Four Marines die in crash

TOKYO — Two U.S. CH-46 helicopters collided early today during a routine military exercise in Okinawa, sending one of them crashing into mountainous terrain and killing four Marines, a military spokesman said.

Master Sgt. Jake Rodriguez, chief spokesman for U.S. Forces Japan, said names of the four American soldiers killed in the crash were being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Man killed by beer keg blast

DANBURY, N.H. — A Massachusetts man was killed when a beer keg thrown onto a campfire at a birthday party exploded, hitting him in the head with a piece of metal, authorities said.

Chris John Widebeck, 21, of Northborough, Mass., died at the scene after being hit in the head by a piece of the keg that exploded around 12:45 a.m. Sunday, state police said.

Fans riot at Jagger concert

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Thousands of rock fans angered by the high price of tickets went on a rampage outside a Jakarta stadium during a concert by British rock star Mick Jagger, damaging more than 100 cars and leaving scores of people injured.

Police said about 70,000 people showed up for the Sunday concert by the Rolling Stones member, but thousands of fans could not afford the $14.50 price for a ticket and ended up battling police and troops outside the giant Senayan Stadium.

Hostage videotape released

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Islamic Jihad Group today released a videotape of Terry Anderson, the longest-held U.S. hostage in Lebanon, in which the captive accused U.S. officials of being more concerned with the plight of three trapped whales than with freeing the hostages.

In the 5-minute videotape released on the occasion of his 41st birthday, Anderson also criticized U.S. presidential candidates Georges Bush and Michael Dukakis for not focusing enough attention on the hostages in their presidential campaigns.

Bucs' rally falls short

TAMPA BAY — Tampa Bay spotted Miami 17 points and then rallied but fell short in a 17-14 loss Sunday in the battle of Florida.

After a scoreless first half, the Dolphins took advantage of two Bucs turnovers in the third quarter to take a 14-0 lead and later added a chip shot field goal to go on top 17-0.

Tampa rallied behind quarterback Joe Ferguson who took his team on long touchdown marches late in the game to make it 17-14. Tampa's last gasp came when Ferguson's sideline pass on fourth-and-six fell incomplete.

Jamboree draws 5,000

By SANDRA BOUCHANINE
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — Even with the noontime shower on Sunday, the city's first Country Jamboree and Craft Fair, sponsored by The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, attracted about 5,000 people, officials said today.

Dave Farr, executive director of the chamber, estimated that standholders took in about $40,000 during the two-day fair.

The chamber has plans for a jamboree next year that they expect to be twice as large as this year's.

Some of the highlights on Sunday included clogging with some "impromptu clogging in the street." A Sanford city employee was the winner in the cornbread contest which was judged by five people: Rebecca Randall of Channel 35 in Lake Mary, Ann Singleton, with Florida State Fair in Tampa, and three local residents, Robbie Robertson, Ben Dyal, and Vic Richburg.

County commissioner candidate Art Davis was declared the victor in The Cow Patty Tossin' Contest, Davis dunked two out of three patties into the bucket. Coming in a close second was Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith who got "about one and one-half" cow patties into the bucket.

Adding to the festivities was entertainment by Seminole Community Band, Farr said their finale of "Stars and Stripes Forever" had people singing and clapping.

Some downtown merchants opened their businesses on Sunday to bring in the additional business generated from the fair.

"The merchants were very pleased. The fair drew attention to downtown and the people were fascinated by the local agricultural products," Farr said. Locally-made honey and pickles were featured.

After the events, the chamber and craftspeople cleaned E. First Street between Palmetto and Park avenues.

Farr said he anticipates a bigger and better fair next year. "This is our first annual. We'll have it next year with twice as many people. We enjoyed it. It was a lot of fun," he said.

Golden Age Games honors Olympic great

By BRAD CHURCH
Herald City Editor

SANFORD — One of the greatest American divers in Olympic history, Dr. Sammy Lee of California, will serve as honorary chairman of Sanford's 1988 Golden Age Games.

Competition in the games, which are for people aged 55 years and older, begins on Sunday but the opening ceremonies will be held Monday morning. Several thousand people are expected for the week-long event.

Lee, whose parents emigrated to the United States from Korea, won the gold medal in high diving at the XIV Olympiad in London in 1948.

becoming the first American-born Asian to win a gold medal. He also won a bronze medal that year in three-meter springboard diving. In 1950 he became the first American diver to win back-to-back gold medals when he again topped the high diving competition at the XV Olympiad in Helsinki, Finland.

He has remained active in Olympics activities as personal representative of presidents Eisenhower, Nixon, and Reagan to the Olympic Games in 1956, 1972 and 1988. He also was appointed to the President's Council on Physical Fitness by presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan.

He was named 1953 winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy given to the outstanding American amateur athlete based on achievement, leadership, character and sportsmanship, and was the first non-caucasian to receive the award. In 1954 he served a sports ambassador to Southeast Asia, speaking on Americanism and the Olympic spirit.

Lee served as the U.S. women's diving coach for the 1960 Olympiad in Rome, and also coached Bob Webster to a gold medal in high diving at those games. At the 1964 Tokyo Olympics, Lee was coach of the Korean diving team and also coached Webster to his second gold medal.

He was inducted into the International Swimming and Diving Hall of Fame in 1968.

At the Montreal Olympic Games in 1976, Lee was coach for Greg Louganis, who won a silver medal in high diving at the age of 16. Louganis won the gold at this year's Olympics in Korea.

Lee was born in Fresno, Calif., in 1920. He served as the first non-caucasian student body president of Benjamin Franklin High School in Los Angeles and

Workers begin tearing up tracks at crossings

SANFORD — CSX Transportation Company workers began tearing up the railroad tracks across French Avenue at 13th Street and between Sixth and Seventh Street this morning.

The street was scheduled to close in those two areas at 9 a.m. Monday, but the crews did not have to close the street until later in the morning. Cars whizzed by the "road closed" signs for a while until traffic began backing up after the crossings were closed.

Police Chief Steven Harriett said his department planned to monitor the traffic flow to see if officers would be needed to direct traffic to detours, particularly during the afternoon rush hours.

The Florida Department of Transportation has placed signs on Highway 17-92 in an effort to direct traffic around the entire area.

Northbound though traffic is being directed to use Airport Boulevard to get to State Road 46 in west Sanford. Traffic headed downtown is being directed to take Park Avenue.

Southbound traffic is being directed to turn off French Avenue onto Third Street and drive either to Elm Street and south on Elm to 20th and back to French; or to Park Avenue and then to 25th Street and back to 17-92.

Local traffic to businesses on French Avenue between the two railroad crossings is advised to use Park Avenue to Ninth Street to French.

A temporary drive allows motorists to reach the Scotty's and Pebble Junction businesses in the 700 block of French from the north.

Cities keeping close watch on how charter is worded

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series dealing with the proposed Seminole County charter.

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald staff writer

Few issues surrounding the proposed Seminole County Charter attracts the degree of attention as the affect it and county government may have on cities.

Officials from several Seminole County cities express concern over the perceived potential of the charter to allow the county to impose more power over the cities.

Casselberry councilmen set aside a $5,000 fund to oppose the charter and city officials and attorneys from throughout the county have spoken against it.

"By majority, the council is generally against it because of the risk to the cities," said Casselberry Mayor Owen Sheppard.

However, charter experts say that a

Ticket holder wins $8 million

TALLAHASSEE — A Florida lotto ticket worth $8 million was purchased in Jacksonville, although the winner did not immediately step forward, lottery officials said Sunday.

Lottery officials Tuesday awarded two sisters from Indiantown, Mary Ellen Snipes and Maxine Johnson, the previous lotto grand prize of $31.5 million. They awarded a Jacksonville warehouse supervisor, Robert Rowell, the $1 million grand prize in the instant winner game on Friday.

In addition to Saturday night's grand prize winner, 318,738 other winners correctly matched three, four or five of the six winning lotto numbers, 4-8-24-34-43-45.

Officials said 328 people who picked five correct numbers each won $3,453; 17,156 people who selected four winners each won $96.50 and 299,254 people who correctly picked three of the six numbers each won $5.

The prize this week begins at $8 million, officials said.

Alien workers have health care problems

BELLE GLADE — Dozens of alien workers with AIDS in south Florida, facing the likely prospect of being denied legal residency, may go into hiding and have few health care options, lawyers and immigration officials said.

Henrietta Johnson, a social worker in Belle Glade for the Comprehensive AIDS program, said health care for AIDS patients without residency status is difficult to obtain.

"We're having problems in trying to obtain services. There is nothing available for aliens," said Johnson, whose remarks were published Sunday in The Miami Herald.

Those seeking help sometimes do not reveal their immigration status, she said, and "when we apply for a disability check or public assistance, we find out they are not a legal resident or a legal alien and they are denied."

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 offered illegal farm workers the possibility of citizenship. But it excludes those who are carrying contagious diseases, including acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Poll shows support for obscenity laws

JACKSONVILLE — A Gallup Poll commissioned by an anti-smut group shows three-quarters of city residents favor prosecution against sellers of pornography, while 17 percent favored sales of such material.

The telephone survey for the Jacksonville Coalition Against Pornography showed 75 percent favored prosecution of sellers of magazines showing sexual violence and 92 percent favored prosecuting child pornographers.

But the Gallup survey of 400 adults in five counties, conducted Sept. 21-23, also showed 25 percent of the sample did not know whether some types of hard-core pornography is illegal.

The group did not release the exact wording of the questions. The margin of error was not available.

Deacon ends fundraiser using dumpster pulpit

United Press International

WEST PALM BEACH — A deacon who spent most of the past month in dumpsters trying to raise money for the homeless emerged and said he received a "minor miracle" — $33,600 in contributions.

"I think people responded real well," Brother Joe Ranieri said Sunday after ending his stint in garbage bins. "It would have been a major miracle if I got $300,000. I'll settle for a minor miracle."

Donations from the past 28 days ranged from 5 cents to $3,700.

He said the $33,600 in donations will be added to the $125,000 contributed previously. It should be enough for a down payment on a shelter he wants to build in the Fort Lauderdale-Pompano Beach area, Ranieri said.

The 48-year-old Catholic deacon from West Palm Beach has been working on behalf of the homeless for many years, and has previously slept in garbage bins to raise money.

Ranieri's latest effort, 28 days and 16 nights, began Oct. 3 when he entered a 5-foot-high garbage bin in Deerfield Beach with nothing. He said then he was bored. He has since been in other cleaned dumpsters in Margate and Wilton Manors, although he was prohibited by city laws in Margate from sleeping in a garbage bin there.

He accepted an offer at the last location, St. Clement's Catholic Church in Wilton Manors, to sleep in the rectory.

He has already established The Lord's Place, a program providing temporary shelter in Palm Beach County for homeless families and distressed single women.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Bureaucrats bungle building leases

Inflexible bid guidelines cost state millions, newspaper says

United Press International

TALLAHASSEE — Florida taxpayers will spend an extra $6 million over the next ten years because inflexible state guidelines on bidding left the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services no choice but to move into an expensive new home.

Those same guidelines forced the Department of Professional Regulation to turn down an offer of temporary free rent before moving into its new offices, the Tallahassee Democrat reported Sunday.

Both agencies rented space inside Tallahassee's Northwood

Mall, a structure in the process of converting from retail to office space.

In both cases, Northwood was assisted in its bidding by Bill Hebrock, a lobbyist and former Leon County Republican Party chairman. Hebrock is a paid fund-raiser for insurance commissioner candidate Tom Gallagher, the former chief of DPR.

Gallagher was chief of DPR when work on the bid specifications began, but resigned to work on his campaign before the specifications were sent out. He has since received $7,550 in campaign contributions from the Northwood Mall's owner.

Gallagher, Hebrock, DPR officials and a Northwood spokesman said DPR's move to the mall had nothing to do with the contributions to Gallagher.

Hebrock also helped raise money for Gov. Bob Martinez and Gallagher's 1984 gubernatorial campaigns. He has received more than $43,000 from Gallagher's campaign this year.

Both HRS and DPR were restricted by guidelines that require someone bidding to supply office space to the state have the space available when the bid is tendered. That means a potential bidder willing to renovate or build more space cannot enter a bid.

Very few Tallahassee builders are willing to construct office before they have tenants signed on. The Northwood Mall, with plenty of space left empty by

Doctor: Not murder, it was mercy killing

United Press International

FORT MYERS — A Fort Myers doctor whose murder trial for killing his terminally ill wife begins Monday is guilty only of "colossal stupidity" for giving public details of the death, and should not be prosecuted, his lawyer says.

"This is something that is done in the medical community all the time," said Stanley Rosenblatt, lawyer for Dr. Peter Rosier. "Doctors assist their terminally ill patients who want to die, and everybody just winks at it."

hand over her nose and one hand over her mouth. She lingered for hours before dying.

Delman and his two sons, who said they were in the woman's bedroom when Delman suffocated her, are unindicted co-conspirators. They are the state's star witnesses, immune from prosecution.

State Attorney Joe D'Alessandro said he was forced to begin a murder investigation after the doctor talked on a Fort Myers television station in November 1986 about a book he wrote, "The Lady," describing his wife's life and death.

Rosenblatt said Rosier was guilty of "colossal stupidity" when he gave details to the public, but he should not be charged with murder.

The lawyer said he plans to call doctors and mercy-killing experts to support his defense, and said the "revolutionary medical issues" that have been kept private between doctors and their dying patients, could be disclosed.

Two paperback books published by the Hemlock Society were taken from Rosier's home after his arrest. The group has called Rosier's prosecution "vicious."

"To put (Rosier) in the same category as an organized crime figure or someone who robs a 7-Eleven in the middle of the night is absurd."

