PACEMAKER Can ease condition. By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB—I have had complete heart block since 1971 and my pulse rate is between 41 and 44. I am 59 years old and my general health is excellent.

Complete heart block prevents the normal impulse from passing from the top to the bottom of the heart. This usually results in a fairly slow heart rate. If the heart rate is too slow then the circulation is compromised to the point that fainting spells and other complications occur.

For information on recovery from a heart attack send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2412. After the Heart Attack, Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope or mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper.

Patty Hearst Prepares For Psychiatric Tests

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, her final sentencing for armed bank robbery delays, prepared today for a 90-day psychiatric evaluation that could be crucial in her bid for freedom.

Dr. Perez Honored By DAR

Luis M. Perez, M.D. of Sanford was awarded the DAR Medal for Americanism at a meeting of the William P. Duval Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, in Winter Park, Monday.

Ford Plans New Tactic

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Ford resumes his campaign travels next week, he will try out a new tactic aimed at encouraging increased news coverage of his activities.

Since the primary election season began, Ford has done most of his "pressing" on Fridays and Saturdays — a schedule incompatible with the time that his duties as President keep him close to his White House office most of the time.

The President and his strategists have discovered, however, that Saturday travel does not yield as much news coverage as they would like. Newspaper deadlines are early on Saturdays, and weekend television news programs have far smaller audiences than those on weekday evenings.

The result is that Ford now plans to do his campaigning during the normal Monday-Friday work week, avoiding most if not all of his on-screen appearances on weekends, White House sources say.

New Jobs Bill Considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — A scaled-down $1.5 billion public works jobs bill before the Senate stands a good chance of being accepted by President Ford as long as Congress doesn't increase the price tag, a Senate Republican leader says.

But Sen. Robert F. Griffin, R-Mich., assistant minority leader, also warned that expensive amendments could make Senate consideration of the bill "a futile political exercise."

The Senate today was to begin work on the measure designed as an alternative to the $4.1-billion jobs bill voted earlier this year by President Ford.

34 Killed, 30 Hurt In Helsinki Explosion

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — At least 34 people were killed and more than 30 were injured in an explosion at the Lapsa ammunition factory this morning, the official Finnish radio reported.

The explosion occurred in the factory's cartridge loading plant where some 60 people were working at the time, according to the radio report from the scene 230 miles north of Helsinki.

It said injured persons were still buried under the rubble and that it was feared the toll would go higher. Loaded cartridges were reported exploding three hours after the explosion, and the blast cut off telephone connections with Lapsa.

The radio account said the explosion broke windows over a wide area.

An emergency cabinet session was held to name an investigating committee to determine the cause of the explosion.

Jumblatt Calls For Help

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt accused Syria today of preparing a large-scale invasion of Lebanon and called for foreign help to prevent it.

Jumblatt met with diplomats of the United States, France and the Soviet Union after President Hafiz Assad threatened more Syrian military intervention in Lebanon, and Egypt warned the Syrians to leave Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization alone.

"Troubling signs confirm that the Syrian army that crossed the border is strengthening its numbers and is on the way to occupying essential communication networks for a large-scale invasion of Lebanon," Jumblatt said in a telegram to Arab League headquarters in Cairo and Arab chiefs of state.

Arab Resistance Tightens

NABLUS, Occupied Jordan (AP) — Arab resistance to the Israeli occupation of West Jordan stiffened today as Palestinian nationalists and radicals scored a sweeping victory in Arab municipal elections throughout the occupied territory.

"The Israelis are shocked — they didn't expect such results," said Mayor Karim Khalaf of Ramallah, who campaigned successfully for reelection as an avowed supporter of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Senate Committee Kills Municipal Court Measure

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — A Senate committee has killed a measure to create two years the takeover of all municipal courts in Florida.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Philip Lewis, D-West Palm Beach, was a proposed constitutional amendment which, if approved by voters, would have postponed court reorganization that started in 1972.

The bill (SJR48) was defeated in a 3-3 tie vote Monday by the Judiciary-Civil Committee.

Lewis said that only about 50 per cent of the municipal courts have been taken over by the counties and that in a tight budget year the state could not afford to fund the rest.

Under Constitutional Article V, approved in 1972, city courts were to be abolished by January 1977 and their functions assumed by new county courts.

'Baby Moses' Found
MIAMI (AP) — "The baby was lying there in the doorway, not crying, wrapped in a blue cloth with one of its little arms sticking out," says a turnpike service plaza supervisor who found "Moses" admit only hours after his birth.

Supervisor William T. Arnold found the blond boy while making his rounds at the Snapper Creek plaza early Friday.

"I had a pal a scare into me because the baby was kind of purple," Arnold said Monday. "It was so cold and I was pretty just standing there."

