Floyd Slaps Florida, Heads Out To Sea

Staff And Wire Reports

Seminole County citizens battered the hatches, blitzed the food stores and listened as public officials planned for evacuations and storm housing. The county was like a debutante awaiting her beau, but got jilted.

Nobody misses that date. Fickle Floyd flipped from north to east and sailed away into the sunrise leaving Seminole with a lot of water to show for an otherwise breezy, cloudy day. If palm fronds count as damage, there were a few blown down, but none other reported.

South Florida was not quite so fortunate, but aside from a few fleeing tourists and very minor damage in places in the Keys, Floyd was unnoteworthy and the final inglorious note came when the hurricane was downgraded to a tropical storm.

Floyd, the sixth named tropical storm of the 1987 hurricane season, slipped Key West with 60-mph winds Monday and rumbled up the Overseas Highway past Miami and into the Atlantic. No injuries were reported and damage was minimal.

At 6 a.m., the National Hurricane Center said Floyd had weakened to a tropical storm with 65-mph winds and was located about 190 miles east-northeast of Miami near latitude 26.7 north, longitude 77.3 west. It was moving east-northeast at 15 mph.

"Floyd has merged with a trough of low pressure and is expected to become extratropical," the center said in its advisory. Floyd lost its hurricane status after its sustained winds fell below 74 mph.

Hurricane warnings were lowered for Florida and the Bahamas but a tropical storm warning remained in effect for Grand Bahama and the Abaco Islands.

"It was a hurricane that never realized its potential," forecaster Bob Case said.

The hurricane center said the slow decrease in strength would continue today as Floyd interacted with a low pressure center off the Georgia-South Carolina coast.

"With this low system in the north, it could become the dog, and Floyd could become the tail," said Case. "When it developed, it had several occasions to develop into a significant hurricane. But it always seemed to be running into a force that prohibited it from being a major hurricane."

Sheriff Returns To Work

Hospitalized For Chest Pains

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County Sheriff John Polk is back on the job and feeling "great" after spending the weekend in an Orlando hospital, following a bout with chest and arm pains Thursday night.

Polk, 55, who had heart bypass surgery nine years ago, said that by the time he checked into Florida Hospital-Orlando, Thursday evening, he felt like he was ready to go home. "The pain was gone," he said today.

But Polk agreed to spend the weekend in the hospital to undergo routine tests which he is supposed to schedule once a year as a result of his bypass surgery.

Polk said he usually has those tests done in Gainesville, where his surgery was performed, but procrastinates in scheduling the tests. Since the Orlando hospital was equipped to perform the tests, Polk said, he decided to have them done there over the weekend.

Polk said the results of the tests were good, but he is going to have to start walking for exercise and he is also going to try to stop smoking cigarettes.

The fleeting pain he suffered and the results of the hospital tests will not impact in any way on his decision to seek another term as sheriff in 1988, Polk said. Polk has been Seminole County's sheriff for 18 years and he said he plans to keep that post.

Polk, who returned to work Monday morning after his release from the hospital, said he considered his hospitalization his personal business and did not have a public announcement made stating his condition. "I was only off the job one day," he said.

Polk said he was in a private meeting when his chest and arm began to hurt. He first went to Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford, but because of his history as a bypass patient, went on to the Orlando hospital where open heart surgery cases are treated.

FAA Must Approve Spraying

Maryann L. Cross Herald Staff Writer

City commissioners Monday night unanimously approved a proposed five-year agreement with the Sanford Airport Authority to spray approximately 1.5 million gallons of treated wastewater daily on about 300 acres of airport property.

City commissioners then met with members of the Sanford Airport Authority and a Federal Aviation Authority representative at 9:30 a.m. today to discuss the agreement, which must be approved by the FAA before it can be adopted.

Red Cleveland, director of aviation at the Sanford airport, said he drafted the agreement with the assistance of FAA representatives and Sanford's Engineering and Planning Director Bill Simmons.

Simmons said since the city first proposed irrigation spraying at the airport last May, FAA requirements for the wastewater irrigation project have changed several times.

"Basically, the FAA doesn't want us there at all," Simmons said.

Simmons said one of the reasons for the delay in reaching an agreement is that the FAA doesn't have specific requirements for such a use at an airport.

"As far as I know, there isn't another airport in Florida being irrigated," Simmons said.

"I want to see with the type of program that we have in mind." Some of the demands made by FAA representatives are 500 foot setbacks from the runway for the irrigation system; assurance that the wastewater won't spray runways, lights, aircraft or aviation equipment; and fair market value rent from the city for the

Senators Study Services Tax; Court Studies Session

From Staff And Wire Reports

TALLAHASSEE — Senate committees begin looking for a way out of the services tax impasse today, while the Supreme Court planned to consider whether the current special session is legal.

The justices were to hear oral arguments in a suit by Rep. Elvin Martinez, D-Tampa, who contends it was unconstitutional for Gov. Bob Martinez to call lawmakers back to Tallahassee after a first special session ended last week without passing any legislation acceptable to the governor.

Rep. Martinez, no relation to the governor, contends the Florida Constitution allows governors to call only a single special session on any given subject.

Section three of Article three of the Florida Constitution, however, does not appear to limit the number of special sessions.

According to the section, "The governor, by proclamation stating the purpose, may convene the legislature in special session during which only such legislative business may be transacted as is within the purview of the proclamation, or of a communication from the governor, or is introduced by consent of two-thirds of the membership of each house."

John Phelps, Clerk of the House, said there is to his knowledge no limit and no mention in the state's Constitution of the number of times the governor can call a special session.

The Democrat-dominated

House and Senate voted narrowly last week to revise the services tax subject to a referendum, but the governor announced he would veto the bill.

Martinez did not formally veto the bill Monday, as had been expected. His aides said he was waiting for the full complement of GOP lawmakers to return to Tallahassee. Many were delayed by Hurricane Floyd.

The Senate Finance and Tax and Appropriations Committees were to begin work toward compromise tax legislation this morning. The House tax and budget committees scheduled meetings for Wednesday.

Martinez, House Speaker John Mills and Senate President John Vogt, D-Cocoa Beach, arrived together on a state plane Monday after a one-hour trip from Tampa. Although it was the first time in weeks the three key players in the struggle over the tax sat down together, they said at an airport news conference they did not discuss the services tax issue on the plane.

Warren Will Stay On School Board

Nancy Warren told the Sanford Herald today she will not be giving up her position on the Seminole County School Board to move to Austin, Texas as she had said she would in early September. Warren, formerly the board chairman, said she would continue to serve her second four-year term until its end in November of 1988, if she doesn't move. School board terms are for four years and pay $16,458 annually. The board now consists of Warren, chairman Joe Williams, Larry Betalinger, Ann Nelawender and Pat Telson.

Warren said she had no intention of letting people know about her original plans for leaving the area, but that she had to say it was a possibility when asked about it by the media last month. She and her two daughters, Mandy and Amy were going to join her husband Jerry in Austin sometime later during this school year, Warren said at the time. However her husband

Two Former Officials Named Society Directors

The Humane Society of Seminole County appointed to its board former society president Helen Wolk, and former co-executive director Barbara Woodall, who both resigned in August.

JoAnn Gates, the new president, said the society, which was five people short of its normal 15 members, needs willing workers and asked the Wolk and Woodall to return to the board. She said there are no immediate plans to fill the other three vacancies on the board.

Wolk served as president of the society for 5 1/2 years. Mrs. Woodall and investigator Joan Thomas resigned last August. None gave specific reasons for their resignations other than to say that the job was stressful and they needed a break, but said they would continue to support the society.

Since Gates took over as president, the society has set new goals, including developing a program to educate children about the society and pet care.

Manager's Compensatory Time To Be Eliminated

Longwood To Effect Policy Changes

By Jane Casselberry Herald Staff Writer

Longwood City Commission informally endorsed a suggested change to the Personnel Policy and Procedures Manual that would provide management employees with up to eight days managerial leave time each year and eliminate compensatory time. The agreement came at a work session Monday night at city hall.

With the exception of the city administrator, city attorney and city clerk, personnel accrue compensatory time at the rate of one hour for each hour earned.

City Administrator Ron Waller, who proposed the change, told commissioners that "Compensatory time is being accrued at a rate that will create a substantial liability for the city. I believe the proposed version will remove this financial liability while at the same time provide some benefit to those individuals who must by the nature of their positions, work in excess of 40 hours per week."

The problem came to a head, Waller said, when former Finance Director Barry Weeks resigned under fire on Sept. 18 signing an agreement with the city to accept a pay settlement of $8,737 for 180 hours vacation time and 379 hours compensatory time he said were owed him at the rate of $15.63 an hour.

Some of the managerial employees are required to attend night meetings, while others are requested to do so on occasion.

Employees who already have accrued comp time and are not covered under the overtime compensation provision of the Fair Labor Standards Act, will be able to use up to 96 hours a year of the earned time until they have received the total of hours they have coming to them as of Nov. 2.

The proposed ordinance will be introduced at the Oct. 19 meeting and the public hearing and final action are scheduled for Nov. 2. Under the proposal, the city will grant eight days managerial

Floyd's Gone But Keep Eyes Out

Staff And Wire Reports

One thing Floyd did that elements heretofore have been unable to affect: The highs and lows in temperatures have been practically the same. Seventies. It'll probably continue today but tomorrow, back to the 80s during the day.

On the other hand, look up, if it's still daylight, and you'll see the sun. First time in a couple of days. Windsurfing great on the lake, and still good waves at the beach if you like 'em rough.

However, better keep an eye on Floyd, even in his downgraded condition. There's a front off the Carolinas that should push him off to the northeast and into oblivion, but also has bounced storms back in recent years. Your best interests might be served by being observant.

Lot's more about Floyd's antics in South Florida on page 1A, and his effects in Seminole County, also, so let's look at the rest of the country.

In the Midwest, plunging temperatures smashed more record lows. On Monday, as many as 17 record low temperatures were shattered with the coldest spots in the nation recorded at Springfield and Rockford, Ill., with readings of 24 degrees.

"The cold should continue today, especially in the Ohio Valley," Pete Reynolds of the National Weather Service said. Frost and freezing temperature advisories were in effect for Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, and eastern Kentucky today.

Most of Indiana was barely above freezing early today as temperatures in Michigan dropped into the 20s, Reynolds said.

Records were broken Monday in Chicago: St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.; Grand Rapids, Mich.; Dubuque, Iowa;

TEMPERATURE CONVERSION

Paducah, Ky.; and Binghamton, N.Y.

All hurricane warnings were lowered for Florida today but remained in effect for the northern Bahamas, including the Biminis, Grand Bahama and the Abacos.

At 3 a.m. EDT, the hurricane center said Floyd was a minimal hurricane with 75 mph winds located about 125 miles northeast of Miami near latitude 26.2 north, longitude 78.2 west. It was moving east northeast at 15 mph.

Local Report

The high temperature Monday in Sanford was 72 degrees and the overnight low was 62 degrees as reported by the University of Florida Agricultural Research and Education Center, Celery Avenue. Recorded rainfall totaled 1.01 inches. Partly cloudy today with expected high in the mid 70s and a 20 percent chance of rainfall.

Area Forecast

Today partly cloudy and breezy. High in the mid to upper 70s. Wind northwest to north 15 to 20 mph and gusty. Tonight partly cloudy. Low near 60 to the mid 60s. Wind north 10 to 15 mph. Wednesday partly cloudy. High in the upper 70s. Wind northeast 10 to 15 mph.

Extended Forecast

The extended forecast for Florida except northwest Florida — Thursday through Saturday partly cloudy and mild. Chance of showers south Thursday then central and south Friday and Saturday. Lows averaging in the mid 50s north to low to mid 70s south. Highs in the upper 70s to lower 80s north to mid 80s south.

SCHOOLS IN BRIEF

Food And All That Good Stuff Noted During Nutrition Week

The second week in October is set aside each year to recognize the need for nutritious meals and nutrition education in our nation's schools. Seminole County's school children will observe Universal Menu Day on Wednesday during National School Lunch, Oct. 11-17.

For each of the last 11 years, Universal Menu Day has had an international flavor. This year the theme will be the "All-American Menu" in celebration of the Constitution's Bicentennial. The menu carries out the national nutrition goals of reducing fat, sugar and salt in school foods.

Special guests will participate in the week's activities at Jackson Heights Middle School, the official host school for School Lunch Activities Week.

Additional schools are inviting parents to join their children for the special patriotic menu. Contact the food service manager of your child's individual school for more information on the event.

Women's Scholarship Event Set

Pantherburg will hold its major scholarship fund-raising event on Oct. 24 at the Winter Park Country Club, located at the intersection of Interchange and Webster avenues. The theme of this year's event is "A Night in the 50s" and will feature disc jockey Beau Taylor and music from that decade.

A dance, door prizes and food (with the opportunity to buy recipes) will be among the evening's activities. Doors open at 8:30 p.m., and tickets may be purchased there for $15 per person.

Pantherburg is a business organization which gives scholarships to young women on their way to college, as well as to older women returning to school. Membership in the club is open to women 18 years and older. Dinner meetings are held monthly.

For more information about the organization or its scholarship fund-raiser, call 366-5247.

Traffic Plan Suggests Future Road Strategies

By Maryann L. Cross
Herald Staff Writer

City Planner Jay Marder outlined the major concepts of the traffic circulation element of Sanford's Comprehensive Plan during a recent city commission workshop session.

