'Fastest Gun Alive' To Play Sunday Through Tuesday At Ritz Theatre

"The Fastest Gun Alive" is as unusual as its title. Playing with Glenn Ford and Jeanne Crain is Broderick Crawford & Russ Tamblyn with a big supporting cast. The M-G-M picture tells a story of the Early West but it is unlike any Western you have ever seen before. It is at one and the same time a thriller, a shock-and a suspenseful character study. It is the story of George Temple, a quiet, mild-mannered store keeper, and his wife, Dora, whose seemingly happy marriage hides a secret past, a secret involving the fact that George Temple is the fastest man with a gun in the whole West. What happens to him, to Dora, and to their fellow citizens of Cross Creek when three murderous men seek out Temple to challenge his reputation with a gun makes for spellbinding action. The surprise finish of the plot is probably the most remarkable ever devised for a screen play.

The new picture gives Glenn Ford his fourth outstanding characterization in a row, following on "Blackboard Jungle," "Trial" and "Ransom."

Jeanne Crain makes an about-face from her recent roles in "The Second Greatest Sex" and "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes."

There are more than 60 supporting roles in the cast of "The Fastest Gun Alive", with the picture also introducing newcomer beautiful Janet Lake, teamed romantically with Russ Tamblyn.

Much of the film was filmed on location in the Mojave Desert and includes spectacular sequences photographed from a helicopter.

Jeanne Crain is fearful of the consequences when her husband, Glenn Ford, finds the gun she has hidden from him. The scene is from M-G-M's thrilling suspense-drama, "The Fastest Gun Alive," co-starring Broderick Crawford. Starts Sunday at the RITZ.

Rock Around The Clock Good Medicine

Tense, worried adults are urged to bring the small fry and "Rock Around The Clock" showing Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at Sanford's new Palm Drive-In Theatre (white patronage), located East of Sanford on Cameron Ave.

Bill Haley and his Comets, the Platters, and Freddie Bell and his Bell-Bells, not only are sure fire hits of the "Teenagers" but they can help tired business men relax and enjoy themselves.

The picture has a good story revolving about the discovery of rock-and-roll music in a mountain village and its promotion into a national craze that puts the fun back into dancing.

The new-beat of the dance bands and the dance exhibitions put on by Lisa Gaye and Earl Barton, will put anyone, be he 15 or 60, into a "life-is-wonderful" mood.

New Identification Signs To Be Placed In Post Offices

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Post Office Department announced Thursday new identification signs will be placed at some 45,000 post offices and postal stations starting the first week in October.

Postmaster General Summerfield said the red, white and blue signs are "an important improvement at a slight cost," making it easier for patrons to identify postal service facilities in growing areas, resorts, and shopping centers having new postal contract stations in their stores.

Riot In 'Womans Prison' Over 'Love Nest' Scandal

A shocking expose of what happens to women in prison—women without men—is told with electrifying effect in Columbia Pictures' "Women's Prison" which opens tonight at the Prairie Lake Drive-In Theatre. Produced by Bryan Foy, who made such motion picture prison sensations as "Canyon City," "Alcatraz" and "Behind the Walls of Folsom," the new Columbia drama casts a searching light on the emotional problems within the nation's penitentiaries, seldom heard from until the internal pressures build up into flaming riot and blazing newspaper headlines.

Most Families Use Citrus Products

LAKELAND (AP)—A sampling of eating habits of 3,000 American families shows 87 per cent of them use one or more forms of citrus products.

The Florida Citrus Commission received this information in a report by its advertising agency, Benton and Bowles.

Of the 87 per cent, 57 per cent ate citrus products for breakfast and 77 per cent used frozen orange juice.

The agency reported that 91 per cent of the families did not know or care about the vitamin C content in citrus fruits.

