City Officials Call Extra County Gas Tax Money Plan 'Blackmail', 'Bribery'

(Second of three-part series)

The Seminole County Commission may have thought it was dangling a carrot in front of the county's municipalities earlier this past week concerning a 4-cent county gasoline tax, but at least one city official said "It's plain old blackmail."

None of the city officials interviewed indicated they are going to change their opposition to a gas tax despite the carrot.

County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff has suggested to his colleagues that the city of Oviedo should be rewarded for supporting the county plan for a distribution of revenues from a 4-cent per gallon county gas tax if it is levied.

During meetings with city officials, County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn said if the tax were levied, revenues from 1 cent would be divided among the seven cities on the basis of population while the revenues from 3 cents would be used to improve county roads in both the incorporated and unincorporated areas which are carrying traffic beyond their designed capacity.

Since each cent of tax is expected to bring in about $850,000, the distribution on the basis of population would have seen Sanford and Altamonte Springs each receive about $214,000. Casselberry would have gotten $139,000; Winter Springs, $110,000; Longwood, $94,000; Oviedo, $28,000; and Lake Mary, $27,000.

The county is now considering splitting part of the sales tax revenues with the cities based on the average of the amount of money spent by each over the past five years in comparison with the funds spent by the county for transportation needs.

Kirchhoff estimated the new method of distribution, if the tax is imposed, would give the county 85 percent of the resulting revenues with the remaining 15 percent split among the cities.

Kirchhoff suggested that Oviedo should receive the same funding as it would have under the population formula while the other cities receive funds based on past municipal spending for roads.

Commissioner Barbara Christensen, a former Casselberry city councilman, agreed with Kirchhoff. She said the other municipalities are not going to reject any agreement for receiving part of the gas tax revenue but are reluctant to take a public stand in favor of the tax.

She said Kirchhoff's idea "would be an incentive for the cities to stand up and say we want those funds."

County Attorney Nikki Clayton said the only way to give additional funds to Oviedo would be to take the extra money from the county's share of the gas tax funds and both county commissioners said that is exactly what they want to do.

Casselberry City Councilman Tom Embree, responding to the proposal by Kirchhoff and Mrs. Christensen said, "I think it's ridiculous."

"In other words, Kirchhoff is trying to blackmail us into going along with his position. If somebody can't stand up for himself and say whether he is for or against, I certainly don't think he should use bribery," Embree said.

Embree noted he is already disgusted with the county commission for its position on double taxation when a special committee appeared to come to agreement with the county last November.

Embree said he made a motion last Monday night for the city of Casselberry to fight the double taxation issue in the court and the matter was tabled. He said he will again make the motion this Monday night.

He added he will also suggest to his fellow council members that they appoint City Attorney Kenneth McIntosh to represent Casselberry at next Wednesday's 2 p.m. Sanford City Hall meeting of the double taxation committee of the Council of Local Governments in Seminole County.

Hawkins Hails Nuclear Subs; Calls For Peace

(Special to The Herald).

GROTON, Conn. — Nuclear powered Trident submarines are among "the most important elements of the defense of the United States and the free world" U.S. Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Winter Park, said Saturday at the commissioning of the U.S.S. Florida, the Navy's third Trident submarine.

"American submarines have long been known for their technological sophistication and the Trident program carries on that impressive tradition. The result is a significant increase in the effectiveness of our sea-based ballistic missile forces, enhancing an already potent force for peace," Mrs. Hawkins said in her remarks.

"The U.S.S. Florida is a vessel whose awesome capabilities will be a vital force for the preservation of peace."

Sen. Hawkins, who was invited by Navy Secretary John Lehman to deliver the principal address at the commissioning ceremony, also suggested in her remarks that Americans must carefully weigh the desire for nuclear disarmament against the deterrent value of military strength.

"I'm certain that there is not a man, woman or child here today who would not rejoice at the opportunity to dismantle the armed forces of the world, including our own, and to redirect defense spending into programs that could include the well being of our society," she said.

"This is a dream buried deep in the heart of man, and a hope toward which we must continually strive. Furthermore, I believe that we must be willing to take risks for peace, that we must be willing to put forward herculean efforts to decrease the chance of war. In that regard, we cannot be naive. We cannot gamble with the lives and freedom of people we serve... We know from a wealth of experience that only strength maintains peace. To ignore this lesson, I believe, would be to invite the very disaster we seek to avoid."

Also, Sen. Hawkins said, Americans cannot afford to ignore threats or intentions of any hostile nation in formulating our own military policies. "In an age of thermo-nuclear weapons, the issues of war and peace take on a very special significance. We are now at an unprecedented period of history. The technical capabilities of destroying nations within a matter of minutes does exist. This is a terrifying prospect, and one which has led men and women of sound mind to wish that nuclear weapons had never been invented."

"The genie, however, cannot be put back into the bottle. That's why it is so vital that we continue to search for ways to deal with the realities that confront us," she said.

First CFR Patient Recalls Anxious, Humorous Day

By Debbie Fender
Special to The Herald

The day was Wednesday, June 2, 1982. The time was 7 a.m. Darlene Whipple was the first patient admitted at the Central Florida Regional Hospital. There existed as always the uncertainty and anxiety about hospitals, but also excitement about not only being the first patient, but also the first surgical patient.

"I went to see my doctor, Dr. David Mowere, on the day before and he wanted to admit me for emergency surgery right away. Because the new hospital was opening the next day, and I would be transferred anyway, Dr. Mowere recommended that I check into the new hospital in the morning," Mrs. Whipple explained.

"The next morning, my husband, David, and I arrived at the new hospital at 7 a.m. I remember how everyone was running all around, and trying to get prepared for the patients that were being transferred from the old hospital. Everyone was real helpful, though, and I was taken to my room with no problems. They immediately started getting me ready for my surgery, and by 8 a.m. I was in the operating room. It was funny because they were all running around, and no one knew exactly where anything was located. I remember they couldn't find the surgical gowns, but they finally did and proceeded with my surgery," she explained.

Mrs. Whipple was born 30 years ago in upstate New York where she lived with her parents and went to school. She married the boy next

Sally's Shuttle Ride 'Smooth'

CAPE CANAVERAL — The shuttle Challenger rocketed smoothly into a safe 184-mile-high orbit Saturday with a record five-person crew, and America's first woman in space compared the trip to the thrills of Disneyland.

The 2,243-ton space machine blasted away from the ocean-side launch pad on time at 7:33 a.m. and climbed flawlessly into the partly cloudy sky atop a geyser of orange flame and white smoke and steam.

Robert Crippen, 45, and Frederick Hauck, 42, were at the controls and Sally Ride, 32, was serving as flight engineer. "Houston, ever been to Disneyland?" asked Ms. Ride. "That was definitely an E ticket." An E ticket covers the most popular rides at Disneyland.

Thousands of people jammed viewing sites around the spaceport and some spectators yelled, "Ride, Sally ride," as the ship climbed into the sky.

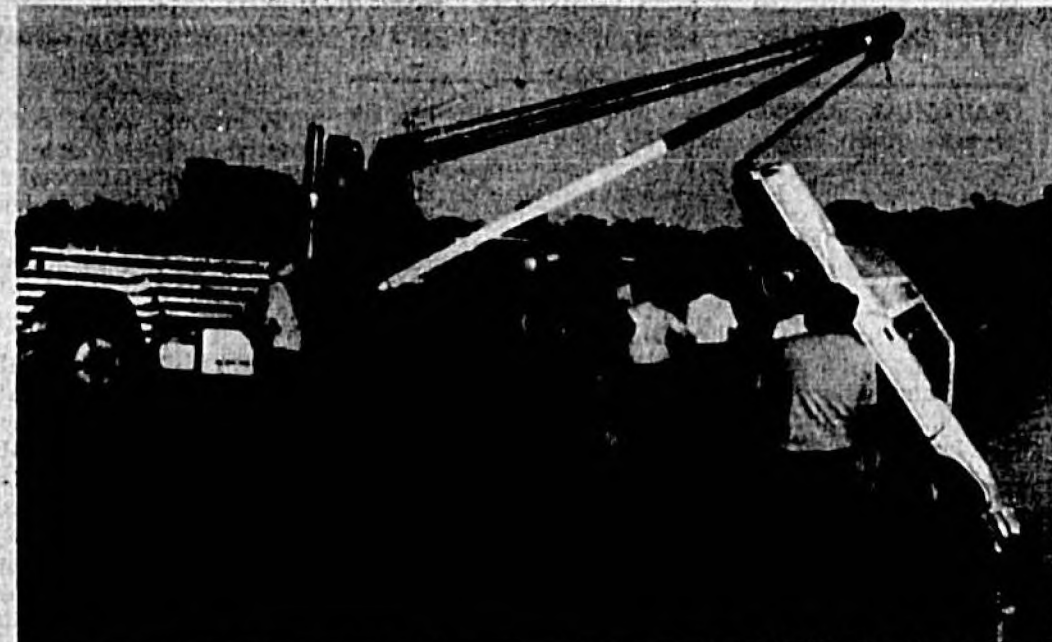

The Challenger's 10-minute race to a preliminary orbit appeared to be flawless. The twin booster rockets peeled away two minutes after launch and parachuted into the Atlantic.

The ship's empty external fuel tank was jettisoned 8 1/2 minutes after launch, and Challenger was in space.

"Challenger has delivered to space the largest human cargo in the history of mankind — four men, one woman," said John Mcleish at mission control in Houston.

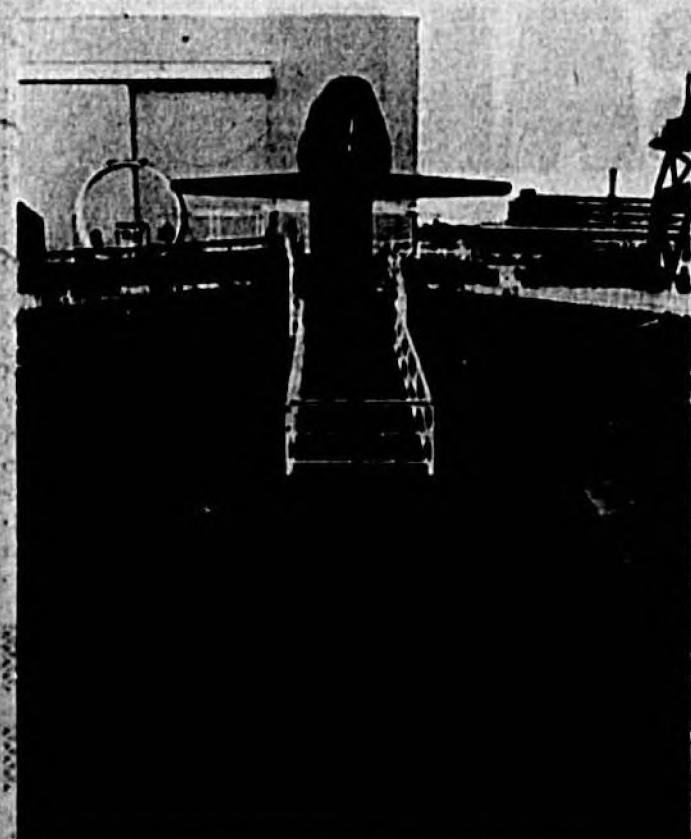

Among the VIPs watching the launching were feminist Gloria Steinem and actress Jane Fonda.

"The future is what this is all about," Ms. Fonda said. "She represents the future."

Stolen Car Is Dunked

As an alternative to scanning the skies to see the space shuttle launched Saturday morning, a large crowd west of Central Florida Regional Hospital gathered at about 7:30 a.m. and watched a Ratliff and Son wrecker crew pull this 1980 Ford from Lake Monroe. The car, owned by Jerry Thomason, Route 5 Box 439P, Sanford, was stolen from in front of Thomason's home on Knutson Drive between 8 p.m. Friday and 6:40 a.m. Saturday.

The Navy's newest Trident submarine, the USS Florida, joined the fleet Saturday morning when it was commissioned in Groton, Conn.

After 53 Years, Ship Again Named Florida TODAY

By Glenn Houston
Special to The Herald
(Second in a two-part series)

ABOARD THE USS FLORIDA — The stars and stripes flew from the deck of a U.S. Navy ship named Florida for the first time in 53 years on Saturday.

The ballistic missile submarine, the third in the Trident class, was commissioned in Groton, Conn., in ceremonies attended by several Florida guests and officials. About 30 of the 314 Navy men who serve on the nuclear-powered submarine call Florida home.

One is Bob Lewis, a master chief petty officer.

"I feel honored to serve on a submarine named Florida," said Petty Officer 2nd Class Timothy P. Schulman of Port Richey. "I hope the people of Florida feel proud of the ship, too."

"Being on a ship named Florida is good for everyone in the crew — not just those of us from the state," said Sanford's Bob Lewis. "It gives us something to work for. It's a reason to develop a sense of pride because we represent the state."

Another crewman, Chief Petty Officer Steve Osborne of Tallahassee, said being on the Florida is one of the greatest things that could happen to him.

"One of the proudest states in the country now has one of the proudest submarines in the Navy named for it," Osborne said.

The Florida is the first submarine and the sixth Navy vessel to bear the name. The submarine's predecessor was a 521-foot battleship that served during World War I. The submarine is 39 feet longer than that battleship. It's also taller than a four-story building and the width of a four-lane highway. The Florida is the largest undersea craft in the free world, yet its speed, quietness and mobility make it virtually undetectable.

The Florida will serve in the nation's first line of defense into the next century as part of the strategic deterrent force. It is designed to carry 24 Trident missiles. The Trident's increased range allows the submarine to operate in 10 times more ocean area than the earlier Poseidon weapons system.

"We believe we'll never have to fire our missiles," said Seaman Robert M. Boyles of Land O'Lakes.

Petty Officer 1st Class Terry Kraper of Melbourne described the Florida as strictly a defensive weapon.

"If we are ever called on to use our missiles, we will have failed miserably in the mission of this ship," he said.

Lewis, one of the two senior enlisted men in the Florida's crew, described the Florida's mission as preserving peace.

"If any of us thought we were out there to push the button, this ship wouldn't be built and it wouldn't be manned," he said.

The Florida's commissioning ceremony is the climax of years of effort from the workers at the electric Boat shipyard in Groton and the submarine's crewmen. Its keel was laid on July 4, 1976, and many crewmen were already in training to man the ship. The Navy men assigned have an important role in preparing a ship to join the active Navy fleet.

Lt. John L. Dove III of St. Petersburg volunteered for duty on a Trident submarine and was pleasantly surprised to find out his ship was to be named for his home state.

"The idea of helping build the ship from the keel up greatly appealed to me," he said.

According to Master Chief Petty Officer Lewis a lot of factors affect morale and retention.

"Probably the most important is family separation," he said. "Our patrols are long and some wives can't accept their husbands being gone. I've seen it force a good sailor right out of the Navy."

IN BRIEF

First MX Test Firing Is Deemed A Success

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — The MX missile, a weapon so far deployed only in political warfare under three presidents, lifted off with an earth-shaking roar in what military officials called a "stupendous" inaugural test firing.

As the missile took off late Friday, a handful of protesters who had tried to halt the firing stood and cried outside the main gate of the huge Vandenberg air base. Earlier, 16 were arrested, including activist Daniel Ellsberg and several others who infiltrated the base.

"The missile covered a distance of approximately 4,100 nautical miles on its first flight to the Kwajalein Missile Test Range in the Pacific Ocean," an Air Force spokesman said. "The flight took approximately 30 minutes."

Launch of the unarmed missile — dubbed "Peacekeeper" by the Pentagon — was delayed for several hours by fog, clouds and computer problems.

Reagan Silent On Volcker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan was spending the weekend at Camp David, leaving banking circles and Wall Street guessing on whether he will reappoint Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Reagan and his aides appeared to be enjoying the speculation for the past several days indicating that Volcker would probably get the nod again. His term expires on Aug. 5. But so far, Reagan has not tipped his hand, and says he has not made a decision.

Reagan will return to the White House Sunday afternoon to prepare for a busy week ahead, including meetings with two special diplomatic mediators and two out of town trips. He will fly to Jackson, Miss., Monday afternoon to speak at a fund-raiser for Rep. Trent Lott, R-Miss., the assistant GOP House leader.

Thursday afternoon he will travel to Cape Canaveral where he will spend the night and rise early Friday morning to watch the landing of the space shuttle Challenger whose crew will include Sally Ride, who Saturday morning became the first American woman to go into space.

Ex-Teamster Chief Denied

CHICAGO (UPI) — A federal judge has denied a request for a new trial by former Teamsters President Roy L. Williams, convicted last December of trying to bribe a U.S. senator.

The request was made on behalf of Williams and three other defendants. It was denied Friday on the basis that a former FBI agent's admission of misconduct was insufficient to overturn the conviction. One of the defendants, Teamster financial consultant Allen M. Dorfman, was slain gangland-style last Jan. 20.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Six inches of rain soaked Nebraska and Kansas, sending 18-inch floodwaters coursing through streets, and a 2-inch downpour flooded Texas roads. A cold front chugged east Saturday to cool the Northeast's six-day heat and smog wave. Heavy thunderstorms roared through western Pennsylvania Friday, interrupting the second round of the U.S. Open and slightly injuring two spectators who were struck by lightning. The rains soaked Sharpsville, Pa., with an inch of rain in 15 minutes and bombed some areas with 1-inch hail. More than 3 1/2 inches of rain soaked Ulysses, Neb., and created three tornadoes statewide. A flash flood warning was posted for Dodge County, Neb., after 1 1/2 inches of rain fell in 15 minutes. Six inches of rain fell near Cuba, Kan., and sent water washing over roads as Mill Creek spilled its banks. Water 18 inches deep swirled across Morrowville roads and high water and heavy rains forced residents in low-lying areas of Palmer to flee. Thunderstorms headed toward the Northeast, bringing a promise of relief from a six-day heat wave that prompted warnings as air pollution readings skyrocketed. In Bristol, Pa., Bucks County reported a pollution reading of 195 — well above the federal acceptable level of 100.

UF Researcher Says

Florida's Deadly Force Law Needs Overhaul

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — Only six people nationally have been legally executed in the last 14 years, but during that period policemen have killed 4,000 to 8,000 people before arrest, a University of Florida criminal justice researcher says.

Dr. Fred Shenkman said many states need to change laws so that police are not Mr. Hydes before arrest and Dr. Jekylls afterwards. Florida, in particular, needs some changes, he said.

"Florida's fleeing felon statute says that, if a kid steals a bicycle, you can shoot him. The police can legally shoot any felon," Shenkman said.

Felonies are crimes punishable by a jail term of more than a year, and include such minor offenses as squirting a fire extinguisher and writing a bad check.

Shenkman said, "We should not be in the business of taking human life unless there's a human life at stake."

Many police organizations already have strict policies governing the use of force.

"Gainesville police have a policy that police only shoot in protection of self or another human life. So does the FBI," said the UF professor, who also serves as department social scientist for the Gainesville police department.

Even when it appears that a human life is at stake, police have to be careful, Shenkman said.

"One day when I was riding along in a squad car, we saw a man in a parking lot near the campus with a knife to a woman's throat, forcing her against a car."

"The cop said, 'Drop the knife.' The kid turns around with his knife in his hand and says, 'No, you don't understand,' and starts walking toward him. Luckily, the cop was well trained enough to give the kid an extra half second. The students were just making a movie. But they almost got shot."

Shenkman said people who have never run counter to the police in their lives do not necessarily do what the police tell them to, either, making the situation even more dangerous.

"Good guys don't wear signs. They reach for their wallets instead of putting their hands on the car. A good cop will draw on you if you do that. I've seen it happen," he said.

Often shootings occur when there is not enough evidence to make an arrest, Shenkman said.

"It's night. You see a broken window on a warehouse. A guy with a box in his hand comes out the door. Do you shoot him if he won't stop? The window could have been broken weeks ago and never been fixed. The man could just be a member of the night clean-up crew on his way home with his lunch box. What does it tell you if he doesn't stop?"

"People have a lot of reasons not to want to talk to the police — traffic tickets, illegal alien status, whatever."

Another reason police should avoid using deadly force is that a bullet that misses its mark flies 400 to 600 feet, endangering innocent people, he said.

Shenkman said those shot by police are more likely to be the poor and minorities, rarely white, middle-class embezzlers.

"If police applied deadly force to the kinds of felonies more likely to be committed by the middle and upper classes, then the entire issue of deadly force would be viewed differently," he said.

Trio Charged With Delivery Of Marijuana

By the time an 18-year-old Orlando woman threw the quarter pound of marijuana out the car window, it was too late. She and two companions were arrested by Seminole County Drug Task Force agents.

An early morning drug deal that was to net the conspirators more than $400 netted only a free trip to the Seminole County jail for the trio.

Arrested Saturday were Wayne Robert Elias, 21, of 122 Sunset Drive, Longwood; Eugene Angelo Spitalieri, 21, of 6100 Peregrine Ave., Orlando; and Eleanor Carrie Spitalieri, 18, of 6659 Lake Cane Drive, Orlando.

The Spitalieris are charged with possession, delivery and conspiracy to sell a controlled substance. Elias is charged with delivery and conspiracy to sell a controlled substance.

A task force agent said the agents made contact with a man at Woogle's Pub on State Road 434 in Longwood. The man said he had a quarter pound of high grade marijuana he would sell for $430. The agents agreed to the purchase and the man made a telephone call and set up a rendezvous for the sale at Raffles Lounge in the Altamonte Mall.

A man and a woman arrived at the mall. Agents said the man presented them with a sample of the marijuana and they agreed to purchase it. When the man went to get the bulk of the marijuana, he picked up the woman, who was waiting in the parking lot.

The agent said when the couple returned, the woman handed the man the marijuana and he handed it to the agents. He then told the agents the price would be $460, instead of $430.

While haggling over the price, the man took back the marijuana and the couple attempted to flee in their car, the agent said. While driving away, the woman threw the quarter pound of marijuana out the vehicle window. Police then stopped the pair and they were arrested. The first man was arrested at the mall.

The three were being held in lieu of $5,000 bond each at the Seminole County jail Saturday.

GOAT LADY STAYS PUT IN JAIL

Circuit Judge C. Vernon Mize Jr. denied a request Friday for reduction of the 30-day jail sentence imposed on Ingeborg Morris, Seminole County's "Goat Lady," Mrs. Morris' attorney, Tom Greene, appealed for a shorter sentence on grounds that the 48-year-old Lake Brantley woman suffers from physical ailments that would be exacerbated by the jail stay. He also said her incarceration would not benefit society. Mrs. Morris entered the Seminole County Correctional Facility Wednesday. Greene said she is being housed in an area accessible to about 30 felons. Her jail stay stems from criminal contempt proceedings following her insistence on bringing pygmy goats onto her residential property where livestock are forbidden by zoning regulations. Mrs. Morris contends the goats are pets not livestock.

WEATHERSPOON SENTENCED TO 20 YEARS

A 24-year-old Sanford man convicted of robbing a convenience store was sentenced Thursday to 20 years in prison and 30 years probation.

