Meyers trial date set

A March 7 trial date was set Thursday for Anton Daryl Meyers who is charged with first degree murder in the 1987 disappearance of a Lake Mary teenager.

At a pre-trial hearing. Circuit Court Judge Alan Dickey also set a Feb. 4 hearing for numerous pre-trial motions filed in the case.

Meyers, 33, was indicted last year for the murder of 14-year old Kathy Engles, who disappeared without a trace May 24, 1987, after visiting a friend. Meyers is reportedly the last person seen with Engles. Engles' body has never been found which is the focus of several defense motions, including a motion to dismiss and to exclude the death penalty.

A 1991 Florida Supreme Court decision strengthen prosecutors rights to use circumstantial evidence to prove someone is dead when no body has been found.

The defendant said he gave Engles a ride from the friend's home to a Lake Mary convenience store where she asked to make a telephone call. Meyers said the teen disappeared while he talked to two women at the store. Later, investigators found the store was closed at the time Meyers claimed it was open with people milling around.

Dramatic rise in babies born out-of-wedlock

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - More and more stugle women in Seminole County are choosing to have children on their own.

The problem, officials say, is that the majority of those mothers are under the age of 18 and most are living in poverty

'There are large numbers of these young women having babies," said Shelia Beal, administrative assistant in the office of Health and Human Services in Sanford.

She declined to speculate why the numbers are increasing.

"I can only say there are more pregnancies that's why there are more births," she said.

According to the most recent figures Beal was able to obtain from the Florida Office of Vital Statistics, there were 821 bables born to unwed mothers in Seminole County from January through September of

During the same period of 1992, she said, there were 530 births to unwed mothers in Seminole County.

She said those figures were the most recent figures available.

The number of children born to unwed mothers continued to climb in Florida in the first nine months of last year, according to state figures.

More than one in three, or 34.7 percent, of all births in the state through September 1993 were to single mothers, according to the state Office of Vital Statistics.

Beal said the numbers in Seminole County were a bit higher, with 39.1 of the births being born to unwed mothers in 1993. That number is up from 38 percent for the same period in 1992.

In 1992, 33.6 percent of the births were to unwed women. That was the first year in which more than a third of the state's bables were born out of wedlock.

The rate has climbed one to two percentage points a year since 1987. See Bahles, Page 5A

SANFORD - Up to an additional 800 needy women and children will be served by an increase to Seminole County's Women, Infant and Children program.

The $46,600 boost to current $432,600 federal state funding for the program will enable a nutritionist and eashier to be hired to serve more mothers and their children, said Dr. Jorge Deju, director of the county Health and Human Services Department. One position has already been filled and the second should be filled in about a month, said Deju.

Section of expressway to open

By J. MARK BARFIELD Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD - A portion of the Seminole County Expresaway will finally become reality to motorists next week.

Beginning noon Tuesday, the three-mile segment of the expressway between Aloma Avenue and Red Bug Lake Road will be opened to traffic. There will be a 50-cent toll to exit at the interchange.

When construction of the $200 million tollroad began two years ago, local and state officials hoped the entire six miles of the tollroad between Aloma and State Road 434 would be open by late summer 1993. But rain delays, deep muck pockets, a sign change and contractor's delays in obtaining dirt dragged the completion date months behind that schedule.

Gayle Geddes, spokesman for the construction project, said she anticipates the segment between Red Bug Lake Road and SR 434 will be open in four to six weeks. The remainder of the road to U.S. Highway 17-92 near Sanford Plaza should be done by early March, Geddes said. Officials hoped to have the entire 12-mile roadway open to traffic Bee Open, Page 5A

Truck overturns, spills propane

FORT PIERCE - At least 700 residents were evacuated Thursday night after a truck carrying 8,500 gallons of highly volatile liquid propane overturned and began leaking. authorities said.

Using loudspeakers from their patrol cars. Florida Highway Patrol troopers and St. Lucie County Sheriff's deputies shouted for people to leave their homes in unincorporated St. Lucie County, Just south of Fort Pierce.

After about four hours, people were allowed to return to their homes and businesses.

The driver of the overturned truck, Jackie L. Lehner of Waterloo, Ind., made a wrong turn and backed into a ditched, causing the truck to overturn, according to a release from the county sheriff's office. He was uninjured, and charges were pending.

The truck was owned by L&L Leasing of Waterloo. Another truck from the company's Florida headquarters at Mount Dora drove to the scene to pump the remaining propane from the overturned vehicle, deputies said.