The baby is now in the temporary custody of social workers who have nicknamed him Moses, after the Biblical figure set adrift as an infant.

Dam Proposal Gains Support
TALLAHASSEE (AP) — A proposal for a dam to improve navigation on the Apalachicola River is gaining support as more people understand its value, a waterways promotion group has been told.

"As we go up and down the river telling people the actual facts, the people are wanting it and, as the people want it, the officials are wanting it," J.C. Gissendanner of Chattahoochee, Florida director of the Tri-Rivers Association, said Monday.

The proposal by the Corps of Engineers for a dam near Blountstown has been endorsed by commissioners of Jackson, Galdean and Liberty counties, Gissendanner said, the Florida Ports and Water Resources Association Inc.

Six Hurt In Fire
LANTANA (AP) — Fire officials say highly volatile ethylene gas is responsible for an explosion that ripped through a tomato processing plant here, injuring six persons.

"It is an absolute miracle that no one was killed," said Trail Park Fire Chief Robert Beck. "The 90 per cent certain the explosion was caused by the gas. I should know more (today) if the main building is shored up enough so that it's safe for us to go in and start digging in the rubble."

The Mecca Farms packing company's plant sustained heavy damage Monday when the gas used for ripening tomatoes blew out a rear wall of the 17-year-old building.

Lobbyists Hit Term Limits

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — A bill to limit Cabinet members to two consecutive four-year terms has become a victory in lobbying efforts made on behalf of the intended targets, says the sponsor.

Defeated in his first attempt to steer the proposed constitutional amendment (HB171) to provide for the suspension of Cabinet members and other elected state officials charged with official corruption.

Wood said he was opposed because other states that limit the terms of Cabinet officers have ration systems where they swap offices every time they run up against the limit.

"They play a game of I'll get off the merry-go-round and you can get on their field," he said. "If they build up any expertise in their field they waste it by running for something else."

Myra Bell, cabinet secretary, said she agreed with the governor and Cabinet "would be thrown into chaos" if leadership changed every eight years.

The proposal to suspend indicted Cabinet members, governors and judges resulted from the recommendations of former Education Commissioner Floyd Christian, former Insurance Commissioner Thomas O'Malley and former Comptroller Fred Dickinson.

The sponsor, Rep. James Redman, D-Plant City, pointed out there was no way to suspend them after they were indicted.

Legislators Override Two Askew Vetoes

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — Gov. Reubin Askew's veto power, which withstood legislative challenges until this sixth year of his administration, has been overridden for the second time.

But legislative leaders were not saying whether they would make new attempts today to override more of the record 34 vetoes cast by Askew during the 1975 legislative session.

The House overrode Askew Monday by voting 94-18 for a bill to repeal a law requiring state and local governments to withhold part of the payments to contractors until construction projects are completed.

A major overhaul of the state's no-fault auto insurance system had the backing of 18 senators before it headed to its first hearing before the Senate Commerce Committee.

Askew said he would veto any bill that would require state and local governments to withhold part of any payments on construction until contractors complete the job.

Rep. John Clark, D-Lakeland, said repeal of the requirements that government agencies retain a portion of construction fees until project completion would save $12 million to $20 million a year.
He criticized the Department of General Services for advising Askew to veto the bill. "That was pretty sorry advice if saving the state $12-20 million a year is not in the best interests of the state," Clark said.

General Services told Askew that without the retention provision it might not be possible for the state or local governments to force contractors to correct defects or settle inflated claims.
Askew said the provision "encourages the proper and expeditious completion of construction practices, which is a good business practice."
Last year, Askew vetoed 34 bills; he has had 10 of those bills overridden since he was first elected governor in 1970.

Speaker Donald Tucker, D-Tallahassee, told reporters the House will consider more of vetoes "whenever we've got the votes."
Askew, meanwhile, called off a news conference he had scheduled for today, indicating he hopes to dispel conflicts with the legislature.
The governor was overridden for the second time in his six years in office when the House passed 94-18 the Senate construction expenses bill. The Senate's veto of the bill last week.

Kissinger Out On A Limb?

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger may be courted a hidden danger in his otherwise appropriate warnings to Fidel Castro about Cuban intervention in Africa and elsewhere. For more than a month Mr. Kissinger has been sounding this theme in speeches and press conferences, most recently in Dallas. "We have issued these warnings before," he declared. "I repeat them today: 'The United States will not accept further Cuban military interventions abroad.'" In a discussion with a group of senators, President Ford has backed up Mr. Kissinger, saying "we mean it."

Those are strong words. They are to be expected from a United States which has based its Cuban policy for 15 years on resistance to the "export" of Castroite revolution beyond Cuban shores. However, they are only words, and it is not all clear what the United States intends to do if Castro ignores them. There is a good chance, in fact, that the Cuban expeditionary force that helped a Soviet-sponsored faction win the civil war in Angola will be drawn into the effort by black armies to topple the white regimes in Rhodesia and Namibia.