The facts of the case are not in dispute, but lawyers said the result could set legal precedent in Florida on mercy killings and the right to die.

Rosier, 47, tried to kill his cancer stricken wife, Patricia, with morphine. But the 43-year-old woman, who wanted to die, survived the attempt.

Vincent Delman, Mrs. Rosier's stepfather, finished the job. He smothered her by putting one

Driver claims political link in dropped charge

United Press International

ST. CLOUD — A Cuban-born motorist cited for having an obscene bumper sticker on his pickup truck said international politics prompted state officials abruptly to drop the charge.

Jose Proenza-Sanfeli, 34, said Saturday word of a protest at the U.S. embassy in Montevideo, Uruguay, apparently reached authorities in Osceola County, leading them to abandon the case.

State officials dropped charges Friday against the 34-year-old St. Cloud man pulled over earlier this month for having a "Russia Sucks" bumper sticker on the back of his pickup truck.

Florida Highway Patrol troopers in St. Cloud and Orlando have refused to answer questions about the case, although they confirm the charges were dismissed.

Proenza-Sanfeli speculated the Uruguay protest, focusing on the protestor's perception that the United States was limiting freedom of speech, might be the reason.

Proenza-Sanfeli also said The Orlando Sentinel invited him to be the grand marshal in the Cumquat Parade through downtown Orlando Nov. 12. He said he expects to ride in a car covered with "Russia Sucks" bumper stickers.

As a result of the incident, Proenza-Sanfeli said he will try to form a group to fight the state's new obscene bumper sticker law that went into effect Oct. 1.

"I will not forget. I will not give up. I have formed a group to continue the fight. It is named Stick It," Proenza-Sanfeli said from his St. Cloud home.

Under the new rule, law enforcement officials are allowed to ticket drivers for having obscene or pornographic bumper stickers.

"Even though the charges have been dropped against me, this sharp sword hangs over the head of every citizen and will continue to spearhead the fight to make the obscene bumper sticker law until it's wording is more specific," he said in a statement.

A Florida Highway Patrol officer pulled him over Oct. 20 between St. Cloud and Kissimmee for having the sticker on the back of his 1984 red Dodge pickup truck.

A patrol spokeswoman in Kissimmee said the charges had been dropped but could not provide additional details.

Proenza-Sanfeli, a scrub nurse, said the law hinders his rights to freedom of speech.

"Today, you can't have it on a bumper sticker," he said. "Tomorrow, you might not be able to have it on a T-shirt, next it's hats and you can't send it through the mail. The snowball effect, if you think about it, government officials will come out of the woodwork and send you to Alaska because we don't have a Siberia."

"I know what communism is all about," Proenza-Sanfeli said, adding he left Cuba when he was 14.

Man allegedly drove over officer

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — An Orlando man is accused of hitting a sheriff's deputy with his car, then driving off while the deputy was reaching into the car to try to turn it off. Edward T. Moory, 22, was arrested at 1:15 a.m. Saturday on charges of aggravated assault and attempting to elude an officer. The officer reported he responded to a call reporting someone was attempting to buy drugs in the parking lot at Lake Howell Road and Dunbar Street. The officer approached the car that Moory was in and attempted to talk to him. The report stated the suspect backed his car into the officer and when the officer reached in to try and reach the ignition to turn it off, the car sped off. It went into a ditch a short distance down Howell Road and Moory was arrested by another deputy.

Man arrested for probation violation

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Randall D. Brunk, 25, of 661 Jamestown Blvd., Apt. 2088, was arrested by Altamonte Springs police officers on a charge of probation violations after they investigated a fight at 285 Douglas Ave. at 1:48 a.m. Saturday.

Man arrested after refusing to leave

CASSELBERRY — Casselberry police arrested Jeffrey L. Bronson, 33, of Apopka, at 102 a.m. Saturday at the ABC Liquor Store at 5910 South Highway 17092 after he reportedly refused to leave the store after being asked to.

Man on electrical box jailed

SANFORD — A man who tried to run from a Seminole County sheriff's deputy is jailed for allegedly having cocaine. The man was sitting on a railroad electrical box on Southwest Road at 18th Street, Sanford, at about 8:40 p.m. Sunday, when the deputy spotted him.

The deputy said the man ran from him, but was stopped by a fence. The suspect, the deputy said, threw a bag containing crack cocaine over the fence. The deputy recovered the bag and charged Rodney Lewis Woods, 31, of 988 Lake Monroe Terrace, Sanford, with possession of cocaine and resisting arrest without violence. Bond is $1,000.

Wife says husband beat her with fan belt

CHULUOTA — A woman's allegations that her husband choked her and beat her with an automobile fan belt brought a charge of battery-spouse abuse against the man. Seminole County sheriff's deputies report.

David Morris, 58, of 1315 Snowhill Road, Chuluota, was arrested at home at about 9:34 p.m. Sunday. Bond is $500. Veronica Morris told deputies her husband was upset because she was late coming home from work.

Several arrested on DUI charges

SANFORD — The following persons face a charge of driving under the influence in Seminole County:

• George Andrew Paltin, 31, of Pembroke Pines, was arrested at 1:51 a.m. Sunday after his car was in an accident on State Road 436, Altamonte Springs.

• Kelly Lee Galutt, 21, of 133 E. Crystal Lake Ave., Lake Mary, at 1:03 a.m. Sunday after speeding through the parking lot of the Golden Lamb Restaurant, U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford. A charge of driving with a suspended license was added.

• John David Vance III, 26, of Orlando, at 11:30 p.m. Sunday after his car was in an accident on State Road 436 at Interstate 4, Altamonte Springs. He was also charged with possession of a suspended driver's license.

Kraft bought for $13.1 billion

Second largest U.S. merger creates world's largest consumer goods producer

United Press International

NEW YORK — The merger of Philip Morris Cos. and Kraft Inc., at $13.1 billion the second largest in U.S. history, would create the world's largest consumer goods producer to compete with huge European firms, officials and analysts said.

"I'd like to emphasize that this is not a leveraged buyout situation," said William Murray, vice chairman of Philip Morris, said in announcing the agreement Sunday. "It's not a situation where the company will be broken up."

"It's not a situation where the surviving company takes on enormous amount of back-breaking debt. Our objective is to grow Kraft," Murray said. "We bought the business to grow it, not to shrink it."

Kraft and Philip Morris placed the total value of the transaction at approximately $13.1 billion. The deal was made when Philip Morris sweetened its cash bid to $106 from $90 per share.

"We believe the combination of Philip Morris and Kraft will create a U.S.-based food company that will compete more effectively in world food markets," Philip Morris Chairman Hamish Maxwell said. "Kraft's products provide an excellent complement to our existing product lines and position us to capitalize on marketing opportunities worldwide."

The resulting company of the merger between the tobacco giant and nation's No. 1 food company would be the world's largest producer of consumer goods, displacing Unilever, a British-Dutch company, as well as the Swiss Nestle Co., a Philip Morris spokesman said.

"Our shareholders are receiving full value, and this merger is the best possible outcome for our employees, customers, and the communities in which we operate," said John M. Richman, Kraft's chairman and chief executive officer. "The addition of Kraft's strong brands and operating units to Philip Morris will clearly result in the world's leading food business."

Whale drama becomes fodder for Hollywood

United Press International

BARROW Alaska — People in this tiny Eskimo village are not surprised that Hollywood is knocking on their door, especially since the three-week drama of the trapped whales had a worldwide audience and a happy ending.

"Marlon Brando has contacted Greenpeace about making a movie," said Cindy Lowry, the Alaska Greenpeace representative who was part of the unusual alliance of Eskimo whale hunters, government agencies, the military, the oil industry and two Soviet icebreakers that freed the pair of California gray whales from certain death.

"I already have two movie offers," said Ron Morris, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration biologist who helped coordinate the $1 million rescue operation that included massive, high-tech machinery, flying cranes, hardy native ice-choppers and Russian sailors.

The life-and-death drama gripped much of the world for nearly three weeks since three whales were spotted trapped in the ice off Barrow on Oct. 7. With an army of reporters, photographers and camera crews flashing words and pictures all over the world, the drama of the trapped whales tugged at the hearts of adults and children alike.

Letters of hope came to Barrow addressed "To the Whales," written by kids from Florida to France. Each night the pictures of the battered, bleeding and frightened whales went into living rooms.

On Sunday Barrow was returning to normal. Most of the international press corps, National Guard troops and oil company representatives had left Saturday in the wake of Friday's announcement that the two whales were swimming free of the arctic ice after a pair of Russian icebreakers cut them a path to freedom.

Halloween curtailed as police hunt for killer

United Press International

GREENFIELD, Mass. — Trick-or-treating was canceled tonight in the western Massachusetts town of Greenfield as police spent Halloween hunting for a teenage murder suspect reportedly obsessed with the "Friday the 13th" series of horror films.

In an effort to calm jittery residents and prevent another attack, city officials also canceled tonight's traditional Halloween parade. Parents instead were asked to escort costumed youngsters door to door along the tree-lined streets during daylight Sunday and again today.

Few homes had pumpkins on their porches or Jack-o'-lanterns in the windows, and police patrols were unusually heavy in the community of 19,000 as detectives pressed their weeklong search for the suspect, Mark Branch, 18, of Greenfield, wanted in the mutilation murder of a female college student.

Police Chief David McCarthy also promised a crackdown on the usual Halloween pranks because tension in the town was running so high, but one investigator said officers would not "lift up everybody's mask."

A local movie theater delayed plans to show the new horror film, "Halloween IV."

"I've never seen as many cops out like there are this year," said Nicole Gadreau, 15, who accompanied her 9-year-old brother, Jamie, on his trick-or-treating Sunday.

Branch, a fan of horror films who may have identified with fictional killer Jason in the "Friday the 13th" movies, was being sought for the murder of Sharon Gregory, 18, whose mutilated body was found last Monday in the bathroom of her Greenfield home.

Branch's photograph has been carried in newspapers throughout New England and shown on television stations in four states, prompting a steady stream of calls from people who claim to have seen the suspect.

The Legislature should act first

Recent polls of Florida residents indicate that citizens rank drugs and drug abuse as the state's number one problem and water pollution and depletion as number two. Local, state and federal law enforcement officers can cite a few victories in combating the first problem but little progress has been made in the second. Unfortunately, proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 3 offers hope but no remedies.

The amendment provides that land producing high water recharge to Florida's aquifers may be classified by general law and assessed for ad valorem tax purposes solely on the basis of character or use. Agricultural land and land used exclusively for non-commercial recreational purposes are already accorded this treatment.

Such tax treatment would make it financially feasible to retain land in its natural state for aquifer recharge. It would also offer an alternative to development for land previously used for orange groves. This gives the appearance of protecting Florida's supply of usable water by giving tax breaks to the owners.

The problem lies with the Legislature. Florida's lawmakers coped with similar bills during the sessions of 1983, 1984, 1985, and 1986 but none were passed. If the proposed amendment is passed, the legislature then will have to adopt legislation to implement it. Such legislation will be crucial in determining how the amendment will affect the state. The 1987 legislature was unwilling to further cope with the problem so it determined that the voters should decide first, then the lawmakers will act. It seems to be a classic case of cart before the horse.

There is no question that the intent of this amendment is good and is a positive step in the right direction. However, the Herald recommends a no vote on Amendment 3. The Legislature must do its job and stop delegating lawmaking to the electorate.

Jamboree succeeds

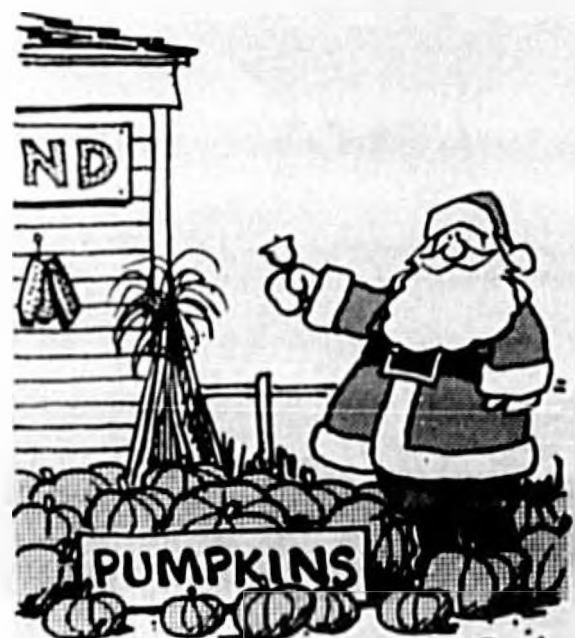

The bad news is that it rained on Sanford's first Country Jamboree and Craft Fair Sunday. But there should be no dampened spirits. The two-day affair was a success despite the briefly inclement weather.

Hundreds of friends, neighbors and strangers strolled back and forth through the two-block downtown area. People enjoyed themselves. That alone would have made the event worthwhile, but there is more. The crowds that were attracted help to foster civic awareness and pride; downtown business was also stimulated.

The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, which organized the jamboree, plans to do it again next year -- and bigger and better.

That is good news, indeed.

Dukakis' lost opportunity in far west

PORTLAND, Ore. — "This state has gone with the Republicans in almost every presidential race since the mid-1940s. There's no reason to change now," says a longtime observer of Oregon politics when asked about the likelihood that Vice President George Bush will be victorious in this year's contest.

At the beginning of this year's campaign, politicians of both parties had reason to believe that pattern might be broken — but now Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis is likely to join the long list of vanquished Democrats.

Neither Bush nor Dukakis has ever been perceived by any substantial portion of the electorate as a visionary politician or a charismatic leader. But Bush — viewed by many voters as the "least worst" alternative — appears to be on his way to winning by default.