Florida oranges were preferred by 44 per cent of the families because they claimed the fruit had more juice, but 85 per cent chose California oranges because they are better to eat out of the hand.

into the women's side, and the establishment of an ingenious "love nest alley" in her drive to retain her sadistic power, Miss Lupino first goes to work on a new prisoner, played by Miss Thaxter, who is soon in a state of shock at the brutal and unfeeling treatment. Warned by prison Doctor Duff that the girl is in a bad way, Miss Lupino nevertheless pursues her unrelenting hounding of the unfortunate woman until she is near death's door. When Miss Lupino kicks and fatally injures a long-term woman prisoner, in her effort to learn the truth about "love nest alley", the girl's cell mates learn of it, and riot. Miss Lupino is realistic as the sadistic prison overseer, while Jan Sterling and Cleo Moore, as the riot ringleaders, are fine in their roles. Miss Thaxter plays the unfortunate girl whose death touched off the explosive emotions of the women's prison.

Written for the screen by Crane Wilbur and Jack DeWitt, "Women's Prison" was directed by Lewis Seltzer and was produced by Bryan Foy for Columbia Pictures.

October Set As Church Loyalty Month; Attend Worship Services

The Seminole County Ministerial Association, at its September meeting, went on record as favoring a united effort on the part of our churches in the observance of Church Loyalty Month during October.

To become a member of any church, one must pledge his loyalty to the church that he joins. The vow of loyalty embraces a call to support one's church with one's prayers, one's attendance, one's gifts, and one's services. The strength of any church on the human side lies in the loyalty of its members.

Since nearly all are prone to relax their efforts in behalf of their church during the vacation season, it is fitting that we sound an autumn alert and urge all to catch step with the fall programs of their respective churches.

During Church Loyalty Month in October special emphasis will be upon church attendance.

One of the freedoms that we cherish is the freedom to worship God according to the dictates of our consciences. Let us not interpret this to mean freedom from worship. Rather, let us count it a high privilege to join with others on the Lord's Day in helping to make the services of worship in our churches most significant occasions. We ought to tax the capacities of our churches to the limit.

Whether or not you are a church member, may we count on your regular attendance upon the worship services of the church of your choice during CHURCH LOYALTY MONTH?

Campaigning Time

The time of campaigning is here, and it's open season on political devils. Huntsmen of both parties are busy in the hustings. The land is full of the sound of righteous hammer blows as the pelt of this or that rascal is mailed to the barn door.

It is a well known fact that the number of scoundrels rises in more or less direct ratio to the heat of the campaign. This, and some other facts about the hunting of political devils, should be kept in mind by the voter while he is watching the sport.

One thing to remember is that when a seasoned politician can't discover a rat in the other party's woodpile it is no trick at all for him to invent one. That accounts for much of the hue and cry, the scurrying and the shouts and cries of "There it is!"

In such an atmosphere, little scandals become big ones, ineptitude becomes skulduggery, hesitation becomes treachery. Shortcomings are wildly exaggerated. The worst possible construction is put on every move of the opposition.

This is not to say that nothing can be believed, that all political charges must be discounted as partisan ravings—that there are, in short, no political devils. Of course there are, and the campaign season is the time for them to be hunted down.

But a few grains of salt are a good thing for the voter to have handy. There are more ways than one to catch the truth.

Proper Treatment Helps To Prevent Acne Scars

ACNE VULGARIS primarily is a teen-age problem, but it may persist to teen-age. It may extend well into adult life. While there is no definite cure for this disease, there is a lot you can do to keep it under control.

Soaping Skincare
As you probably know, it is a serious disease. But proper treatment, begun early, will help prevent scarring. Failure to do anything about it might lead to mild facial pitting or to severe disfigurement.

The needed therapy, of course, should be carried out under the guidance of a physician. And you must understand that the purpose of any such therapy is to clear the skin, not to cure the acne.

In addition to medicine and advice your doctor gives you, there are several general precautions you should follow:
For one thing, wash your face at least three times a day. Wash gently. Don't massage. If your skin is very oily—and most acne victims have oily skin—your doctor probably will suggest you use a suitable soap such as a lean-age problem, but it may persist to teen-age. It may extend well into adult life.

