

EAST COAST CANAL ASS'N. BIG MEET

E. T. WOODRUFF REPRESENTS SANFORD BOARD OF TRADE

The East Coast Canal Association Annual Convention at Ft. Lauderdale last week was in many respects a notable gathering. Mr. E. T. Woodruff, who was delegated by Seminole Board of Trade to attend same reports two features of the meeting as particularly noteworthy, one of these being the position now taken on the waterway proposition, and the other a political declaration bearing upon that and other equally vital questions of policy. According to the call issued by Secretary Hampton, the thing of prime importance to come before this session of the Association was the matter of appeal from the decision of the special board of engineers appointed to investigate and report upon the feasibility of Government ownership of the East Coast Canal. This report being adverse to the scheme it appeared to be the intention of the secretary that the Association should vote an appeal, but the gratifying fact is that the convention as a whole, took a more practical view of the situation. Being recognized by the chair, Mr. Woodruff strongly urged that the tenet for the East Coast Canal be modified into the broader slogan of "First and Foremost, A Waterway," the routing to whatever offers most invitingly as to cost, service to the greatest extent of territory and population, and through cooperation and discretion of the Army Engineers, most likelihood of our acquiring. He commended the staying and determined-to-accomplish qualities of the membership of the Association, and called attention to what a power this, united with our forces would be in securing the desired through Jacksonville to Miami and Key West, natural and logical link of the great Inter-Coastal Waterway. The notable thing is that at the next morning's assembling, Judge Hancock, president of the Association, told Mr. Woodruff and others that he would, first when the convention was called to order, recognize Mr. George G. Matthews, editor of the Ft. Lauderdale Sentinel, who would and did when given opportunity state that the object of the Association was not, as many supposed, to foist upon the Government, the East Coast Canal at a fancy price, but to foster and obtain improvement of Florida Waterways, particularly a line from Jacksonville to Key West. Mr. Matthews did not say so, but it was evident that the scheme of selling the old ditch to Uncle Sam and making a haul on the treasury, when the Canal Company has already been paid for construction and maintenance of a navigable canal, has become so unpopular with the public and with the major portion of the Association members, that the object and intent of this organization has, of necessity, got to be promulgated in accord with general prevailing opinion, or lose its standing and influence. The announcement, therefore, that the Florida East Coast Canal Association stands for a waterway primarily, instead of specifically for the East Coast Canal and Federal ownership of same, is a matter of import and for congratulation.

The other notable feature is the attitude of the Association, as was emphatically voiced by Secretary L. G. Biggers of West Palm Beach Board of Trade and other speakers, and almost unanimously seconded and approved by the entire assembly, that there should be two strong political parties in Florida, not one only, in order that we may receive the consideration and merited recognition accorded to states thus pivoted in the balance. Mr. Biggers stated that, although bred and brought up in the Democratic faith and always loyal to same, he did at the last election, from above principle, vote the Republican ticket. He was cheered and afterward personally congratulated for what was termed nerve, backbone and sacrifice in behalf of the public good.

Among the discussions and several addresses the East Coast Canal Company was unmercifully scored for its failure to fulfill or carry out its contract, some urging that the lands granted the Company should be forfeited while others felt that as these lands have passed into innocent purchasers' hands, such procedure, even if possible, would be unjust. When the resolutions were finally passed, they embodied strong endorsement of the action of Attorney General T. F. West in his intention to institute legal proceedings to force the Florida East Coast Canal Co. to maintain according to contract their waterway, and also, not an appeal from the decision of the special board of army engineers, but merely a request, to be forwarded to the U. S. Board of Engineers, that final action on the adverse report be postponed until the advocates of Federal ownership of the East Coast Canal can prepare an answer to same. The Attorney General was, in the resolution urged to proceed with legal action against the Canal Company as rapidly as is possible and consistent with equity and justice to any and all concerned.

Seminole county's representative, though of course not a member of the Association was presented with a badge, invited to the banquet and shown numerous much appreciated courtesies. Speaking of the feast that closed the two days' convention, it is but truth to say that the ten course sumptuous repast served by the Civic committee of the Ft. Lauderdale Woman's Club was unique in its bounty, its epicurean toothsome, its beauty of table decoration and charming every detail. Certainly nothing could exceed, and very rarely does anything of the kind compare with the generous, yet delicate and refinedly arranged and served spread, to which the one hundred and fifty or more guests were so felicitously welcomed by Toastmaster R. J. Reed. Conspicuously

ROUMANIANS SQUEEZED IN CORNER

TEUTONS ARE PUSHING THEM TO THE LIMIT

Later reports of the campaign General von Falkenhayen is waging against the Rumanians indicate that the Teutonic forces are overrunning western Wallachia, following up sharply their defeat of the Rumanians in the Jiu valley region and the capture of Craiova. Berlin has reported progress for the Austro-German armies that are extending the Teutonic front westward from the Jiu region towards Orsova. The fate of the Rumanian army that was operating in the Orsova region remains in doubt, as does the extent to which the Russo-Rumanian forces in the Jiu valley were able to withstand the swift thrust of Von Falkenhayen's troops.

No official statements by the Bucharest war office has been received since Sunday. Indications of the abandonment by the Rumanians of a large section of Western Wallachia may be found in today's announcement by the Bulgarian war office. It reports the destruction by Rumanian forces of the bridge over the Danube near Corabia, 50 miles southeast of Craiova, the firing of stores of ammunition there, and the sinking by the Rumanians of the barges in the Danube, presumably in the region indicated.

It appears that the entente forces which captured Monastir have been unable to advance beyond the new line taken up by the Bulgarians and Germans a short distance north of the city. Sofia records the repulse of entente attacks in the bend of the Cerna and eastward, and of the advance guards which were pushing forward in the regions of Lakes Presha and Ochrida to the west.

Only artillery and aviation operations along the Somme in the northern France regions and elsewhere on the Franco-Belgium front are reported in today's bulletins from London and Paris.

The British admiralty today confirmed press advices that there were no wounded on board the British hospital ship Britannic when she was sunk in the Aegean. Those on the vessel were her crew and the hospital staff.

EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA IS DEAD FOR SEMINOLE COUNTY FAIR IS ASSURED

AFTER REIGN OF SIXTY YEARS FILLED WITH HISTORY

London, Nov. 24.—Dispatches from Vienna via Amsterdam state that Francis Joseph, the aged Emperor of Austria died early Wednesday morning. Sorrowing throngs awaited outside the palace for news from his bedside and the announcement of his death caused sadness throughout the empire.

A news dispatch from Zurich says that the Emperor's death resulted from an attack of pneumonia following a severe cold caught while walking in Schonbrunn Park with the King of Bavaria ten days ago. Charles Francis Joseph, the grand nephew of the dead emperor succeeds to the throne. He is twenty-nine years old and has been in command of troops on the Transylvanian front.

The death of Francis Joseph is a remarkable climax to the long list of tragedies in the Hapsburg family—a list unparalleled in any other reigning house in Europe. He died in the midst of the world's greatest war, which he himself largely brought about by his determination to avenge the act of assassination of his heir, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, as the result of an alleged Serbian conspiracy, while on a state visit to Bosnia on June 28, 1914.

Francis Joseph was 87 years old at the time of his death. He was born August 18, 1830. He was only nineteen years of age when he ascended the throne of Austria, upon the abdication of his uncle, Ferdinand I, December 2, 1848, making his active reign extend over a total of 67 years, all but the first twenty of which he was also Apostolic King of Hungary. "It is doubtful that if in all history there has been an active authentic reign that was longer. Tradition says a Pharaoh ruled for 99 years, and there is the more credible instance of Ramesses II, Sotris of the Greeks, whose reign is reputed to have covered 77 years. But in recorded history there certainly has been no reign of equal duration to that of Francis Joseph. Louis XIV of France was nominally king for 72 years. He actually occupied the throne for little more than a half century. A closer rival, and the only one of modern times was Queen Victoria who reigned for 64 years."

The aged monarch, although, he had suffered serious inroads upon his health for many years past was strong enough to keep a firm grip on affairs of state almost to the last. There were repeated reports of a serious illness from a bronchial affection and frequently rumors of his death, which were proven unofficial, when announcements were made from Vienna. Some of the people asserted that his mind had become affected through worry over the great war, but the truth of these rumors was not admitted.

McClellan Lands Again
The following from the Newspaper Guide will be interesting to Florida friends:

George A. McClellan, formerly of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis has purchased a substantial interest in Today's Magazine, and has assumed the general management of that publication, succeeding George Thorne Hill, who goes to the Home Pattern Co. in which corporation he has acquired an interest.

Mr. McClellan is one of the best known newspaper men in the country. He purchased the Florida Metropolis in 1913, reselling it to the former owners a few months ago. Prior to going to Jacksonville, he was with the Indianapolis Sun, and previous to that with the Star League, consisting of the Indianapolis Star, the Muncie Star and the Terre Haute Star.

COUNTY FAIR IS ASSURED

BIG MEETING YESTERDAY PERFECTED THE ORGANIZATION

Seminole county will have a fair and the date will probably be the last week in January. At a most enthusiastic meeting of citizens yesterday at the Hotel Carnes a temporary organization was formed that will take charge of the fair this season and a permanent organization will then be made and the Seminole County Fair Association with a fair every year will be the result.

After Chairman C. R. Walker had called the meeting to order the organization was formed by the election of the following officers: C. R. Walker, president; E. T. Woodruff, second vice president; secretary, Schell Maline; treasurer, W. W. Abernathy. President Walker appointed a committee consisting of R. J. Holly, E. T. Woodruff and A. P. Gonnally to select the names for the board of directors to consist of seven members and report at next meeting.

The Sanford Board of Trade recognizing the value of a county fair will hold a special meeting Monday night in the court house to obtain the reports from the fair committee and assist the proposition in every way. After the special meeting of the Board of Trade the Fair Association will get busy and lay the plans for one of the best fairs of the kind possible to arrange. The bulkhead in front of the Hotel Carnes will be obtained if possible and being in the heart of the city will make an ideal spot for the fair.

Premium lists will be arranged and a systematic campaign inaugurated for exhibits and donations for the fair and that it will be a big success is already assured.

Ask For Embargo

Washington, Nov. 23.—Chairman Fitzgerald of the House Appropriations Committee has announced that he intends to prepare a bill providing for an embargo on foodstuffs and push it early in the coming session of congress. He declares that an embargo would be a most effective weapon in the controversy with Great Britain over the trade blacklist and accomplish more than months of diplomatic negotiations, also that it should be imposed for purely domestic reasons as food prices have reached levels where they are causing widespread distress.

It is understood that President Wilson and his cabinet oppose such legislation.

