What has become of the old fashioned girl who used to play miniature golf?

Throughout this point up campaign, it might be good advertising not to paint anything blue.

When a candidate tells you that his life is an open book, he doesn't mean necessarily that he is red.

One thing about it, neither the Martin club nor the Sholtz club will be advertising their exclusiveness.

Stafford Caldwell has come out for John Martin, but they say that it's a lot easier to collect votes than to deliver them.

Prohibition is here to stay we are told by a man who declares that if necessary they'll preserve it in alcohol.

Dave Sholtz said that he was going to get lots of votes, but we thought he was only trying to fool us—Hardee County Herald.

When the headlines speak of "Young Rockefeller" coming out for repeal, they overlook the fact completely that he is fifty-eight years old.

And then another rumor they've gotten out is that Dave Sholtz is against the trucks. We don't see how that could be when he's driving a bandwagon himself.

Gen. Dawes has definitely announced that he will not be a candidate for the vice presidency giving positive assurance that Mr. Hoover's running mate will be the former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The surprise of the primary is how Stafford Caldwell could come out and stump the state for John W. Martin, after the things he said about Martin's administration when he was opposing him—Orlando Sentinel.

Depression has reduced the case prices of illegal liquor to the minimum, steady customers fall me. And when the bootleg business has to be satisfied with small profits the depression can be said to have arrived—Miami Post.

"Now is the time at the low ebb of business for advertising and merchandising ideas to be developed," says Harry Byrnes, governor of the fourth district of the Advertising Federation of America.

In the other state wide race Ernest Amos, comptroller was easily placed in the second primary with his opponent J. M. Lee. Mr. Amos, whose enemies have made capital out of the ignorance of the disreputable uniformed element in Florida should have no difficulty in winning out when the citizens of this state are made to view his administration in its true light—Tallahassee Democrat.

The defeat of Mrs. Owen, which could be attributed to her own mismanagement—would be a disappointment in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment—made it mandatory upon her to make no comment as to her own conduct as in all the years of her administration she had been a model of efficiency.

Federal Aid

To what extent is the federal government obligated to its citizens for their livelihood. When business is bad, and workmen thrown out of employment, is it up to the federal government to provide them with some form of dole, or is that a matter for local relief agencies, Red Cross, Salvation Army, Community Chest, to cope with?

A plan has recently been evolved in Congress which embraces both methods of relief. It is based on the assumption that the first duty toward aiding unemployed lies with the neighbors, the city, and the state, of the unemployed. But in such cases as these agencies are unable to adequately handle the situation, a fund of some $300,000,000 is provided out of which loans may be made to impoverished states.

Commenting upon this plan, the New York Herald Tribune has this to say: "How the money is to be raised is a question of practical convenience rather than of principle. Obviously it should be raised locally in the first instance, for only then can the full restraints of local acquaintance with the individual situation count effectively. But if local resources fail, can there be any question of state and Federal responsibility? We do not see how there can possibly be hesitation when the failure of local contributions is unmistakable."

"Mr. Hoover has taken an absolutely sound position, in our judgment, and Senator Wagner deserves praise for fostering a bill along the right lines. The $300,000,000 is to be loaned to the needy states, which are to pay interest. Here is a check upon greedy localities and here is also no real threat to Federal credit, since the ultimate responsibility of the states is hardly open to question, and the burden upon the Federal budget is therefore, secondary and negligible. Here is Federal aid that can be distributed widely and directly to those in need instead of being wasted upon marble porticoes, built by a few workmen, who may or may not be in need, but who must, in any event, receive high union wages."

"One way or another, the nation has always taken care of its afflicted generously and promptly, whether their need arises from an earthquake or a drought, or a depression. But it is the American way to administer such care through local and non-political agencies and to rely upon local resources for contributions so long as localities are able to shoulder the burden. Congress does well to provide against the possible needs of bankrupt localities next winter. In so doing it is but following the American method to its logical and necessary conclusion."

Call It Quits

The further the investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder case progresses the more evident becomes the fact that our metropolitan police forces, our special operatives, and our high-powered crime investigators are about as efficient and butter-fingered as a rookie cop in Wildwood. From the very beginning of the tragic episode the New Jersey state police and others connected with the solution of the mystery and the apprehension of the criminals have shown increasingly apparent signs that they didn't know what it was all about and that they were determined that the public shouldn't either.