Defiance Of Federal Court Order

Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas has raised a point which lies at the heart of the school integration problem. What happens when there is open defiance of a federal court order?

So far the question has been academic, but in the case of Mansfield, Tex., it came close to being raised in concrete form. A federal court ordered the Mansfield school board to stop discriminating against the admission of students on the basis of race. The practical effect of this order was to decree the admission of 12 Negro students to Mansfield High School.

When school opened, however, a mob gathered and threatened violence if any Negro actually sought to enroll.

Shivers then sent six Texas Rangers to Mansfield to help maintain law and order, instructing them to transfer "any scholastic, white or colored, whose attendance or attempt to attend Mansfield High School would be reasonably calculated to incite violence."

In essence, the governor said that if violence threatened to accompany Negroes' entry to the school, they should be sent elsewhere. The Negroes dropped their attempt—at least temporarily.

Shivers denied this was defiance of the federal court, but added, "Should the resulting actions be construed as contempt of the federal court, I respectfully suggest that the charge be laid against the governor and not the local people."

So what happens? Nothing at the moment. Federal courts are blind until there is official notification of a violation. Until the interested parties—the Negroes' lawyer or the school board—come before the court and inform it the nondiscrimination order is not being obeyed, the court will take no action.

But if the Negroes' or school board's attorney does appear, the court can issue a restraining order against interference with the performance of its original order. If this is violated too, then individuals may be jailed by U.S. marshals for contempt of court—but marshals are process servers primarily, not general law enforcers.

If there is continued defiance, the matter becomes quite delicate. Federal courts in themselves have no innate police power.

Slomon Likes To Give Away Money

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Ira I. Slomon has an odd hobby for a millionaire. He likes to give away money.

Slomon, known to his friends as "The Glue King," is a kind of poor man's Rockefeller, but likes to think of himself as "the biggest small businessman in America."

He keeps bags full of silver dollars in his country estate, his main factory, and his city apartment. He likes to distribute them to others—but on his own terms. Sometimes he slips a silver dollar into the hand of a man he has talked to for five minutes. But he may know you for years and never offer you one.

"I give them to anyone who shows a sign of trustiness in him," he said. "I don't think of them as money—but as symbols of good will and a wish for good luck to someone who has done or said something worthwhile."

A dapper little man of 72 with squirrel-bright eyes, this silver-dollar philanthropist likes to wear checkered caps, tattered vests and yellow shoes. He looks like a retired vaudeville hooper and that's what he is.

is a graduate of the poverty-stricken Lower East Side and only had three years of schooling.

"But I always had a creative mind," he said. "I always liked to develop new things."

After a brief period as a song and dance man, he became a top ladies' hat salesman. In 1911 he turned his guest bedroom into a laboratory and developed a new kind of millinery glue. This launched him on a third career.

It's a poor glue-maker who cannot make money stick to his fingers. Slomon has had no trouble in this respect.

He now makes 80 kinds of specialized adhesives—they stick together everything from feathers to metals—in three plants. Long ago he became a millionaire, and his hand-picked customers range from Lily Dache to the Pennsylvania Railroad.

But for 45 years he has run his operation himself, refusing to hire even one salesman.

"I learned early in life to rely on myself," he said, "and I want to stay that way. I'd rather be a big small businessman than a small big businessman who had to depend on other people."

"Maybe that sounds nutty," he added, smiling. "But you should be so nutty, too!"

Now the dean of his industry, Slomon often acts as a consultant on special problems in adhesives for large corporations. Even his competitors like to ask his advice.

"There's a revolution going on in the field," he volunteered. "Before long men and women will be going around without a

One-Third Of New Homes Being Built Have Septic Tanks

Despite the fact that it has been repeatedly demonstrated that the septic tank in congested neighborhoods is uneconomic, unwise and unwholesome, approximately one-third of new homes now being constructed will have septic tanks for sewage disposal, said David Lee today, director of the Bureau of Sanitary Engineering of the State Board of Health.