By some estimates there are 20,000 Cuban troops now scattered through Africa and the Middle East — 12,000 in Angola, 4,000 in Syria, 3,000 in Southern Yemen, and 2,000 others in Guinea, Equatorial Guinea, the Congo, Guinea-Bissau, Somalia, Tanzania and Algeria.

In our own hemisphere there are believed to be several hundred Cuban troops in Guyana. Peruvian pilots are being trained in Havana. Cuba has a new foreign aid program in Jamaica, Castro is supporting a Communist-led independence movement in Puerto Rico. Gun-running from Havana is suspected in the arming of guerrilla groups elsewhere in Latin America, and the friendship between Castro and Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos casts a menacing cloud over Panama's bid for a greater voice in the Panama Canal Zone.

All of this provides a good reason for Mr. Kissinger to come down sternly on the issue of Cuban interventions abroad. However, when our government tried to counter the Soviet-Cuban adventure in Angola with military aid to opposing factions, Congress promptly cut off the aid.

Ever since the United States backed out of its commitment to South Vietnam, the credibility of our foreign policy has been under suspicion. Our quick capitulation to the thrust of Soviet influence into southern Africa has added to that skepticism. Now, Mr. Kissinger appears to be drawing a line and telling Fidel Castro — and indirectly the Russians — that the United States will not allow them to step over it.

The danger is that Castro will ignore the U.S. warnings, and that Congress will be so reluctant to support any countermove as it was when the chips were down in Angola. The collapse of bipartisanship in our foreign policy has had grave consequences for the prestige and authority of the United States abroad. We can hope that before the Soviet-Cuban steamroller gains any more momentum, Congress and the Administration will resume speaking with one voice.

No Protection?

A man in Kentucky who had once been arrested for shoplifting but never convicted was identified with obvious injustice as a "active shoplifter" in a police department file sent to merchants. In a 53 decision with which we flatly disagree, the U. S. Supreme Court has ruled there is nothing in the Constitution to protect a citizen from this kind of damage to his reputation by a government agency.

The court majority believes the Fifth Amendment's protection against loss of liberty or property without due process of law does not cover such a case. Shakespeare did not need a law book to see where the truth lies. "Who steals my purse steals trash... but he that filches from me my good name robs me of that which nothing can ever give me back." Justice William J. Brennan Jr., is correct in his dissenting opinion. The decision is "rightening for a free people" and places "vast and arbitrary power in the hands of federal and state officials."

BERRY'S WORLD

Her parents, Randolph and Catherine Harris, have encouraged her to cooperate with the government. They are willing to go into seclusion, they have indicated, if this should become necessary to permit their daughter to assist the authorities.

Government sources have confirmed to us that the Hearsts would be in real danger if Patty turns informer. Terrorists and crazies have tried to intimidate them with death threats. As emphasis, terrorists have set off bombs at Hearst headquarters in New York City, the Hearst mansions and to begin checking them out. However, the federal prosecutor, James Browning, held up the arrangements after consulting with Assistant Attorney General Richard Thornburgh.

They agreed not to begin questioning Patty until after she is sentenced on Monday. This will give them time, our sources contend, to assess her cooperation and check her truthfulness before the appeals are exhausted. Then, if they are satisfied with her cooperation, they may recommend a reduction of sentence.

She learned about the robbery directly from the participants. Yet our sources say her account differs from the recollections of two eyewitnesses. According to the informant Patty has provided, the eyewitnesses have identified the wrong people.

Her parents, Randolph and Catherine Harris, have encouraged her to cooperate with the government. They are willing to go into seclusion, they have indicated, if this should become necessary to permit their daughter to assist the authorities.

Around

The Clock

By ED PRICKETT

There is a truth about the Watergate break-in that you get only a hint of in the movie, "All The President's Men." The truth is that the news stories which forced Richard M. Nixon to resign the Presidency were written by two young and very frightened news reporters who found themselves the central figures in the story of the century.

Though today they are billed as investigative reporters, at the time Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein weren't even seasoned political writers. Both worked for the city desk at The Washington Post, generally drawing less than exciting routine assignments.

As the story progresses, both writers soon realize they have latched onto a major story, — maybe even, as it turned out, of unparalleled political significance. But the Woodward-Bernstein book upon which the movie is based, reveals two scared but eager reporters amazed, yet afraid of the truths they were unraveling during interviews with their sources.

The real force behind the story which toppled the Nixon regime was a grizzled veteran of newspapers, Post Executive Editor Ben Bradlee. Bradlee recognized the pair's alacrity and desire to unearth the story, and the two reporters began digging out the tale that caught up a President in the flood that was to be called Watergate.