Miami, Nov. 24.—The twenty-second annual meeting of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs convened Tuesday with a large attendance of delegates from all parts of the state. The first meeting was held by the board in the Woman's Club auditorium and presided over by Mrs. W. S. Jennings, president. The business before the delegates was of a routine nature, with no spectators present.

The visitors who were not engaged in the meeting had a fine opportunity to see the city and many made calls on friends.

There are several handsome displays from out of town clubs, among them being a display of pictures, water colors, etc., from the Cathedral School at Orlando; another from the Dunedin Woman's Club, consisting of hand painted china, etc.; another from the Coconut Grove Sketching Club; another from Rollins College, arts and crafts; another by Mrs. Kirk Munroe, native fibre goods; another from the Long View club, rugs, etc.; another by Mrs. Appleton, display of historic photographs and gold jewelry with Florida scenes; and another by Miss Bertha Constock of Miami, Indian bead work, sandals, etc. Hundreds of people gathered round these displays admiring the varied handiwork of the women. The evening session was held in the White Temple, Mrs. W. S. Jennings and Mrs. A. Leight Monroe presiding.

SUBSTITUTE FOR GAS SAYS FORD

DENATURED ALCOHOL WILL TAKE THE PLACE OF GASOLINE

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24.—Henry Ford, who for eighteen months has been experimenting in the practicability of using alcohol for farm tractors and automobiles today remarked that gasoline is going and alcohol is coming, and coming to stay too, for he said, the supply will be unlimited.

"What to do with over abundant crops, how to get a rich food for dairy cattle, how to cut the amounts of manual and teaming labor, how to obtain a motor fuel the price of which will not be prohibitive, these problems of the farm and many others may all be solved by the use of alcohol as a gas engine fuel and the production of alcohol which he uses by the farmer himself," said Mr. Ford.

"As an example of the uses to which alcohol can be put," he continued, "let me tell you that today thirty of the tractors used on our farms in Dearborn are alcohol driven. When a large still which I have arranged for is completed I will make our own fuel right here."

"There're simply no two ways about this fuel question," Sir Baynton Rodwood is adviser on petroleum to the British government and the highest authority on the subject. He says that at the present rate of consumption the world's available supply of petroleum will be exhausted in twenty-five years. When that is gone there will be no more gasoline, and long before that time the price of gasoline will have risen to a point where it will be too expensive to burn as a motor fuel.

"The substitute for gasoline is alcohol, which experiment has shown works even better than gasoline, is cleaner and more powerful. It can be manufactured very cheaply—from some materials as low as ten cents a gallon—half the present price of gasoline, and which, because of its presence in a thousand different forms of vegetation, renewed year after year, is in unlimited supply.

"Corn, cornstalks, wheat, potatoes, beets and beet tops, apples, peaches, all the things grown on the farm, to a greater or less degree contain alcohol which can readily be extracted, leaving the by-product for other uses.

"We have proved in our laboratories that alcohol can be piped, just as gas is, and used for illumination. The farmer ultimately will not only drive his automobile and tractor and threshing machines with alcohol, but he will light his house with it and his wife will have an alcohol stove on which she will do all her cooking.

"The small producers of alcohol need never fear competition from the big producers, such as the whiskey trust. In the first place the supply of raw material is unlimited. Not until someone learns how to control the sun and its light can there be a monopoly in the raw material for alcohol manufacture.

"Just the reverse will always be true. The innumerable uses to which alcohol is now put and the increased uses which the future is certain to develop, guarantees that all the alcohol which the farmer produces above his own wants will find a ready market. Moreover, the farmer will be saved immense transportation costs.

"In the old days he sent his hay and grain to market in bulk. In the future it will go in the compressed form of alcohol or in the self-transportation bottles of his cattle and pigs. This will be a great aid in reducing railroad congestion."

AMONG THE THEATRES

Chit-Chat of the Play Houses in Sanford

"Marriage of Molly-O"
 "The Marriage of Molly-O," the new Triangle play featuring Mae Marsh and Robert Harron is a romantic story of Irish people, laid in the most romantic of locations, Ireland itself. It could not possibly be complete without some reference to the little people, who, as every one knows, work the livelong day and night to correct the wrongs done by humans. They are, in short, the poetic justice of a great nation.

The fairy episode in "The Marriage of Molly-O" is a story told by the hero—the very brother of a boy—to a pretty colleen whom he loves dearer than his life. It is the story of the fairy queen, who has fallen in love with one prince, but who is under obligations to marry another whom she hates. Then a duel takes place between the two suitors, and the good prince is victorious. However, the fairy queen is given to understand that the one she loves has been killed. So she directs her attendants to carry to the victor the flower of death, one smell of which means instant death. The good prince smells of this flower and instantly expires. And when the beautiful queen learns what she has done she too smells the flower.

By putting himself and his rival in the places of the two princes, and Molly-O in place of the fairy queen, the hero of "The Marriage of Molly-O" works very neatly upon the heart of his lady love; and although she is loath, through natural modesty, to admit it, she falls deeply in love with him.

It is said that there never has been a play presented on the screen so true to the national spirit as this. There are jaunting cars, head-agents and pigs, cabbages, potatoes, fights and a real Irish fair—with the hero a nobleman in disguise who does not make himself known until he is sure of the true affection of the girl of his heart.—A. Poor little Gloria Stafford thought the worst was over when she learned by the newspapers that Freneau, her fiancé was really dead; her grief being momentarily dulled in her new resolve to trace down his murderer. But next morning when her dainty frock that had been ordered as her bridal gown arrived her grief was brought back anew. Claspings the soft, shimmering robe to her breast she sank to the floor and moaned in an agony. An hour later she gained strength to put the bridal finery away in the box—as in a coffin, and then she faced the world again more fiercely resolved than ever to herself run down the murderer of her intended husband. Doctor Royce, meanwhile disclosed to Pierpont Stafford what he knew concerning the real character of Freneau and how close, Lois Stafford, David's wife, had brought scandal to the door through her reckless flirtations with Freneau. The two agreed the police must never be put on the trail lest the publicity, which would surely follow should disclose the scandal in David Stafford's home. Gloria found it hard to understand why the police should not be summoned immediately, but her father and Dr. Royce were resolved she should never learn of Freneau's villainy, lest it blast her entire life. In an endeavor to make her forget her grief Pierpont suggested she discard her mourning gown and engagement ring, but alas, this only caused Gloria to grieve the more. And not even her lover's body was to be given Gloria to bury, for a lonely little mother in a Colorado town wired for the remains and they were shipped to her.

Public Speaker Must Be Trained.
 A school authority on oratory says: "The acquirement of this art is by no means an easy matter. The speaker must be able to employ just the right word to express the exact shade of meaning. He must have the proper temperament, a pleasing voice that can adapt itself to every emotion, and absolute control of the muscles of the body and face. All this comes only as the result of hard and persistent work."

MUST CARE FOR MOTHER

Clara Bishoff, twenty years old and pretty, is looking for a husband who will provide for her mother. In desperate straits financially the girl says she will try to make the man who meets her requirements happy.

Here are some of the qualifications: The man must be between the ages of twenty-three and thirty. He must earn at least $50 a week. He must be gentle and kind. And above all he must provide for her mother.

"You might call all this a 'husband advertisement' if you look at it one way, but Clara Bishoff's announcement means more than that. Twenty is not so very old when it comes to making a fair living for two. Here is a girl who tried to make a meager salary do the impossible. Yesterday she frankly admitted she had failed.

"For days I faced this," the girl explained. "Can't you see how hard it would be for any girl to come to a public announcement that she wanted a husband? It was the hardest thing I have ever had to do. But for mother's sake I mean to see it through now."

DREAM RESTORES HIS SPEECH

Welsh Soldier Recovers the Power in London Hospital Lost in Battle.
 London.—Many remarkable instances of the recovery of soldiers of the power of speech, lost through shell shock or wounds, have been told. The latest is that of a Welshman, Private Morris, who had his voice restored in a dream.

He was injured during the battle of the Somme, and on recovering consciousness found that he had lost the power of speech. While in a hospital in London he dreamed that he was back in the trenches and that a shell burst near him. He shouted at the top of his voice, and on waking was spoken to about it. To his astonishment he found he was able to reply, and he has now completely regained his speech.

IMPROVEMENT IN GOLF

United States Will Soon Produce Greatest Golfers.

John Ward, Old-Time Giant Shortstop and Expert With Driver and Niblick Thinks Players Are Improving Rapidly.

That the United States will soon produce the greatest golfers in the world is the opinion of John Ward, old-time Giant shortstop and an expert with the driver and niblick.

This prediction is based on the vastly improved form of American players which to Ward was the feature of the 1916 golf season. If this improvement in playing form continues, says the veteran, American golfers as a class should at least be the equal if not the superior of the English and Scotch players.

"I have competed in many tournaments this season and watched a number of others," declared the champion of the Garden City club. "What surprised me most was the improved playing style of the majority of golfers. It was only a short time ago that only about one golfer in ten played in correct form. The others would simply club their way around without regard for golfing style. This season I would say that seven out of ten knew the proper way to play their clubs. Those that generally showed the best form were young fellows.

"These boys have been imbued with the idea of starting the game right. They have received lessons from competent professionals, with the result that their progress has been exceptionally fast. It is a certainty that many additional youths will be attracted to the game, and all being anxious to force ahead quickly will learn at the beginning to handle their clubs. This will mean that most of the present stars who helped to make the sport so popular will be compelled to stand aside. With the proper instruction of our young players I should say that within ten years our golfers will be the best in the world.

"At the national amateur tournament at Merion a few weeks ago Bobby Jones, the fourteen-year-old Atlanta lad, gave an illustration how young and able some of our youthful golfers can be. I understand there are several other boys in Atlanta who will soon cause considerable comment and it is reasonable to expect other sections of the country will produce remarkable boy golfers."

According to the old baseball star, golf now is just beginning to enjoy real popularity, and there is no telling to what lengths the present rush for the links will go. Ward believes golf is the best form of moderate exercise. Yet he says that the final round for a national championship is the most severe strain one will encounter in any sport. The veteran declares that an ordinary round of golf is good average exercise, not nearly so much of a strain as a baseball game. Recalling his championship days with the Giants, Ward relates his own experience on the diamond as a means of contrast with golf on the player's physical strength.

GIRL CADDIE IN FAVOR

British golf players—all above military age just now—are strong for the girl caddie.

The club-carrying member of the opposite sex is a decided success. What she lacks in carrying clubs she gains by lack of irritating comment.

Experienced and veteran golfers alike declare that the feminine caddie perhaps fails to take such a keen interest in the game as the boy caddie, but she doesn't attempt to take all the joy out of a perfectly played "turn" by piping:

"Mr. Somersdo always does that hole in three."

The girl caddie is doing the work in scores of British links while her brother is making munitions.

