PRINCETON, N.J. - Most Americans think they're very patriotic, but their neighbors aren't.

according to a Gallup poll.

Two-thirds of those polled described themselves as extremely patriotic (21 percent) or very patriotic (43 percent). Just 28 percent said they are only somewhat patriotic and 7 percent said they are not especially patriotic.

But nearly three-quarters of respondents said Americans are less patriotic today than in previous decades.

Feelings of patriotism varied by age, with younger adults least likely to feel very patriotic.

The poll was commissioned by America's Talking, NBC's all-talk cable network, to use on its July 4 launch date. Results were released

Almost half of those polled said the next generation of Americans will enjoy less personal freedom than the current generation.

Older, wealthier people were more likely to see government regulations as a serious threat to freedom. Younger people and non-whites were more likely to see lack of economic opportunity as a serious threat.

Central mail delivery?

Postmaster: It's cheaper; Historians: No cluster boxes

By NICK PPEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - "There is no plan that I know of to eliminate door-to-door mail delivery," says Sanford Postmaster Patrick J. Brennan, who did however, urge more participation in the central box concept.

According to postal statistics, is costs approximately $240 per year to have mail delivered to a person's at-the-door mailbox. In comparison, it costs $70 per year if that person uses a mailbox at the curbside.

The central box however, can hold between eight and 16 mailboxes, and the cost for delivery

"This is the most economical," Brennan said. "The boxes are more sturdy, made out of concrete and steel, and are less apt to be damaged by vandals or broken into by burglars."

"In Sanford however," he continued, "we have a rather difficult situation. The historians who handle the historic downtown area generally say they won't allow any central boxes. Yet, I've been at some of their meetings, and even the membership seems to be divided over whether or not this would be acceptable."

The question started several weeks ago, when City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan posed a question to the city staff regarding what placement of the central boxes.

"The way some of them seem to be located," he said, "if you drive too close to the curb, you'll end up hitting one of them, and I was wondering if we had any guidelines regarding where they could be placed or how far from the curb.

In response, Jay Marder, Sanford's director of Planning and Development forwarded a memorandum to City Manager Bill Simmons, which identified Mark Houton of the Sanford post office as saying the post office is attempting to eliminate door to door service.

LONGWOOD - A proposed city ordinance regulating adult entertainment and adult businesses will be reviewed Tuesday by the Longwood City Commissioners at a 6 p.m. work session and is scheduled for first reading at the regular meeting which follows at 7 p.m.

The commission members decided earlier this year an ordinance was needed to give the city some control over adult businesses which might want to locate in Longwood.

Steve Miller is expected to preside over his first meeting since becoming mayor July 1. Miller succeeds Paul Lovestrand, who resigned as mayor to run for the state legislature.

No, no one has stepped forward to foot the bill for a professional pyrotechnics display along the waterfront in Sanford this year. But individuals are planning their own displays.

Fletcher and others have stopped at roadside fireworks concessions in Sanford and Lake Mary over the last few days to stock up for the Independence Day holiday tonight.

Many famous names slept here

TAMPA - George Washington slept here.

And ate and worked and lived here, too.
It's true. The retired truck driver has spent his 56 years convincing people he really does have the same name as the father of our country.

"I tell a lot of people my name, and they don't believe me." Washington said.

"They think I'm kidding. When I was a kid, I got a lot of it. If it wasn't the cherry tree, they'd ask me about my ax. And then they'd ask, where's Martha?"

George isn't alone. Florida is full of people whose familiar names elicit smirks and puns every day, but especially on Independence Day, the St. Petersburg Times reported today.

Division of Motor Vehicle records show the state is home to numerous George and Martha Washingtons, Thomas Jeffersons, Benjamin Franklina and even a few Samuel Adamses. And hundreds of Johns - Hancock, Adams and Jay, that is.

Simon plans to challenge Lewis

TALLAHASSEE - State Rep. Art Simon, who has wrangled with Comptroller Gerald Lewis over Lewis' regulation of financial institutions, said he plans to run against the senior member of Florida's Cabinet.

The Miami Democrat is scheduled to announce his candidacy to become the state's chief bank regulator at a news conference Wednesday.

Simon, who has served in the Florida House since 1982, said he believed he would attract widespread support.

"There's a whole new generation of Democratic activists that have come up since Lewis last had a serious Democratic opponent," he said.

Lewis, also a Democrat, was first elected in 1974 and is the country's only elected bank regulator. Two years ago the comptroller accused Simon of orchestrating an unsuccessful bid to impeach him.

Lewis, 60, defeated incumbent Democrat Fred Dickinson 20 years ago. He faced his only serious challenge for reelection in 1982, when former Democratic House Speaker Ralph Haben Federal officials say Florida's plan is a model for the nation.

The renewed push for disaster planning came after state and federal officials were criticized for their response to Hurricane Andrew in August 1992.

At 6 p.m. Saturday, the state's center was fully activated with representatives of 16 state agencies, dozens of state emergency response officials and about a dozen local emergency response directors.

Most of them worked in an open room filled with tables, computers and phones, where they communicate with local emergency officials. Three large video screens provided updates on the storm.

Save the Saratoga: From monster carrier to museum?

By ROH WORD Associated Press Writer

JACKSONVILLE - Navy approval and $4.5 million are the only remaining roadblocks to turning the USS Saratoga into a floating museum once the monstrous aircraft carrier is - decommissioned in August.

"We have the opportunity to bring something here that is not only fun, but is a patriotic memorial to the sailors who have served on it - and it is a tourist attraction," said Charles Sawyer, chairman of the Jacksonville Transportation Authori-

Sawyer also is one of the leaders of the Save Our Sara organization.

A study conducted by David-Peterson Associates Inc., Office of Thomas J. Martin, showed that 80 percent of the 200 Jacksonville residents surveyed thought the museum was a good idea. In addition, 59 percent of 500 tourists surveyed on Interstate 95 said they'd be willing to visit the Saratoga with an admission cost of $5 to $7 The survey projected that 428,000 people would visit the Saratoga on an annual basis.

"This is a sound, good and even conservative estimate of the number of visitors that would come to see the Saratoga," said Martin. "We feel this would support the ship."

The study projected an $18.2 million economic impact on Jacksonville, along with the creation of 340 jobs.