Using five wreckers, officials were able to upright the truck early Friday, according to the sheriff's office. It was unclear exactly how many gallons of the gas had

Ticketmaster offers gun swap

FORT LAUDERDALE - Floridians soon should be able to trade guns for tickets to concerts, theaters or sporting events when Ticket Master Corp. expands its gun swap program.

The TicketMaster swap, already tried out in California and New Mexico, follows the same principle as other programs buying guns or swapping them for toys or tickets in several cities across the country.

"Violence is out of hand. The daily fabric of our life is impacted by violence on a regular basis," said TicketMaster President Fred Rosen. "You should be able to go to an ATM and not be afraid.'

Stars shine for UNCF telethon

By SANDRA ELLIOTY Karald Staff Writer

SANFORD - A night of starstudded performances are on tap Saturday as the "Lou Rawls Parade of Stars" Telethon celebrates the 50th anniversary of the United Negro College Fund (UNCF).

The seven-hour fund-raiser will be telecast Jan. 7 from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. on WOFL, Fox 35. Johnny Cox, manager of Heilig-Meyers Furniture in Sanford is appearing on the Star Panel during the local portions of the program. Throughout the program, there will be cut aways from the national telecast to the WOFL studio in Lake Mary where aren residents will be asked to contribute to UNCF.

The UNCF fund goal in the greater Orlando area is $100,000. Cox said.

Another major local sponsor of the event is Wayne Densch Inc., Anheuser-Busch distributor in Central Florida. The company is building a new facility on State Road 46 near Sanford. The St. Louis-based Anheuser-Busch Company is a major sponsor of the nationwide UNCF drive. Some Orlando-based representatives of the distributors are also on the local "Star Panel."

Cox said during breaks in the national telecast, the contributions and pledges phoned in by local residents and businesses will be broadcast. "I'm looking forward to it."

the program. Although Saturday marks the first time Cox has participated in the local drive since coming to Sanford in July. it is not his first involvement with the United Negro College Fund.

"I worked with the program in Nashville," Cox commented. "Someone recruited me there, and I enjoyed it." The money collected is channeled to 41 private, historically Black colleges and universities. Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Florida Memorial College in Miami and Edward Waters College, Jacksonville are UNCF schools, Cox said.

Ensuring a college education for Black students in the early 1940's was the impetus behind the formation of the United Negro College Fund. Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, a veterinarian and president of Tuskegee Institute issued a call to action to his fellow leaders at several small Black colleges in the South. He believed a united effort to pool resources was the best approach to provide funding for the colleges.

Through the years, Lou Rawls "Parade of Stars" has raised more than $109 million in cash and pledges. Proceeds from the show are used to expand the educational opportunity at UNCF schools, which currently have a combined enrollment of 54,000 students, a 27 percent Increase since 1986.

Johnny Cox will be on the Star Panel during the telethon.

Miami's South Beach: The place to be on location

MIAMI BEACH - The fashion shoots are easy to find.

Just look for clusters of trendy-looking people toting cameras, tripods, umbrellasized reflectors, makeup and hairbrushes, fluttering around a limber, blase model. Miami Beach, a place where violent crimes against tourists grab the headlines, is seen in the fashion industry as the place to be for location work.

Support the Seminole County Fair

Plans have been announced for the first Seminole County Fair in several decades. It has been scheduled for Feb. 24 through

The fair is planned for the 157-acre area at Seminole Greyhound Park near Casselberry.

People who have been familiar with the area for many years may recall the old county fairs, held in what is now the 3500 block of S. Orlando Drive. It was mostly a carnival event, held as a fund raiser.

Prior to that time, Cecil Tucker, Seminole County agriculture agent from 1956 to 1969 speaks of the agricultural type fairs held in the Sanford area until approximately the end of World War II.

"We even had the Florida State Fair in Seminole County, in the Sanford area, back in the 1890's," Tucker said.

The old time fairs were the type we see in period movies. Cow and calf judging, ple baking, and vegetable growing competition were among the featured events which drew thousands to the fair.

Those times are gone. Today, a county fair must focus on the strong points of what is contained within that county. This could include education and schools, manufacturing, merchandising, and all types of agriculture and horticulture.

We call attention to these points at this time to stress how important a county fair can be today. It can be of great benefit to everyone.

even without a calf-judging contest.

People who live in Seminole County have reason to be proud of what we have. It is certainly not a large county. Yet we have goods, materials, products, which are worthy of being touted. We have natural and man-made beauty which should be exhibited to out of town and out of state visitors.

The proposed Seminole County Fair sounds like an excellent idea. But if it is to succeed, it is going to take some action.