LORD OLLIE

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

We have been accustomed to hear Ollie speak of the Countess in well, not exactly friendly or comradely or familiar terms, but as if he knew her pretty well. For instance, he would say when the mail was brought in:

"Another letter from the Countess. Now I'll get it for not writing." Quite as if it mattered to the Countess whether he wrote or not.

He had come to the old-fashioned boarding house on West Fifty-fifth street in the summertime. From his tone and words we gathered that he was a man of peace and would not go to war, that the Countess disapproved of his sentiments, and that his elder brother was fighting somewhere in France.

He was a slim, dark, nice sort of chap, with big, speculative, humorous blue eyes behind eyeglasses. Until Jessica came to stay with us, he had matters his own way in an argument down in the dining room. The rest of us were too hungry and weary to combat word peace or anything else.

But Jessica was different. Fresh from the West she was, and thoroughly prepared for war at any moment. She was in the nurses' training school, waiting for her chance to go abroad in Red Cross work.

Ollie was all for social evolution, and the two of them would sit and let their dinners grow cold while they thrashed the wars of the nations over and over again. His name, by the way was Oliver Grovesnor. Sometimes his mail came to Mr. Oliver Grovesnor and sometimes to Lord Oliver Francis Grovesnor, but we called him Ollie.

A boarding home is a curious commonwealth. To save your life you can't help knowing every other body's business. We used to run across the two of them sitting out on the little green wooded bench in the bit of a front yard talking after dinner.

Then came another letter from the Countess, the first one since Jessica had come to stay. Oliver found it under his napkin as usual, glanced at it whimsically, said it was another letter from the Countess, and that he'd get it for not writing.

And Jessica, being a woman, promptly asked who the Countess was. Whereupon Ollie answered simply:

"My mother."

She eyed him from a different aspect from that moment. At first, with suspicion as if he might be poking fun at her. You see, Jessica came from a small town in South Dakota, and she was twenty-one. She wondered, just as we all had, if Ollie were telling the truth.

Jessica waited until she had him to herself on the green garden bench. She approached the subject of Ollie's connection with the English nobility without fear or compromise.

"Is the Countess really your mother?"

"So I have always been told," replied Ollie.

"Countess what?"

"Countess of Walsingham. Her name, though, is Margaret Margaret Olivia."

"I blame you more than ever," she said briefly and tensely. "Since you do happen to be born in this particular age and in a certain class, you owe it to your times, to the spirit of your times, to stand for the morale of that class."

"Rot," said Ollie, and he opened the last letter from the Countess. She was silent as he read it. Presently he spoke in a curious voice, a sort of baffled voice, as if fate had handed him a foul.

"By Jove!" he said. "Poor old Bert!"

For a minute Jessica didn't get the portent of his words, he had spoken so quietly, but she turned her head and saw his face, suddenly sharp and a bit white in the half light.

"Who is he?"

Ollie stood up.

"I'm going back. She wants me to. My brother's dead."

And this is the strangest part. As he stood there looking down in her face, suddenly all the little foolish conventionalities of everyday life dropped from them.

"You're going over there to fight?" she asked.

"Of course. Bert died somewhere in France. It isn't so much the war, you understand." His hands clenched at his sides. "It's what they've done to him. I want to go and just give it to them for his sake, and my mother expects me to."

"I'm sailing on the 10th," Jessica spoke eagerly. "I didn't want to tell you because you had a way of taking all the spirit out of it for me, and I wanted to go the other way—believing in it, I mean."

"We'll sail together," he told her. "You said once that I had no morale. Maybe I haven't. I don't like the mess over there, and I don't believe in war, but when the wolf climbs over the sheep shelter, one grabs a gun, I guess."

And then he looked down at her and said in that simple, square, nice way of his we all liked, as if it settled the whole thing between them:

"The Countess will think you're an awfully plucky girl."

And the next morning they sailed, married sure and fast. Somehow, they seemed to take a little of the springtime with them, perhaps into the life of the Countess.

LOT OF THE UMPIRE NOT EASY THIS YEAR

PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN LEAGUE AND TWO UMPIRES.

"The heat wave and the hot race have combined to make things lively in the American league—the lot of an arbitrator in that circuit isn't a soft one this year. We fail to notice any flowery beds of ease."—Bill Deneen, veteran umpire.

The pitching in the American league is good in spots, this veteran says, and the hurlers are beginning to warm to their tasks. He has been through the mill and knows whereof he speaks. Deneen helped win a world's flag for Boston in 1903.

In a fanning breeze Deneen and Connolly admitted they expected lots of trouble from scrappy ball players, but both were glad they had a man with an iron will back of their decisions.

"Say, I'd rather be in Mexico than be out here umpiring a game of baseball in the American league this year," said a fan.

"There are worse posts than that of an arbitrator," replied Connolly. "One doesn't have to look far to see them, either."

"Yes, and there are the fellows in the trenches in Europe—guess they'd be willing to take a chance behind the plate," chimed in Deneen.

Then the subject turned to the question of brass bands playing in baseball parks of the American league.

"I want you umpires to stop bands from tooting while the teams are playing," said President Johnson. "Let them blow away all they want to between innings, but the lid is on music after the game is resumed. Fans come out to see high-class baseball and don't want to be disturbed by a medley of discords. They can go to the amusement parks and hear good music for a dime."

There is one form of music President Johnson and the umpires of his circuit will not attempt to stop, and that is whistling on the part of ball players. Ray Schalk is probably the ablest warbler in the Major leagues and whistles constantly in the heat of a spirited battle.

It is one of Schalk's methods of gingering up and encouraging the pitcher with whom he is working.

HEAVIEST SLUGGERS ON TAIL-END TEAMS

"A player on a tail-end team ought to hit from 10 to 30 points higher than he would if he were on a pennant battling crew," ventured a fan the other day.

"Howzat?"

"Well, pitchers rarely work their heads off against cellar chumps. Class tells in baseball. Usually before the fifth or sixth inning comes along, the good team is so far ahead that the game is practically sewed up. Therefore, the pitcher on the top-heavy team saves his arm. He doesn't pitch his mightiest. He lobs them over, and of course, the batsmen get more hits."

"Now take the case of the Giants and Larry Doyle last season," continued the fan. "In 1915 the Giants blew themselves to be first champion batsmen they have had for many years. Also, the Giants finished in the cellar. After August 15 they never had a chance to win the bunting."

"And so, from that time on, the opposing pitchers didn't work so awfully hard against the Giants—and Larry Doyle's average grew so large that at the end of the year he led the pack."

"Napoleon Lajoie never played on a championship team. Yet his batting average, year after year, was wonderful. His grand hitting mark ranks among the highest ever turned in. Only twice during his long career had Lajoie been on a club that actually was in the fight for an extended period. Opposing clubs rarely found it hard to beat Lajoie's team and so the rival pitchers frequently took it easy when heaving to Napoleon."

"Joe Jackson averaged somewhere around .370 while he was with the Cleveland club. He was shipped to the White Sox, a team that was in the pennant hunt for a while in 1915 and Joe turned in an average of .308 last year."

"Practically every batsman in the game hits far better during the last month of the season than he does during the first four weeks. But that is easily explainable. During the opening month of the campaign most of the pitchers are on edge. They twirl their darndest. And only the star flingers work during that period."

"But toward the fag end of the season managers of clubs that are out of the race, begin experimenting for the next season. They work their youngsters, fresh from the bushes. Veteran batters find it easy to connect with their twisters and slants, and, as a result, the averages fatten."

"You've often noticed, too, that some of the minor league batting stars, getting a major tryout in the fall show up well with the bluegeon. It seems then that the majority will land. But in the springtime they cannot do any consistent hitting. Here's the answer:

"The minor league batters, getting a fall trial in the majors, rarely face major league pitching. They go up against the minor league hurlers, who are getting their trial. The 'bush' hitters, therefore, face the same caliber and, of course, find no trouble maintaining their minor league average."

WHY IS TABLECLOTH SACRED?

Its Natural Function is to Get Dirty, but Woe to the Man Who Gets a Spot on It.

"Why," demanded the Occasional Grumbler, in the tone of one who not only did not expect, but would not tolerate, an answer, "should a clean tablecloth be the most sacred thing about a fairly average family household? A clean tablecloth is not laces or penates, either or both. It's just a rag that has managed to get through the laundry in good shape. It can go through again in just as good shape—or just about as good; and, for that matter, if the worst came to the worst (as your wife generally expects it to) it could be replaced without disturbing the quotation on international exchange."

"But a woman never thinks about that. To her a clean tablecloth is a thing to be worshiped, not a thing to be eaten off of, and it never occurs to her that no magic can bless it with sempiternal cleanliness. It's got to get dirty sometime—why not now? Nothing to it! If you overflow the gravy from the meat platter, which—through no fault of yours—has been filled too full, or if you happen to decorate the immaculate splendor of the cloth with a nice red polka dot of cranberry juice, you're in bad for the rest of the day, and maybe longer."

"Of course, when such things happen, the tablecloth is only serving the purpose for which it is put there, but that's no excuse. 'You ought to be more careful!'—This comes across the table in no uncertain tones. But it isn't in the nature of news, because you've heard it plenty often before."

"I say it is the business of a clean tablecloth to get dirty and get washed, and get dirty and get washed, and get dirty and get washed. But what I say doesn't make any difference. I get in so bad every time a new tablecloth is sprung at our house that in my love for the comfort of dirty ones I am becoming slovenly in my habits. So what I say is this: Either you ought to be affluent enough to have a clean tablecloth every meal, or two or three times a meal, if necessary or desirable, or you ought to be humble enough to be content to eat off of an oilcloth-covered table that can be swabbed off, without damage or distress of temper."—Indianapolis News.

Deaf to Hear Church Services.

The Thing Desirable.

So depart your life that when contemplating the future you will be thinking of glory instead of the grave.

Penalty of Abusing Confidence. The individual who merits and receives supreme contempt of men is he who abuses confidence, because he is betraying one of the foundational bulwarks of social and business life. The law accounts every man accused of crime innocent until he is proved guilty. So the universe presupposes men's intentions to be honest until they are revealed as untrustworthy.

Florida is now the Official Playgrounds of America. Governor Catts says so and that makes it so.

The editor of The Herald is in the woods today where no telephone jingles, where no newspapers circulate and where even the gubernatorial race is forgotten.

Quite a lengthy article in the last issue of the Kissimmee Gazette upon the subject of a Cooperative Bull Association. You interest me strangely, Bill. Such an association should pay big dividends and much better than a gas factory.

THIS IS SO

How often the editor of a newspaper is asked to give "such and such a person a 'good rub'." The act of giving the desired "rub" might not be so bad, but if all of the requested "rubs" were given there would be a continuous succession of them. Too many persons seem to think that the most important duty of a newspaper is to "knock" some one or something. This is not true, or at least it should not be true.