Franklin Eugene Weatherspoon, 2758 Bungalow Boulevard, was convicted in May of robbing the Lil' Champ store on Country Club Road. Following the conviction Weatherspoon pleaded guilty to two counts of armed robbery, stemming from other robberies of the same store, and an unrelated aggravated battery charge.

Although three different judges heard the four cases, final sentencing was pronounced by Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor.

Weatherspoon could have received two life sentences and two 15-year sentences.

Scott was taken to Florida Hospital-Altamonte where he was treated and released.

ROMES BURGLARIZED

A list of stolen items is being prepared after a burglary at the Clarence Henderson residence, 2524 Mellonville Ave., Sanford.

Burglars entered the home through a dining room window between 7 p.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Tuesday, according to a police report.

On Tuesday between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m., someone entered the residence of Michael M. Shaffer, 1305 E. 24th St., Sanford, and took an unknown number of items. Police say the burglars entered through a front window and left through a sliding glass door.

Wednesday, between 10:30 p.m. and midnight, a 19-inch black and white television set was taken from the home of Elizabeth A. Diehl, 118 West 10th St., police said. The set was valued at $50.

OFFICES RANSACKED

The offices of MEDAC of Florida, Inc., 241 O'Brien Road, Fern Park, were broken into by vandals who used a rock to break out a window to gain entry. Police said the premises were ransacked with inner offices, desks, filing cabinets and storage lockers all disturbed. Damage was estimated at $75 and $1 in change was taken in the incident sometime between 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and 7:15 a.m. Wednesday.

EGG POACHING

A 21-year-old Sanford man won't be having as many omelettes as he may have planned — unless they're on the menu at the Seminole County jail.

He was arrested shortly before 1 a.m. Thursday after being caught with 90 dozen eggs in his car, police said.

The eggs, three cartons of 30 dozen eggs each, valued at $35 per carton, were taken from the Pinebreeze egg farm, 3601 S. Sanford Avenue, Sanford, between 12:24 and 12:43 a.m.

Police said the eggs were stolen from the Pinebreeze Farms, Inc. loading dock inside a fenced compound. The plot hatched smoothly until security guard Charles H. Parker spotted the thief and scrambled his plans.

The man was held at the scene with egg on his face until police arrived.

Charles Leonard Ware, 116 Anderson Avenue, Sanford, has been charged with grand theft in connection with the incident. He was being held today at the Seminole County jail in lieu of $5,000 bond.

HIGH SPEED PURSUIT

A 25-year-old Longwood man was arrested shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday following a high-speed chase, scuffle with a police officer and a foiled escape attempt.

Seminole County sheriff's deputy Scott G. Fyfe reported that he saw a man on a red Kawasaki motorcycle with an expired license tag travelling south on Markham Woods Road and E.E. Williamson Road at about 9:33 a.m. Tuesday. Fyfe said he attempted to conduct a traffic stop with blue lights and siren but the cyclist sped off at a high rate of speed.

After more than a mile of pursuit on Markham Woods Road, the suspect turned into H.P. Cassidy's restaurant parking lot off State Road 434, hit a curb and was thrown from his motorcycle as it flipped in the air.

While frisking the man, Fyfe said the man started to wrestle with him, struck him on the chest and broke free, fleeing on foot into The Springs subdivision.

The deputy said he gave pursuit on foot but lost the man near the Springs Club House on Woodridge Drive. He was found a short time later, however, by Seminole County firefighter Mark Pollack.

Raymond Russell Ragsdale, 151 Lakeshore Avenue, Longwood, was released from the Seminole County jail on $500 bond after being charged with battery on a police officer, resisting arrest with violence and attempting to elude a police officer. Traffic charges are pending.

Bald Eagles Being Poisoned By Lead

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Wildlife Federation is calling for a federal investigation into the deaths of bald eagles from lead poisoning.

The nation's largest environmental group warned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that an undetermined number of eagles are dying after feeding on lead-contaminated waterfowl, particularly ducks and geese.

"The eagles, which tend to concentrate in waterfowl areas during the winter months, feed on waterfowl that are crippled or poisoned by (lead) shotgun pellets," the federation stated. "In turn, the eagle falls victim to the lead."

Dr. Hay Hair, the federation's executive vice president, sent a letter to Fish and Wildlife Service Director Robert Jantzen, asking his agency to examine whether hunting regulations that allow use of lead shot in areas where both waterfowl and eagles concentrate are jeopardizing the eagle.

"Our national bird has been ravaged by a series of insidious threats, and the lead poisoning problem is only the latest in that unfortunate series," said Hair.

"We waterfowl hunters deposit nearly 3,000 tons of lead in the environment each year in pursuit of our sport. That creates tremendous problems for wildlife in this country," he added.

A Fish and Wildlife Service spokeswoman said the agency had not yet received Hair's letter and would not comment until then.

The 4.2 million-member federation advocates use of non-toxic steel shot loads in shotguns — rather than lead shot — in areas where lead is known to be a problem for waterfowl.

The federation cited a recent government study that found more than 7 percent of the deaths of bald eagles recovered between 1967 and 1982 were linked to lead poisoning. This ranks lead as the fourth leading cause of eagle deaths, after shootings, car collisions and power line electrocutions.

Brian Millsap, a federation biologist, argued the eagle lead poisoning problem may be even greater than the government study indicated.

"The study simply did not account for all birds that died from lead contamination,"

...hunters' lead shotgun pellets may be jeopardizing national symbol

Kid Porn Crackdown Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration is urging Congress to strengthen federal law against child pornography.

Mark Richard, an assistant attorney general, told a House Judiciary crime subcommittee the administration's proposed amendments to the 1977 child pornography law would streamline prosecutions of pornographers.

The administration bill would allow court-ordered wiretaps in child pornography cases and enable prosecutors to take advantage of a Supreme Court ruling last year that said "kiddie porn" is not entitled to the First Amendment protection.

Richard told the subcommittee the bill would eliminate requirements in the current law that pornographic material be intended for commercial purposes.

"Many, or perhaps most, of the individuals who distribute (child pornography) materials ... do so by trade or exchange, without any commercial purpose" and thereby avoid conviction, Richard said.

Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of the subcommittee, said he does not believe the administration bill will be enacted, since it is part of a comprehensive crime package that is "not getting anywhere" in Congress.

Hughes has introduced his own bill, which incorporates many of the provisions in the administration legislation, but does not authorize wiretaps.

Hughes said he would also support a redefinition of the term "minor" from age 16 to age 18 to include more of those who are used to make child pornography.

Also testifying at the hearing was Robert Schaffer, an assistant commissioner of the Customs Service, who said more inspectors had been assigned this year to watch for imported pornographic materials.

Commission Recommends $1.5 Billion For Japanese Interred During WW II

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A special commission recommends Congress pay $20,000 to each of about 60,000 surviving Japanese-Americans rounded up after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, a total of $1.5 billion, and issue a national apology.

"No amount of money can fully compensate the excluded people for their losses and sufferings," the commission said.

Congress established the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment in 1980, nearly four decades after 120,000 Japanese-Americans were put in camps for most of World War II under President Franklin Roosevelt's Feb. 19, 1942, executive order.

The Japanese-Americans were rounded up following the Dec. 7, 1941, bombing of the American fleet at Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands.

Rep. Daniel Lundgren, R-Calif., the only commission member serving in Congress and the only one to oppose the compensation, said he did not know if Congress would approve such a payment during the current economic climate.

The commission concluded last February after hearing hundreds of witnesses that "a grave injustice" had been done and in its final report Thursday it recommended a national apology and payment of $1.5 billion.

The commission recommended putting the balance of the sum into a special education foundation for the Japanese-American community, and Congress "offer the apologies of the nation for the acts of exclusion, removal and detention."

The commission also recommended the president pardon the 15 to 25 Japanese-Americans convicted of violating the curfew imposed on them and review the wartime convictions of ethnic Japanese.

The fund would be administered by the board, most of whom are of Japanese descent, appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate.

"I do not consider it to be guilt money," commission chairman

Joan Bernstein told reporters. "I consider it to be a response in the usual manner in our society for a wrong that was done."

"I regard it as an appropriate remedy for a serious violation by our government of basic fundamental rights," said commission member Arthur Flemming, former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare and chairman of the Civil Rights Commission.

The commission also recommended Congress establish $5 million for the use of Aleuts evacuated from the Aleutian or Pribilof Islands during the war, pay $5,000 to each of the few hundred surviving Aleuts, rebuild and restore churches destroyed in the Aleutians and clear away debris remaining on the islands from the war.

"The commission found the 900 Aleuts were moved because of military necessity."

"The excluded people suffered enormous damages and losses, both material and intangible."

School Board Agrees To Outlaw Miniskirts

By Micheal Beha
Herald Staff Writer

To the Seminole County School Board, the question is not who wears short shorts, but who wears short skirts?

And the answer is nobody. At least they won't be if the board has its way.

School Board members agreed this week that miniskirts, like shorts, have no place in high or middle schools — on girls or boys.

The board had banned shorts last year but didn't address the question of miniskirts.

Many girls wore the short skirts this year and when the temperature rose into the 80s and 90s, boys at Lyman High School decided to protest the no-shorts rule by donning miniskirts.

No action was taken against the students, who weren't violating the dress code because the code didn't say anything about miniskirts on girls or boys.

So the board agreed Wednesday to stop "skirting" the issue. They tentatively agreed to ban miniskirts along with shorts, even though a recent school survey revealed that the ban on shorts is opposed by two-thirds of the students. The ban is favored by teachers, parents and administrators.

But what is a miniskirt?

School Superintendent Robert Hughes said he feels the new guidelines are realistic and foresee no problems with enforcement.

The board will consider the miniskirt ban and other changes to the Student Code of Conduct and Discipline later this summer.

AMA Council Calls For Car Passive Restraints

CHICAGO (UPI) — An American Medical Association council, saying the problem of automobile injuries is just now "reaching the nation's consciousness," has called for passive restraints such as airbags to be required in new cars.

Passive restraint devices provide automatic protection without auto users making any action, such as buckling a seat belt. In 1982, the National Highway Transportation Safety Agency canceled passive restraint requirements for 1984 and later model cars.

"Unexpected, traumatic injuries are responsible for more than 100,000 deaths in the United States each year," the AMA Council on Scientific Affairs said.

"In terms of years lost to society because of premature death and in terms of visits to physicians, emergency rooms and hospitals, few conditions other than heart disease and cancer rank with traumatic injuries."

The council's report, published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, recommended the AMA reaffirm its support for the "development of effective passive crash protection systems for occupants of motor vehicles."

"Before the adoption of passive crash-protection systems and devices to reduce motor vehicle injuries, industry and government demonstrated through field studies that such systems and devices are effective, safe, cost-effective and acceptable to drivers," the report said.

The council also recommended the AMA "encourage motor vehicle manufacturers to develop automobiles with stronger passenger compartments that would more effectively protect occupants, with interiors having few protruberant objects and hard surfaces that could cause injuries in crashes, and with fire- and explosion-resistant fuel tanks."

Legislators should strengthen drunken driving laws and devote more resources to research focusing on vehicle-related injuries and their prevention, the council said.

Working Wives Stiffed When Husbands Relocate

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Working wives, especially those well-educated, suffer career setbacks and tend to lose out on the salary scale when their husbands relocate to change jobs, a Pennsylvania State University says.

Dr. Daniel Lichter, an assistant professor of sociology, studied more than 3,000 women aged 30-to-44 whose families had migrated.

In the study, Lichter said women usually have to take jobs less satisfactory than their former employment when they choose to relocate with their husbands.

He said well-educated married women with career experience are hit hardest in the job market when a family relocates.

He said women were ignored in past research on migration because it was assumed they would move without considering their own careers.

Migration also causes many women to be underutilized in the marketplace, Lichter said. But women employed in "sex-typed" jobs — secretaries, nurses, or elementary school teachers — are more likely to find work at their former salary levels, he added.

The Disability Review Process

Social Security, originally conceived as an old-age pension plan, was changed in 1956 to provide benefits for disabled workers. That opened up the problem of defining who was eligible. Establishing age is a simple determination of fact that is settled by a birth certificate. A finding of disability is a medical judgment subject to controversy and error.

At first, only people 50 years of age and older were eligible for disability benefits. Then, in 1958 and 1960, Congress in its generosity opened the Social Security disability benefit rolls to dependents of disabled beneficiaries and to workers under 50.

The result was predictable. By 1978, there were nearly 5 million Americans on the rolls as disabled workers or dependents of disabled workers. Many considered themselves retired on disability and never intended to go back to work. The annual cost of the program more than quadrupled during the 1970s to about $15 billion, all of it contributed by workers and their employers through the Social Security payroll tax.

Then the General Accounting Office reported that about 20 percent of those on the rolls were no longer disabled. The estimate of the cost of keeping these people on the rolls was $2 billion a year. So Congress, in 1980, passed a law requiring the Social Security Administration to review the eligibility of all non-permanently disabled beneficiaries once every three years, beginning no later than 1982.

Well, that did it. Reviews began and cries of anger arose whenever a beneficiary was ruled ineligible. Many of the protests were justified. The Social Security bureaucracy, like very other bureaucracy, is cumbersome and clumsy. It does not respond to changing directives with much precision. All bureaucrats are inclined to overreact. Many are overworked and take shortcuts in procedure without full consideration of the human impact of their decisions on individual people.

What happened was that some people who were truly disabled were found to be capable of employment and their benefits were terminated. There were many horror stories of this type. These cases make news, while cases in which a benefit cutoff is clearly justified are hushed up and get no public attention. The Reagan administration was roundly criticized for the way in which it was enforcing a Carter administration reform program.

Now Congress is trying to clean up the act. Good. Perhaps the Social Security Administration needs more money, if it is to carry out these periodic reviews. Certainly the reviews will save the taxpayers more than they cost.

More than 40 percent of the cases reviewed so far have been terminated, because the disabled worker has been found to be no longer disabled. Some of these people have later been reinstated. But, as of last year, the number of people on the rolls, both disabled workers and their dependents, had fallen from a high of 5 million to approximately 4 million. That is a big savings and means there will be more money in the fund for those who are in fact disabled and for their dependents.

Congress is under pressure to drop the reviews, or to declare a moratorium on the reviews, or to require the government to keep any person on the disabled list if there has been no certifiable improvement in his medical condition — meaning that if a person was not truly disabled when he or she was originally found to be disabled, that person may never be removed from the disabled benefit list.

The tightening of the administration of the Social Security disability program was a good thing. Congress should not abandon or torpedo it. Instead, Congress should make sure that the disability reviews are carried out in a prompt, humane and equitable manner — equitable alike to the beneficiaries and to the taxpayers.

Mormons Answer

The nation has learned a real lesson about hard work and cooperation from the people of flood-ravaged Utah. They have inspired us all by quickly forming emergency crews and devoting themselves to aiding one another during these stressful times.

Mormons — members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — have struggled side by side to contain the rivers of water and mud descending from the Wasatch Mountains and racing down through their communities to the Great Salt Lake. They have worked long hours for 13 days to save their towns and their neighbors' property — often sacrificing their own homes to spare the dwellings of others.

In the last few days there has been a subsidence of flood waters, but officials warn that more destruction is coming — perhaps even worse than the wreckage left by wild rivers that recently drove 1,600 people from their homes.

We know the Mormons will be ready once again to fight the floods, to man their trucks and draglines and tractors in an effort to minimize damage.

Mormons are a hardy lot. They take care of their own. They are able to respond to such emergencies because they are a homogenous group — orderly, harmonious people. More than 70 percent of all Utahans are Mormons.

The church has assistance programs for the aged, handicapped and unemployed members of the faith. Church members have their own welfare program and ask little or nothing in charity from the government. They have won a reputation as temperate and industrious people.

Most Mormons contribute a tithe — one-tenth of their annual income — to support the church. Other funds come from church-operated businesses.

They are quick to answer the call for help and are to be commended for their community spirit.

BERRY'S WORLD

By Doris Dietrich

Pops are tops.
Have you hugged yours lately?
Go ahead, tell your dad how much he means to you, that is, if you are fortunate enough to have a loving dad around.
Times may change, customs are different and lifestyles vary, but emotions are equal among all so-called sane people.
Some offspring look up to their fathers as the king of kings, while others may not have too much regard for the old man.
But there's one thing for sure.
Fathers are a unique breed.
They last a lifetime. Although many children have more than one dad in their lives, there's always the original somewhere.
The relationship among fathers and their children has been a topic of amusement and bemusement for years.
For many fathers, the bond of love for their children has at times been strained — yet it seems always to remain a source of affection and pride.

The Greeting Card Association of Washington, D.C., has compiled the following anecdotes about fathers and their offspring.
John Wilmot, the Earl of Rochester, amused his fellow Englishmen with this observation more than 300 years ago:
"Before I got married, I had six theories about bringing up children; now I have six children and no theories."
At about the same time, an anonymous Frenchman declared:
"A father is a banker provided by nature."
The critic John Mason Brown wrote:
Reasoning with a child is fine if you can reach the child's reason without destroying your own." He added: "Give a child enough rope and he'll trip you up."

Edward Asner, the celebrated actor, was quoted on a PBS broadcast:
"Raising kids is part joy and part guerilla warfare."
The late Sam Levinson, a father who doted on his youngsters, said:
"Insanity is hereditary. You can get it from your children."
Many fathers are concerned about communicating with their offspring. One father was recently reported to complain to another that his small son never stopped talking. The response was this: "Cheer up — soon, he'll be a teen-ager and you'll never hear a word from him."
There are worlds of humorous, sentimental, sweet and touching words to say to fathers.
But mindful that brevity is supposedly the soul of wit, to all dads everywhere, HAPPY FATHER'S DAY.

Politics Is Big In Education

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Rather than provide enlightened leadership in the quest to improve the nation's troubled public schools, both major political parties apparently prefer to manipulate the issue for their own partisan advantage.

A series of critical reports issued in recent months by prestigious commissions and committees has focused public attention on the plight of the country's schools. But for almost a decade the Democrats have, in effect, delegated to the National Education Association whatever responsibility they might have for enhancing the quality of education.

In theory, the NEA is a professional organization representing 1.7 million teachers who care about their students and their schools as well as themselves. In practice, it has acquired all of the characteristics of a labor union dedicated to promoting the narrow concerns of its members — even when those goals conflict with the broader public interest.

Moreover, the NEA has conducted a determined campaign of dubious value to become highly politicized and to insinuate itself into the affairs of the Democratic Party.

At the Democrats' two most recent presidential nominating conventions, the NEA marshaled what was arguably the largest but unquestionably the best organized delegation representing a single special interest to Jimmy Carter when he was seeking the party's 1976 presidential nomination, the NEA received as its reward the creation of the Federal Department of Education.

Not satisfied with the wholly unwarranted expansion of the Washington bureaucracy, the NEA has again become intimately involved in Democratic politics and is leaning toward endorsing former Vice President Walter F. Mondale as the party's 1984 presidential candidate.

If Mondale is nominated and wins next year's election, the NEA can expect to receive from his administration an equally unjustifiable massive increase in federal education expenditures — accompanied by concomitant growth in federal influence over educational policy.

With a national consensus rapidly forming around the need for a major effort to substantially upgrade the educational system, Reagan suddenly has developed an expanded interest in the subject and is scurrying about making speeches on the subject in Tennessee, Minnesota and New Mexico.

The centerpiece of the president's program is a call for merit pay scales which would reward the most talented teachers — a position which his senior aides candidly acknowledge was embraced precisely because it is stridently opposed by the NEA and its allies in the Democratic Party.

(Like most other large organizations, the NEA apparently believes it has an obligation to protect even its most mediocre members — and they obviously would not be the beneficiaries of a merit pay system.)

Reagan also has been dishonest about his handling of the federal education budget. "The truth of the matter is we haven't cut any budgets," he claimed recently in Hopkins, Minn. "Each (annual) budget is still bigger than the last one."

Happy Ending For Duped Woman

WASHINGTON — Happy endings are rare occurrences in real life. But one is finally working out for Mary Catherine Reese and her adopted daughter, Omara — I think.

I first reported the tribulations of Ms. Reese on Dec. 14, 1981. A teacher of the visually impaired in Ontario, Calif., she had gone to Taiwan in the summer of that year in hopes of finding a child to adopt. In a Taipei orphanage, she found Omara, a beautiful, 8-month-old girl, and was told by officials at the American Institute — which functions as the U.S. Embassy — that Omara would meet immigration standards.

But when Reese went to the Immigration Service office in Hong Kong to file the necessary papers, she was told there was a hitch: Omara's mother had remarried before Reese started adoption proceedings and, therefore, was no longer an orphan under INS rules. She could not be brought to this country.

Reese had to go back home without the baby but she didn't give up. She contacted Rep. David Dreier, R-Calif. She also wrote to me for help.

As a result of two columns I wrote about Reese's plight, the INS sent an investigator to Taiwan to look into the matter. What he found was more than a case of knotted-up red tape. He learned that Omara had not been legally abandoned and placed in a licensed orphanage.

Acting on the investigator's tip, Taiwanese police uncovered a worldwide ring of criminals who were stealing babies and selling them. Authorities are investigating the possibility that as many as 200 babies had been stolen and sold for adoption, particularly to parents in Australia and Switzerland.

At the center of the racket was a Taiwanese woman named Julie Chu. It was she who had helped Reese arrange Omara's adoption.

Taiwanese authorities held Omara as evidence in the prosecution of Chu, who was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. But the authorities insisted on holding the baby until Chu's appeals were exhausted.

Reese appealed to Dreier again, and the congressman wrote to Taiwanese officials that "both Ms. Reese and Omara have suffered because of complications that were entirely out of their control and for reasons that Ms. Reese was not remotely aware of." Taiwanese authorities decided to let the baby go.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Thatcher's Smashing Victory

LONDON (NEA) — Margaret Thatcher's smashing victory in the British elections brings Britain into renewed alignment with the conservative tide now running in all of the major nations of the free world. In both Japan and West Germany, the voters have recently signaled their conservative inclinations, and it is all too apparent that the French would do so if only they could. Now Britain has reaffirmed its presence in the conservative parade, and the spotlight shifts to the United States.

The British portents are ominous for America's Democratic Party. Britain's unemployment problem is considerably worse than America's — upwards of 13 percent of the British work force is out of a job, compared to slightly more than 10 percent in the United States — and the Labor Party pounded the point mercilessly during the campaign. But the voters seemed to understand that a period of high unemployment is inseparable from any serious efforts to reduce inflation and restructure industry, and they did not choose to punish Mrs. Thatcher for doing the hard but necessary thing. If American voters are equally forgiving, Ronald Reagan will center back into the White House in November 1984.

The excuses of Mrs. Thatcher's opponents, the day after the election, leaned heavily on the fact that — because there were three serious parties in the race — the Conservatives did not get an absolute majority of the popular vote. Labor's Denis Healey put it this way: "If the totals turn out to be right, well over 50 percent of the British ballots will have been cast against Thatcher."