Before Watergate during President Lyndon Johnson's administration, Bradlee had written a story saying FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover would not be reappointed. But Johnson himself had planted the story, leaving Bradlee, then a writer, with egg on his face.

After news stories began reaching for close Nixon associates, the pressure increased until Bradlee was forced to issue a statement on one particular story that named Nixon aide John Haldeman as the top official who controlled distribution of political funds used for illegal activities. Pressure was on Bradlee to back off. Instead he said in effect: "We will stick by our boys."

Bradlee was worried: The Post's credibility was at stake and his own ability as a newsmen was under fire. He held out the story proved true, and Americans — he must see them on the screen before they're totally believeable — got a movie called "All The President's Men," which is a realistic story and the most accurate look at a newsmen I've ever seen on the screen.

It reveals human traits: For example there's Woodward falling asleep, almost missing a meeting with "Deep Throat," his source for much of the investigative series. Then there's Bernstein "coming" secretaries and bookkeepers out of his formation. And there's the surprise on Woodward's face as telephone conversations begin to point to the White House as the source of the "coverup."

It's a good movie; its entertaining and credible and can tell you things about reporters and the news business you couldn't learn about unless you've been there. It will tell you also about how two young newsmen, backed by their editor, unraveled a tale of political intrigue that forced the resignation of Richard Nixon, the 37th president of the United States.

RAY CROMLEY Wage Hikes Exceed Productivity

WASHINGTON — That inflation has not been worse the past two years is due in considerable measure to the willingness of labor, overall, to accept moderate wage increases.

Though we have all read of sensational exceptions, cases in which some unions gouged what they could, the Morgan Guaranty survey reports real wages of private nonfarm workers rose less than 1 per cent in 1975, for example.

Unfortunately, to achieve this 1 per cent, the nominal rise was nearly 8, which is far and away above the normal increase in industrial productivity.

To keep pace with inflation and in some major industries, to catch up, the outlook for 1976's bargaining calendar is for overall wage increases of 8 to 9 per cent — on the average. Again, we are talking of nominal increases, not "real" gains in constant dollars.

Reasonable as these demands may be, they are, again, well above prospective gains in productivity. Analysts say this and other factors will result in a minimum inflation this year of 5 per cent or more.

The problem in this instance is not that workers will be asking too much, but rather, that year after year, the increase in productivity is too low, averaging 2.7 per cent over the past three decades.

If we are to give labor, shareholders and the buying public their just due, we shall require a major increase in new investment — the junking of obsolete equipment and the installation of modern machines, computers and other equipment at a more rapid pace than at any time in recent history.

This requires a new climate. It means that private industrial managers be confident in the future, that investors be willing to increase their commitments and that unwise government regulation does not force industry into sterile channels.

Today, James J. Needham, chairman of the New York Stock Exchange observes that as a result of some unfortunate types of regulation, there has been "a significant diversion of funds into activities which do not generate more productive capacity. It is difficult to justify expensive federal regulatory requirements when their costs demonstrably exceed their value to society."

Perhaps most importantly, major sustained significant productivity increases require the nurturing of those among that great body of small firms which are in the forefront of technological advancement, whose investors and managers are willing to take great risks in return for major breakthroughs.

"There's small choice in rotten apples . . ."

Letter To The Editor

Disagrees With Column

I am a college student and a resident of Sanford when not in school. Recently, while home for Spring Break, I happened to read "Around the Clock" column which contained what I felt were gross misrepresentations about the Child and Family Services Act of 1976. My reasons for this charge stem from an article contained in the February issue of the Presbyterian Survey, the official magazine of the Presbyterian Church, U.S. The article was a column written by the Rev. George Chaucer, the denomination's Washington Communicator and was entitled "PCUS Notes from Washington."

The column pointed out that many PCUS members had received unsigned mimeographed paper containing charges about the bill much like those in your article. According to Rev. Chaucer and Sen. Walter Mondale, one of the sponsors of the bill, these charges are false. I quote from the article: "Contrary to charges in the circular, the bill does NOT contain a child advocacy clause, does NOT incorporate a Charter of Children's Rights, does NOT impose any program on the community, and does NOT contain any provision which would interfere with a family's religious practices or the religious training of children by their parents."

Whether or not the bill would solve all the problems of children and parents affected by it is debatable, but those who wish to debate it would need to know the facts about the bill rather than the misrepresentations about it. I would check to see if made those "smattering of quotes in the Congressional Record" before printing them in a column such as yours, Mr. Currie.

(Ed. Note — The Evening Herald subsequently published an analysis which included the views of U. S. Rep. Richard Kelly who expressed concern over the proposed bill and stated he would oppose the measure.)