Marder said the traffic plan identifies the general alignment, function and capacity of existing and proposed roads for the city's future land uses and population needs. In addition, the traffic plan addresses the movement of people and goods through public transit, air transportation, rail travel, and nonvehicular travel modes such as bicycle and pedestrian.

The traffic plan is just one element of the city's comprehensive plan, which is designed to encourage economically sound and balanced growth in Sanford. The plan provides a systematic approach to identifying, analyzing and solving such problems associated with growth as traffic circulation, water and sewage systems, police and fire protection, recreation facilities, downtown design, housing, conservation and government coordination.

The comprehensive plan is scheduled to go before the City Commission Dec. 28 for approval. Before that time, the public will have the opportunity to attend five workshops designed to encourage input from citizens. Marder said the schedule of workshop sessions on the city's comprehensive plan is printed on the back of the utility bills sent out by the city. The next workshop will be held October 15 at 6 p.m. in the city commission chambers at City Hall.

Marder said the traffic plan's primary goal is to provide efficient traffic circulation in Sanford. Other goals and objectives of the plan include:

- Minimizing impact of major roadways on existing and future residential neighborhoods;
- Protecting the lives and safety of pedestrians and motorists by designing, maintaining and upgrading transportation facilities to reduce conflicts and hazardous conditions;
- Encouraging and supporting alternative methods of transportation for commuting and recreational purposes; and
- Supporting short- and long-range improvements at Sanford Municipal Airport to handle more air traffic.

The traffic plan seeks to establish a system of designated right-of-way widths and uniform building setbacks for new construction that would permit widening roads as more lanes are needed. For arterial roads, which serve major through-traffic and high-traffic volumes, the minimum right-of-way proposed is 100 to 300 feet, with building setbacks at 50 feet. For collector roads, serving intra-community travel and moderate traffic volumes, the suggested minimum right-of-way is 60 to 100 feet, with minimum setbacks at 25 feet. For feeder roads, which are local city or county roads that connect to collectors or arterials, the proposed minimum right-of-way is 60 to 80 feet, with building setbacks at 25 feet.

For each of the three road categories, the plan suggests various strategies to meet existing and future transportation needs.

For arterial roads, it has been determined that the present system should be sufficient to serve major through-traffic, with two exceptions. The traffic plan suggests extending Silver Lake Drive easterly to connect to State Road 415 and State Road 46 east. Such a bypass would provide for a more balanced flow of traffic in that area and be coordinated with a planned major southerly entrance to the Sanford Airport terminal. The plan also provides for re-evaluating all potential effects and impacts of the proposed Seminole County Expressway.

The traffic plan states the existing collector road system should serve present and future urban development in Sanford, with three additions. The plan suggests connecting Upsala Road and Old Monroe Road when the Sanford Central Industrial Park is further developed.

A northerly extension of Rhinehart Road also is proposed to line up with the main entrance to the I-4 Industrial Park on State Road 46 West. The road would be constructed where the regional commerce area is developed between the I-4 interchanges of State Road 46 and the proposed County Road 46-A.

A collector road between the Rhinehart extension and Airport Boulevard should be built when the abandoned railroad right-of-way in this area is aligned, according to the plan.

Development of this collector road should be coordinated with expressway planning and adjacent land development projects, the plan stated.

For major thoroughfares that serve Sanford, the plan suggests adding more lanes to better handle the anticipated flow of traffic. The plan includes all necessary roadway improvements, regardless of whether or not they are programmed at this time by city, county or state agencies.

In order to prevent unplanned, ill-conceived and poorly-timed development along major highways within Sanford, the plan includes the following guidelines:

- Making sure adequate roadway capacity is available when considering new development;
- Avoiding continuous and unlimited vehicular access along the highway;
- Developing desirable building setbacks, off-street parking and related on-site traffic circulation requirements; and
- Establishing necessary screening and buffering requirements for land uses along major highways.

Rock And Roll: Made In U.S.S.R.

Rockin'ly, grab your electric balalaika! The Russian rockers are coming! If the Kremlin grants them exit visas to do rock concerts in America, that is.

So what's the deal? Who wants to watch Soviet state musicians with Lenin beards play kitsch love songs to communal tractor maidens, while KGB operatives in comack attire do steppe-dancing to the Ukrainian anthem?

Don't put down the Russian rockers before you've heard them. A rock critic from Rolling Stone magazine, interviewed on National Public Radio, says that the best of Russia's underground rock singers are up there with American rock greats Jimi Hendrix and Jim Morrison.

That may be hard for Western rock chauvinists to believe. But the sounds of the Russian rockers played recently on America's National Public Radio included haunting ballads, raging protest songs and angry punk rock. The lyrics are unintelligible to an English-speaking audience, but the Russian language, stretched taut across hard rock rhythms, carries a strong poetic power.

The Russian rock musicians grew up in the underground, learning to play from American rock disks, performing secretly and recording primitive tape recordings distributed from hand to hand. Only now are some of them coming out to play for larger audiences.

It may be a surprise to this generation that contemporary Russians can be musically innovative and exciting. Russia often has lagged behind the leading edge of Western culture, wrapping itself in a swaddling cloth of xenophobia and suspicion. But the times in its history when Russia has opened up to the West, Russian artists have not only copied western culture. They have extended, deepened and set it soaring. In symphonic music, Russian composers Tchaikovsky, Prokofiev and Stravinsky are legendary. Russian-trained classical musicians equal or surpass those in the West.

The Russian soul is great. Soviet society is rigidly confining. When the Russian spirit is freed, it pours out and fills vessels to the top.

Glasnost, Mikhail Gorbachev's term for political openness, is part propaganda hype, part cultural reawakening. American audiences, fine-tuned to the nuances of rock music, blasted from the bedrock of this country, will judge whether the Russians are mimicking us or approaching rock's universal themes of rebellion, love and loss with a Russian accent.

After decades of hearing Soviet state choruses singing, with technical perfection, the hymn of totalitarianism, we yearn to hear the sound of the Russian soul stirring, once again, to express itself freely.

Helms Scores

Score one for Jesse Helms, the feisty senior senator from North Carolina. Helms has waged a long and often-lonely battle against bureaucratic ineptitude and what he considers to be left-wingers in the State Department. Recently, however, he was joined by 89 of his colleagues when the Senate voted 90-7 to prohibit State from declaring itself a foreign mission.

Seems the State Department used the tactic during the recent visit to Washington of Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. District of Columbia law forbids protesters to demonstrate within 500 feet of a foreign embassy, mission, or ambassador's residence.

Helms was justifiably incensed. "The State Department did not want to disturb Mr. Shevardnadze with the sounds of Democracy," he said. Groups protesting Soviet policy toward Jews, Afghanistan, Nicaragua and the Baltic states were not allowed to embarrass the Kremlin official.

The State Department ought to be embarrassed.

Censorship Rears Its Head In 41 States

What's with Arkansas, Hawaii, Maryland, Mississippi, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Utah and the District of Columbia?

They're totally out of step. In the 41 other states, parental fanatics, right-wing zealots and organizational dingbats have been scurrying around like cockroaches in a garbage can, trying to resurrect a 1967 version of the Index Librorum Prohibitorum. But those nine states and Washington, D.C. have been marching to a different drummer.

They were the only states omitted in an annual report by People for the American Way listing parental or organizational demands to remove books from classrooms and libraries or restrict curricula.

For the other 41 states, Mark Twain's observation would appear to be ruefully accurate: "It is by the goodness of God that in our country we have those three inestimably precious things: freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence never to practice either of them."

As documented in a report by People for the American Way titled "Attacks on the Freedom to Learn, 1986-87," self-appointed custodians of our morals tried to censor 127 books, plays, films and magazines. (Would you believe Sports Illustrated?)

Like the AIDS crisis, censorship is worsening. In the past five years, censorship attempts have increased 168 percent, and they are up 20 percent over the last year.

Take the towns listed under the letter "L." for example. They alone verify the universality of censorship among all states, cities, races and groups.

LaGrande, Ore.: A community member was able to get the book "Southern Fried Rat and Other Gruesome Tales" restricted to fifth and sixth graders. Younger students are not allowed to read it.

Lakeland, Fla.: The NAACP is demanding the removal of Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" from the county's schools.

Lamar, Mo.: A school board was able to get J.D. Salinger's "Catcher in the Rye" removed from the library's optional-reading list.

Laramie, Wyo.: A local minister and community group tried to get "Finding My Way," a sex-education book, banned for junior high school use, but it was retained.

Larue County, Ky.: A group of parents demanded that Kurt Vonnegut Jr.'s "Slaughterhouse Five" be removed from the library, but it's still there.

Lincoln, Neb.: Five different groups of parents made a number of different demands concerning six novels and the distinguished play "Death of a Salesman." The demands included removing them from an elementary school reading list, removing them from the junior high school reading list or restricting them to high school students only.

Lolo, Mont.: Parents using Eagle Forum materials were able to remove programs in sex education, and drug and alcohol abuse and get books removed from the library that dealt with controversial issues. The Lolo troglodytes even removed a book on World War II.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Canadian, American Future

For most Americans, reading about Canada is a bit like kissing one's sister: The experience inherently lacks zing. And the sibling analogy can be extended. Canadians are understandably annoyed because Americans tend to take them for granted. But of course we take them for granted for the same reason we take a brother or sister for granted: because they are there, and always have been and always will be, occupying a big chunk of the foreground of our lives. They can never seem exotic, precisely because they are so familiar.

When it comes to statistics, unless you are bored by those too, the situation gets more interesting. Together, the territories of the United States and Canada are very nearly as big as the Soviet Union. Economically it may be useful to imagine Canada as a sort of California — almost exactly the same number of people (more than 25 million), strung out across the southern region of the country, along its border with the United States.

Like California too, Canada is a prodigious producer. It has considerably less than half as many people as Britain, or France, or Germany, or Italy, and little more than a fifth as many as Japan; yet it sells more things to the United States, and buys more from us, than any of these. Canada is, in fact, our biggest trading partner, and we are Canada's.

That is why the Reagan administration's recent trade accord with Canada, looking toward the creation of a genuinely free market for commerce between the two countries, is so important. If ratified (and there remains some lingering doubt about this, as far as the Canadian Parliament is concerned), it will accelerate the economic development of both countries — creating more jobs, and just generally more prosperity, on both sides of the border.

That, in turn, may help to slow down or even reverse one of the most alarming tendencies currently visible in the politics of Canada: the growing influence of the leftist New Democratic Party. Currently the national government is in the hands of the Progressive Conservatives, who constitute the right wing of Canada's political spectrum and are comparable to Rockefeller Republicans.

How Iran Founded A Lebanese Fiefdom

By Jack Anderson
And Joseph Spear

Syria and Iran are moving warily and hesitantly toward a confrontation in the strategic and perilous Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon. Our associate Barbara Newman has just returned from there with an eyewitness account of what is happening.

This is outlaw country — populated by sullen Lebanese farmers and villagers, patrolled by rugged Syrian commandos — where terrorists run free. Across the valley stretches the dark, inhibiting shadow of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini. By intimidation and bribes, his mullahs have transformed the area into an Islamic state, a nation within a nation, that has the look of a little Iran. Their authority is backed by an invisible force of armed fanatics.

Here's how it happened: In 1979, the obstreperous ayatollah took advantage of the mounting bedlam in Lebanon to attempt a theocratic takeover. He sent hundreds of revolutionary guards into the Bekaa

DICK WEST

Happy Birthday, Inns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Traveling down the road today, it is difficult to believe the first motel chain in America wasn't even established 36 years ago.

Yet, we are told, what became the nation's first franchised roadside inn is celebrating its 35th birthday in Memphis, Tenn., this year.

That would be the Holiday Inn opened in 1952 by Kemmon Wilson after a family auto trip to the nation's capital. Wilson was reported "irked" because he had to pay $2 per child to obtain lodging for his kids.

Let us pause here and exclaim in unison, "How times have changed!"

Although Wilson's chain still makes no charge for youngsters under 12, try setting a foot in the door, much less an over-age child, for a couple of bucks and you see how far you get.

Anyway, Wilson named his motels after a Bing Crosby movie. In 1952, coincidentally, a company bearing the Crosby name demonstrated the first video tape.

According to "What Was New in 1952," compiled by a Wilson spokesman, videocassettes "have revolutionized the way we entertain ourselves." However, my guess is that of Bing would rather have had a piece of the Holiday Inn business.

Or at least, some of his heirs would.

Also in 1952, a television "sitcom" was deemed to have a regular viewership in 14 million households. At that time, the nation average was about 10 million households.

Two potential sponsors might have been the first credit card ever issued and a British company that produced the first teabag.

I don't know whether plastic was acceptable at Wilson's inn.

In Texas, however, one need look back no farther than last Jan. 1 to be seized by instant nostalgia.

The first of the year was when Richard Reavis, senior editor of the Texas Monthly, a magazine published in Austin, announced his "national" tour of my native state.

I recently returned from an auto trip that took me more than halfway across Texas. Admittedly, I didn't stop at every waypoint, as Reavis did, to buy a souvenir postage stamp.

For that matter, I didn't stay at every Holiday Inn I saw either.

Nevertheless, I never knew before that it was possible to make a "national tour" of Texas.

It's hard to believe Reavis even lives in the same state with Dr. Michael DeBakey, a Houston surgeon.