The 38-year-old aircraft carrier, based at nearby Mayport Naval Station its entire career. returned June 24 from its final six-month deployment. The grey behemoth officially is scheduled to be decomissioned August 20, though the decommissioning process already has begun.

and tourists visiting a museum, Davis said, he could foresee Boy Scout and Girl Scout campouts on the ship.

He said plans call for leaving about 800 of the 5,000 alcepting berths in place aboard the aircraft carrier. He also projected that the ship would become a floating conven-tion center and would be able to host business meetings and military reunions. Retired Adm. Jim Scott predicted the Navy would give the city an answer on its request for the Saratoga by September. The ship must be removed from Mayport Naval Station by November 1.

Officials hope a museum could be open by May 1, 1995. Davis cited other successful maritime museums featuring ships, including the USS Lexington in Corpus Christi, Texas, which drew 350,000 visitors last year; the USS Alabama in Mobile, Ala., which draws about 300,000 visitors a year; and the USS Intrepid in New York, which has 500,000 annual visitors.

WHITEFISH POINT — Underwater explorers in a miniature submarine are combing the wreckage of the Edmund Fitzgeraid for clues to the riddle of the ore carrier's violent destruction.

Aiming powerful searchlights and high-resolution cameras at the ship's battered ruins, the acientific team began a three-day mission Sunday to the Fitzgerald grave at the bottom of Lake Superior.

"They're going to give us more than anyone's ever seen before," said group leader Joe MacInnis, a Canadian marine scientist. "You can actually read the name of the ship engraved in the bell of the pilot house."

The 29 crewmen who perished when the vessel sank during a gale Nov. 10, 1975, have never been found. Searchers saw no bodies during the first dive, but encountered poignant symbols of a human presence.

Discrimination caseloads Commissions struggle with increase

By GLEN JOHNSON Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — "Growing astronomically," says a Massachusetts official, "We're just about at the saturation point," is the word in Pennsylvania. Rhode Island has the worst backlog in 45 years.

In the past three years, the agencies charged with fighting discrimination across America have seen caseloads increase dramatically. And then some.

And Florida is no exception.

Experts say sex, disability, and race bias cases are leading the way, accelerated by the Supreme Court nomination hearings for Clarence Thomas and passage of the Americans With Disabilities Act.

Age discrimination complaints also are rising, with older workers complaining they have been unfairly targeted during layoffs.

And as agencies that investigate bias resolve more and more complaints, more people are encouraged to file them, said Michael Duffy, chairman of the

"Once people figure out that the commission is working more efficiently, the word spreads and more complaints get filed, so we're a victim of our own success." Duffy

In 1993 the MCAD — which also investigates bias complaints involving national origin, sexual orientation and religion — received over 3,500 complaints, double the number filed in 1990, Duffy said. This year the agency expects to surpass 4,200.

The federal government has seen similar growth in its caseload. The number of cases filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has increased by 37 percent over the past four years, from 110,000 in 1800,000 in 1 110,000 in 1989-90 to 150,500 in 1993-94.

As a result, anti-discrimination agencies are clamoring for extra staff and seeking new methods to resolve disputes quickly.

Adding to the pressure are a new federal policy that requires agencies to investigate housing discrimination complaints within 100 days of filing and several new laws, including the Disabilities Act in 1990 and a revised federal Civil Rights Act in 1991.

To handle the load, MCAD staff are much more likely today than 10 years ago to push for a mediated settlement. Duffy said.

"The advantage is quicker resolution. But the disadvantage is that (those complaining) perhaps settle for less than they might have received after a formal public hearing." he

Other states are falling farther and farther behind in handling complaints.

"We're just about at the saturation point," said Laura Treaster, information director for the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission. "We have consistently asked for additional staffing and funding."

Accusations of sexual harassment filed with the EEOC alone jumped from 6,883 to 1990-91 to 10,532 in 1991-92. That was the year Anita Hill, a University of Oklahoma law professor, accused Thomas, the EEOC's former chairman, of sexual harassment. In 1992-93 the number of sexual harassment cases rose to 11,908.

Sexual discrimination complaints lead the MCAD's caseload at 21 percent of all filings.
"I think that in the past, there were instances where, with sexual harassment for example, things that were said by bosses women would have let pass. That doesn't

The governor suspended Harrison because of his alleged interference in the Fiorida Department of Law Enforcement Richter's letter is an account of her troubles with Harrison and her attempts to resolve them.

Richter's husband, the police chief of Port St. Joe, the Gulf County seat, said he knew his wife had been troubled, but she hadn't shared all of her secrets.

"My guess is she felt Al was going to get away with all this and it would destroy us and our family." Bucky Richter said. "Her letter was a plea ... to stop (Harrison) because she couldn't."

Richter said the letter shows the sexual demands began in 1988, when the Richters were divorced for several months, and continued until a week or so before her death.

After they remarried, Mrs. Richter wrote, she tried to reject Harrison's demands. She believed the sheriff could get her husband fired, and by cooperating she helped save his job.

perating she helped save his job, according to her letter.

Chief Richter said Harrison knew about his wife's testimony and also knew that his brother, sheriff's captain Ray Richter, had talked to investigators about advances Harrison allegedly made toward Ray's wife.

Richter said Harrison repeatedly told Richter's wife and brother in the days before her death not to talk to FDLE investigators.

Harrison denies that. He said he didn't know Mrs. Richter was testifying against him until after her death.

Chief Richter accepts the possibility that his wife's death was a suicide, but state investigators haven't determined whether foul play was involved.

They say potential evidence at the scene where Mrs. Richter's body was found was destroyed. The sheriff and his deputies repeatedly drove and walked across the area before state investigators could reach the site, about 10 miles northwest of Port St. Joe.

Thoughts of independence

Independence. We the people are supposed to have it, but there are so many rules we have to follow, the freedom to do anything one pleases is practically non-existent.

It is common sense that such laws and restrictions have been enacted to protect us. as a nation, state, county, city or individual. It would be a complete disaster if everyone could do as they pleased, regardless of its effect on others.

Our founding fathers however, didn't just declare this nation as independent from others, they also instructed we the people, to remain aware of the way in which our governments (of all sizes) operate.

The Declaration of Independence says in part, "...that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government.

It cautions us however, "Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes."

In a wise statement, the document bemoans the fact that men are more apt to suffer while things go wrong, than to take it upon themselves to right the wrong. We wonder if that is going on today.

