the city ignores abandoned buildings. Later, when the television clips of the appearance played on local television, his staff was chagrined to learn the building they chose was in the process of being rehabilitated into apartments for the homeless.

This reminded reporters of the day Lauder showed up at a park that was being rehabilitated with city funds to decry the waste of taxpayer dollars.

Then there was Lauder's recent foray into the city's subway system to campaign in front of a television camera with the "real people." He picked an almost empty subway stop to start from and then got on an almost completely empty train. This led reporters to ask if he had ever ridden the subway before.

It also reminded them of the day he called the cameras to another city park for a major campaign appearance only to find the park closed.

Atwater and his aides were stung by Dole's remarks.

JACK ANDERSON

Soviet Union not workers paradise

KALININ, U.S.S.R. — In a textile factory here, the star employees get their pictures posted on the bulletin board. None of them are smiling.

Why should they? With perestroika, Mikhail Gorbachev promised them, and every other laborer in the Soviet Union, that he would get government off their backs. The effect of the announcement was electrifying.

The workers figured there would be no more ridiculous marching orders from incompetent central planners in Moscow and no more monthly quotas that resulted in a rush at the end of the month to produce even shoddy goods than usual. There would be good wages, fair benefits and better working conditions.

The laborers in this city on the Volga River told us that it didn't happen. They haven't given up hope, but they are jaded enough to see that jury-rigging capitalist working conditions onto a socialist system isn't working.

Here, they compare the attempt to passing a law that says all cars must drive on the left side of the road, but during a transitional period only half the cars will make the switch.

Vladimir Nicolaki, the deputy general manager of the 130-year-old textile factory in Kalinin, had not intended to tell us about his problems. But the words came out as he stood under a huge painting of Lenin, the man who declared that the Soviet Union would be a "workers' paradise."

The average wage at the factory is 220 rubles a month. At the official rate of exchange, that's about $350. But the black-market rate, a more accurate indicator of buying power, would put it at $22 a month. Soviet waiters and other service workers are fond of explaining their surliness by saying, "They pretend to pay us, and we pretend to work." The textile-factory workers all get the same number of vacation days, 18, and under perestroika they may get token bonuses for better work. But mostly, they get their pictures on the bulletin board. That's nice, but it doesn't put borcht on the table.

Factories in the Soviet Union are chronically over-staffed. Their chief purpose is not to make money, but to fill employment quotas under a system that promises jobs for everyone. "We have unemployment here," one worker joked. "It's called a salary."

Nicolaki said the major change under perestroika has been in planning. Instead of taking orders from Moscow, the factory writes its own plans. Of course, it then has to submit those plans to Moscow for approval, and Nicolaki says he has to go along with the changes. "We still depend on our means of production from the ministry," he said. In other words, the ministry over textiles supplies all the materials and still holds the individual factories in its grip.

A cartoon in the trade union newspaper "Trud" tells the story of de-centralization. "Of course I'll show independence," the factory manager promises a ministry official. "What would you like me to do?"

Even Gorbachev knows it will get worse before it gets better. He secretly complained to a group of writers when he enlisted their aid in promoting perestroika: "We have forgotten how to work. Not a few people are drunks, profiteers, embezzlers, but mostly, of course, bureaucrats, those people who do not want to part with the system."

"Between the people who want these changes, who dream of these changes, and the leadership, there is a layer of officialdom ... that does not want changes."

They pretend to pay us, and we pretend to work.

Bugs

"There's no need to worry even if there's an escape," Randall assured. "There are only a few roaches aboard the bus."

As the curious walked carefully around the "Winne-bug," peering at the insect zoo and the plexiglass roach house, some of the faces were scrunched in disgust while others took it all in with wide-eyed wonder.

"Kids love bugs," Randall said. "Most people just learn to be disgusted by them."

While the entomologists were on hand to educate people about insects, they were also touting their new line of insect control products. One of the exhibits allowed visitors to interact with a computer which told them the severity of their infestation problem and the methods by which the insects could be controlled.

Another feature was an opportunity to use the products to kill live roaches.

The cockroach population in the Sanford-Orlando area could reach as high as 50 trillion this year if left untreated. Despite their rapid reproduction, Randall said that roaches are not indiscriminate breeders.

"They are very picky about who they mate with," he said. "You can't do like they've done with Med Flies and introduce sterile males into a roach population and expect the females to mate with them and cease to reproduce. Roaches aren't like that. They want only the best mate."

Roaches, he explained, have a very complex mating ritual which helps them meet the strongest member of the opposite sex for their mate.

A female roach can lay as many as 400 eggs per breeding.

Randall said that while roaches do not bite, they carry disease-causing bacteria which are harmful to humans. It is for that reason that people should control the cockroach population in their homes.

"I guess a lot of people just think they're plain icky," joked Randall, who said roaches are actually very intelligent and highly sophisticated insects once you get to know them.

A roach's body is covered with thousands of sensitive hairs that allow them to sense minute changes in air temperature and current. "That's why roaches go running even before you flip on a light," Randall explained.

It is not known how well roaches can see. According to Randall, some experiments have been done in which a camera peers through the lens of a roach's eye, but it is not known how the insect's brain synthesizes the information that it receives.

According to Randall, no entomologist believes he can completely destroy the cockroach population. "We just want to control it," he said.

He added that roaches have existed for 300 to 400 million years. They adapt well to any situation and environment. Roaches even survived nuclear explosions and emerged stronger than before. He doesn't feel humans will ever be able to destroy them completely.

One of the newest methods of controlling the numbers is through the use of Sulfluramid, a chemical mixed with food and placed in traps for the bugs to consume. Sulfluramid disrupts the digestive process of a roach, slowing metabolism.

"It takes a couple of days, but what essentially happens is that the roach starves to death no matter how much it eats," Randall explained.

The product works against the roaches in another way as well. When a roach eats, part of the food is stored in a structure called the crop. In lean times, an insect can live off the nutrients stored in the crop. Similarly, other roaches will eat from the crop of a deceased comrade.

"They are very practical," Randall said. "If there is food readily available, they will take it rather than go searching elsewhere."