"Probably most important, people here think Bush presents less of a downside risk than Dukakis," adds the veteran of Oregon politics, who requests anonymity.

That's especially grim news for Dukakis because he planned to offset Bush's expected strength in the South with an impressive showing in the West in general and in the three states bordering the Pacific Ocean in particular.

Indeed, the Democrats assumed they would be fully competitive in California, Oregon and Washington this year because they are among the 24 states in which the party's nominees received an average of at least 45 percent of the popular vote cast in the seven presidential elections since 1960.

The 13 Western states have 111 votes in the Electoral College, with California alone accounting for 47 votes. "No mathematics allows the Democrats to win the White House without it," says respected Democratic pollster Peter Hart.

Washington and Oregon, with 10 and seven electoral votes respectively, are not as crucial. But the Democrats assumed they could win the Pacific Northwest for several reasons:

• Both states have Democratic governors — Booth Gardner in Washington and Neil

Goldschmidt in Oregon — who are not unlike Dukakis. They are efficient, no-nonsense executives who place a higher premium on effectiveness than on ideology.

• While nobody ever mistook Dukakis for a Westerner, Bush also lacks the natural Western appeal that enabled President Reagan to sweep the region in both of his national campaigns.

• In Washington, a confrontation between moderates and conservatives has torn asunder the Republican Party. "This is the best shot we've had in a long, long time," one Democratic leader in the state noted early in the campaign.

To capitalize upon those opportunities, the Dukakis organization committed substantial resources to the three Pacific Coast states. It hired more than 20 paid staff members each in Oregon and Washington, while California was treated in fashion befitting the nation's most populous state.

Moreover, early public opinion polls suggested that a majority of voters in all three states was fully prepared to cast its ballots for a Democrat. Now, however, Bush is the likely victor.

In great measure, that's because Dukakis does not wear well with voters in the West or elsewhere in the country.

100th Congress ranks with best

WASHINGTON—The question that arises about the just-adjourned 100th Congress of the United States is how a body so widely reviled could have done all the good things it did. One should not exaggerate. It postponed the inevitable hard choices necessary to deal with the budget deficit, the runaway cost of entitlement programs and overlapping weapons systems. It put off finding answers to the Savings and Loan liquidity crisis and the financing of overdue investments in environmental cleanup and infrastructure repair, to mention just a few.

It dealt with no great crisis. It passed no single piece of legislation clearly destined for the history books. Yet in terms of productivity and accomplishment, it probably ranks among the handful of Congresses in the last four decades which clearly left an enduring mark in many fields.

Since it convened 21 months ago, Congress passed laws mandating a major redirection of U.S. trade policy and approved the creation of a free-trade zone with Canada. It rewrote the basic welfare law, approved the largest expansion of Medicare in 23 years to cover "catastrophic" illnesses, and ratified the most sweeping U.S.-Soviet arms agreement of recent decades.

Despite the conservative political climate, it strengthened two major civil-rights statutes and the federal ethics standards, expanded federal programs for the homeless, for drug addicts and AIDS victims, improved environmental programs and provided new protections for workers facing mass layoffs.

This would have been a significant achievement for any Congress at any time. What is confounding is that this was done at a time when congressional standards and operations were under strong criticism on and off Capitol Hill and when the Democratic-controlled Congress confronted a Republican President who seemed to relish opportunities for show-downs.

How can a Congress whose members have virtually purchased immunity from effective re-election challenge by a campaign-finance system widely viewed as corrupt perform as responsibly as this one did? And how can a body of 535 individual, egotistical political entrepreneurs be so effective when the executive branch is led by a politically weakened, scandal-tired President whose impulses, in many instances, are opposite those of Congress?

It could hardly be the fear of defeat that motivates members of Congress to behave responsibly, when 98 percent of the House members and at least two-thirds of the senators running this year have safe seats. Nor was it the whip of a strong President which forced Congress to act.

To be sure, Reagan played a key role in several of the 100th's greatest achievements. It was his intermediate-range Nuclear Forces Agreement with Mikhail Gorbachev that the Senate approved. He was a vital party to the post-crash budget agreement which set the stage for Congress this year finally passing on schedule the separate appropriations bills to fund government activities, as the Constitution envisaged—and not creating another ungainly monster of a thousand-page, catchall "Continuing Resolution."

But this was not Reagan's Congress. Democrats regained control of the Senate in 1986, despite Reagan's campaign efforts to preserve the Republican majority achieved on the coattails of his 1980 victory.

As the outset, the Democrats overrode the Reagan vetoes of the Clean Water and highway bills; then it put his administration on public trial in the Iran-contra hearings. It defied him by cutting off military aid to the contra forces in Nicaragua; and it thwarted his attempt to put Judge Robert H. Bork on the Supreme Court. It was no patsy.

But neither was it content simply to score political points off a weakened President, as a prelude to the 1988 election. Much of the credit for avoiding the temptation to be simply partisan and confrontational must go to the Democrats who ran Congress, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd and House Speaker Jim Wright. But Byrd, who is stepping down from his leadership post, and Wright, who was brand-new in his job, did not have the power (any more than Reagan did) to make the members of the 100th Congress jump through hoops. The initiative that made it so productive came from many individuals, Republicans as well as Democrats, back-benchers as well as committee chairmen.

The roster of individual contributors is too long for cataloging here. Suffice it to say that it includes many a legislator who has sipped richly off the campaign largesse of political-action committees (PACS), and has taken advantage of every congressional perk to enhance his own re-election prospects.

Did CIA plot backfire?

WASHINGTON — We have uncovered startling evidence that Robert Kennedy oversaw an undercover operation — a CIA plot to eliminate Cuba's Fidel Castro — that backfired cruelly 25 years ago and triggered the assassination of his own brother, John F. Kennedy.

This is a painful story that the authorities don't want to face. Only two months ago, the Justice Department tried to close the door on the dreadful crime that changed our nation's history. The department declared, "No persuasive evidence can be identified to support the theory of a conspiracy."

Yet our findings, if not conclusive, are certainly persuasive. We have pieced together evidence of a conspiracy — implicating an unwitting Robert Kennedy — from hidden documents and credible witnesses. The evidence we have seen is far more compelling than the Warren Commission's verdict that President Kennedy was killed by a lone, deranged gunman. We will present our case to the nation Wednesday (Nov. 2) in a two-hour, prime-time documentary on more than 150 television stations.

The tragic events that ended in Kennedy's death began four years earlier in the backrooms of the CIA. In December 1959, then CIA director Allen Dulles, who continued to serve in the early days of the Kennedy administration, made a chilling proposal. Eight months later, the CIA director of security, Col. Sheffield Edwards, was assigned to implement it.

The operation was so secret that it wasn't committed to paper until years afterward. Then a CIA account described it as "a sensitive mission requiring gangster-type action. The mission target was Fidel Castro." The purpose was to liquidate the charismatic Castro, leaving Cuba leaderless just before the Bay of Pigs invasion.

A CIA front man, Robert Maheu, sounded out a top crime figure from the old Al Capone mob, Johnny Roselli, about killing the Cuban leader. Roselli introduced Maheu to Sam Giancana and Santo Trafficante. One CIA account observed: "Both were on the list of the attorney general's 10 most wanted men."

The mob accepted the contract. But the assassination plot failed and the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion was a fiasco. The newly elected president, John F. Kennedy, was furious at the CIA for botching the invasion and asked his brother, thereafter, to oversee the CIA.

On May 7, 1962, Attorney General Robert Kennedy was told about the mission to liquidate Castro. This was followed a week later by a written review. "This memorandum for the record is prepared at the request of the attorney general of the United States following an oral briefing of him relative to a sensitive CIA operation conducted during the period approximately August 1960 to May 1961," the report began.

It outlined the mission, concluding, "Knowledge of this project during its life was kept to a total of six persons ... and there were no memoranda on the project nor were there other written documents or agreements. The project was duly orally approved by the said senior officials of the agency." The memo added, "In view of the extreme sensitivity of the information set forth above, only one additional copy of this memorandum has been made and will be retained by the agency."

Not long afterward, Robert Kennedy joined in the decision to revive the mission.

Stocks open slightly lower

United Press International
 NEW YORK — Prices opened slightly lower today in moderate trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.
 The Dow Jones Industrial average, which rose 9.06 Friday, was off 8.18 to 2141.71 shortly after the market opened.
 Declines led advances 496-251 among the 1,186 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 11,868,000 shares.
 Tobacco giant Philip Morris Cos. reached agreement Sunday with Kraft Inc. to acquire the nation's No. 1 food company for $13.1 billion in cash in the second-largest merger in U.S. history.

 The resulting company would be the world's largest producer of consumer goods, displacing Unilever, a British-Dutch company.
 Stock prices closed slightly higher Friday in moderate trading even though activity slowed following an early rally that recouped some of Thursday's losses.
 Analysts said Wall Street had somewhat eased its worries over Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's suggestion to change the tax law to discourage corporate borrowing for takeovers. Market participants also digested a delay by First Boston Corp. in the pricing of a major offering of junk bonds.

Dollar opens lower; gold, silver higher

United Press International

The dollar drifted lower in light trading today on major foreign currency markets after closing sharply lower in Tokyo. The price of gold firmed.
 In earlier trading in the Far East, the dollar plummeted against the Japanese yen in Tokyo and the Bank of Japan intervened to bolster the falling U.S. currency, dealers said.
 The dealers described the central bank intervention as fairly large in scale.
 Central bank sources confirmed the Bank of Japan intervention and said the central bank would step in whenever necessary.

 "Too steep a rise in the yen against the dollar should be closely watched and checked," a market watcher noted.
 The Bank of Japan said the dollar closed 1.08 yen lower at 125.00 yen after plunging below the 125-yen level. Trading was described as heavy.
 Foreign exchange bank sources said the market sentiment remained bearish for the dollar and anticipated the dollar would decline further after the U.S. presidential election next week.

Suitor ready to rescue Radice

United Press International

FORT LAUDERDALE — A reclusive young investor from Michigan has emerged as a leading suitor to rescue Radice Corp., a troubled real estate developer, from bankruptcy proceedings, a business newspaper reported.
 Randon A. Samelson, 40, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., a camera shy businessman, has negotiated with Radice as executives prepare for a Monday hearing in U.S. bankruptcy court to seek approval for a debt payment plan, the paper said.
 Review Publications Co. of Miami said documents Samelson filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission show his company was negotiating with a company described as being in bankruptcy reorganization. It is thought the company is Radice.

The filing also said Samelson is looking at an "undercapitalized Federal savings and loan association" that was not identified.
 Radice officials said they have negotiated with a potential buyer, but refused to identify the suitor, the newspaper said.
 The SEC filing said Stoneridge Resources Inc., Samelson's holding company, planned to invest $3 million in the acquisition, using the current value of company stock as a line of credit, the newspaper said.

Dukakis seeks third debate

United Press International

Democrat Michael Dukakis, casting himself in the tradition of Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy, entered the final week of campaigning by calling himself a liberal before challenging George Bush to a third presidential debate.
 Contending he is gaining on his Republican rival in key electoral states, the Massachusetts governor issued a challenge for another debate while making a whistle-stop tour of California Sunday.
 And adding more fuel to his go-for-broke populist campaign, Dukakis described himself as a liberal in the tradition of Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John Kennedy.

Dukakis told reporters in Fresno he would like to debate Bush on the eve of Election Day over accusations the Democrat is trying to divide the nation along class lines.
 "If he really thinks I'm trying to divide the country, let's have a discussion on that," Dukakis said. "There's an hour available Monday night (Nov. 7) if he wants to do it."
 He referred to two consecutive 30-minute spots that both campaigns have bought on network television for advertisements on the eve of the Nov. 8 election.
 Dukakis said, "I'd be perfectly willing to throw that away," if the vice president would agree to meet in a head-on debate with only a moderator to preside.
 Bush has publicly stated he would not hold another debate with Dukakis. The two candidates have debated twice on national television.

 Having dodged the so-called "L-word" and attacked Bush for repeatedly using the label, Dukakis acknowledged Sunday, "I am a liberal" such as Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy.
 "That's the tradition I grew up with," he said. "I'm not going to let the Republican Party pervert that word (liberal) or give it a meaning it doesn't have," he said in Fresno.
 Dukakis said he decided to align himself with America's liberal political tradition last week after hearing that some Missouri Republicans suggested that if Truman were alive today, he would vote for Bush.

"That's a tradition that I'm very proud of," Dukakis said. "It just seemed to me it was time to set the record straight."
 But when asked if he also likened himself to liberal Democrats such as George McGovern, Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale, Dukakis demurred.
 "I'm not going through the litany (of names), he said. "I'm proud of lots and lots of Democrats who helped to build this country. Mike Dukakis is in that tradition."
 With a scant 10 days before the election, Dukakis stormed California on a five-stop train trip as internal weekend polls from both campaigns reportedly indicated he is picking up support in major electoral states, including California. But the governor continued to trail the vice president.

may be solidifying. The telephone poll, by Time and the firm of Yankelevich Clancy Shulman, of 1,096 likely voters Tuesday and Wednesday put the race at Bush 50 percent, Dukakis 40 percent.
 In September, the poll found Bush leading the race 48 percent to 41 percent. In both surveys, 11 percent of those responding said they were undecided. Both polls had a margin of error of 3 points.

During the weekend, Democrats struck back at the Bush campaign for a flier sent to Maryland residents by that state's GOP that presented Dukakis and Massachusetts convict Willie Horton as "the team."
 Bearing the signature of Maryland Republican Party Chairman Daniel Fleming, the flier said "You, your spouse, your children, your parents and your friends can have the opportunity to receive a visit from someone like Willie Horton if Mike Dukakis becomes president."
 Dukakis immediately called on Bush to repudiate the flier and "take responsibility for what people do to his campaign."
 In a prepared statement, Democratic National Chairman Paul Kirk called the Maryland flier "one of the most vicious and scurrilous assaults yet on the character and record of Michael Dukakis."