MORE BUNCOMBE

Two Florida congressmen are in for a political licking next year. They are Mr. Sears of this district and Mr. Frank Clark of Gainesville. Mr. Clark has already had a vision and says he has no desire to go back to congress again after this term, and Mr. Sears, when he finds out how the people are regarding him may come to the same conclusion. In this, his district, he ran away behind his ticket. Green Cove Times.

AMEND LIBEL LAW

The press of this state is a unit in the declaration that there must be some radical changes in the laws regarding libel and further insists that those changes shall be made at the next term of the legislature. As matters now stand every paper in the state is the under dog—at the mercy of the rabble of those who would incite unpleasant conditions. All the newspapers ask is a fair show and protection for the news furnished—provided that such news appears to come from reliable authority. At the present time it is dangerous to publish even records from the court lest there shall occur a damage suit in the immediate future. Every member of the next legislature should see to it that the libel laws of Florida are altered to show an ordinary degree of fairness to the newspapers; and for such legislation the entire public will be deeply grateful.—Palm Beach Post.

LOOKING TO FLORIDA

The Washington Post, referring to the high cost of staples, addresses the importance of the south in general and Florida in particular as a food-producing region. It says: "The extremely high price of all food stuffs and the shortage in the crops of potatoes, wheat and other products call for the earliest possible returns from the lands of the far south whence the first productions of the next year will have their origin."

Florida is both an Atlantic and a Gulf state, and its wonderful climate, its rich lands and its capability of the earliest production of so many articles that are in daily use in the household of the nation will always give it a great advantage over other states of the Union, for these products enter the markets of the more northern states at a period of the year when the greatest scarcity exists and consequently highest prices are obtainable.

Land is cheap here, the growing season is the entire year; and the soil is highly productive; it has greater possibilities than the high priced land in some of the biggest prosperity regions of the United States.

For that reason, Florida is growing. "It is," as the Montgomery Advertiser says, "attracting energetic people from all corners of the country, and it is bound to become a wealthy state. Cities like Jacksonville, Tampa and Pensacola are cities with a future."

EAST COAST CANAL

Talk proverbially is cheap, but from accounts of the earnest discussions at the convention of the East Coast Canal Association this year it looks as if something may actually be accomplished toward securing satisfactory maintenance of the East Coast Canal.

The annual and semi annual announcement of the Metropolis that "indications are bright for the long looked for improvement of the East Coast Canal" has become so much of a joke, that we approach the subject again with real trepidation—however, it does look as if something is going to be done.

Federal ownership and control of the waterway is desirable, but Florida should see to it that the government is not required to pay any money for the canal. Let the state take the canal and such lands that the company still has in its possession, by some sort of condemnation proceedings, and then turn the water way over to the government for improvement and maintenance.

That would be the fair way. The Canal Company was given thousands of acres of valuable land with the understanding that the canal be put into navigable condition and so maintained. Instead of this the waterway has been more of a nuisance than anything else, and a most costly nuisance to boatmen who have been misled as to its navigable condition.

Attorney General West has asserted that he will bring the company to time. Numerous boards of trade and other associations have gone on record in favor of federal ownership and control of the waterway. The Canal Company itself is willing to "bet" the canal at an enormous price to the federal government. And in the meantime the newspapers are told every little while that "something is going to be done."

This year's convention of the canal association, however, sounds like business, and subsequent events will be watched for with hopeful interest.—Miami Metropolis.

ACCEPTING POLITICAL RESULTS

Pessimists sometimes argue that the American people are not capable of self government. As one thinks of the helpless way in which our people remain satisfied with pork fed politics, there is some little basis for discouragement. But when you compare our political habits with those of other peoples there are many ways in which the American shines. The way he takes political defeat is one of them.

In South American countries the beaten element gets out with guns and knives. In Europe they go to the opposite extreme. In many of these countries the Liberal party would secure an overwhelming ma-majority could the one man vote principle prevail. The people submissively accept the decree handed out to them by kings and lords as a child takes a whipping. They don't even care or dare to discuss it. Midway between these two extremes stands the American political custom. The vanquished are perfectly free to pour all the bitterness of their souls. But they rarely do it.

As Congressman Gardner once remarked in congress, "I never lick my sore paw in public." It was a historic remark, and one that represents very faithfully our political manners. As to guns and knives, like the other side of the Gulf of Mexico, the man who resorts to them is promptly locked up in a lunatic asylum. It is really a marvelous showing of public self control, and one that proves that security of Democratic institutions.

If anything, our citizens carry this habit of acceptance and good nature a little too far. With many it runs into a complete indifference. They have come to feel that politics are hopelessly corrupt, and that it is useless to expect anything different. A good healthy kick is a disagreeable creature to have around. But he does call attention to many abuses and is an indispensable element in any community.—Gainesville Sun.

BUILD A SUBWAY TO VERDUN FRONT

Tunnel, 45 Feet Underground, Leads to Within 300 Yards of Germans.

AMERICANS MAKE THE TRIP

New York Lawyer Narrowly Escapes Shots as He Views Trenches—Tunnel Cook Was Formerly Chef to an Ambassador.

Verdun.—Just west of here, in the forest of Argonne, there is a remarkable military tunnel, 45 feet underground, running right up to within 300 yards of the German trenches. It is one of the most hard-pressed points around Verdun, but through this tunnel re-enforcements move forward without danger, relieving every two hours the men on the firing line.

There was a very American atmosphere about this tunnel when the writer visited it, for the curious fact developed that the two officers in command were American residents, one a stock raiser in Alberta, Canada, and the other a bank official of the Franco-American bank at Los Angeles, Cal. Both were born in France, and when the war broke out left their American businesses to come home and fight. And now they are in full charge of this underground highway, leading up to one of the most desperate positions along the front. They are so American that they speak English instead of French, and the commandant's headquarters—a little nest in the clay—has a big picture of Uncle Sam hanging on the wall.

Creeping through this tunnel toward the front line, the members of the visiting party knocked their steel casques on the roof, and plunged through water ankle deep. Paul D. Cravath, the New York lawyer, a man of large build, 6 feet 8 inches tall, was bent double in the struggle through the tunnel. Along the way they passed an electric plant, throbbing with energy, and pumping the fresh air which keeps the tunnel habitable. Farther on, in a large clay hole, a kitchen was in full operation, with soldiers eating bowls of noodles.

Chef to an Ambassador. "Let me introduce you to our chef," said the commandant, as a young soldier cook came forward. "He is now the cook for this tunnel—and he ought to be a good cook, for before the war he was chef to the French ambassador at Rome."

Emerging from the tunnel into the front line, the German trenches were plainly visible on the crest only 300 yards away. The intervening space was swept clear as though by a cyclone. Instead of the beautiful green of the forest, that was left at the other end of the tunnel, here the whole outlook was gray and desolate; the ground jagged and torn as by eccentric plows, not a vestige of grass or verdure, and the few gaunt trunks of trees stripped of their last leaf and looking like so many scarecrows.

"This has been a rather quiet day—only two mine explosions," said the commandant, "two men injured, one in the shoulder, the other in the leg. That is little, for often we have forty to sixty men killed or injured in these mine explosions, which go on continually as the Germans try to mine under our trenches and we try to mine under theirs."

Even beyond the front line French trenches the French soldiers had pushed their observation posts into the fire-swept dividing line, 300 yards wide. Some of these daring men could be seen almost up to the crest, where the German line ran. They were crouched behind heaps of bowlders, rifle ready. "Those men are only ten yards from the Germans," said the commandant. As he spoke, Mr. Cravath, of New York, said: "I see a German; there he is on the crest; you can see his uniform with the round cap." "And he sees you too," said the commandant. "You have been under fire," he added as he led Mr. Cravath and the others to a more secure position. Americans Are Lucky. "It's good that German didn't fire," remarked Cravath. "It might have been an international incident. Think of it—killing an American visitor to the French trenches." Coming back from the front-line trenches one had a view of the many senseless activities in carrying on this great battle. At one point soldiers in shirt sleeves were digging graves in an improvised cemetery along the forest path. The cemetery was very large and had been given a name, "Misson Forresterie," or Forest Home. Every grave had a wooden cross above it with the name and regiment of the dead soldier.

The shells kept whizzing and bursting as the party moved along, and it got to be a pleasant pastime to note the long s-z-z-z as the shells flew overhead. One of them struck a few hundred feet away, throwing up trees, earth and clouds of smoke.

To those who wanted souvenirs there were big fragments of shrapnel lying at every turn. It was pleasant at first to pick them up, but after three or four of these heavy chunks of steel were carried half a mile the task was abandoned. The ingenuity of some of the trench quarters along the way is shown in the use of empty glass bottles for windows. One officer pointed with pride to the very artistic effect he had secured with these empty wine bottles. A triple row extended all across the front of his log shack, giving light within and having rather a cathedral window effect without. The bottles are of white glass, used for bottling the white wine of Bordeaux.

Lived Outside City. The headquarters of General Nivelle, in command of the operations at Verdun, are quite a way outside the city, at a little crossroad hamlet, which cannot be named for military reasons. The general's offices are in the town courthouse, a two-story stone structure. It was in this same building that General Petain, who preceded Nivelle, and General de Castelnau quickly made the plans at the first onrush of the Germans, which held them until re-enforcements could be brought up.

General Nivelle goes to Verdun and along the trench front frequently. But most of his time is at headquarters, in telegraph and telephone communication with the whole circle of defenses, and in touch, too, with the other army corps and masses of supplies ready to be moved forward to fill any gap the Germans may make.

As we were at General Nivelle's headquarters a party of German prisoners came by. They marched two and two, their gray uniforms and round caps contrasting with the French blue and conque. Already they were being set to work, and instead of a gun each German carried a spade over his shoulder. At Verdun there is no civilian life whatever, but around General Nivelle's headquarters there were peasant women and girls mingling with the poilus, indicating civilian life still existed thus near to the bombarded town.

The roads back of Verdun present the most varied scenes of activity. On one side is a vast aeroplane camp, with some twenty enormous hangars of basket steel construction covered with canvas. Across the road is a riding course running for miles, where officers can exercise their mounts and cavalry can push forward in emergency without blocking the highroad. Every now and then one sees a big vehicle shoot by bearing the sign "American Ambulance Corps."

Mules in Good Shape. The thousands of horses and mules along the road are in good condition. Many of the horses came from America and were run down by sea voyage, but after a month's feeding they proved very serviceable. On seeing the mules one of the officers said: "The demobilization of the Greek army had one very important result for the allies—it released 10,000 mules which the Greeks had been using, and now these mules are proving invaluable to the allies."