The event is less than two months away. During that time, we urge every governmental body in Seminole County to enact a resolution in support of it. We also suggest each city start plans immediately to set up some type of display or exhibit.

The same holds true for our school system, retailers, manufacturers, nurserymen, fruit and vegetable farmers, citrusmen, livestock farmers, and others. Plan to get involved. Determine now what you will do to represent your important part of life in Seminole County.

If people support it, participate in it, and attend it, we can return to having exciting and rewarding Seminole County Fairs.

Experts try to gauge nation's mood

WASHINGTON - In November the nation will take place in Virginia where a weakened go to the polls to elect 34 senators and the entire House of Representatives. This will be one of the most closely watched off-year elections in decades as experts try to gauge the mood of the voters in advance of the 1996 presidential

This year there will be 21 Democratic Senate seats up for grabs; only 13 seats are now held by Republicans. So far five senators facing reelection — Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio! John Danforth. R-Mo.; Dave Durenberger, R-Minn.; and Malcom Waltop, R-Wyo. - have announced their retirements. The contests for each of these open seats, both in the primary and in the general election, should be interesting. However, beyond these open seat contests there will probably be only a small number of interesting Senate contests.

Both parties have had great difficulty recruiting the strongest possible challengers to incumbent senators. Massachusetts Republicans tried to convince Gov. William Weld to challenge Ted Kennedy. He refused. Democrats wanted HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros to take on newly elected GOP Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson, He said he had unfinished business in Washington. The same story was repeated in state after state.

The most interesting Senate campaign will

Incumbent, Democrat Chuck Robb, will have to take on former Gov. Douglas Wilder, who cannot succeed himself. The winner will then face former Reagan White House aide Oliver North. No other Democratic incumbent appears to be in serious trouble, and no Republican incumbent except Hutchinson if she is convicted of election fraud, on which she has been indicted - appears likely to be defeated. The bottom line is that the Senate in the 104th Congress will look very much like the current one, with the Democrats likely in solid control.

The House of Representatives is a different story. The Democrats will do very well to stay even close to their current strength of 258 seats Only once in the last 90 years has the party controlling the White House not lost House scats in a mid-term election, and that was in the middle of the Depression when Americans thought Franklin Roosevelt and the Democrats were the only answer.

This will be one of the most closely watched off-year elections in decades.

It used to be that congressional seniority was considered an insurmountable advantage. Now the 1994 congressional contests will test whether incumbency has actually become a significant disadvantage

This election follows two in which antiincumbent sentiment was the driving force in House elections. In 1988, only seven House members were denied renomination or reelection. In 1990, this number grew to 16. Then in 1992, the total of incumbents losing in primaries and general elections jumped to 43. Could it be even worse this year?

By the end of the current Congress, 177 members - 41 percent of the entire House will have served at least six terms, the outside limit proposed by term-limitation supporters Fifteen states have already approved term limits for House members, and 73 members from those states will have surpassed the limit voted by their state by the end of this Congress.

Some more of the good stuff

Just when you think you've faced your last list until next December, somebody drops another one in your lap.

I purposely waited until after New year's before presenting my year-end compilation. It's my list of some of the good stuff we saw last year in a bad-obsessed world. The idea was to remind folks of these things now - not last week, when we were looking back, but today, when our feet are freshly planted in 1994

So here's some of the everyday-life stuff that felt right in '93 - and that I'd love to see more of in the new year. In no particular order, I want more:

1. Good things from small packages, like the diversion and inspiration we got from Howard University's football squad and George Washington's hoopsters. Both shone while such local Goliaths as the Hoyas, Capitals, Bullets and the unspeakable Redskins were lackluster

2. Denzel Washington, doing anything except, perhaps, starring in movies in which we're asked to believe that his apparently sane female co-star doesn't notice how fine he is. ...Nah, I'll even take that.

3. Gourmet groceries with a great selection of fresh vegetarian dell items located within 10 minutes of the 'hood. Driving 40 minutes for mushroom pate gets old fast.

4. On-screen diversity, my pet cause. Last fall, when a "Today" sho profile of photogra-pher Richard Avedon featured activistintellectual Julian Bond opining about the gentus' work. I had to stop packing my son's lunch to stare. It's that rare that black people are quoted as experts - or just opinion-holders - on anything unrelated to skin color.

After years of starvation, I can't get enough. Like in the movie "Fearless," where the Hispanic-ness of the character played by Rosie Perez wasn't mentioned, though her cultural underpinnings added flavor and authenticity. Or like in "Grumpy Old Men," where a black storekeeper outmaneuvers pals Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau by making the first move on a sexy new neighbor.