"To put it simply, a septic tank is a sanitary cesspool that comes to town and promptly gets into trouble," says Lee. While a septic tank in a rural setting is a suitable method of domestic sewage disposal, gives adequate drainage, soil conditions and water table, it was never intended for use in areas where dwellings are built close together.

The continued use of septic tanks, especially in mass subdivision building, is chiefly a matter of lack of financing. Progressive builders would prefer to put in community water and sewerage facilities but are hampered in doing so by the cost.

Many septic tanks serve well during dry periods but let the rains come and the soil is quickly saturated. From the ground will come noxious gases and water may back up into bathtubs or prevent the flushing of commodes. In a recent complaint to the State Board of Health, more than 100 septic tanks in a subdivision had failed in a period of 24 hours. Yards were flooded and the houses were filled with offensive gases coming from the plumbing.

"One of the greatest needs in housing today is for leadership in the financing of community water and sewerage facilities. Construction of such facilities must be encouraged if we are to avert the installation of millions of septic tanks in the country during the next 10 days," points out Lee.

The most immediate remedy for the situation lies in the hands of agencies which insure, guarantee or underwrite funds for residential construction and development. If such agencies would agree to finance community facilities for water supply and sewage collection and treatment, most builders would be glad to construct trouble-free systems. Houses in such well-served subdivisions would also enhance in value.

There is also a great need for all governmental agencies to organize better methods of managing urban and suburban growth, particularly in Florida with its steadily growing population. During the past five years 130 subdivisions in the State have installed their own community sewage disposal facilities and community water systems.

Cagney Portrays Lon Chaney Sr. in New Picture

HOLLYWOOD — Lon Chaney Jr. is returning to his old scaring rounds—Universal Pictures.

The life of the screen's great orator artist is being done as "The Man of 1,000 Faces" at the place where he first found fame. It was at the Universal City studio where he made such thrillers as "Phantom of the Opera" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" in the early '20s.

James Cagney is going to play the elder Chaney, and he is having somewhat less than 1,000 faces whipped up for him by Buddy Westmore, the wizard of the make-up department. Buddy's eyes light up when he talks about the chore.

"This is a makeup artist's dream of an assignment," he glowed. "The subject matter presents all kinds of challenges."

He took me to his lab, a strange, eerie place filled with unemployed monsters from old pictures, life masks of many famous stars, replicas of prehistoric animals and, for a lighter touch, the Marilyn Monroe calendar show.

"We've got certain problems with Jimmy's face. You see, Chaney had no unusual features; he was just a face. That made it easy for him to adopt his many disguises."

"His face was long and narrow while Jimmy's is short and round. So we can't just copy the Chaney makeup; we have to adapt them to Jimmy's face. We have to retain some of his features, too. Otherwise, the audience might think we had someone else do it."

Buddy is a member of the pioneering Westmore family of makeup fame, but he is too young to have worked with Chaney, who died in 1930. But his father, George Westmore, was with Chaney at MGM and gifted Buddy with the actor's makeup kit.

"The makeups were sensational in those days, but they look pretty crude by today's standards," said Buddy.

"Nowadays with foam rubber and other synthetics, we can make faces that are more realistic. The new methods are easier on the actors, too. I have no doubt that Chaney hastened his death with the way he tortured his body with his makeups."

HIGHER ENTRANCE REQUIREMENTS GIVE GREATER OPPORTUNITIES GAINESVILLE — Higher entrance requirements put into effect this year give the class of 1930 a greater opportunity for educational achievement.

J. Wayne Reitz of the University of Florida said last night.

He told entering freshmen "Every one of you has the capacity to complete successfully a university program" because of the new regulations.

The program prescribes qualifications tests be given seniors in all Florida high schools and only those scoring in the upper 50 per cent are eligible for state colleges.