If a roach has ingested Sulfluramid, part of it is stored in the crop. When the other roaches eat the ingested food, they also die. Randall claims that as many as 50 roaches could die as the result of one insect ingesting the chemical.

Research entomologists are constantly devising new and better ways of controlling the cockroach population. Central Floridians can probably expect their problem will never go away completely.

"We compete with insects for everything...food, living space and what not, but if we can live inside and keep them outside," Randall said, "that will be a victory."

More layoffs expected this year

WASHINGTON — Fewer companies will hire workers and more will lay them off in the fourth quarter of this year than in the same period of 1988, with the south only slightly below expectations but the northeast way below, a survey said.

The estimates were based on a survey during the last two weeks of August of 14,000 public and private employers in 457 U.S. cities by Manpower Inc., the world's largest temporary help service company, based in Milwaukee.

demonstrate solidarity and to express to society our point of view about labor and its point of view about the issues of today."

Williams pointed out the revival of Labor Day parades and ceremonies marking the day in many cities around the country.

About 30,000 union members and their families are expected to march in Pittsburgh Monday to commemorate the 102nd anniversary of the first Labor Day parade in the city.

Florida's beaches and inland waterways also were crowded over the weekend, despite predictions of some late afternoon thunderstorms. Alligator hunters were also out in numbers there in search of their quota of 15 gators. The monthlong alligator hunt is the second in Florida since the 1980s.

The long holiday weekend also meant that tens of thousands of motorists would be on the nation's highways.

In Chicago, a citizen's group urged drivers with cellular telephones to report drunk drivers on area highways this Labor Day weekend.

In Baltimore, more than 20,000 delegates and guests arrived for the 71st annual American Legion National Convention. The veteran's organization planned a parade through downtown Baltimore.

In Boston, Red Sox fans watched visiting Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, sporting a Sox cap, toss out the first ball in a game against the Seattle Mariners at Fenway Park.

In the Chicago area, Cook County Forest Preserve Police geared up for large numbers of Sunday revelers at the county's 200th anniversary.

"We expect big crowds," said Officer Sylvester Wilson. "We'll boost our patrol by 30 percent. You know those people get intoxicated and try and go swimming."

In New Jersey, thousands were expected to jam the Garden State's beaches, popular again after two years of pollution and medical wastes. The summer of '89 saw only 11 beach closings and none for more than three days.

In other holiday weekend events, gourmet cooks from 25 restaurants in Pennsylvania and other states competed in Pittsburgh for top barbecue honors at the Allegheny County Rib Cook-Off.

A Texas-wide Miller Lite beer party Sunday rolled through Dallas and Little Mercedes in the Rio Grande Valley. Miller, which has been promoting the party for a year, put on races and music Saturday in Houston, San Antonio, Midland-Odessa and Corpus Christi, and again on Sunday in Dallas and Mercedes.

San Francisco's historic fleet of 16 vintage streetcars, 40 to 75 years old from Australia, Germany, Italy and the Soviet Union, will be put into special service to San Francisco soon Monday.

The cars, said to be most diverse collection of its kind owned by public transit agency, typically run during the summer on Market Street but have been out of service for the past two years because of street renovation.

In Maryland, a highlight of the Labor Day weekend was the annual National Hard Crab Derby in Crisfield. Wyoming took top honors after its entry, a Chesapeake Bay crab named "Yellowstone," scuttled down 19 feet of plywood in less than 20 seconds in the Governor's Cup Race.

comparing with 28 percent in the final quarter of 1988. Nine percent of the employers plan staff reductions, compared with 8 percent last year, the survey said.

Education hiring, always strong in the back-to-school quarter, should be at its highest level for the period in more than a decade, the survey said.

The biggest increases in hiring should be in the wholesale and retail sector as preparations begin for the holiday season — with 34 percent of employers expecting to increase hiring, down slightly from last year.

Education hiring, always strong in the back-to-school quarter, should be at its highest level for the period in more than a decade, the survey said.

Fat

that," he said.

One of the major obstacles faced by food service directors is the large amount of fatty foods supplied by the federal commodities program, according to a survey conducted by the Public Voice for Food and Health Policy.

A random poll of 177 food service directors nationwide found 67 percent of the Agriculture Department's commodity distribution program was one of the two major problems they face in cutting down on fat in school lunches.

"Yes, the foods that they send us have a high fat content," Chambers said, "but we are able to prepare them in such a way that the fat is minimized."

Another obstacle cited by 67 percent of those polled nationally was the belief children prefer foods high in fat.

"That's true," Chambers said. "And we have to remember that the students are our customers. If they don't eat here they will go elsewhere. That's why we try to offer them many options."

At this year's national convention of Food Service Workers, a soy bean product was introduced by a company called Protein Technologies International.

The product, called ProPlus, intended to be used in conjunction with meat as an extender. ProPlus has 15 percent less fat than its all-meat counterpart.

Robert Sanderson, vice president of marketing for Protein Technologies, said the product is almost pure protein, a feature that most other soy products can't claim.

"We're 90 percent pure protein, which is more than in other soy products such as flour, that manufacturers have been adding to their meat in the past," he said.

Chambers said the new soy bean product was still in the experimental stages. Seminole County food service personnel would continue to use TVP (Textured Vegetable Protein), also a soy derivative, in some areas of food preparation.

"I don't think kids are getting too much fat," he reiterated. "And really there's no data that tells us how much fat a growing child needs."

Labor

"Management makes the cause real easy," said Nancy Wheeler, executive director of Seminole Education Association. The union represents more than 1,850 teachers, bus drivers and other public school employees, and is an affiliate of the National Education Association, the largest union in the United States and one of the only labor organizations increasing its membership.

"There is more to unionism than just salary. Working conditions for public employees in the south have a long way to catch up with those of our northern neighbors," Wheeler said.

A leading trend toward unionism in Central Florida is a reaction to an increase in wealth of corporate executives. Said Bob Page of the Laborers Union in Orlando. But, he said, Seminole County lags behind other areas in attitudes about unions.

"The political climate in Seminole County is very anti-labor," Page said. "Cities up there really put up a fight against unions."