Bush campaign Chairman James Baker, appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation" disavowed the Maryland party's flier as "totally out of bounds, totally unauthorized, was not authorized by our campaign."
 A Time magazine poll released Sunday indicated the Bush lead

Candidates state support for U.N.

United Press International

UNITED NATIONS — George Bush and Michael Dukakis do not seem to agree on much, but both presidential candidates have stated their support for the United Nations in statements released by a non-partisan group.
 In a statement prepared at the request of the U.N. Association of the United States of America and released Sunday, Vice President Bush said the world situation has made the United Nations a "more positive arena for constructive U.S. action and leadership in dealing with critical global problems."

"The dramatic turnabout in the Soviet approach to the United Nations, including the payment of its back dues, should not be dismissed out of hand," Bush said. "As a minimum, the United States should test the Soviets to determine how serious they are."
 In his statement, Dukakis charged the Reagan administration tried to undermine the international organization by withholding U.S. dues.

Bush did not refer to the huge U.S. debt to the U.N. regular budget, which stood at $451 million at the beginning of October and was reduced to $337 million last week when Washington sent two checks to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.
 The United States still owes about $70 million to U.N. peace-keeping operations. The Soviet Union has been paying up its arrears but still owes about $200 million to peace-keeping operations and $7.5 million to the U.N. regular budget.
 Dukakis said in his statement the United Nations "is one of the most valuable tools we can use in meeting the many challenges confronting the world today."

The Democratic candidate accused the administration of having "undermined the United Nations and hindered the efforts to confront these challenges."
 Dukakis said if he is elected services without voter approval.

 "The charter cannot be unilaterally used to usurp municipal functions," said Larry Arrington, deputy Volusia County manager and charter researcher. Yet, he said, "it is a way of mandating cooperation between the city and county."
 The most specific state-granted charter power affecting cities — but not needing voter approval — is the ability to approve or disapprove a city's tax increment financing districts. The special districts allow cities to skim increases in tax revenues from an area into a fund to rehabilitate or redevelop that area. Non-charter counties do not have that veto power over cities.
 For example, Altamonte Springs began their tax increment district in 1986 to help improve the traffic-strained State Road 436. The county opposed the measure because it took tax revenue away from the county that was needed to maintain roads in the area.
 County Attorney Nikki Clayton says the city and county eventually compromised by the city agreeing to take over maintenance of several roads in the area. Clayton says if the county had the veto powers then, commissioners likely would have turned down the city's plan in its present form.
 The proposed Seminole County Charter has a clause that allows city ordinances to prevail over conflicting county ordinances. A charter grants the voters of the entire county the ability to allow the county to impose certain regulatory powers over the cities. But that same voter-granted power might also allow cities to wrest some controls from the county.

within the municipality to the extent of such conflict."
 What that means is, except where the state has specifically granted the authority to enact ordinances countywide, such as collection of property taxes or a three-day cooling off period for handgun purchases, no county ordinance can be effective in a city unless the city commissioners want it to, according to experts.
 If the city doesn't want the county ordinance to be in effect in their city, they can pass an ordinance which addresses the same issue, but has different requirements and regulations. Courts have ruled that cities can't simply "opt out" by passing an ordinance stating the city doesn't acknowledge the county ordinance.
 The Seminole County Charter Advisory Committee, in its deliberations, pondered in depth the impact the charter could have on cities.
 After changing its position twice, the committee finally decided to stay with the present city prevalence stance. Seminole County commissioners made no changes in the committee's recommendation.
 At one point, the committee wanted the county to prevail in areas of regulation of air and water pollution, but Clayton said the county already has that authority under a 1967 special act of the legislature. The act allowed Seminole County to set up a pollution control board to regulate minimum air and water standards. The board has never been established.
 However, the charter can be changed by a vote of the people to grant the county certain powers over the cities.
 The issue is largely undefined except in several court decisions that say charter counties can pass ordinances which supersede city ordinances in regulatory matters, but not in the area of services.
 The landmark state decision on the issue is the 1978 Florida Supreme Court ruling that Sarasota County may not amend its charter to take over all air and water pollution control, parks and recreation, roads and bridges, planning and zoning and police functions for the entire county, including the cities.

 The court's decision says that in order for Sarasota County to take over all those services, it must hold a separate referendum in both the city and the county — not just one charter amendment referendum.
 Charter counties do have the authority to provide exceptions to the municipal ordinance prevalence clause with exceptions — again if those exceptions are approved by the voters.
 Broward County voters, in 1984, granted that charter county: the right to impose countywide handgun controls, regulating a cooling-off period, a decision upheld in the courts.
 Both Volusia and Broward Counties, through municipal ordinance pre-emptions, also have countywide control over land management. The issue was contested in Broward County, but upheld in the courts.

Experts investigate sea lion attacks

SAN FRANCISCO — Marine experts said a young sea lion that bit a man and a woman, both dressed in wet suits, was possibly ill and could still be lurking in San Francisco Bay.

Marine Mammal Center spokeswoman Mary Jane Schramm said Sunday that experts were stunned by the sea mammal's shark-like attack on an unidentified San Mateo man swimming off Aquatic Park on Saturday.

Schramm, director of public relations at the Sausalito center, said the marauding sea lion was "one of a kind" and she was glad that neither victim was seriously hurt.

The man, who suffered punctures from bites that pierced his wet suit, was given a tetanus update and antibiotic treatment and released, she said.

Mushroom victim in critical condition

PORTLAND, Ore. — One of four people who required liver transplants after eating extremely poisonous "death cap" mushrooms remained in critical condition today, while the other three were in serious condition, doctors said.

A fifth victim was improving and might not need a transplant, doctors said Sunday.

Teresa Duncan, 43, of Portland, received her new liver during a seven-hour operation Saturday at Veterans Administration Medical Center in Portland and was listed in critical condition.

Duncan is one of five people who ate the toxic mushrooms Oct. 22, and became ill the next day with serious liver damage. Two of the transplants were performed in Portland and two in San Francisco. The donors were found through a computerized organ matching system.

15 share one of three winning tickets

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A group of 15 people who pooled $600 to buy tickets for the record $60.89 million California Lotto jackpot spent the weekend "really partying" after one of their tickets came up a winner.

The group's winning ticket was one of three — each worth nearly $20.3 million — sold in Sacramento, Orange and San Diego counties as a frenzy of ticket-buying pushed the big prize to a world record, lottery spokesman Bob Taylor said Sunday.

Each winning ticket was worth $20,296,175 before a 20 percent deduction for federal taxes, said Taylor. The money will be paid in 20 annual installments of about $810,000 for each ticket.

That would be about $54,000 a year for each of the 15 people who put up $40 apiece and agreed to split the winnings if they beat the astronomical odds of 14 million to 1 of picking all six numbers.

Vietnam reports 100 dead in typhoon

BANGKOK, Thailand — Flash floods unleashed by a typhoon killed 100 people, damaged or destroyed hundreds of thousands of homes, and wiped out more than 300,000 tons of food crops, official Vietnamese radio said.

A translation of a Vietnamese broadcast on Radio Hanoi Sunday said the unidentified typhoon, which struck in mid-October, dumped from 7.7 inches up to 44 inches of rain in some areas of central Vietnam.

Another 28 people were reported missing in the typhoon, the seventh to hit Vietnam this year.

It said preliminary estimates showed that 44 percent of the autumn rice crop was destroyed in the central provinces of Nghe Tinh, Nghia Binh and Quang Nam-Danang.

Altogether some 350,000 tons of grain were destroyed, it said.

The report said 1,257 head of livestock were killed and more than 1 million other animals faced shortages of food.

Iran, Iraq set to begin new talks

GENEVA — Iran and Iraq swapped 50 wounded POWs in a mostly symbolic gesture on the eve of a new round of peace talks, but U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar warned the "situation is fragile" despite a two-month cease-fire in the Persian Gulf war.

Perez de Cuellar was scheduled to meet today with negotiators from both countries as Iran and Iraq return to Geneva for a third round of talks since the Aug. 20 cease-fire.

The last round of negotiations, which took place earlier this month in New York, ended with both sides bitterly divided over ownership of the Shatt al Arab, a waterway that runs along the border between the two countries.

Lawyers: Imelda a key player in racket

NEW YORK — Former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos was "heavily involved" in buying four buildings at the core of a federal racketeering indictment that could send her and her husband to prison for the rest of their lives, lawyers for the Philippine government say.

Marcos, 59, was to appear today with four other defendants before U.S. District Judge John Keenan for arraignment on an indictment brought under the government's Racketeer-Influenced Corrupt Organizations act, or RICO.

Her husband, former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos, 71, said his weak heart made the trip to New York impossible, and his arraignment was postponed. Ferdinand Marcos remained in his home-in-exile on the Hawaiian island of Oahu, and Keenan was considering his request to be arraigned there.

The Marcoses face four RICO counts and, if convicted, each faces a maximum of 50 years in prison and fines totaling $1 million.

Kidnappers release video of Anderson

Hostage claims more effort has been given to trapped whales

United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Islamic Jihad Group today released a videotape of Terry Anderson, the longest-held U.S. hostage in Lebanon, in which the captive accused U.S. officials of being more concerned with the plight of three trapped whales than with freeing the hostages.

In the 5-minute videotape released on the occasion of his 41st birthday, Anderson also criticized U.S. presidential candidates Georges Bush and Michael Dukakis for not focusing enough attention on the hostages in their presidential campaigns.

"I gather there has been little discussion on the presidential campaign on the hostages," Anderson said. "Whichever candidate who would win the elections should remember that the unyielding refusal to deal with this matter is not going to make it go away."

Anderson was clean-shaven and looked calm and relaxed. He was wearing eyeglasses and a gray sweatshirt as he read from a statement with a strong and clear voice.

He appeared bitter and cynical as he criticized the U.S. administration for putting forth more effort to save the three whales trapped in ice above the arctic circle than to end the hostages' plight.

"I heard on the radio of the generous and ambitious efforts to free the whales and the president's thanks to the Soviet Union for its help," Anderson said in the tape, which his kidnappers said was released on the occasion of his 41st birthday. "It is a wonderful story. This kind of cooperation is necessary to bring this situation to an end."

Anderson, who on Thursday marked his fourth birthday in captivity, is a native of Batavia, N.Y., and chief Middle East correspondent for the Associated Press. He was abducted March 16, 1985, in Moslem west Beirut.

In the videotape, which was delivered to a western news agency, Anderson said he had been on the verge of being released several times in the past two years, "but each time (it) seemed that the U.S. government used its influence to stop any agreement that had been made, and I don't understand this."

"I am not asking President Reagan to deal with terrorists, although I hear Mr. Bush did so in the Iran-contra affair and the TWA hijacking," he said. "Our problem could have been solved long ago without such complications."

Anderson referred to the scheme by U.S. officials to secretly ship arms to Iran in 1986 in hopes of winning the release of American hostages. U.S. officials also pressured Israel to free some 700 Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners in return for the release of 37 Americans involved in the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner.

The captive said Bush, if elected, should use his position to bring about a quick release of the hostages.

"It is disappointing... President Reagan's complete failure to find a solution during his eight years in office," he said.

Addressing his family, friends, and colleagues, Anderson said: "I love you... I miss you very much... I know of the continued strong efforts... Thank you greatly for what you did to me."

"I am well, being well treated," he continued. "I received your birthday greetings and as always they helped."

Anderson ended his message by saying his captivity "has gone long, and it can't continue like this."

Addressing his sister, mother and his father, who died months ago, he said. "Kiss my daughter for me. Keep your spirits up and I am trying to do the same. One day soon, God willing, this will end."

In a short note attached to the videotape the Islamic Jihad said: "On the occasion of Terry Anderson's birthday, in response to his family's letters and according to his wish to send a televised message, we attach to this note a videotape filmed on Oct. 30."

Anderson's daughter Sulome, who was born after her father was kidnapped, appeared on Lebanese television Thursday to wish him a happy birthday.

Beside Anderson, Islamic Jihad holds Thomas Sutherland, a Scottish-born American from Colorado and dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut. Sutherland was abducted June 9, 1985, shortly after arriving at Beirut airport.

The pro-Iranian kidnappers have released two statements in the past eight days repeating their threat to harm the two Americans unless certain demands were met.

In the second statement, the group also denied any link to an Arab woman who was arrested in Italy last week. The woman, Aline Ibrahim Rizkallah, was carrying pictures of foreign hostages in Lebanon, including Anderson.

Navy puts electronics program on spike

United Press International

WASHINGTON — After a decade of what auditors called chronic mismanagement, the Navy has taken the unusual step of spiking a $5.1 billion electronics program aimed at warding off enemy interference with plane and ship communications.

Navy spokesman Kenneth Ross said last week that research and development work on the High Frequency Anti-Jam program will end Dec. 31 "for budgetary reasons," adding "The Navy does not anticipate" requesting a resumption of the program for at least two or three years.

An internal audit found the program plagued for more than a decade by uncertainty about its need, numerous delays, "unrealistic" tests, cost overruns, incompatibility with other services' systems and lax oversight of contractor work.

The September 1987 report said that on one five-year contract ending in 1985, Rockwell International Corp. improperly charged costs to work previously reported as completed, but the Navy never questioned the incorrect charges. A Rockwell spokesman denied any wrongdoing.

"This program was started without well-defined objectives," the Naval Audit Service report said, "and over the past 11 years inadequate management support and direction have caused numerous program changes."