No sooner had the news of the kidnaping been broadcast than Colonel Schwartzkopf, chief mogul of the whole investigation, began to beseech the press to refrain from printing certain details in connection with the crime in order to more easily facilitate the recovery of the child. This the press agreed to do, so far as was compatible with good journalism, and co-operated in every way possible.

But the Colonel's motives for as little publicity as possible now appear to be more the result of a desire to keep the spotlight off of his own incapacity rather than to assist in solving the crime. If there has been any step taken that has shown any earmark of brilliance or even ordinary intelligence, we have yet to hear about it.

On the contrary the case has been conspicuous by an inordinate amount of fairy chasing, of running about after some phantom lunatic who made monkeys out of the pursuers, of hoaxes and dead-end leads. Finally after many weeks of stumbling about, the great announcement was given out that the mystery had been solved. This was too good to be true and sure enough subsequent developments revealed that the authorities had again bungled and bungled badly.

This time they picked on an innocent servant girl in the Morrow household and used such gentle methods in questioning that they wrung a lot of false information from her, and incidentally, caused her to commit suicide.

This incident ought to be enough to make the police sign off in their futile efforts and give the job over to the Boy Scouts or Martha Anne's Day School for solution. Never has it been brought out more forcefully that our system of crime prevention and detection is thoroughly inadequate and ineffectual than in the pathetic and tragic handling of the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

The discussion of the influence of orange fruit on the citrus market is necessarily a discussion of cause and effect, as there is no effect without a cause. There is no subject in the minds of the citrus growers of Florida today so vital to the growers as the influence of immature citrus fruits in the markets of the country, as it affects directly the income of every citrus grower, not only in Florida, but in California.

Orange county, already noted for its good roads, is planning to bond a "roads district," comprising Sanford and the Calvary Delta. The money is to be used for the construction of vitrified brick main roads with shell, clay, sand and laterite. A community may be judged by the highways it maintains and it looks as if Orange county were planning to take a good one up yonder.

Irving and James Stridger went to Fort Valley, Ga., last Saturday to pack peaches. Mrs. E. E. Fitchell, who has been visiting at the woman's college at Tallahassee, is reported to be returning to her home in Geneva, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Blanche and her sister, Mrs. George, who have been at the college.

WHICH IS BETTER FITTED? MIAMI HERALD

The public trend toward John W. Martin for governor as shown by his commanding lead in the first primary has been strengthened by the realization that in the run-off on June 28, he faces a man only casually acquainted with state government and the execution of large constructive public programs.

By nearly 11,000 votes former Governor Martin led his nearest opponent, Dave Sholtz, of Daytona Beach, who made a determined last minute drive which caught the attention of voters in some of the cities of the state and enabled him, without campaign opposition, to jump into second place.

The campaign now assumes a different complexion with experience pitted against inexperience. The times call for a man to lead this state along a rocky road. They demand strength and experience and executive ability. Between John Martin and Dave Sholtz there is little comparison, for Sholtz is not only untried but also inexperienced.

The Sholtz campaign was based largely upon the premise that he is not a politician and that he proposes to give free school books to the common school children. He paid no attention to the other candidates and they in turn paid none to him, as a result of which there was no weighing of issues or balancing of statements so far as he was concerned. But in the next week and a half there will be a very considerable weighing of issues in the public mind. Of course, in West Florida, Sholtz is little known and cannot make much of an impression. Down the East Coast and through Central Florida, his campaign wagon went into thousands of nooks and corners. Over this territory he must now retrace his steps as John Martin carries the fight to Sholtz in a manner which has met and overcome some of the most formidable political timber this state ever has produced.

John Martin needs to make no further defense of his former administration. The voting public justified that at the polls last week. He needs to tell the people only what he proposes to do and the people will believe him, because they know he can and will perform his campaign pledges. But Sholtz now is on the defensive. He must explain a great many things that were not tossed back at him in the last campaign. He cannot longer continue to talk about free school books when we already have free school books, nor about a feature of the state insane hospital which he apparently does not understand. He is face to face now with stern opposition and with questions which loom large in the public mind.