While the fields back of Verdun are rich with yellow grain, yet there is one melancholy evidence of the war in the burning of manure, usually by the very life blood of the soil. The grain can be gathered by the soldiers and the women who remain, but there is no time to distribute the manure over the land, and so it is burned. The last glimpse of Verdun came as the party passed a detachment of French soldiers just out of the trenches and going to the rear for rest. They were tired and heavily laden, but happy and cheerful as they swung along in irregular ranks, laughing and smoking as though they came from some agreeable occupation. They were all the looking young fellows, and they typified that calm and invincible spirit which the young French soldiers are putting into their service.

ITALIAN FINDS LOCKJAW CURE

Professor Ingianni Invents Portable Bath for Hot Immersions. GIVES SATISFACTORY RESULTS

After Few Days Treatment the Wound Begins to Heal, Suppuration Disappears, Swelling Subsides and Fever Ceases.

Headquarters of the Italian Army in the Field.—Surgeon Major Professor Ingianni of the Italian medical corps, in charge of a field hospital, has applied on a large scale a special treatment for lockjaw which is giving most satisfactory results. The antitoxin treatment of lockjaw is extensively used in the Italian army as a preventive and, thanks to it, the cases of tetanus have been greatly diminished. Unfortunately, however, the disease has not been stamped out and nothing so far had been discovered to check its almost certainly fatal course.

Naturally in field hospitals local conditions are such that it is impossible to resort to prolonged antiseptic bathing of the wounded or infected part, and the most effective remedy consisted in amputation. But even early amputation often proved of no avail when the germs in the wound already had set free a lethal dose of their toxin. Besides, even when amputation saved a man's life it left him a cripple. Doctors Amputate Toe Freely. Often for fear of infection surgeons in the field resort freely to amputation knowing full well that it would be impossible for them to keep the wound clean until it is completely healed. Professor Ingianni instead is convinced that amputation should only be resorted to in extreme cases, as a doctor's first duty is to cure, not to cripple a man. Prolonged warm bath of the wound is an almost infallible remedy against lockjaw, and nothing prevents its being administered even in the field under ordinary conditions. The professor has invented a special portable bath which can be folded, as it is made of rubber and shaped in such a way that any limb can be immersed in it. The bath is then tied to the patient by means of bandages and placed in any position, either horizontal or vertical.

Antiseptic Solution is Used. A warm antiseptic solution can be easily kept in it at the same temperature for five or six hours. As a rule a 3 per cent solution of hypochlorite is used or else corrosive sublimate in the proportion of one-half per 1,000. But permanganate of potassium, iodine or lead water also can be used to advantage. It has been found better to alternate the employment of these antiseptics.

The results of this treatment are wonderful. After a few days the wound begins to heal, suppuration disappears, swelling subsides and fever ceases. Recovery follows as a matter of course even in cases where amputation was considered the only remedy. The danger of lockjaw is entirely obliterated.

WISE DOG DODGES A TRAIN

Hound in Chase Across Bridge Hanged From Trestle While Quarry Is Killed.

Princeton, W. Va.—Several persons witnessed a remarkable display of canine intelligence here when a faithful hound belonging to James McPherson saved himself from death under a train on the railroad bridge at Black Lick, four miles west of here. The bridge is 207 feet high.

The dog was pursuing a fox across the bridge when the train came rapidly upon the chase. Witnesses thought the dog had been killed and the owner walked out on the bridge to see what had become of his pet. To his surprise he found the dog near the center of the bridge hanging by his feet between the ties and unharmed. The fox was killed.

SHOULD HELP HER HUSBAND

Court Decides Crime Is No Cause for Divorce—Defines Habitual Drunkard.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa supreme court, in session here, has handed down several noteworthy decisions. In one ruling, the court held that confession of a crime on the part of a husband does not constitute grounds for divorce proceedings.

"It ill becomes a wife," said the court, "to prefer criminal charges against her husband. She took him for better or for worse, and she should try to redeem him." In the same decision the court defined a habitual drunkard as "one who becomes even moderately intoxicated whenever the opportunity is presented."

Peculiar Action of Light.

A curious difference in the light projected from the London anti-aircraft searchlights seems to be due to varying atmospheric conditions. Sometimes the beam shows uniform illumination throughout its entire length, then the beam is mostly faint with bright knots or patches at irregular intervals, and at other times only a bright patch in the clouds is seen. Suicide Mystery Felix Ryan, a negro, brought to The Herald office yesterday a communication bearing date of Nov. 21, 1915, which he states was found by him in a corked bottle in the river near Monroe bridge. It is written on the back of a furniture receipt of the Sanford Furniture Co. and is as follows:

"This is to certify that G. W. Saunders was down in Woodruff creek this date on account of wife leaving me. Please notify Miss Bessie Campbell, step-daughter at Beaufort, S. C., of his death. No good to look for my body as it has gone down with a weight."

Enquiry discloses the fact that G. W. Saunders was a white man of middle age and was a short time previous to the date of the above living in the eastern part of the city and for several months was an employe of J. E. Pace.

It is possible that this is a case of suicide but it is generally supposed that he wrote the note and set it afloat in a bottle and then left the city to escape creditors, forgetting entirely to carry out the suicidal obligation contained in the note.

IS SALVATION OF FOOTBALL

It Seems Certain That There is Going to Be Further Developments in Passing Game.

The veterans may complain all they please and criticize "new" football; but their criticism will not stop the evolution of the college sport.

The evolution is natural, and it seems a certainty that there is going to be even further development of the passing game. This prediction is not based on statements of rule-makers and coaches. It comes from observation.

A few days ago a New York city football writer paused to watch a swarm of youngsters playing on the "sand lots." To his astonishment they were throwing a football, rapidly and accurately, 20, 30 and sometimes even 50 feet, and were both hurling and catching it skillfully while on the run. He asked them about it.

They were unanimous in admitting that they liked that sort of game better and that they had little use for plunging tactics. By the time these boys make high school teams they will be adepts at throwing and catching the ball.

It simply means that the rising generation has decreed that the passing game has come to stay, for a little investigation proved that school boys are being universally attracted by the open game. And the rising generation is the real sport boss, after all.

That's nothing. Man got on train drunk in Jacksonville the other day and when conductor woke him up between Sanford and Orlando and wanted to know where he was going, drunk said, "I want to go to Hell." Conductor said, "All right, Orlando next stop."

The following from the Miami Metropolis is worthy of consideration by parents of all communities, for while it recites a particular instance, there doubtless are thousands of cases parallel it, although they never reach public explanation:

"The Metropolis is informed that a little Miami boy has been seriously injured, perhaps permanently injured, by a number of boy companions who 'bumped him' against a tree, 'bumping' being a pastime of Miami boys who come from homes where no one has bothered to explain to them the danger of the brutal practice.

"It is said that the little boy referred to was swung with great violence against a tree and that the end of his spine is probably so crushed that for the rest of his life he is to suffer from the so-called 'prank,' although why 'prank' instead of 'crime' it is difficult for intelligent people to understand.

"The report comes also that public school boys this year are using the corner of the concrete building to 'bump' their victims against, so it may be assumed that almost any day a boy may be expected to be carried home maimed for life by the 'bovish 'prank' of his school mates.

"And the worst of it is, the average father in Miami has probably never considered that the 'prank' is in the least dangerous. Didn't he get used to being bumped when he was a youngster and hasn't he an uninjured spine and uninjured organs?

"But here is one Miami boy seriously hurt, and it must appear to any thinking person that the practice of swinging a boy with violence against a tree or a concrete building does show a barbarism that is curiously out of keeping with the alleged civilization of this day and time.

"But the main question is, who is going to put a stop to it? The school authorities or the parents or the police—and when?"

After the late election I was ruminating upon the frailties of mankind in general and wondering

why the boys use up so much energy in the campaign left that they have none left to build up Sanford.—In the few weeks before the last election I noted men in Sanford emerge from their cyclone cellars and really make themselves conspicuous on the streets talking about their favorite candidates. I never see these men at the Board of Trade meetings for the benefit of this town and now that election is over you will not see them again for some time. My old friend, Uncle Joe Dixon of the Quincy Times voices my sentiments in the following:

"It is refreshing to turn from the hot welter of politics and the claims of rival candidates and get back to the normal conditions of life. There is an enormous amount of wasted energy in these political rows, and men who are indolent at all other times and do little or nothing for the development of their town and county become noisy little gasoline engines of street corner oratory and dispute at such times in whooping-it-up for their favorites. The same force applied along useful productive lines would make them rich in a few years; and if all of it that has gone up in hot air in Gadsden county in the past six months could be utilized like steam to drive the engine of development and that pressure could be maintained, we would have a population seething with splendid energy and a county of the very first rank in progress."

"The world is topsy turvey in many respects and none of them are quite so topsy turvey as the question of what a school teacher is worth. The teacher and the preacher and the newspaper man are in the same class and none of them will ever get any real money and in fact none of them really want more than enough to keep the wolf from the door. If they did want more they would have to get into some other business and then there are some of them who do not really belong in their class. The Gainesville Sun has something pertinent on this point as follows:

"Some queer things in this world, aren't there? A bright face, college bred girl from a cultured home gets on an average about $10 per week for 40 weeks, in the high and holy occupation of a teacher. To earn more money than that she needs either exceptional gifts or some specialist training.

Meanwhile a raw boned Polisher from Warsaw, with a name, that is a hedge fence of consonants, spends her first six months in America tending a hotel mangle or waiting on table at a railroad boarding house. Then she can get $5 per week, plus board worth at least $5 per week, for 52 weeks. She has earned $520, to the college girl's $400.

To many refined women, anxious to make a living in a way consistent with good social position, all this seems both contrary to good sense and tending to discourage educational preparation.

Yet it is essentially a question of supply and demand. The teaching profession is overcrowded. There is always a scarcity of women with the teaching gift.

The genuine teacher is almost an intuitive hypnotist. By some subtle sixth sense she reads the secret keys and paths that lead to the heart to the child. She does not command very much, she almost never punishes. Somehow or other she knows what wins the child's mind. She translates the dull grind of the text book into things that seem vital to the child.

But there is always a surplus of girls to whom teaching is merely hearing children say their lessons and observing if the recitation corresponds with what the text book says. Such ones would better make pies and bread in some honest man's home, or rattle the keys of a typewriter in an office. The multiplicity and superfluity of this misplaced type is what puts the average teacher's pay below the living wage."

WILL MEET AT LAKE LAND

State Sunday School Convention to be Biggest Ever Held in Florida

The fifteenth annual state Sunday school convention will meet in Lakeland Nov. 23rd to 26th. The sessions will be held in the First Baptist church, the first meeting being on Thursday morning, the 23rd, and the closing session coming Sunday night when a monster mass meeting will be held.