DeBakey has been quoted by another magazine as opining that "the natural history of science is the study of the unknown. If you fear it, then you're not going to study it."

But then the doc probably won't make a national tour of Texas either.

As to whether Reavis used Rand McNally road maps during his drive is not revealed.

A new book on retirement by Rand McNally may be as instructive for what it imparts about the population at large as about the 2.5 million Americans expected to retire this year.

For instance, a reader learns that "Americans move, on average, 11 times in a lifetime."

In so mobile a society, it's a wonder members of a household find time to argue over what "sitcom" to watch.

SCIENCE WORLD

Genetically Engineered Dissolvers

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — Scientists are using genetic engineering techniques to develop new drugs designed to save heart attack victims by zeroing in on and dissolving clots that have cut off blood flow to their hearts.

Experimental versions tested in the test tube appear to be more effective than existing blood clot dissolving substances and, because they are tailored specifically to attack the clot, may not cause excessive bleeding and other complications.

"We're tremendously encouraged," said Dr. Edgar Haber, chief of cardiology at the Massachusetts General Hospital who is heading the research. "It's very exciting." According to the American Heart Association, about 1.5 million Americans have heart attacks each year and about 540,000 die, making heart attacks the nation's leading cause of death.

Most heart attacks are triggered when blood clots clog arteries leading to the heart that have become narrowed by fatty buildups and cut off blood flow to the heart.

Substances that dissolve the clots restore blood flow to the heart, limiting damage to heart muscle and increasing the chances that heart attack victims will survive.

For years, doctors have been using a variety of naturally occurring enzymes to treat heart attack victims. The enzymes work primarily by acting on a protein known as fibrin, which forms the major structure of clots.

But because the agents also attack a substance known as fibrinogen in the blood, which is needed to form fibrin, the enzymes tend to cause excessive bleeding in patients.

In work published in September in the Journal of Biological Chemistry, Haber and his colleagues chemically combined the clot-dissolving enzyme urokinase with an antibody that specifically attacks fibrin.

Experiments in a test tube found that the combination was 250 times more powerful than urokinase alone.

In another study to be published in the November issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, the researchers combined the same antibody with another enzyme known as tissue plasminogen activator.

Valley to recruit and train terrorists. They established a terrorist base in the city of Baalbek, on the valley's edge.

Khomeini also took advantage of Iran's close alliance with Syria to maintain access to the Bekaa Valley. First, the revolutionary guards poured into the valley through the Damascus airport. They were followed by a procession of Iranian mullahs, officials and couriers who rallied the fragmented Shiite Moslem community and brought leadership and unity to this chaotic corner of Lebanon.

The wily Khomeini also routed a steady flow of cash and arms through the Damascus airport. Thus he was permitted to arm the terrorists and pay them salaries. He used some of the money to buy the loyalty of the Shiite farmers and villagers, paying bribes and providing social services. All the while, his mullahs indoctrinated the people with Khomeini's fanatical, fundamentalist doctrines.

His words were scrawled on walls, emblazoned on road signs and broadcast over loudspeakers strung up on village mosques. His picture, with the patriarchal beard and compelling eyes, sprang up like the marijuana that grows in the valley. Since the populace is Lebanese, the Iranian influence was downplayed. The appeal was religious and revolutionary, designed to incite the Shiite masses with a radical fury.

It was accompanied by a call for martyrdom: "All Moslems must rise up and conquer their fear of death so that they can conquer the whole world!"

Suddenly Syria was confronted with a fundamentalist Islamic regime, loyal to Ayatollah Khomeini, in the middle of its sphere of influence — a potentially hostile regime that had been created right under its nose. Syrian sources confessed to Newman that the ayatollah skillfully used diplomacy and oil shipments to placate them. His task was easier because both countries shared a common hatred for Iraq.

As his fanatical following grew, Khomeini began to use the terrorist threat as a counter-force against the established Syrian regime. Khomeini has a history of turning against his benefactors. He is now waging war against the Iraqis and inciting terrorism against the French; yet both gave him shelter while he was plotting against the Shah of Iran.

So the Syrians began to tighten up and crack down. They halted the flow of arms and money through the Damascus airport. They also blocked the visits of Iranian leaders and couriers to the Bekaa Valley. And they stopped the free movement of terrorists between Baalbek and Beirut.

But the Syrians stopped short of a military confrontation. They continue to man the checkpoints and restrict terrorist operations in the Bekaa Valley. But they don't interfere directly with the Islamic regime that the ayatollah has established there. A Syrian official explained to Newman that an attack upon the terrorist stronghold would only result in the slaughter of the hostages though to be held in Baalbek.

Reagan To Say A Few More Kind Words On Behalf Of Bork

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With the curtain set to rise on the final act of a bitter political showdown, President Reagan is declining the nomination of Robert Bork and firing an invective at those intent on denying Bork a Supreme Court seat.

In the coming days, the Bork nomination — an all-but-lost cause since a vote of rejection last week by the Senate Judiciary Committee — will be debated at length on the floor despite public opposition from a majority of senators.

Well aware the vote count is against him, Reagan will continue to pitch Bork to the public in a gesture of personal support for the federal judge and for conservatives angry about how the affair has been handled by the White House.

Administration officials said Reagan wants to use the medium he knows best, television, to frame the debate over the nomination in a speech to the nation likely this week. That move reportedly was requested by Bork himself.

Wal-Mart Founder Richest in U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forbes magazine's annual survey of wealthy Americans found the number of U.S. billionaires nearly doubled in the past year to 49, with retail king Sam Walton remaining at the top of the list for the third consecutive year with $6.5 billion.

The minimum required to make this year's list of America's richest 400 people, which has grown in billions from 26 to 49 since last year, was $235 million, the business magazine said Monday in its issue dated Oct. 26.

The aggregate net worth of the 400 people on the Forbes list amounted to a $220 billion, the magazine reported — more than the $205 billion U.S. budget deficit in 1986.

For the third year, Walton led the list with assets greater than the gross national product of many Third World nations. The fortune of the founder of the Wal-Mart chain has nearly doubled since last year and more than tripled in the past two years as the value of the stock in the discount stores has risen.

Hank Jr. Gets Top CMA Honor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Hank Williams Jr., a one-time country music outcast who emerged from the shadow of his legendary father to become one of the industry's biggest stars, has finally won the Country Music Association's prestigious entertainer of the year award.

"This is the one old Bocephus has been looking for," he said after winning the award Monday night in a reference to his father's nickname for him.

At a news conference following the 90-minute nationally televised show, Williams also was honored by Warner Bros. Records for selling 13 million records during his career.

Williams, 38, was a sentimental favorite to win country music's top award because he had never won it. For years Williams was on the outs with Nashville music executives because of his insistence on doing things his way.

Lake Mary's recognition of United Nations Day on Oct. 24, will concentrate on the local implications of the national observance's themes — seeking solutions to global hunger and homelessness. Over a 1,000 American cities are expected to participate in their own individual events in honor of the world organization's 42nd anniversary.

Ben Levy, who was appointed Lake Mary U.N. Day Observance Chairman by Mayor Dick Fess, has organized a program that will spotlight the work of the U.N. and examine the observance day themes of the homeless and hungry. The event is to take place at the Community building on Oct. 24, at 7 p.m. The building is located at 260 North Country Club Road, five blocks north of the Lake Mary City Hall.

The program will feature a film describing the U.N.'s origins and present activities; social hour/coffee house with music, song and fellowship; snacks; exhibits by Seminole County social agencies highlighting the nature and extent of their work; and a display on the world-wide problem of the themes involved in the program.

A panel discussion by area citizens will focus on solutions to the problems of hunger and homelessness in the county. The discussion will include the subject of consultation on creation of a task force to address the issue.

Members of the panel will include Rev. Paul Hoyer, Pastor of Holy Cross Lutheran Church, Lake Mary; Charles Lauderdale, Lake Mary Police Chief; Anthony Lewis, director of the McKnight Center of Excellence, University of Central Florida; Bob Norris, Lake Mary City Manager; and Angie Romagosa, director of the South Seminole Christian Sharing Center.

Levy's concept of a task force to look at ways of helping hungry people with no homes is borrowed from a similar concept used by the city of Lexington, Ky., in the early 1980s. The city, a merged government with surrounding Fayette County in the eastern part of the state, was experiencing a problem with people living on its streets.

Barbara Curry, Lexington's director of social services, said the city was receiving constant complaints from downtown residents about the problem. So Mayor Scottie Basler's office formed a task force to investigate what could be done to help solve the problem.

An estimated 250 "street people" lived in the downtown Lexington area when the task force began to survey the situation, Curry said. "Many of those people were homeless as the result of the federal government closing down area alcohol treatment programs," she said. She also pointed to unemployment and to people just wanting to live a "homeless lifestyle" as other reasons for the Lexington's problem of street people.

Another reason the task force gave for what they considered was an unusually high number of street dwellers was the close proximity of medical facilities in the downtown Lexington area.

Most of the street people surveyed in Lexington's case were originally from the area. "There weren't many people living in our streets who weren't at least from the eastern part of Kentucky," Curry said.

Of the city's homeless interviewed by the task force, 36 percent had high school degrees. Eight percent of those admitted to having some college background, and two actually had college degrees. Curry said she found those figures quite surprising.

The task force concluded there was a need for a joint effort between governmental, private and religious organizations working together to try to solve the problem. Curry said the city organized itself in order to create a centralized approach to providing food, shelter, health care and an opportunity for street-people to rejoin their society. This includes the addition of a new mental health center for the homeless, which opened last July. "A lot of the people we interviewed out there did have mental problems," Curry said.

According to Curry, at least 70 of the original approximately 250 people the city brought into the problem-solving project are no longer on the streets. Although the task force doesn't know the whereabouts of most of that group, Curry still feels the program is successful in that it seems to be mainstreaming some of those people back into society.

"I feel the program's been very successful," Curry said. "Just from the present climate of not getting nearly as many complaints about these people from the public."

Levy said it was Norris' familiarity with the Lexington task force that led him to seeing how that city's efforts could be similarly used to help in dealing with local problems concerning the hungry and homeless.

"Let's look at the problem at the grass roots level," Levy said of the County's situation. "We need to see how the matter of the hungry and homeless could be best addressed here." Levy said that all countries have people without homes and food, whether those countries are developed or undeveloped.

Levy said the idea of the U.N. Day observance is to use it as a platform for governmental, civilian and private organizations to air, and perhaps to discover, the full extent of local problems with the unsheltered and hungry.

A major force working to help those in need locally is the South

Seminole Christian Sharing Center, Levy said. At least 40 county churches contribute to the center, which provides services for homeless and hungry people.

Angie Romagosa, director of the center, said the organization's biggest service is giving food to about 175 families a month. She said the center usually provides about two or three bags of groceries to families who need help in getting food. "In many cases we are tiding people over until they can get their food stamps," she said.

Plane Nosedives Into Street, Kills 2, Misses Many Bystanders

POMPANO BEACH (UPI) — A pilot and his passenger died when a twin-engine plane blew both engines and nosedived into a busy street, narrowly missing a crowded drugstore.

The dead pilot was identified Monday as Ben A. Jones, 38, of Big Stone Gap, Va., and his passenger was his sister-in-law, Judy Philips Jones, 36, of St. Paul, Va., said Pompano Beach police spokesman Sgt. Leon Walton.

No one on the ground was injured, he said. The 1970 Aero Commander plane blew both engines and crashed shortly after takeoff at 2:37 p.m., landing 40 feet from a Walgreen's drugstore on a street dividing a commercial section from a residential part of town.

The aircraft blew one engine and was circling back to Pompano Beach Airpark when its second engine failed and it crashed into the middle of the street about one mile from the airport.

3 Set For Execution Appeal

STARKE (UPI) — The state lawyers in charge of prosecuting and defending death row cases say three inmates scheduled for execution over the next 10 days are likely to receive stays of execution.

David Ross Delap and Jeffrey Joseph Daugherty are scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair on Thursday. Charlie Lewis Burr is scheduled for execution Oct. 23.

All three men have turned to the courts for rescue. Delap, convicted for the strangulation of an Oklawaha County school teacher, appeared before U.S. District Judge Patricia Fawcett in Orlando late Monday, but she did not rule on the case immediately.

Officials Say Drinking Water OK

PENSACOLA (UPI) — Environmental officials say there is now no indication drinking water has been tainted by wood-treating chemicals that contaminated groundwater around a closed Pensacola plant.

State environmental officials suspected a defunct wood-treating plant in an industrial area of north Pensacola contaminated the groundwater around the 26-acre site, the Pensacola News Journal reported Monday.

Woman's Guns, Ammo Stolen

A Lake Mary woman reported that a burglar broke into her home at 122 North Fourth St., and stole items valued at approximately $1,769, including two revolvers.

June Knuppenberg Price said a Colt 38 and 357-caliber revolver were taken from her residence along with ammunition, jewelry and a VCR sometime between 8:10 a.m. and 3:50 p.m. Oct. 6.

Price told police she returned home to find the house had been entered through the utility room window. The case is under investigation.

This may be helpful information for your customers and others who might call your business after April 16.

If you have questions or would like more information about area code 407, please call us toll-free at 1-800-331-2355.

We can also send you a free brochure about the change.

One more tip about this change: It's easy to remember when area code 407 will be in effect—it starts one day after a date that's unforgettable to all taxpayers.