On this July Fourth, 1994, we observe this 218th anniversary of the adoption of the declaration by the Continental Congress. It may be a good time to examine where our government is, and where it may be heading.

There are many people in our neighborhoods, cities and counties, who have excellent ideas. Most everyone knows at least one such person. He or she has the ability tounderstand issues, see both sides of a question, and reach a logical conclusion which will serve in the best interests.

Yet they remain in the background. They don't consider seeking any political office. We have elections coming up. We have some people in office who have done an excellent job and deserve to continue serving the people.

There are others however, who may have outlasted their political, careers. They were probably a good choice or they wouldn't have been elected. Now however, it may be time to replace them with new people who have new ideas.

This honored document we salute today declared that we were a free nation and free people. The best way to continue promoting this freedom is to become more actively involved in the operation of our government.

Good luck

I must write a few lines on behalf of my friend and millions of other people, Wayne Doyle, who retired as editor of this newspaper. He is one of the finest gentlemen and a fair person.

Wayne and I talked many times, when I needed addresses for something I was working on for the homeless, the poor, and for the deserted children. He helped me decide where to go with material, sometimes he would take it a little further.

This man should be one of our commissioners or better still, the mayor of Sanford. So many things need to be done that are just left sitting, waiting for

"Joe" to do IL. Good luck Wayne, in your new life and your future goes with God's blessing.

Good luck, we love and miss you.

Fired lawyer redeems principles

Until last year. Anthony Griffin was known in the Galveston area of Texas as a resourceful civil rights and civil liberties attorney - particularly in voting rights and First Amendment cases. He was also general counsel — without pay — for the Texas NAACP. In 1993, Griffin was named Citizen of the Year at the Black Heritage Festival in Galveston.

Suddenly, however, Griffin became a national figure when he accepted Michael Lowe - Grand Dragon of the Texas Knights of the Ku Klux Klan — as a client. The Texas Human Rights Commission issued a subpoena ordering Lowe to turn over the membership list of the Klan.

The commission was investigating alleged discrimination and illegal intimidation against blacks in a federally subsidized housing project in the city of Vidor. Affidavita and statements by witnesses indicated that some of those involved in the threats may have been members of Lowe's klavern.

The Grand Dragon, refusing to obey the subpoena, went to the Texas ACLU, which asked Anthony Griffin to take the case. The black Galveston lawyer made it clear to Lowe that his decision to represent him was based entirely on "the basic principle of your right to speak and organize. If your rights are taken away, so will Griffin based his legal argument on a landmark 1958 Supreme Court decision, NAACP vs. Alabama. That state had demanded the NAACP turn over Its membership list. Justice John Harlan, writing for the court. upheld the First Amendment associational rights of the NAACP, pointing out that if the identities of its members were exposed, they would be vulnerable to reprisals, including the threat of physicai coercion.

Anthony Griffin's a client. decision to represent Lowe and the Klan subjected him to reprisals. He was harshly criticized by many members of the state NAACP. Its leadership tried to get the national office to decide whether he should be

Suddenly, Griffin became a national figure when he accepted the Grand Dragon of the Texas Knights of the Ku Klux Klan as Thereupon, the Texas NAACP dismissed Griffin.

But the national NAACP was not entirely out of the case. It actually filed a court brief supporting Texas' attempt to seize the list. In June of this year, the Texas Supreme Court, citing NAACP vs. Alabama, ruled that the Klan did not have to obey the subpoena. If the state of Texas appeals this decision, the U.S. Supreme Court is not likely to find a reason to overturn NAACP vs. Alabama — a decision that protected the NAACP once again in the 1970s when Texas commanded the NAACP to turn over its membership list.

I asked Anthony Griffin after the new decision came down whether his law practice had been affected by the controversy over his association with the Grand Dragon. "It was affected for about six months." he told me, "because I had to go on the road to defend my reputation and to attack the notion that the need to understand free speech does not apply to black people. So I didn't have much time to be a lawyer.'

Griffin had been lauded by the ACLU and other national free-speech organizations but, he says, "to the people on the streets, I was this crazy black lawyer in Galveston who had lost his mind.

The most tolerated hate crime

The brutal tragedy that seems to have claimed O.J. Simpson as its third victim exploded onto the evening news about the same time that the results of a study of anti-Semitism were released to minimal atten-tion by the press. There is more of a connection between the two events than may be immediately apparent. Both underscore the old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth

Begin with the Simpson case. To repeat that familiar phrase, he is innocent until proven guilty. But his former wife is dead, slashed and hacked to death, along with the handsome waiter unlucky enough to have been with her when the murderer struck. And Simpson's behavior before his arrest was, to put it mildly,

More to the point, in the years before their divorce, his wife had called the police nine times to ask for protection from his physical abuse. Only on the ninth occasion did they take action, and that amounted to less than a limp slap on the wrist. The next time the police were called to Nicole Simpson's home, she was lying in a pool of blood.

Most of the news about anti-Semitism is much better. All the trend lines are in a positive direction. As the director of a comprehensive review of public attitudes about Jews reported, anti-Semitism "decreased appreciably... as Jews became more accepted in the mainstream of American life" after World War II.

But Tom W. Smith of the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago also wrote, "Anti-Semitic prejudices still survive and anti-Semitic activities are all too common." About 20 percent of the public still holds to anti-Semitic stereotypes, down by half from the 1960s, and perhaps 5 percent are hardcore

The link between these two otherwise unrelated news events is our society's dramatically different response to the underlying sickness represented by each. Domestic violence is treated as an annoyance. Anti-Semitism is directly engaged and systematically attacked.

And yet both are expressions of social pathologies, and social pathology is an infectious disease. Eternal vigilance and uncompromising standards are the price of community health. Tolerate a little ethnic hatred here or a little wife-beating there, and the disease can become a murderous plague.