JOHN D. LOFTON JR. Sonnenfeldt, Kissinger At Odds

WASHINGTON — Last month at the State Department in remarks at the Travel Program for Foreign Diplomats Luncheon, Henry Kissinger said that in his travels around the country it had become clear to him that the American people "neither share nor understand the cynicism and hypocrisy and the pretense which seems to afflict Washington."

Well, maybe the people do and maybe they don't. But one thing is certain: an example of the kind of hypocrisy that is rampant in this city is Dr. Kissinger's pathetically lame attempt to explain away the so-called "Sonnenfeldt Doctrine."

This "Doctrine" was first reported on three weeks ago in a syndicated column by Robert Novak and Rowland Evans. Quoting from a secret State Department nonverbal summary of remarks made last December by top Kissinger aide Helmut Sonnenfeldt to a group of U.S. ambassadors in London, the columnists reported Sonnenfeldt as saying that the "inorganic, unnatural relationship" between Moscow and Eastern Europe, based on "Soviet military prowess, threatens world peace."

"So," Sonnenfeldt was quoted as saying, "it must be our policy to establish a relationship with the Europeans and the Soviet Union an organic one." Counselor Sonnenfeldt was further quoted as saying: "The Soviets' inability to acquire loyalty in Eastern Europe is an unfortunate historical failure because Eastern Europe is within their scope and area of natural interest. It is doubly tragic that in this area of vital interest and crucial importance it has not been possible for the Soviet Union to establish roots of interest that go beyond sheer power."

Asked to explain the "Sonnenfeldt Doctrine" which he was testifying on other matters before the House International Relations Committee, Dr. Kissinger said it was all a mistake. The problem was that "some mistakes" summarized "what he thought Sonnenfeldt said." That summary then became the basis of a telegram, which somebody else prepared. By then it was leaked to Evans and Novak. The result was a column through all these convolutions that the relationship between what Sonnenfeldt said or meant and the final document was no longer very precise.

Sonnenfeldt, said Kissinger, had expressed himself in language "which was perhaps unnecessarily elevated and complicated," in a manner "too elevated for columnists to fully grasp."

But Dr. Kissinger's explanation is, as Lincoln once said of the argument of an opponent, "about as thin as the belled shadow of a horseshoe pigion."

People who know something about State Department procedure tell me that even if the anonymous notetaker in the Sonnenfeldt meeting had scrawled drags up, it would have been virtually impossible for that garbled account could have gotten out as an official cable to all our diplomatic posts in Europe. In fact, the Los Angeles Times reports its State Department correspondent, Oswald Johnson, as saying he was told Sonnenfeldt had okayed the cable in question.

When I asked Sonnenfeldt, in a telephone interview, if either he or an aide had cleared the controversial cable in advance of its being sent, he refused to say. But he did say that the "gentleman" who summarized his remarks had done a "highly skillful compression" of what he said. Furthermore, Sonnenfeldt said — in direct conflict with what Kissinger has said — "I am not sure that the cable doesn't accurately reflect what I said." He declared: "It's close enough to the general drift of the conversation."

Footnote: Since I talked with Sonnenfeldt, The New York Times has published the entire summary of his remarks. This text shows that Evans and Novak accurately conveyed what the cable says he said.

The only criticism I have of what these two columnists wrote is that they did not note that the cable was a nonverbal summary of what he said. There was no direct Sonnenfeldt quotation in it.

Letters to the editor are welcomed for publication. All letters must be signed, with a mailing address and, if possible, a telephone number so the identity of the writer may be verified. The Evening Herald will respect the wishes of writers who do not want their names in print. ### You Can Lose More Than Your Money

How Purse Snatchers Select Victims WOMEN

By TOM TIEDE Herald Services

Of all the victimizing in the nation, three categories are particularly repugnant: male against female, young against old, and race against race. Unfortunately, all three of these situations often come together in the commission of one crime endemic to America's urban streets: purse snatching.

Not usually the most heinous of criminal actions, purse snatching is nevertheless one of the most psychologically fearsome offenses in the nation. Victims are extraordinarily vulnerable. Offenders seek targets who are least able to resist.

And because the crime occurs so randomly, and so precariously, there is always the chance an incident will escalate into violence. Regularly, it seems, there is a small story in the press about women beaten to death with their own pocketbooks.

What's more gruesome is that there are the aforementioned elements of prey involved. No studies of victimization are available for the 92,000 purse snatchings reported in the nation each year (there may be several times this number unreported), but a recent survey of the crime in Wilmington, Del., is illustrative.

That survey, conducted by an FBI-pole crime resistance unit, indicates that of sampled victims 72 per cent were elderly whites and of sampled offenders 82 per cent were black males usually between 13 and 21 years old.