Last year's best example: "The Great Depression," Henry Hampton's addictive PBS documentary on an astounding chapter in American history. Viewers learned not just about hollow-checked Okies, but about Mexican immigrants lured (and later rejected) by Henry Ford's massive auto works, unions that brought together for the first time mistrustful whites and blacks, Japanese families prevented by California law f.om owning homes. The Depression happened to everybody - and Hampton showed it.

5. Creative music from groups like Digable Planets and Tony Toni Tone, who not only used real instruments on "Sons of Soul" (unfortunately that's unusual), but can actual-

6. Wise, witty movies like "Searching for Bobby Fischer" and "A River Runs Through It" (which I discovered a year late on tape), and fun light fare like "Cool Runnings" and "The Three Musketeers" - flims that captivate kids without making parents spend a half-hour explaining the gutter language, stupid sex and exploding bodies. And please - enough appreciative parents to make them as commercially viable as the awful stuff.

Speaking of "Runnings," I want more of what that film, about the Jamaican bobsled team, represents for Disney. The company, long regarded by minority parents as absolutely Neanderthal regarding diversity, appears to have discovered a whole new world, as exemplified by 'What's Love Got to Do With It" and the up-and-comers, "The Air Up There" and The Lion King."

I purposely waited until after New year's before presenting my vear-end compilation.

7. TV programs like ABC's "Lots and Clark" and Fox's "Sinbad" - wisc, witty new shows...(see number 6.).

8. Public, official and - in the case of radio stations that reject "gangata"-themed music industry outery over violence. We're finally acknowledging the connection between mayhem in American TV, music, movies and video games and the violence in our homes and streets. All are part of an increasingly vicious circle that will never end until we end our tolerance for it.

9. Best-seller lists that reflect our continued interest in spirituality — as indicated by megasellers by Deepak Chopra, Marianne Williamson, M. Scott Peck and several others. I was also tremendously pleased by Toni Morrison's deserved Nobel Prize, and by the attention given to poet laureate Rita Dove and to inaugural verse-meister Maya Angelou.

10. Steven Spielberg movies like "Schindler's List," in which nobody stands. mouth agape, in awe - as his characters in previous movies have - at the sight of long-lost relatives, brontosauruses, landing and departing spaceships and grown men

Finally, I'm grateful for my oh-so-vocal readers. You keep me aware of the intelligence, caring and courage out there. Your words make me laugh, cry, rail, wonder and think.

Sen. Kerry wages war against crime

WASHINGTON - Sen. John Kerry, D. Mass, estimates that U.S. politicians have declared "war" on crime seven times over the years. Each time, he says, they cut and run before finishing the job.

'We've been screwing around the margin of this (crime-fighting) thing for 25 years or more," Kerry told us, "Some say we lost this war. I say we never really waged it.

Kerry is a liberal Democrat who burst onto the public scene more than 20 years ago as a returning Vietnam war hero turned protester. He made national headlines by leading a veterans group in opposition to Vietnam, thundering about the thousands of young fives being lost because Amerilacked the resolve and resources to end the war.

U.S. politicians have declared These days Kerry has emerged as one seven times of the leading hawks in the Senate's latest over the years. war against crime. Yet vestiges of Vietnam remain in his critique of the crime crisis: the loss of young lives to senseless violence; the half-measures and hollow promises of politicians: and even the celebrated Vietnam-era "credibility gap." These issues, which first brought him to politics nearly a quarter century ago, are now driving his crusade against the rising tide of estimates that

"war" on crime

This time Kerry wants Congress and the president to go for victory - not for the draw. as in Victnam

Kerry urged Clinton recently in a private memo to declare a "national emergency." which would be far more than symbolic. It would put the crime budget "off-budget," meaning that money appropriated for fighting crime wouldn't be counted against the deficit. This is how the administration plans to handle health-care reform, and Kerry can't understand why the White House won't do the same for crime, which is arguably the biggest public health issue facing America's

"I am simply baffled by that," says Kerry, who has been one of Clinton's most reliable soldiers in the Senate. "The budgetcrunchers couldn't find the money (for health care). Now they take health care off budget and leave this on and you struggle to find the money for (drug) treatment on demand. It really doesn't make sense to me.

Kerry's solution to the crime dilemma is an ambitious attempt to bridge the gap between left and right on the political spectrum. Recently, the debate has split between conservatives - who want more prisons and longer sentences - and liberals - who want to attack the underlying social ills that cause crime by creating more government programs. Kerry favors a mixture of both: more community centers and more cops; and swifter punishment for violent offenders without the "mandatory minimum" sentences that have clogged prisons with nonviolent offenders.