By the same logic, however, more than 70 percent of the British ballots were cast against Labor — and more than 73 percent against Mrs. Thatcher's other chief critics, the Liberal-Social Democratic Alliance. In the circumstances of a three-cornered election, it would be fairer to say that the Conservatives' 43 percent of the vote was a genuinely impressive showing, and all the more impressive because it was so evenly distributed among the 650 constituencies that the Tories were able to carry almost 400 of them.

All the same, and without detracting in any way from the Conservative showing, it is hard not to sympathize a little with the bitterness of the leaders of the Alliance, the newest force in British politics. Their candidates rolled up about 28 percent of the popular votes, compared to Labor's 29 percent; yet Labor will have more than 200 MPs in the new Parliament, while the Alliance will be lucky to have 20. This is owing to the structure of British elections, in which the parliamentary candidate with the most votes is declared the winner in each constituency. This works greatly to the advantage of parties whose candidates can come in first in a sizable number of constituencies, and very much against groups (such as the Alliance) that are not dominant anywhere but can claim to represent, everywhere, a significant fraction of public opinion.

Not surprisingly, therefore, the other main outcry that immediately followed the election was a call by the Alliance for reform of the British election laws to make some provision for proportional representation in Parliament.

Is that the happy ending? Not quite. The investigation of the baby-stealing ring had turned up new information on Omara. The woman whom Chu had said was the baby's natural mother turned out not to be the mother at all, but a set-up.

An aide to Dreier told my associate Vicki Warren that "the Taiwanese regard the baby-selling ring as a scandal, and they don't want to have anything more to do with anyone involved with it." The latest information, though, is that Taiwanese authorities and the INS have agreed to accept the previous adoption application. Hopefully, Omara should be with her new mother next month — two years after they first laid eyes on each other.

It's Easy To Stop The Spread Of Herpes and AIDS

The Editorial "Some Facts About AIDS" 6/9/83 was something that has needed to be told the people ever since AIDS and Herpes II became a threat to the well-being of the people of the U.S.

The last few words, "and give information on how to avoid its spread" should be the responsibility of the Public Health Service, churches and all of the other organizations that are supposed to look after the welfare of the nation, yet this editorial is the first comprehensive step in this direction that has come under my observation, which is quite extensive, if I do say so.

Now the Bible is a good place to look for some of the answers to the problem of these diseases, and unless I be put down as a Bible-thumping fundamentalist, I would like to say that I am, probably, nearer to "Poor Tomlinson," who was neither good enough to go to Heaven, or bad enough to go to Hell. Yes, in the Bible, it is the accumulated wisdom of mankind over the centuries, even if you do not consider it to be the word of God. In it you will find some of the best advice on any subject related to man's existence, and concerning the passing of these diseases. — AIDS and Herpes II — you will find under Chapter 4, Verses 3, 4 & 5 1st Thessalonians this advice. Quote: "For this is the will of God even your sanctification, that you should abstain from fornication. V.4, "That every one of you should know how to possess his (her) vessel in sanctification and honor." V.5, "Not in the lust of concupiscence, even as the Gentiles (barbarians) which know not God."

By observing these simple rules the chances of being infected with either of these diseases will be greatly reduced and the general well being of the nation greatly improved, physically, mentally, morally and last but not least FINANCIALLY, and anything less than the observation of these simple rules is direct evidence of that most dread disease, Aynessia. I have some neighbors who told me when they moved next door that, "All communities have leash laws, but nobody obeys them." So they turn their pets out on Saturdays and Sundays and after Animal Control people go off duty other days.

I am almost 83 and have been on a walker for several weeks. But I, who do not own a dog because I don't feel like cleaning up after one or taking it to the vet, have to clean up after my neighbors' animals. Sometimes I step in the filth left in my yard. (I have another handicap — I am almost blind).

These neighbors lost a small Chihuahua several weeks ago. A car smashed it. The driver did not stop as Mr. Winnifred Scott did when he ran over a small dog. Mr. Scott told about it in a letter to the editor in the same issue of The Herald as the letter of Kathryn Stagnell.

The driver who killed my neighbor's dog may have been afraid to stop, or he may have been late to an appointment. Perhaps he didn't even care. Anyway, he is not as responsible as the owners who turned the tiny dog out to compete with traffic.

People who really love their pets, keep them at home.

Overburdened Taxpayer Does Not Need County Gas Tax

It seems to me that Micheal Beha might, perhaps, need a little lesson in economics with his: "With county staff positions going unfilled for a time while the county unravels (seems to me that they are already unraveled, since they cannot come to a decision on how they shall 'milk' the taxpayer) its funding problems, another empty desk is the last thing that is needed."

Just why is another empty desk not needed? It would be well for the taxpayer if the County Commission held a yard sale on used office furniture then maybe we would not need that added gas tax that they are so desirous of imposing on the already overburdened taxpayer.

On this same line of reasoning, why the slaving after HUD money? This is just another drain on the taxpayer, who some may think they are getting something for nothing. It is, in fact, just another way for "Big Brother" to get his foot in the door to dictate to us how our local government shall be run, for as you well know there is no "Free Lunch" and he who pays the piper calls the tune, as to how you shall live. "Viva Liberte" and home rule.

Success of Wild Horses Act May Spell Its Doom

When Congress passed the Wild Free-Roaming Horses and Burros Act in 1971, it was probably the most widely demanded animal legislation ever enacted. The Act became law after hundreds of thousands of enraged citizens, many of them school children, wrote their representatives in Washington after seeing news reports detailing horrendously cruel round-ups of horses by "mustangers," who captured the animals to sell for pet food. It declared the remaining herds of wild horses and burros to be "living symbols of the historic and pioneer spirit of the West," and extended them full protection from branding, harassment and death.

Few dispute the Act's successes. Once threatened with extinction, wild horse and burro herds have increased in the 12 years since the law was enacted. The Adopt-A-Horse program, created to find foster homes for "excess" animals removed from the range, (despite some serious lapses), has worked well to save the animals from the slaughterhouse. Yet the Act's very success may now be spelling its doom.

Heading unfounded arguments from the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management (BLM) that horses and burros populations have increased to the point where they are seriously damaging public rangelands, and that the administrative costs of the Adopt-A-Horse program amounts to an expensive and unnecessary subsidy to adopters, Congress is now considering legislation to amend the Wild Horse Act. If enacted, this legislation would put the government in the horsemeat business, making Uncle Sam the biggest mustanger ever.

Of course, that's not how the legislation is being presented to the public. S.457 and H.R.1675 are being touted by their sponsors, Sen. James McClure (R-ID) and Rep. Barbara Vucanovich (R-NV) respectively, as clarifying amendments to the Act. But buried in the innocuous language of these "amendments" is a provision giving the government authority to sell unadopted "excess" horses at auction. This provision has been described as providing the agencies that enforce the Act with an "alternative" to destroying unadopted animals. In fact, government officials admit that the vast majority of these animals would be sold for slaughter, ending up on a dinner table in France or a dogfood dish in New York rather than a competent, caring home.

How have we come to this point? The fact is, this legislation is little more than an attempt to solve problems that are either non-existent or else created by the BLM itself. The bottom line is that the horses and burros who inhabit our public lands aren't making money for anyone. Worse, cattle and sheep ranchers view the animals as pests who eat food that could otherwise be feeding their animals. Now, by making scapegoats out of the horses and burros, they are trying to use their legislative clout to run these animals off the public lands that they have inhabited for hundreds of years.

The primary need for the legislation, its proponents argue, is that horse and burro herds are now so large that they are inflicting widespread damage on the public rangelands. In January 1982, the Interior Department stated that some fifty-five percent of the animals now on the range — almost 32,000 horses and burros — must be removed.

Yet this figure seems wildly out of proportion considering the results of a National Academy of Sciences (NAS) study ordered by Congress and completed last December.

In a paper delivered this spring to the North American Wildlife and Natural Resources Conference, Dr. Fred Wagner, the chairman of the NAS study committee, found that "The present number of wild horses and burros accounts for a small fraction of the total herbivorous forage removal on the public rangelands. Although there may be local problems of excessive use, the areas shown the (NAS) Committee and attitudes of BLM officials with whom it interacted did not give any impression of widespread overuse. Hence, the reason for the Bureau's stated intention to reduce equid numbers by more than half is not entirely clear."

BLM also argues that it needs the proposed sale authority because adoption demand has fallen. Yet BLM itself created — and even anticipated — this problem by drastically increasing its adoption fees in January 1982. While no one argues that there should be no fee at all, since the fee not only helps cover some of the administrative cost of the program and helps assure that the adopter is financially able to afford to care for a horse or burro, the effect of this sudden and steep hike was to make adopting a wild horse more expensive, at least in some parts of the country, than purchasing a halter-broken domestic horse. To no one's surprise, adoptions declined nearly fifty percent in the nine months after the fee increase.

However, an AHPA lawsuit decided earlier this year has resulted in lowering the fees to a more reasonable level.

Congress passed the Wild Free-Roaming Horse and Burro Act because the vast majority of the American public wanted these animals protected. To gut the Act now to serve the pocketbooks of a few special interest groups seems not only inhumane and contrary to the wishes of the majority, but an abdication of the government's responsibility to protect the heritage of the public lands that belong to all of us.

Problems Of Alcohol Not Limited By Age

Growing Older
U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper

Q. I am a volunteer worker at a nursing home in Iowa. I was amazed to learn how many of the residents had problems with alcohol. It seemed that some were always sneaking in a bottle. When I asked the administrator about it, he said that alcohol is a big problem among the elderly. Is this true?

A. Yes. There is now substantial evidence to indicate that alcohol is not only a general social problem, but a specific problem for the elderly.

A recent report to Congress indicates that alcoholism is the third most prevalent disease in this country. Twelve million to 15 million Americans have serious drinking problems. Another 35 million are indirectly affected. Alcohol abuse is involved in half of all homicides, half of all automobile accidents, one-quarter of all suicides and 40 percent of all divorces. Economic costs associated with alcoholism exceed $120 billion a year.

Alcohol is particularly a problem for the elderly. It accounts for between 30 and 50 percent of all hospital admissions. People over the age of 65 account for one-quarter of these admissions and one-third of all patient days. It is estimated that at least 10 percent of the elderly have a serious alcohol problem. Widowers over 75 have the highest rate of alcoholism in the country.

In 1982, Medicare paid about $150 billion for alcohol treatment. Ninety percent of that was spent on institutional care. The remainder was paid to physicians. Medicare does not provide support for community programs, like Alcoholics Anonymous, which is supported by voluntary contributions, or provide reimbursement for other forms of out-patient care, even though these programs are equally effective and less expensive institutional treatment.

Medicaid programs are even more limited. Only four states cover alcoholism as a disease, and in these four states, the amount of money dedicated is limited. The per capita public cost of alcoholism is estimated to be about $10,000 a year. The medical costs associated with alcohol abusers is said to average $1,300 more a year than for non-abusers.

These statistics have led many observers to conclude that there could be significant reductions in economic and social health care costs if comprehensive alcohol treatment were established. Even greater savings could be achieved if Medicare's policy was reversed and emphasized less costly, non-institutional treatment.

Because of the gravity of this problem, I have requested that the Subcommittee on Health and Long-Term Care convene a hearing on it. Hearings have been scheduled to be held in New York City where alcoholism is the number one problem confronting older Americans.

This hearing will be followed by a series of others focusing on specific health problems across the country. I would be interested in hearing from anyone who believes there is a particular issue that the subcommittee ought to address.

English Background Top Roots Origin Of South

By Joey Ledford
UPI Southern Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly one-fourth of all Southerners consider themselves of English origin, a Census Bureau report concludes.

Some 19.6 million Southerners told the bureau in 1980 that they consider themselves English. Another 12.7 million listed themselves as Irish, 11 million as Afro-American, and 10.7 million as German.

It is not easy to draw conclusions from the report, however, because 17.4 million listed multiple ancestry, another 17.5 million didn't specify any ancestry at all, and 6.8 million said only that they were Americans.

"This report probably will provide work for sociologists, anthropologists, demographers and political scientists for a long time," said Census Director Bruce Chapman.

Chapman said some respondents might have listed the origin of only one side of the family, "the one for which an individual feels a particular attachment."

The English ranked No. 1 in each of the eight Southeast states. Florida ranked fifth in the nation in numbers of English residents with more than 2.2 million.

North Carolina, where the first English settlers landed, ranked ninth with more than 1.7 million. Virginia (1.6 million), Georgia (1.5 million), Tennessee (1.4 million) and Alabama (1.1 million) also had high English populations.

The Irish ranked second in Florida, Georgia and Tennessee. But in Virginia, Germans ranked No. 2 with 884,299. Afro-Americans populations were second largest in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi and both Carolinas.

Another 3.5 million Southerners identified themselves as of French origin, 3.4 million as Scottish, 2.9 million as American Indians, 2.6 million as Mexicans, 1.6 million as Dutch and 1.5 million as Italian.

Greek Cypriots are apparently the South's smallest minority with only 282 people. There are also 569 Ruthenians and 843 who say they are Spanish Basque.

Florida, the South's most populous state with 9.74 million residents, ranks second nationally in the number of Colombians (27,035), fifth in Canadians (26,583) and in Russians (185,887). The Sunshine State is also the home of more than 60 percent of the nation's Bahamians.

Mississippi, the least populous Southern state, ranks 50th in numbers of Czechs (1,548), 49th in Lithuanians and Poles and 51st, behind even the District of Columbia, in Rumanians and Russians.

North Carolina, in addition to its ninth place ranking in English residents, ranks eighth in the number of Scots.

Virginia ranks fifth in the nation in numbers of Irishans (4,024) and leads the South in Vietnamese (8,937), Filipinos (14,711) and Koreans (12,077).

On the low end of the population count, nearly every state has some extremely outnumbered nationalities. In Mississippi, for example, there are just two Spanish Basque, compared to four in Tennessee.

North Carolina has five residents of Belorussian descent, while South Carolina has six. In Alabama, the most outnumbered group are 19 Roman Gypcals.

Nationally, there are more Americans of English descent — 50 million — than the total population of England.

There are 21 million Americans listed as Afro-Americans, a number greater than the black populations of all but four African nations.

What Other Editors Are Saying

By United Press International
The (Westerly, R.I.) Sun

The Republican party's spoiler response to the Democratic party's fund-raising telethon exemplifies the sort of petty, cheap political shenanigans the nation should be spared.

Egged on by the Republican National Committee and Jerry Falwell's politico-religious Moral Majority, a great many non-Democrats called Democratic telethon numbers with disruptive intent. Some went so far as to make phony pledges of support.

The Republican National Committee has adopted a blandly disingenuous stance. Its spokesman, William Greener III, shrugged off any GOP responsibility, to wit: "We didn't do anything. We even closed our own phone banks during the telethon."

That sounds mighty noble — until one recalls that not long before the telethon the GOP's national chairman, Frank Fahrenkopf Jr., dispatched a flood of missives to the party faithful urging them to call the telethon lines but express support for President Reagan.

...such shoddy conduct might lead to a presidential campaign devoid of elementary fairness, with tit-for-tat dirty tricks the order of the day. Responsible Republicans, we think, should express distaste for what was done — and demand that there be no repetition of such cheap shots.

4Cs Helps Parents Of Limited Means To Care For Their Children

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

Most children under age 3 whose parents have to work are being cared for in unlicensed homes, according to two research specialists from Columbia University.

A meeting of representatives of licensed day care centers and public officials who work with day care activities for children of working parents was held recently by Phoebe Carpenter, administrator of the 4Cs program of Central Florida.

4Cs — Community Coordinated Child Care — contracts with individual child care centers to provide care for children whose parents are unable to pay the full costs. The centers used by 4Cs must meet requirements to become part of the program. Money for the service comes from federal and state agencies, though some county and city and United Way funds are provided.

Under the program, parents are required to pay whatever they can afford according to a pre-set scale and they may choose the center where their children are cared for. At the various centers children from low-income families mix with children from families where the parents pay the entire costs.

Dr. Sheila B. Kamerman and Dr. Alfred J. Kahn were identified by Mrs. Carpenter as co-directors of International Research project and they also do research for Columbia University.

County Commission Chairman Sandra Glenn said a large number of mothers are joining the labor force in Seminole County and there are many families in which both parents work. Thus, the need for quality day care for children locally is high. Dr. Kamerman said in her studies throughout the country she has found few children from two-parent families in day care centers, especially young children.

This held true in the Central Florida area as well. She said the majority of children in licensed day care centers seems to be from single-parent families.

"Where are the children of two-working parent families being kept, especially those 3 years old and under?" she asked.

A manager of a child care center at the Park Lake Presbyterian Church in Orlando said the majority of children in her church-sponsored program come from two-working-parent families.

Mrs. Carpenter said 91 percent of the children in the 4Cs program are from single-parent families. But this is the nature of the 4C program, geared toward helping single parents find quality care for their children.

Dr. Kamerman said that nationwide she has found that 80 percent of the places where children, aged 3 and younger, are cared for are unlicensed and operate underground.

She added that older brothers and sisters are taking care of younger siblings in some instances and in others a mother in the neighborhood is caring for the children of several families.

Asked the ratio of church-sponsored day care centers to privately owned ones, Dr. Kamerman could not cite exact statistics, but noted that a much larger number of church-sponsored child care centers are functioning than anyone knew existed. "And a significant number — more than one-third — are subsidized by public funds," she said.

Dr. Kahn noted that well over $1 billion is being spent for child care through income tax credits.

Dr. Kamerman said there is a lot of talk in the country about employers providing employees with subsidies for child care, but by and large employers aren't participating because of the high costs involved. "Many need to provide hospitalization benefits and pension plans for employees ahead of child care," she said.

Hastings Discloses Other Judges Out To Get Him

MIAMI (UPI) — An angry U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings has disclosed, in defiance of a federal court regulation, that two other federal judges are seeking his impeachment.

Hastings, 46, Florida's first black federal judge, disclosed details of the complaints against him by filing a 30-page document of his own complaint in Miami federal court Friday.

Hastings charged that the complaints against him are "an improper conspiracy ... Influenced by an intent to retaliate against (Hastings) for the manner in which he exercised rights guaranteed him ... under the Constitution and U.S. law."

After a lengthy trial, a Miami federal court jury acquitted Hastings in February on charges of bribery conspiracy and obstruction of justice. Hastings acted as his own defense attorney and accused the Justice Department of persecuting him because he is black.

According to documents Hastings filed Friday, U.S. Judges W. Terrell Hodges of Tampa, chief judge of Florida's Middle District, and Anthony Alaimo of Brunswick, Ga., chief of Georgia's Southern District, filed a six-count complaint in March calling for Hastings' impeachment.

They accused him of conduct that "degraded and demeaned the entire constitutional system."

Ozone Knocks Pollutant

ORMOND BEACH (UPI) — Engineer Robert Elefritz reports he has developed a process to reduce high levels of the carcinogen trihalomethene found in Florida water.

Levels of the substance, known as THM, are three times greater in the state's drinking water than the amount recommended by state and federal agencies, officials said.

Elefritz reported this week that his process uses controlled amounts of ozone to reduce levels of THM.

THM forms when chlorine and organic materials in rivers, lakes and wells interact, he said. When ozone is injected at certain stages of water treatment it removes the organic materials and prevents development of THM.

"Ozone in water, itself is not new," Elefritz said. "It's been used for over 100 years and it's common in Europe. But we're using it in small controlled doses at different stages of treatment. That has not been done before."

"The nice thing about putting ozone in the water is you're not putting in another chemical that goes to someone's tap," he said. "Ozone breaks back to oxygen after 20 minutes."

CFR Hospital Draws Other Development

The Central Florida Regional Hospital, which is observing its first anniversary, has proven more than a positive influence on the area since its opening a year ago on June 2, 1982.

It has been a magnet for more than $9 million in construction bordering the Lake Monroe, U.S. Highway 17-92 and State Road 46 site.

It has attracted more than real estate development and health care facilities in the form of a radiation therapy clinic and physicians' offices. Its extensive services and lake view have appealed to people.

Patient census continue to break records.

Hospital Administrator James Tesar said there had been a 10.3 percent increase in the first quarter of 1983 over the same period last year. "And we are projecting an increase of over 21.1 percent compared to the second quarter of this year over that of 1982."

Tesar added the patient figures are "higher than we ever anticipated."

Also, the $28 million Hospital Corporation of America affiliate has been a catalyst for drastic improvement of health care through the addition of 16 physicians in the first year to the active medical staff representing six new specialties.

Thus a wider range of medical treatment is now available locally due to the presence of staff specialists in the areas of neurosurgery, gastroenterology, plastic/reconstructive surgery, radiation therapy, oncology/hematology and nephrology.

Five new services, made possible through the acquisition of the latest "state of the art" equipment, improves access and increases level of care, hospital officials said. In addition to CT scanning, there are echocardiography, digital subtraction angiography (DVI), electroencephalography, electromyography.

Radiation therapy is available through the newly opened Central Florida Radiation Therapy Center just south of the hospital.

The brick and mortar medical complex, with CFRH as its centerpiece, is evidence of growth in the Sanford area and is quickly being translated into new business for the city and revenue for local governments, Tesar commented. Funds, thus far, to build the lake front showcase are from the private sector and therefore are on the county tax rolls.

Although the dynamics of construction is obviously the concrete side of the expansion story, the investment in human resources is just as dramatic, yet more subtle, Tesar noted. In the hospital alone, the payroll has increased approximately $2 million to $8,381,000 with the employee level standing near 626 including part-time workers.

According to Edna Robinson, RN, director of nursing, her staff has increased from 278 in January 1982 to 350 now. The crux of the figures rests, however, in the over 10 percent increase in full-time registered nurses — from 220 to 259 representing a jump from 33% to 48% of licensed nursing personnel.

The professional development of staff does not stop there. It is estimated by the Nursing Education Staff that in-service training of employees amounts to over 7,000 hours, while staff members have spent some 1,424 hours in classroom instruction outside the hospital last year. Tuition reimbursement, totaling $5,078, has been given to employees by the CFRH Auxiliary for college classes attended.

Community health education is becoming a prime interest with the program being expanded, Tesar said.

"In Recognition of Superior Performance" were the key words on a plaque presented to Kate Sisson, supervisor of data processing at Central Florida Regional Hospital, recently by Hospital Administrator James Tesar. In competition with 205 hospitals, CFRH placed first in their division and fifth among all the hospitals in performance based on percentage ranking of error free input for the last quarter of 1982. "It is a team effort," Sisson said, "as it is compiled on input from many areas in the Fiscal Services Department."

Computer Firm Moving Here

Dynamic Control Corporation, one of the largest designers of software for hospital computer systems in the United States, will be moving its corporate headquarters from Coral Gables to Longwood this fall.