Iranian Missile Blasts School, Kills 20 Iraqi 'Singing Children'

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An Iranian missile crashed into a school in Baghdad today, killing more than 20 children and a woman and injuring 228 other people, Iraqi officials said. Iraq promised retaliation in the "war of the cities."

"The children were singing songs in the playground when the missile landed," Salah Al Mukhtar, the Iraqi director of external information, told United Press International in a telephone interview from Baghdad. "The school has been destroyed totally."

A statement issued by the Iraqi armed forces general command said 24 students and 10 women were killed. It said 228 people were wounded, 96 of them seriously. Iraq conceded it fired a missile at Baghdad but said the target was the Iraqi Defense Ministry compound. A Revolutionary Guard Corps statement carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency said, "The missile strike was in response to Iraq's recent attacks on civilian targets in Iran and its bombardment of an Iranian school in Sobhat village of Lorestan province Monday."

Aquino To Urge Wage Increase

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corason Aquino promised today on the second day of a national general strike to press for early legislation on workers' demands for a universal wage hike of 10 percent a day, well away from public view until today's formal opening of the 53-year-old Commonwealth conference. The two leaders are considered the top terrorist targets in the world.

On land, 3,000 military personnel were down to Vancouver from across Canada and have been joined by 2,000 police in a $10 million security operation, believed the largest ever in Canada.

Security Heavy At Apartheid Meet
VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — The 49-nation Commonwealth conference opens today with the tightest security believed ever devised for a Canadian meeting and an agenda focusing on South Africa's apartheid policies and Fiji's new military regime.

Britain's Margaret Thatcher, who is expected to reject proposals for increased sanctions against South Africa, and India's Rajiv Gandhi, among the leaders of a call for measures against the new Fiji regime, were kept well away from public view until today's formal opening of the 53-year-old Commonwealth conference. The two leaders are considered the top terrorist targets in the world.

"It was more of an opportunity to begin to communicate on a general level ... to do away with any hypothetical or other hostility, so at least we can talk," said Mills.

"With good conversation, anything can be handled," said Martinez. "I think that's what we're all three saying here is we hope to have some very good talks today and tomorrow and see what we agree on."

Yet angry feelings were still evident on the House floor. Some House Democrats quibbled over whether Martinez could call another special session on the services tax before formally voting the product of the first special session.

House Minority Leader Dale Patchett, R-Vero Beach, accused them of "governor bashing." But later Patchett said tempers were running high because of frustration over the tax debate and concern over the storm.

Rep. Ron Clinkman, D-Tampa, filed legislation to let voters choose in a March 8 straw ballot between the existing services tax and the increased sales tax on goods proposed by Martinez. Patchett was putting finishing touches on a package that would repeal the services tax effective Nov. 1, replace it with Martinez' proposed separate 4-cent sales tax increases at the state and local levels, and enact limited budget reforms.

Patchett's bill retains the higher real estate transactions tax being negotiated with the services tax last spring. The bill would draw about $120 million from the state's emergency fund, but would not require serious budget cuts.

The House Republicans were working closely with the governor, but Martinez had not signed off on every element of his package, Patchett said. Senators also were looking at a similar bill proposed by Sen. Tim Deratany, R-Indianapolis. That bill would increase the state sales tax by a penny, with 4-cent going to the state general revenue fund, 4-cent to state infrastructure needs and 4-cent designated for local government infrastructure needs.

Mills has made it clear the House will reject legislation that fails to fund this year's $18.5 billion state budget. He wants to retain in principle the tax services and allow the public a choice between the services tax and higher sales taxes on goods.

Martinez has made it equally clear he wants the services tax killed. He is giving no indication he might support the levy even at some future date. He dismissed the call for a referendum as "subterfuge" to trick the public.

"If it were a question of no replacement at all or something of that dire nature we should be preparing to stay here and fight as long as it takes," Vogt said. "But as long as Florida's tax system is not onerous ... it is not in the public interest or in our interest to get involved in a drawn-out fight over a services tax which no one can claim enjoys great popularity."

Mills has not rejected the possibility the House will simply adjourn and refuse to act on the governor's demand for repeal, although he says he does not think such a move would be "responsible," since it would leave what he considers an unfair version of the services tax on the books.

House Rep. Pat Seby, a golf coach at New Smyrna Beach High and instructor at the Sanford Airport driving range, says he has a new method of teaching that enables her pupils to hit the ball straight.

And Seby's new method has paid off in her for herself and sons J.W. Howard and Bo Howard. A combined SIX in one year to be exact.

"It's more fun to hit the ball straight than to play the Army method — left, right, left," Seby said. "But six holes in one for one family in one year is pretty unusual."

Seby, a member of the LPGA teaching division, has two of her own at the Heathrow Country Club and one at the New Smyrna Beach Municipal Course. At Heathrow, Seby has twice aced the 130-yard sixth hole using a 6-iron. She also used her trusty 6-iron for her hole in one at the 135-yard third hole at New Smyrna.

"All three of them landed within about a foot of the hole and went in," Seby said. Bo Howard has a pair of holes in one within the past year. He used a 5-iron to ace the 173-yard 18th at Heathrow and a 4-wood to ace the 220-yard 18th at Heathrow.

J.W. Howard got his hole in one at Sugarhill in New Smyrna Beach. He used a 5-iron to ace the 170-yard 18th hole.

Armed Men Rob Motel

Two robbers who threatened a motel clerk with a handgun at about 8:30 p.m. were arrested with about $300 in a hit on the Knights Inn, 4750 State Road 46, west of Sanford.

Clerk Albert Demendina, 30, of Sanford, told Seminole County sheriff's deputies he was vacuuming the lobby when the two robbers walked in. Demendina went behind the desk and began filling out a guest registration card after one of the men said they wanted a room.

One robber stood in front of Demendina, and the other stood in front of the gate that leads to the desk area. One of the robbers said, "Give us your money" and brandished a silver handgun.

Demendina handed over cash from the register and stepped out of the desk area. One of the robbers shoved him back and Demendina opened a door and stepped outside. The suspects followed and one punched Demendina in the stomach and said, "Run."

Demendina ran about 100 yards. Then he saw the robbers get into a car, possibly a Ford, and speed away in an undetermined direction, a sheriff's report said.

Robertson Takes On Bush

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Republican presidential candidate Pat Robertson today took on President George Bush in a debate of the votes in next month's state GOP convention straw poll and will lose.

Robertson is the only Republican candidate to actively compete with Bush in the Presidency. He will head the convention Nov. 13-14 in Orlando.

Robertson, at a news conference Monday, repeated charges that have been leveled by his Florida campaign aides that the convention and the straw ballot have been rigged to favor the vice president.

"With that kind of an advantage, Robertson said, 'If the vice president gets any less than 70 percent at Presidency II, he can consider he has lost.'"

State Rep. Richard Crotty, R-Bradford, said he is a Republican campaign manager, calls the Robertson reasoning "poppycock." Crotty is defending logic by arguing he would be the winner if a Bush vote won the vast majority of the straw ballot votes.

The former television evangelist began a two-day north Florida tour Monday with a Lake City luncheon which attracted about 450 people. In the Republican winning on Sunday — Bush's Florida win when Florida and most other Southern states have their presidential primaries — will undoubtedly become the GOP nominee, he said. And whoever wins Florida likely will emerge as the overall Super Tuesday winner.

"I will be working Florida a great deal," he said. Robertson plans at least one more Florida campaign swing before the state GOP convention.

Gary Gaetti helped the Orlando Twins to a Southern League title in 1981 by hitting 30 homers. Gaetti finished 1985 probably means more to them than other players on the team.

"We feel a certain bond," Bush said of himself and teammates Kent Herbek, Tom Brunansky, reminded him of the 1973 Mets. "Ya Gotta Believe," Viola said, revising the motto Tug McGraw fashioned for the Mets.

The 1987 Twins and the '73 Mets have something in common. They are the only division winners to advance to the World Series after winning less than 90 games during the regular season. The Mets were 82-79 and the Twins 85-77.

"We started in 1982 to rebuild," said Herbek, a native of Minnesota. "We've turned into a great club."

The Twins have grown steadily since 1982, but they did not mature until this year, when General Manager Andy MacPhail acquired players like reliever Jeff Reardon, outfielder Dan Gladden and DH Don Baylor.

Reardon, Minnesota's first bona fide bullpen stopper in more than a decade, saved 31 games and probably made the biggest difference for the club.

The biggest influence, however, came from Manager Tom Kelly, hired full time after serving as an interim last September. The Twins were talented before he took the job, but he inspired them and kept the team consistent with a "one game at a time" philosophy.

The team is emotional on the field but are laid back off the field. Said Twins pitcher Bert Blyleven, who won yesterday's clincher. "We give all we've got and hope the breaks go our way. In these five games, the breaks definitely went our way. Tom Kelly is only as emotional as the game dictates. We don't get too high or too low. He wants us to give 100 percent. As long as we give our best, there's nothing else you can do."

The Tigers, who posted the best record in the majors (98-64), were simply outplayed. Minnesota came from behind to post three of its four victories and that's a record in Detroit.

"We always seemed to be climbing uphill a little," Tigers shortstop Alan Trammell said. "We always seemed to be a hit away. Offensively, we never seemed to get untracked. They got a lot of two-out hits and

A.L. Playoffs

Gary Gaetti, Frank Viola and Tom Brunansky. "We've been through the lean years and seeing it come to this point is just a dream come true."

Everyone in the group played an integral role in Minnesota's regular season and the playoffs. Gaetti, voted the series MVP, batted .300 with two homers and five RBI in five playoff games. Brunansky collected nine RBI, including three Monday.

"Coming back from 102 losses, those were tough times," said Brunansky, who doubled home two runs when Minnesota took a 4-0 lead in the second, then homered in a three-run ninth. "We did the best we could and this year everybody played up to their capabilities."

Viola, the winningest left-hander in the majors over the last four years, started Games 1 and 4, winning the latter. He grew up in New York's Long Island and winning the pennant reminded him of the 1973 Mets. "Ya Gotta Believe," Viola said, revising the motto Tug McGraw fashioned for the Mets.

The 1987 Twins and the '73 Mets have something in common. They are the only division winners to advance to the World Series after winning less than 90 games during the regular season. The Mets were 82-79 and the Twins 85-77.

"We started in 1982 to rebuild," said Herbek, a native of Minnesota. "We've turned into a great club."

The Twins have grown steadily since 1982, but they did not mature until this year, when General Manager Andy MacPhail acquired players like reliever Jeff Reardon, outfielder Dan Gladden and DH Don Baylor.

Reardon, Minnesota's first bona fide bullpen stopper in more than a decade, saved 31 games and probably made the biggest difference for the club.

The biggest influence, however, came from Manager Tom Kelly, hired full time after serving as an interim last September. The Twins were talented before he took the job, but he inspired them and kept the team consistent with a "one game at a time" philosophy.

Mitchell, Martin Chase Postal Run Records

By Chris Pister
Herald Sports Writer

Unless Hurricane Floyd makes a bee-line for Seminole County, the Seminole Athletic Conference Postal Run will be held tonight at Lake Mary High School.

The meet begins at 6:30 with girls junior varsity followed by girls varsity at 6:45, an intermission for senior recognition at 7:15, boys junior varsity at 7:25 and boys varsity at 7:40. Both boys and girls run two miles (girls JV one mile) around the track and the times of each team are combined with the lowest total time winning the meet.

If the weather holds up, there could be a few records broken at tonight's meet. Lyman High sophomore Teddy Mitchell is one who will try to put himself in the record books as will Seminole High senior Shownda Martin.

Lyman coach Fred Pinke said Mitchell, who qualified for the state track meet in the two mile this past spring, has a shot at the national postal run record for sophomores.

"Teddy (Mitchell) is in very good shape and he has a good shot at the record," Pinke said. "The record is 9:38 and he has already run better than that in track."

Mitchell will also look to break into the postal run honor roll. To do that, he would have to run better than a 9:31.4 (by Lyman's Doug McBroom in 1983), which currently ranks seventh on the list. The best time ever is an impressive 9:14.9 by Lyman's Tom Herron in 1975.

Martin will attempt to better her previous best at the postal, an 11:42.3 in 1984 which is third in county postal run history. She has already run an 11:33 for two miles this season, that time coming at the Daytona Beach Run. Martin has a shot at the second best time ever, 11:22.3 by Lake Howell's Lisa Samock last season, but the number one time seems hard to beat. The top time is 11:06.3 by Trinity Prep's Adrienne Poltowicz in 1983.

In the team battle tonight, Lyman's boys have the top-two ranked runners in the county in Mitchell and Nick Radlewich and will be shooting for the title if the rest of its team runs well. Lake Mary and Lake Howell will also be in the running. Seminole High doesn't figure to challenge since three of its top five runners may miss the meet due to injuries.

In the girls division, Lake Howell had been the dominant team in the postal the past four years but the Lady Hawks are expected to be in a three-way

Lyman Boys Zoom To No. 5 In FACA Cross Country Poll

On the strength of a second-place finish at the Dunn Open this past weekend, Lyman High's boys cross country team, previously unranked, moved into the No. 5 position in the Florida Athletic Coaches Association Class 4A State Poll.

Largo remained No. 1 in the state and Largo's Pat McDonough is still the top-ranked individual. Lyman sophomore Teddy Mitchell maintained the No. 2 spot in the individual rankings while Lyman junior Nick Radlewich, second to Mitchell at the Dunn Open, moved into the No. 3 spot in the individual rankings.

