Copper Cost High In War

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon wants to bombard Vietnam with more iron and Copper is more expensive than iron and the United States has been investing quite a lot of the metal around Southeast Asia in the form of artillery shells and small arms rounds.

Pentagon spokesmen say that in the case of larger shells—the 90mm, 105mm and 155mm—about two pounds of copper is expended per shot. Virtually all of this is in the shell's rotating band, which metallurgists believe can just as well be made lieve can just as well be made of iron.

Lesser amounts of copper are used in small arms projectiles and in the internal works of artillery shells.

According to the Pentagon, U.

S. forces in Vietnam fired roughly 15 million rounds of 90mm, and 155mm artillery shells between January 1966 and last May.

At two pounds of copper per shell, this indicates the United States shot off roughly 30 million pounds of copper in an 18-month period.

Pentagon spokesmen say defense supplies curently pay about 38 cents per pound for copper either from government stockpiles or from domestic producers. This is two cents higher than last year's price.

than last year's price. Just by saving that two cents per pound through iron substitution the Pentagon could, at current consumption rates, save $32,000 a month or $384,000 a year. Actual cost figures for the iron still are indefinite. Reduction of copper in war consumables also would help ease the drain on governmentowned copper stockpiles. The General Services Administration says there is no shortage of copper. But its figures show a severe decline in copper