Never in the history of Sunday school work in this state has so much interest been displayed in an event of this nature. Lakeland is making large preparations. Every church has joined heartily in the work. Committees composed of the most prominent citizens have been appointed to look after the entertainment, the reception, music, decorations, etc. The Chamber of Commerce likewise has taken an active part. More than 2,000 preliminary programs have been mailed by this organization, each program being accompanied by a personal letter inviting everybody to their beautiful city. At the same time the Florida Sunday School Association has been busy arranging the various details of the gathering and the advertising.

Some of the most prominent speakers both from away and from within the state have been secured. Mr. John L. Alexander, of Chicago, who is the International Sunday School Association's Teen Age specialist will be the principal speaker. Much stress will be laid upon this phase of Sunday school work, and Mr. Alexander will bring wonderful messages to the convention. P. E. Green of Birmingham, another specialist will also be present. Among the prominent men of Florida will be Bishop H. C. Morrison of Leesburg; Rev. R. H. Alderman, president of Southern College; Prof. D. J. Blocker of Stetson University; Prof. C. M. Brittain of Columbia College; Rev. C. W. Duke of Tampa; Rev. E. W. White of Bradenton; J. C. Lanier of Jacksonville; Marcus C. Fogg, Supt. of Florida Children's Home; O. E. Maple, state secretary Y. M. C. A.; Rev. J. L. Moon of Sutherland; Rev. T. H. McConnell of Orlando; Rev. A. H. Cole of Dade City; Rev. G. V. Albertson of DeLand and many others. Mr. A. E. Turner of Tampa is state president of the Florida Sunday School Association, under whose auspices the convention is held, and will preside at the meetings.

Practically all the denominations are sending exhibits of literature and novelties to the convention, so that all delegates may become acquainted with the practical side of Sunday school work.

Conferences, luncheons and gatherings whose special features of work will be considered are being arranged. These gatherings will concentrate upon some one phase and those people interested in these departments will find especial information from them.

Low rates are announced on all railroads. Every Sunday school in the state is entitled to delegates, one for every fifty enrollment in addition to pastor and superintendent. All official delegates will be entertained on the Harvard plan.

The Lakeland Chamber of Commerce plans fine outings for the delegates which will act as pleasing deviations to the regular routine of convention work.

People Hard to Please. It is impossible to please everybody in the same way. Some people grumble even at the finest weather if it does not serve their every purpose.

In 1-2 way. A school inspector in a rural district of Iowa asked the pupils a word which he pronounced "Eggwiped." When they failed, he roundly berated them for their ignorance, and then spelled the word himself—"E-g-y-p-t, Eggwiped."—Christian Register.

Cold Storage for Home Meat Supply Costs $75.00

Everybody knows how hard it is to cure meats in the south. A. P. Spencer, district agent for the University of Florida Extension Division, calls attention to specifications for a cold storage house that will eliminate the weather requirements for curing meat. The specifications are sent out by the States Relations Service, Washington. The house costs only $75. The feed required to hold fat hogs over several weeks while you wait for cool weather would cost as much as the house. The plan mentioned is one that has been used successfully by J. E. McIntosh, Lauraville, Fla., for 15 years: "Size of cold storage, 8 by 10 feet, corner studding, 4 by 4-inches by 8 feet; intermediate studding, 2 by 4 inches by 8 feet.

"Joists nailed on side of studding (at top) so that when ceilings and weather board are nailed on, will leave a continuous air space all around. Ceiling one inch thick is nailed on horizontally, then on this a layer of insulating paper, and on this another like ceiling perpendicularly. On other or outer side of studding a like wall is put on. A beveled door is used, made with like walls and edges lined with felt of convenient size. Two layers of floor with felt between, the floor slanting backward and to center, with gutter to drain room to back end into a U pipe through the wall.

"The walls on both sides, end and overhead, inside and out, are the same: two wooden walls with paper between. Leave the air space between the walls open. Dead air space is a better insulation than sawdust, shavings or other material. See that the doors fit closely.

"A rack is placed as near the top as possible to admit 200 pound blocks of ice. The house requires about 800 pounds of ice a week. It will hold about 5,000 pounds of meat, placed in the racks on the side. The cost of operating equals the cost of ice and the wages of one man.

"The meat should be cut (without unjointing hams and shoulders) as soon as possible after killing; salted thoroughly and bulked together; skin side down in piles. Spread at night, salt again next morning and place in cold storage. Put out over 200 or 300 pounds in each rack to itself. Cross the pieces, leaving ventilation spaces.

"Temperature should be kept 40 to 48 degrees. All meats weighing less than 15 pounds to the piece will cure in 30 days. Pieces weighing from 15 to 25 pounds will take 45 days, and 40 pounds will take 60 days.

"If temperature is above 50 degrees the ice should be put in storage 4 or 5 days before the meat is put in, to bring it down to 45 degrees. If temperature is 40 degrees or less, the ice and meat can be put in together. The temperature of the meat when put in governs to a great extent the amount of ice required. One important feature is to have a ventilated door to give the meat fresh air when the outside temperature is 40 degrees or lower."

Short Course for Club boys at University Dec. 4-9

The grown up farmers have their citrus seminar, livestock meat and farmers' short courses. Future farmers will have their own meeting this year at the University of Florida. The Extension Division has planned a short course for club boys. This meeting will be held during the week of December 4. Expenses of most of the boys will be paid by scholarships won in club contests. The scholarships will include transportation to and from Gainesville and board and lodging during the course.

Each boy will exhibit a ten ear sample of corn. It is expected that some pigs will be shown also. A series of lectures and demonstrations has been planned so that the boys may receive instruction that will aid them further in club work and future farm operations. Mornings probably will be spent in class work and the afternoons in laboratory exercises and demonstrations. Some field trips will be made in the vicinity of Gainesville.

Do You Know How to Feed Farm Animals?

The average way of feeding farm animals is wasteful. Most persons dump a quantity of feed into the trough and consider that they have done their duty. It does not occur to them that the need of the animals should be considered.

Farm animals need a balanced ration according to the work they are doing. Proper feeding is one of the most important phases of good farming, but few farmers are able to feed intelligently. Most of them feed by the rule of thumb method handed down from countless generations. That method was all right before feeding standards were available.

The University of Florida College of Agriculture, Gainesville, is offering a correspondence course in types and breeds of livestock and feeds and feeding for the various animals. It includes discussion of feeds and balanced rations for these animals. Tables for computing rations from different feeds are included.

The course also takes up care and management of beef and dairy animals, sheep, hogs, horses and poultry. Some discussion is given to the breeds of animals and the adaptations of each breed for different purposes.

As to Beggars in Florida

Every winter Florida is visited by the lame, the halt and the blind from other parts of the country. They come to Florida because the winter here is not so severe as in other sections. The success of the professional beggar depends upon his opportunity to get into the open where there are plenty of people. To a large extent the cold weather of high latitudes forbids this; but in Florida the chances are better. It is for this cause that professional beggars flock to Florida as soon as the winter begins.

The average man is sorry for this class of people and seldom refuses their appeals, although he may feel sure in his own mind that his charity is not being worthily bestowed. He does not wish to take the chances of turning down an appeal to help real distress. Usually the beggar is a cripple, or blind, and these in themselves are sufficiently appealing, regardless of the conditions back of them, and they cause men to open up the purse strings.

The pity is that owing to the conditions as they are at present, each community in the state does not devise some means of investigating these cases, and then, after separating the wheat, drive the chaff from the state.

In this way we might be relieved from running into horrible sights of deformity on the prominent corners or at the postoffice, for the worthy ones of these people could be taken off the streets and provided for through public charity, and at a less cost to the several communities in the state.—Clearwater Sun.

Notice

Notice is hereby given that Michael Sholtz on behalf of myself, associates, legal representatives, and assigns will apply to the county commissioners of Seminole county, state of Florida, at their regular meeting in December next, to wit: On Monday, December 4th, A. D. 1916, for leave to establish a toll bridge across the St. Johns river at what is known as Osteen Ferry, to take the place and stead of said ferry, and said bridge to be built at that point on said river where the ferry now is and on the Sanford and Osteen road, the St. Johns river at that point being approximately nine hundred feet (900) wide, and the depth of the water being approximately from 10 to 15 feet (15) feet deep.

Charming Tea
 Mrs. Emory Bittle Brown re-entertained about fifty friends yesterday afternoon from 3:30 to 5 o'clock at her attractive home, No. 701 Azeele street, to meet Mrs. David Leon Thrasher who recently came here from Sanford to make this her home and Miss Olga Schultz who is the charming guest of Mrs. Brown for some time.

This was a delightfully informal tea. Mrs. J. D. Sayers greeted the guests at the door and hostess and guests of honor received in the living room. Assisting in serving, the tea and accessories were Misses Edith and Anne Weisberg, Miss May Thrasher and Miss Dorothy Turner. Music was beautifully rendered by Mrs. C. B. Murphy, violin; Mrs. Raines, accompanist, and Miss Edith Weisberg and Miss Mollie Brown, piano soloists. Mrs. Murphy is a charming new resident and an acquisition in musical circles.

The living room and dining room were daintily decorated with pink and white, palms and ferns, and the spacious porches were very inviting with the arrangement of plants.—Tampa Tribune.

Evening Bridge
 A new bridge club was organized on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Smith, which will include gentlemen as well as the ladies, that was a particularly pleasant affair. It is probable that the club will meet once a week at the home of one of its members. This is a new departure in card clubs or rather a revival of a former custom which obtained several years back when the membership included both sexes.

On Thursday evening the prizes were won by Mrs. Forrest Lake and Mr. W. E. Watson. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Herndon, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Symes, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Thigpen, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Watson, Mrs. Forrest Lake and Mr. Arthur Yowell who substituted for Mr. Forrest Lake whose absence from the city prevented his attendance. Other couples will be added to complete five tables.

Bridge in Honor of Mrs. Syphan
 Miss Anne Hawkins entertained with a very charming bridge party on Friday afternoon in honor of her guest, Mrs. T. J. Syphan of Commerce, Ga.

Beautiful yellow chrysanthemums sent by Miss Hawkins' mother from their summer home at Commerce, Georgia, with ferns emphasized the charm of simplicity which prevailed in the pretty adornment of the lower floor, which was open throughout. There were five tables of players enjoying the interesting game and a number of tea guests in addition to those playing. Mrs. Margaret Barnes made high score, to whom was given a lovely cut glass bud vase. The guest prize was also a bud vase, while to Mrs. Roy Symes was presented a dainty Madeline hand-embroidered handkerchief for her cut. An elaborate salad course was served at the refreshment hour.