Page said because municipalities do not offer competitive pay and benefit packages, turnover among city employees is high. "Our public facilities are training people to move on to somewhere else. Training takes money — that just doesn't make sense," he said.

Page said working people are beginning to resent icons of corporate wealth like Disney's Michael Eisner, whose worth is reported to be more than $40 million.

"When corporate people are making millions, the average worker is saying, 'Wouldn't that be nice?' Resentment is even coming from non-union workers now," Page said.

The Central Florida area

boasts low wages as a means of attracting businesses, Page said. He said Universal studios, which moved to Orlando this year, relocated from California to take advantage of cheap labor and to rid itself of ties to labor agreements.

"It is an insult to the whole area. Low wages is nothing to brag about," Page said. "Everyone talks about all the money spent on indigent care in Florida. It's no wonder, with all the labor pools that don't have to provide benefits."

Mike Moffitt, an Orlando member of the Airline Pilot Association (APA), said striking Eastern Airlines pilots have received substantial support from Central Florida communities in spite of anti-union attitudes prevalent in the area.

"We have a segment of the population driving by with Eastern tickets saying, 'Why don't you guys go back to work?' But that's only a minority compared to those who say, 'Hang in there.'"

Ten members of the local APA chapter will join Eastern employees from across the country in a march on Washington, D.C., on Wednesday.

While Atkinson held the insect, Rodney pet it, but was unsure about taking it in his hands, so it was returned to its cage.

"It's fairly common for people, especially kids, to ask us if they can hold the insects," Atkinson observed.

Five year old Laurie was content to look at the insects through the plexiglass.

"He's pretty," she said pointing to the red legged tarantula. Mary, who had stopped by the store for a few items, was interested in the interactive computer that graphically illustrated how a roach problem, if left untreated, could rapidly spiral out of control. She could not, however, be coaxed around the corner of the van to look at the live insects in their containers.

Quite a few people by-passed the van and entered the store from the other doors. Atkinson just shrugged her shoulders. "Gee...I hope I didn't bug them."

The striking pilots are dismayed by recent events in their 6-month-old strike against Eastern Airlines but they are not defeated and many still hope labor can win the struggle, a spokesman for the pilots union said Sunday.

Ron Cole, a spokesman for the Air Line Pilots Association, also said he believes a buyout of Eastern continues to offer the best hope for strikers who still want their jobs back.

"I think we are somewhat dismayed," Cole said. "We feel abandoned by the process. During the strike, we have endured tremendous personal and professional hardships. I don't think our spirit has been broken. I don't think we've given up."

Six months ago, the International Association of Machinists struck Eastern after negotiations failed to resolve a lingering contract dispute.

Union pilots and flight attendants opted to strike in a show of solidarity that crippled Eastern and forced it to file for bankruptcy protection from creditors.

Gang activity suspected in man's death

CHICAGO — A man was killed and his father critically injured in a firebombing of a South Side home that may have been an act of gang retaliation, police and neighbors said Sunday.

One of two gasoline bombs tossed through the living room window of the home Saturday night exploded, triggering a blaze that killed Kerry Edwards, 34, police said.

Edwards' father Theodore Hubbard, 79, was critically injured in the blaze, Sgt. Thomas White said. Hubbard was confined to a wheelchair. A third person, Hazel Norwood, 71 jumped out a window and suffered a minor wrist injury, White said.

Edwards and his brother had an ongoing dispute with some members of a neighborhood street gang, according to a neighbor who asked not to be identified.

Ambulance helicopter crashes

HOUMA, La. — Three people were killed Sunday when a medical helicopter and a small, private plane collided in flight near the Houma-Terrebonne airport, officials said.

The helicopter, owned by Acadian Ambulance Service, carried a pilot and a paramedic, while one person was aboard the plane, a Louisiana State Police lieutenant said. All apparently died on impact.

The accident happened at about 6:30 p.m. at the city-parish airport, located about three miles southeast of Houma, and about 60 miles southwest of New Orleans.

Stunt truck crash kills driver, injures 14

HOPKINTON, N.H. — A stunt truck shot out of control and crashed through a fence into a crowded concession stand at a state fair Sunday, killing the driver and injuring 14 spectators, two of them seriously, state police said.

The Dodge Dakota pickup, which was part of the Hollywood Thrill Show, was being driven on its rear wheels along a race track at the Hopkinton State Fair when the accident occurred at 5:10 p.m. Witnesses told police the driver apparently lost control as he tried to set the vehicle back down on its front tires.

Ambulances from eight towns raced to the fairground after the accident and took the injured, including at least two children, to a hospital in nearby Concord, the state capital.

State police said they were investigating whether the driver, Richard Groce, 62, of Milltown, Pa., suffered a heart attack or some other crippling injury shortly before the crash.

Ling-Ling's panda cub dies

WASHINGTON — The cub born to giant panda Ling-Ling died early Sunday, overwhelmed by an infection contracted from its mother, a National Zoo spokesman said.

Spokesman Mike Morgan said the 3-ounce cub — the smallest of the four cubs the giant panda Ling-Ling has delivered in 17 years in captivity — died at 1 a.m. He said the infection it contracted from its mother "simply overwhelmed it and it died."

Zoo officials removed the cub from its mother when the infection was discovered soon after its birth Friday. Panda experts at the zoo anesthetized Ling-Ling Friday afternoon in order to give the tiny cub an injection in a risky effort to boost the cub's immune system, but discovered that an infection already was present.

Four injured, over 100 stores damaged by holiday parties

United Press International

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Officers clad in riot gear clashed early Monday with black youths visiting the resort city for a Labor Day weekend bash, as confrontations continued 24 hours after a rampage left more than 100 stores damaged and four people injured.

City officials did not call it a curfew, but one was effectively put into place around 1 a.m., as police carrying nightsticks ordered people off the street, threatening arrests if they failed to go inside. A state police armored truck also blared a warning through a loudspeaker that all people must clear the streets.

Arrests from Friday through 5 p.m. Sunday included charges against 555 people in the beachfront area, Martin said. No breakdown of the arrests was available.