Wife beating already is. Violence in the home is the leading cause of injury to adult women, according to a 1989 study by then-U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop. The Global Campaign for Women's Human Rights says that nearly half the murders of women are committed by their male partners. The Boston Globe has reported that a husband or partner murders a woman every 22 days in

Against that grim statistical background is the simple reality that the police ignore or minimize most reports of spousal abuse, and that the courts remain almost universally tolerant of male misbehavior toward wives and girlfriends. Some of that has to do with the sheer pressure of numbers and caseload. Much of it, however, has to do with inbred attitudes that have yet to be systematically attacked. Unfortunately, we remain conflicted about the proper re-lationship between the sexes. Some religious, sects justify male dominance, including physical abuse in the name of discipline. There is a strain of male violence that rests on the implicit assump-tion that might makes right. Macho attitudes find reso nance in the nation's institutions to the degree and so long as they are dominated by men. And so there are literally tens of thousands of men on the street every day who routinely beat and abuse the women in their lives with virtual impunity. When it spills over into murder, society either averts its eyes or professes horror, but it cannot escape a share of the

That's the way it was with anti-Semitism for a long time. It was commonplace, as "normal" as male bullyboy behavior is today. Elite universities had quotas, private clubs had bans and residential neighborhoods were closed. "Jew jokes" were widespread. Anti-Semitism had been part of the warp and woof of Western civilization for centuries. The Holocaust was its ultimate expression in Europe, a living reminder of the price of indifference. Thanks to American Jewry's determination to make this nation live up to its own promises, the road went in a different direction here, but there are no guarantees. Hate is like radioactive waste. You can contain it but you can't quench it. If society lets down its guard, becomes indifferent, it will break

Dems to battle religious right

WASHINGTON — Three years ago, the executive director of the Christian Coalition unmasked himself. "I paint my face and travel at night," warned Ralph Reed. "You don't know it's over until you're in a body bag. You don't know until election night."

Democrats are now paying rapt attention to Reed. At a political boot-camp sponsored by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee on June 17 and 18, congressional incumbents underwent basic training for their upcoming campaigns — including lead-off seminars on combating the religious Democrats are girding for battle because the religious right is delivering votes and doing the OOP's dirty work. Disinformation and distortion are their weapons — as President Clinton recently complained - but so is a seductively simple message. As one of the organizers of the DCCC event told us: "The religious right has legs because they speak a language that most Americans agree with, Most believe that the country's going to hell in a hand basket. They want simple answers to very complex social

problems.. The DCCC answer to the political threat also sounds simple. Confidential DCCC strategy documents lay out a counterattack for incumbents that relies heavily on detective work, polling and cultivating friendly clergy. Here are some of the elements:

- Included in a list of "warning signs of radical right activity" is whether a district has "active Christian radio stations." Antigay, domestic partnership initiatives and school voucher proposals are also bad omens.

- The intelligence-gathering steps include compiling information on the radical right from all available sources. Speak with "friendly local ministers regarding any radi-cal right activity apparent in the religious community, Ask them to help identify any current or new 'evangelical' churches in the region with relatively large congregations." Even "moderate local Republican" leaders can be allies, the document states, as well as local teachers unions. local teachers unions.

- Next is a systematic effort to "determine who or what the radical right groups are targeting." One recommendation is to "recruit volunteers to monitor and tape Christian radio programs and local call in programs..." The DCCC suggests sending "a friend to sign on to radical right or Christian coalition mailing lists... send a friend or volunteer to evangelical church services or to announced meetings of Christian activists."
Volunteers should "peruse evangelical church parking lots to gather any leaflets being distributed."

- Under "countering radical right organising against your campaign," incumbents are advised to unleash polisters to test a series of questions, even where the religious right hasn't surfaced. "Place Pat Robertson on the feeling thermometer scale.... Test reactions to extreme positions taken by the radical right on issues, such as abortion. ... Ask voters if they'd be more or less likely to 'support a candidate who has the backing of the Christian Coalition.'' That question should be preceded with this description: "The Christian Coalition is a conservative religious organization led by Pat Robertson."

 Democratic campaigns should expose radical right activity. Have friends write letters-to-the-editor denouncing the extremism of the radical right." Letters from "friendly clergy" as well as their participation on radio or TV are seen as "especially effective" in exposing the "divisiveness of the radical right."

Bars and stripes: Prisoners sew flags as freedom signs

By ANNE THOMPSON Associated Press Writer

FRAMINGHAM, MASS, - The Fourth of July is the busiest time of year for prisoner-seamstress Julia Miller, who never stops working her sewing machine as she talks about her

Miller, a 40-year-old former social worker serving 18 to 20 years for manslaughter, makes American flags. They are a symbol to her of freedom, and of the criminal justice system that took hers away.

"Sewing gives meaning to my life," says Miller, humming gos-pel songs as she stitched red and white stripes together. "It frees your mind. It's a way of being free inside the prison."

Miller is one of 24 flag makers at the women's prison in Framingham. Started in 1896, its the oldest program of its kind in the country

Lynn McAuley, president of the National Corrections Industries Association, says women's prisons in 44 states and Canada have sewing operations; some might make flags for most make clothing.

Sewing flags at Framingham is a coveted job. Six inmates are on the waiting list, and not everyone gets hired. Supervisor Pat Johnson says she screens applicants carefully for their willingness to learn and cooper-

"I don't want to know what crime they're here for. I look for people who can work," says Johnson, whose coffee cup bears the slogan, "And you thought we only made license plates."

The inmates work six hours a day, five days a week, sewing the American flag, the Massachusetts flag and the flag remembering prisoners of war and soldiers missing in action. The starting wage is 50 cents an hour, and top pay is $1. Memorial Day, Flag Day and the Fourth of July make spring and summer the busiest seasons.

Most say they applied for the job because they wanted to keep busy. Many are also studying for special occasions, she says, but high school or college degrees. Some have special motivations.

"I know I'm doing something for the United States. My father was a veteran and when I sew the flags, I think of him." says 42-year-old Teresa Gonzalez. who is serving a five-to-seven year sentence for drug posses-

"I hate these flags," said Celease Bryant, who was showing another inmate how to stitch prison laundry bags at the other end of the narrow, stuffy flagmaking room.

Bryant, 47, started stitching flags three years ago, soon after she was sentenced to 18 to 20 years for stabbing her daughter to death during a fight.

"I hate these flags," she said. "It's supposed to symbolize the American dream and a better way of life. And the criminal justice system is just not that way."

"As far as I know." Brennan said, "there is no such move. In the first place, the Post Office doesn't pass laws. And if they are planning to ask Congress to do so, nothing has been said about that."

"We are trying to persuade people to go into the central box delivery," he said. "They are placed no further than a half a block from a home, so no one has to walk very far to get their mail. We also have a hardship program, where if people can prove a hardship, we will provide a cheaper type curb-side mail box, but our supply is limited so this isn't a major project at this time."