Lake Mary High, which has been hurting without No. 4 runner Phil Reuff, dropped from sixth to 10th in the state poll. Senior Brad Smith, third at the Dunn Open, is now the seventh-ranked individual in the state.

In the Class 4A girls poll, there was a change at the top, two newcomers and one less Seminole County team after this past weekend's results.

Pensacola Washington, on the strength of its first place at the Dunn Open in Titusville, moved from second to first while previously top-ranked Brandon dropped to No. 2.

Coral Springs, previously unranked, used a solid second-place finish at the Dunn Open to vault into third in the state while Jupiter, in its first year at the 4A level, debuted at the No. 9 spot after a good showing at the Dunn Open.

Lake Howell's girls dropped a notch from sixth to seventh while Lake Brantley High, which did not run last week, dropped out of the poll after being ranked ninth the previous week.

Dudek Lifts Broncos By Raiders

DENVER (UPI) — A replacement running back trying to prove he belongs in the NFL helped his cause behind the blocking of three strike-defying linemen who have spent a combined total of 23 years in the league.

Joe Dudek ran for 128 yards and two touchdowns behind an offensive line that included veterans Billy Bryan, Dave Studdard and Winfred Hood Monday night as the Denver Broncos belted the Los Angeles Raiders 30-14.

"Three of their five linemen were regulars and the rest were quality fill-ins," said Raiders' defensive end Howie Long, who crossed the picket line last week with teammate Bill Pickel. "If the roster was 49, their running back and other linemen would have made the roster."

A crowd of 81,230, the largest to attend a game during the NFL players' union strike, watched as the Broncos improved to 2-1-1 and handed the Raiders their first loss in four games.

"The crowd support was unbelievable," said Denver Coach Dan Reeves. "It shows me how much Denver loves the Broncos. I realize that there were mixed emotions out there, but we had great support."

UT Cager Injured In Wreck

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Carla McGhee, a player for the NCAA champion Tennessee women's basketball team, will have her jaw wired shut for two months from injuries suffered in a wreck that also hurt a men's basketball star, officials said.

McGhee, 19, a sophomore from Peoria, Ill., and a Lady Vol reserve last year, underwent surgery late Monday at Fort Sanders Medical Center for a broken jaw and fractured cheek, hospital spokeswoman Barbara Garlington said.

"She got out of surgery at about 10 'til 11 tonight," Debbie Jennings, women's sports information director, said Monday. "They repaired her broken jaw. Her mouth has been wired shut for 6 to 8 weeks. Right now, she's in stable condition."

Suspended McEnroe Wins Again

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — John McEnroe, serving a 60-day suspension for using obscene language at the U.S. Open, continued his exhibition success Monday night by defeating Czechoslovakia's Miloslav Mecir 6-2, 6-3, in a Michelin Challenge Series match at the Forum.

The victory was McEnroe's second over Mecir in six days. He defeated Mecir 7-5, 7-6 last week en route to winning the $500,000 AT&T Challenge Sunday in Atlanta. McEnroe's victory guarantees him a spot in the finals of the year-round intermittent round-robin series.

Knights Notch No. 17 In Poll

University of Central Florida's Knights reappeared in the Division II College Football Poll Monday, climbing into the No. 17 position after Saturday's 36-26 victory over Savannah State.

Coach Gene McDowell's Knights, 3-2, host West Georgia Saturday. Both UCF losses are to Division I-AA foes.

Reds Fire 'Shocked' Bergesch

N.L. Baseball

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Bill Bergesch says he is "shocked" at being fired as general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who have finished in second place in the National League West for three straight years.

"I was surprised, shocked really, because I thought everything was going along well," Bergesch said Monday night after being fired by Reds' owner Marge Schott. "I have no idea why I was dismissed."

Bergesch was unable to make the kind of trades this season that several other club officials felt were necessary to help the team in its race against the NL West champion San Francisco Giants.

Considered as possible candidates to replace Bergesch are former Montreal Expos general manager Murray Cook and Reds' player personnel director Sheldon "Chief" Bender.

Although the Reds said they would have no announcement about Bergesch until 5 p.m. today, Bergesch confirmed to reporters late Monday that he had been fired. He called it his "biggest disappointment" in his nearly 40 years in baseball.

Bergesch, who cleaned out his office at Riverfront Stadium Monday afternoon, said he hadn't expected to be let go because of three straight second-place finishes and also because business operations — one of Schott's main concerns — had been going well the past three years.

"The last three years were very good ones for us financially, so I thought that fact would be in my favor," said Bergesch.

Bergesch's biggest problem this season was his inability to make a trade with the Pittsburgh Pirates for veteran pitcher Rick Reuschel.

Both Cincinnati Manager Pete Rose and San Francisco Manager Roger Craig told their front offices at mid-season that acquiring Reuschel might be the key to winning the division title. Giants' General Manager Al Rosen was able to make a deal that landed Reuschel, who helped San Francisco to the division title.

Rose said late in the season that at one point he believed the Reds had Reuschel locked up and expressed surprise that the Giants were able to beat the deal Cincinnati had planned. Rose even met with Reuschel a few days before Reuschel went to the Giants, thinking he was about to become a Red. Reuschel himself said he was surprised when he went to the Giants instead of the Reds.

"I would hate to think it was specifically the inability to get Reuschel that led to my dismissal," contended Bergesch. "I wasn't told any specific reason why I was let go, but I'd sure hate to think it was simply because of that. To be honest, I don't know why I was dismissed."

The only deal Bergesch made late in the season was to swap pitcher Bill Gullickson for New York Yankees pitcher Dennis Rasmussen.

Bergesch was named the Reds' general manager in November of 1984 and was promoted to executive vice president and general manager in July of 1985.

The Reds finished second all three seasons that Bergesch was general manager. However, the club's inability to progress from that point looked bad in light of the Giants' swift climb during the last two years. While Bergesch was at the Reds' helm, the Giants surged from last in 1985 to first this year.

Bergesch came to the Reds after five years as vice president of baseball operations for the Yankees. His career in baseball dates back to 1948.

Individual Stars Emerge For Twins

A.L. Playoffs

DETROIT (UPI) — Minnesota entered the American League Championship Series with few individual standouts and emerged with many of them.

"Our whole club is an MVP," said Minnesota's Tom Brunansky after the Twins downed the Detroit Tigers 9-5 Monday to claim the AL pennant in five games. "Everyone has been picking up each other all year. Kirby (Puckett) and Kent (Hrbek), hopefully they'll turn it on and it'll be their turn to shine in the World Series."

Al Newman, who played in only one playoff game for Minnesota, was handed the first bottle of champagne to uncork in the Twins' lockerroom following the clinching victory. Gene Larkin, who also played once, grabbed the next champagne bottle and started spraying the starters.

"Everyone contributed and everyone is entitled to share in the celebration," said Bert Blyleven, who pitched Minnesota to the World Series' berth Monday. "It takes 24 guys to do what we did today. We played as a team against Detroit and that's why we had success."

Some Minnesota players had other reasons for the Twins' series triumph.

"They (the Tigers) were looking beyond us," said Don Baylor. "I don't think they took us seriously. When you play in the AL East you say, 'Oh, it's just the West.' They won't admit to it, but it was in the back of their minds."

The Tigers, on the other hand, looked only at the statistics to find the root of their downfall.

Detroit did not get a victory from its top three starting pitchers — Jack Morris, Doyle Alexander and Walt Terrell — and also was held in check at the plate by the Twins pitching staff.

"I just wished we could have showed what type of offensive team we have," said Tigers shortstop Alan Trammell, who went 4 for 20 in the series. "There were a lot of things expected of this ballclub and we didn't live up to those expectations."

"But give Minnesota credit. They just played better and made the pitches and hits when they had to."

Detroit's Chet Lemon sat near his locker with a towel around his neck, shaking his head.

"We blew it," he said. "We had all the confidence in the world before the series. Maybe that was the problem — too much confidence. We'll never know."

Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson would not answer questions about the game or series, however he did praise Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly and his players.

"I've never seen a club come in with so much desire and that comes from Tom Kelly," Anderson said. "This is a fine baseball team and let's just give them credit."

FANS CELEBRATE TITLE

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Horna blared and whistles shrieked from Minneapolis to St. Paul Monday after the Minnesota Twins defeated the Detroit Tigers, 9-5, to win their first American League pennant in 22 years.

"Everything has gone crazy here," Linda Bruestle of St. Paul said over the din at Champ's restaurant-bar in Richfield, a suburb of Minneapolis. "People were yelling, cheering and blowing horns."

"It started about about 11 this morning and has been going strong ever since. The crowd is so excited it's unbelievable."

An aide in Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich's office said there were some "whoops and hollers" there as the Twins ran up a lead to win the fourth game of the playoffs. "This is wonderful," she said.

The governor was in Detroit watching the game. "I'm sure he's pretty excited," another aide said, "and eager to get back and watch the Twins play in the World Series. He's been saying all along the Twins have a can-do kind of spirit."

Tom Brunansky, left, drove in nine runs in the playoffs but Detroit's Chet Lemon fell the Tigers "blew it."

Gloria McDonald of Minnetonka, who had tickets to take her excited mother and others to Wednesday and Thursday playoff games in Minneapolis, said, "Well, we don't get to go to the games here now, but if we had, we'd have lost mother."

Attorney Julie Williams, who watched the game on television with cheering lawyers, news media people and grain exchange brokers in the Little Wagon bar, said, "This is fantastic. Everyone is clapping, whistling and cheering."

"I was in the fourth grade the last time the Twins were in the World Series," she said. "Nobody is waiting for us to choke any more. There's going to be a lot of merry making tonight."

Tim Palmer of Minneapolis, watching the game on TV at home, said, "This is the most exciting thing that's happened in Minnesota sports since 1985." His newlywed bride, Regan, said, "It's going to be great for the city, good for community spirit and bring in a lot of revenue."

NOTEBOOK

Fans entering the bleachers at Tiger Stadium have been body-searched before games.

Hundreds of fans missed the first inning of Saturday and Sunday's games as they waited in long lines for security guards to get them down. The guards searched the men and women into separate lines. They were also seen searching children.

"It was the most demeaning experience I've had in my whole life," said Dennis Wolfe, 41, a school teacher from Novi, Mich. Wolfe said he arrived about 30 minutes before Sunday's game and did not get to his seat until the second inning.

Burns International Security Service, which handles the security inside the stadium with Detroit police, would not comment on the searches.

However, Ralph Synder, director of operations for the Tigers, said the security firm is supposed to search packages, not individuals. Synder said the Tigers planned to talk to the agency about the searches.

Lake Brantley Tunes Up With Rout Of Apopka

With a big match against DeLand on tap tonight, Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots tuned up with a solid performance in a 15-3, 15-6 rout of Apopka Monday night in non-conference, nondistrict action at Apopka.

The Lady Patriots, who improved to 13-7 overall, will look for revenge tonight as they host DeLand. The Lady Bulldogs, 10-1 overall, defeated Lake Brantley earlier in the season.

"I think we're ready for DeLand now,"

Lake Brantley coach Stephanie Glance said. "We got it back together tonight after the loss to Lake Howell. This kind of win is just what we needed going into the DeLand match."

DeLand and Oviedo are tied for the Seminole Athletic Conference lead at 7-1 while Lake Brantley, Lake Mary and Lake Howell are all 4-4. In other SAC action tonight, Lyman is in Seminole and Lake Mary is at Oviedo. In a nonconference match, Orlando Evans is at Lake Howell.

In Monday's match Apopka had trouble with serve receive in the first game and Lake Brantley took immediate control as Jeanne Seidel served five points in a row. Pam Wittig later served four in a row and Kim Gunderson closed out the game with a service string of six in a row.

In junior varsity action Monday, Lake Brantley cruised to a 15-1, 15-12 victory and improved its record to 11-1. —Chris Pister

Stocks Open Much Higher

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened sharply higher today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 10.77 Monday, was up 25.78 to 2497.22 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 804-212 among the 1,359 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 19,500,000 shares.

Stocks closed lower Monday but a late rally cut some of the session's steepest losses. Trading was sluggish because some investors stayed home for the Columbus Day holiday.

Analysts said worries about rising interest rates, underlined by weakness in bond futures, and cautiousness before Wednesday's release of August U.S. trade data depressed prices all day until futures-related buying kicked in during the last hour and a half of trading.

"The trading desk wrote up when the buy programs hit," said one trader, referring to the computer programs that seek to take advantage of variations between stock and futures prices. The buying erased a 38-point deficit in the Dow and momentarily gave the blue-chip barometer a gain of several points. Last-minute selling erased the gain and returned the Dow to negative territory.

No injuries and little damage were reported in the wake of the hurricane but much of Key West was left without power for several hours.

Floyd created several small tornadoes that did minor damage before dawn Monday and forecasters warned of tides up to 5 feet above normal and rains up to 10 inches in the storm's path.

The National Weather Service reported no flooding on Florida's Gulf Coast, despite 5.2 inches of rain recorded Monday night in Naples. Miami got 2.64 inches and Bill Doonan, a Dade County spokesman, said, "There is the kind of street flooding you would expect with the number of inches we got."

The NWS warned of minor coastal flooding along the state's east coast, from Broward County to Jacksonville.

airport property.

When the issue of spray irrigation at the airport was proposed in May, airport authority members and the FAA said the proposed sprinklers were located too close to the runways and the nitrates in the water would corrode airplanes.