"In our opinion, program instability and lack of support indicate low priority and a lack of program criticality," said the report, which was obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

A Senate Armed Services Committee aide said the Navy, in seeking budgetary cuts, "may have looked for a program where they suspected the management was less than stellar."

During its 12-year history, concerns about the program were expressed by Secretary of the Navy John Lehman, the Defense Department inspector general's office, and the congressional armed services committees.

In response, the Navy's Space and Naval Warfare Systems Command in Washington continually redefined and restructured the system.

Navy spokesman Brian Cullin said senior Navy officials decided last December to cancel the program, on which $150 million has been spent since 1975. Navy plans called for $5 billion more to be spent on continued research, production and operation into the 1990s.

The anti-jam system was one of only a few programs killed by the Navy this past year. Cullin said the Navy had not publicly disclosed its action until now.

Many Pentagon and congressional officials agree that the Navy continues to need an anti-jam capability.

Israeli mother, children die in West Bank attack

United Press International

JERUSALEM — In the worst attack on Israeli civilians since the start of the 10-month-old Palestinian uprising, a mother and her three children were burned to death by Molotov cocktails that set ablaze a bus traveling through the West Bank.

The army, meanwhile, bolstered its forces in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to prevent violence in Tuesday's national elections, seen by many Israelis as the most crucial in the nation's history.

An army sergeant who was on the bus said he tried to rescue the woman, but she refused to leave her children on the vehicle that was engulfed in smoke and flames Sunday night in the West Bank town of Jericho.

"She didn't want to go, she said, 'But, I have a baby,'" the sergeant told Israel Radio. "After a few seconds I realized I couldn't stay another second because the situation was very bad. With the last of the strength I had, I escaped from the bus."

Five passengers also were wounded in the firebombing, an army spokesman said.

The woman and her children were from Tiberias, Israel, the spokesman said, but declined to release their names or ages.

The bus, traveling from Tiberias to Jerusalem through the Jordan Valley, came under attack in Jericho, about 15 miles east of Jerusalem, the spokesman said.

Five passengers were treated at Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem with injuries suffered in the incident, a hospital spokeswoman said. Two were in serious condition and two in fair condition, most with burns on their faces. A fifth person was treated for a cut and released, the spokeswoman said.

The attack was the worst on Israeli civilians since the Palestinian uprising began on Dec. 9. On April 11, 1987, a firebomb hit a car near the West Bank town of Kalkilya, killing Ofra Moses and her 2-year-old son. Four other family members were wounded in the attack.

On May 21, a Palestinian man and his 65-year-old mother burned to death when their car was hit by a firebomb on a dark road near the northern West Bank town of Tulkarm. Their car apparently was mistaken for an Israeli vehicle.

Seven Israelis, including the bus victims, have been killed since the start of the uprising against Israeli occupation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 289 Palestinians have died in the violence.

Five Molotov cocktails hit the No. 961 bus at 8:15 p.m. near the Ibrayma junction on the north side of Jericho, state-run Israel Radio said. The bus, operated by the Egged bus company, was completely burned, the radio said.

The sergeant who tried to take the woman off the bus, identified only as Ron, said army patrols had ordered everyone off the vehicle.

The 21-year-old soldier, interviewed at Hadassah Hospital, said the bus was one-third to half full. He told the radio that the bus driver stopped immediately when the firebombs hit and told everyone to get out.

Three ambulances and an army helicopter arrived to take the wounded to hospitals. Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and armed forces Chief of Staff Brig. Gen. Dan Shomron visited the site.

A high military officer told the radio that young Palestinian activists had carried out similar attacks at the same spot.

Rangers win but pay the price

The New York Rangers paid dearly Sunday night for their 9-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Penguins.

In the second period they lost Jan Erixon, their most effective forward this season, for an estimated five weeks because of a knee injury. In the third period they lost defenseman David Shaw, who undoubtedly will receive a suspension from the league for chopping Mario Lemieux below the throat with his stick.

Although the Rangers stretched their winning streak to seven games, their longest in 10 years, and improved their record to the best in the league, the seeds for their demise were sown.

The Penguins, who obviously needed more motivation than simply taking over the Patrick Division lead, now have a vendetta against the Rangers, and as New York Coach Michel Bergeron noted, "We have six games left against them (in the regular season)."

Mansdorf wins Paris Open

PARIS — Israel's Amos Mansdorf mixed a hard serve with precise ground strokes Sunday to overwhelm American Brad Gilbert, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, in the final of the Paris Open tennis tournament and earn a $262,000 paycheck.

Mansdorf, the 33rd-ranked player worldwide, had earned only $102,417 the entire year until Sunday, when he controlled the match with his powerful serve and spinning forehands that skidded on the hard indoor surface.

Gilbert, ranked 23rd, added a $131,000 second-place prize to his previous 1988 earnings of $134,020.

The $262,000 won by Mansdorf represents the third biggest payoff of the tennis year, surpassed only by the top prizes at Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

"This is the biggest tournament I have won so far," said Mansdorf, who avoided having to face world No. 1 Mats Wilander in the first round when the Swede dropped out minutes before the match because of the flu.

Senna clinches world title

SUZUKA, Japan — Brazilian Ayrton Senna clinched the 1988 World Driver's Championship Sunday with a come-from-behind victory over McLaren teammate Alain Prost in the Japanese Formula One Grand Prix.

Senna, whose poor start out of the pole position left him in 14th place after the first lap, fought his way past Prost to secure the victory in 1 hour 33 minutes and 26.173 seconds.

Prost, from France, finished second, 43.3 seconds behind Senna in 1:34:39.536 in the 51-lap, 185.670-mile race at Suzuka Circuit. Thierry Boutsen of Belgium, driving a Benetton, placed third with a time of 1:34:02.282.

Senna's win, his eighth of the season, increased his championship points tally to 87 and gives him an insurmountable three-point lead over Prost with only the Australian Grand Prix in November left in the 16-race series.

Greyhounds win Duel II

Free relay gives Lyman SAC crown

By CHUCK BURGESS
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Usually when a sequel is made of something, whether it be a movie, a book, or a good play, the original is almost always better than its offspring. However, at Lyman High School, the Greyhounds and the Lake Mary Rams went at each other in The Duel in the Pool Part II — The Hounds' Revenge; and this one was a box office smash.

Saturday's Seminole Athletic Conference swimming championship was another classic confrontation between the two best teams of the conference in the Greyhounds and the Rams, however the ending to this story was different from its predecessor in that the Greyhounds reclaimed the title that was stripped from them a year ago by the Rams.

Professional writers couldn't have thought of a better script to write. The scene: Lyman High School. The teams: defending SAC champion Lake Mary Rams vs. the hungry Lyman Greyhounds. The plot: In the Duel in the Pool Part I — The Upset, the Rams came from nowhere to dethrone the longtime SAC champion Hounds, but this year the Greyhounds were on a mission to take what was rightfully theirs.

The stage was set for the Greyhounds but it didn't look good going into the last event, the 400 free relay, as the Hounds trailed by 4 1/2. However, a storybook ending was in store for Don Clark's Greyhounds as they took the final event by 15 seconds and slipped past the Rams 281-279 1/2 in the closest SAC meet in history.

"Lake Mary stole it (SAC title) from us last year and we stole it right back this year," an elated Lyman's Chuck Reinighaus cruises to first place in the 200 individual medley.

Dave Bandy said after the Hounds were given the championship trophy. "We came out here fired up today after losing to them last year and there was no way we were going to lose to them (Lake Mary) again. The meet was about as close as you can get. I'm just glad we pulled it off."

In the first event of the meet, the Rams came out on top with Brad Bridgewater, Karl Kuchma, Zack Simecek, and Rob Baker snooked to a victory in the 200 medley relay with a time of 1:45.41. The Greyhounds were in a heavily contested battle for second with Lake Howell, but managed to squeak by 1:53.26 to 1:53.56.

"Our medley relay did a good job," Lake Mary head coach Walt Morgan said. "That will probably be our relay at state with Steve (Kostowicz) swimming the free leg."

In the second event, Lyman junior Dave Bandy came alive and backed up his words of reclaiming the throne as he sprinted to an early lead and then blasted to the wall to take the 200 freestyle in 1:44.73.

Lake Mary's Brad Bridgewater finished second at 1:48.8 and Lyman's versatile Nick Radkewich touched in third at 1:54.19.

"In the 200 free I just took the other guy (Bridgewater) out of the race early and held on," Bandy said. "I think the meet was more important to me this year than last year. The people were more fired up this year too which I think was the difference."

TAMPA — The old man was victimized by the youngsters.

Tampa Bay's Joe Ferguson, at 38 the oldest player in the NFL, shredded Miami's pass defense for 291 yards and two touchdowns Sunday but was undermined by rookie mistakes as the Dolphins held on for a gift-wrapped 17-14 triumph. Three third-quarter fumbles by rookie running backs led to all of Miami's points — a pair of Dan Marino TD passes to Mark Clayton and a 31-yard field goal by the erratic Tony Franklin.

The Dolphins improved to 5-4 with their fourth victory in five games while the Buccaneers, 2-7, suffered their fourth consecutive loss. Ferguson started at quarterback ahead of struggling Vinny Testaverde and passed with amazing precision, but his efforts were undermined by five Buccaneer turnovers.

"Ferguson did a great job for them but they just had too many turnovers," said Marino, who

Tampa Bay: Day late and dollar short

By DAVID CONCORAN
Herald correspondent

TAMPA — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Miami Dolphins renewed their in-state rivalry Sunday before 67,351 emotional Tampa Stadium fans.

The game had everything you can ask for — on and off the field. There were several "mini-wars" within the stands, between the Bucs and Dolphins fans.

And on the field, "Dolphin Danny" (the Dolphins mascot) and "The Big Buc" (the Bucs mascot) had their side battles also.

Both ended up in a draw.

And what about the game itself? It was just like the past three Bucs-Dolphins games played (1976, 82, 85). The Dolphins taking charge early on, and the Bucs making a late comeback, but falling just short in the end.

Many thought the game would be a high scoring affair, with quarterbacks Dan Marino of the Dolphins, and Vinny Testaverde of the Bucs at the controls.

Oviedo's Frank Diaz tries to elude Seminole High linbacker Julius Bennett during Friday's action at Oviedo High. Diaz had another good night for Oviedo, running for over 100 yards, but the Lions dropped a 10-6 decision to Seminole in a District 4A-7 battle. Seminole kept its hopes for a second consecutive district title alive with the victory. Oviedo must defeat Edgewater in two weeks to set up a three-way playoff (Seminole-Oviedo-Leesburg) for the 4A-7 crown. For a roundup of Friday's games, see Page 2B.

Injuries hamper UCF's chances against Southern

By DAVID CORCORAN
Herald correspondent

ORLANDO— The University of Central Florida's 31-17 defeat at the hands of the Georgia Southern Eagles Saturday night at the Florida Citrus Bowl was no surprise.

The Eagles, ranked 6th in the Division I-AA poll, proved too much for the Knights to handle. But the Knights were also hurt by three key injuries that hampered their offensive effort.

Especially at the quarterback position in which they might have lost their two top players for the rest of the season, Shane Willis (starter), and Rudy Jones (backup).

And that has to give UCF Head Coach Gene McDowell a "real nightmare."

Jones, who got his first start in place of Willis because Willis suffered a slight shoulder sprain in the Knights 48-19 blowout loss to Valdosta (Ga.) State the week before, suffered a possible achilles tendon injury that could put Jones out for the rest of the season.

Before the injury, Jones, a redshirt freshman from Miami, showed the crowd of 28,881 that he has the ability and talent to make it on the college level.

Jones was 10 of 17 for 154 yards, including a beautiful 41 yard flea-flicker pass from Jones to Shawn Jefferson, that tied the score at 7-7 early in the first quarter.

Willis then came in to replace Jones, and despite playing hurt, he was 10 of 18 for 118 yards.

But all that Willis could lead the Knights to was a 40 yard field goal by Blake Holton to cut the gap to 17-10 with 1:38 left in the third quarter.

Willis showed great courage in the time that he played as he risked further damage to his shoulder (left), but he was without his usual zip on his throws.

But Willis also went down late in the fourth quarter when a Georgia Southern player speared Willis in the shin, and Willis had to be carried off the field.

After the game, Eagles coach Erk Russell told Willis: "I have a great deal of admiration and respect for you after the great deal of physical abuse you took against Valdosta State. You played with guts, and you and Jones are great talents."

Shane then told Russell: "Thank you sir. I gave it all I had."

Russell then spoke of Jones: "He played a hell of a game when he was in there, and those receivers Sean Beckton (7-124-TD) and Arnell Spencer (5-94) are really great players. You really hate to see anybody get hurt (Willis and Jones), but sometimes it happens. Football is a tough sport, but injuries are part of the game."

Freshman third-string QB Ron Johnson from St. Pete then came in with about three and a halfminutes remaining in the game, with the UCF trailing 31-10. Johnson, on his first offensive series as a Knight, led them to a score, a 17 yard TD pass to Beckton with 1:58 left in the game that made it 31-17 Eagles.

But by that time it was too little, too late. "It felt great that I did well under the circumstances, especially throwing my first pass in college for a TD," said Johnson.

McDowell is very high on Johnson, who played at St. Pete Northside Christian.

The other injury that hurt the Knights on offense was a concussion that running back Gilbert "Hurricane" Barnes sustained on his first carry of the game.

Without Barnes, the Knights were held to just 41 yards rushing for the entire game, 22 by freshman Kevin Gallin on carries.

The loss of Jones, Willis and Barnes were too much to overcome, as UCF scored only 17 points, their lowest total of the season.