Ultimately, Kerry admits, crime prevention must begin at home.

"It isn't going to do a hell of a lot of good if kids are still being raised in sociopathic environments," he says. "Kids don't know the difference between right and wrong. They are willing to kill someone to wear their clothing or take their jewelry."

Fighting crime must become part of what Kerry terms a "national effort to rescue young people." That's where the final Vietnam analogy suggests itself - the credibility gap of the crime debate.

Kerry's comments come in the wake of the Senate's passage of a $22 billion anti-crime package he helped champion.

Undersheriff Steve Harriett said all municipalities are requitred to firm over the conliscated weapons to the sheriff. Currently, the guns are turned over to a gunsmith who salvages sprin is and screws in exchange.

After documenting the information on the weapons, FDLE would destroy the guns. The crime lab provides information about the types of weapons used to fire ammunition.

If bullets have been recovered at a crime scene, but a weapon not found. Harriet said, the additional information provided by ballistic tests on confiscated weapons might aid in resolving the case

Confiscated weapons can by law be converted for use by law enforcement agencies, but that does not bappen very often.

"Unless the weapon just happens to be exactly what we need, and that's unusual, we don't keep it," Harriett commented. He said most conliscated weapons are junk and ire not the quality of weapon ased by the sheriff's personnel.

What we are interested in doing is making sure that weapons like that don't get back on the street. It is most likely the weapon has been used in some criminal activity and we don't ant that to recur," the unersheriff said.

Russell recalled only one intance where a seized firearm as converted to use in the ity's arsenal.

Amid growing fears of violent rime, the federal government nd cities across the country are sitting off a little-noticed source guns on the street: their own w enforcement agencies.

The widespread practice of seized from criminals or retired from police use has come under increasing scrutiny as the nation debates tougher gun control.

"The city shouldn't be in the gonrunning business," said Phoenix Mayor Paul Johnson. whose city has just joined the ranks of those that destroy seized firearms rather than sell them to dealers.

This week, as national attention focused on private efforts to take guns out of circulation by trading them for toys, sneakers, food or other merchandise, the drive to end government gun sales gained momentum:

- The U.S. government declared it would stop allowing its law enforcement agencies to sellsurplus firearms to dealers, a practice that has put 61,900 guns on the street since 1982.

- The Washington suburb of Vienna, Va., decided to give up $5,000 in potential revenue by destroying 40 surplus handguns. The police department had upgraded its arsenal by issuing semiautomatic pistols to its of-

 And the Albuquerque, N.M., police department ended its longstanding practice of selling seized guns. It will grind them down or blow them up. Statistics aren't available from the government or national police and gun-control groups. but those involved acknowledge the number of guns sold by police is a tiny part of the 200 million guns in circulation in this country.

Advocates say there is both real and symbolic value in getting police to quit selling guns.

spokeswoman Mary Molina

The idea is hardly new Among the many cities that don't sell setzed weapons are Los Angeles, Baltimore, Milwaukee, Honolulu, Pittsburgh, Jackson. Miss., Tulas, Okla., and cities covered by state laws or policies in New Hampshire, Maine and New Jersey.

The sentiment that brought passage of the Brady Bill waiting period for gun purchases and the goods-for-guns fervor has helped advocates overcome arguments that police can't afford to give up the revenue.

The Phoenix City Council voted in December to have police destroy seized weapons after a debate in which much was made of the $100,000 a year the sales brought the department.

Most departments, particularly small ones, aren't enthusiastic about selling guns, but have little choice, said Dennis Martin, the incoming executive director of the National Association of Police Chiefs in Washington

'Crime does pay when there's not enough police and they don't have enough money to purchase quipment," Martin said.

Gun-control advocates applaud the move to end gun sales by police but realize that police sometimes need the money, said Cheryl Brolin of Handgun Control Inc. in Washington.

They've got to upgrade to higher-caliber weapons because they're outgunned on the street. but they can't afford to do it," she said.

Johnson, the Phoentx mayor. acknowledged that the nation's ninth-largest city will miss the revenue. But, brandishing a seized assault rifle, he said, "I wouldn't trade that $100,000 for one human life on any given day of the year."

Thanks for the memories

The classes that graduated from the Crooms Academy in the 1950s gathered recently in Sanford for a reunion. While they were here to celebrate the fun they had and the important lessons they learned at the school, Bob Thomas, chairman of the awards committee and Dick Evans, chairman of the classes, presented Barbara Kirby with an award for the school.