But Simmons said at the time a study showed that nitrates in wastewater are less corrosive than rainwater.

How much the city will pay in rent has not been determined yet, Simmons said. Although the city owns all of the airport property it wants to use for the spray irrigation project, the land was decided by the federal government for aviation purposes. FAA representatives said the city should pay rent to the airport since the irrigation program cannot be considered an aviation use of the property.

Simmons said the proposed agreement favors the airport and includes considerable risks to the city regarding potential termination or limitation of irrigation operations with little or no notice.

Under the terms of the agreement, the Sanford Airport Authority can:

- Lease the land to another tenant, requiring the city to cease operations in that area within 30 days;
- Raise the rent after two years;

Dollar Up Slightly; Gold Drops Down

By United Press International

The dollar rebounded slightly against major foreign currencies at the opening of trading on major world money markets today. Gold moved lower.

Earlier in the Far East, the dollar edged slightly higher against the Japanese yen, closing at 143.80 yen, up 0.06 from Monday's close of 143.86 yen.

In Europe, the dollar began the day in Frankfurt at 1.82 German marks, up from Monday's close of 1.813.

In Zurich, the dollar opened at 1.507 Swiss francs, up from 1.5045, and in Brussels at 38.00 Belgian francs, up from 37.85.

The dollar also opened higher in Paris at 6.0665 French francs, up from Monday's close of 6.042. In Amsterdam at 2.0485 Dutch guilders, up from 2.039, and in Milan at 1,313.75 lire, up from 1,308.40 on Monday night.

In London, the pound weakened slightly against the dollar, opening the day at $1.6475, down slightly from Monday's close of $1.6545.

In early New York trading, the dollar was mixed against key foreign currencies in moderate trading.

Traders in New York said the currency market is focused on U.S. trade figures for August, scheduled to be released at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Building Pace Slows

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Builders finished homes at a 2 percent lower rate in August than in July, continuing a slowdown from the strong building results of last year, the government said today.

The Departments of Commerce and Housing and Urban Development estimated the home-completion pace at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.86 million in August. The rate indicates how many homes would be finished in a year if every month were like the one studied and seasonal factors that month were taken into account.

The August results showed continued slippage in building from last year and early this year when interest rates were lower.

The annual rate in August 1986 was 5 percent higher than this August at 1.75 million homes. Last January, it hit 1.95 million homes.

Housing analysts blame the slowdown on mortgage rates, which have jumped about 2 percent since early April.

director at Key West, advised residents Monday to stay at home instead of heading north to the mainland.

But farther north, John Wilson, head of the Disaster and Preparedness Agency, urged the 20,000 people on the barrier islands — including Sanibel, Captiva and Estero — to head for the mainland. He said some people left but most stayed.

Some apparently felt as Viola Veidt, who viewed the eye of the storm while strolling down Duval Street in Key West.

"It's just a hurricane," she said. "Just stay out of the high winds. Don't get hit by a coconut."

MacDill Air Force Base at Tampa ordered its 80 aircraft, mostly F-16 fighter jets, flown north to Georgia. About 15 airlines canceled flights in and out of Miami International Airport, stranding passengers, said an airport spokeswoman. Some passengers spent the night on the lobby floor.

Dobson said 820 people went to the 10 shelters the county set up, but no mandatory evacuations took place.

wastewater into Lake Monroe by September 1989. Simmons said that when the city would begin spraying at the airport if an agreement is reached with the Sanford Airport Authority.

The estimated effluent capacity of the airport property is slightly less than 1.5 million gallons per day. The proposed spray irrigation system at the airport will cost approximately $1.8- to $2 million to construct, Simmons said.

This works out to be $1.33 million for a one million gallon daily spraying capacity. By comparison, the estimated construction costs for the city's new 2,200 acre wastewater treatment plant at Lake Jesup is approximately $11 million, or $3.68 million for a one million gallon daily spraying capacity.

year, beginning with 1988-89 each management employee will be awarded the appropriate number of hours as vacation hours. As the employee uses an hour, it will be deducted from hours available to the individual. Employees who are hired or promoted to a managerial position will be credited with managerial leave on a pro rata basis from their hiring date or promotion.

Any individual leaving a managerial position would lose a pro rata portion of the managerial leave granted for that fiscal year.

Gay Rights Activists Denounce Police

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At least 100 helmeted police officers, some wearing protective gloves, lined the steps of the Supreme Court today in anticipation of orchestrated civil disobedience by homosexual rights activists.

Speaking to the hundreds of protesters, the activists denounced "the yellow rubber glove-minded individuals" said organizer and photographer Loren Laureano, of Houston.

"Our message to the Supreme Court is, bigotry is obsolete," protest organizer Susan Cavin said to the crowd on the east lawn of the Capitol. "You can't legislate love and as Martin Luther King said, 'We're committed to an inner law written on the heart.'"

Many of the officers, lined up at the Supreme Court behind a double line of barricades, were wearing dark-colored protective gloves and riot helmets. A District of Columbia police officer, who asked not to be identified, said the decision to wear the gloves was up to each officer.

Supreme Court guards were privately concerned about the size of the planned protest and even expressed apprehension about arresting those who carry the AIDS virus.

Guards who asked not to be identified said Monday they were worried about arresting people with AIDS. Members of the security detail said they considered wearing protective gloves despite repeated assurances of experts that acquired immune deficiency syndrome cannot be contacted through casual contact.

AIDS, usually transmitted through intimate sexual contact, has struck mainly among homosexuals as it fatally destroys a body's ability to fight infection.

Though the justices' agenda today included hearing arguments in four cases, officials closed the court building to the public because of the demonstration, the last in a week of staged homosexual rights activities.

Protest organizers Monday said the idea for the court demonstration came partly as a response to last year's Supreme Court ruling that held there is no constitutionally protected right to engage in private homosexual conduct.

Ruling: Unions Can Dispute In State Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today let stand a ruling that allows union members to press their labor disputes in state court after exhausting federal remedies available to them.

The justices rejected a challenge brought by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. seeking review of a 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling.

The case hinges on whether all labor disputes involving union members must be mediated through arbitration or whether some conflicts can be taken to a state court for resolution.

The dispute stems from the company's suspension of Thomas Telles for alleged drug use and a letter sent to 11 Pacific Gas and Electric Co. managers accusing him of buying cocaine on the job.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers filed a grievance on Telles's behalf and the company later agreed to reinstate the employee, give him full back pay with interest and remove the letter from his file.

But Telles decided to pursue his case in state court, claiming he had been defamed by the letter circulated to several managers.

The utility filed suit in federal court to bar Telles from challenging the firm's action in state court, saying federal labor law took precedence over any objection he could raise on a state level.

The court sided with the utility, but on appeal, the 9th Circuit upheld Telles's right to pursue defamation charges in state court.

The appeals court ruled the allegations against the utility could be examined without referring to the union's collective bargaining agreement, which must be interpreted by federal labor law.

U.S., Japan In New Car War

TOKYO (UPI) — Improvements in the design of American cars, led by Ford, are pushing Japanese car manufacturers into a new era of competition with U.S. producers, a Toyota Motor Co. executive said Tuesday.

"Recently, as can be seen with the Ford Taurus, they (the big three U.S. auto producers) are developing cars with new designs that sell well," Tsutomu Ohshima, Toyota's executive vice president, said at a news conference.

The increased competitiveness of American cars comes at a bad time for the Japanese automakers.

has decided to accept a job in central Florida.

Williams said Warren's remaining would be a positive thing for the board. "It takes awhile for people to align themselves with school board activities," Williams said of the need to replace Warren if she'd left. He also said that with Warren still in her position the momentum of the board could keep going.

According to Williams, there would have to be a period of training if a new board member had to be nominated to replace Warren. "It's a lot better to have someone who knows what's going on with the board," Williams said.

Late Night Rescue

Paramedics ready Mary White, 35, of 109 Temple Drive, Sanford, for a trip to Orlando Regional Medical Center in Orlando following a pedestrian-vehicle accident in Sanford Monday. The 8:05 p.m. accident occurred on Country Club Road near Airport Boulevard, according to county fire department reports. White was complaining of a hip problem and apparently was transported to the Orlando hospital because of numbness in her legs, a friend of the family said. White was in fair condition today with multiple injuries. Details about the accident were not available from the Florida Highway Patrol.

Stepdad, Daughter Became Too Close For Mom's Comfort

DEAR ABBY: Reading the letter from "Wondering in San Antonio" took me back many years. "Wondering's" husband of six years thought it was perfectly OK to visit his 17-year-old stepdaughter's bedroom at bedtime to "talk" to her. The girl slept in the nude and made very little effort to cover up. "Wondering" said when she mentioned this to her husband, he accused her of being paranoid, crazy and evil-minded.

When I was 35, I married a man who seemed to be overly fond of my 14-year-old daughter. He spent much time "tucking her in" and playing physical games - wrestling, hugging and dancing.

When she started to date, he insulted every boy she brought home. They grew closer and closer. By the time she was 28, she hadn't brought anybody home for three years. Their relationship was obvious to me, but she denied it, and he called me "crazy and evil-minded."

I tried to talk some sense into her, but she wouldn't listen.

I retained a lawyer who wrote her a letter demanding that she move from our home. She moved. A few months later, my husband moved out, and in with her. We were subsequently divorced and he married my daughter. They've been together since 1986.

I know that most men are decent, but I think women should be careful when they consider bringing a man into their home as a stepfather.

TRUE STORY, WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR TRUE STORY: Thank you for sharing your experience. A word to the wives is sufficient.

DEAR ABBY: Although my husband and I have been married for 32 years, we still disagree about something that happened on our wedding day. We had agreed that we would be married at a private ceremony at our church, followed by a dinner for the immediate family. You can imagine my surprise to arrive at the church and find 25 or 30 of my fiancée's out-of-town relatives there! Since we hadn't planned on guests, it was an awkward moment.

Later I learned that my husband's mother had invited them, and even arranged for a catered dinner following the ceremony. My husband thought this was a nice thing for her to have done. I thought it was underhanded. I also thought the bride and groom made the wedding plans. The fact that his mother took it upon herself to invite these people caused embarrassment for me and my family.

Don't you think this should have been discussed with us before the marriage? I do. My husband insists that I am wrong, and his mother wasn't in the least out of line.

I've tried to forget it, but it keeps coming up, and I'd like your opinion.

STINGING MEMORIES

DEAR STINGING: To have invited wedding guests without your knowledge was certainly "out of line." I know it's not easy to forget, but no good purpose is served by bringing it up. If it's any satisfaction to you to know that Abby is on your side, I am.

DEAR ABBY: Why should a man send flowers to his wife on their anniversary and her birthday in care of the office where she works? She's not a spring chicken, and they've been married for a long time.

Could he be trying to show up the husbands of the other women who work there? (No other husbands send flowers to their wives at work.)

NOBY IN BALTIMORE

DEAR NOBY: Perhaps he sends the flowers to the office for her to enjoy where her day needs the most brightening. She clearly has a generous, thoughtful husband at home.

Candlelight Rites Unite Janet Parnicky, R.E. Martin

Janet K. Parnicky of Lake Monroe, and Ralph E. Martin, also of Lake Monroe, were married Sept. 19 in the First United Methodist Church, Sanford. The Rev. Leo King performed the candlelight ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Parnicky of East Tawas, Mich. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Martin of Lake Monroe.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a lace and satin gown fashioned along the Queen Anne silhouette. The beaqué bodice featured leg-of-mutton sleeves with Venise lace defining the Queen Anne neckline. Tiers of Chantilly lace ruffles bordered the full skirt that gracefully cascaded into a trailing chapel-length train. Her headpiece was a satin picture hat lavishly trimmed with flowers, Venise lace, pearls and white carnations and fern.

Suzanna Daigle attended the bride as matron of honor. Her dress was two contrasting colors - white with a black underskirt. The mock surplice bodice featured a ruffled neckline worn off the shoulders with spaghetti straps. The overskirt was accented with bows and a cummerbund sash. She carried a bouquet of white silk roses.

Janet Richardson and Andrea Miller were the bridesmaids. Their dresses were identical to the honor attendant's except the black and white colors were reversed.

Perry Daigle served the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Kevin Ohlthurs and Stan Stanczyk. Groomsmen were Ronald Martin Jr. and Stephen Parnicky III.

Jessica Gallis was the flower girl and Mathew Martin was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, the reception was held at the Sanora Club, Sanford. Reception assistants were Nancy Parnicky, Cathy Moore and Tammy Gallis.

The bride is employed as a secretary at Seminole Ford Inc., Sanford. The bridegroom is employed by CEI Florida Inc., Longwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Martin

Folks With Tonsils Have More Strep Woes

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — Why do some people get strep throat every winter? What causes it? Does it help to have your tonsils taken out?

DEAR READER — For unknown reasons, some people are more susceptible than others to streptococcal throat infection. Strep germs spread from one person to another; hence, infections are more common in close social situations, such as schools. Certain healthy people appear to carry the strep germs and not know it; therefore, they may feel well but can infect susceptible individuals. Finally, strep infections do seem to be more common in patients with tonsils; removing the tonsils may prevent repeated infections.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What causes "referred pain"? How can one feel pain one place when it really comes from elsewhere?