That question now is: Which man is best fitted to govern this state as gauged by the individual record?

The July social meeting of the Sanford Progressive Club of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, held at the City Hall Monday night, attracted a throng of nearly 600 persons whose applause during a lengthy program, indicated that program directors had made a success of their assignment.

W. R. O'Neal, president of the First National Bank of Orlando and a prominent member of the Florida Republican party, was guest speaker. His address was concerned with the importance of a railroad to any community, both as a community builder and as a community server. He told how towns, cities, states and nations owed their development and progress largely to railroads and their enterprises, and he counseled all employees to be loyal and active workers for and with their firm.

Members of the Betty Ball Brown Dancing School comprised most of the talent presented on the remainder of the program, with all acts scoring a hit. Miss Patty Hodge opened this portion of the program with a dance, with Miss Marilee Torrance following with a song and dance. The audience called for encores on both numbers.

Miss Evelyn Hillis and Miss Joyce Whiddon, tiny "babes in blue" presented their difficult dance number to the loud applause of the audience, after which Mrs. Tom Hoy rendered a group of songs.

An adagio dance number, offered by Miss Mary Elizabeth Neely, Berner Winn and George Klinefelter, scored a decided hit, as did a group of vocal selections by Tito Trapp, and selections by the Purcell Quartet of Orlando. Miss Elizabeth Clark was accompanist for the dance and vocal acts, while Mr. Trapp accompanied himself on the guitar. The quartet was unaccompanied.

A feature of the dance that followed the program was a grand march in which a cash prize and four dozen roses were awarded the couple standing on a certain mark on the floor when the music was ordered halted. Mr. and Mrs. John Schirard were the winners of this prize.

The roses were grown in the Atlantic Coast Line rose gardens at Palatka by C. E. Thielen, Palatka agent. They are presented to every woman passenger of trains entering or leaving Palatka.

TO CERTIFY REPORTS

TALLAHASSEE, June 15.—(A.P.)—Official reports on the first Florida primary will probably be certified by the state canvassing board here tomorrow. Secretary of State Gray said today. Official reports have been received from 41 of the 67 counties and Gray said the board will meet tomorrow if other reports are received.

"It might say in passing," Caldwell continued, "that the editorial writer of The Tribune knows so little about his candidate that he claims Sholtz is a native Floridian when the records show he was born in Brooklyn, N. Y."

AL SMITH'S TEAM ROLLER OFF TO STOP ROOSEVELT

Goal Is To Block Governor And To Get Nomination Itself

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Alfred H. Smith campaign rally is under way, geared, according to the operating plans, to cut in ahead of the Franklin D. Roosevelt vehicle and grab the Democratic presidential standard for itself.

Mr. Smith conferred here recently with 17 representatives of the Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New Jersey and Rhode Island Democratic contingents, which will carry his candidacy into the convention with more than 100 votes—a meeting at which, saving his own presence, New York representation was conspicuous by its absence.

Primarily the meeting was called to select a nominator for Mr. Smith, and the unanimous choice of the conferees for this was Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, with Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, designated for a second speech.

Of chief interest, however, was the decision to back Mr. Joseph Shouse, of Kansas, national executive chairman, as permanent chairman of the convention—a decision avowedly at odds with the Roosevelt preference for United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, a dry, for this post.

Roosevelt managers take the Smith championship of Mr. Shouse seriously. They declare their stand for Senator Walsh is well grounded on a canvas of delegates, that they will go into the convention with more than the simple majority needed to control, and expect to bring about the nomination of the New York governor without any need of attempting to change the two-thirds rule governing selection by the Democrats.

The meeting saw the development of a complete organization for the handling of the Smith interest in Chicago. With their first objective the Shouse chairmanship, the forces of Mr. Smith will then turn to the task of making it apparent to the convention that choice of Mr. Roosevelt will mean hopeless dissension in the eastern Democracy to the extent of splitting the party the president.

Mayor Frank Hague, the Democratic chief, of New Jersey, is expected to be the field marshal for this program. The Smith forces will go along with those of Governor Roosevelt in sponsoring the choice of United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, dry, of Kentucky, for the temporary chairmanship of the convention.