Enjoying the hospitality of their hostess were Mrs. W. A. Fitts, Mrs. E. E. Barrett, Mrs. W. L. Morgan, Mrs. R. A. Newman, Mrs. William C. Hill, Mrs. W. P. Carter, Mrs. Ernest Galloway, Mrs. J. C. Bennett, Mrs. A. P. Connelly, Mrs. Roy Symes, Mrs. Margaret Barnes, Mrs. B. A. Howard, Mrs. C. M. Vorce, Mrs. Morse, Mrs. R. E. Tolar, Mrs. Claude Howard, Mrs. Thomas A. Neal, Mrs. Cecil Butt, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holly and Mr. Tom Hawkins came in later in the afternoon for refreshments. Mrs. A. W. Fitts, Jr., assisted Miss Hawkins in looking after the pleasure of her guests.

Matinee Party
 In celebration of his eighth birthday, Master Earl Dossey entertained with a matinee party on Saturday afternoon at the Lyric, which was much enjoyed by his young neighborhood friends. After the matinee the party repaired to the home of Earl's parents for refreshments and games. The happy little host was made happy by a number of gifts. Enjoying all the pleasures of the afternoon were Margaret and Jack Peters, Margaret Miller, Leona Shaefer, Deane Turner, Jr., Dick Terhune, Jr., Briggs Arrington and their host, Earl Dossey. Mrs. Stella Arrington and Miss Ethel Moughton assisted Mrs. Dossey.

Boating Party
 Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Dutton took a congenial party enjoyed an afternoon boating trip up the St. Johns

Sunday on their motor boat, the Jolly E'R. Others in the party were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walsman, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith and little son Wilson and Mr. Chas. Fedder.

Announcements
 The Literature Department of the Woman's Club will meet on Wednesday at the home of the chairman, Mrs. L. R. Phillips instead of at the club house. The change is made because of the fact that the radiotelevision exhibition of views of Inca remains can be given more conveniently at the home.

In the absence of Mrs. Geo. Fox, Mrs. Deane Turner, first vice president of the Woman's Club will receive membership dues. Members who have overlooked the time limit, which expired Nov. 3 are urged to send in their dues at once. Funds are needed for club expenses.

There will be a meeting of the Ladies of the Maccabees at the Eagles Hall on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A full attendance of the members is urged to meet Mrs. Elizabeth Beattie, state organizer.

Pipe Organ Society
 A very delightful meeting of the Pipe Organ Society was held on Monday afternoon with Miss Annie Hawkins hostess at her home on Celery avenue. A number of beautiful articles of fancy work were added to the goodly pile already finished to be placed on sale, Dec. 2nd. The pleasant afternoon concluded with several music selections given by Mrs. James Taylor and Mrs. Schelle. Others present were Mrs. T. J. Syphan, the house guest of Miss Hawkins, Mrs. Robt. Rowe, Mrs. D. R. Brisson, Mrs. A. M. Phillips, Mrs. Ernest Betts, Mrs. W. C. Bray, Mrs. D. G. Monroe, Mrs. R. A. Terhune, Misses Martha Fox, Edith Stewart, Jeanette Laing and Bess Tribble. Mrs. W. C. Bray will be the next hostess.

St. Agnes Guild
 The members of the St. Agnes Guild were the guests of Mrs. Albert Fry yesterday afternoon when plans were completed for the bazaar and cooked food sale to be given Saturday, Dec. 16. Those present were Mrs. Julius Takach, Mrs. Archie Betts, Mrs. M. Minarik and Misses Gretchen Schultz and Charlotte Hand. The Guild will meet with Mrs. Minarik next Monday. Continued on Page Five

FAKIRS ARE COMING

Will Soon be in Florida for Easy Money

About a year ago the Kissimmee Gazette printed the following editorial, which is very timely now. The Herald commends it to the attention of Sanford business men, who have been "stung" by these fellows a number of times, and who ought to know better by this time. The editorial reads:

"The 'snow bird' fakes will soon be here. The cold wintry blasts will ere long send him to the sunny climate of Florida, here to seek the unwary upon whom to ply his wits in varied and intricate schemes. He has but one goal and that to separate the Floridians and those of our visitors who succumb to his wiles from their hard earned cash. The fakir comes in various roles and clad in varying degrees of seeming honesty. He is no respecter of persons. He would just as soon have your dollar as that of your neighbor. In the words of James Whitecomb Riley, he'll get you if you don't watch out.

Probably no business is so affected by these fly-by-night individuals as that of the country newspapers.

Advertising has become such a much used and much abused medium that the fakirs have been quick to take advantage of its growth to ply their trade. They realize that the average merchant has not studied advertising closely and that he views it as a sort of modern miracle which produces gold from paper and ink. The average business man looks upon it with a mysterious awe which furnishes the atmosphere the advertising fakir most desires.

He pounces down upon the business man with this scheme or that, most of them with little or no merit and with his breezy "I know it all" air he creates the impression that advertising is a mysterious, miraculous something, over which he has the control of a spiritualistic medium. He adds to the average man's fearsome attitude and while the poor business man is thus hypnotized secures his signature to a contract for advertising in something of other (probably the business man couldn't tell you a half hour after just what it was himself). Usually the advertiser fulfills his contract so far as printing what ever he contracted to print, but there is little effort on his part to see that his patrons get value received.

And all the while the local newspaper is boosting the town in which the merchant does business with its usual philanthropic spirit and even if the merchant is a non advertiser in its columns he reaps the benefit indirectly.

We believe, and conscientiously so, that the best advertising any merchant can buy is that printed in the columns of his home newspaper, which is read every day or week, as the case may be, by the people who live in the territory which the merchant serves. But regardless of this the home paper deserves the support of the business men in its territory because of the fact that it is here, year in and year out, fighting their battles and seeking to aid in the prosperity of the community in which both live.

Florida's Opportunity
 The cost of living has gone ballooning during the past few months, and indications are for still higher prices on staple food stuffs.

When the existing market quotations bring good profits to the farmers, the wage earners in the towns and cities are hit hard by the increased expense, and there is considerable agitation for an embargo against exporting any grain or meat out of the United States until prices return to former levels.

It is doubtful if an embargo is practical, or justifiable to the farmers. They have worked hard and their crops have not always proven so remunerative as at present.

One reason why the raising of Florida has been more or less hazardous is the cattle ticks which eat most of the profits out of the cattle industry, and thereby discourage diversified farming.

If, today, Florida were agriculturally developed sufficiently to have a surplus of several hundred millions of bushels of corn, oats and other grains which can be profitably grown in this state, there would be a good market for same. And if Florida cattle owners could market one million head of yearling and two year old tick free cattle averaging 1,000 pounds live weight, the resources of this state would be wonderful, yet that is a very conservative estimate of the possibilities after the ticks are eradicated and the idle lands developed as they will be when favorable farming conditions are provided.

The only reason why farmers are paying $100 per acre for land in Illinois on which to grow feed and maintain high priced dairy cows to produce milk for Florida consumption, is that the ticks are too heavy a risk here, where land is cheap and forage crops can be grown at small expense practically every month in the year.

Opportunity is knocking with a sledge hammer at Florida's door. High prices have made farming a profitable business, and thousands of young men are turning their faces towards the farms, where they find the best working conditions.

Are the land owners and business interests of Florida going to provide favorable conditions by eradicating the cattle ticks, and thus encourage farmers to utilize large areas of our present idle lands to produce large quantities of agricultural crops, meats and dairy products?

Dr. E. M. Nighbert, inspector in charge, Bureau of Animal Industry, says: "The cattle tick deprives the farmer of cash returns from his pasture and feed and makes him cuss the climate and his government for not coming to his aid under a one-crop system."

Damaged Flock
 Bobbie had never seen a live sheep, out one of his most treasured toys was a little woolly lamb on wheels, which he drew all about the house and yard. Last summer he went to visit his uncle, who owns a sheep ranch in the West. When Bobbie spied a flock, he exclaimed: "You must have got them cheap, uncle, 'cause they're all lost their wheels."—New York Times.

Quite Enough
 Window dressing as an art sometimes enlists the aid of humorists, says the New York Evening Post. One such found it incumbent upon him to make the window of a cigar shop in Liberty street conspicuous the other day. He took a capacious cigar box, filled it with nondescript cheroots of the genus stogie, placed it in the window, and added this sign: "1 Cent. Enough Said."

Poor Daddy!
 When a mother begins to tell her children how smart their father is they look at her as reproachfully as if they thought she was losing her mind.

Optimistic Thought.
 Life is too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrongs.

Jack Arnold sez he went to Sanford recently. When he got ready to come home he waltzes up to the ticket agent and sez: "Give me a ticket to the best town in the world." The agent never hesitated but give him a ticket to Orlando. Even Sanford admits it.—Orlando Sentinel.

That's nothing. Man got on train drunk in Jacksonville the other day and when conductor woke him up between Sanford and Orlando and wanted to know where he was going, drunk said, "I want to go to Hell." Conductor said, "All right, Orlando next stop."

The following, from the Miami Metropolis is worthy of consideration by parents of all communities, for while it recites a particular instance, there doubtless are thousands of cases parallel it, although they never reach public explanation:

"The Metropolis is informed that a little Miami boy has been seriously injured, perhaps permanently injured, by a number of boy companions who 'bumped' him against a tree—'bumping' being a pastime of Miami boys who come from homes where no one has bothered to explain to them the danger of the brutal practice.

It is said that the little boy referred to was swung with great violence against a tree and that the end of his spine is probably so crushed that for the rest of his life he is to suffer from the so called 'prank,' although why 'prank' instead of 'crime' it is difficult for intelligent people to understand.

The report comes also that public school boys this year are using the corner of the concrete building to bump their victims against, so it may be assumed that almost any day a boy may be expected to be carried home maimed for life by the 'boyish 'prank' of his school mates.

"And the worst of it is, the average father in Miami has probably never considered that the 'prank' is in the least dangerous. Didn't he get used to being lumped when he was a youngster and hasn't he an uninjured spine and uninjured organs?"

"But here is one Miami boy seriously hurt, and it must appear to any thinking person that the practice of swinging a boy with violence against a tree or a concrete building does show a barbarism that is curiously out of keeping with the alleged civilization of this day and time.

"But the main question is, who is going to put a stop to it? The school authorities or the parents or the police—and when?"

After the late election I was ruminating upon the frailties of mankind in general and wondering

why the boys use up so much energy in the campaign left that they have none left to build up Sanford. In the few weeks before the last election I noted men in Sanford emerge from their cyclone cellars and really make themselves conspicuous on the streets talking about their favorite candidates. I never see these men at the Board of Trade meetings for the benefit of this town and now that election is over you will not see them again for some time. My old friend, Uncle Joe Dixon of the Quincy Times, voices my sentiments in the following:

"It is refreshing to turn from the hot welter of politics and the claims of rival candidates and get back to the normal conditions of life. There is an enormous amount of wasted energy in these political rows, and men who are indolent at all other times and do little or nothing for the development of their town and county become noisy little gasoline engines of street corner oratory and dispute at such times in whooping-it-up for their favorites. The same force applied along useful productive lines would make them rich in a few years; and if all of it that has gone up in hot air in Gadsden county in the past six months could be utilized like steam to drive the engine of development and that pressure could be maintained, we would have a population seething with splendid energy and a county of the very first rank in progress."