District races mind boggling

By CHRIS FISTER
Herald sports editor

A few weeks ago, the football coaches in District 4A-7 and 5A-4 could wake up Monday morning to eggs over-easy. The picture in both districts was pretty clear at the time, with one or two teams dominating.

After this past week's games, though, there's only one way the coaches could have wanted their eggs this morning — scrambled.

Between them, 4A-7 and 5A-4 have a zillion possibilities with a bunch of teams possibly playing in a multitude of tiebreakers. District 5A-5 could join the crowd if Apopka can pull off a big upset this week.

Here's the story: In District 4A-7, Seminole High threw the whole thing up for grabs with a 10-6 upset victory over Oviedo's Lions.

At this point, Seminole and Leesburg are 2-1 in the district and Oviedo is 1-1. The last district game of the year is Nov. 11 when Oviedo, which could have all but wrapped it up with a win over Seminole, hosts Edgewater. If Oviedo wins, it will force a three-way tiebreaker between Seminole, Oviedo and Leesburg. If Edgewater wins, Leesburg (which had defeated Seminole) wins the district outright.

"We won the one that counts the most," Seminole coach Emory Blake said. "Now I hope the team can settle down and do what its capable of. Our young kids are starting to come together nicely. They've been working hard and the results are starting to come."

The results of District 5A-4 won't be settled for at least another week. The only game this week is Mainland at Lake Howell and that won't have much bearing on the district unless Mainland pulls a major upset.

The way it looks now is Lyman and Lake Brantley are sharing the driver's seat at 3-1. In the passenger's seat and not out of the picture are Lake Howell (3-2), DeLand (2-2) and Spruce Creek (2-2).

The possibilities in this district are mind boggling. Lyman still has to play DeLand and Lake Brantley; Brantley has Spruce Creek and Lyman; Spruce Creek has Brantley and DeLand and Lake Howell has only Mainland. Any combination of wins or losses could produce either an outright champion, a three-way tie or as much as a five-way tie. Good luck running off that tiebreaker.

The clearest district at this time appears to be 5A-5 with Evans and Apopka battling for the top spot this Friday night. As Winter Park quarterback Clay Hair looks for somewhere to go against Evans. Evans wound up winning the game, 32-25. The Trojans play Apopka this week in a game that could decide the 5A-5 district title.

It stands now, Evans is 5-0 with Apopka at 4-0 and Winter Park 4-1.

Apopka hosts Evans this Friday and Evans can clinch the district with a win. Apopka can take control with an upset but the Darters must then turn around and beat Winter Park the following week to clinch the district. If Apopka beats Evans and Winter Park beats Apopka, it's a three-way tie.

Turning to the Seminole Athletic Conference, Oviedo still leads at 3-1 with Brantley and Lake Mary (of all people) at 3-2 and Lake Howell at 2-2. Lyman, Seminole and DeLand, all still in district title races, are pretty much out of the SAC picture.

The big game this week is Oviedo at Lake Mary and the SAC title will be decided the last week of the season when Lake Howell plays Oviedo and Lake Brantley takes on Lyman.

Actually, it's pretty scary to think of all the possibilities in all of these district and conference races. But, then again, this is Halloween.

Hawks surge past Spruce Creek, 28-17

By TONY DeBORMIER
Herald sports writer

Once again, Lake Howell High School's Silver Hawks dug themselves a deep hole — and lived to tell about it.

A week after coming back from a 21-0 first quarter deficit to beat Lake Mary 35-28 in double overtime, the Silver Hawks bounced back from a 17-7 fourth quarter deficit to defeat Spruce Creek, 28-17, in a 5A-District 4 game Saturday night at Daytona Beach Municipal Stadium.

The win improves Lake Howell to 3-2 in district play, 4-3 overall, while Spruce Creek fell to 2-2-4-4.

With Lake Mary's win over DeLand, Lake Howell is in a three-way tie for third in the district with Spruce Creek and DeLand, all with two losses. Lyman and Lake Brantley lead the pack with one loss each.

"We pulled it out," said Mike Biscaglia, coach of the Silver Hawks. "We only played a quarter and a half, but we played well."

"At the half, we were losing 3-0. The defense was doing a good job and the offense was putting together some good drives, but they couldn't put the ball in the end zone."

Things got worse for Lake Howell as Spruce Creek scored on its first play from scrimmage in the third quarter on a 70-plus yard run. The Silver Hawks came back to close to 10-7 on a 25-yard scoring run by Cortez Graves, but Spruce Creek increased its lead to 10 again with a touchdown early in the fourth quarter.

"It didn't look good for us," admitted Biscaglia.

That's when sophomore sensation Marquette Smith got into the act. Or more precisely, took over the show.

Smith, who led the Silver Hawks with over 250 yards rushing (Lake Howell finished with approximately 330 yards rushing as a team), scored three touchdowns in the last quarter on runs of 69, 4 and 44 yards.

"Maybe we're going to have to jump start these guys," joked Biscaglia. "It seems they have to face adversity before they start playing football. But it's a good sign, I guess. They showed a lot of character."

No more so than linebacker David Collins, who, by game's end, was just about the only able-bodied linebacker the Silver Hawks had.

"We ran into a lot of adversity," said Biscaglia. "Our other starting linebacker, Greg Astle, was sick with the flu. We had to start Jason Rosenblatt, one of starting offensive guards, at linebacker and he got hurt. Then we had to put in our third string linebacker."

Even with the patchwork lineup, the Silver Hawks managed to do the job.

"The kids showed a lot of character," said Biscaglia. "Our reserves really picked up the slack."

On offense, the Silver Hawks didn't do much but shove the ball down Spruce Creek's throat, with Smith doing most of the shoving. According to Biscaglia's unofficial stats taken on the sideline during the game, Lake Howell finished with about 365 yards of total offense, 328 rushing, 27 passing.

"It was one of our most productive games of the season," said Biscaglia. "We didn't need to throw a lot. We haven't had a chance to grade the films yet, but offensive linemen Kevin Schaefer and Jason Campese both looked like they had good games."

This week, the Silver Hawks return to the regular Friday night schedule, hosting district foe Mainland (0-4, 1-6) in their homecoming game. Lake Howell finished the season with Seminole Athletic Conference games against Seminole and Oviedo.

Miltonberger still peaking

By CHUCK BURGESS
Herald Correspondent

Usually in swimming, an athlete hits his or her peak between the ages of 17 and 22. However, one Sanford swimmer disproves this theory as he has not only hit his prime, but still continues to improve each year.

Dr. Chester Miltonberger is one of the top swimmers in the world, but you didn't see him interviewed by Bryant Gumbel on an NBC personal profile during the Summer Olympics, nor did you see him on the 11 o'clock news shaking hands with Ronald Reagan at the White House. But, if you were in Brisbane, Australia for the Masters World Games this past month then you probably know that Miltonberger is now the premier swimmer in the men's 35-39 age category in the world.

Miltonberger, who is a practicing doctor of internal medicine in Sanford, won three individual events and three relays at the Games in Australia. Already holding world records in both the 50 and 100 meter breaststrokes, Miltonberger splashed his way to victories in the 50 meter breaststroke with a season best time of 31.5 and one in the 100 meter breast where he touched in at 1:10.4. Miltonberger also won the 200 breast in 2:38.2, but failed to capture the world standard for which he was training.

"I felt pretty good at the meet," the 36 year old Miltonberger said. "I bettered my times from last year and I had a good time in the process."

Working out in the water three times a week and hitting the weight room three times a week is the key to Miltonberger's success as this preparation enabled him to also stake his claim to three relay world records in Australia.

"I try to get in the water three times a week, but I always lift weights three times a week," Miltonberger, who has been swimming since he was 12 years of age said.

At Brisbane, Miltonberger also took a second in the 50 meter freestyle in 25.5 and added a third in the 100 meter free with a time of 56.0. "It was a long meet and a long trip," Miltonberger said. "The meet lasted six days and started at 8 a.m. in the morning and lasted until midnight each night. I think if the meet was a little shorter and the flight wasn't as long I would have done a little better."

Miltonberger, who trains from February to October, will now take the winter off, but will come back in the spring with a fresh attitude and a new sense of determination to break his own records as well as the 200 breaststroke in the World Games in Copenhagen, Sweden.

"I'm hoping to finally break the ones (records) I hold at this time and even get the ones that I didn't get at this year's Games," Miltonberger said. "It's all a matter of me training a little bit harder. I think I'm going to put a little more time in the water and see if that will make a difference."

If Miltonberger's year is anything like the one he had this year, then his competitors in Copenhagen need only know one thing — The Doctor is In.

Sandy Wood wins top prize

By JIM RICKENBACKER
Herald correspondent

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Sandy Wood, wife of Winter Springs Golf Club pro Dan Wood, was strolling on the beach Saturday morning. She entertained thoughts of sticking around to enjoy the sunshine but remembered she had told her husband she would be home by noon.

Just hours later, she passed through the spectators gate at the World's Finest Oldsmobile Golf Classic and became the winner of the 1989 Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme International Series-Grand Prize in last Saturday's Everybody Wins Giveaway during the tournaments final round.

"My husband started to scratch off the ticket and said, 'Sandy, this says Oldsmobile Cutlass Supreme on your ticket,'" she said shortly after winning. "My first reaction was that I probably didn't win. I didn't believe it so I asked the guy working at the gate and he told me that I had won. I started jumping up and down and everybody was telling me to be quiet."

"I thought she'd have to get into a drawing because I saw a number under the Olds Cutlass Supreme," said Dan, concerned that his wife's elation may disturb someone putting at Magnolia's nearby 18th green.

Dan purchased two tickets from an Oldsmobile dealer, figuring he just watch the final round on national television if his wife didn't show up by 1 p.m. That morning he had been out at Winter Springs Golf Club setting pin and tee placements in preparation for today's 36-hole mini-tour event.

"I didn't have any idea Dan had the tickets," said Sandy, a five handicapper and one of the tournaments original volunteers in 1971. "He said, 'honey, let's hop in my car, and go to Disney.' I said, fine."

"What's funny is that I had also thought about going to the Mount Dora Art Festival Saturday afternoon."

After tournament officials reaffirmed that Sandy had definitely won the car the couple began calling friends and relatives. Dan gave the guys at his pro shop a buzz, asking them to take Sandy's 3-45 spot with Buddy Pittman on WESH-TV's Saturday afternoon tournament special, and Dan called his mother-in-law in New York to alert her that her daughter may get a brief spot on national TV later in the day.

A physical education instructor at Stonewall Jackson Middle School, Sandy also took home a Mickey Mouse watch when she won the volunteer workers low gross tournament in 1972.

Something more than timed changed this past weekend, though. "This kind of stuff doesn't happen to a school teacher," added Sandy.

Connection hammers Ryder, 19-2

SANFORD — The Tim Raines Connection hammered Ryder Trucking, 19-2, and Ken Rummel Chevrolet ripped Ken Kern Transmission, 14-3, Wednesday night in Sanford mens softball action at Chase Park.

TRC was led by Sam Raines who ripped three doubles, drove in two runs and scored three others. Tim Raines added a solo home run, a double and a single with three RBIs and four runs scored. Joe Ervin doubled and singled, drove in two runs and scored two more. Rodney Turner singled, drove in a run and scored twice. Billy Griffith added a single and a run batted in. Eddie Jackson doubled and singled and scored twice. Fred Washington singled and scored. Thad Brooks stroked three singles and scored two runs.

Lady Patriots dominate SAC field

By CHUCK BURGESS
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD - Seminole Athletic Conference swim teams got a taste of what the rest of the state is in store for Saturday as the defending SAC champion Lady Patriots of Lake Brantley flexed their muscles by winning the conference meet at Lyman High School for the third year in a row with 441 points to runner up Lake Mary's 230.

Before the meet the only question was the margin of victory the Lady Patriots would end the meet with, but when the meet had ended the only question was who would drive the dump U Haul to move all of the SAC trophies from the Lyman High pool to Lake Brantley.

"We did what we expected to do," head Pat coach Clary Parnell said of his business-like Patriot girls. "It was nothing great as far as spectacular swims go. We used this meet to see how some of our younger kids would do on relays. I was happy with them. They did fine and I was pleased with their performance."

The Lady Patriots completely dominated the meet in every sense. From start to finish there was no question of Brantley's power and depth. Parnell, who is somewhat laid back considering he has one of the most complete teams in the state right now, was more than elated with his team's performance both in and out of the water.

"This team is more complete than the team we had last year," Parnell said. "Now we've got depth, but at the same time we have quality. They are also a lot more enthusiastic and intense than I've ever seen them."

Senior captain Kristen Pauley and versatile junior Jodee Lake led an all out victory assault as the Lady Pats went through the entire swimming portion of the meet without losing a single event. Pauley and Lake were the only individual double winners for the meet.

Lake was the most impressive as she powered her way into the lead and then completely dominated the 100 butterfly in 58.91. Brantley's Manda Davis and Beth Rosenbluth finished second and third, respectively with times of 1:02.64 and 1:02.66.

Lake Brantley's Ryann Pauley goes through the breaststroke leg of the 200 individual medley during Saturday's SAC championships. Pauley won the event and Brantley totally dominated the meet.

"We used this meet as a practice for the district meet in two weeks," Lake, who has only been swimming for two years, said. "I was a little surprised I went as fast as I did in the fly. I really didn't think I would go that fast, but I'm happy with the way we swam."

Earlier Lake destroyed the field in her specialty the 50 freestyle with her winning time of 24.37. Lake Howell's Lora Cotter was the closest to Lake with a runner up time of 26.45 and the Pats' Jill Spiller finished third with a 27.02.

"Jodee had a solid meet," Parnell said of the powerful

Lake. "She swam the best fly time of the year for her and she did better time-wise than anyone else."