On Saturday night, festivities turned violent after midnight, with random gunplay, looting and vandalism of stores along the beach area. Police said two people suffered gunshot wounds, one was injured in a fall from a fourth-floor hotel window and a fourth suffered unspecified head wounds.

Mayor Meyers Oberndorf said late Sunday that city officials are determined to regain control of the beachfront, which has been the site of shootings, fires, and looting.

Shortly before midnight Sunday, helmeted police carrying nightsticks ran up a small knoll, causing dozens of screaming young blacks to flee. Dozens of officers pursued many of them into a restaurant. At least two people were taken into custody.

Israeli soldier dies of weekend ambush wounds

United Press International

JERUSALEM — An Israeli reserve soldier shot in the head during a weekend ambush along the Israeli-Jordanian border died of his wounds, officials said Monday.

Sgt. Aharon Hanuka, 26, who died late Sunday, was the second Israeli soldier to die from Saturday's attack, for which Talat Ya'qub's Palestine Liberation Front claimed responsibility.

The gunman was killed and another Israeli soldier wounded during the assault on a border patrol.

Hanuka was shot in the head when the guerrilla first opened fire. Doctors at Rambam Hospital operated on him immediately after he was transferred there, but were unable to save his life, Israel Radio reported.

On Sunday, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said he believed Jordan had tried to prevent such border attacks but he warned Jordan "cannot both prevent infiltrations and open up its territory to PLO activity."

"Jordan will have to take into account the consequence if, in fact, this terrorist activity within Jordan continues," Rabin told Israel Radio.

On Sunday, mangled Palestinian beat to death a suspected collaborator and wounded three other Arabs during the latest escalation in intercommunal attacks in the Israeli-occupied territories.

A fifth Palestinian was shot and wounded Sunday in the Gaza Strip in an apparent revenge attack, Palestinian sources said.

Leaders from non-aligned countries meet

United Press International

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Leaders of developing nations representing nearly half the world's population gathered in Belgrade for the ninth non-aligned summit amid signs of a shift in the organization's traditional anti-Western stance.

Conference officials said a draft declaration to be presented to the 102-member movement at the start of formal sessions Monday calls for "not confrontation but making agreements" with Western industrial powers.

The draft declaration, drawn up by host country Yugoslavia in consultation with other members, was approved during a preparatory ministerial conference that ended early Sunday.

Ministers attending the overnight session argued the developing world should seek dialogue with Western nations in an era of superpower detente instead of simply condemning their "imperialist and neo-colonialist" policies, conference officials said.

But more radical nations such as Cuba, Ethiopia, North Korea, Libya, Nicaragua and Vietnam sought more and stronger criticism of Western "imperialists."

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev adopted a similarly conciliatory tone in a message to the non-aligned conference, urging negotiated settlements of international conflicts in a world without nuclear weapons or violence, the official news agency Tass said.

"We are ready for cooperation with all, wishing it in building a world that would be free from nuclear weapons, from foreign military bases and confronting military blocs — a world in which the use of armed or any other violence in international relations would be ruled out," Gorbachev was quoted as saying.

Israeli planes hit guerrilla base

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Israeli warplanes Monday bombed a guerrilla base of what Israeli officials called "terrorist organizations" in southern Lebanon in a rare nighttime attack. At least three guerrillas were reported wounded.

The raid came on the heels of a series of Katyusha rocket attacks late last week against northern Israeli settlements and a guerrilla attack along the Jordanian border in which two Israeli soldiers died. Other groups claimed responsibility for those assaults.

The raid was aimed at a base belonging to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command near the Lebanese village of Majdal Bahis, 9 miles north of Israel's self-declared security zone. Palestinian and Lebanese security sources said.

At least three guerrilla fighters were wounded in the predawn strike, the Palestinian sources said.

Communists kill 22 Filipinos

MANILA, Philippines — Communist guerrillas killed 13 soldiers in an ambush and nine other people died in separate weekend incidents, the military said Monday.

Some 150 communist New People's Army guerrillas Sunday ambushed a truck ferrying soldiers and engineers to San Francisco village in Quezon province, 150 miles southeast of Manila.

Military spokesmen said 13 troopers were killed and an army lieutenant was wounded in the attack. The soldiers had been en route to build roads and bridges in one of the most depressed areas in the Philippines.

In the central island of Negros, suspected guerrillas Sunday ambushed a minibus, killing two militiamen and five civilians, including two women. Two others were wounded in the attack by gunmen hiding in a sugarcane field, military spokesman Lt. Pedro Merced reported.

London woman wounded by bomb

LONDON — A warning issued before a bomb exploded outside a London department store mentioned Salman Rushdie's novel "The Satanic Verses," prompting Scotland Yard's anti-terrorism squad Monday to join the investigation.

A woman suffered a leg injury and several other people were treated for shock following the Sunday night blast outside the Liberty's store on Great Marlborough Street.

The bomb caused no serious damage, exploding outside a department store window displaying books. "The Satanic Verses" was not on display.

"There was a warning telephone call," Detective Superintendent Derek Willison told reporters. "The warning was based around 'Satanic Verses.'"

Rushdie has been living in hiding since Khomeini issued the decree.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Bo beats up on Rangers

Bo knows wrestling too. The Kansas City Royals and Texas Rangers equaled a 75-year-old record Sunday afternoon when seven batters were hit by pitches in the Royals' 13-2 victory, played under a blistering Texas sun.

The last of the hit batters was Kansas City's Mike Macfarlane, who charged the mound when Craig McMurtry hit him with a soft curveball in the seventh inning.

Bo Jackson, who earlier in the game contributed his 29th homer — and who stars in a television commercial showing him playing a variety of sports — charged onto the field with the rest of his teammates to flex some muscle during the free-for-all.

Elsewhere in the American League Seattle edged Boston 3-2; New York topped California 5-2; Minnesota clubbed Toronto 9-4; Detroit blasted Cleveland 12-3; Chicago nipped Baltimore 4-2; and Oakland blanked Milwaukee 5-0.

Meech tips Beebe in Coors 100

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — Rookie Mark Meech led wire-to-wire to win NASCAR Coors 100 stock car race Saturday night at the Orange Show Speedway, holding off Troy Beebe by a single car length in the $22,000 event.