Ground was broken in May on a five and one-half acre site located on State Road 434 in Longwood. The first 30,000-square-foot building will house DCC's more than 200 employees. After the first facility is fully occupied, a second 30,000-square-foot building will be constructed. During the next year and a half, DCC expects to double the number of its employees. Today approximately 50 percent of its employees are computer programmers and 28 percent are health care professionals.

David M. Pomerance, president of Dynamic Control Corporation, said, "We're very excited about our move. One of the reasons we decided to consolidate functions and staff here was the quality of life Orlando offers. We believe the area will help us continue our growth by attracting quality personnel to the company."

Pomerance indicated the company's corporate staff and other divisions from the firm's Atlanta and Coral Gables offices will be moved in the fall. The Atlanta office will close and the Coral Gables office will remain open with a staff to service DCC's clients in the Miami area. The company also has five marketing and branch offices throughout the United States.

The nine-year-old company works with its client hospitals to design, install and support comprehensive software programs. The programs coordinate and enhance information flow throughout the various departments of a hospital. DCC's principal offering is the HPMS (Hospital Patient Management System) designed to operate on IBM's System/38. HPMS helps hospitals manage all patient-related information such as transmitting medication orders or making patient admissions information available to the accounting department for final billing purposes through terminals located throughout the hospital.

Dynamic Control Corporation's Office Park is being constructed by Florida Homecrafters of Altamonte Springs.

Large Subdivision Planned

Landstar Homes, which already has two large residential developments under construction in Orange and Osceola counties, has purchased 405 acres in Altamonte Springs for a proposed $85 million housing development.

The project located in southwest Seminole County, south of State Road 436 and east of Forest City Road, will be known as Country Creek. The property was purchased by Landstar Homes from the Florida Companies, Jacksonville, for $5 million. Dennis J. Casey of Florida Ranch Lands was broker for the seller.

Plans call for construction of between 1,200 and 1,500 houses on the tract, which is zoned for 1,795 single and multifamily housing units. It was platted in 1972 as Lake Lotus.

Wasserman Joins FRC

Burton Bines, president of Florida Residential Communities (FRC) headquartered in Altamonte Springs, has named a new director of management information services.

Greg Wasserman, CPA, formerly with Kenneth Leventhal & Co., of Miami, took over the position on May 16. With FRC as a client for the past two years, Wasserman was an auditor and worked in management advisory services with the national accounting firm specializing in real estate. He now manages FRC's sophisticated computer operation serving all seven FRC communities in the Orlando and Daytona Beach areas.

Mark Latiff has been named construction manager for FRC. Latiff supervises the superintendents at all five Orlando area FRC developments and handles customer service requests regarding construction. He was promoted from superintendent of FRC's Markham Hills community and had also worked with FRC during 1978 and 1979.

Dave Schulte was named director of land development and construction. Schulte supervises the site work and construction at five communities in FRC's Orlando Division. For the past two years, he was FRC's construction manager.

Zetta Inks Solar PR Job

Zetta Morrison, chairman of the board of Zetta Public Relations, has announced the signing of Mules Punch Solar Inc. of Altamonte Springs to a public relations contract. Mules Punch Solar rents solar hot water and energy management equipment to the residential market.

H. George Louser, president of Mules Punch Solar, said his company is making strides in helping alleviate the energy crunch in Central Florida.

"Florida is the ideal location for solar energy use," said Louser. "I feel that using a prestige public relations company such as Zetta will best communicate our message to the residents of Central Florida."

Street System Unique

Construction is under way on the first phase of a 425-unit planned unit development in southwest Seminole County which will feature a somewhat unconventional street system just approved for Seminole County.

Called Stockbridge, the 68-acre development of Florida Residential Communities (FRC) will include clustered one and two story detached patio homes and duplexes.

It is located between State Road 436 and Sand Lake Road, immediately east of the Orange-Seminole County boundary line.

Anticipated price range for the contemporary-styled residences and lots will be in the low $50,000s to the mid $60,000s.

Canin Associates Inc., Urban and Environmental Planners, developed the master site plan for the project.

It will be highlighted by a street system that is smaller-scaled than any yet approved for use in Seminole County — a site planning concept which helps cut development costs, according to Brian C. Canin, president of the Orlando-based firm.

In Stockbridge, right of ways for interior or local traffic streets will be 40 feet and pavements 20 feet in width — with the required five-foot utility easements on each side of the street on private property.

New subdivisions commonly have 50-foot right of ways and 24-foot pavements. Utility easements are usually part of the common right of way, said Canin.

'Friends' Watch Over St. Johns; Fishing Better Than Ever

It is encouraging to know that citizens can still be concerned about the problems that affect us all, and will sometimes organize in groups to help solve these problems. One such group of concerned citizens is called Friends of the St. Johns, Inc., a tireless watchdog organization dedicated to restoring the St. Johns River to its original pristine beauty.

They report in a recent newsletter that the surface water management plan for the upper basin of the river has now been approved by the district, but that we are years away from seeing the actual levees, ditches, gates and other structures needed for proper headwaters management. Progress is slow among the various government agencies.

Friends of the St. Johns are now concentrating their efforts on a cleanup of the river system, particularly the practice of sewage discharge into the river. They have had several workshops with county, city, and DER officials in a continuing effort to correct sewage pollution problems.

Every citizen of the area should be intensely interested in the clean-up of the St. Johns River because it is one natural asset of Florida that is directly and adversely affected by the local population explosion. In conservation efforts, the ounce of prevention is far cheaper than the pound of cure.

Right now the river looks good. The average to above average rainfall that has blessed Central Florida for the past eighteen months has finally flushed the St. Johns, and its waters are once again clear. Being clear does not mean it is free of pollution, especially the soluble nutrients from lawn and garden fertilizers. These nutrients feed blooming algae, use up water oxygen, and can transform the river to pea soup overnight when conditions are right. At least temporarily, the fish kills associated with oxygen depleted waters are a curse of the past, and once again the river throngs with happy boaters and successful fishermen.

In fact, the fishing is better on the river now than it has been in many years. That stretch of the river between Lake Monroe and the mouth of Lake Jessup has been producing some outstanding catches, with some of the best being caught in the vicinity of the boatworks and the Brickyard Slough.

Dell Abernethy of Osteen Bridge Fish Camp reports that catches of Bass, Catfish, Bluegills, and Shellcrackers have been excellent for several weeks, but that the Speckled Perch fishing has been poor. Sunshine Bass have been spotty, but these fish are on the move constantly. When you find them, the fishing is great.

School Bass fishing is spotty, and is concentrated in the swifter shallow waters in the early morning hours while the Menhaden are running.

Stan Gibbs of Black Hammock Fish Camp

on Lake Jessup reports that the lake water is in good condition, and the Bluegill and Shellcracker fishing excellent. Bass fishing in the lake is generally poor.

The recent Osteen Bridge Bass Tournament was won by Jerry and David Malloy. Their 10 fish weighed 31 pounds three and one-fourth ounces, with their largest fish tipping the scales at a whopping nine and one-half pounds.

Second place went to Frank Sloan and Rich Wiegarten whose 10 fish weighed a respectable 23 pounds 13 ounces. John Harman and Carson Byrd were close behind in third place with 22 pounds 14 and one-half ounces. All 105 fish caught in the tournament were weighed in and released, ready to make another angler happy. How's that for conservation!

Knights Knock Off Rotary; Moose Ousted

Friday's Junior League scores

Knights of Columbus 9, Rotary 5
Kiwanis won by forfeit over Elks

Manager Bill Dube and his Moose team are all dressed up with no place to go. Moose sports the best overall record in the Sanford Junior League, 14-5, but was eliminated from any post-season playoff spot Friday night at Chase Park when Knights of Columbus clinched the second half title with a 9-5 victory over Rotary.

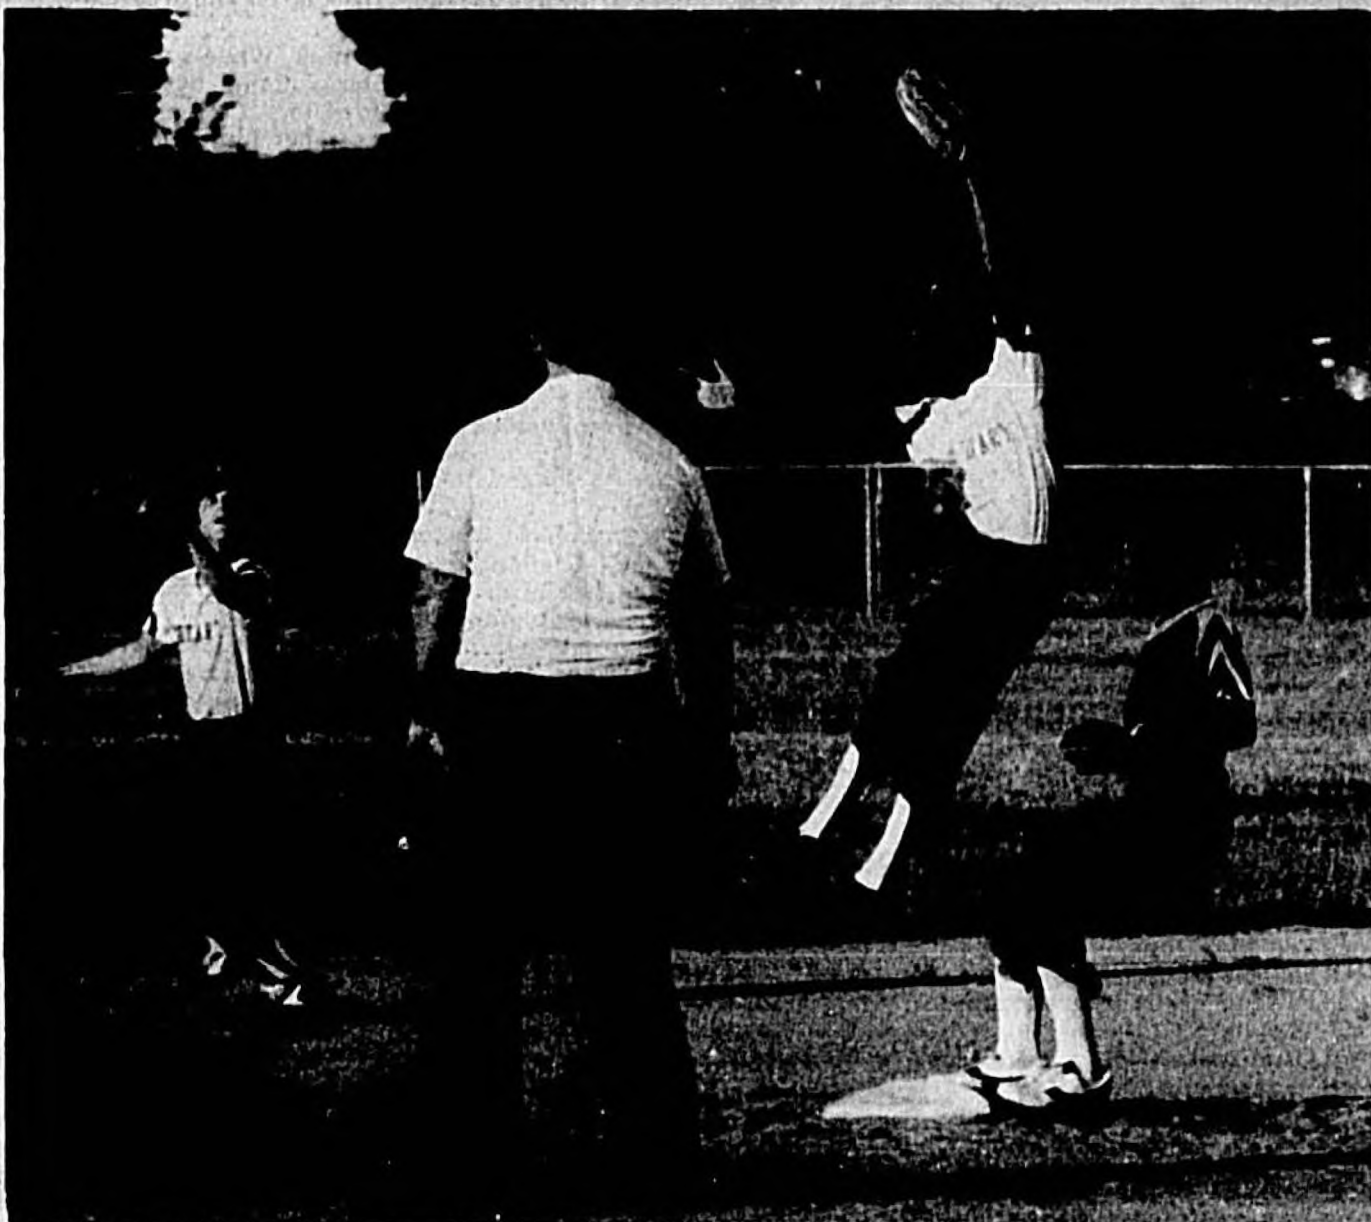

Rotary, the first half winner, and Knights of Columbus will meet again Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in the first game of the best 2 out of 3 City Championship series at Chase Park. KOC, which ended its regular season, finished at 9-1 for the second half and 14-6 overall while Rotary slipped to 2-5 in the second half and 11-6 overall.

Meanwhile, Dube and Moose take a seat in the stands. Moose would still be in contention for the second half crown had it not been upset by Kiwanis this past Monday night. The only hope Moose had was for Knights of Columbus to lose Friday night to give them a chance at a tie in the second half. Moose and Rotary tangled Monday night at 5 p.m. in the final day of regular season play. Kiwanis may play Elks at 7:15 if Elks has enough players.

Knights of Columbus capitalized on the wildness of Rotary pitcher Jason Heffington for five runs on no hits in the top of the first inning. Heffington walked the first four batters he faced to force in one run and, one out later, walked Todd Revels to force in another run. The third run came in on a sacrifice fly to leftfield by J.D. Paul. David Rape scored the fourth run on a throwing error by the pitcher and the Knights took a 5-0 lead when Eric Williams reached on an error to chase home Revels.

Rotary went down in order in the bottom of the first, but stormed back for four runs in the second. Craig Dixon drew a walk to lead off, stole second, and went to third when Perez Perry's fly ball to right was booted by Paul. Perry then stole second and Darris Littles walked to load the bases with no outs. Johnny Wright followed with a two-run single up the middle and took second on the throw to the plate but a throw back to third sailed into left field enabling Littles to score and moving Wright to third. Wright scored on a sacrifice fly by Heffington as Rotary cut KOC's lead to 5-4.

Knights of Columbus pitcher David Rape, aided by three double plays, shut down Rotary until the bottom of the seventh. The first double play came in the bottom of the third with Bobby Bew, who had singled to lead off, on first base. Ron Blake then drilled a liner to shortstop and Bew was caught off first for the twin-killing. The second DP came in the fifth with one out and Bew again on first base. This time Blake lined a shot to right field which Paul made a running catch and nailed Bew at first. Paul also figured in the third double play, which came in the bottom of the sixth. Dixon led off with a triple to center and tried to score on a short fly ball to right by Perry. Paul caught the ball and gunned down Dixon at the plate.

KOC scored an unearned run in the third and picked up two more in the fifth. All three runs were scored by batters who had walked. Back-to-back hits by Alonzo Gainey and Curtis Rudolph in the top of the sixth enabled KOC to take a 9-4 lead. Gainey's and Rudolph's hits were the only safeties off Heffington for the game. However, Heffington didn't help his cause much as he walked 12 and balked twice. Mike Edwards came on in relief in the top of the seventh and retired three batters in a row, two of them strikeouts.

Rape allowed six hits, three by Wright, in going the distance for the pitching victory. Rape struck out five and walked four. Both starters were undefeated going into the game. Rape improved his record to 6-0 while Heffington fell to 3-1.

There was no first game Friday night as Ball Motor Line didn't have enough players, as if anything's new, and had to forfeit to Kiwanis. Five out of the six Junior League games this week were forfeits.

Women Teams Vie For Crown

Three teams from the Sanford Women's Softball League will compete in the Florida Recreation Softball Association's Women's B Division State Tournament this weekend at New Smyrna Beach. All three teams were among the top five teams in the district, thus qualifying for the state tourney.

S&H Fabricating, which won the Sanford league, goes into the state tournament with four players that hit over .400 during the regular season and five more that hit better than .300. The better-than .400 hitters include Marysue Gilmore (.556), Dee Hogan (.512), Jole Boyles (.500) and Cindy Bungo (.429). As far as power goes, Boyles two homers, three triples and four doubles during the season. Teresa Behrens and Gilmore also hit a pair of homers. Hogan was the league's top pitcher as she finished with a 9-1 record.

Heavy-hitting Sonia Cherry will lead the Elkettes into the state tourney. Cherry led the league in both hitting (.571) and home runs, five. Cherry hit three home runs in the final game of the regular season. Other top hitters for Elkettes include Joyce Randall (.515) and April Gordon (.361). Robin Riggins, Johnnie Brown, and Tony Hardy, all former high school standouts, will also join the Elkettes for the state title.

The third team, Shoemaker Construction, is made up from numerous players from this year's Seminole High squad. Angie Carpenter, Janet Hauck, Katy Barbour, Maxine Campbell and Alycia Dixon, all top players for the Lady Seminoles, will bolster the Shoemaker lineup. Also joining the team are high school coaches Beth Corso (Seminole), Cindy Henry (Lake Mary) and Mary Vacala (Lyman). Campbell was Shoemaker's top hitter during the regular season as she hit at a .520 clip. Other leading hitters include Betty Turner (.500), Carpenter (.381), Dixon (.360), Corso (.351) and Debbie Anderson (.320).

Oviedo centerfielder Terry Gammons ropes a single to drive in Randy Ferguson during the Giants' 9-6 win over Lady Lake in Top Team

On Hold

Oviedo Outlasts Lady Lake, Phillies Fall

The anticipated meeting between Seminole County Senior League rivals Oviedo and Altamonte has been temporarily put on hold.

Oviedo's Giants outlasted Lady Lake, 9-6, in District 14, Division 2 Top Team Tournament action Friday night, but the Altamonte Phillies dropped a 5-1 decision to Eustis at Eustis. Saturday night at 7:30, Oviedo and Eustis, both unbeaten in the double-elimination tournament, battle. Altamonte falls into the losers' bracket and must take on either Mount Dora or St. Johns Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Eustis on an adjacent field.

Altamonte manager Gene Letterio went with Pat Lusk instead of his ace, Mike Schmit, and the righthander turned in a creditable performance, allowing just four hits.

His teammates, however, didn't support him at the plate or in the field. Schmit, in particular, had an off night. The usually reliable shortstop had three errors and fanned three times with runners on base.

"Mike Schmit is human, too," said Letterio. "Lusk pitched a good enough game, we just didn't give him any help."

Eustis catcher Trent Trannen have the hosts a 1-0 lead in the first inning when he clubbed a solo homer.

The lead grew to 3-0 in the fourth when Lusk walked the bases full and then Schmit let a ground ball get through his legs allowing two runs to score.

Top Team Baseball

Altamonte finally cracked tough Mike Carter for a run in the fifth. Todd Fuggi walked and stole second. Shane Letterio stroked a single to right center which scored Fuggi.

The feisty Letterio had three singles and three stolen bases to account for most of the Phillies' attack. Dan Beaty had an infield hit.

Letterio will send Schmit to the mound Saturday. "It'll be a good chance for him to let out some of his frustration," said Letterio. "We're very, very determined. We need to win Saturday and Monday (Lady Lake) to get a shot at Oviedo or Eustis on Tuesday."

Oviedo, meanwhile, didn't play too impressively either. Manager Tommy Ferguson's crew bunched three runs in three separate innings to overcome seven errors and Lady Lake. The Lakers helped out with 10 errors of their own.

Dave Wood, however, turned in a strong effort on the mound with a three-hitter. Saturday, Ferguson will go with Craig Duncan against Eustis with Terry Gammons slated for relief.

Wood opened the Oviedo first with a double and promptly scored when Randy Ferguson swatted a two-bagger. Terry Gammon then singled home Ferguson. After the swift Gammons stole second and third, Duncan plated him with a ground out to shortstop for a 3-1 lead.

Oviedo opened things up with three more runs in the fourth. Terry Gammons, Duncan and Ellis Bell all walked, but Duncan was forced at second and Reggie Williams flew out. Aaron Gammons and Charles Warner, though, kept things going with RBI singles. Wood then reached on an error by the third baseman to chase home Aaron Gammons for a 6-1 bulge.

Lady Lake bounced back with three in the top of the fifth, but Oviedo matched the total in the bottom of the frame. Ferguson reached on an error and swiped second. Terry Gammons singled him home and eventually scored when Williams reached on an error.

Bell walked and Aaron Gammons singled in his second run of the night.

The Gammons boys each had two hits and Terry scored three runs. Ferguson and Wood collected doubles. —SAM COOK

Honeycutt Posts 9th Win; Welch Blanks Reds

If Rick Honeycutt keeps pitching this way, there may not be enough oil wells in Texas to pay him what he'll command on the open market next winter.

Honeycutt, who can become a free agent after this season, raised his record to 9-3 and lowered his major league-leading earned run average to 1.49 Friday night in pitching the Texas Rangers to a 10-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Not bad for a guy who was 5-17 with a 5.27 ERA last season.

"All I wanted to do this year was to show that I was a better pitcher than I was last year," said Honeycutt. "I stunk last year."

"I've had big, early leads three of the last four times I've pitched. It is a good situation to be in."

Texas made things easy for Honeycutt by scoring five runs in the second off loser Ken Schrom. 4-2. Billy Sample and Buddy Bell each contributed two-run doubles in that inning as Texas collected eight extra base hits overall.

A.L./N.L. Roundup

George Wright added a three-run homer in the fifth — his fifth home run in the last 13 games. In the sixth, Bell delivered a solo homer and Wright had a run-scoring double.

"Last year it seemed that Charlie Hough was our best pitcher and he often got a lot of runs to work with," said Honeycutt. "This year I'm getting a lot of runs."

"Maybe when the guys think they have a pretty good chance to win, their concentration is up a little at the plate."

Blue Jays 6, Angels 3

At Toronto, Dave Stieb pitched a six-hitter in becoming the major league's first 10-game winner. Stieb struck out seven and walked three in raising his record to 10-4.

"It was just another win," Stieb said. "I didn't set any dates or goals as far as expectations. Let's just say things are as they should be for me and the team."

Red Sox 5, Orioles 3

At Baltimore, Bob Ojeda and Bob Stanley combined on an eight-hitter and Dwight Evans keyed a five-run second inning with a two-run double to lead the Red Sox to victory. The Red Sox pounded out 12 hits, four by Jerry Remy. In support of Ojeda, 4-2, who went 7 2-3 innings before giving way to Stanley, who notched his 13th save. Eddie Murray homered for Baltimore.

Tigers 11, Indians 4

At Cleveland, Tom Brookens drove in four runs and Lance Parrish banged out four hits to pace the Tigers to their 11th victory in their last 13 games. Jack Morris, 7-5, went seven innings to pick up his fourth straight triumph.