He continued, "We are encouraging people to get with their neighbors and contact us regarding putting up a central box. It's a much better situa-

One item which Brennan said is expected to improve area postal delivery, is the expected arrival of newer mail delivery vehicles. "These are larger than the Jeeps we have been using." he said, "and they will give us the ability to better serve the public, especially people in the more rural areas.

On the national level, the U.S. Postal Service is contemplating an increase in the price of stamps from 29 cents to possibly 32 cents, to help finance the operation of the service. The increase however, has not yet been officially approved.

"These new vehicles aren't part of that," he said, "the new vehicles have been scheduled across the nation since as far back in 1985, but Sanford seems to be one of the last post offices in Central Florida to receive these, so we are looking forward to getting them."

Braves double-up Marlins

MIAMI - Tampa's Fred McGriff homered and drove in five runs Sunday and fellow All-Star Dave Justice had two RBIs to lead the Atlanta Braves past the Florida Marlins 12-6.

Sampras repeats

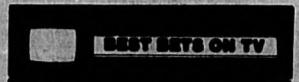

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras wins tennis matches with such brute force that fans might find it boring to watch.

Sampras played the power game at its best—or at its worst, depending on your point of view
— as he beat Goran Ivanisevic 7-6 (7-2), 7-8 (7-5). 6-0 for his accoud straight Wimbledon title and fifth Orand Slam championship.

There was little subtlety in this match. Both men fired serves at close to 130 mph, with Ivanisevic hitting 25 aces and Sampras 17.

There were no breaks of serve until the third set, when Ivanisevic wilted and Sampras, now living in Tampa, broke three times. On more than half of the 206 points, the serve was not returned in play. Few points had rallies of more than three shots and none more than six.

Weather shortens Lyman July 4th Invitational

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD - After a weekend-long battle against the elements, Bob McCullough has conceded . . . sort of.

McCullough, the Lyman High School baseball coach and organizer of the sixth annual Lyman July 4th Invitational baseball tournament, decided that they weren't going to fight the rain any longer and play around it.

Instead of playing the full 14-game schedule, the tournament will wrap up today with 11/2

At 11 a.m. this morning. Winter Park and Bishop Moore were going to finish their losers' bracket contest, interrupted by rain Sunday night with Winter Park leading Bishop Moore 3-0 through three innings.

The winner of that game was supposed to play the Chet Lemon Baseball School Juice for third place, but since the Juice were unavailable to play today (the tournament was supposed to wrap up Sunday), third will go to the Winter Park-Bishop Moore winner.

That game will be followed immediately by the championship contest, which matches the Seminole Animal Supply Bullets (Lyman's summer team) and the Dr. Phillips Panthers for the third consecutive year. Two years ago, Dr. Phillips won the tournament title. Last year, the Bullets _

U.S. faces 'greatest opportunity'

By ROMALD BLUM AP Sports Writer

STANFORD, Calif. - With American flags filling the stands. fireworks flying through the air and Independence Day festivities spanning the nation from sea to shining sea, the United States will try to make soccer history Monday. A second-round game with Brazil on the Fourth of July seems like something out of a movie script haven't they been playing that music from "Rocky" before games? "If we win tomorrow, people will think of us as a team that can play

Cup." goalkeeper Tony Meola said Sunday. "People will be wondering how far this team can go." In the last few years, the United States proved it's capable of upeets now and then. However, a firstround victory over Colombia is one thing. The chance for victory in the knockout phase against the most storied national soccer team on the planet has players' heads filled with red-white-and-blue dreams of glory.

"It's the greatest opportunity of our lives," defender Paul Caligiuri Never before has the United

Confessions of a World Cup soccer widower

See if this sounds familiar.

I can't wait until this (expletive deleted) football season is finally over. I mean, I can understand watching a couple games, but every single one? All it is is a bunch of guys running around, kicking at a ball. What's the big deal?

OK, it's the World Cup. Sure. It happens just once every four years. But is that any reason to take it so aeriously? It's just a game.

You can't talk to her when a match is on. It's not that you shouldn't, but that it's pointless. She argues, yells, pleads, celebrates, curses and generally carries on a running one-sided conversation with the television when the games

And Vicki will watch every one if she has the chance. ESPN, ABC, and UNI. English (or some variation thereof) and Spanish (I assume), in color or black and white, it doesn't matter, if there's a game on, she's in front of a television, even the games shown on tape after midnight.

this. Vicki prefers reading to watching and, with the exception of CNN and the like, could go days without even thinking about turning on a television. Now Genevieve wonders at seeing her mother transfixed by the TV.

Such is Vicki's emotional involvement that it sometimes sounds like she's speaking in tongues. It's only because we've been married 10 years and I know her ancestry that she's dropping into a strange com-bination of Spanish, Italian, and English she uses only when upset.

It's usually directed at me and I try to explain it to Genevieve, employed when she prefers that sut she's never seen her mother like. Genevieve not know what she's but she's never seen her mother like eaying about me.

Then there's all the magazines and newspapers she keeps bringing home, all of them about games she's already seen written in languages in which she's not completely literate (and some she doesn't know at all).

Will she throw them out when she's done? She still has a World Cup plastic tablecioth that she brought back from Argentina in

I guess I have to take some of the blame for contributing to her mania. Several years ago, I bought her a replica of the blue-and-white striped Argentina national team jersey, not knowing just how deeply the sentiments ran.

This past Christmas, I found scarves at a local sporting apparel store that carried the colors and names of Argentina and Italy. One now adorns the wall behind her deak here at the Herald. The other is draped over the televator in our

Now I have to hurry and get finished here so that I can get home in time for Vicki to go and work her shift as a volunteer at the secondround game between the Republic of Ireland and the Netherlands at the Florida Citrus Bowl this after-

I also have explicit instructions to make sure the television is tuned to WFTV 9 when she gets home. That way, she'll miss a minimum of the U.S.-Brazil game. And she's saked that I be watching so I can give her a rundown of the few minutes she may miss.

Of course, I haven't had the nerve to talk to her since her beloved Argentina lost to Romania Sunday afternoon (decorum prohibits me from repeating here what she said about Diego Maradona and his banishment after testing positive for banned drugs).

Hopefully, she'il recover quicker than I did following the Red Sox debacje of 1986 (just the thought of it causes a twitch in my right eye).