The male-female, young-old, black-white repetitions should not be all that surprising. Even the perpetrating kids are aware of the connections. In interviews with Wilmington authorities, the youths explained that old victims are weaker than young and that elderly whites are thought to have more money in their purses than elderly blacks.

Besides this, black youths say they could be more easily recognized by a black victim, and so is there no security for women on the streets? Police there are precautions to take that are limited only by the imagination. Here again the opinions of the interviewed offenders are of value. The delinquents say women should carry their money in their shoes (or at least not in their pocketbooks), should not dress up to go to the bank (they insist somebody with money looks and acts differently than someone without), and should not walk alone.

The latter suggestion is most important. The Wilmington survey found that three of four sampled victims were alone at the time they were robbed. Wilmington police are now trying to encourage students to volunteer time in an escort service for the elderly. Police themselves might be persuaded to help out by offering women patrol car lifts through risky neighborhoods. Male companions are especially effective, say the Wilmington delinquents; a couple suggests

Seminola Rebekah Lodge Honors State President

Members of Seminola Rebekah Lodge 43 honored the president of the Rebekah Assembly of Florida, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall of Englewood with a banquet held recently at the Oddfellows Hall.

Bicentennial decorations were used throughout the lodge room and dining area. The speaker's table, overlaid with white, was colorful with red, white and blue opened flowers. The length of the table. Banquet books were in bicentennial colors.

Mrs. Eileen Rector was toastmistress. Mrs. Virginia Roche, past Assembly chaplain, gave the invocation. Mrs. Eva Beckham, noble grand, gave the welcome address and introduced the president, Mrs. Hall. Mrs. Nell Furrill introduced distinguished guests. The response was given by Mrs. Fern Kenton, district deputy president of District Ten.

On behalf of the lodge, Mrs. Beckham presented the president with a corsage and monetary gift. Mrs. Emily Jameson and Mrs. Laura Purcell sang one of the president's favorite songs, "Whispering Hope." They were accompanied by Mrs. Bertha Snyder.

Following the banquet a meeting was held with Mrs. Beckham, noble grand,

I'm Not Your Date, I'm The Dogcatcher'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: With regard to finding partners through advertising and computer matching, I admit to being a loser, but the experience was so amusing, it was worth it.

I was preparing lunch for a gentleman who had been "matched" with me by a computer dating service, when I noticed a nice-looking man standing in front of my house, apparently looking for a date. I went outside and eagerly greeted him with: "Oh, I've been waiting for you!"

DEAR ABBY: I am 20, am happily married and have a 2-year-old daughter. Sounds terrific? It is! Now for my problem: I was pregnant when I got married. My husband was my first and only, and it wasn't just a casual thing. We were in love and planning to get married when I got that way.

I realize that I'm not the only girl this has happened to, but my mother has me feel so guilty about it, it still bothers me.

Dear Abby

are the qualities we feel policemen possess. How should we approach them? INTERESTED IN CHICAGO DEAR INTERESTED: You should "approach" policemen as you would any man — carefully. Why not buy tickets to the next policeman's ball and try your luck in a relaxed social setting? DEAR ABBY: I am 20, am happily married and have a 2-year-old daughter. Sounds terrific? It is! Now for my problem: I was pregnant when I got married. My husband was my first and only, and it wasn't just a casual thing. We were in love and planning to get married when I got that way.

I realize that I'm not the only girl this has happened to, but my mother has me feel so guilty about it, it still bothers me.

Little Guys Launch New Title Hopes

At four locations in Sanford Monday tiny figures topped by bulky batting helmets, adorned with oversized fielder's gloves or armed with menacing poles of wood or metal suddenly swarmed onto baseball diamonds—running, throwing, yelling, sliding, batting, fielding, yelling—to open the 1976 Little League season. In the American League, Flagship Bank of Sanford flattened defending champion Atlantic Bank, 18-5, while Seminole Petroleum managed no hits but still dominated Flagship Bank Seminoles, 5-1. National League action saw First Federal clip Chase Federal 7-3. George's clubbed United Trans. Union, 14-4, to kick off Continental League play, followed by Prosser Ford's 3-2 squeaker over Stromberg-Carlson. Sanford Naval Academy field was the launching site for Junior League competition as Moose trimmed Rotary, 11-6. The Junior Leaguers continue action today at 5 p.m. as Kiwanis meets the Elks on the same diamond. A National League contest between Seminole Sporting Goods and Medical Center, postponed Monday due to darkness, has been rescheduled for 5 p.m. today at Bay Avenue field. Regular NL play resumes Wednesday when Chase faces the Halroaders at 5 p.m. and Seminole Sporting Goods tangles with First Federal at 7 p.m. on the Fort Mellon diamond. Jack Prosser Ford and Apex collide at 5 p.m. Wednesday in Continental League action at Westside field, with United Trans. Union battling Stromberg-Carlson at 7 p.m. American Leaguers are idle until Friday when Flagship of Sanford and Flagship of Seminole clash at 5 p.m. on the

Romania Plagued By Auto Mishaps

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Traffic accidents tend to become a "problem of public health" in Romania, press reports here say, despite the fact that only about 10 in 1,000 people in Romania's 21.4 million population own a car.