Pauley took the stage next with a victory in the 200 freestyle by taking the lead from the start and then holding off charging teammate Jennifer Moon. Pauley would finish with a time of 1:59.16 to Moon's 2:00.21. Once again it was a Brantley sweep as Kristen Camino placed third with her time of 2:05.89.

"Today everyone came together," the exuberant Pauley said after the meet. "We've been working on our spirit and enthusiasm this year and we've been getting pumped up for the big meets."

Pauley came back in the 100 free for a big victory with her winning time of 54.62. Spiller was a distant second at 58.57 and the Silver Hawks' Cotter finished third with a 1:00.31 to spoil another Patriot sweep.

"It was a total rush," a happy Spiller said. "I'm happy with my races in the 50 and 100. I may have taken second in both of my events, but I'm swimming against the top performers in the state and they're both on my team. I think when I get to state I'll do well because I've been competing with the best every day in practice."

Pauley's younger sister Ryann would not be denied a victory in her SAC debut as she cruised to a victory in the 200 individual medley, winning it by five and a half seconds in the process, with her time of 2:13.78. Pauley later finished second in the 100 backstroke to Patriot teammate Moon.

"We have very high expectations for the state meet," the smiling Pauley said. "We've worked hard this year and I hope it pays off at state."

Patriot Camino, whose sister had won the SAC cross country meet the previous day, showed that endurance and winning runs in the family as she stormed to a win in the 500 free—the longest race in high school swimming. Camino finished with a time of 5:23.96, teammate Gina Story touched in second at 5:28.18, and Lake Howell's Tricia DeFrates came in third at 5:39.20.

"My 500 wasn't my best time, but I plan to make it to state," Camino said. "I'll swim faster at district and state because I'll have people there to push me to better times."

Moon added another first to go along with the other Brantley triumphs in the 100 backstroke with a winning time of 1:02.35. Pauley was second at 1:04.46 and Michelle McDonough placed third with a 1:10.21 clocking to complete the sweep.

The last individual victory came from Davis who dominated the 100 breaststroke at 1:10.78, and Dani Ohnman took second with a 1:13.25 clocking.

The Brantley relays also scored firsts as Moon teamed with Shannon Stevens, Beth Rosenbluth and Lindsay Seyler to wipe out the field in the 200 medley relay with a time of 2:01.89. Lake Howell touched in second at 2:07.22 and Lake Mary placed third with a 2:10.91.

The Lady Patriots did manage to let one event slip from their victory clutches as Lake Mary's Vanessa Rogers took the diving with 161.95 points. Oviedo's Erin McFadden placed second with 152.9 points.

As for the rest of the county, well, there wasn't much left to do but pick up fourths, fifths, and so on.

praise galore after the smoke had cleared from the Lyman pool deck. "Dave had the best meet he's ever had today," Clark said. "He was awesome. For him to go as fast as he did unshaved and untapered is incredible. It was a hell of a meet and Dave did a great job."

Following the 200 free, it was Greyhound senior captain Chuck Reinighaus' turn to take the stage. Reinighaus who still has yet to lose an event this season looked as if he was on a Sunday stroll in the park in the 200 individual medley as he walked away with the event by almost eight seconds with his winning time of 1:59.89. Kuchma from Lake Mary touched in second at 2:07.13 and teammate Chris Snively added a third with his 2:09.72 clocking.

"Chuck did exactly what he was supposed to do today," Clark said of Reinighaus. "He looked good and he'll be ready when state rolls around."

The 50 free was the next event, but neither a Ram nor a Greyhound could take the bragging rights away from Lake Howell's Chris 'Welcome Back' Cotter as he got off to a quick start, had an even quicker turn, and headed for gold with his winning time of 23.2. Simecek settled for second at 23.96 and the Silver Hawks' Ryan Laerzel took the bronze with a 24.51 clocking.

"I was very pleased with Chris' (Cotter) performance today," Lake Howell head coach Duwayne Picou said. "We're expecting big things from him at the state meet after the way he swam today. I think he can go a lot faster."

After the 50 freestyle, the plot thickened as the Lake Howell boys had a surprising 136-135 lead over the Greyhounds with Lake Mary a close third with 125 points. However, the lead would be short-lived for the Silver Hawks as the 100 butterfly got underway.

In one of the hottest rivalries in high school swimming, Bandy faced Lake Mary's Steve Kostowicz in the man's event, the 100 fly. The taller Kostowicz took the lead off of the start and maintained it for 95 yards, but the determined Bandy would not go down without a fight. From the backstroke flags in, Bandy buried his head and went for broke while Kostowicz found himself in a swimmer's dilemma in that he misjudged the finish. In what looked like a flashback of the Olympic race between America's Matt Biondi and Sur-inam's Anthony Nestor, Kostowicz found out what Biondi went through in the last five yards as Bandy touched underwater to nip the Ram 53.93 to 54.01.

"I got lucky," Bandy said of the exciting race. "I knew it was an important race when I was behind. All I tried to do was catch him. I was just lucky to barely outtouch him."

Lake Mary made up some points in the 100 free as Chris Snively touched in first at 51.44, just edging out Cotter's time of 51.47. Brantley's Scott Rowe rounded out the top three with a time of 53.33.

Lake Mary's Bridgewater made up for losing to Bandy in the 500 by beating Bandy's brother Jim 4:52.28 to 4:58.08.

Red Cross requesting hurricane aid

ORLANDO — The Central Florida Chapter of the American Red Cross is accepting monetary contributions only to help the victims of Hurricane Joan.

One should make his check out to the Central Florida Chapter American Red Cross, Disaster Relief. For specifics, contact Lisa Lorenze of the Central Florida Chapter at 894-4141.

Thousands of flood and storm victims have been turning to Red Cross disaster workers in South and Central America for aid after October's Hurricane Joan.

Early reports from the Red Cross societies in nearly half a dozen countries indicate that many people have been killed or injured, and tens of thousands of families have been left homeless in Columbia, Costa Rica, Nicaragua and El Salvador, said

Storm victims need help evacuating dangerous areas, shelter, first aid, emergency transportation to hospitals, and meals as high winds and as much as 20 inches of rain have pounded those countries.

"Braving the winds and floods, courageous Red Cross volunteers have helped reduce the number of deaths by moving people to safety during the storm," Schubert said.

Early government reports indicate that as many as 300,000 people have been affected by the storm in Nicaragua. Roads are impassable due to flooding, and bulk quantities of tents, blankets, cots, plastic sheeting, clothing, and medication will be required to support the displaced people, Schubert said.

Miss Altamonte Springs pageant entries available

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Miss Altamonte Springs Scholarship Pageant is seeking contestants to compete for the title of Miss Altamonte Springs 1989.

The pageant is an official preliminary pageant for the Miss Florida Pageant.

The local pageant will take place on Saturday, March 11, at Seminole Community College in Sanford. Last year's pageant awarded more than $7,000 in scholarships.

The current Miss Altamonte Springs, Christina Chauncey, 19, was one of the top ten semi-finalists in the Miss Florida Pageant earlier this year.

To qualify as a contestant, a young woman must be between the ages of 17 and 26, a high school graduate by Labor Day 1989, and never have married. Prospective contestants need not be residents of Altamonte Springs, but must live within a 75-mile radius of the city or a student at a school within that radius.

Entries in the local pageant are due by Nov. 15. For more information about the pageant, write The Miss Altamonte Springs Scholarship Pageant Inc., P.O. Box 152088, Altamonte Springs, Fla. 32715-2088, or call 788-7691 in evenings.

Mrs. Florida title up in air

Applicants are being sought for the title of Mrs. Florida 1989, who will represent her state in the Mrs. America Pageant to be televised in Hawaii on ABC-TV.

The 1989 Mrs. Florida pageant will be staged at the Sheraton Bal Harbour Hotel in Miami Beach June 2-3. The state prize is approximately $10,000.

To qualify, prospective entrants must be Florida residents, married, living with their husbands, U.S. citizens and in good health. Judging will be based on beauty of face and figure, poise, personality, grooming and overall appearance. No talent competition will be held.

For free entry information, prospects should send their name, address, age and phone number to: Christy Beck, Entries Director, Mrs. Florida Pageant, 11259-D Lockwood Drive, Silver Spring, Md. 20901. Entry deadline is January.

Rheumatic, scarlet fever are self-limiting diseases

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would rheumatic fever or scarlet fever cause impotence?
DEAR READER: To my knowledge, rheumatic fever and scarlet fever do not cause impotence. They are thought to be consequences of streptococcal infection, such as tonsillitis, and are usually self-limiting.

For more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Impotence." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-7769. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had radiation treatment for recurring malignancies in my right breast area. My doctor says I can never have radiation on that side again. What about routine chest X-rays?

DEAR READER: The amount of radiation from a chest X-ray is many times less than that from radiation treatment. You could certainly have chest X-rays without harm.

I suspect that your doctor meant that you have reached your limit for radiation treatment of your right chest area; further intensive radiation therapy might burn or destroy underlying tissue, such as lung.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What can be done to promote healthy hair, aside from throwing away the blow dryer and the curling iron?

DEAR READER: You can promote healthy hair by leaving it alone.

Use gentle shampoo or soap. Don't wash hair more than two or three times a week. More frequent shampooing depletes normal hair oil.

Avoid coloring agents and other chemicals that will attack the hair shaft.

Use low settings on hair dryers. Too much heat can injure the hair.

Avoid curling irons and mechanical devices that alter the texture (hence, the protein) of the hair.

Obtain prompt treatment of skin and scalp conditions, such as seborrhea, (dandruff) that can affect hair follicles. Eat a balanced diet. Hair needs a broad spectrum of nutrients, including vitamins and minerals, to stay healthy.

Seek medical attention for any prolonged change in hair quality. For example, diseases such as hypothyroidism (insufficient thyroid hormone) can cause coarsening and thinning of hair.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

The National Team of Four championship for the Spingold trophy was won in Salt Lake City last July by the team of Jim Mahaffey, Ron Andersen, Paul Soloway, Bob Goldman, Eric Rodwell and Jeff Meckstroth. Although this was Mahaffey's first major North American championship, the others on the team are previous world champions. One unusual aspect of this year's win is that Mahaffey's father won the same event two years earlier. Also interesting is that their victory this year was by one of the closest margins ever - a mere three international matchpoints (IMPs).

There might have been a different winner if Eric Rodwell, West in today's deal had not come up with the right defensive play. Against the three-spade contract, Rodwell led a trump. Declarer won in hand and played a diamond to the 10, jack and king. Back came the jack of clubs from East, won by South's ace. Now another diamond was taken by Rodwell with the queen. He knew that it was crucial to now attack the heart suit, but what card to lead? In fact he led the queen of hearts. That particular play caters to his partner holding A-J-10 or even just the A-J, since with the latter holding, declarer would likely duck with 10-x-x in his own hand.

The score for defeating the contract combined with the plus score in the other room netted the team four IMPs. Since the winning margin was only three, it doesn't take an Albert Einstein to figure out that Rodwell's careful shift to the heart queen was a play he and his teammates will long remember.

Dolls not just for kids anymore

United Press International

TOLEDO, Ohio — Doll collecting is no longer considered a child's game.

The doll business, which ranges from the exotic collectables to off-the-shelf Cabbage Patches, is a $5 billion a year business, according to a California manufacturer.

The editor of Dolls magazine, a publication for collectors and designers, says paying for a collector's dolls will take more than play money. The New York magazine annually issues Awards of Excellence for what it considers the best new dolls of the season.

Dolls announced its latest winners, including one costing $2,650, and highlighted them at a five-day show at a shopping mall in Toledo, Ohio, earlier this month.

Editor Krystyna Puray Goddu says dolls appeal to mothers trying to recapture a childhood memory.

"I think it sort of begins there—everyone remembers when they see doll they played with as a child or dolls you weren't able to have," said Goddu, the magazine's founding editor.

With other dolls, particularly porcelain styles that fetch thousands of dollars new, craftsmanship and art are the main attraction.

"Another big portion includes men who are attracted to it the way they would be to another piece of art. They're attracted to the sculpting," said Goddu, who attended the Toledo exhibit, which was billed as the nation's largest doll and teddy bear show.

Grandmother's old dolls may have become collector's items. Contemporary designers are also turning out playthings that may one day become classics.

"We're a collector magazine, so we write a lot about the art. But the line is getting thinner and thinner between a play doll and a collector doll," she said.

And because some of the finer dolls are compared to sculpture, one designer is being called the Michelangelo of their creators.

Rotraut Schrott is a 47-year-old West German woman who makes about 20 porcelain dolls a year at her home in Munich.

The daughter of a German painter, Schrott's fame stems from the attention she places on the doll's face and anatomy, creating veins, muscles and expressions that give each doll individuality and a child-like appearance.

The Great American Doll Co. of Anaheim, Calif., has made a limited edition of her "Martina" and sold all 2,500 copies shortly after it was introduced recently. The 26-inch figure has porcelain arms and legs and a soft body covered by a German provincial-style white dress.

The doll originally sold for $295. Later copies produced in a larger size, cost $200 more.

During an interview in Toledo where she made her American debut, Schrott said her main goal is to give the doll a life-like appearance.

"She must say something to you. You must think it's a child, you mustn't think it is a doll," Schrott said. "It must be as human as possible."

If $495 is a lot of money for a life-like doll, consider another Award of Excellence winner: "Cynthia," a 25-inch porcelain doll designed by Paulette April of Livermore, Calif., carried a $2,650 price tag.

The least expensive doll, a 19 1/2-inch vinyl and plastic figure from Italy that represents a newborn baby, cost $42, said Mary Jo Rathgeb, a publicist for the magazine.