Meech, of La Mesa, Calif., who had not driven in four months, started his Pontiac TransAm from the pole position in the 22-car field. He averaged 47.493 mph for the 100-lap, 25-mile distance in gaining his first career Southwest Tour triumph.

Meech, who became the sixth different winner in as many races on the Southwest Tour, won $3,218.

"I told my crew I was nervous starting on the pole because not having raced lately, I had a lot to be nervous about," he said. "But when I got in the car, I knew I'd settle down."

Korbut to make first trip to U.S.

MOSCOW — Olga Korbut, who captured hearts and medals at the 1972 Munich Olympics, said in an interview published Sunday the Soviet Union treated her like "a beggar" after she retired from gymnastics and refused to allow her to capitalize on her success.

"They didn't let me out of the country for 11 years, although there were a million invitations. They were keeping me out of harm's way," Korbut, 34, told Sovetskoy Sport.

Korbut said she visited the U.S. last year and "was happy for the first time in years. Here I am out of favor, the wild flibbertigibbet, the workhorse standing in line for kibbasa for hours."

"There (in the U.S.) I felt loved. They took me for what I am and knew what I had once achieved."

Cards creep closer to Cubs

ST. LOUIS — Pinch-hitter Leon Durham lofted a sacrifice fly to center field with none out in the bottom of the ninth inning to score Terry Pendleton from third base Sunday, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-3 come-from-behind victory over the Houston Astros.

Consecutive singles by Pendleton and Denny Walling and a walk to Jose Oquendo loaded the bases in the ninth. Durham then hit the first pitch from Danny Darwin, 11-4, to deep center and Pendleton scored easily.

The victory, coupled with the Chicago Cubs 8-5 loss to the Atlanta Braves, moved the Cardinals within 1 1/2 games of Chicago in the NL East.

In other National League action it was Pittsburgh tripping Cincinnati 3-1; Atlanta outslugging Chicago 8-5; San Francisco blanking New York 4-0; Montreal shutting out Los Angeles 4-0; and San Diego ripping Philadelphia 9-5.

Summer season wraps up

Creative Invasion claims city Class C championship

By DEAN SMITH
Herald correspondent

It took extra innings but Creative Invasion defeated the Wrecking Crew 4-3 to win the Sanford Men's Class C Slowpitch Softball League title Friday night at Chase Park.

Kirk Allen's bases-loaded triple in the bottom of the fourth inning brought Invasion back from a 3-0 deficit to force extra innings. In the eighth inning, consecutive singles by Ron Laage, Bryan Hartman and Joe Ferpes scored the game-winning run.

In other games Friday night, The Barn secured second place in the standings with a 19-12 victory over Ken Kern's Transmission while Heathrow finished fifth with a 22-14 victory over Mobilite.

The Wrecking Crew took the 3-0 lead with a run in the first and two in the third but it was not enough to hold off Invasion. Invasion finished the season 9-1 while the Crew winds up third at 6-4.

Contributing to the 14-hit invasion attack were Laage and Vic Dibartolo, each with two singles and one run scored. Joe Ferpes had two singles and the game-winning RBI. Nick Ferpes singled twice, Allen tripled and had three RBI, Blake Murray and John Raynor each singled and scored a run, and Hartman, Jerry Dibartolo and Joey Dibartolo each singled.

For the Crew, it was Tom Wilks leading a nine hit assault with two singles, one run scored and one RBI. Also contributing were Tim Winkle (two singles, run scored), Ronnie Wirth (single, run scored), Steve Cooper (single, RBI), Steve Pridgen (single), Heath Short (single) and Jim Stern (single).

In their win over Mobilite, Heathrow scored seven runs in the sixth inning to break open a close contest. The win pushes Heathrow's final record to 2-8 while Mobilite finishes 1-9.

All 10 batters in the Heathrow had at least one hit as the team slugged out 20 hits for the game. Leading the attack was Tom Gillian with three singles, one run scored and four RBI. Keith Roark added three singles while Kevin Driscoll had a triple, single, three runs scored and four RBI.

Larry Pearson had a double, single, three runs scored and four RBI. Frank Van Pelt added two singles, two runs scored and two RBI. Griff Detrick had two singles, four runs scored and one RBI. Tom George had two singles, three runs scored and two RBI. Dave Andrew singled twice and scored two runs. Eric Erickson singled, scored three runs and had one RBI, and Dean Lilly singled, scored a run and had an RBI.

For Mobilite, which had 18 hits, Jim Hopper tripled, hit two singles, scored two runs and had three RBI while Ken Lashley doubled, singled twice, scored two runs and drove in one run. Kevin Stodola added three singles, two runs scored, and one RBI.

Angel Figueroa doubled, singled, scored twice and had one RBI. Chris Brooks singled twice, scored twice and had one RBI. Tony Albright singled twice and scored twice. John Conn hit two singles, scored a run and had one RBI. Brian Boehly

Five state teams play Saturday

United Press International

Florida's major college football season gets into full swing next weekend as fifth-ranked Miami and the unrated Florida Gators begin their schedules, and Florida State tries to rebound against Clemson.

Florida State was ranked sixth going into its first game against Southern Mississippi at Jacksonville Saturday, but the Seminoles were pulled up short when the Golden Eagles scored in the last 23 seconds for a 30-26 upset.

A quick comeback won't be easy at Tallahassee Saturday because Florida State takes on Clemson, a 30-0 winner over Furman Saturday.

Miami plays its first game under new Coach Dennis Erickson Saturday afternoon at Wisconsin. The Hurricanes are heavily favored.

Florida Coach Glen Hall, the target of alumni attacks after a 7-5 year in 1988, sends his Gators out against Mississippi in Gainesville Saturday afternoon.

In Division I-AA football, Florida A&M plays Georgia Southern at Jacksonville, Central Florida is home to Valdosta State and Bethune-Cookman has the weekend off.

Florida A&M sailed passed Tuakee 41-9 Saturday. Reserve quarterback Rod Jackson came into the game in the second quarter and threw three touchdown passes.

In one of the surprises of the weekend, Bethune-Cookman ambushed Central Florida 23-15 at Orlando Friday night. It was the first victory over Central Florida for Coach Larry Little's Wildcats since 1984.