Yankees 7, Brewers 2

At New York, Rick Cerone drove in three runs and sparked a three-run sixth inning to help the Yankees to victory. Dave Righetti, 8-2, went 8 1-3 innings to get the triumph while Mike Caldwell, 5-6, took the loss. Mark Brouhard and Robin Yount homered for Milwaukee and Roy Smalley homered for New York.

White Sox 6, A's 3

At Chicago, Vance Law's one-out RBI double in the eighth inning led the White Sox to victory. Kevin Hickey, 1-2, got the triumph and Salome Barajas pitched the ninth inning to pick up his fourth save.

Royals 3, Mariners 1

At Kansas City, Mo., Frank White's sixth-inning sacrifice fly and shoddy baserunning by Seattle's Al Cowens lifted the Royals to victory. Cowens was called out for missing second base after hitting an apparent inside-the-park homer in the second inning and the mistake helped Larry Gura, 6-8, gain the victory. Richie Zisk homered for Seattle and Willie Aikens homered for Kansas City.

Dodgers 1, Reds 0

Bob Welch is an easy out who made things tough for Mario Soto.

"I can't recall ever hitting a home run, even in the minors," Welch said Friday night after breaking up a scoreless pitching duel with Soto by hitting his first career home run in the sixth inning to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 1-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"I may have had one in Little League," continued Welch. "The only place I can get a hit is when they throw the ball inside, and he threw it there. I don't think anyone was more surprised than I was."

Soto had held the Dodgers to two hits and allowed only one runner as far as second base on an error before Welch hit a 1-1 pitch into the left field stands.

Astros 4, Padres 1

At San Diego, Dickie Thon, who had hit three homers in his career before this season, hit his fifth and sixth of the year to support the four-hit pitching of Nolan Ryan and Bill Dawley and lead Houston. Ryan, 5-1, narrowly missed the 52nd shutout of his career.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 2

At St. Louis, Tom Herr's RBI triple capped a four-run fourth and helped the Cardinals break a three-game winning streak of Chuck Carls, 7-5. Bob Forsch evened his record at 5-5 by scattering eight hits. Andy Van Slyke, called up after Keith Hernandez was traded to the New York Mets, doubled in a run.

Pirates 2, Phillies 1

At Pittsburgh, Dave Parker tripped in a run and scored another and John Candelaria, 5-6, became the 15th Pirate in history to win 100 games. Pete Rose failed to start for Philadelphia for the ninth straight game but kept his consecutive games played streak alive at 677 by pinch hitting.

Expos 7, Mets 2

MONTREAL (UPI) — Even after 13 years in the majors, Montreal shortstop Chris Speier still loves the applause.

Speier went 3-for-3, scored two runs and drove in one run Friday night to lead the Expos to a 7-2 victory over the New York Mets in a game delayed at the start for one hour and 36 minutes by rain.

After Speier's sixth-inning double, his second of the game, the crowd of 27,879 gave him a standing ovation.

"It's great to hear the crowd react like that and I appreciate it," he said. "As long as you do something good to help the club then an ovation is really good to get."

Speier, normally No. 8 in the batting order, has moved up to No. 2 behind leadoff man Tim Lincecum.

"That's a real challenge for me," he said. "Because Tim usually gets on base and likes to steal so that means I have to let a lot of pitches go by." Raines stole two more bases Friday to run his total to 20 for the season.

Montreal manager Bill Virdon thinks the warm weather helps Speier.

"He really gets hot in this type of climate. He's hitting the ball well and finding the holes out there in the outfield," Virdon said.

Right hander Charlie Lea went to 4-3, striking out a career-high nine batters.

Giants 2, Braves 1

At San Francisco, Alton Hamaker, 8-3, allowed eight hits in 8 1-3 innings and Jack Clark hit his 11th home run of the season for the Giants. Greg Minton notched his eighth save. Clark's homer came off starter Pascual Perez, 8-2, leading off the fourth.

Bob Welch slammed a sixth-inning homer to break up a scoreless game as the Los Angeles Dodgers improved their lead of the Atlanta Braves to 4 1/2 games with a 1-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and Mario Soto. The Braves lost a close one to San Francisco, 2-1.

Billy Batters Urinal, George Is Not Upset; Yankees Relieve Fowler Of Pitching Duties

A.L. Baseball

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — New York Yankees manager Billy Martin and owner George Steinbrenner "put their heads together" to discuss the team's poor record.

Judge Eddie Sapir of New Orleans dismissed rumors circulated by the New York news media that Martin was about to be fired by Steinbrenner for a third time.

"Billy's not fired," Sapir said.

"In an agreement that we made even before the season started, we would have meetings to discuss these things and that's exactly what we did. We discuss all these rumors... and various aspects of Billy's contract. It was a very productive meeting and everything's in great shape."

Sapir said a face-to-face meeting was called Thursday because conference phone calls had proven unsuccessful in the past. The three parties met in Cleveland, where Steinbrenner's father was ill.

The agent insisted Steinbrenner was not upset with Martin for taking a baseball bat to a stadium urinal in Cleveland because the Yankees were playing poorly.

He said they also discussed reports of Martin taking pregame naps and not communicating with his coaches.

"We discussed everything," Sapir said. "Including those two issues and they're completely unfounded. There's no problem with them whatsoever. They're just dead issues."

He said he was not certain how many more meetings owner and manager would have — perhaps as many as three or four depending on the Yankees' immediate future. He said both sides were living up to a promise to communicate better made when Martin was hired back.

"What it amounts to is George and Billy are both winners and they like to win," said Sapir. "The team hasn't been going really great. They just want to put their heads together and see what can be accomplished."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Art Fowler has been relieved of his duties as pitching coach of the New York Yankees and been designated for reassignment, the club announced Friday.

Sammy Ellis and Jeff Torborg, both of whom served previously as Yankees pitching coaches, will share the duties of Fowler's job, a club spokesman said.

Fowler has not yet accepted his new position in the minor leagues. A close friend of Yankees Manager Billy Martin, Fowler has worked under Martin in Minnesota, Detroit, Texas, New York and Oakland as pitching coach.

Although he has had success in his previous service under Martin, Fowler had trouble this season getting any consistency out of the Yankees' staff and owner George Steinbrenner was not happy with the way the pitching staff performed.

The reassignment of Fowler is expected to widen the rift between Martin and Steinbrenner. Martin, serving his third term as Yankees manager, narrowly escaped being fired again by Steinbrenner.

Mahaffey Overcomes 'Blahs,' Holds Open Lead With Rookie

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI) — John Mahaffey says he felt "kind of blah" about his second round in the U.S. Open golf championship, and, considering that he was the co-leader with rookie Joey Russell, "kind of blah" was as good a description as any for all of the action at Oakmont Country Club Friday.

The scores were high, the day was long and the round wasn't even completed. A vicious thunderstorm interrupted play for two hours, 32 minutes and sent two spectators from Weirton, W.Va., to the hospital after being struck by lightning while standing on the second fairway.

One of the injured was released after treatment; the other was admitted for observation in satisfactory condition.

When darkness fell at 8:40 EDT Friday night, 38 golfers from the field of 155 were still on the muddled, 6,972-yard course. They were ordered back out at 7 a.m. today to complete the second round, so the 36-hole cut could be made.

The final field — comprising the low 60 scores, including ties, and all golfers within 10 strokes of the lead — was to start the third round about an hour after the second round was finished.

Mahaffey, who won his only major tournament, the 1978 PGA Championship, at Oakmont, was tied at 1-under-par 141 with Russell when Friday's thunderstorm swept across the course.

"I felt kind of blah about it today," Mahaffey said. "I couldn't get any momentum."

The golfers had expected the rain to make the course play a little easier and give the remaining field some of the momentum Mahaffey lacked.

But at the end of the day, Mahaffey, who shot a 1-over 72, and Russell, who had a second-round 69, still held the lead.

In fact, nine of the top 10 players who finished second-round play did so before the rainfall.

Defending Open champion Tom Watson and two-time PGA champion Ray Floyd both shot 70s Friday to land one stroke behind Mahaffey and Russell at even-par 142.

Veteran Calvin Peete also was at even-par and waiting to play the 18th hole Friday night when play was suspended.

The tour's second-leading money-winner, Hal Sutton, and Masters champion Seve Ballesteros, one of three first round leaders, were at 143.

Scott Simpson threatened to burn up Oakmont early in the day with birdies on four of the first five holes, but settled for 71-144.

Bunched at 145 were leading

money-winner Lanny Wadkins, D.A. Weirbring and Lanny Wadkins. At 146 were Curtis Strange and Frank Conner.

Four-time Open champion Jack Nicklaus, former Masters and PGA champ Gary Player, and Mark Hayes were at 5-over 147.

Bob Murphy, who ended the first round at 69 and tied for the lead with Ballesteros and Mahaffey, ballooned to an 81-150 Friday.

Mahaffey's second round had its share of bogeys too — five — but he offset them with four birdies.

"It looked as if I'd shoot a high number — especially after I got bogeys at 10 and 11," he said. "I probably drove the ball better overall today (than Thursday), but the ones I missed I missed worse — I'm talking about 20-30 yards."

But the 24-year-old Russell had no complaints about his round, which included four birdies and just to birdies.

A former All-America at Oral Roberts University, Russell came into the tournament with total earnings of $20,330 after making the cut in nine of the 17 tournaments he has played during his first year on the tour. His best finish so far is a tie for 19th.

"Coming into the Open, I would have been very satisfied with a top 15 finish, which would make me exempt for next year," Russell said.

"After yesterday (Thursday), I knew I could make birdies and shoot under par if I played smart golf, and that's what you have to do on this golf course."

"I wasn't that nervous coming in, I was concentrating more on what I was doing. I was very aware I was going up on the leader board. I kept trying for more birdies. I felt very comfortable. My swing is there; everything was just right."

The two lightning victims were identified as Ronald Ard and Raymond Case of Weirton, W.Va. Both were standing on the right of the second fairway when they were struck by lightning.

Case was admitted to Citizens General Hospital in New Kensington, Pa., but Ard was released after emergency room treatment.

Friday marked the first time in U.S. Open history that a started round was not completed by the end of the day. In the 1959 Open at Winged Foot in Mamaroneck, N.Y., a two-round day was reduced to one because of rain.

Is he man or myth? Darryl Dawkins, former Evans' High basketball prodigy, returns home Sunday for the Stroh's Basketball Challenge at the Orange County Civic Center at 7 p.m. Dawkins, the 6-11 center for the New Jersey Nets, claims to originate from Lovetron, and brings with him a galaxy-full of slam dunks.

Basketball Man Or Myth? Dawkins Brings Galaxy Of Dunks To Orlando

Is he man or myth? Only Darryl Dawkins knows for sure and he's not saying one way or another.

Orlando's biggest claim to fame comes home Sunday at 7 p.m. when the 6-11 Dawkins, a center for the New Jersey Nets, will be at the new Orange County Civic Center to perform in "The Stroh's Basketball Challenge." The Orlando game is a part of the eight-city tour which began Saturday at the Sun Dome at the University of South Florida in Tampa. The tour is organized by ProServ, Inc. of Washington D.C.

Half of the tickets for the first sports event in the new 6,200 seat facility have been sold. Promoters expect a near-capacity crowd, as well they should.

Along with Dawkins, who led Evans' High to the state championship his senior year, NBA most valuable player Moses Malone will also perform. Malone, the Philadelphia 76ers' rugged center, will team with Dawkins, New Jersey's Buck Williams, Detroit's Kelly Tripucka and Boston's Nate Archibald to form the East squad. Mike Fratello, recently signed by the Atlanta Hawks, will coach the team.

The West will include San Antonio's Arlis Gilmore, Utah's Adrian Dantley, Darrell Griffith and Jerry Eaves along with Denver's Kiki Vandeweghe. Atlanta assistant Brendan Suhr will handle the coaching duties.

Dawkins, meanwhile, took up new residence after he left Orlando. He moved to Lovetron, an extraordinary planet of love and other delicacies.

"Chocolate Thunder" will bring with him his galaxy of slam dunks of which each has a distinctive name. "I'll be introducing as many as four new dunks," said Dawkins. Some of the old ones will also be on display. Such as the "Go-rilla," the "In Your Face Disgrace," "Dunk You Very Much and the "Sexophonic Turbo Delight."

New improvisations include the "Rump-roasting, bun-toasting, wham bam thank you jam, Ma'am and the "Get out of the way backboard-away and if you ain't groovin' you'd best get movin'."

When Dawkins played for the Sixers, he received a bit of notoriety — and a "cool it" from commissioner Lawrence O'Brien — when he shattered backboards at the Spectrum and Kansas City's Market Square Arena in the 1979-80 season.

The fragments of the backboards were scooped up by adoring fans and were considered "Darryl's Diamonds." Supposedly, they are now collector's items, especially since the NBA went to collapsible rims to counteract Dawkins' shower parties.

Tickets are available at the door, $10.50 for adults and $8.50 for children under 16. — BAM COOK

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Generals Force 6 Mistakes; Surprise Los Angeles, 20-13

The New Jersey Generals and the Los Angeles Express both played uncharacteristic games.

New Jersey coach Chuck Fairbanks liked the change. Los Angeles coach Hugh Campbell didn't.

"This was better from the standpoint that we didn't break down in the second half as in other games," Fairbanks said after the host Generals forced six Express turnovers en route to a 20-13 USFL upset triumph Friday night over Los Angeles. "We had a lot of big plays on defense, an awfully big play from (safety) Sam Soyp in the endzone (with 6:32 left to preserve the triumph)."

"Our offense had a pretty good mixture between running and passing."

Herschel Walker and Dwight Sullivan ran for touchdowns and John Roveto kicked two field goals to spark the Generals' offense.

The loss dampened the Express' playoff chances. Los Angeles fell to 7-9 and into a third-place tie with Denver in the Pacific Division, 1 1/2 games behind Oakland with two games left. Oakland plays at Philadelphia Monday night. New Jersey snapped a two-game losing streak and improved to 5-11.

"They (the Generals) played very well," Campbell said. "They're leading the league in turnovers and they didn't have any. We have protected the ball very well and we had six turnovers."

Walker, the USFL rushing leader, rushed for 85 yards on 28 carries and broke the pro football record for rushing yards by a rookie. He now has 1,705 yards, which bettered the rookie record of 1,674 set by George Rogers of the NFL's New Orleans Saints in 1961.

At Denver, Craig Penrose threw three touchdown passes and Benton White ran for 150 yards as the Denver Gold used a wide-open offense to break the Wranglers. Denver succeeded on a fake punt, a fake point-after touchdown, a flea flicker and a direct snap to the running back on fourth down, scoring a touchdown in every quarter. Arizona fell to 4-12, while Denver raised its record to 7-9 to keep its playoff hopes alive.

Blitz 85, Stallions 14

At Birmingham, Ala., reserve quarterback Bobby Scott threw three touchdown passes to pace Chicago and keep the Blitz in first place in the Central Division. The victory virtually assured Chicago, 11-5, of a spot in the playoffs, but the triumph was costly. Scott replaced Tim Lincecum in the first quarter after the starting quarterback injured his knee.

Deltona Leads Lake League

The Deltona Inn puts its 5-0 record on the line Sunday when it plays B & R Family in the Buddy Lake Summer League at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Deltona and B & R go at it at 12:30 p.m. Second-place Dave Farr's Real Estate Supermarket and the Florida Baseball School play at 2:30 p.m.

Dave Farr's has a 3-2 record while B & R Family is 2-3. Manager Tom Roberts' club may be on the line as his team, Florida Baseball School, is holding up the league with an 0-5 record.

Tampa's Bats Cool Off Second-Place Savages

Some say that vengeance is a dish best served cold. But, in the late-spring heat on June 10-12, Tampa burned the Seminole Savages in the 3rd Annual Seminole Softball Tournament at the Five Points complex.

In the last tournament the Savages played, hosted by Tampa, Seminole went in and came away with the title. This time, Tampa returned the favor and scammed off with the Seminole Softball Tourney crown after beating the Savages twice, 6-1 and 3-0.

"We're pretty equal," Seminole manager Roger Richardson said about the two friendly rivals. "It's just who's swinging the bat better that wins."

Seminole had an easy time with the rest of the tournament field, but could not crack Tampa's defense. Here is a look at Seminole's tournament games:

Game 1 — Seminole 17, West Orlando 0

The Savages played like savages, rapping off 19 hits and allowing West Orlando only three hits. Ava Gardner led the way as she went 4 for 5 including a double. Kristie Kaiser, Karen DeShetler and Mikki Eby had two hits each and Chris Tibbitts did not allow a walk in pitching the shutout.

Girls' Softball

Game 2 — Seminole 11, West Melbourne 2

Seminole struck early for five runs in the first inning and cruised the rest of the way behind a strong defense and the excellent pitching of Tibbitts. Jaudon Jonas, Kaiser and DeShetler had two hits each for the Savages.

Game 3 — Seminole 14, Melbourne 0

Another shutout for Tibbitts who was backed by a 14-hit offensive attack. Kelly Neary led the way as she went 3 for 4 and cracked three doubles. Kim Wain, Laura Davis and Kaiser had two hits apiece for the Savages.

Game 4 — Tampa 6, Seminole 1

Tampa scored all six of its runs in the last three innings after Seminole had held on to a 1-0 lead through four innings. The Savages managed only one hit off

Tampa, a single by DeShetler.

Game 5 — Seminole 11, Conway 4

The Savages' bats came alive again with a 19-hit explosion. Conway rapped off 18 hits but Seminole's defense held tough in crucial situations. Eby had a perfect performance at the plate as she went 4 for 4 with a double. Neary and Gardner had three hits apiece while Laura Davis and Jonas added two hits each. Beth Watkins picked up the pitching victory.

Game 6 — Tampa 3, Seminole 0

Tampa scored all three of its runs in the top of the sixth inning and held on for the victory. Seminole had eight hits in the game but did not come up with the key hits with runners in scoring position. Eby and Riane Richardson had two hits apiece for the Savages while Angie May went 1 for 1. Kaiser led the Savages the plate for the tournament as she had nine hits. Gardner had seven and Neary and DeShetler had six each. Tibbitts had another exceptional tournament on the mound as she came away with three victories and walked only three in five games.

Through the times both good and bad
You were always there to be our Dad
You were there for scraped knees and graduations
And you taught us to laugh at life's complications
What this is leading up to is that we all want to say
We love you very much and have a HAPPY FATHERS DAY!

...Ship Again Named Florida

"When we do a job, we do it right the first time," he said. "About 95 percent of the crew have technical training and almost a third are nuclear power trained."

Each man who works on the ship's reactor system received about two years of training before reporting to his first submarine. The Navy has been operating nuclear reactors since the mid-1950s and has never had a nuclear accident.

None of the crewmen expressed concern about serving on a nuclear-powered ship.

Besides the efficiency of nuclear power, the Florida manufactures its own fresh water by electrolysis, makes oxygen from seawater and "scrubs" the air of carbon dioxide. The only limiting factors in the submarine's operation are the amount of food that can be carried and the psychological endurance of the crew.

The Florida's increased size affords much more spacious living quarters for its crew. "The living conditions on the Florida are much better than on other submarines," said Petty Officer 1st Class Lete T. Connelly of Daytona Beach, who served on an attack submarine before joining the Florida's crew.

Besides their long hours of work to prepare the Florida for commissioning, the crewmen had to prepare themselves too. The men in the submarine service are required to become submarine qualified, which entails a thorough understanding of all the systems on a ship. Once qualified, they wear the coveted "dolphins" breast insignia on their uniforms.

"To qualify, a man has to be able to draw all the ship's systems and describe them," Lewis explained. "Even if he's not nuclear power trained, he has to know a lot about the reactor system. On a submarine every man has to be able to take care of everyone else. If there is a flooding casualty or a fire, an individual has to be able to control the flood, fight the fire and isolate all the electrical components."

"Not everyone is suited for submarine life," he added. "It takes a special person with mental ability, adaptability and a desire to be there."

After the commissioning ceremony the crewmen of the Florida will get to work. The ship's blue crew will bring the 19,750-ton submarine to its namesake state for training at the Naval Ordnance Test Unit in Port Canaveral.

"It's what they call the 'shakedown cruise,'" Lewis said. "It's where we get out and really put the crew and the ship to the test. After that we'll take the ship to its home port of Bangor, Washington."

door, whom she grew up with. They moved nine years ago to Florida, where they were married. They have been in the Geneva area ever since, and they also have a daughter named Tammy. Darlene and David lived in his parent's house when they first moved here until they acquired the property next to his parents where they now live in a mobile home.

"We had many problems back then," she said. "Our lives weren't right and the problems seemed to keep piling on top of each other. We then started visiting a local Nazarene Church, where we finally got our lives straight with the Lord. My husband was already a Christian, so he rededicated his life and I became a new Christian. The Lord then led us to Liberty Baptist College in Lynchburg, Va., where we remained for a year. My husband went to school, and had a job as a security guard for the school and for the Rev. Jerry Falwell. We both learned so much that year spiritually and emotionally and after that experience our marriage grew closer, and it becomes sweeter and sweeter every year."

The family moved back to Geneva to be with family, and David finished his last three years of college at Mims Bible Institute in Mims. She is now a housewife and mother, and her husband is a painter for a construction company in Orlando. Darlene is a very active person, whether helping a family in need, or taking her daughter Tammy to her swimming lessons in Sanford.

"Our relationship with the Lord and our trust and dependence on Him is one thing that has made my experiences at hospitals and with surgery all the more bearable," she said. "When I went in for surgery that day, it only took 30 minutes and I came out with no complications. I was sent back to my room where my husband was waiting for me, and the rest of the day I spent either reading or talking to him."

"The room was very comfortable, and so were the beds. I could tell they were new, but I still wanted to get up and move around as much as possible. There were two single beds in my room and it also had its own bathroom facilities. The only thing I remember about the room that really bothered me was the striped wallpaper that was hung in front of my bed. It wasn't on the side walls, only in front of me. The colors were bright and vivid, and very disturbing especially after just waking up from surgery," explained Darlene laughingly.

"The food was alright. It was regular hospital food, and because I was there only one day, I didn't have much of a choice of what I was going to eat."

"The nurses were real nice and friendly, and they helped me out a lot. Of course, the hospital and layout was new to them also, and I think we spent several hours laughing because none of us could find the remote control for the bed — and there it was right on the rail of the bed. We all got a kick out of that!" she exclaimed.

"The hospital also seems to be very considerate of your individual needs. They try to pair you off with someone of your own age group, and smokers and non-smokers together. I was in the same room with another lady who was brought in after her surgery, but we never got to talk because she was still sleeping when I left."

"Dr. Mowere came to see me, and make sure everything was fine, and mostly to find out if I had kept my food down. I wasn't on any kind of pain pills except Tylenol. Dr. Mowere said I could go home with my husband, and I was released the same day at 5 p.m. However, when I got to the front desk, my release papers couldn't be found, and there was a delay until they could be found. They were located shortly, and David and I were on our way."