The world is topsy turvey in many respects and none of them are quite so topsy turvey as the question of what a school teacher is worth. The teacher and the preacher and the newspaper man are in the same class and none of them will ever get any real money and in fact none of them really want more than enough to keep the wolf from the door. If they did want more they would have to get into some other business and then there are some of them who do not really belong in their class. The Gainesville Sun has something pertinent on this point as follows:

"Some queer things in this world, aren't there? A bright face, college bred girl from a cultured home gets on an average about $10 per week for 40 weeks, in the high and holy occupation of a teacher. To earn more money than that she needs either exceptional gifts or some specialist training.

Meanwhile a raw boned Poland from Warsaw, with a name that is a hedge fence of consonants, spends her first six months in America tending a hotel mangle or waiting on table at a railroad boarding house. Then she can get $5 per week, plus board worth at least $6 per week for 52 weeks. She has earned $520, to the college girl's $400.

To many refined women, anxious to make a living in a way consistent with good social position, all this seems both contrary to good sense and tending to discourage educational preparation.

Yet it is essentially a question of supply and demand. The teaching profession is overcrowded. There is always a scarcity of women with the teaching gift.

The genuine teacher is almost an intuitive hypnotist. By some subtle sixth sense she reads the secret keys and paths that lead to the heart of the child. She does not command very much, she almost never punishes. Somehow or other she knows what wins the child's mind. She translates the dull grind of the text book into things that seem vital to the child.

But there is always a surplus of girls to whom teaching is merely hearing children say their lessons and observing if the recitation corresponds with what the text book says. Such ones would better make pies and bread in some honest man's home, or rattle the keys of a typewriter in an office. The multiplicity and superfluity of this misplaced type is what puts the average teacher's pay below the living wage."

WILL MEET AT LAKE LAND

State Sunday School Convention to be Biggest Ever Held in Florida

The fifteenth annual state Sunday school convention will meet in Lakeland Nov. 23rd to 26th. The sessions will be held in the First Baptist church, the first meeting being on Thursday morning, the 23rd, and the closing session coming Sunday night when a monster mass meeting will be held.

Never in the history of Sunday school work in this state has so much interest been displayed in an event of this nature. Lakeland is making large preparations. Every church has joined heartily in the work. Committees composed of the most prominent citizens have been appointed to look after the entertainment, the reception, music, decorations, etc. The Chamber of Commerce likewise has taken an active part. More than 2,000 preliminary programs have been mailed by this organization, each program being accompanied by a personal letter inviting everybody to their beautiful city. At the same time the Florida Sunday School Association has been busy arranging the various details of the gathering and the advertising.

Some of the most prominent speakers both from away and from within the state have been secured. Mr. John L. Alexander of Chicago, who is the International Sunday School Association's Teen Age specialist will be the principal speaker. Much stress will be laid upon this phase of Sunday school work, and Mr. Alexander will bring wonderful messages to the convention. P. E. Green of Birmingham, another specialist will also be present. Among the prominent men of Florida will be Bishop H. C. Morrison of Leesburg; Rev. R. H. Alderman, president of Southern College; Prof. D. J. Blocker of Stetson University; Prof. C. M. Brittain of Columbia College; Rev. C. W. Duke of Tampa; Rev. C. W. White of Bradenton; J. C. Lanier of Jacksonville; Marcus C. Fagg, Supt. of Florida Children's Home; O. E. Maple, state secretary Y. M. C. A.; Rev. J. L. Moon of Sutherland; Rev. T. H. McConnell of Orlando; Rev. A. H. Cole of Dade City; Rev. G. V. Albertson of DeLand and many others. Mr. A. F. Turner of Tampa is state president of the Florida Sunday School Association, under whose auspices the convention is held, and will preside at the meetings.

Practically all the denominations are sending exhibits of literature and novelties to the convention, so that all delegates may become acquainted with the practical side of Sunday school work.

Conferences, luncheons and gatherings where special features of work will be considered are being arranged. These gatherings will concentrate upon some one phase and those people interested in these departments will find special information from them.

Low rates are announced on all railroads. Every Sunday school in the state is entitled to delegates, one for every fifty enrollment in addition to pastor and superintendent. All official delegates will be entertained on the Harvard plan.

The Lakeland Chamber of Commerce plans fine outings for the delegates which will act as pleasing deviations to the regular routine of convention work.

People Hard to Please. It is impossible to please everybody in the same way. Some people grumble even at the finest weather if it does not serve their every purpose.

In l-o-way. A school inspector in a rural district of Iowa asked the pupils a word which he pronounced "Eggwiped." When they failed, he roundly berated them for their ignorance, and then spelled the word himself—"E-g-g-y-p-t, Eggwiped."—Christian Register.

Cold Storage for Home Meat Supply Costs $75.00

Everybody knows how hard it is to cure meats in the south. A. P. Spencer, district agent for the University of Florida Extension Division, calls attention to specifications for a cold storage house that will eliminate the weather requirements for curing meat. The specifications are sent out by the States Relations Service, Washington. The house costs only $75. The feed required to hold fat hogs over several weeks while you wait for cool weather would cost as much as the house. The plan mentioned is one that has been used successfully by J. E. McIntosh, Lauraville, Fla., for 15 years: "Size of cold storage, 8 by 10 feet, corner studding, 4 by 4 inches by 8 feet; intermediate studding, 2 by 4 inches by 8 feet.

"Joists nailed on side of studding (at top) so that when ceilings and weather board are nailed on, will leave a continuous air space all around. Ceiling one inch thick is nailed on horizontally, then on this a layer of insulating paper, and on this another like ceiling perpendicularly. On other or outer side of studding a like wall is put on. A beveled door is used, made with like walls and edges lined with felt of convenient size. Two layers of floor with felt between, the floor slanting backward and to center, with gutter to drain room to back end into a U pipe through the wall.

"The walls on both sides, end and overhead, inside and out, are the same: two wooden walls with paper between." Leave the air space between the walls open. Dead air space is a better insulation than sawdust, shavings or other material. See that the doors fit closely.

"A rack is placed as near the top as possible to admit 200 pound blocks of ice. The house requires about 800 pounds of ice a week. It will hold about 5,000 pounds of meat, placed in the racks on the side. The cost of operating equals the cost of ice and the wages of one man.

"The meat should be cut (without unjointing hams and shoulders) as soon as possible after killing; salted thoroughly and bulked together; skin side down in piles. Spread at night, salt again next morning and place in cold storage. Put not over 200 or 300 pounds in each rack to itself. Cross the pieces, leaving ventilation spaces.

"Temperature should be kept 40 to 48 degrees. All meats weighing less than 15 pounds to the piece will cure in 30 days. Pieces weighing from 15 to 25 pounds will take 45 days, and 40 pounds will take 60 days.

"If temperature is above 50 degrees the ice should be put in storage 4 or 6 days before the meat is put in, to bring it down to 45 degrees. If temperature is 40 degrees or less, the ice and meat can be put in together. The temperature of the meat when put in governs to a great extent the amount of ice required. One important feature is to have a ventilated door to give the meat fresh air when the outside temperature is 40 degrees or lower."

Short Course for Club boys at University Dec. 4-9

The grown-up farmers have their citrus seminar, livestock meet and farmers' short courses. Future farmers will have their own meeting this year at the University of Florida. The Extension Division has planned a short course for club boys. This meeting will be held during the week of December 4. Expenses of most of the boys will be paid by scholarships won in club contests. The scholarships will include transportation to and from Gainesville and board and lodging during the course.

Each boy will exhibit a ten ear sample of corn. It is expected that some pigs will be shown also. A series of lectures and demonstrations has been planned so that the boys may receive instruction that will aid them further in club work and future farm operations. Mornings probably will be spent in class work and the afternoons in laboratory exercises and demonstrations. Some field trips will be made in the vicinity of Gainesville.

Do You Know How to Feed Farm Animals?

The average way of feeding farm animals is wasteful. Most persons dump a quantity of feed into the trough and consider that they have done their duty. It does not occur to them that the need of the animals should be considered.

Farm animals need a balanced ration according to the work they are doing. Proper feeding is one of the most important phases of good farming, but few farmers are able to feed intelligently. Most of them feed by the rule of thumb method handed down from countless generations. That method was all right before feeding standards were available.

The University of Florida College of Agriculture, Gainesville, is offering a correspondence course in types and breeds of livestock and feeds and feeding for the various animals. It includes discussion of feeds and balanced rations for these animals. Tables for computing rations from different feeds are included.

The course also takes up care and management of beef and dairy animals, sheep, hogs, horses and poultry. Some discussion is given to the breeds of animals and the adaptations of each breed for different purposes.

As to Beggars in Florida

Every winter Florida is visited by the lame, the halt and the blind from other parts of the country. They come to Florida because the winter here is not so severe as in other sections. The success of the professional beggar depends upon his opportunity to get into the open where there are plenty of people. To a large extent the cold weather of high latitudes forbids this; but in Florida the chances are better. It is for this cause that professional beggars flock to Florida as soon as the winter begins.

The average man is sorry for this class of people and seldom refuses their appeals, although he may feel sure in his own mind that his charity is not being worthily bestowed. He does not wish to take the chances of turning down an appeal to help real distress. Usually the beggar is a cripple, or blind, and these in themselves are sufficiently appealing, regardless of the conditions back of them, and they cause men to open up the purse strings.

The pity is that owing to the conditions as they are at present, each community in the state does not devise some means of investigating these cases, and then, after separating the wheat, drive the chaff from the state.

In this way we might be relieved from running into horrible sights of deformity on the prominent corners or at the postoffice, for the worst ones of these people could be taken off the streets and provided for through public charity, and at a less cost to the several communities in the state.—Clearwater Sun.

Notice is hereby given that I, Michael Sholtz on behalf of myself, associates, legal representatives and assigns will apply to the county commissioners of Seminole county, state of Florida, at their regular meeting in December to-wit: On Monday, December 4th, A. D. 1914 for leave to establish a toll bridge across the St. Johns river at what known as Osteen Ferry, to take the place and stead of said ferry, and said bridge to be built at this point on said river, where the ferry now is and on the Sanford and Osteen road, the St. Johns river at that point being approximately nine hundred feet (900) wide, and the depth of the water being approximately from one (1) to fifteen (15) feet deep.