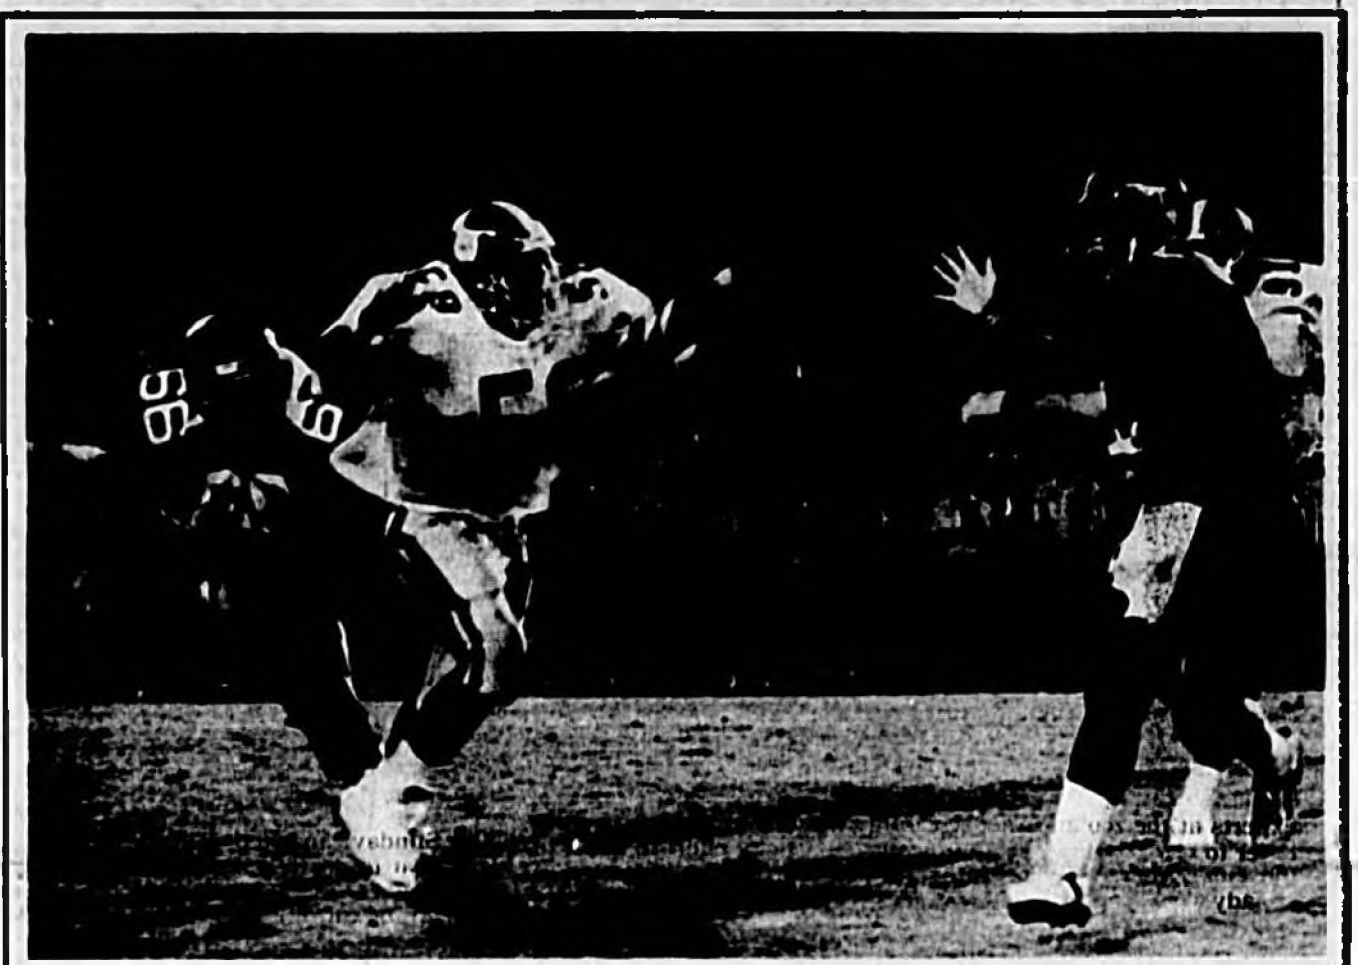

The Miami Hurricanes are coming off an 11-1 year that made them the runnerup to national champion Notre Dame, the only team that beat them. Wisconsin was 1-10 and the Badgers are not expected to improve much off that year.

The game will not only be a test for new the Hurricane coach, but also for quarterback Craig Erickson. He replaces Steve Walsh, who passed up his final year of eligibility to turn pro.

Florida, led by running back Emmitt Smith, was coming off NCAA probation which included scholarship limitations last year, but Gator fans were still unhappy with the team's performance.

The opener against a Southeastern Conference foe in the Mississippi Rebels intensifies the importance of the game.

Ole Miss was 5-8 last year, but downed Memphis State 20-13 Saturday.

Nowhere to go but up

University of Central Florida quarterback Shane Willis (right) had troubles with the rain and the Bethune-Cookman defense in the Knights' season-opening 23-15 loss to the Wildcats on Friday night.

Willis started, was replaced by Rudy Jones, then came back later in the game. Willis and the Knights will try for their first 1989 win when they host Valdosta State on Saturday.

Dolphins lose Giesler to knee injury

United Press International

MIAMI — Jon Giesler, a starting defensive tackle for the Miami Dolphins for the last decade, will miss the first four to six weeks of the season, Coach Don Shula said Sunday.

Shula said Giesler suffered a partially torn cartilage in the second quarter of the Dolphins' 20-10 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles Saturday and will require arthroscopic surgery. He said it will probably be performed Monday.

Ronnie Lee, the tackle on the other side, also went down with a knee injury against Philadelphia, but it was a only a bruise and he is expected to be ready for Sunday's regular-season opener against Buffalo.

"I just got a bruise. I was hit on the spot I was operated on in May, but I'll be okay," Lee said.