"I was glad to be going home, but there was also a hint of excitement in being Central Florida Regional Hospital's first patient ever. I was glad that the Lord had brought me through the surgery ok, and I certainly praised His name."

Crepe Myrtle Tree Leads Race

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The crepe myrtle is leading in a runaway race in Lake Mary for the city's official tree mascot.

Barbara Gorman, utility administrator who is keeping track of the votes as Lake Mary citizens are paying their monthly water bills, said Friday the crepe myrtle has been chosen by 76 votes, more than half of those who have voted so far.

The dogwood is a far second with 34 votes, while the bottlebrush is third with 19 votes, followed by the loblolly bay with 12 votes and the Palatka holly with 10 votes.

Five write-in votes have also been received by three other trees, Mrs. Gorman said. The write-ins include two for the dawn redwood, two for the cardinal oak and one for the jacaranda.

Mrs. Gorman said she is keeping a list of those residents who have voted. But, she noted, when persons vote on their water bills, she is registering only one vote. "I can't read their minds," she said.

Those voting at city hall have on occasion, she said, noted that they are voting for themselves and their spouses or other family members.

Voting on the trees will continue until 4:30 p.m. July 7, Mrs. Gorman said.

At its 7:30 p.m. meeting July 7, the city commission will officially tally the votes and announce the winner.

Outstanding Dads

Daughter's Letter Of Nomination Wins Ernest Johnson Top Honor

By Katherine Burkett
Special To The Herald

For the past five years, The Herald has honored fathers on their day in a search asking readers to submit a letter telling about their "Outstanding Dads."

According to the letters, Seminole County has a variety of outstanding dads from all walks of life.

Deadline for the "Outstanding Dad" letters was June 8. These letters were evaluated by a panel of five judges.

The letter winning top honor for "Outstanding Dad" was written by Jeanette Johnson, a 19-year-old student living with her family at 174 Van Buren Ave. in Lake Mary.

"The Dad I am nominating is my dad. His name is Ernest Johnson.

"My dad is 39 years old, and has a wife "Iris" and us four kids. We all believe he is the greatest dad in the world.

"The reasons I have chosen my dad are many. One of the main reasons, though, is because there are not many dads around like him anymore. My dad is one of very few. He is looked up to and respected by many, young and old. He has endless willpower, courage and determination.

"When my dad was a kid, people made fun of him. They called him a stupid little hillbilly that would never amount to anything. When he was very young, he left this state and headed north. There is where he met my mom and got married.

Outstanding Dads

Jeanette Marie Johnson says her dad Ernest Johnson, above, "has endless will power, courage and determination."

"Dad worked for Midland Engineering for several years. He would work there for nine months, save his money, and then we'd come back to Florida for three months during the winter when work was slow.

"People never could understand why we would leave such a beautiful home and place to go back north to live in an apartment. Dad always told them, 'to have something nice you have to sacrifice for it,' and believe me, he did. We all did.

"It was just two years ago that Dad had his second accident. He was headed up a ladder with two steel bars in his hands when the ladder broke loose from the roof, causing him to fall. He fell on his back again. This time for sure everyone thought he was finished. Up until today, he has been in and out of hospitals. This time the doctors retired him. He couldn't believe it, being retired at age 39.

"He just couldn't accept it. He still today tells the doctors, 'I've got a family to feed, and I'm going back to work.' I know my dad, he will do it.

"That is only one reason he is so outstanding. There is another side of my dad. Because of the rough times he's had, he loves to help others. He and my mom took a 18-year-old boy in when his parents died.

"Dad put him to work on the roof, and worked him hard. He taught the boy everything he needed to know to make it in the world. Now the boy is 29 years old. He is still a roofer working for Midland Co. He has a wife, a home and two beautiful kids.

'...He Makes The Whole House Light Up'

"Our dad is special because he cares about us and he lets us sleep in his room when we see something scary on T.V. When we go to grandmother's he swims with us. My dad's name is Doctor John F. Schaeffer, and when he comes home from work he makes the whole house light up."

This letter was written by Anne Schaeffer, who will be in the third grade next year at Wilson Elementary School. Anne wrote it mostly by herself, but admits her mother helped her a little to avoid mistakes.

Anne thinks her father is very special. She cited as one of the particularly nice things he has done was the time he took her and her two sisters, Elizabeth, three, and Margret, two, to Sea World.

His responsibility to his patients forces Anne's father to keep irregular hours. "Sometimes at night when my mom is taking a shower and I need help I call for my father and he isn't there. Sometimes he works until twelve midnight because of his patients," Anne said.

Anne's father can also take advantage of the flexibility of his schedule to arrange special family days. "If he wants to he can have a full day, so tomorrow he has the whole day to himself. Sometimes when he has a day off, he takes us vacationing or to Disney, special places," Anne said.

Having two sisters that are so young can be trying at times, and Anne's father understands. "Sometimes he wants to take me and mommy out to eat so he gets a babysitter for the babies, and we go out to a fancy restaurant," Anne said.

Anne and her father get time alone together, too. In the winter, they sometimes get dressed up in their jogging suits and tennis shoes and go bicycling together.

More Of A Father Than Real Father

A special poem accompanied the letter that nominated Michael Hoening of Sanford, fireman with the Sanford Fire Department, as "Outstanding Dad."

The poet is Hoening's stepdaughter, Kathleen Crandall. Excerpts from Miss Crandall's letter appear below.

"Alas, he may not be perfect, but I feel I have found the Father of the Year. Michael Hoening, employed by the Sanford Fire Department, is my stepfather. He knew he could never take the place of my real father, but, in all honesty, I admit he has been more of a father to me than my real father ever was.

"When he and my mother were married, on Oct. 19, 1974, Mike had two pre-school aged children and my mother had two pre-adolescents. This was quite a change of scenery - from one extreme to another - from childhood to puberty. But he had the ability, the love, and the determination to be just as much a father to my elder sister and I as he did to my younger brother and sister."

alone and confused far a little while
As you stand by.

Silently, you show me how how to overcome my fears such a way that I grew into ME
And not just another nobody for the world to endure.

The road to maturity has been a bumpy one but, I count myself among the fortunate few for Aside me . . . stood YOU!

Michael Hoening was nominated for "outstanding Dad" by his stepdaughter Kathleen Crandall.

'Family Comes First With My Dad'

Sanford Attorney John Christopher Ray was nominated for "Outstanding Dad" by his 15-year-old daughter Dana. Below are parts of her letter.

"I think that my father, Chris Ray, should be nominated as most outstanding father of the year, because of the following reasons.

"My parents had been divorced for about eight years when I decided to move in with my dad and my stepmother Cindy. My dad knew that he was taking on a big responsibility, but he was always willing to do the best job that he could possibly do. I have been living with him for about two years now, and he is still helping me in every way possible.

"My dad isn't like most dads, who are more involved with their work instead of their family. Family comes first with my dad. Cindy and I have always come first for as long as I can remember.

"Take for instance the time when my dad was having problems at work. He was having a lot of problems when tragedy struck. My stepmom's dad became really sick, and she needed all the help and support that we could give. He put all of his problems aside so that he could comfort her and be with her. He's always taking time out to help us with our problems first.

"I don't see how he finds the time to do everything that he has to do. I would be run-down, but he keeps on going. He would give anything in the world for just about anyone. He's friendly to everyone, and everyone loves him. You never hear anyone talking bad about my dad. And you never hear my dad talking bad about anyone else.

"My dad is the most important thing in my life, if it wasn't for him, I wouldn't make it through each day. In closing I would just like to say that my dad is the best father in the whole wide world, and I'd give anything for him. I don't tell him enough how much I love him, but I do."

Dana Ray,
15-year-old daughter of

Christopher Ray,
dad, 'He's always taking time out to help us with our problems first.'

Jesse Kendrick Sr. was nominated by his daughter, Cynthia Oliver of Sanford.

'Class, Dignity Fit For Any King'

Jesse Kendrick Sr. of Sanford, was nominated for "Outstanding Dad" by the 'baby' of his family, Cynthia Oliver, 1325 Elliott St., Sanford. Mr. Kendrick is a self-employed taxi driver. Excerpts from Mrs. Oliver's letter appear below.

"My father is outstanding - whether he wins the award or not. He was born in Smithville, Ga., Jan. 23, 1907. He came to Sanford to work and help support his mother and family.

"Jesse, my dad, was not able to attend school because of the responsibility which was placed upon him. He only went to the second grade. Call it pride or whatever, but Jesse Kendrick had all of the class and dignity fit for any king.

"He married my mother, Mindell Martin, in 1928. Together they reared 10 children. Never once would he accept public assistance or handouts. We were well-fed, well-dressed, well-mannered and well-educated.

"My father was very strict. A stern disciplinarian in his own right. His most precious goals were for his children to receive the education he never got.

"Today I am proud of everything he did. He was a dawn to sunset workaholic. Looking back and appraising the total outcome of all of us he has produced self-employed children: a doctor, a high government employee, a degreed nurse and a social worker.

"My father gave all of us things dearer than diamonds or rubies. He instilled in us pride, dignity and self-respect. He taught us how to survive in this world. He gave us standards that would reflect on in our children.

"Sometimes we try and measure people by the number of awards they have won. But to me, my father is a father among the best because he steered ten children, who are now guiding 34 grandchildren and 16 great grands into productive American citizens.

Switch To Boxer Shorts Heralds Father's Day

DEAR ABBY: A doctor told me that a couple of years ago he read some letters in your column stating that a man's fertility could be related to the kind of shorts he wore. This doctor also said that this theory was scientifically valid. Will you please run those letters again?

INTERESTED MALE
DEAR INTERESTED: Glad to accommodate you. And how appropriate for Father's Day.

DEAR ABBY: I read with interest the letter from "Childless Couple," who were considering artificial insemination. They may help.

For four years my wife and I tried without success to have a child. We were both tested. She was fine, but the doctor said that because my sperm count was so low, my chances of fathering a child were slim. That's when we considered artificial insemination.

I saw a fertility specialist. He asked me what kind of shorts I wore. I told him I had worn jockey shorts for years. He suggested that I switch to boxer shorts (the loose-fitting kind, instead of the snugly fitting jockey type. When he explained why, I thought he was crazy, but I took his suggestion, and four months later my wife conceived! Our baby is due in March. I'm signing my real name, but please don't use it. Just sign me...

FUTURE FATHER

DEAR FUTURE: When I read your letter, I laughed and threw it into my wastebasket. But I quit laughing (and quickly retrieved your letter) after reading several more bearing the same incredible message!

Read on for a short story that may help some for whom pregnancy is inconceivable:

DEAR ABBY: I am glad you printed that letter about jockey shorts. My husband and I had already started adoption proceedings when a neighbor, bless her heart, told me about the big difference my husband's shorts could make. We laughed at first, but two months after he started wearing loose boxer shorts, I got pregnant. We couldn't believe it!

We have three beautiful children now, and our family is completed, so my husband went back to wearing jockey shorts. (I also had my tubes tied when the last one was born.)

Thanks for educating the public, Abby. You can reach more people in one day than we could in a lifetime.

PATIN HOUSTON

DEAR PAT: And to make the theory of jockey shorts more binding, try this on for size:

DEAR ABBY: I recently read an article in a medical journal stating that if men continue to wear jockey shorts and tight jeans, the need for artificial insemination will increase drastically!

It stated: "The male anatomy was created so that the testicles draw close to the body in cold weather and drop in hot weather. It is a natural thermostat at work. Interference with this causes a serious drop in sperm count."

The article indicated that American men have increasingly lower sperm counts, and the problem is compounded by the wearing of tight clothing.

For population control throughout the world, wouldn't it be a great idea to export tight jeans?

B. McQ. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR ABBY: May I comment on your men's underwear debate? We in our brief-type "Fruit-of-the-Looms" remain fruitless, while our brothers in their boxer shorts remain "heir-conditioned."

ROBERT W. IN WALTERBORO, S.C.

DEAR ROBERT: I wish I'd thought of that.

DEAR ABBY: The fact that too-tight jeans may cause male sterility is nothing new. I wrote this little jingle back in 1970:

"If your jeans are too tight in the crotch

"Your parental potential is bad

"Better let our your seams just a notch

It's A Weekend Of Dance At Two Annual Recitals

The weekend is made for dancing.

Two Sanford dancing schools will present their students in annual recitals as the dance season ends temporarily before summer classes begin.

Valerie Weld and Miriam Wright will stage three shows, Saturday, at 8 p.m., and Sunday, at 3 and 8 p.m., at Lake Mary High School, when more than 300 students at School of Dance Arts will perform in a variety program, "A Night of Dance."

At the recent Florida Dance Invitational Competition in Melbourne, the first in Florida, the school's owner-instructors, Valerie and Miriam, were the only teachers awarded a medal for choreography.

Some of the other dancers receiving honors in the Melbourne competition were Robin Scott and Janet Sawczuk. School of Dance Arts students and company dancers with Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole, who won the best overall trophy for a ballet which they will perform Saturday and Sunday.

Other dancers taking honors in the Melbourne competition are Leslie Crabtree and Brady Sapp, Tami Howard, and Eddie Korgan III and Kristi Carroll.

A new dancing teacher to Sanford this past year, Betty Vaccaro will present her first annual recital in the concert hall at Seminole Community College this Sunday, at 2 p.m. The show is free to the public and will include 20 numbers.

Ruth and Louis Dritz celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with open house at their home, 802 W. First St., and a dinner at Holiday Inn, Sanford Marina, hosted by their two daughters, Mrs. Ted Seaman of Rockledge, and Mrs. James Crosson, Leesburg, Ga.

The couple were married in New York in 1933 and have lived in Sanford since 1958. They have 11 grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Helen and Jimmie R. Hall observed their 28th wedding anniversary June 18 on a SeaEscape cruise. They couple were joined by family members for the gala celebration.

Jeri and Bill Kirk had a delightful time in "Merry Old England," as Jeri puts it.

Following their return home, the Kirks spent several days with their grandchildren at Epcot and Disney World.

Douglas Richard Packard, son of Peggy and Richard Packard, completed the requirement for a degree at the University of Alabama in August 1982, but was not on the graduation list until the official commencement exercises in May.

Douglas has just completed his first year of law school at UA, according to his proud father.

According to Mildred M. Caskey, curator of the Henry S. Sanford Museum-Library, the preview reception for the summer exhibit, "The Timucuan Trace," held Thursday night was "really very pretty."

Mr. William Vincent Sr., a Sanford historian, commented that it is "the best Indian exhibit I have seen any place."

Open House will be held Sunday, June 19, from 2-5 p.m. "Order of the Blue Feather," a corps of Indian dancers, will perform on the lawn at 3 p.m., Mrs. Caskey says.

The public is invited to the open house Sunday as well as during the regular museum hours, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Sunday, from 2-5 p.m.

Bill and Walter Gielow attended the 50th wedding anniversary reception honoring her sister and brother-in-law, Melba and Meade Cooper, at the Sanora Club last Saturday afternoon.

This was Bill's first outing since they were in an accident in Ormond Beach.

Although she was in a wheel chair and nursing broken bones, friends surrounded Bill with tidings of great joy. Overheard were several comments that she looks "glamorous and gorgeous."

Birthday wishes to John C. Horner, June 21; Carolyn Moore Brown and Frances Stanley, June 22; Kevin Brewer, June 23; Jane HerrNecker, Harry Cochran, Deanna Lynn Kazee and Judy Van Looven, June 24; Jean Tamm and Judith Wimbish, June 25; and LuRene Ball, Page Pratt and Tom Sheibenberger, June 26.

Anniversary wishes to J. Harold and Phyllis Chapman, Ralph and Anne Larson, Bruce and Jann B. Bauder, and Tyler and Betty Dedman, all June 20; and Everett and Sara Terry, June 21.

Deborah Sentell, a member of the 1983 graduating class of Seminole High School was honored at a barbecue, at the Yale Avenue home of cousins, Judy and Bill Sellers, immediately after commencement exercises on June 11.

About 75 attended including Deborah's mother, Pat Santell, and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Place.

One of the highlights of the event was that a guest, E.B. Stowe, a celebrated Sanford artist, painted a picture for the honoree as a graduation gift.

A graduation reception was held at the Elm Avenue Church of God of Prophecy to honor the graduates of the Class of 1983 from Seminole High School who are members of the Youth Department.

Honorees were Suzy Anderson and Tracy Pounds.

The social hall was beautifully decorated with the school colors of Gold and Black.

Pictures of Suzy and Tracy from birth to graduation were displayed by their mothers on the gift table. A beautiful letter from Tracy's mother who lives in Ft. Myers and could not attend the reception was read to him by Lois Butcher.

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Anderson told the story of Suzy's life.

"The Graduation Prayer" was read by Stuart Muse.

Brownies, Scouts Keep Camp Fires Burning

Brownie Troop 905 of Lake Mary held an exciting "back yard" campout on June 3, at the home of Brownie Leader Donna Foley.

Donna's back yard was transformed into a campsite complete with tents and camp fires while 12 Brownies cooked a one-pot spaghetti dinner, complete with garlic bread, over an open fire.

Donna certainly had her hands full trying to keep the Brownies quiet with all the giggling that goes along with girls that age.

A sigh of relief was heard from Donna as the Brownies made a mad dash into the house at about 12:30 a.m. after speaking themselves with eerie ghost tales.

Early the next morning, the brave Brownies ventured back outside to cook themselves a hearty breakfast over the campfire. Following a good breakfast, they were off for a day at Turtle Mound, at the Cape Canaveral National Sea Shore.

Escorted by a National Park Ranger, the Brownies headed for a scavenger hunt along the beach.

Screams of excitement broke out when they came across the nest of a 300-pound turtle.

At the end of an exciting and exhaustive day, 12 weary, sandy, yet joyous Brownies headed for home to show their families the beautiful 1-year Brownie pins that they had received.

Earning badges is a large part of the Girl Scout program and the Brownies have one badge that is coveted by them all. It is the "Dabbler & World of People" badge. Montesa Foley recently earned the badge.

There are six requirements that must be met in order to earn this badge, which includes extensive research, learning about Girl Scouts around the world, teaching basic Spanish words to another Brownie and tracing of family roots. Congratulations to Montesa.

Montesa, along with co-Brownies Allison Turner, Cindy VanVolken-burg, and Kindra Johnson, have now graduated out of the Brownies into the Scouts' Juniors.

Speaking of Juniors, Margaret "Peggy" Stickney's Junior Troop 441 held a campout over the Memorial Day weekend. Fourteen girls from the troop spent the weekend out at Girl Scout camp Makahwee in Chuluota. The girls were to learn the "how to" of tent pitching, and do some good old outdoor cooking.

This past week, at a Court of Awards ceremony held at the United Presbyterian church in Lake Mary, the Juniors all received the badges that they worked so hard for all year long. Individual badges, as well as five troop badges were awarded. Although officially they will not hold any more meetings this year, the girls in the troop will still be working toward two summer badges. Earning those badges will include a trip to a T.V. news studio, a community service project and a finale of a pool party.

Boy Scout Troop 831 of Lake Mary also has some special plans coming up. The troop, under leadership of Waverly Dowdy, plans a pre-training "Summer Camporee" out at their camp site in Paola.

At this beautiful lakefront campsite, the Boy Scouts will be training for their "super campout" at Camp Lanoche in Paisley, where troops from all over Central Florida will gather on July 31 - Aug. 6.

The boys will learn about the woods, safe camping, fire building, Boy Scout work toward earning merit badges, getting used to being away from home and getting acquainted with one another.

On Saturday, July 2, the Scouts will hold an open house where there will be a flag ceremony, the launching of the USS Lake Mary Troop 831 raft, a special appearance from Lake Mary Mayor Walter Sorenson, and a chicken barbecue.

The public is invited to come out to the campsite and show their support on July 2. If you plan to attend the festivities in Paola, take I-4 east to State Road 46, west on State Road 46, turn left on Wayside Drive until you come to an archway and sign on right.

Festivities will begin at 11 a.m. with an invocation by the Rev. Stevens from the United Presbyterian Church.

The Rotary Club of Lake Mary has a gala evening planned for June 23. The Rotarians will hold their installation banquet that night at the White Marlin Restaurant in Longwood. The event will begin at 6:30 p.m. with cocktails and dinner at 7:30. Newly elected 1983-84 officers will be installed.

This month the Rotary has had as its guest speakers Sheriff John Polk, who spoke of his personal concern over the influx of people coming into Florida from various sources which could effect the lowered crime rate in Florida; and LeLand Jacobs, facilities planner with United Telephone of Florida who spoke on historical perspectives of Altamonte Springs and Maitland.

Future speakers will include Richard G. Fritz and Richard Cornell.

The Rotary Club of Lake Mary meets every Thursday morning at 8 a.m., at Lake Mary High School.

Happy birthday wishes to: Carole King, Bob Lippincott, Don Cook, Charlie Stephens, Brian Ireland, Sherry Arms, and Marilyn Castille. Happy anniversary to Larry and Marsha Donaldson.

Sunday, June 19, is Father's Day. I would personally like to wish happy Father's Day to my stepfather, William B. Necker. Stepdads are very special people. They are fathers who have to work twice as hard at being dads, give twice as much love, and work twice as hard to be accepted as dads. My stepdad chose to be my dad, not because he had to, but because he wanted to. I love you, Dad.

Great Day Goes Fall

Great Day in the Country, usually a spring festival sponsored by the Oviedo Woman's Club, will become an annual fall event beginning this year. For the convenience of artists and Christmas shoppers it has been set for Oct. 15 at the same location, St. Luke's picnic grounds on Route 426 near Red Bug Road.

Erika Baldwin, Great Day chairman, says that the extra planning time will allow the format to be greatly expanded this fall to include space for 100 booths, 25 demonstration areas and a more varied children's activities area. Among the new additions, look for the "changing tent," a quiet private spot to change and feed small babies.

While Great Day is primarily for artists and craftsmen, other groups are encouraged to use the extra booth space available this year as a fund raiser for their organization. Church groups, youth groups, civic and service organizations are all welcome. There are a number of booths open that might appeal to youth groups for snack foods such as popcorn or snow cones, or call the number below for more ideas.

Brochures have been sent to area artists and craftsmen who will be selling handmade wares and competing for cash prizes. If you are an artist or craftsman and have not received a brochure please contact the number below for information.

Great Day booth chairman is Mrs. Sharon Lawton, Rt. 1, Box 376 P-2, Oviedo, Florida 32765 or call (305) 365-6002.

By Growing Number Of Churchmen

U.S. Caribbean Policy Is Opposed

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A little over three years ago a group of prominent Protestant leaders staged a Good Friday demonstration in Washington, marching to key government institutions protest U.S. military aid to El Salvador.

The purposely low-keyed vigil was little noted at the time; El Salvador as a religious issue was a Roman Catholic concern and Protestants fashioning their moral approach to U.S. public policy generally took their cues from both U.S. and Salvadoran Catholic officials.