Schrott says there is more to creating a collector's doll than sculpting an attractive figure. She also designs the clothes or buys them from flea markets and antique shows to give her dolls a certain appeal.

The fact that a German is creating a stir among collectors shows a progression of changes among some designers in the doll world, Goddu said.

German dollmakers earlier this century helped change people's perceptions of how a doll should look.

In the late 19th century French dolls were all the rage, and they didn't have character," Goddu said. "They were idealized children, they were romantic figures. They did not look like children."

Status doesn't sway position of non-smokers

DEAR ABBY: You are going to get clobbered for telling that military wife who wouldn't allow guests to smoke in her home. Rank has its privileges. I'd say that the commanding officer and such luminaries as JFK and FDR (if they were still living) would be welcome to light up wherever they please.

For as long as you have been writing your column, you should be aware by now how militant nonsmokers are. Some of them would kick their own mother out in 10 feet of snow if she dared to light up in their house.

I haven't bet on anything for many years, but I'd bet your mail will run heavily against you on that statement.

"PINK" PINKERTON, PICO RIVERA, CALIF.

DEAR PINK: Give the man from Pico Rivera a cigar! I am catching it from all directions. I did not say those luminaries would presume to light up without permission. I said I thought they would be welcome to. Big mistake. I blew it! My readers told me that I was wrong, and they were right.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asked,

"Why don't people who are sick stay home, instead of going to work and giving everybody else their cold, flu, or whatever they have that seems to be going around?"

I can answer that in four words: They need the money. Many jobs don't include "sick days"—it's no work, no pay.

Many days I've dragged myself to work feeling lousy, but I can't afford the luxury of staying home.

My last job allowed six days off a year. But nobody would dare to take them because it would reflect on their job performance record. If you were out sick more than six days, you were called in and "counseled"—and when it came time to be promoted, your work record was marked "not dependable."

Now, about keeping kids home from school because of sickness: In my son's school, they actually lowered his grade by a whole letter because he was out more than eight days in one semester.

My sister is a 27-year-old widow with two children, 5 and 7. She saves her days off without pay for their illnesses. Her take-home pay is $210 a week, so two days off brings her paycheck down to $126. Now you know why people don't stay home when they're sick.

RHODE ISLAND MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I do. And it's time employers showed a little more heart.

DEAR ABBY: Five million Americans have diabetes and don't know it! These people are at risk of serious complications if diagnoses and treatment are not sought in time. November is National Diabetes Month, so you can help by alerting the public to the symptoms of diabetes so it can be detected early: increased thirst, urination and hunger; blurred vision; itchy skin; slowly healing wounds or extreme fatigue (especially after a meal); or a tingling sensation in toes or fingers. You are also more likely to have diabetes if you are overweight, are over 40, or have given birth to a baby who weighed more than 9 pounds or have a relative with diabetes. Those at risk should be tested yearly for diabetes.

DEAR ABBY: I need to get this off my chest. My pet peeve is people who answer the telephone in a place of business and do not let you get a word in before they say, "Hold, please!" Then I'm put on hold. This absolutely infuriates me!

If they would only give me a chance to say, "This is a toll call, so please don't keep me holding too long." But I don't get a chance to say anything instead, I am left listening to elevator music and watching my telephone bill go up.

INFURIATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR INFURIATED: Unfortunately, there is nothing you can do when you are put on "hold" before you can say a word. However, you can tell them how you feel about this rude practice—when you're finally given a chance to speak. You can also write that place of business and threaten to take your business elsewhere. They may not change their policy, but you will feel better.

Shipyard boss vows to fight closure

United Press International

WARSAW, Poland — The director of the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, birthplace of the banned Solidarity trade union, said he will fight a government decision to close the facility for economic reasons.

Solidarity sources said Sunday that Poland's new industry minister, Mieczyslaw Wilczek, on Saturday gave director Czeslaw Tolwinski a "procedure of liquidation," a step-by-step process to close down the shipyard.

Tolwinski, reached by telephone Sunday night in Gdansk, would not directly confirm the order. But when pressed, Tolwinski declared he will fight the decision.

"I have not agreed to it," said an obviously agitated Tolwinski, who has managed the plant in the Baltic port for the last five years. "I am not going to be a gravedigger of the development of the shipyard."

Alojzy Szablewski, head of the shipyard's Solidarity committee, said he was shown the order by a source in the facility. He said Wilczek named Tolwinski the liquidator of the shipyard, but the manager refused to accept the order.

The shipyard, which employs 12,000 people, has been under threat of closure for the past year along with several other unprofitable enterprises. Last spring, the shipyard was informed by the National Bank of Poland that further government credits and subsidies were impossible.

Wilczek, a Polish millionaire who owns two of his own companies, recently took over as industry ministry in new Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski's Cabinet.

Szablewski called the industry minister's decision a "provocation."

"At present, as far as the economy goes, the shipyard is the most effective ever," he said.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, also reached in Gdansk, said he had heard rumors about the closing of the shipyard but preferred to wait until the information was verified before making a detailed statement.

But Walesa reiterated that Solidarity stood ready to help a true workers' self-government organization take over the yard and make it operate efficiently. "If Minister Wilczek wants us to show him how workers work in a shipyard, we will do it," he said.

The rumors of possible closure increased after a two-week wave of sporadic strikes in May.

Lenin shipyard workers also joined a strike started by coal miners this fall. The strike ended only after Walesa was promised during his first talks in seven years that the government that the possible re-legalization of Solidarity would be discussed at round-table talks which were to have begun in mid-October but have been stalled by continuing disputes.

In August 1980, Walesa headed an 18-day strike by Gdansk shipyard workers that led to the establishment of Solidarity a month later as an independent national union organization.

Martial law was declared on Dec. 13, 1981, and Solidarity was officially banned on Oct. 8, 1982. Martial law was abolished in 1983, but Solidarity remains outlawed.

Scientist revamps electoral college breakdown

United Press International

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Science has taken on politics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where a researcher calculated a mathematical theorem revamping the electoral college to elect American presidents.

"The way we vote for president is a subtle disaster for 10 million Americans, more or less," said Alan Natapoff, a research scientist at the school's Center for Space Research.

In an article entitled "More Robust Mathematical Voting Power in Presidential Elections Through Districting: The Overpowering Refinement Theorem," Natapoff outlined a plan to give states votes in the electoral college based on how many people vote in each state.

In the current system for electing presidents, the number of each state's electoral college votes is equal to its number of congressmen plus two senatorial votes.

"Many people think that's unfair," Natapoff said.

Although other proposals have been made to do away with the electoral college and elect presidents by popular vote, Natapoff said his theorem indicates that would not be the fairest way to elect presidents.

His theorem demonstrates that breaking down the country into "districts," as the electoral college actually does, is the fairest way to elect a president because it maximizes the potential effect of the individual's vote.

"The theorem says that you have more power under a districted system," said Natapoff.

A district system also forces candidates to pay attention to smaller, less populated states because small differences in votes in a particular state can tip that state to a candidate, giving them all the state's electoral votes.

But Natapoff said that while he endorses retaining states as voting districts, the system could be made more equitable if the number of each state's electoral college votes was determined by the number of people who voted and not the population.

"Our present system measures a state's size by the number of people living in the state. In my system, the 'Maximum Voting Power' or MVP system, a state size is measured by the number of votes cast," Natapoff said.

"It gives individuals more power over the national outcome. The most crucial thing of all is individuals would make a difference to the national outcome," he said.

"The MVP system best assures that individuals would have maximum voting power."

John Aldrich, a professor of political science at Duke University in Durham, N.C., said the plan could be beneficial if it encouraged more people to vote. But he was skeptical such a subtle change would have much of an impact on what has been a steady decline in voter turnout.

"Anything that makes turnout increase would be a big thing. But I doubt it would make a noticeable difference," Aldrich said. "On balance I might favor it (the proposal) but I wouldn't expect it to be a panacea."

Geologists solve mystery of Earth's missing crust

United Press International

PASADENA, Calif. — Geologists say they have found the mysterious missing layers of Earth's crust, solving one of the great geological puzzles and laying to rest the question of why the crust is so much thinner than comparable layers of Mars and the moon.

Don Anderson, professor of geophysics at the California Institute of Technology, said Sunday he and his team found the crust 250 to 400 miles beneath Earth's surface in a region of the planet's middle mantle, also known as the transition zone.

Anderson said the missing crust was found using a highly sophisticated technique that allowed the scientists to determine the composition of the planet's middle region by studying Earth's deep vibrations or seismic waves.

The crusts of the moon and Mars comprise 10 percent of those planetary bodies, but Earth's crust is only four-tenths of 1 percent of the planet's terrestrial mass.

The team of geologists said if this newly found crust was returned to Earth's surface where it originated millions of years ago, the outer crust would be about 125 miles thick instead of the estimated average thickness of only 12.5 miles.

Discovery of the crust material is evidence of the violence of the earthquakes that have helped create the mountains, islands and the shapes and contours of all the continents by forcing vast plates of Earth's crust into the planet's deep inner layers, Anderson said.

"The middle mantle appears to be a dumping ground for the huge slabs of crust that dive into Earth's interior at subduction zones," he said, "such as the 'ring of fire' (volcanic region) around the Pacific."

Earth consists of concentric layers of varying chemistry and density. The outer shell or crust forms the continents and basins of the oceans. Beneath that is the mantle, followed by a liquid core that surrounds the planet's solid iron center, located thousands of miles below the surface.

Anderson and his team speculate that because Earth's crust is broken into massive plates that slide around under the surface, this activity permitted portions of the crust to sink far into the mantle.

The mantle, which contains most of Earth's mass, is approximately 1,800 miles deep, but scientists know less about it than they know about the composition of the sun.

Anderson said.

Occasionally volcanoes or other processes bring to the surface samples from the shallowest parts of the mantle, but until now the deeper mantle has been totally inaccessible," he said.

Kennedy castle linked to Arthur's Camelot

United Press International

LONDON — The ruins of a Scottish castle owned by generations of Kennedys is believed to be the site of King Arthur's Camelot, and the legendary monarch could be an ancestor of President John Kennedy, Britain's authority on aristocracy said today.

The ruins of Greenan Castle are perched high on the cliffs of Ayrshire facing Ireland, about 80 miles southwest of Edinburgh.

Burke's Peerage, a firm that specializes in research necessary for transferring titles of nobility, said in a statement that it "discovered that the Castle of Greenan was almost certainly Camelot while King Arthur was in residence."

Harold Brooks Baker, publisher of the firm's book on aristocracy which also bears the name Burke's Peerage, called the discovery the most significant find by the organization in 150 years.

For centuries the owners of the barony and castle facing Ireland were the Kennedy clan in Scotland, who still own thousands of acres in the area.

"We believe a future owner would be delighted with such a close link to this most romantic of Britain's kings," Brooks-Baker said. "The discovery should entwine the names of King Arthur and President Kennedy for all time. The chance of there being a genealogical connection is very good indeed. We'll probably take a few months to determine if there is a connection."

Burke's Peerage specializes in the research necessary for transfers of Scottish medieval baronies, which are titles of nobility recognized by Queen Elizabeth II.

Titles are occasionally sold by large landowners in Scotland, a transfer possible because the title of baron is tied to land and not to blood. A title can be transferred with or without the land.

Author and university lecturer Norma Goodrich, an authority on King Arthur, said, "It was the custom of the king to refer to the castle he was using at the time as Camelot," which meant both Castle of the Hammer and Castle of Assembly.

"In my opinion, Greenan was one of King Arthur's forts," she said, confirming the research Burke's Peerage carried out for an unnamed client to allow transfer of the medieval Scottish barony of Greenan and the sale of a castle still standing at the site.

The legendary King Arthur, his knights of the round table and his wife, Guinevere — who supposedly fell in love with the knight Lancelot — have long been the subject of tales already popular in Wales before the 11th century. According to the legend, Camelot was the seat of Arthur's court and has been variously identified with sites in Wales and England.

New test helps detect lead in dishes

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A government laboratory has developed a fast, easy and inexpensive test that promises to help consumers detect excessive lead levels in their ceramic dishes, teapots and coffee cups.

The Food and Drug Administration scientists who developed the 30-minute test said serious cases of chronic lead poisoning have been reported in people who repeatedly ate or drank out of improperly glazed ceramic kitchenware.

The poisoning can lead to extreme irritability, appetite loss, severe stomach pains and anemia.

"We felt a need for a faster screening method in order for us to test more (dish) samples," Stephen Capar, an FDA scientist who helped develop the new test, said at a recent seminar.

When properly mixed and applied, lead glaze is not dangerous. But if the glaze formula is not properly mixed or the dishes are not properly fired, hazardous lead can leach out of the glaze and into food or drink.

The new test, which Capar said involves "about 50 cents" worth of material, involves placing a strip of filter paper wetted with citric acid on a flat surface of a ceramic dish. The acid, in a process similar to acidic foods like tomatoes or orange juice, leaches lead out of the ceramic.

After 30 minutes, the paper is spotted with a dye called rhodizonic acid dipotassium salt. If the paper turns dark pink or red, Capar said it indicates the dish being tested is releasing lead.

The FDA scientists are seeking to patent the new test, which Capar used on his own dishes and found excessive lead levels on an enamel-decorated glass that he bought at a yard sale.

Since 1971, the regulatory agency has limited lead levels in ceramic plates, pitchers, cups, bowls and pots used to serve, store or prepare food.

In order to make sure glazed dishes, especially those made in foreign countries, are safe, FDA inspectors test ceramic ware on a routine basis.

The process currently used to detect lead takes about two days for final results, and only a small percentage of dishes the FDA tests turn out to have potentially dangerous levels of lead.