Shula indicated that Louie Cheek would replace Giesler against Buffalo. When both tackles were injured

Saturday night, he inserted Cheek and moved center Jeff Dellenbach to the other tackle. Rookie Jeff Uhlenhake of Ohio State replaced Dellenbach at center.

Shula said he would evaluate that move and also look around for players who are cut Monday by other teams. Noon Monday is the deadline for reducing rosters from 60 to 47.

Shula said the biggest problem now at offensive tackle was depth, since Giesler's backup was sidelined for the season last week with a more serious knee injury.

"We had Greg Johnson, a fine young second-year player who was playing well in preseason, go down the week before with major knee surgery," Shula lamented. "And then Jon Giesler goes down."

"Jon is a guy who was having a good camp. He is a veteran football player who knows how to play and is a good competitor," Shula said.

Norman dedicates win to leukemia patient

United Press International

FRANKLIN, Wis. — Greg Norman shook off a shaky start to the final round Sunday to win the $800,000 Greater Milwaukee Open with a 2-under-par 70 that gave him a three-shoot victory over Andy Bean.

For the second time this year, the Australian dedicated a PGA Tour victory to leukemia patient Jamie Hutton, an 18-year-old from Monona Grove, Wis., who at this tournament was at his side all four rounds.

Norman shot a 19-under total of 269 over the 7,030-yard Tuckaway Country Club course to take the $144,000 first prize. Bean shot a 68 to finish at 16-under for second place.

Norman said a big part of his decision to even play in the GMO was that "Jamie is here. I wanted to come to his home state."

Hutton had a bone marrow transplant last year after the Heritage and his leukemia is in remission right now.

They first met at last year's Heritage Classic, when the youth's dream to meet Norman was fulfilled by Thursday's Child, a group that helps ill children. Norman won the Heritage, sharing the spotlight with Hutton on national television and did so again in the GMO.

Evert and Becker gain quarterfinals at U.S. Open

United Press International

NEW YORK — Chris Evert once again postponed the inevitable, turning back the challenge of a teenager less than half her age Sunday to reach the quarterfinals of the U.S. Open for the 19th time.

"It was a huge match for me," Evert said following her 6-0, 6-2 destruction of Monica Seles that delayed her retirement for another day. "I felt like I deserved to win this match. I felt like I've been working real hard the last few weeks, and I've been struggling."

"It's my last major tournament, and I'm very pleased."

Boris Becker, who has struggled through the first week, wore down former Seminole Community College student Mikael Pernfors, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, to gain a quarterfinal berth against Yannick Noah. The second-seeded West German turned the contest around by winning 27 of 30 points in a stretch that started at the end of the second set and carried him to 4-0 in the third.

Noah, unseeded at the Open for the first time since 1979, pulled out his second successive five-set match, delivering 14 aces in ousting 10th seed Alberto Mancini of Argentina, 6-3, 3-6, 6-7 (3-7), 6-3, 6-3.

Jay Berger, the men's 11th seed, made it to the quarterfinals for the first time with a 7-5, 6-2, 6-1 victory over Pete Sampras, the conqueror of 1988 champion Mats Wilander.

Also advancing was 14th seed Aaron Krickstein, who eliminated qualifier Paul Haarhuis of The Netherlands 6-2, 6-4, 7-5. Krickstein will meet No. 11 Berger in the quarterfinals. Haarhuis, who started the year ranked No. 464, beat four-time champion John McEnroe in the second round.

Seles, a 15-year-old Yugoslav appearing in only her fifth tournament of the year, defeated Evert the last time they played, in the final of a Houston tournament.

"I felt like Margaret Court out there with Chris Evert on the other side," Evert said when asked about the 19-year age difference between her and Seles. "I was 15 when I beat her the first time."

Just as predicted, relatives turned trip into athletic torture

It's not often that my intuition serves me well. I got a lucky hunch every now and again, not enough to say that I'm psychic, but enough to keep me on edge when I have a potentially negative premonition.

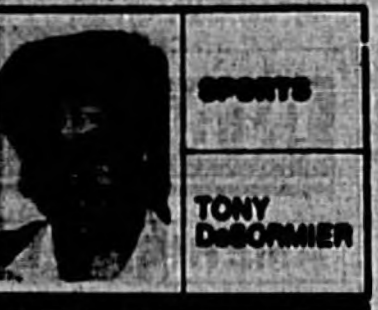

But in this space two weeks ago, I predicted that my 48-hour visit with my brothers and sisters last weekend would turn out to be an athletic nightmare. And I was right.

Actually, it wasn't much of a prediction. That fell into the category of being sure thing, like the sun coming up in the morning or rain falling on a crucial baseball game.

Right from the start, the weekend was a physical challenge. We got into the airport at Utica, N.Y. (which, contrary to popular belief, is not a field with a large X in the middle for deplaning passengers to parachute at) Friday afternoon and within two hours, I was playing two-on-two volleyball with a brother and two brothers-in-law.

It didn't take long for me to do some grave injury to my body (although getting up in the morning is usually enough to do grave injury to this body). But because the competition with my siblings and siblings' spouses is so intense, the injury wasn't enough to stop me.

I would pay the price later. Saturday was more of the same, only intensified. Again, brother-in-law Craig talked me into trying to water ski, assuring me that their new boat had enough horsepower to drag even my portly frame out of the icy water. Wrong.

SPORTS TONY DeSORMIER

Then Craig told me that Jackie, my youngest sister and his wife, also skis on one ski.

Saturday afternoon was a continual volleyball contest. Mark, brother-in-law Kevin and I lost our best of seven challenge to Ray, Dad and Craig. And once that was over, the games expanded into full six-side confrontations.

It's amazing what you can make your body do when you are intent on not being embarrassed. You'll lunge, dive and generally throw your body around in the attempt not to look foolish. And in the end, all you achieve is looking foolish.

That pretty much sums up what happened Saturday. By the time bedtime came, I ached in parts of my body I didn't realize it was possible to ache. Thank goodness for the cool, dry weather up there, or I never would have gotten any sleep.