Crooms, formerly the county's all-black high school in Sanford, is now a school of choice for students with disciplinary problems, a tack of interest in school or with newborn children. The classes of the 50s believed the school continues to touch the lives of its students in a positive way. The plaque was dedicated in memory of the leachers who had served there in the 1950s.

LAKE MARY - Although not on the agenda, a pig farm became a major subject of discussion at last night's Lake Mary City Commission Meeting. Citizens complained of noise and odor problems.

By MICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

Fifteen pigs are on 1.7 acres of land owned by John Carlt, on Rinchart Road near Pine Circle Drive, the Feather's Edge restdential community

In December, Carli had applied to the Planning and Zoning commission to permit the establishment of a veterinarian bospital on the property, which is presently zoned Agricultural.

Cittzens objected, and P&Z denied the conditional use request. The matter was to have been appealed at the Dec. 16th City Commission meeting, but was requested to be tabled by Dr. John Dee, who had planned to operate the vet clinic.

Last night, an estimated nine residents were on hand for the commission meeting. Dave Campbell, a resident of Pine Circle Drive, spoke on the matter during the public participation period of the meeting.

"We just can't continue to put up with this," he said. "the noise and odor problem is getting worse every day. They have those pigs on a small piece of land, and it's very close, possibly within 20 feet of some of our

Neighbors protest odor and noise

"We were told that you delayed the matter at your last meeting, and that Dr. Dec was to meet with some of the residents about what he was proposing." Campbell said, "but as of now, we haven't heard from him."

Mayor Lowry Rockett took exception. "The city did not delay the request," he said. That was at the request from the applicant. This was an appeal on a conditional use request, and the matter of the land use, and pig problem are two separate issues

Commissioner George Duryea commented, "During our discussion of this property for land use planning. Mr. Carli tried to get the land designation changes, but when it wasn't done, he asked if they would rather have him raise pigs on the land."

Duryea asked City Attorney Ned Julian if there was anything the city might be able to do regarding the pig farm to mitigate the affect on the neighborhoods.

Julian responded that the use of the agriculturally zoned land as a pig farm is within the zoning class: "But you can't use land for any purpose which may create health or safety pro-blems," he said. "You might consider looking into whether this may constitute a nulsance."

Commissioner Gary Brender suggested City Manager John Litton get with Seminole County officials to see if this might be considered a hualth hazard.

"We don't want to cause problems here," Campbell said. We want to do everything we can to work through the system. but we would like to request action on what is being done on that land with the pigs.

Sue Olinger, who recently moved from Sanford to Lake Mary also spoke on the problem. "We have only recently moved to Lake Mary." she said. "and one week after we moved in our new home, those pigs appeared right across the street. Imagine how that makes us feel."

Olinger suggested the city resolve the matter, "before it gets into some legal hassle."

Mayor Rockett suggested City Manager Litton meet with Dr. Dec and Mr. Carli and find out what action was planned on the conditional use request.

Attorney Julian also suggested City Planner Matt West examine the land use regulations regarding what type of farm animals may be kept on agriculture property of such small size.

Commissioner Brender urged that the actions be done "post-haste."

Duryea observed, "What I see is that this is a case of someone using property to the detriment of neighbors, and I believe we should get this matter resolved as soon as possible."

WINTER GARDEN - Different day, different performance.

The Lake Mary High School wrestling team, which turned in n lackluster performance in a win over Lake Howell Wednesday, rebounded with a masterful 59-10 effort over the host West Orange Warriors Thursday night.

Lake Mary also dominated the junior varsity match, 62-9.

"West Orange is a very good team," said Lake Mary coach Doug Peters. "After the way we wrestled last night. I was worried going into tonight's match. flut we wrestled about as well as you could. The guys bounced back from last night."

Lake Mary (now 5-2 in dual meets) won the first six matches of the evening, eventually scoring victories in 12 of the 14 weight classes to send the Warriors (5-1) to their first loss of the

"We were strong in the lightweights again," said Peters. They wrestled real well. And while we already had the match won at the time, two of our heavy weights had real big matches.

"Jason Contino wrestled a great match at 189 pounds. He was losing 5-2 after the first period and he came back to pin the kid at 2:37. And Ronel Jumpp faced a tough opponent at 220 pounds, a kid with a strong reputation. But Ronel wrestled real well and scored a 6-1 decision."