DEAR READER — Referred pain is one of the bugaboos of medicine. It often makes a diagnosis more difficult to reach. Our bodies are supplied with a network of nerves which feed impulses to the brain. For instance, if you slam your thumb in a door, pain fibers are stimulated, electrical charges travel up the nerves, and you quickly recognize the source of the injury. Problems arise when an organ is supplied by different nerve pathways or if there is an overlap so that more than one organ is served by the same nerves. In this case, the brain may misinterpret the nerve signals and attribute pain to one part of the body when, really, an adjacent area is stimulated.

For example, the heart, the upper stomach and the lower esophagus are supplied by the same nerve trunk. If a patient has heartburn, doctors may have difficulty telling if the discomfort is coming from the heart or the digestive tract. Patients with heart attacks often believe they are experiencing indigestion; conversely, people with esophagitis (inflammation of the esophagus) may be convinced that they are having a coronary. This is because the brain cannot unscramble the nerve impulses reaching it. Another example: The nerves to the diaphragm also supply the shoulders. Therefore, diaphragmatic irritation (on the right side from an inflamed gall bladder, on the left from a heart attack) may be perceived by the patient as shoulder pain.

Heart pain may be particularly difficult to decipher. Patients having coronary occlusion may have jaw pain, shoulder or arm discomfort, left arm tingling and numbness, throat pain or abdominal distress, as well as chest pain, because the pain is "referred" to another area of the body.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

Today's deal was not difficult to play. Declarer simply had to take a reasonable approach to his good grand slam contract. But he could not afford to be careless. When he won the first trick with dummy's ace of clubs, he discarded a diamond. Next he rashed the ace of hearts, discovering that East had a potential trump trick. Making the contract now required declarer to reduce his trump length to that of East, with the lead in dummy at the crucial point in the play.

Declarer played dummy's remaining heart. East splitting his honors. Next came the king of diamonds, declarer overtaking with the ace in dummy to trump a club. Then declarer led a

AMSOIL dealer Harvey Wesson of Sanford displays products

AMSOIL Synthetic Oils Out Perform All Others

AMSOIL Advanced Technology Engine Oils were the first and are still the best.

For more than a decade, the name AMSOIL has meant the best performance, protection and value to millions of motorists.

More than 14 years ago, AMSOIL, Inc., developed and marketed the first 100 percent synthetic motor oil with an API (American Petroleum Institute) rating, pioneering this new concept in automotive lubrication. Today, AMSOIL manufactures and markets the most complete line of synthetic lubricants in the world.

AMSOIL Synthetic Lubricants are fuel efficient, extended life lubricants manufactured from select synthetic base stocks and special purpose additives. These lubricants provide cleaner rings, stay freer, reduce friction and drag and improve mileage. Is it any wonder that space age synthetic lubricants are used in all jet engines.

Performance tests show cold weather starting is difficult with ordinary petroleum motor oil, but with AMSOIL Motor Oil it is easy. Cold weather pumpability and circulation was found to be poor with petroleum, but excellent with AMSOIL.

Synthetic and para-synthetic AMSOIL motor oils are highly resistant to the destructive effects of heat and do not break down like petroleum oils. This means that AMSOIL motor oils can provide much longer drain intervals than non-synthetic lubricants.

Whatever the need, AMSOIL meets the test. AMSOIL Performance Products are your answer to achieving maximum performance, economy and service life from your vehicle. The cost of owning and operating an automobile today is at an all-time high. If you are like most motorists, you are looking for every possible way to make your car last longer and reduce your operating costs. AMSOIL Automotive Performance Products are designed to help you do just that...make your car operate more efficiently, with less mechanical wear, and keep it in top condition.

Some of the many fine products manufactured by AMSOIL, Inc. are: synthetic oils, synthetic racing oils, para-synthetic engine oils, synthetic 2-cycle oil 100:1 mix, 2-cycle injector oil, synthetic gear lube, marine gear lube, lithium complex greases, synthetic ATF, oil filters, lifetime air filters, synthetic gasoline additive, diesel fuel additives, plus several more car care products.

When AMSOIL dealer Harvey Wesson of Sanford talks about the merits of his products, he does so from experience. Wesson has been a dealer since 1976. He uses them in his four-year-old truck, which has been maintenance free with the exception of replacing a fan belt.

Wesson has used AMSOIL lubricants in every one of his vehicles for 11 years. "I also use AMSOIL SynLubes in all my small engines, such as lawn mowers, weed eaters and outboard engines," he said.

These products are sold wholesale and retail. Mr. Storeowner, you can realize profits from stocking this product. For a demonstration or information on how these SynLubes can be bought and sold, contact your local AMSOIL Synthetic Lubricants dealer, Harvey L. Wesson, at 1319 Palmetto Ave., Sanford, Fl. 32771 or phone 323-4875.

Times Are Changing For Telephones

MIAMI (UPI) — For Marty Segal, the pay telephone business is a lot like real estate.

"Location, location, location. The name of the game we're in is location. Whoever has the most locations wins," said Segal, co-owner of Chicago-based Total Communication Services Inc.

Right now, the entity with the most locations is the local phone company.

But entrepreneurs such as Segal are making major inroads into the nation's pay telephone market, which generates annual sales estimated at $6 billion.

Segal's company, considered among the largest private pay phone companies, operates 1,800 phones in northeastern Illinois.

"We have a very formidable opponent out there, but we're beating them," Segal said during a recent industry conference in Miami.

Totalcom and similar companies are scrambling to install pay telephones at convenience stores, hotels, airports and other spots where high traffic guarantees a steady stream of coin revenues.

Observers say the industry is on the edge of a major expansion.

"I think we are really at a turning point," said John R. Gammino, a former New Jersey Bell executive who now works as an industry consultant. "The signs are there. We are about to approach the growth stage."

The upstart industry, formed since the telephone industry was deregulated in 1984, is making itself felt among the public, too.

The proliferation of new phones owned by new companies has generated confusion and prompted some complaints.

At one time, Segal's Totalcom made its money by counting the nickels, dimes and quarters people dropped into its pay phones.

Although that pocket change still represents the bulk of the company's revenues, Totalcom now earns commissions on credit card calls placed from its phones. Private phone companies also are exploring other sources of revenue, such as advertising and voice messaging.

"What's happening in this industry is that people are finding more and more ways to generate revenues from that space," said Jeffrey Hanft, president of Peoples Telephone Co. in Miami.

Peoples Telephone owns 1,400 pay telephones in Florida and is currently adding new phones at a rate of 200 a month, Hanft said.

"Companies that have been breaking even with coin revenues (now) have a chance to create new revenues," he said.

Peoples Telephone and Totalcom are bolstering their bottom lines by teaming up with companies offering so-called AOS, or alternative operator service.

These companies hire operators to intercept long-distance calls made on private pay telephones. The operators place and bill calls and companies such as Peoples Telephone get a commission for the calls.

"For pay phone companies, AOS is an answer to a prayer," said Gammino, who founded John Richard Associates of New Jersey in 1984.

Hanft said AOS commissions generate about $50 to $100 per phone monthly, compared with an average of $325 in monthly coin revenues.

In August, Segal's company earned $155,400 in commissions, or about $86 for each phone it operates. Segal said most of the revenue comes from coins, but the AOS revenues contribute greatly.

That revenue is having a major impact in an industry that until now has survived on pocket change.

Gammino said he expects the new money to spur growth and fuel an already present shake-out within the industry.

"You're going to find operators merging together just as the long-distance companies did," agreed Segal.

The ability to tap into long distance revenues also has changed where private companies can plant their phones, Hanft said.

"When the pay phone business first started, you had to look for locations that produced high coin revenues," he said. "Now we can go after other types of locations."

Estimates of the number of pay phones in the United States vary from 1.6 million to 1.8 million. Gammino estimated that privately owned pay phones now represent up to 8 percent of the market in the most heavily penetrated areas.

In most markets, however, private pay operators are dwarfed by local telephone companies.

Plutonium Flights Stir Controversy

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Jumbo jets traveling from Europe to Japan carrying dangerous plutonium may refuel in Alaska some day, but before a single pilot can utter "flit'er up," there will have to be serious reckoning between the state and federal government.

When it looked like Reagan administration officials were about to sign a secret accord early this month permitting plutonium flights, Alaska hurried to court for an order stopping the action.

Too late. Secretary of Energy John Herrington, working after hours Oct. 1 — the day Alaska argued for an immediate order against the secretaries of state and energy — beat the state to the punch. Herrington was last of four Cabinet members to consider the proposed accord before sending it to the president.

Japan wants this accord approved. There is every indication that the White House will approve it and send it to Congress, where there hasn't been a peep of debate yet. There is concerned grumbling in Canada, which is under the proposed flight path.

Alaska Gov. Steve Cowper is unhappy about plans to make Alaska a gas station for planes ferrying plutonium over the top of the world.

"I'm not willing to sit back and let it happen without using everything in the state's power to stop it," he said.

Alaska lost the first battle — to get a temporary restraining order stopping Cabinet members from forwarding the accord to their boss. But Alaska lost only because a vocally sympathetic U.S. district judge, James Fitzgerald, never got a chance to rule. Alaska's request became moot while the judge took 24 hours to consider it and Herrington acted.

However, still to come, perhaps before the month ends, is Alaska's request for an injunction against administration approval of the accord, stopping it from going to Congress.

Alaska's suit — naming as defendants President Reagan, the secretaries of defense, energy, state and transportation, and the chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission — charged these officials violated the National Environmental Policy Act by failing to hold hearings and preparing an environmental impact study.

Justice Department lawyer Dean Dunamore accused Alaska of meddling in foreign affairs. He said the law in question does not apply to the president, to foreign policy or to this accord.

Alaska's response: When you make foreign policy, you can't break domestic law and if you're going to land those plutonium planes here, you better examine the impact and let the public have its say.

The two-part accord is the 30-year U.S.-Japan Agreement for Nuclear Cooperation and the U.S.-EURATOM (European Atomic Energy Community) Subsequent Arrangement. Since they are classified, it's impossible to know exactly what they say. In its suit, Alaska objects only to provisions giving blanket approval for plutonium flights.

Toichi Sakata, first secretary in Japan's Washington embassy, said, "Our government started the negotiation with your government in 1962. It took five years to conclude this negotiation. This agreement is very important."

Japan, with scarce resources, relies on nuclear power for 27 percent of its electricity, using fuel supplied and controlled by the United States.

A small Japanese plant converts nuclear waste to reusable plutonium. Remaining spent fuel is sent to France and Britain for reprocessing and — as soon as the accord is approved and safe shipping can be developed — the plutonium will be flown to Japan where industry needs it, Sakata said.

"We're sympathetic to Japan's need for plutonium. We hope they can get it," Cowper said. But he vowed to keep it out of Alaska.

Secretary of State George Shultz, writing to reassure Cowper before he sued, said the accord itself will not trigger plutonium flights through Alaska, at least not until safe shipping can be developed. Casks would be so heavy that planes would have to refuel.

The agreement, Shultz said, "requires only that the aircraft returning plutonium from Europe to Japan must take a polar route or another route that avoids civil disorder and natural disasters." He acknowledged a polar route via Alaska is the one under consideration.

Audrey McLaughlin, Canadian member of Parliament from the Yukon Territory, denounced the accord in a speech to parliament last week, praised Alaska and urged that radioactive cargo flights be prevented from overflying Canada.

Representatives of Canada's ministries of transportation and external affairs said Canada is not taking a stand against the accord, but wants to be consulted and reserves the right to prevent plutonium flights over Canada.

A nuclear physicist, Marvin Reznikoff, said in an affidavit for Alaska that large air shipments of plutonium — estimated at 500 pounds every two weeks — have never occurred and no safe cask exists.

Reznikoff, on the winning side in a 1975 New York suit halting plutonium shipments through Kennedy Airport, calculated that a crash dispersing 2.8 pounds of plutonium powder could cause 500,000 lung cancer cases in people who inhaled microscopic specks.

"The result of an accident could be catastrophic on a Chernobyl-type scale," he said.

Even defense shipments of plutonium go by truck, the suit said. In a single sea shipment, from France to Japan in 1984, warships escorted a vessel carrying as much plutonium as one jumbo jet.

Alan Kuperman, researcher with the Nuclear Control Institute, the Washington group that discovered the plutonium plan, said companies in France, Britain and the United States are developing casks but have failed to build one capable of withstanding a crash.

Kuperman said 20 pounds of plutonium oxide powder could be made into bomb-grade plutonium to create a bomb like the one dropped on Nagasaki.

Hong Kong Wants Added U.S. Investments

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chairman of the Hong Kong Stock Exchange wants Americans to expand their stock investments in the British colony and said its free-enterprise economy will remain after China resumes control in 1997.

Ronald Li, who is credited with unifying four stock exchanges in Hong Kong after a 10-year effort and building the new entity into the world's 11th-largest bourse, told a gathering of investment professionals it is time they looked beyond the 10 top Hong Kong securities that are also quoted in London to the other 262 traded on the exchange.

"It is our purpose today to introduce to you the rest of our listed securities," Li told the audience at a luncheon at the World Trade Center. "We do not intend to do any hard selling. All we want is to show you what we have that you have previously overlooked."

Li, who was accompanied by a large contingent of Hong Kong brokers, said Americans recently have been learning about the colony's securities by a circuitous route. He said that since the massive deregulation of the British financial markets last year, U.S. financial institutions have been acquiring large London brokerage houses and getting a better understanding of Hong Kong securities through their new subsidiaries.