According to official statistics that were made public for the first time, 20,158 car accidents occurred in the 1964-74 period in this country. This resulted in 14,400 deaths and 25,042 injuries. Despite efforts for better traffic control on roads, and severe driving regulations, the death toll in 1973 increased by 13 per cent over the year before, to 1,620. Excessive speed, failure to pay attention and irresponsible driving contributed to an acceleration in the number of accidents and casualties, which paralleled the increase in traffic and drivers.

Accidents in which alcohol was a factor have been the most serious ones, Victor Bude, chief of the police traffic department said in an interview. One in every 1.7 alcohol-related accidents result in a fatality, he said.

State Decision On Sanford Due Monday Will City History Be Recognized?

By JACQUELINE DOWD
Herald Staff Writer

History may be in the making — again.
Downtown Sanford may take a giant step toward official recognition as an historic district Monday.
The Florida Review Committee is slated to consider Sanford's nomination to the National Register of Historic Places at a Monday meeting at the University of Florida in Gainesville.
The committee's recommendation amounts to state approval of the nomination, said historic preservationist Rod Little, because Florida Historic Preservation Chief Robert Williams relies heavily on the committee's recommendations. "It's a pro forma thing," Little said.
If approved, Sanford's nomination will be forwarded to the federal Department of the Interior in Washington, D.C., for a final review before Sanford is officially listed in the national register. It could take as long as six months before Sanford actually appears in the register.
Carl Shiver and Sharon Wells, the two graduate students who prepared the report that the committee will be reviewing, think Sanford stands a good chance of being listed in the national register.

"It looks promising," said Shiver. "Certain things have been lost, but there are some buildings which date back to the 1800s, which is unusual for Central Florida."
Most of Downtown Sanford was destroyed by a fire in 1866. The important architecture in the Downtown area — mostly 19th century commercial buildings — includes the classical revival baus-art style, the Romanesque style and the Chicago commercial style of the 1920s.
Buildings of historical interest mentioned in the report include the Pico Building, Weika Apartments, the old Sanford Herald building, the Bishop block, the Welborn block, Seminoles Hotel, the Hotchkiss block and de Forest stores. Several buildings outside the Downtown historic district, including the old Mayfair Hotel (now Sanford Naval Academy) are also mentioned in the report.
The five members of the review committee will judge Sanford's nomination on its significance from historical and architectural standpoints.
The official designation of Downtown Sanford as an historic district will not restrict property owners in any way, Little said. The designation will restrict project administered or funded by the federal government that might have an adverse impact on efforts to preserve Sanford's historic buildings.

"As far as private property owners go, they can paint it orange or tear it down and build a McDonald's," Little said. "We would think that unfortunate, but there's nothing that would prohibit them if they wanted to do it."
Several Florida cities have local restrictions placed on renovations or remodelings of buildings deemed historic. The official designation might also help the city of Sanford obtain matching federal funds for redeveloping the city, he said.

Easter Celebration Anticipated

Churches Plan Holy Week Services
By JANE CASSELBERRY
Herald Church Editor

On Maundy Thursday and Good Friday many area churches will be holding special Holy Week services in preparation for Sunday's joyous Easter celebration of the resurrection.
"This day in remembrance of me," Jesus told his disciples as they shared the bread and wine at the Passover supper and many churches will be commemorating the Lord's supper with Holy Communion on Thursday.
Good Friday will be observed in remembrance of Christ's suffering upon the cross.
Among those scheduling Maundy Thursday services are the following:
Holy Cross Episcopal Church of Sanford will hold a Communion service at 7:30 p.m. followed by a foot washing and an all night prayer vigil.
First Presbyterian Church of Sanford will have music by the church choir at the 7:30 p.m. Maundy Thursday service.
First United Methodist Church of Sanford will have a Communion service at 7:30 p.m. with church music and meditation.
First Christian Church of Sanford will hold a Communion service at 7:30 p.m. followed by baptism.
Method Lutheran Church, 17-92, Casselberry, will hold a Communion service at 7:30 p.m.
A Maundy Thursday service will be held at noon at Community United Methodist Church of Sanford.
Allamonte Community Church will observe Holy Communion at 7:30 p.m. Thursday preceded by a soup supper.
The following churches are scheduling Good Friday observances:
At Holy Cross Episcopal Church of Sanford, a three-hour service will begin at noon with Rev. Leroy Soper and Rev. Perry Collins leading meditations on the Seven Last Words of Christ.
First United Methodist Church of Sanford, at 7:30 p.m. service, will include the youth choir, under the direction of Foreman Heard singing the "Seven Last Words from the Cross".