Lake Mary's junior varsity wreatiers will compete in a tournament at Bishop Moore on Saturday. The varsity will return to action next Friday in a home dual meet with Deltona.

starters - back from last years state runner-up squad. Lake Mary struggled to a 3-8 start heading into the winter break. Since Christmas, however, the Rams are 3-1. "We played Lake Mary basketball tonight," said Lake Mary head coach Anna Vantandingham. "It was a good feeling. not just to win, but to see the good athletes and players we knew we had finally step forward and play the way we knew they could. "The key tonight was that Laura (Ragucci), Jennifer (Greissing). Diane (Duber) and Dawna (Freguson) all finally stepped forward together. I was really proud of them today. The bench also went into the game ready to play, not scared like usual.

With Ragucci hitting five of seven shots (including 2-for-2 on three-point attempts) for 12 first-quarter points, the Rams took a 18-13 lead after one period.

Lake Howell made several runs at Lake Mary, but the Rams were at the top of their game for the first time this season and never let the Silver Hawks get closer than six points.

'You're just not going to beat someone when they shoot that well," said Lake Howell head coach Dennis Codrey. seemed like they were making everything and we couldn't make a layup."

Package foods properly

Save money and increase storage life of food

Keep your food fresh. You know about smart shopping and you know a lot about good cooking. Do you know what to do with the food between unpacking the grocery bags on Saturday and whipping up the chicken fricassee on Tuesday?

The storage life of fresh meats, vegetables, fruits, all the foods you cook and save, depend on the packaging you use to protect them. Even if you have done everything else right - bought food at its freshest and kept It at the right temperature for the right time - your food won't stay fresh and safe unless it is packaged and stored properly.

The good news is modern technology has provided cooks with highly engineered packaging materials that can help extend the shelf-life and flavor of foods. Plastic packaging, for example, can act as a humidifier, a vapor barrier and an oxygen barrier - the trick is knowing how to use it properly. Here are some tips.

Storing food in the refrigerator: Chilling food is a universal and effective way to extend food's storage life. On the other hand, a refrigerator cannot thwart enzymes. bacteria, yeasts and molds indefinitely.

Fruits and vegetables: Store fruits in the refrigerator in plastic bags. When the water in fruits evaporates into dry air, vitamins C and A go with it. Similarly, food like fresh celery or asparagus, which need humidity to stay crisp, keep longer when refrigerated in plastic bags.

CONSUMER FOCUS

Dairy: Egas, milk, butter and many other foods absorb odors and should be kept in closed containers.

Meats: Raw meat, fish and poultry should be put in plastic bags so raw juices, loaded with bacteria, don't leak on other foods. Fruits, nuts and grains: Dried fruits, pasta, crackers, cereal, whole grain flour and nuts all keep longer in the refrigertor. These foods still need some kind of packaging - plastic bags or lidded containers - to keep odors and molds away.

Storing food in the freezer: Freezing is simple; it preserves food for a long time, puts microorganisms on hold and does relatively little damage in the process.

Containers: Only certain kinds of containers hold up under freezer temperatures. Stock up on containers with tight-fitting lids, specifically labeled for freezer use.

Wraps: Heavy-duty aluminum foll is good for freezing and so is plastic-coated freezer paper. Plastic bags and wraps speicifically made for the freezer work well for most foods.

Size: When you pack food in rigid containers, choose the right size for the job. Air on the inside of the package can be just as damaging as air on the outside.

Label: Every package of food you freeze needs a lable with a description of the contents, the date frozen, and a "use by"

Freeze it fast: Refrigerate hot foods before you freeze them. Then pack food in the smallest containers that are practical so that they will freeze more quickly.

If you follow these simple procedures you'll save meney and increase the storage life of your food.

Secular lifestyle stiff competition in church membership wars

By DAVID BRIGGS Associated Press Writer

In the high-stakes game of denominational musical chairs, the big winner of the 90s may be no church at all. A new study on religious mobility in America has found that many Americans have given up the religious tradition they grew up with, and simply not replaced it or turned to another form of religion. Catholics and conservative Protestants are the most loyal, but even large segments of their membership are showing increasingly marginal ties to their denominations, researchers say in the latest issue of the Review of Religious Research. The social pressure to belong to an organized religious group that reached its height in the 1950s doesn't seem to apply. "It's become quite acceptable these days to be nothing throughout your life," said C. Kirk Hadaway of the United Church Board of Homeland Ministries. "It doesn't really matter what you are anymore." In the study "All in the Family: Religious Mobility in America." Hadaway and sociologist Penny Long Marler of Samford University in Birmingham, Ala., looked at religious switching patterns from 1973 to 1990 based on General Social Survey interviews collected by the National Opinion Research Center in Chicago.