When Li's new exchange opened on April 2, 1986, the Hang Seng Index (similar to the Dow Jones industrial average) closed at 1803.27. The index at the end of August 1987 was above 3610, with about $2.5 billion of new capital raised in that period.

Li said he is confident Hong Kong's economic structure will not be altered when Britain returns the island city to China in 1997 after more than a century of colonial rule. An accord between the two nations calls for keeping Hong Kong as a special administrative region that will enjoy free movement of people and capital.

"There is no incentive for China to change the present system because China is using Hong Kong to tap the international capital market and (it acquires) substantial foreign exchange through Hong Kong," Li said. "In fact, China is investing substantially in real estate and listed companies in Hong Kong."

Li said the exchange's future plans include the establishment of a central clearing and central depository. Currently transactions are done in cash and settlements are completed the next day. The system will be changed to seven days settlement to conform with the practice in North America, he said.

Refuting the argument that his exchange resembles a casino, Li said its regulations are similar to those of the London Stock Exchange and that it is supervised by the colony's government securities commission. All securities prospectuses must meet stringent requirements.

Only profitable and dividend-paying companies can be listed on the exchange. Companies must have five-year track records, adequate assets and reasonable price-earnings ratios, Li said.

Pecan Worshipers Celebrate

By Bill Lehmann
UPI Feature Writer
PECAN CITY, Ga. (UPI) - Strolling through his vast groves of shapely pecan trees, Harry Willson lovingly raps the dark bark of one of his timber children.

"I'm older than these trees," said Willson, a hearty 67, as he chuckles with the startling realization of his arithmetic. "I was born in 1920, and these trees were planted in 1925. My father bought this grove in 1926, and we've been at it ever since."

At Willson's 1,000-acre Sunnyland Farms and other groves throughout the region, pickers and shakers - tractor-like contraptions with rubber arms that literally hug the tree and bring down the nuts - are into high gear as the annual pecan harvest, which can last until Christmas, is under way.

Pecan City is only a few pecan trees from Albany, the self-titled "pecan capital of the world" and host of the annual National Pecan Festival, which runs this year Oct. 13-18.

"A lot of cities say they're the pecan capital of the world," said festival organizer Ellen Pearlman. "But we can prove it."

Figures show Georgia is the leading pecan producing state, providing more than 42 percent of the national crop in 1986, and more than 80 percent of the state's pecan trees are in the Albany area. That translates to more than 75 million pounds of pecans harvested on the plains of southwest Georgia.

As with any crop that dominates an area, pecans have taken on a romantic image for folks in Albany. To show their affection, Albany pecan lovers at last year's festival baked the world's biggest pecan pie, which turned out more like pecan soup but was tasty just the same.

No matter, Okmulgee, Okla., which also claims a stake in the pecan capital category, surpassed the short-lived record with an even bigger pie. Albany officials vow to recapture the record this year.

Said Willson, "You really do get attached to these nuts. I look at pecans as THE nut. The others are all competing for second place in my opinion."

And how do you pronounce the nut's name anyway? With emphasis on the first syllable or second? And is it pe-con or pe-ran?

"It all depends," Willson says diplomatically. "on what your mama taught you to say."

The business of growing pecans traditionally has been a long-term proposition - it takes about 15 years from seedling to respectable production - but it is a lucrative endeavor. However, Bucky Geer, president of the Georgia Pecan Growers Association, said pecan farmers have run into the same problems as other farmers.

"Up until recent years, we've fared pretty well," said Geer, who works 1,800 acres of pecan groves in the Albany area. "But pecans are facing the same situation as other farm commodities. We're selling at prices now that we were selling at 10 years ago, while our cost of production has gone up twofold or threefold over that same time. But we've been marginally profitable, put it that way."

The Willsons have carried Sunnyland Farms beyond the "marginally profitable" stage and made a bump on the map for Pecan City. "Population 50, counting all the cats and dogs," Willson says. "There's not much here, but 'Pecan City' looks good in our ads."

From a small garage operation 20 years ago, Sunnyland Farms has become a major mail-order business, shipping worldwide everything from roasted pecans to pecan brittle and pralines made in the sweet-smelling Sunnyland kitchens to cashews imported from India.

Although he will not divulge proprietary figures, Willson acknowledges a mailing list "in the six figures."

"This business has been very good," said Willson. "We keep it growing every year. But it's still a family operation. My wife runs the mail-order business, my son runs the farm and his wife is in charge of wholesale sales. I do whatever's left over."

Willson said pecans, grown only along the southern rim of the United States from North Carolina to California, have gained a growing acceptance in recent years in the Northern reaches.

"But there are still people in some places up North that have never heard of pecans," said Willson, who is making efforts to make the nut known everywhere.

A pecan pie certainly would turn a few uninformed heads or maybe some pecan clusters. But what is Willson's preference for enjoying pecans?

"I like them raw," Willson, scooping a couple of fallen pecans from the ground. "I eat them just the way they grow."

Mon Dieu! What A Dish

PARIS (UPI) - What has been billed as the world's largest omelette, requiring 61,020 eggs, has been cooked in the eastern city of Meximieux, organizers said.

The omelette also required 110 pounds of butter and 8 gallons of oil. The volume was 1,744 gallons before the mixture was cooked under high heat for an hour in a stove 8 yards in diameter.

The previous record had only 60,000 eggs, 85 dozen fewer than Sunday's omelette.

Supernova Yields Historic Secrets

FAIRFAX, Va. (UPI) — Rewriting text books as they go along, astronomers around the world are making discovery after discovery as they examine the radiation streaming toward Earth from the remnants of a star that exploded 163,000 light years away.

The supernova was spotted last February and since then hundreds of scientists have focused their attention on the expanding cloud of gas left over from the stellar catastrophe in the nearby galaxy known as the Large Magellanic Cloud.

Although far away, the once-in-a-lifetime supernova is the closest stellar explosion in nearly 400 years and the brightest since 1865.

More than 150 researchers gathered at George Mason University Monday for a three-day informal conference to discuss their latest findings. Among the news:

—Astronomers in Chile have detected the first signs that the gas cloud is becoming a transparent nebula. Until now, the expanding mass of gases from the supernova had been so thick and bright it had appeared opaque.

—A West German research team with an instrument aboard the Soviet Mir space station has detected high-energy X-rays from the supernova. Scientists said X-rays can be generated by a supernova in three ways: by hot gas blown away from the star during the explosion, by such gases colliding with interstellar matter or by a pulsar, the collapsed core of the ruptured star. But scientists said it is doubtful a pulsar has formed at this point.

—Barium has been detected in the gaseous remains of the supernova. Barium is an element made by nuclear processes deep inside certain stars. Astronomer Steve Maran of NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., said the discovery of barium suggests the element had moved up from the star's core to its atmosphere before the explosion.

—Carbon monoxide molecules have been identified from infrared light from the supernova. Molecules of any kind were not expected to be present in a gas as hot as that from a supernova. Scientists said it is possible the carbon monoxide only recently formed in the cooler outskirts of the gas cloud or that it formed in the outer atmosphere of the star before the explosion.

Although there had been some confusion about which star actually blew up, astronomers now agree it was a blue supergiant called Sanduleak-69 202.

George Sonneborn of the National Aeronautic and Space Administration's Goddard center said in an opening talk that ultraviolet radiation observations showed Sanduleak "has most certainly disappeared."

Costa Rican Head Wins Nobel Peace Prize For Central America Effort

OSLO, Norway (UPI) — Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez was awarded the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize today for his work as the main architect of the Central American peace plan signed Aug. 7, the Norwegian Nobel Committee said.

"President Arias made an outstanding contribution to the possible return of stability and peace to a region long torn by strife and civil war," the committee said. "He thereby carried on the constructive work begun by the Contadora Group."

The committee said the peace plan, signed by the presidents of the five Central American countries in Guatemala Aug. 7, "laid solid foundations for the further development of democracy and for open cooperation between peoples and states."

"A prerequisite for lasting peace is the realization of democratic ideals, with freedom and equality for all," the committee said. "In the opinion of the committee, Oscar Arias is a strong spokesman for those ideals. The importance of his work for peace will extend beyond Central America."

Nobel committee chairman Egil Aarvik said he expected "positive reactions" from the United States to the committee's choice, although observers noted that Washington has been critical of the peace plan.

"We have seen that President Reagan, despite certain reservations, has placed his support behind the plan," Aarvik told reporters at a news conference in the Nobel committee's downtown office.

Aarvik said the decision to award the $340,000 prize to Arias was partly aimed at speeding up the Latin American peace process. The prize was also in support of Costa Rica as a nation without armed forces, Aarvik said.

Arias, a member of the ruling National Liberation Party, was elected president of Costa Rica Feb. 2, 1986. Since taking office he has actively worked on a peace plan for Central America. The plan signed in Guatemala came after the failure of another peace effort, known as the Contadora initiative, in which Costa Rica also played a role.

Arias was nominated by a Swedish member of Parliament, whose name was withheld by the Nobel committee.

Aarvik said the committee had taken into consideration the efforts of the Contadora group after the nomination deadline for this year's prize expired Feb. 1.

"It says in the Nobel will that the prize shall be bestowed on those who in the past year has worked the most for peace," Aarvik said.

Asked if Washington might interpret the award as political involvement in Central American affairs, Aarvik said, "No, I don't think so."

Arias won the Nobel Peace Prize despite advance speculation that favored Philippines President Corazon Aquino or Argentine President Raul Alfonsin for the prestigious, although often controversial, award.

Martial Law? Aquino Says Maybe

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino Monday raised for the first time the possibility she would declare martial law if it were "absolutely necessary" and "for the greater good of the country."

Some 4,000 soldiers were deployed in the capital to break up pockets of unruly strikers who were urging transport drivers to join the work stoppage. Police clashed with strikers in a Manila suburb and a homemade bomb exploded at a shopping mall, but there were no injuries and no claim of responsibility.

Suspected communist assassins also struck near Manila Airport and the adjoining Villamor Air Base, killing three soldiers, including opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile's former bodyguard.

Aquino, in a radio call-in talk show rebroadcast Monday, the first day of a five-day strike by militant trade unions, departed from previous assertions that she would not resort to martial law as did her predecessor, Ferdinand Marcos. Marcos, ousted in a civilian-backed military coup in February 1986, declared eight years of martial law in 1972.

"I would like to assure the Filipino people that this government will not resort to martial law unless it is absolutely necessary, unless it will be for the greater good of the country," Aquino said.

Military reports surfaced claiming renegade soldiers and right-wing politicians were planning a coup bid within a month. The last coup attempt, on Aug. 28, came two days after a crippling strike called by the unions that began another walkout Monday, demanding a 50-cent increase in the daily minimum wage of $2.70.

Strike organizers, including the May 1st Movement, which claims a membership of 500,000, said the walkout was a success, with 250,000 workers boycotting 500 factories.

But metropolitan police command chief Brig. Gen. Alexander Aguirre said the strike call by left-wing trade unions was largely ignored. Most government and private offices were open in Manila and only about 1,000 to 3,000 workers attended rallies in six areas of the capital.

In the Export Processing Zone in the town of Mariveles in Bataan province across Manila Bay, 5,000 workers in 10 of the area's 23 factories boycotted their companies and held peaceful marches, officials said.

But in Manila's suburban Marikina, riot police fired shots in the air and used truncheons and fire trucks to disperse some 2,000 workers barricading a street in an attempt to paralyze transportation.

Police said several demonstrators suffered minor injuries in a stampede, but denied a report by organizers that two workers were wounded by gunfire. "We fired in the air," said police patrolman Nelson Cruz.

Police arrested 25 workers in Marikina and other parts of the capital.

Police said a homemade bomb exploded in the toilet of a shopping mall in the Manila suburb of Quezon city, shattering a glass window. No injuries were reported and there was no immediate claim of responsibility.

President Refutes Claim That She Hid Under Bed

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — President Corazon Aquino, calling herself "a woman of courage," filed a libel suit Monday and opened up the presidential bedroom to reporters to dispute claims by a columnist that she hid under her bed during last summer's attempted coup.

After reading the newspaper column, Aquino took a reporter into her bedroom in a two-story house 80 yards from the presidential palace compound and lifted a cream-colored sheet covering her bed's floor-to-mattress wood panel slings. "This is my bed," she said. "It is impossible to hide under it."

Press Secretary Teodoro Benigno later took two dozen reporters to the bedroom, telling them Aquino was incensed by the report.

Aquino later filed a libel suit against columnist Louie Beltran and four other executives of the Philippine Star newspaper.

"I have always been a woman of courage," Aquino said. "I don't want the soldiers of the republic to even doubt for an instant that their commander-in-chief is a woman of courage that they look upon and respect."

Beltran, in the afternoon edition of the Star, apologized for writing in the morning edition that during the abortive Aug. 28 rebellion Aquino "hid under her bed while the firing was going on — perhaps the first commander-in-chief of the armed forces to have to do so."

Aquino, 54, has weathered five coup attempts since she assumed power in February 1986 in a civilian-backed military coup that toppled 20-year ruler Ferdinand Marcos. Military reports said last week that renegade soldiers and right-wing politicians were planning another coup against Aquino within a month.

The libel suit said Beltran's allegation was "utterly baseless and untrue." Aquino, who was a housewife before entering politics after the 1983 assassination of her husband, popular opposition leader Benigno Aquino, asked for moral damages that she left for the court to decide.

She said she would donate any financial award to charity.