Birthdays Of The Presidents

By Robert C. Pank

President, Encyclopedia Britannica

William Howard Taft, born October 27, 1858, in Cincinnati, Ohio, had a personality and a keenness of understanding that brought him the unquestioning trust of all his friends. He was the son of Alphonse Taft, a lawyer who served as secretary of war and attorney general in the cabinet of U. S. Grant.

Taft attended the public schools in Cincinnati and was a graduate of Yale University. Always a determined scholar he set out to win academic honors, graduating second in his class.

To gain practical experience before starting on his chosen profession, he began reporting court proceedings for two Cincinnati newspapers. In 1882, he went to Washington, D.C. as an internal revenue collector. This, however, was not law, and being determined to have a law career Taft resigned and set up a law office in Cincinnati. The next four years were spent in private practice where his reputation mounted.

In 1887 he was appointed to the bench in the Superior Court of Ohio. As a judge, his greatest contribution was that of establishing the right of laboring men to organize in unions for their own protection and advancement.

Having been long recognized as a man who would make a good president, it was not unexpected when in 1908 he was nominated and then elected over William Jennings Bryan to the Presidency of the United States.

27th President of the United States

His appointments were not generally approved. Taft's policies were usually opposed to great change and this gradually brought about bitter dispute and his eventual retirement from the presidency in favor of Woodrow Wilson.

In 1921 under the administration of Harding, Taft received the much desired appointment to the Supreme Court. During the nine years he served this court, prior to his death in 1930, Taft had regained the confidence and the high regard of the great body of the United States people.

WORD from New York is that men's shirts are going to have ruffled fronts. Probably for men who can whip anyone else.

The idea is, a ruffled shirt will give a man's chest plane. That gives you a choice of what class you want your shirt in.

You can get single row ruffles or a double row with less tucked into pleats. You can get talked about, too.

It says here you can wear old hot front broadcloth, but you just won't be in style. You won't have to explain, either.

Men wore ruffled shirts a century ago, but with beards and handlebar mustaches. Wear one now, however, and you're probably in for some close shaves.

Ruffles and ties will be a boon to house players, at least. They won't mind losing their shirts.

But imagine coming home from the track and telling your wife, "Honey, I lost my needletoint."

The GOLDEN WITCH

by ZOLA ROSS

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

IT WAS JULY before Meg returned. Jason had made the threatened trip to Victoria, returning in a rage.

"She won't set a date until she comes back to Seattle," he told Michael. "She wouldn't even come back for Jenny's and Nathan's wedding."

Well, thought Michael, climbing Profanity Hill with his customary resentment, she had come back now. Tonight he would see her. Six would get you ten Jason was at the house this very minute.

Michael found Dan Farmer alone in his office. He welcomed Michael with heartiness. "Hear you're going to Frisco tomorrow, boy. Don't stay away too long."

Michael ignored the comment. He asked bluntly about Anna Lutz. He wanted to leave no tag ends from the Beaumont trial. "Still in the asylum at Stella-Com?" Dan said. "Doctors say she's there for good."

"No trace of Ryerson?"

Dan looked at Michael; seeing none, he allowed his discouragement to show. "He's probably in China or South America by now. We'll never catch that cagy one."

Michael agreed and wasn't sorry. Ryerson might be a scoundrel, but they'd been good friends in those trenches. Michael was still amused at Jason's enduring anger. The first victims of the swindle had attempted to hold Jason responsible; though his innocence was quickly established, the affront of Ryerson rankled with him.

Michael had not failed to taunt him. "If your boat hadn't sunk off the Alaskan coast, Ryerson might now be a Klondike millionaire instead of a fugitive."

Jason hadn't appreciated the joke, Michael remembered, and was aware that Dan was again speaking of his coming trip. "Be in Frisco long, Michael?"

"Perhaps. I'll go to Rome later."