In that period, conservative Protestants. such as Southern Baptists and members of the Assemblies of God, surpassed Catholics as the group most likely to stay in the religious tradition they were raised in. In surveys from 1988 to 1990, 83 percent of adults raised as conservative Protestants said they remained conservative Protestants, compared to 81 percent of Roman Catholics who stayed in the Catholic Church. The percentages were nearly reversed in surveys taken from 1973 to 1976.

In the most recent survey, liberal Protestants including Episcopalians and Presbyterians were least likely to stay within the denominational family, with only 63 percent of individuals surveyed between 1988 to 1990 saying they remained liberal Protestant. The loyalty rate for moderate Protestants was slightly higher at 67

When it comes to the net effect of religious switching. Hadaway found all the nation's major religious groups lost members. The net loss ranged from 1 percent for conservative Protestant groups to 16 percent for moderate Protestant groups, which included the United Methodist Church and other denominations that have endured dramatic membership losses in the last two decades.

Liberal Protestant denominations lost 2 percent, while the Catholic Church experienced a net loss of 10 percent.

The big gains from religious switching came in the "other" and "none" categories. There was an 86 percent increase in individuals switching to no religious affiliation in the surveys from 1988 to 1990, and others including minority religions. Mormons, Jehovah's Witnesses and Christian Scientists had a net gain of 33 percent through religious switching.

Behind the legend of Jesus in Japan

One of the big mysteries about the life of Jesus concerns the so-called "hidden years" -- when he was between the ages of 12

The gospels say nothing about Jesus in that 18-year period.

The usual speculation is that he spent those years at home with his family in Nazarcth. perhaps working as a carpenter. In any case, most scholars (and most Christians) think that

Jesus lived his entire life in the little country of Palestine. But The Wall Street Journal noted recently that Jesus, acin that country on two different some to be buried there.

Actually, the legend of Jesus in Japan was publicized in America more than 20 years prophet. ago. John Justin Smith, a travel

What unfolded was a tale that has been denounced by some as an "outrage to Christian belief." But the legend about Jesus has been growing in Japan for generations. It is the subject of several books and now has attracted the attention of Japanese archaeologists.

The story of Jesus in Japan was originally told in 1935 by a Shinto priest named Takeuchi, a member of an ancient Japanese family.

He eited newly discovered writings that had been in his family for 60 generations. They claimed that Jesus had traded places with his brother before the crucifixion and his brother had died on the cross in his place.

The ancient documents, said

George Plagenz

Takeuchi, told how Jesus, after a four-year journey, made his way to Japan, a country he had first visited as a youth.

On his second visit to Japan. cording to a legend current in in his early 30s. Jesus is said to Japan, is believed to have lived have taken the name of Toral Taro Tenkujin. According to the occasions and is even thought by legend. Jesus married a Japanese woman named Miyuko, had three daughters and lived to age 112 as a respected teacher and

Smith was taken by his guide writer with a Chicago newspa. to the village of Shingo in per, visited the Asian nation, northern Japan where he was heard the story and investigated. shown a mound that the guide said marked the hurisl

Jesus. Next to this grave was another where the legend says the cars and hair of Jesus' crucified brother were buried.

The story of how Jesus escaped death on the cross is told by Kiku Yamane, a Christian who lived in Tokyo and wrote a book titled "Christ Dicd in Japan." When it became obvious, said Mrs. Yamane, that Jesus would be put to death, his younger brother - known in Japan as isukiri -- said, in effect, "You have much left to do on Earth. Let me die in your place."

This, says Mrs. Yamanc. explains the apostle Peter's famous denial. She says Peter was being honest when he said at Jesus' trial, "I know not the man" - for he was not acquainted with Jesus' brother.

entered the tomb, stole laukiri's body and buried it. Carrying the relics of his brother's body. Jesus supposedly fled to Japan and began a new life. Could the story be true? Most Western Bible scholars dismiss it.

The best explanation I know for how the story started is this: A Christian missionary went to Japan a few hundred years ago to tell the villagers about Jesus. He so exemplified in his own life what he told the people about Christ that they assumed he was this very Jesus.

When he died, the missionary was buried on a hill in the town.

Thereafter, when other Christian missionaries would come to the village and speak of Jesus. the people would say: "Oh, we know Jesus. He lived here. When he died, we buried him on that hill over there."

From that rather lovely story. After Isukiri's death, so the the legend of Jesus in Japan legend goes. Jesus and Judas grew into its present epic proportions. That, at any rate, is my