But recent events in the civil war-torn Central American nation, as well as a growing influx of Salvadoran refugees in the United States, have begun to change that, and U.S. Protestants are increasingly moving El Salvador to near the top of their list of international concerns.

While most of the movement in the churches is toward a stance critical of U.S. policy, that stance is by no means unanimous within the churches. And the administration, especially in response to U.S. Catholics, has vigorously defended its policy.

Both church and government critics of the religious activists argue church leaders are naive about the nature of the revolutionary struggles in Central America, and say they have bought a romanticized view of Marxism that, if triumphant, will result in the loss of freedom for not only the churches but the mass of people the churches say they are supporting.

Secretary of State George Schultz, for example, expressed concern at a Senate hearing about "churchmen who want to see Soviet influence in El Salvador improved," and Vice President George Bush has publicly wondered how a priest can be a Marxist, which some Latin American clergy label themselves.

The Institute on Religion and Democracy, a small Washington-based group that specializes in monitoring the mainline Protestant denominations, has also been critical of what it sees as a leftward drift, especially on Central American issues, among U.S. churches. It points to the growing repression of the church in Nicaragua as an example of the churches' failure to understand the nature of the struggle in that region.

Sparking the renewed interest among Protestants has been the recent arrest and detention of two prominent Lutheran Salvadorans and the separate arrest of an evangelical student worker. Although one of the Lutherans, the Rev. Medardo Gomez, was released three days after his arrest on April 27, the other, Dr. Angel Ibarra, at last report continues to be held by the government.

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship reported in mid-May that Mardoqueo Carranza, a staff member of the International Fellowship of Evangelical Students in San Salvador, was arrested at his home by government forces and accused of aiding left-wing rebel forces.

He was held for nine days before being released and Inter-Varsity officials in the United States expressed the fear he could be executed.

Ibarra is director of medical services of Lutheran Social Services of El Salvador and operated a clinic in connection with Gomez's Resurrection Lutheran Church in San Salvador. Gomez is president of the 2,400-member Lutheran Synod of El Salvador, a denomination affiliated with the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod in the United States.

The church operates a camp, Faith and Hope, that is aiding 1,000 people, mostly women and children, who have been displaced by Salvadoran civil war.

Such incidents have led to renewed concern about U.S. policy toward El Salvador, a concern the National Council of Churches spoke to at its recent policy-making Governing Board meeting.

The 266-member Governing Board, representing the 32 Protestant and Orthodox members of the National Council of Churches, was sharply critical of past U.S. government and U.S. Christian involvement in Central America.

The council, whose member denominations number some 40 million people, called for an end to U.S. military assistance to all nations in the area, negotiations in El Salvador that would include all parties and support for a U.N. peace-keeping role on the Honduras-Nicaragua border.

A recent 58-page study issued by the American Friends Service Committee, the Quaker relief organization, came to similar conclusions.

Just after President Reagan's speech before a joint session of Congress on his Central American policy a group of nearly 50 North American Protestant and Roman Catholic missionaries in Nicaragua issued an open letter criticizing those policies.

Signers included members of 15 Roman Catholic orders as well as United Presbyterian, United Methodist, American Baptist, Mennonite, Episcopalian and United Church of Christ missionaries.

In a second missionary-related development, 27 of the 32 United Methodist missionaries in Brazil issued a statement criticizing what they called U.S. intervention in Central America.

The Rev. George "Archie" Bule

First Methodist Gets New Pastor

The Rev. George "Archie" Bule, III, will preach his first sermon at First United Methodist Church of Sanford this Sunday. The congregation will officially welcome their new minister, his wife, Carolyn, and their children, Ben, 9 and Maribeth, 7, at a reception at noon following the 11 a.m. service.

His appointment to the church was announced last month at the Florida United Methodist Annual Conference session in Lakeland.

The third generation in his family to be born and raised in Lake City in Columbia County, his father served as county judge for 28 years. He received a bachelor's degree from Florida Southern College, Lakeland in 1966. After serving as a commissioned officer in the U.S. Army for two years in Alaska, he entered Candler School of Theology, Emory University, in Atlanta, Ga. He received his Master of Divinity degree in 1971. He was ordained a deacon in the Florida Conference in 1970 and an elder in 1973.

He comes here from Aldersgate United Methodist Church in Seminole, where he has served since 1977. Prior to that his appointments included associate minister of First United Methodist Church of Lakeland and Trinity United Methodist Church of Palatka.

Mrs. Bule is the former Carolyn Cleveland, whose father is also a United Methodist minister in the Florida Conference.

Covenant Presbyterian Celebrates 20th Year

The Covenant Presbyterian Church, Highway 17-92 and Lake Mary Boulevard, Sanford, will celebrate its 20th birthday on July 3 with an all day meeting including dinner on the grounds at noon.

As a prelude to this event, the Rev. Dr. Arthur DeYoung will be the speaker on this Sunday at the 10:30 a.m. worship service. A 1960 graduate of Seminole High School, he received his degree from Presbyterian College, Clinton, S.C., and graduated from Louisville Seminary.

After his ordination, he served churches in Atlanta and Bedford, Ind. He is presently minister of the First United Presbyterian Church of Kankakee, Ill. Dr. DeYoung has just attended the historic General Assembly of the two churches and to recall Covenant's beginning 20 years ago. Two weeks later on July 3, the anniversary celebration will be completed with homecoming and dinner on the grounds.

The church has invited him to help launch the celebration because he preached the first sermon in the present church building.

Special events are planned for the day to recognize the union of the two churches and to recall Covenant's beginning 20 years ago. Two weeks later on July 3, the anniversary celebration will be completed with homecoming and dinner on the grounds.

Witch Fascination Continues

By George R. Plagens

SALEM, Mass. — It happened in 1692 but such is the fascination with witches that, each year, hundreds of thousands flock to the Witch Museum here to watch a multimedia presentation on the history of witchcraft — and particularly the witch persecutions that took place in this New England town 291 years ago.

The church put to death 300,000 innocent women in the 300 years from the end of the 15th to the end of the 18th century. But the most famous persecutions were those led by the Calvinists in Salem.

They were set off by 10 little girls who began barking like dogs and doing other strange things. They told their parents that Tituba, the West Indian slave of a Rev. Samuel Parris, and two old women had bewitched them.

What probably happened was that the three women had told ancient voodoo tales to the youngsters. But the witch hysteria spread and before it died down eight months later, 19 "witches" had been hanged and another was crushed to death by rocks.

The origin of witches is found in folklore. "Witch" is a form of the word "wit" — to know. Witches were people said to have supernatural wisdom and power, which they received from the devil in return for selling him their soul.

By combining magic words (e.g., "eye of newt and toe of frog, wool of bat and tongue of dog") with manual gestures (Samantha, a good witch in the old TV series "Bewitched" twitched her nose), a spell is cast, producing results which may be good or bad. It was said that witches could not only remove warts or bring about a good harvest, but that their curses could destroy an enemy hundreds of miles away.

Warnings against witches are found in the Bible. The verse in Exodus — "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live" — has given witch hunters throughout the ages a scriptural warrant for great cruelties.

One way the witch hunters used to test whether or not a woman was a witch was to put her head under water. If she failed to come up — and consequently drowned — she was innocent. If she did come up, she was adjudged to be guilty. She was then tried and executed. It was a "no win" situation.

There have been witchcraft revivals periodically since the 17th century, including this century. Black magic rites are held in which the devil's name is invoked and nudes often serve as "altar girls." According to ancient witchcraft lore, the supernatural power released in satanic rituals is more easily picked up when a worshipper is unencumbered by clothing.

Saints And Sinners

There have also been celebrations of the Black Mass — where the devil is worshipped in a travesty of the Christian mass.

There are said to be 30,000 practicing witches in England today and half a million "believers." Witchcraft is less widespread in the United States but there have been revivals here too.

Why the revival of witchcraft in this enlightened age? There are several reasons given. One writer says it is part of the "flight from reality which typically occurs in periods of intense stress when people turn, consciously or unconsciously, to magic and religion for relief from tension, indulging in occult rituals and strange incantations."

A professor at UCLA says some students dabble in witchcraft for fun. But there are also fanatics who actually, he says, believe in the reality of a personal devil and who may even blame death and disaster on some neighbor woman who they believe "works for Satan."

Witchcraft may also be kept alive by practitioners who make a good profit selling talismans and potions, which they claim protect against all forms of evil and bring on good luck.

Do such charms work? In many cases, yes, but not because of magic.

"My talismans work because they influence the wearer's mind," says one British witch. In other words, the talismans work because those who wear them believe they will. It is a form of autosuggestion.

"It is not witchcraft per se but the state of mind of the recipient of the spell that does the work," says a psychologist. "But don't underestimate the power of such belief."

Quiet Baptist Meet Predicted

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Southern Baptist Convention annual meeting will be quiet and businesslike, not rife with arguments over theological issues as in past years, the group's president said Monday.

A resolution endorsing Israel had been predicted to stir dissension among the estimated 17,000 "messengers" — the group's designation for delegates — but the Rev. Jimmy Draper said such a resolution will not materialize.

"I don't expect anything to come about Israel. Certainly we affirm the right of the Jewish population to exist and have their own state," he said, but the convention prefers to avoid the controversial political ramifications of making such an endorsement.

The 138-year-old convention is a fellowship of 13.9 million members, belonging to 36,302 churches.

Draper heads the 7,000-member First Baptist Church of Euless, Texas, just outside Dallas.

"The primary purpose of the convention is for all the agencies in the convention to report. That will be the ... focus ... as we remind ourselves that we are an evangelical and missionary group of Christians."

In fact, Draper said, almost any controversial issue appears likely to be avoided when the convention's business program opens Tuesday.

The convention last year in New Orleans approved a resolution supporting voluntary public school prayer. Opponents of the resolution claimed it takes away religious liberty and said they would try and repeal it this year.

"We affirmed our desire (last year) for prayer to be part of the public sector," he said. "(Anything further) would be a reaffirmation to see freedom within the public school system, but not a prescribed prayer."

Although resolutions passed by the convention often generate a good deal of controversy, they are not binding upon convention officials or affiliated churches.

"Resolutions are generally just expressions of policy," Draper said.

The convention membership falls roughly into two categories — conservatives, who believe in a literal interpretation of the Bible, which they deem infallible, and moderates, who say the Bible is subject to interpretation.

In the past, heated battles have erupted between the factions over biblical authority.

Draper's moderate leadership appears to have healed the rifts produced by those arguments and he is not expected to be challenged for re-election.

looks pretty hopeless if the heart finesse is wrong. If it is right and trumps are 3-1 and hearts 4-2, you need to keep two entries in dummy to set up the fifth heart so you take the heart finesse. It works and things are looking up.

You lead a trump to your ace and East shows out. Now you lead your last heart and West produces the king.

Here comes the key play: You must duck in dummy to leave West on lead.

Now West is helpless. He will probably lead his last trump. You win in dummy. Discard one diamond on the ace of hearts and ruff a heart. Now back to dummy with the king of clubs to discard your last low diamond on the long heart and claim your slam.

Paul's last comment on this hand is, "An interesting speculation is what declarer should do if West plays his king of hearts on the first round of the suit." South will still make the hand if he lets the king hold, but he may decide that the king was a singleton. In that case he must abandon hearts, draw trumps and try for some way to score two diamond tricks.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

In this Paul Lukacs problem as published in "The Bridge World" we find South at a rather doubtful contract of six spades. The bidding is Paul's and has no part in the problem.

Attorneys Say British Embarrassed By DeLorean

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The success of John DeLorean's Irish sportscar company so embarrassed the British government that it prompted the investigation that led to the automaker's arrest on cocaine charges, his attorneys claim.

"The success of the DeLorean Motor Co. Ltd. in Northern Ireland, at which Catholic and Protestant Irish workers labored side by side without violence, was a political embarrassment to the conservative government of Great Britain," DeLorean's attorney, Howard Weitzman, stated in a motion filed Friday in U.S. District Court.

The motion sought to delay DeLorean's Aug. 9 trial. "The British government," the motion stated, "requested U.S. authorities to initiate the prosecution of Mr. DeLorean in an effort to destroy his successful business endeavor in Northern Ireland."

"The British government's destruction of that business and Mr. DeLorean was a practical, although clearly immoral, response to a political problem."

In a tersely worded statement, the British Embassy in Washington D.C. categorically denied the allegations.

It is "absolute nonsense to suggest that the British government would be anything but delighted at the prospect of Catholics and Protestants working side by side," embassy officials stated.

DeLorean had previously suggested the British may have been behind the probe that led to DeLorean's arrest on charges he financed a $24 million cocaine deal because his auto company went bankrupt after Parliament loaned him $150 million.

Chinese Official Is Elected

PEKING (UPI) — China's parliament elected senior Communist Party official Li Xiannian as president Saturday, filling the largely ceremonial post left vacant since the cultural revolution.

About 3,000 delegates at the 17-day session of the National People's Congress, went through the formalities of electing Li, 78, the only presidential candidate.

The last president, Liu Shaoqi, was toppled in the 1966-76 cultural revolution and died in prison in 1969.

Li, a former finance minister, is considered a compromise choice.

Central Florida Regional Hospital

June 2, 1983...One Year Later

Hospital Staffers display sign reflecting commitment

How The Hospital Came About

While Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford has come a long way since it admitted its first patients when it officially opened June 2 a year ago, one needs to look well beyond that point to examine the history of how the modern facility came to be.

The new hospital was dedicated May 23 with a ceremony attended by area civic and political leaders and included that Sunday a public tour with hundreds of local and area residents walking the halls of the new hospital to admire the structure and view some of the new equipment.

The new structure cost $26 million to build and became another in the 350 such facilities owned and operated by Hospital Corporation of America. It contains 226 beds, 138 of which are in private rooms, 72 in semi-private rooms and 16 in intensive care or cardiac care units, as well as numerous offices, a laboratory, pharmacy, surgical rooms, physical and respiratory therapy facilities, a radiology and imaging unit, kitchen and dining areas, a gift shop, chapel, morgue, pediatrics unit and much more.

The move to upgrade hospital care in the Sanford area actively began a little more than three years ago.

At one time the former Seminole Memorial Hospital was operating under a board of trustees appointed by the governor. If the hospital got into a financial bind, and trustees went before the county board of commissioners for help, the board, as County Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff pointed out some time ago, was in an awkward situation because it could exercise no control over the hospital's management.

As time went on, the hospital continued to require more and more additional county funds, while at the same time, the board of hospital trustees was searching for ways to upgrade the facility but keep costs down. That, too, was becoming difficult.

Kirchhoff recalled: "They (the hospital trustees) proposed to the county commission to form a not-for-profit organization and float a bond program to upgrade the hospital. They came to us and state legislators with this proposal."

Kirchhoff said there had been friction between the county and the hospital trustees, but both sides were open to finding a way to alleviate the problems of the hospital, owned then by the county, but operated by the trustees.

"The county decided to seek alternative solutions to the problem of health care in the county, so we advertised for solutions, saying we would consider proposals to buy the hospital, lease and manage it, or whatever. Any option would be considered, we decided."

And, although many of the trustees expressed reluctance at first to a bid process originally, many, Kirchhoff said, have told him since that they feel what finally was done, was in the best interest of county residents.

Bids came in to county officials from various sources, including the Florida Hospital Group, owned and operated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church; a Methodist hospital in Jacksonville, hospitals in St. Petersburg, Alabama and other areas, and the final choice, Hospital Corporation of America (HCA).

"We had stipulated that if a new hospital was proposed or renovations were to be made, the hospital had to remain on the original Seminole Memorial Hospital site," Kirchhoff explained. "HCA said they didn't feel it was feasible to try and renovate the existing hospital and asked if they could go ahead and present their proposal for a new hospital. We let them go ahead and after we saw the presentation, there was no question that their plan was in the best interest of the county residents."

County officials recognized that the new hospital site at 1401 W. Seminole Blvd. (U.S. Highway 17-92) and Mangoustine Avenue would be advantageous for local and area residents because of its centralized location and accessibility to Interstate-4, making response time from area municipalities and adjoining Volusia County to the hospital faster.

"They (HCA) paid the county about $5 million for the franchise and hospital operating rights in the area," Kirchhoff recalled, noting the HCA also leased the old hospital from the county until they could make the move into the new facility. Another major plus in allowing HCA to operate a new hospital was having the facility added to the tax rolls, whereas as a county-owned and operated facility the old hospital was tax-exempt.

From there, it was a matter of HCA appointing officers to the hospital and putting their plan into action.

As a result of those two years of negotiations, "we have a showcase hospital," Kirchhoff noted. "One with the best equipment money can buy, and definitely in the best interests of the county's residents."

Hospital Works Hard To Keep Costs Down...

Cost containment is a major concern of both the hospital administration at Central Florida Regional and the medical staff.

Dr. Charles Park Jr., chief of surgery, said, "The rapidly rising cost of medical care, primarily due to more sophisticated diagnostic equipment and advanced modalities of treatment, make it imperative that every effort be made to see that each health care dollar is used in as effective a way as possible."

Park heads the cost containment committee recently formed by the Medical staff's executive committee to find ways to lower hospital costs to the patients.

The first study is a comparison of charts of patients undergoing various kinds of surgery. An equal number of cases from each surgeon doing these types of procedures were selected and reviewed. Comparison of days in the hospital, diagnostic studies, and use of expensive antibiotics were made. These figures are now being compared with similar studies from other hospitals.

"Following the analysis of these figures, the results will be made available to the staff and recommendations and suggestions to reduce costs will be made," Dr. Park emphasized. Further studies of comparable medical and surgical cases are planned in the future.

Robert Carlisle, director of Fiscal Services at CFRH, said, "Our hospital costs are constantly scrutinized as well as our management techniques which will contribute to keeping costs in line."

"We have been fortunate in keeping our costs down due to increased utilization, cost effectiveness of the new facility, additional and expansion of services, and efficiency of identifying the ability of patients to meet their financial obligations," he noted.

Patient days increased 10.3% for the first quarter of 1983 as opposed to the same period last year, with a projected increase of about 21.1 percent for the second quarter this year.

Carlisle pointed out that other savings were compiled because of the affiliation with Hospital Corporation of America, CFRH's parent company.

Tapped as one of the five best-managed U.S. companies of 1982 by Dun's Business Month, the Dun & Bradstreet Publication observed, "As a result of (HCA's ability to borrow money at good rates and cut hospital construction costs) and other economies, HCA's hospitals charge patients about 25 percent below the national average."

James Tesar, CFRH's administrator, underscored the savings factor through HCA's volume purchasing in operational supplies and capital equipment. He pointed out that the distributed data processing system increased efficiency and the availability of proven management procedures and educational programs were most helpful.

...Consolidate Functions To Expand Services

Convenience, coupled with better communications, was at the core of action taken this past year by the CFRH business services staff to expand patient services.

"With our patients in mind, we consolidated our collection and insurance departments with all other office functions under one umbrella — the Patient Accounts Department," Karen Hackett, director of business services said.

A patient counseling system was established with four patient counselors handling the financial counseling. Upon admission, each patient is alphabetically assigned to a representative who is available in the office or on patient floors.

"The system is more personal," Hackett continued, "as the counselor is there to help patients secure adequate financial arrangements both in the inpatient and outpatient areas.

In another move, the results of an extensive study and analysis, conducted concerning the acceptance of outpatient insurances, was implemented in early April of this year. More than 100 local businesses were surveyed to determine insurance benefits which was utilized in accepting employer insurance plans for billing purposes. In the past, outpatient services were rendered on a cash basis.

Quicker service in the emergency room and outpatient departments has been attained through separate registration during peak hours. With an addition of another computer terminal and part-time clerk, two separate registration areas are now open to minimize the patients' waiting period.

"There are two reasons we are able to be more responsive to our patients," Robert Carlisle, director of fiscal services, explained. "Our entire operation of interrelated departments is now consolidated whereas in the old hospital, the various business functions had to be fragmented and housed in separate buildings."

"We are now able to initiate innovative methods of personalizing and helping our patients meet their financial obligations."

"Too," Carlisle continued, "we have taken advantage of the excellent training programs provided through our parent company, Hospital Corporation of America. Staff members are much more knowledgeable and are now better equipped to do their jobs more effectively."

Hospital Offers Community Nutrition Program

"Living Well"
...they're getting message

Janice Springfield
...feeling-better-tips

Nutrition Month activities and the governor's "Living Well" program this year at Central Florida Regional Hospital created a springboard for a pilot program which will be offered to the community on a year-round basis.

Good nutrition and health are everyday concerns to everyone. Billed as an "energy event" and providing tips on "how to feel better," the packaged program, complete with a nutritious brown bag lunch, was presented by CFRH's dietitians, Naomi Forbes and Carol Proenza, to employees at the downtown Sanford Flagship Bank and Florida Power & Light Co.

The program is designed to be quick and snappy. True to form, participants were treated to a health style self test, lifestyles slide presentation, given handouts about nutrition and exercise, all the while eating a colorful and appealing lunch packaged in the proverbial brown bag.

Utilizing the mobility of the lowly brown bag, the compact program is flexible and can be set up on site almost anywhere and presented within a short lunch hour. Too, the brief course can be built around a number of health related topics while still focusing on the nutritious brown bag lunch.

According to Kay Bartholomew, director of public relations, the program can be offered to companies, schools, clubs and other organizations — almost any type of audience — as long as there is limited kitchen facilities and employees or attendees have quick and easy access.

Subjects to be presented by other hospital personnel could include stress, regular exercise as well as "seated exercise," smoking, alcohol and drugs, safety, sports related nutrition and physical care, etc.

A Message From...

...Chief Of Staff

The last year has brought a drastic change in both the size and constitution of the physician medical staff, much of this due to our new, modern hospital.

The medical staff now is comprised of 60 full-time active physicians and 43 part-time courtesy physicians.

New members have been added to the departments of: surgery, internal medicine, family practice, pediatrics, emergency medicine, obstetrics and gynecology and radiology. New physicians have also been added in the specialties of neurology, nephrology (kidney disease), pulmonary medicine (chest/lung disease), infectious diseases, plastic surgery and hand surgery. This summer we expect additions in the areas of neurosurgery, anesthesiology and viology.

The selection of each of these physicians is based upon their training and previous practice record and the community's needs. The public is largely unaware of this selection process and it is worthy of mention. Only after a personal interview and a close review of their credentials are the new applicants recommended for admission. They must then be approved by two additional committees, including the hospital board of trustees.

The first year of staff membership is spent on probation during which the physician's activities are monitored. Subsequent reappointment depends on a satisfactory performance during the first year. Involuntary dismissal from the staff can result from any serious infraction of the rules. These types of controls and restraints have always been in use, but are becoming more important as the staff grows and more physicians are applying for membership. This is one of the best ways of assuring the public of high quality care in the hospital where most major illnesses are treated.

It is obvious that I am very proud of the progress our staff has made since the opening of the new hospital. We are moving rapidly toward what I consider the ultimate goal, and that is combining the convenience, comfort and security of our community medical center with a first rate group of physicians.