Dan squirmed, making the Roman scandal. Too many public officials were involved. A month ago, a new law had given civil government to Alaska, made it illegal for aliens to locate mining claims. McKensie, Washington lobbyist, used the dodge to fatten his own purse. Noyes, the judge, had appointed McKensie receiver for dozens of disputed claims, with powers to seize personal property, even previously mined gold. Michael had been retained by a mining company who was taking the fight to the appellate court in San Francisco.

"It'll be a tough battle, Michael."

Den said, "Well, hurry back to Seattle."

Heading down the hill, Michael acknowledged he would return. Seattle was now his mistress in truth. Anyhow, he wouldn't have to be around when Meg married Jason.

Dropping into a bar, he found Tim O'Beirn, looking glum.

"Did you know Jason's moving to Portland when he opens his new store there? Going to leave Nathan in charge here."

"That right?" Michael's respect for Jason mounted. He must have recognized that living in Seattle would be hard for Mag. Love grafted unexpected insight into the lover.

Tim scowled. "Something's off kilter," he confided. "I met Jason coming out of Mattida's an hour ago. Not a word to throw to a dog, he hadn't. You don't reckon Meg's fought with him, do you? I tell you, that girl's mighty contrary by spell."

The dull lethargy that had invaded him left Michael. He knew a stabbing, revitalizing hope. He turned from the bar, threw money in the general direction of the bartender and bolted into the street, disregarding Tim's anxious shouts. Maybe even a procrastinating idiot had a chance. He had been mad not to be waiting on the stoop when Meg came back from Victoria.

In his haste, he almost missed the open door of the Fleur hat shop. Of course Meg would head for the shop at once. Meg in her normal frame of mind would hate to be seen in the street since Jenny's March wedding.

She was standing formally before the display table and wheeled about in surprise as he entered. She gave him a quick smile. "The shop's not open, Michael. Want to buy a hat?"

He could not answer her in their old light banter. He seized her hands, searched her face. "Meg! Are you marrying Jason?"

He felt her withdrawal but held her fast and after a long silence, she shook her head.

"Why not?"

He wanted to take her into his arms, but his mind, in pervers control, refused. He wanted her with a completeness that astounded him, but instinct told him he should not take possession without a clear field.

"Why aren't you marrying him, Meg?" He heard his own voice with contempt. Why couldn't he discard logic? Women wanted aggression, decision. If he reached out...

Her body stiffened then her eyes widened and her mouth relaxed. She moved closer to him. He dropped her hands, brought her closer and felt her soften in his arms. Fright swept him. Meg was one woman who could stand the bright light of truth.

"The golden witch, Michael?"

"Fear left him. He kissed her gently, then with an urgency and demand. Contentment quieted him. Here was revelation with laughter. There had been no laughter in their former loves. Without it, neither Meg nor he could find fulfillment. Her mouth, her body, all of her were melted against him, his eagerness matched by her own. "Marry me now, Meg. Come with me to California and to Rome."

They looked at each other in mutual possession. Meg's mouth curved in a content smile.

"If we hunt the golden witch together, Michael, I shall care if we end up in an igloo."

He kissed her again. The road ahead was clear and always wide enough for dreams. Someday they would come back to Seattle. The highest hill couldn't rise above their happiness.

McCarthy To Head Commission's New Recreation Section

TALLAHASSEE (Special)—The Florida Development Commission has named C. R. (Chuck) McCarthy of Coral Gables to head up its newly-activated recreation section.

Commission Executive Director B. R. Fuller Jr., said McCarthy had been endorsed for the post by the Florida Recreation Association and other interested groups and individuals. McCarthy, 36, has been Coral Gables recreation director for the past two years.

The new section will begin operations in Tallahassee on Sept. 17.

"Since recreation is one of Florida's biggest assets, it has long been felt that the state should do what it could to make recreational opportunities here the best in the world," Fuller explained. "That is why the Commission activated this section and sought out the best qualified man we could find to supervise it."