I just keep reminding Genevieve and myself that it'll all be over acon. Football season can't last forever, Tim Raines is a Sanford native and Seminole High School graduate now playing for the Chicago White Sox. His stats are for the 1994 season in the first column, personal-best season totals in the second column and current career totals (including 1994 games) in the third column.

Raines had a tough weekend at the plate, going 0-for-3 in Chicago's 5-0 win over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday and 0-for-1 in a 9-2 loss to the Brewers Sunday. But he was 3-for-3 on stolen base attempts and scored a run in each game.

Arrests made in murder of Colombia's Escobar; Romania, Sweden win

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

As slain soccer star Andres Escobar was buried Sunday. with some 15,000 mourners paying tribute, Colombian police received a confession to the shooting that has shaken the World Cup.

And the specter of gambling as a motive was presented by authorities in Medellin, where Escobar was killed Saturday.

Even while Sweden and Romania were advancing to the World Cup quarterfinals, attention focused on Colombia. Police said Escobar was shot six times by the driver of a man who reportedly lost money betting on the Colombian team. Escobar inadvertently kicked the ball into his own net in a 2-1 loss to the United States.

The national police said a man arrested early Sunday confessed to shooting the 27-year-old defender. The man, Humberto Munoz, was the driver for another man whom police also arrested, rancher Santiago Gallon Henao, Gallon allegedly had bet heavily on the Colombian team.

Police were searching for two other suspects and said a gun had been recovered and was being tested by ballistics

Coaches and some players have said they won't be back with the national team. Coach Francisco Maturana resigned after the World Cup, although that had been planned.

"I don't want to return to the squad if it means an error on the field will cost me my life," forward Ivan Valenciano. President Cesar Gaviria attended the funeral and pleaded for an end to the senselessness.

"Today, the violence appears even more irrational," Gaviria

Chants of "justice, justice" erupted from the crowd during eulogies for Escobar. With Escobar's death so quickly following Diego Maradona's banishment for failing a drug test, the spotlight has strayed from the field. Part of it was on the press box at the Rose Bowl for the sensational Argentina-Romania game - and on Maradona.

Maradona was issued a press credential to do television commentary on Argentina's matches, which turned out to be for all of one game. He was allowed to enter the broadcast booth in the stadium and broadcast offices, but had no access to the mixed zone, where journalists can interview players and coaches after a game.

Near the end of the game, Maradona left the press box. accompanied by his wife. Moments later, the 1978 and '86 champions left the tournament.

"This isn't the team I left ... the happy team, the knowing team," Maradona said.

Gheorghe Hagi emerged as one of the World Cup stars, leading Romania's superb counterattacks in a wide-open game played at a break-neck pace. Hagi scored the winning goal and set up one of lile Dumitrescu's two scores as Romania made the quarterfinals for the first time.

"This moment created a great happiness with our people back home," Romanian coach Anghel lordanescu said. "Maybe this is the greatest event celebrated by our people since the revolution. It is something magnificent."
At Dallas, Sweden got two goals and an assist from Kennet Andersson in ousting surprising Saudi Arabia, the first Persian Gulf team to get past the opening round.

Andersson set up Martin Dahlin's goal in the sixth minute, then got his two - the last one right after the Saudis crept within a goal in the final minutes.

"When you have two strikers like Martin and Kennet, all defenses must be careful," coach Tommy Svensson said.

On Monday, the United States plays its biggest game ever, against heavily favored Brazil at Stanford Stadium.

The other second-round games have Ireland vs. the Netherland at Orlando on Monday; Italy against Nigeria at Foxboro, Mass., and Bulgaria vs. Mexico at East Rutherford, N.J., on Tuesday.

ter Chelsea, the family soccer player.

"The whole country is just carried away by your success," the president told the team during a telephone call Saturday night. "You've absolutely captured the imagination of millions of people."

Brazil is a three-time World Cup champion. But American players believe they have a chance if they play as well as they can and get a lucky bounce or two. They repeat the words of coach Bora Milutinovic like a mantra: "In one game, anything forward Eric Wynalda said.

And playing on the Fourth of July adds another dimension. "It's really storybook for it to all come down to this day."

Players wrap the flag around themselves. Playing for their country brings out emotions they don't feel when playing for heir clubs. "For our young country — in comparison to everyone else — it's very special," defender Alexi Lalas said. "It's a tremendous setting. But in reality, Brazil could care less and would gladly spoil the party."

Brazil is 5-0 against the United States and has outscored the Americans 20-3. It has two of the best forwards in the world in Romario and Bebeto. If both teams play to form, the Brazilians won't have a problem.

But all of Brazil appears criti-cal, even the great Pele. Even the coach's mother offers sugges-

On Sunday, coach Carlos Alberto Parreira decided to bench Rai, the team captain, in favor of Mazinho.

Parreira's news conferences resemble an inquisition more than an information exchange. An 8-2 victory of Honduras — the Americans have scored that many goals just once in 78 years — triggered hysterical outrage back home.

"If we were 30 percent as good as the fans and media expect us to be," Parreira said, "we would be unbeatable."

in contrast, U.S. practice at Stanford Stadium on Sunday was as loose as a pickup game in a park. Midfielder John Harkes, suspended for the game after getting his second yellow card against Romania, kept busy by spraying teammates with a water bottle. After Brazil's practice Sunday at Santa Clara, players were put through their daily crossexaminations. "It's crazy," said Jorginho, a defender. "But Brazil can never enter a tournament to be runner-up." Brazil shut out Russia and Cameroon in the first round, then tied Sweden 1-1 in a game that didn't mean much. Brazilian papers made their team seem like the 1962 Mets. "We're just sad," goalkeeper Claudio Taffarel said. "We're doing everything right. We have attained our objective. But people aren't satisfied. We don't know what they want." U.S. players love talk like that.

Success for them seems to be only if they win 5-0." Meola said. Walking out of the locker room Sunday, Caligiuri talked about preparing for the moment. If the Americans lose, it's expected. But if they win, Caligiuri said he can't begin to imagine what it will be like.

"Just letting your emotions go wild," he said.

NOTES: Dunga will replace Rai as Brazil's captain, ... Cobi Jones probably will replace Harkes in the U.S. lineup. ... For the first time in the tournament. the United States will wear its red-and-white stripped jerseys. ... The referee will be Joel Quiniou of France, the referee when Argentina beat Brazil in the second round of the 1990 World Cup.