Naturally, the weekend wouldn't be complete with one more attempt at the ski. Only this time, Vicki was along to take photographic evidence of my aquatic misadventures. We've come to an understanding about those pictures: if she shows them, I'm leaving.

It wasn't until we were on the first leg of the flights home that I started to pay the price for my physical excesses. As uncomfortable as seats on jets are under the best of circumstances, trying to find a comfortable position with a bent, folded and otherwise mutilated body is an impossibility.

singled and drove in a run, and Pat Lashley scored one run.

In the final game of the night, The Barn came back from an 8-2 deficit after two innings by scoring 15 runs in their next two at bats and cruised to the victory. The Barn finishes the season 9-2 and Ken Kern's finishes 4-6.

Leading a 25-hit Barn attack was Brasher with a home run, double, two singles, four runs scored and three RBI. Also contributing were Reddington (two triples, single, two runs scored, RBI), Molenaar (two doubles, single, two runs scored, two RBI) and Garner (double, two singles, two runs scored, two RBI).

Other offensive contributors were Collins (double, two singles, three runs scored, RBI), Hellekson (three singles, two runs scored, three RBI), Farmer (triple, single, two runs scored, RBI), Stagg (single, RBI), Had-dock (single, run scored), Imes (single, run scored) and Watson (double).

For Ken Kern's, which had 15 hits, Craig Appel had three singles, one run scored and two RBI while Greg Henaley doubled, singled, scored two runs and had an RBI. Joe Litton added a double, single, one run scored and an RBI.

Mike Nelson singled twice, scored two runs and had an RBI while Tom Bledsoe singled twice, scored a run and had an RBI. Tony Lowery singled twice and scored a run, Russell Holloman singled and scored two runs, and Jerry Herman scored a run.

The Class B League will play its final three games on Monday, Sept. 11 starting at 6:30 p.m. at Chase Park. The C League will be off for three weeks before starting the fall season.

Oxygen-rich air may help with emphysema

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am an 82-year-old male with emphysema. Is there any relief for this, such as oxygen in my home?

DEAR READER: Emphysema, a chronic lung disease accelerated by smoking and air pollution, causes difficulty breathing (dyspnea) because the damaged lung tissue prevents oxygen from entering the bloodstream. Due to "trapping" of stale air and carbon dioxide, emphysema patients must breathe more rapidly to inhale oxygen. Therefore, physical activity is difficult; some patients even experience dyspnea at rest.

Although supplemental oxygen is not appropriate for all emphysema patients, many are helped by inhaling air that has been enriched with oxygen from a tank or a concentrator, a machine that withdraws oxygen from the air and delivers it through a tube connected to the patient's nostrils. You might be aided by such devices.

Oxygen-delivery systems are available by prescription only; therefore, your doctor is the best judge of whether extra oxygen would be appropriate for you. To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease."

DEAR DR. GOTT: What is the reason for cramps in my legs? I usually get these when in bed, and they're very painful.

DEAR READER: Nocturnal leg cramps can be exasperating for patients who experience them. The cause is unknown but, in some cases, poor circulation may be the culprit. Oxygen-deprived muscles tend to cramp. Treatment consists of quinine given at bedtime. Also, calcium supplements may help.

Because leg cramps may reflect an underlying circulatory insufficiency, I recommend that you bring your symptoms to your doctor's attention. You need a discover if poor circulation is causing your problem. If so, medicine—or bypass surgery—to improve blood-flow to your legs may be necessary. Because high blood-cholesterol and/or diabetes can contribute to

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby
An easy way you can manufacture tricks is by setting up a long side-suit. You can analyze your chances by counting either your winners or your possible losers, but it is important to have a plan for making your contract. Today's declarer was our friend Willy Nilly, who won the first trick with the ace of diamonds and immediately drew two rounds of trump. Only then did he bother to think about how he was going to make 10 tricks. So he played a heart. West won the queen, cashed a high diamond and switched to a low club. Willy won the king in his hand and played a second heart to West's ace. West led the jack of clubs to force out dummy's ace, and Willy now trumped a heart. He still had one entry to dummy in the king of spades, but unfortunately the hearts in dummy were not yet established. So Willy set one more time in a contract that should easily make. In this deal it is crucial to postpone drawing trumps because declarer must use dummy's trumps for entries to set up the fifth heart as a winner. At trick two, declarer should lead a low heart from hand. West will play as before, and declarer will win the king of clubs and play a second heart. When West now leads a club to dummy's ace, South will trump a third heart high and go to dummy with the 10 of spades to trump another heart. He can now play spades ending in dummy to take the game-going trick with the last heart.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osof
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 5, 1989

Your greatest successes in the year ahead are likely to come from situations you personally direct. These endeavors might start out small in both size and significance, but they could grow to real importance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today, if you find yourself in a meaningful involvement that appears to have no commanding officer, don't be hesitant to step in and take charge of matters yourself. You'll do a good job. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep a low profile today, because you'll be able to function more effectively by handling situations from behind the scenes. If you step out in the open, you might get clobbered.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)

Your restless spirit will be happier around outgoing, gregarious people today, so try not to get involved with people who take themselves or life too seriously.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your possibilities for fulfilling your ambitious objectives today look better than usual, even if the goals you establish are more difficult than usual.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have the faculty for accurately sizing up the qualities in others today. Additionally, you're also a good learner and you'll later effectively use the positive things you saw in them.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There will be some important shifts in conditions taking place today initiated by outside influences. Regardless of whom or what authors them, you're apt to be the one who gains the most.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your luck will be greatly enhanced if you keep everything in proper balance today. Be neither overly aggressive nor unduly complacent, your winning route is down the middle of the road.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

Co-workers will mirror your moods today if you show them you're industrious and ambitious. Once you get on a roll, they'll automatically fall in step with your pace.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In situations where you find yourself in a managerial role today, bend over backwards to be just and fair. Your actions will win you loyal supporters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Give household and domestic matters top priority today, especially if you feel there is something major that needs attention which you can put back in proper order.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In addition to your other assets, your diplomacy and tact can effectively be used to your advantage today. When you turn on the charm, all will start purring.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're still under favorable financial aspects and benefits can be derived today through some type of partnership arrangement. Associate with money makers.