The entire medical staff wishes you good health in coming years and pledges the best care that we are capable of giving.

Dr. H. Garrett Dotson

H. Garrett Dotson, M.D.
Chief of Staff, CFRH

...Board Chairman

Russell H. Conwell many years ago traveled the country making his speech "Acres of Diamonds," the central theme of which was that fortune, growth, and prosperity lay in your hometown if you were wise enough and tenacious enough to seek and find it there.

His theory has been well borne out by the benefits which have accrued through the development of Central Florida Regional Hospital.

The acquisition of Seminole Memorial Hospital in 1980 by Hospital Corporation of America has had a direct and dramatic effect on health care in Seminole County.

The brick and mortar element of the change is apparent to even the casual viewer. Twenty-six million dollars of new hospital construction, CFRH, flanked by over five million dollars in new construction of the radiation and medical facilities is a contribution to a community indeed difficult to ignore.

Equally impressive, however, are the less visible aspects of the operation. The completion of these new facilities attracted new physicians bringing new areas of medical specialization which in turn brought large numbers of new patients now able to find quality health care in their own community.

This growth also has provided opportunity for a great number of people to find employment in the community, giving rise to a need for a number of support services.

All of this has been achieved while maintaining competitive patients' costs, reducing the tax burden to the local community, and providing another tax-paying entity to the area.

Chairman, Board of Trustees

Dr. Earl Weldon

...The Administrator

How quickly a year passes. The progress made during the past year is obvious. Central Florida Regional Hospital is a reality. Its existence is one year old. At times it seems as if it has always been here. It is what was promised, it is what the public wanted. It is now. Will it always be?

What it is, is apparent to all. An attractive building to admire, well designed, functional. A staff dedicated to the public we serve, our patients.

A staff very well-educated and trained. A staff that any community would be proud to claim.

We, as the staff of the hospital, hope we have lived up to the expectations of the community. We hope we have fulfilled the expectations of the medical community, your physicians. We appreciate your support. It is that support that will ensure the future of the hospital. Your support will ensure that Central Florida Regional Hospital remains a modern, well-equipped hospital.

The delivery of health care thrives on a changing environment. Much has been accomplished in one year, but there will always be much to accomplish.

We can all be proud of what has been accomplished this past year. A successful hospital, as with any other venture, is the result of a team effort. It must have the support of the hospital staff, the medical staff, the Board of Trustees, and the community.

The past is history. We look forward to the future. We look forward to things to come. We want every member of the community to look at Central Florida Regional Hospital and say, "That's my hospital."

New Equipment: Does 'Wonderous Things'

There is a new star in the shiny new "space world look alike" equipment in the Imaging Department at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

It is a digital fluorography system that does wonderous things, according to Pat Riley, manager of Imaging Services.

The $260,000 family of monitoring screens, keyboard, cables and cabinets housing masses of wiring, will be on line soon to perform digital vascular imaging — specifically, digital subtraction angiography.

Riley said the sensitivity of the conventional fluoroscope (now in use) to variations in density (body structure) is too limited to display the information so it can be seen. Digital radiography boosts that sensitivity.

An important capability of the digital imaging process is subtraction.

"This means," Riley pointed out, "if we're not interested in seeing the bones, we simply instruct the computer to subtract them from the image. Once that's done, we're presented with a beautifully subtracted video of only the vessels we are concerned with."

There are other capabilities.

If a physician or technician is not sure about a vessel on the digital radiographic display, with the flick of a few more switches, edge enhancement can be achieved. The computer locks in on those vessels and draws lines around them for closer study.

Besides the diagnostic information available, the system allows the patient to go home after a true image is captured. It can be done on an outpatient basis, avoiding hospitalization.

New equipment has also been installed in the Respiratory Department providing new and more sophisticated services.

An Echocardiograph to detect defects in the heart, along with a new Cardiac Stress Test machine have expanded CFRH's cardiology services. A new computer, coupled with electrocardiographs, was installed in the Emergency Room to assist the medical staff.

Two pieces of equipment bought for the opening of the hospital are now in full use. The Electroencephalograph (EEG) records brain waves by a graph that measures the electrical impulses of the central nervous system.

Electromyography testing (EMGO) has been instituted to search for suspected neuromuscular diseases or injuries. Seven different procedures are performed in the department by the physician.

The Nova 4 + 4 Electrolyte Analyzer is the new celebrity in equipment at the CFRH Lab. The state-of-the-art for Ion Analysis is a completely automated walk-away system to analyze 85 samples per hour and takes only 65 seconds to produce complete a 4-parameter report.

Ann Cole, Lab manager, says they have instituted a number of new procedures. "The Profile B, a pre-op profile, is designed to assess patients' ability to withstand surgery and anesthesia, while the Therapeutic Drug Monitoring test is effective in measuring actual drug level in serum," she said. TDM can help physicians adjust the dosage to achieve therapeutic levels.

Among other procedures instituted is the Minimum Inhibitory Concentration (MIC) Sensitivities, which tells the physician which antibiotics work best on an organism, what dosage to give for optimum effect, and what route of administration is best.

Hemogram is another. A new name for an old test, this is the "top" part of a CBC (a complete blood count) as no differential is done.

Although the hospital opened with the latest equipment on the market totaling over $9,168,318, the capital budget for this fiscal year was $493,000.

Another $50,000 was spent for operating instruments to be used by CFRH's first neurosurgeon who reports next month.

Dr. Wayne Joiner shows guests some of the new radiation treatment equipment at the Radiation Therapy Clinic of Central Florida, 201 Mangoustine Ave. The facility is the first of its kind in Seminole County. Heretofore, local cancer patients had to go to Orlando for treatment.

This is new Triple County Medical Center adjacent to CFRH. It cost $1.2 million to build and will house seven doctors with different specialties.

Hospital Attracted More Doctors, Centers

By Donna Estes
Herald Staff Writer

The new Central Florida Regional Hospital not only provides total health care for local and area residents, it is singularly responsible for additional medical facilities locating nearby. Since the hospital opened its doors, medical specialists have chosen to combine their talents and resources to construct treatment centers and offices the combined value of which exceeds $5 million.

And one of those facilities is a blessing to cancer patients who have had to travel out of Seminole County for radiation therapy but no longer need do so.

As of late April, a $1 million radiation therapy center opened at 201 Mangoustine Ave. on the southeast corner behind Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Doors were opened to the public Sunday, May 16, at The Triple County Medical Center, Inc., which will house seven area doctors in a $1.2 million facility adjacent to CFRH. The open house, at 309-321 N. Mangoustine Ave., brought local dignitaries and U.S. Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Altamonte Springs, to the podium to congratulate the doctors who have invested in the complex, the first of its kind in the area. The open house, hosted by Sanford surgeon Dr. Kenneth Wing, included a look at the Central Florida Medical Arts Building on Medical Plaza Drive and the new Radiation Therapy Associates' facility. Together, Wing said, the three complexes represent more than a $5 million investment in medical care in the area.

Drs. Don R. Dickerson, Thomas G. Sawyer and D. Wayne Joiner, all radiation therapy specialists, are partners in the venture radiation treatment center.

Dickerson, in a speech at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce personally breakfast recently explained how radiation therapy at the center will function.

Dickerson said 850,000 new cases of cancer will be diagnosed this year in the U.S., and 150,000 cancer patients will develop new cancers. He said 50 percent of these patients will be treated with radiation.

Central Florida, he said, is one of the areas with the highest cancer rates in the nation, not because there is something wrong with the environment here, but because so many persons retire and move to Florida at the age one usually develops cancer.

While the trio of doctors now have a therapy center in Orlando, their new facility in Sanford will be a larger one, including some 7,800 square feet of space. The new facility was designed to permit expansion not only in parking but also to give room for another pod in which a second radiation unit can be housed in the future.

The facility's radiation source will be a $416,000 6-million-volt linear accelerator, rather than a cobalt unit. When a second unit is purchased, it will have a 20 million volt capacity, he said, and will cost upwards of $1 million.

Dickerson said patients will undergo radiation treatments for only a few minutes at a time and will spend no more than 15-20 minutes in the office.

The center is liberally decorated with plants and designed to let in a good deal of sunlight in order to provide a cheery atmosphere. Walls at the facility are 6 to 10 feet thick and composed of high density concrete.

He said the machinery is calibrated on a daily basis to make sure the intended radiation dosage is accurate. The accelerator, which weighs 9 tons, is designed to rotate around and concentrate on a spot of only two millimeters in size.

The CAT-Scan at the hospital is used to determine exactly where the problem area is, Dickerson said, and a computer is used with those X-rays to prescribe the exact treatment plan for each patient.

Monitor Technicians

Since they are "sitting down on the job," it would appear that would be the opposite of progress. Not so.

One of the new positions created to expand patient care when the new Central Florida Regional Hospital was opened was for monitor technician. They sit in one place constantly monitoring telemetry patients for any change in their heart rate and rhythm as indicated on the electrocardiograph (EKG) through a monitoring screen at the nursing station.

Three West — the telemetry unit — is a step-down care nursing station for patients from the coronary care unit (CCU) and for those suspected of having cardiac problems. Therefore, it is imperative that the screens be monitored at all times.

In addition to monitoring the screen, which graphically tracks the heart action of each patient wearing an individual telemetry pack (which sends out the impulses), the technician runs a "strip" every four hours on each patient. The strip is a narrow piece of graph paper bearing the printed track of each patient's EKG pattern. This becomes a permanent part of a patient's chart.

Wilda Farrar, RN, head nurse of the unit, said of the technicians who can be identified by their dark maroon jackets, "They are an integral part of the nursing team, as they are the first line of defense against any potential problems which might arise."

Students Rank High

Consistently ranked nationally through the high scores achieved by students sitting for the examination given by the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists, the 17-year-old program has produced many graduates including 12 who are currently employed in the hospital's Imaging Department.

Competing at the Florida Society of Radiologic Technologists annual meeting, Carol Paige of DeLand took top honors in the Senior Student Exhibit. Kimberly Leason won second place. Leason of Longwood and a former Lyman High student, had taken her "practicum at CFRH as a student in a health occupations class. Both will graduate in January 1984.

Leason also took first place in the senior scientific paper in the recent Central Florida Society Radiologic Technologists awards banquet. At that event, Nancy Atkinson of Sanford who will graduate this month, won first place in the senior scientific exhibit.

The 24 month certificate program of Radiography was initiated in 1966 by Dr. John Johnson, radiologists on the CFRH medical staff and the program's medical director, and Pat Riley, director of the Imaging Department.

One of the program's major contributions is providing free schooling for local students and skills needed within the hospital. Thus it provides a future for students who otherwise would have to seek schooling and employment elsewhere.

A further contribution is that the community retains its young people.

This is reflected by the fact that four of the supervisors in the Imaging Department and eight employees are former graduates.

John Lake graduated in 1969 from the program. He is both a registered radiographer and a registered nuclear medicine technologist. He is presently chief technologist of the Nuclear Medicine Department.

A 1975 graduate, Carol Dennison is currently supervisor of the office staff, while Sheri Chlogianis, a 1978 graduate, is the chief technologist in the Ultrasound Department.

Jeanette Messer graduated in 1973. She returned as the Program Director in 1980 after receiving a BS in Radiologic Sciences from the University of Central Florida.

Another honor accorded the hospital's Imaging Department is that three of its staff members are officers in the Central Florida radiologic technologists professional organization. Russell Hoogerwerf was recently installed president, Jeanette Messer is the new vice president, and Jane Cash was reelected secretary.

Nurses' Vital Role: Compassion, Caring

As medical technology has changed over the years, so has the role of the nurse.

Yet the essential attributes of a nurse remain constant. Professional training, experience, and an environment conducive to expanding nursing skills are obviously vital, but the most important of all is the presence of compassion and a caring nature.

"Nursing is the art of caring," Edna Robinson, RN, director of Nursing at CFRH, emphasized as she continued, "born of knowledge and training, given by touch with heart."

Mrs. Robinson heads a staff of 350, composed of registered nurses and LPNs, aides, orderlies, secretaries and communication clerks.

The Nursing Practice Department operates on management by objectives, based on an overall philosophy. The philosophy reads, "the purpose... is to provide the highest quality of care necessary to the patient to assist in treatment of illness in the process of curing, as well as provide support to those for whom there is no cure."

These objectives are:

- To accept the inherent dignity of man in all interpersonal relationships.
- To include the patient and his family in decisions and participation in care.
- To plan, implement and evaluate nursing care in which the role of the nurse is to identify problems, apply problem solving techniques along with application of principles from biological and behavioral sciences.
- To continually evaluate methods of nursing practice for areas of improvement.
- To utilize results of nursing practice evaluation to effect change.
- To promote continuing education as a necessary tool for achieving personal and professional growth and assist our licensed employees to meet necessary requirements for mandatory continuing education.
- To utilize referral systems within and outside of the hospital to ensure continuity of total care.

CFRH Builds Community Health

Bold new directions marked the educational efforts on several fronts at CFRH during the year just past.

Alternatives, options, the decision-making affecting one's own health, are being explored through workshops such as this month's hyperalimentation seminar. It centers on a concept which expands care for the special patient at both the hospital and at home, allowing the patient to lead a more normal life.

Wellness and preventative health is being promoted through a full range of short courses including the many elements of stress and exercise.

Supportive programs, lectures and demonstrations which deal not only with educational aspects but emotional areas, are being offered for patients and their families. "I Can Cope," a participative program presented by CFRH's Social Services Department and the Cancer Society is an ongoing series in this vein.

Next month, the education department, in conjunction with CFRH dietitians, will launch sessions for diabetics. This will expand the present one-on-one patient education held within the hospital.

On site programs, touching on myriad methods of achieving better health, are being staged out in the community — to schools, businesses and club meetings.

Two examples: — the "Culinary Hearts Kitchen Course" (for the general public and for those who need to modify their diets) currently being presented at the Deltona Womans' Club — the brown bag lunch/lifestyle pilot program is another. This is presented during the brief lunch hour at a business site.

A continuous series of lectures and inservice sessions, geared to health professionals, not only those associated with the hospital, but to the entire health field, are held in the hospital classroom. These included "Adjustments on Aging" for psychologists. Advanced EKG classes, a week-long Critical care Course for critical care nursing personnel, "Advanced Cardiac Lifesupport" for physicians and many others.

Young parents are given many opportunities to participate and select the approaches to this special time in their lives. Fathers can be coaches and experience the thrill and miracle of birth if they attend classes prior to the event.

Nancy Edwards, CFRH's director of education, reported that the department now has a video recorder and is developing closed circuit TV patient education programs.

HCA Growing In The County

Construction has begun of Hospital Corp. of America's new $30 million South Seminole Medical Complex on a 26-acre site north of State Road 434 and west of State Road 427 in Longwood. Included will be a medical-surgical facility and a psychiatric center.

Taking part in the groundbreaking ceremony in January were Robert Blumentritt, administrator of the medical-surgical unit; Longwood Mayor June Lormann, state Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, and George Dobbs, administrator of the psychiatric facility.

The time schedule was set by HCA after it gained final approval of a site plan for the two-hospital facility from the Longwood City Commission on Nov. 8, 1982.

The three commissioners present at the meeting — Mayor Lormann, Chick Pappas and Timothy O'Leary — approved the plan contingent upon HCA paving some 755 feet of West Lake Street from State Road 434 to Warren Avenue.

West Lake Street is to dead end at the emergency room of the acute medical care facility at the complex. Both the 150-bed acute care hospital, to be named South Seminole Hospital, and the 80-bed psychiatric hospital, West Lake Hospital, are to be built simultaneously, according to Mayor Lormann.

The two facilities will be connected with an enclosed heated and air-conditioned covered walkway.

While the complex will face State Road 434, it also will have entranceways from Warren Avenue and West Lake Street. An office building is planned for construction at the site in the future.

Coronor's Job Not Like TV...

By Debbie Fender
Special to the Herald

The real life career of a medical examiner has little of the drama depicted on television shows such as "Quincy." For one thing, some of the things Quincy does are highly unethical and many of his one-man crusades would be illegal, says Dr. Gumerindo V. Garay, Seminole County Coroner.

But that doesn't mean work is dull for Dr. Garay, who is also Lab Director of Pathology at Central Florida Regional Hospital in Sanford. For the 39 years he has been in the medical profession, he says, the job has never ceased to be fascinating.

And neither has his life been unexciting. Before and since Dr. Garay and his family contrived to escape from Cuba during political strife in that country, they've met and coped with continued challenges.

Dr. Garay tells his story:

"I was born in Cuba in 1916 where I lived with my family and went to school. Because of a political strike in Cuba, I worked in a sugar factory when I was 15 for 12 hours a day at $.50 an hour. The political strike caused my high school and the local university to be closed for three years. I didn't graduate from high school until I was 23 years old," he said.

"After graduation, I went on to medical school for seven years in Cuba. I graduated when I was 29, and married my wife, Hilda, three years after that. Hilda was a kindergarten teacher in Cuba, and she also taught piano lessons," he explained.

They had three children — two girls and one boy. Annabel, the oldest girl is now living in Memphis, Tennessee with her husband, also a doctor. She received her Bachelor of Science degree in Medical Technology in Savannah, Georgia. His son, Gustavo, is living in Sanford where he works at the Migrant Worker Clinic as a technician. He obtained his medical schooling in the Dominican Republic, and is waiting to take his medical board test in July of 1983. The youngest daughter, Ivonne, is a teacher at a private school in Tampa.

"In 1961, my wife and I had to make the tough decision about sending our children off to America. Of course, we wanted to be able to go also, but Castro would not give permission for doctors to leave Cuba unless they were real old. Hilda and I did try to escape then, but we were caught with fake passports, so we remained in Cuba and sent the children on to America by themselves. Our children arrived by airplane to Miami in 1961. They were met by workers in the Catholic Church who kept them together, and sent them to an orphanage home in Denver, Colorado. Annabel was only 13, and the younger children Gustavo, and Ivonne were 11, and 8 years old. Hilda and I were separated from them for 14 months. We talked to the children about once a month on the phone. We knew they were scared, because they were so young, and didn't know the English language," Dr. Garay said.

"I'll never forget the day that we fled from Cuba as long as I live. It was a cold January day in 1963, and 17 of us crowded onto a 26 feet long fishing boat. Hilda was so scared, and she hated water. I had to keep my spirits up, because I was the only doctor on board and everyone depended on me. We were all about frozen by the time we got to Key West, but we were also very, very happy," he exclaimed.

From Key West, Dr. Garay and his wife took a bus to Miami. At the airport terminal, they were greeted by some Catholic Church workers who knew about their children, and had arranged a phone conversation between parents and children.

"On January 15, 1963, Hilda and I arrived in Denver, Colorado where we were reunited with our children. We stayed in Colorado for five months, and I got a job at St. Joseph Hospital. Denver was very cold at this time of the year, and I walked back and forth to work because I didn't have a car. I would work nine hours a day, and then come home and either walk to the grocery store or the laundromat. This is when I learned to dislike the cold weather.

"After Denver, we moved to Des Moines, Iowa because of the pay, not the weather. I received $450.00 a month, plus my home and land. No other place was paying that well at that particular time. I was however, the only doctor on the night shift for the entire hospital, including the emergency room. I always found myself very busy, and learning many new things I had never dealt with before — like delivering babies. I was on call 48 hours straight, and since I still didn't have a car, the hospital would send me a taxi to take me to the hospital."

Their next stop was Arkansas for two years at the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock. During this time, Mrs. Garay worked with her husband in the Pathology Lab, but not for long, because she felt she was needed at home with her children. Memphis, Tennessee was next, where Dr. Garay received his training in Pathology, and in 1968 the family moved to Savannah, Georgia, where Dr. Garay practiced Pathology for four years.

"When I came to Sanford in 1971," Dr. Garay said, "I became interested in Forensic Medicine or legal medicine, which deals with classifying causes of deaths, and the proper medical attention. I now devote about half and half to Forensic medicine and pathology because I love them both," he explains.

"My job is very exciting to me, and I wouldn't give it up for anything in the world. I do wish I had more time to study the things that I find so fascinating within my work. I also wouldn't mind getting a little more sleep at night without being called in for an autopsy, but I guess I'm getting used to it by now.

"I see so many young people die these days, and many autopsies are performed to determine the cause of death. A lot of these diseases, and especially heart diseases among young people have to do with everyday stress. People are pushing themselves too hard. They love their families so much that they try to provide everything which in return pushes them beyond their capabilities.

"People many times are just pure ignorant too. They drink too much and then drive without knowing what they're doing. The most common cause of death in Sanford is accidents, whether involving cars, drowning or something inside the home. The rate of accidents also increase during the winter months with all the various holidays.

"Since I have been in Sanford the annual autopsies have steadily increased. In 1971, my lab performed 76 autopsies for the entire year. As of May 1983, we have already performed 73."

Although the work load is increasing, Dr. Garay said the new hospital has a bigger facility.

The morgue is just a little bigger, he said, but where the old morgue cooler could hold two bodies the new one can hold nine.

The autopsy table is new, he said, and more manageable because it is adjustable.

Dr. Garay explained that during an autopsy, finger prints are taken, the body is checked completely for injury and illness, and pictures for wounds and for verification are taken.

"My job," Dr. Garay says, "is somewhat different than takes place on TV. Shows such as Quincy, however, do help the public to understand the medical examiner's job better, and explain that it's not a one man job, but a whole community cooperating with each other."

16 New Doctors At CFRH ...

Sixteen new physicians have joined the active Medical Staff at Central Florida Regional Hospital and through their specialties have greatly increased the availability and range of medical care in Sanford and the surrounding communities.

Many more have become members of the Courtesy Staff.

Neurosurgery, gastroenterology, plastic and reconstructive surgery, radiation therapy, oncology, hematology and nephrology are the six additional areas of medical expertise represented by new physicians who have come aboard since Hospital Corporation of America bought Seminole Memorial in 1980.

"The new $26 million, fully-equipped facility, a high growth area, the Central Florida lifestyle and the warm reception given to newcomers by the community have all blended to create an appeal for physicians wishing to relocate," declared James D. Tesar, CFRH administrator.

Having perhaps the greatest impact on delivery of medical care locally is the addition of four radiation therapists operating from their newly opened one million dollar radiation center just south of CFRH. The new medical staff members include Drs. Don Dickerson, D. Wayne Joiner, Thoms G. Sawyer and Bruce D. Greenberg.

Also broadening the scope of the medical staff is the addition of a neurosurgeon, Norberto E. Priu, M.D., who is scheduled to come aboard in July. Dr. Priu will be located in the new HCA physicians' building, 1403

Medical Plaza Drive, immediately south of the hospital. He is originally from Buenos Aires, Argentina where he received his medical degree from the University of Buenos Aires.

Two plastic and reconstructive surgeons are now practicing at CFRH. Bruce Walton, M.D., who was born in Cleveland, Ohio, has become associated with Drs. Thomas Lagen and Franklin Clontz at their 819 E. First Street offices. He received his medical degree from Western Reserve