RBI. Walt Wheatley hit a single. Tom Anderson scored a run.

David Etzkin was the winning pitcher for the Patriots, allowing three runs through four innings and striking out four. Chuck Little pitched the final three innings to earn the save. He also struck out four.

Moises Navarro provided most of the offense for Lake Brantley in the second game, going for 2-for-3 with the Patriots' only run. Cartmill and Matt Krot each went 1-for-4.

'Old Glory' deserves some new attention

DEAR READERS: Have you noticed that in recent years there seem to be fewer patriotic Americans flying "Old Glory" on Flag Day, Memorial Day and the Fourth of July?

Perhaps this moving piece will stir others to action as it did me.

YOUR FLAG Hello. Remember me? some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star-Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your flag, the flag of the United States of America.

Something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you - because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago, people would line up on both sides of the street to watch the parade, and naturally I was leading every one, proudly waving in the breeze.

When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart - remember? And you, I remember, were nd there straig soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember your little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart - remember? What happened? I'm still the same old flag. Oh, I've added a few more stars since you were a boy, and a lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now, somehow I don't feel as proud as I used to feel. When I come down your street, you just stand there with your hands in your pockets. You may give me a small glance, and then you look away. I see children running around you shouting: they don't seem to know who I am. I saw one man take his hat off. then he looked around, and when he didn't see anybody else take off his hat, he quickly put

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Is it a sin to be patriotic today? Have you forgotten what I stand for, and where I have been? Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and Vietnam!

Take a look at the memorial honor rolls, and see the names of those patriotic Americans who gave their lives to keep this republic free. When you salute me, you are actually saluting

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So when you see me, please stand straight and place your hand cover your heart, and I'll know that you remembered. I'll salute you by waving back!

DEAR ABBY: For your information: Retired officers are authorized to wear their uniforms on ceremonial occasions such as military funerals, memorial services, inaugurals, patriotic parades, national holidays, or other military parades or ceremonies in which any active Army or reserve units is taking part.

Note: This applies to military retirees, and not those personnel on active or reserve duty.

I know that the above is not nearly as important as whether the North Koreans have nukes or not, but I thought you would like to know.

Get the right start for best results

By AURA BORRAS-ROSELLO Seminole Cty. Master Gardener

Whenever we bring home a new plant we are excited by the prospect of its beauty and its effect on our landscape, but that beauty, and its future development depend on several factors which all too often we fail to realize. If and when something goes wrong and our beautiful plant begins to show signs of stress and/or finally dies, we resort to commiserating with ourselves and blaming it all on our having what is called a "black thumb."

All of us who garden know that a plant requires basically: soil to develop roots in for proper food production, sun or good light to nurture the plants photosynthesis ability - the ability to take whatever the soil has to offer and convert it to food for itself, and lastly it needs water in proper amounts. But there are other requirements and factors which rest upon us - the acquirers of the plant - to give it the best opportunities to develop and grow. Accimatization is one of them. Success with new plants is not a matter of luck, but of acclimatization, which simply means the little extra care and attention you give your new plants to help them adjust to your environment. Many growers feel this to be so crucial that they now tag plants with specific acclimatization instructions. However, the six basic steps to successful acclimatization - if you start with a good healthy plant - are as follows:

1. Leaching - Leaching is the first important step. It is the way you flush out excess fertilization and soluble salts from the potting mixture. Doing this stimulates new root growth and sets the process of acclimatization in motion. Start by measuring outwater equal to half the total capacity of the plant pot. Pour this water slowly over the surface of the potting mixture until it sinks in. Then continue to pour until all the water is used. letting the excess water drain through. After leaching, do not fertilize for two or three months, then follow a Hormul fertilization

2. Humidity - New plants miss the warm, humid air of a greenhouse. Keep humidity higher than recommended during the first weeks, to aid your plant in developing the larger root system it needs to accommodate to its new surroundings. Put a new plant in the bathroom or kitchen, or place it on a tray of moist pebbles or near a room humidifler.

3. Watering — A word about watering during this important time: Be careful not to let the soil dry out between waterings, unless this is specifically recommended for your plant. The plant can lose a lot of its leaves

4. Lighting - High-lighting a plant will give it a good head start. For the first four to six weeks, place the plant in high to very high light to help it adjust to the indoors. After this, it will usually thrive in any location where it receives the lighting recommended for it. Artificial lighting can be useful during acclimatization. Use it to create an ideal situation of 12 to 16 hours of light a day.

5. Isolation — Isolating a new plant is a must to protect your other plants from any pests or problems the newcomer may bring in despite your careful checking. If a new plant is infected, return it. Pesticides really shouldn't be used until a plant is acclimatized. 6. Washing — Shine compounds delay a plant's adjustment. During this special time. just wash the leaves gently until your plant is well-adjusted to its new home.

Potting Mixtures Another very important aspect of the right way to treat plants that you purchase or bring to your home from other sources is the type of potting mixture that you use to establish a home for

The right potting mixture is essential to healthy plants. Far from being just plain dirt. It forms the medium in which plants live and grow, provides nutrients, and allows for both moisture retention and proper drainage. Potting mixtures may be composed of many ingre-dients in varying proportions. These ingredients are either organic, meaning that the material was once alive, or inorganic. meaning it was never alive. Most potting mixtures combine both. Most indoor gardeners simply buy potting soils from a garden supply center. It comes in various package sizes, it is sterilized, it often contains the proper nutrients for houseplants. and it is convenient. There are special mixtures for different plants that might be too dry or (a too fine in texture for good aeration. Provide better aeration and drainage in these mixtures by adding coarse peat. vermiculite, or pine bark, You can, of course, make your own mixture, combining organic and inorganic ingredients.

Inorganic ingredients: Perlite - a potting mixture component that increases aeration. It is made from volcanic rock. Fine grades of perlite are used for seed germination mix-tures, and coarser grades are vermiculite — similar to perlite. It increases aeration and epiphytic plants. drainage, and helps retain valuable nutrients.

Sand - is used for aeration and drainage. Use builder's sand, not beach sand. It does not retain nutrients, so don't use more than 50 percent in potting mixtures, except when using for propagation.

Organic ingredients:

Peat moss - has good water-holding capacity, retains fertilizer, and provides the mixture with good drainage.