County Says Exemption On Fees Not Automatic

By ED PRICKETT
Herald Staff Writer

County Executive Asst. Roger Newswender declared Tuesday that exempting Goering did — appear before the commission. It will be up to the board to make the decision.
County Atty. Thomas Freeman has consistently ruled that it is illegal to collect impact fees without an ordinance.
Hattaway, the commission chairman, said he based his decision on Freeman's legal interpretation of the issue.
Shortly after the commission's dramatic departure from procedure, a South Seminole Jai-Alai front was given the go-ahead to place traffic signals at a nearby intersection. The fronton will pay 25 per cent of the costs, a payment which Kimbrough said last week represents an impact fee-type situation.
At issue is some $20,000 in impact fees already collected by the county and another $5-million on the books for future collections. Kimbrough has charged Freeman, made a campaign promise in 1974 to outlaw impact fees in return for

Sanford Area To Host Easter Weekend Show

By KRIS NASH
Herald Staff Writer

Rotary Club Charities Benefit Air Show.
Joe Hughes of Santa Ana, Calif., will demonstrate spine-tling aerobic routines in his gaudily marked Super Stearman aircraft roaring through the skies above the Sanford-Central Florida Airport. And teetering on his wing will be Steve Trevor, a student and part-time teacher at the Super Stearman, helicopters, gliders, jet planes and the Goodyear blimp.
Trevor, 22, grew up in an aviation-oriented environment that found him building and flying his own gas-powered airplane at the age of eight. He later followed bouts of water and snow skiing, surfing, sailing, mountain climbing and trampolining with eight years of experience in competitive gymnastics. The final tune-up for Trevor's partnership with Hughes came when the piano-playing science major began water skiing behind seaplanes.
Hughes and Trevor's daredevil antics will be joined together Saturday and Sunday with the precision maneuvers of the U.S. Navy's elite Blue Angels and breath-taking aerobatics by the Red Devils, a team of civilian flying aces, to produce an unforgettable weekend of entertainment for Air Show patrons.
The show schedule begins at 1 p.m. each day on a site located close to the airport parking lot. Persons attending will be directed from the lot to the adjacent viewing area, which has been selected to provide the best vantage point for watching the various events.
No bleachers will be erected on the viewing site, but the area will be circumscribed by crowd control barriers and manned by security personnel, an Air Show spokesman says.
Refreshments, such as food, soft drinks and beer, will be available at various concession spots around the grounds from the time the gates open at 10:30 a.m. until the program ends each day.
There are no picnic grounds at the Sanford-Central Florida Airport, so persons planning such activities are advised to use the concession stands instead or to make arrangements for holding their picnics at other locations or around their automobiles.

'Mommy's Got A Gun,' Tot Warns Policeman

TAMPA (AP) — "My mommy has a gun pointed at you," a 3-year-old blurted as a police officer drove the boy's mother to headquarters to look her on a child abuse charge.
Sure enough, police said. Patrolman David A. Levin said he whirled out of his cruiser, yanked open the back door and disarmed Charlene F. Eckert.
She had a .22-caliber automatic aimed at his back, Levin said, however, isn't so sure that the toddler actually saved his life.
"I'm not really sure," the officer said. "Since his mother had her hands cuffed behind her back, I don't think her aim would have been all that good."
Mrs. Eckert was charged with aggravated assault, nonetheless.
Police said Mrs. Eckert had the gun hidden beneath the waistband of her slacks.
It all started when Levin said he discovered little Eric sleeping in the back seat of a car parked at a bar late Sunday.
He said he asked the boy his age and where his mother was. "All he could tell me was that he was 3 years old," Levin said. About 30 minutes later, Mrs. Eckert came along, investigators said.
"She did drive up with another person after I already had the boy in my car," Levin said. "I went up to his mother and arrested her for child abuse."
Levin put the boy and his mother in the back seat of the patrol car for the ride to headquarters. They had gone about five blocks when little Eric popped up.
Eric has been placed with the Hillsborough County Social and Economic Services pending action against his mother on the two charges.

County Says Exemption On Fees Not Automatic

For just one lot. This action will set policy," he declared.
Newswender said that any builder who is seeking an exemption from the fee would have to do the same thing Goering did — appear before the commission. It will be up to the board to make the decision.
County Atty. Thomas Freeman has consistently ruled that it is illegal to collect impact fees without an ordinance.