McCarthy holds a bachelor's degree in education from the University of Toledo and a master's degree in recreational science from Indiana University.

Prior to coming to Coral Gables his experience included three years as a summer camp counselor, 30 months as a U.S. Navy Recreation Specialist and two years as recreation director and high school instructor in health and physical education at Harlan, Ky.

"McCarthy's academic training and his experience are both extremely impressive," Fuller commented. "But the real pay-off lies in the fact that in two short years he has built the Coral Gables recreation program into one of the best in the country."

Fuller said that McCarthy had planned and coordinated the myriad of details for the new $500,000 Coral Gables War Memorial Youth Center, considered one of the nation's finest recreation plants.

"That in itself was a splendid achievement," Fuller continued. "But even more important is the fact that he has attained the goal of all sound recreational programs—that of increasing participation by both youngsters and adults."

He said that during McCarthy's tenure in Coral Gables, junior baseball and softball leagues increased from two to six, while in the same period the Senior Citizens' program jumped from 34 to 73 active participants. Summer playgrounds have been increased from one to three full-time operations with funds allocated for five playgrounds next year.

McCarthy also had charge of administering a city-owned swimming pool, two golf courses and an extremely active tennis program Fuller said.

Fuller explained that the recreation section would be "a coordinating activity whose services will be available to all agencies, communities and organizations within the state."

He added that its functions include "the development and promotion of recreation programs, services, standards and facilities of all kinds for all age groups and interests; assistance in recruiting and training recreation personnel and serving as a clearing house for the exchange and distribution of recreation information and materials."

De Bary GOP Club President Outlines Group's Strategy

By MARY FOWLER

DE BARY — President Ralph Witherell who heads the GOP club of De Bary outlined the group's policy at a meeting Wednesday morning. "We have no quarrel with the Democrat office holders and candidates," he professed, "we consider them our friends and neighbors. But we do feel that the two party system is truly the American way of life and so visualized by our founding fathers. We are thoroughly convinced that competition for local public office makes for better government and more efficient officials."

The club mapped plans for two forthcoming rallies, the first of which will be held on Oct. 10 in the community center at 10 a. m. Candidate for U.S. representative Arnold Land will be featured speaker along with William A. Washburn Jr. of Nokomis, candidate for governor. Along with Ralph Clayton of DeLand will be other office seekers who will greet the group and give short talks. This campaign committee will be headed by George M. Percy, Chairman; Arthur G. Power, vice chairman; Howard Sharp, secretary and Carl O. Lind, treasurer.

New Occupational, Beverage Licenses On Sale Tomorrow

Beverage and occupational licenses for the year 1956-57 will go on sale tomorrow morning according to John L. Galloway, county tax collector.

"Notices are being mailed to all those who had licenses for the year 1955-56," Galloway said. He expects to sell approximately 150 occupational licenses and 160 beverage licenses.

Galloway pointed out that under the new law holders of beverage licenses must present the license for the current year in order to obtain a new one. Also, if they operate within city limits they must show their city licenses for the year 1955-57. The new license must be obtained by Oct. 1. Galloway said if a beverage license is not renewed by that date a new application will have to be obtained from the state Beverage Department.

Occupational licenses are due Oct. 1 and are required by all who practice a profession such as lawyers, doctors, certified public accountants, real estate brokers, architects, surveyors, engineers, etc. Also occupational licenses are required of all operators of businesses such as garages, beauty shops, barber shops, shoe shine stands, wood yards, brokers, wholesale dealers, hotels, motels, motor courts, trailer parks, manufacturing, processing, printing, packing houses, restaurants and cafes, contracting in any of its branches, etc. In addition separate licenses are required for each and every coin operated machine of any description.

Galloway stated further that any one operating a place of business for profit and permits dancing must obtain a dance license regardless of whether any charge is made for dancing.

It is a misdemeanor to practice a profession of any kind or to operate any business or coin operated machines without proper license.