Pine bark - pea size to marble size, holds water and fertilizer. and keeps the mixture open so plants can receive air. Osmunda fiber - is made from shredded masses of osmunda fern roots, and is used in orchid and bromeliad potting mixtures. Available in fine, medium and coarse grade.

Fir bark - is shredded, and can be white or red fir bark. Available in several grades, it is used for orchids.

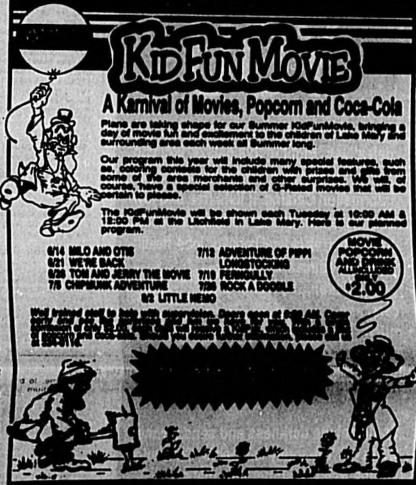

Tree fern fiber - is shredded trunks of tropical tree ferns. Available in fine, medium, and course grades, it is used for bromeliads and orchids. Pieces of tree fern fiber are used to grow Sphagnum moss — is a plant that is harvested from bogs and marshes, and partly dried. It is used for plants that require a potting mixture that is moist but well acrated. Finely ground spagnum moss is often used to germinate seeds, as it suppresses the growth of many diseases.

Garden soil - also called loam, is often recommended as part of a potting mixture. A good garden soil will have a balance of clay, silt, and sand, and will retain moisture and nutrients. Because loam from the garden may contain diseases, insects, or weed seeds, it must be pasteurized before use. Wet the soil, place it in a covered roasting pan, and bake it for 30 minutes at 180 degrees F (82 degrees C). Make sure you cool it before using in potting mixture.

All of the above are important aspects to consider whenever you decide to put a plant in your landscape or in a pot at home.

While Tricia Thomas is on maternity leave her column is being written by several different master gardeners.

Is testosterone worth the risk?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm 51 and have been taking a testosterone shot each month for the past year. What are the short- and long-term effects and do the benefits outweigh the risks?

DEAR READER: Testosterone, male hormone, is often prescribed when a deficiency exists: that is, in men with sexual dysfunction in whom blood tests have documented a lack of naturally occurring hormone.

Thus, to answer the last part of your question first, the benefits outweigh the risks only if you have a hormone deficiency causing sexual dysfunction. In particular, supplemental testosterone is not recommended to treat impotence that is caused by other factors, such as inadequate circulation.

Because testosterone is a natural hormone, the short-term side effects are negligible. With chronic use, testosteronedeficient patients may experi-ence improved sexual function-

However, the risks -- especially in older men - include liver tumors, jaundice, fluid retention, breast enlargement, nausca, vomiting, increased cholesterol, and prostate cancer.

Therefore, I discourage testosterone supplements (in-cluding the pills or patches) unless there is a clear-cut necessity for the medicine. You need a consultation with a urologist.
DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an interstitial cystitis patient and wonder why doctors don't pay attention to our pain. I feel as though I've been put on the back burner. The pain I suffer is real and I feel as if I have the flu all the time. My main problem is frequency and pain. I have hydrodilation done every six weeks or so to help the frequency, but no one seems to care about the pain aspect. Doctors are afraid to over-drug the elderly and they disregard

As I have reported in the past. after the signing of the Declara-tion of Independence on July 4, 1776, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock and Thomas Jefferson didn't join the other signatories in celebratory drinks. Instead they retired for a card game bearing a remarkable resemblance to bridge. On the first deal. Jefferson made six hearts. On the second. Franklin brought no-trump. This was the third deal.

Against the pushy four-spade contract, Franklin, West, found the best lead of a trump. With little thought, Adams won in hand and led his low heart. Franklin won with the king and played a second trump. Declarer won in hand and led a low club. but Franklin carefully went in with the eight to gain the lead for a third trump play. Although the diamonds broke 3-3, Adams could win only nine tricks: five spades, three diamonds and one club.

"That was an unimpressive performance," commented Jefferson.

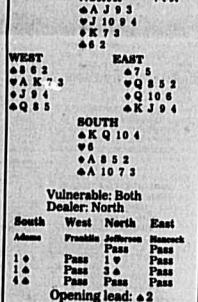

"I was trying to organize a crossruff," replied Adams. "But after a trump lead, how likely was that?" "And maybe I could establish a heart trick."

my if ben has one honor and plays it on the first round. Impossible, I'd say. The heart suit is a mirage."

Well, what should I have done, Tom?" "You should duck a club at trick two, or play the ace and another club. You must ruff your two club losers in the dummy and hope diamonds are 3-3. Your 10 tricks will be six spades, three diamonds and the club

By Bernice Bede Occi YOUR BERTHDAY

Tuesday, July 5, 1994 Don't be discouraged if in the next few months you don't seem to be getting opportunities in your work or career. Changes are in the wind, and your day will dawn.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) our plans prematurely, but to-day this factor could work against you instead of for you. Let others know what you hope to achieve. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you expect a friend to forgive you for your infractions that caused him or her to suffer in the past, you must also be willing to forgive this person today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

Associates who haven't been supportive of your purposes or positions aren't likely to be suddenly awayed to your side today. Proceed without them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A negative attitude today will not only make things harder for you personally, it could also be extremely annoying to co-workers and associates.

Don't get drawn into an old endeavor today where you will knowingly be putting good money after bad. If it didn't work previously, it might not work

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be on guard in your partner-ship arrangements today, so that someone with whom you're as-sociated doesn't attempt to shift the blame for his or her problems on you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be mindful of how you phrase things to co-workers to-day so that they aren't angered by your language or tone, think-ing you meant something you really didn't.

AQUARTUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When socializing with friends today, don't let it be said of you that you tried to evade paying your fair share of the tab. Be the first to ante up.

PIECES (Feb. 20-March 20) Difficult achievements are doable today, but you may have to pay a bigger price for your success than usual. Be sure what you win is worth what it costs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Basically you're an adventurous, courageous person, but today you might let self-doubts intimidate you and cause you to stop or hold back before you get started.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Avoid involvements with persons today who tend to be takers instead of givers. Your tolerance for those who fit into this mold will be at a very low ebb. Cross words are possible.