The absence of New York Democrats at a recent meeting emphasized that Mr. Smith, like Mr. Roosevelt, is without assurance of support from the political organization dominating his own state.

Not even prominent party opinion apparently has been able to lessen the confidence of the Smith people that the 1932 standard bearer can be nominated again. The answer of Mr. Thomas F. Spallacy, of Connecticut, spokesman for the conference, to the query whether he felt that Governor Roosevelt could be stopped was:

"The purpose of this meeting was to form an organization for the nomination of Alfred E. Smith, and this organization will end in the nomination of Smith."

John Martin Opens Second Campaign In Monroe County

KEY WEST, June 15.—John W. Martin opened his second primary campaign for governor before an audience in Emory Park here last night. He discussed campaign issues and his program for rebuilding Florida. He said he proposed "eliminate the 10 percent property tax, reduce the gasoline and motor vehicle taxes, 25 per cent reduction in the cost of government and the attraction of new investments to the state."
"If you give me governor," he said, "I will give you the state of Florida back to the people. I propose to get down to a summary basis on all commitments of the state, to the end that taxes can be taken off your property and the investing public brought back to Florida."
The former governor declared he had kept every promise he made the people of Monroe county, in 1924 and that he had assisted this county every time it needed help, during his term.

"This was closed to corporate surplus at the end of the year," Nodder said.
"This class of adjustment is equivalent, however," he said, "to the taking up of a holding company of earnings of subsidiary companies, without such earnings being declared as dividends or otherwise made available to the holding company."
In another chart, Nodder showed an original cost of $402,523.94 for the system, he gave the 1929 book value as $978,174,481, listing as excess investments over stated value of capital stock $223,705,165.
Commissioner McCulloch, former Arkansas Supreme Court Justice, said he would consider Wilson's request for permission to place in the record data in support of his protest.

YOUNG BANKERS LOOKED TO FOR ECONOMIC RELIEF

Faith Is Expressed At Annual Convention Of Bank Institute

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 15.—Faith in the ability of the nation's younger bankers to aid in solving trade problems and restore economic equilibrium was voiced again and again recently at conferences and meetings of the thirty annual convention of the American Institute of Banking.

Before 1500 young men and women bankers who have gathered here to learn new methods for their profession, Mr. Henry J. Metzger, Cincinnati, president of the institute, declared that never in the world's history has the banker occupied a more important position in domestic or international affairs than he does today.

"These opportunities and responsibilities," he admonished them, "should inspire you to greater heights of responsibility and accomplishment."
The financial and economic future of America is within your hands," Mr. Frank N. Shepherd, of New York, executive manager of the American Bankers' Association, told them in the first formal address. "In the education and training of you and your 40,000 colleagues—more than the combined enrollment of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Cornell Universities—lies the hope of the country."

Although the business slump was discussed freely in conferences and speeches, interest in means of destroying or circumventing it overrode pessimistic speculation. More liberal credit and a sympathetic understanding of community needs were urged upon the bankers as their best means of overcoming economic stress. Excessive caution in making loans under the prevailing conditions in some cases has prolonged fear and unwarranted doubt, it was reported.

Calling upon the delegates to have confidence in America, Mr. Harold G. Parker, vice-president of Standard Statistics Company, New York, recounted hopeful signs.

Bankers should charge for many of their free services in justice to depositors and customer alike, according to Mr. Leo D. Kelley, vice-president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Company, St. Louis. High costs for gratuitous services are proving a serious and unnecessary burden to many banks, he said.

CHICAGO, June 15.—(A.P.)—The Florida delegation to the Republican National Convention decided today to support resubmission of the prohibition question to the states, but will oppose repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. This was announced by Burton Henson, Tampa, following an executive caucus of the delegation before entering the convention hall.

Dollar Has Secured Big Currency Victory

NEW YORK, June 15.—(A.P.)—The dollar glided in victory today while the financial metropolis had the end of Europe's long drain on American gold. The bank of France converted the last of its dollar balances into gold for eventual shipment in its own vaults. That meant America had successfully met all foreign demands on its gold supply, bankers said, and that the dollar emerged the winner from the severest pressure ever imposed on currency. Thereupon there occurred in the foreign exchange market the strongest bull movement in dollars seen in many weeks.
