BRIEFS

Family's home invaded

A Winter Springs family was terrorized as a pair of gunmen forced their way into their home, tied them up and ransacked the residence.

The 52-year-old woman and her four sons, ages 14 to 22, were tied up with a variety of straps and plastic handcuffs by the two gunmen, according to Ed McDonough, spokesman for the Seminole County sheriff's office.

One of the sons was punched in the face by one of the gunmen, he said.

According to sheriff's department records, the men pushed their way into the home on Law Cruces Drive in the Sunrise subdivision near Red Bug Road. They threatened the family with handguns and, after restraining them, took an undisclosed amount of cash.

One of the suspects is described as a white man in his late 20s with long, curly hair. He is approximately 6-foot-3. He was said to be wearing a green sweat shirt and jeans.

The second man is said to be a shorter (about 5-foot-4) white man in his early 20s with a full beard. He was said to be wearing a black turtleneck and black pants.

Search for carjacking suspect

LONGWOOD — Police are looking for a man who has attempted or committed three carjackings in the past week.

Longwood police Sgt. J. Miller said the man asks for a ride back to his disabled vehicle from service station or convenience store patrons. In route, the suspect begins hitting the driver with his fists, makes the driver get out and takes the car. The victims have all been men.

The suspect is described as a clean cut, light skinned black, 5 feet 9 inches to 5 feet 11 inches tall, 175-195 pounds. A man matching that description took vehicles on Jan. 10 and 12.

Monday night, a third driver pulled a gun and shot at the suspect after he was ejected from his late model Thunderbird. The suspect ran and was last seen in the Hidden Oaks subdivision. The suspect has not been apprehended. The bullet struck the car's door frame.

Cars from the two previous incidents have been recovered.

Mom of juvenile offender will meet with lawmaker

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The mother of a 14-year old boy who pleaded no contest to committing a lewd act on his 3-year-old brother would like to see changes in the juvenile system and hopes to work with her state legislator toward that end.

Prior to his plea, the judge ordered the attorney for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services to place the youth in an appropriate setting because under the law, he could not be held in detention any longer. The law places a 21-day limit on holding juveniles in detention.

Neither of the boy's parents, who are divorced, wanted him in their homes. The mother could not take him because her toddler was the victim of the crime and she feared the possibility of further abuse. The natural father did not want the youth because during the five months he lived with him, he disrupted the household, refused to follow the rules, stole, skipped school and repeatedly left the house at night after he was supposed to be in bed. No other relatives were available to take him. Foster care could not be found due to the nature of the offense. The teen had already been kicked out of Boys Town and officials refused to re-admit him.

The youth's mother said she could not get psychiatric treatment or counseling for her son because she is on Medicaid.

"No doctor would touch him," she commented.

After a week of unsuccessfully trying to find placement for the teen and a female juvenile, who was a chronic runaway, an HRS attorney suggested to the court the youths could each be housed in a hotel with a caseworker until space in appropriate facilities became available.

Laura Bosco, juvenile division chief for the state attorney's office, said she didn't recall hotel housing being suggested before for hard-to-place teens.

A juvenile reform package passed by the Legislature placed responsibility for all delin-

SANFORD — The path along which the Martin Luther King commemorative parade snaked through Sanford on Monday morning was long.

Parade participants were scattered in groups, making the numbers attending the parade far more than they seemed.

Sanford Police estimate that nearly 1,000 people stood along 13th Street, Sanford Avenue and First Street to take part in the parade.

And at the conclusion of the parade, in a festival in Ft. Mellon Park, police said, several thousand may have been in attendance.

The parade was a ragtag conglomeration of decorated vehicles, marching bands, dance corps and participants who felt inspired to join along the way.

Lake Mary discusses project wish list and how to pay for change

By NICK PFEIFAUPE
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The Capital Improvement Financing program under study by the Lake Mary City Commission will have another airing this week. Plans will come under extensive discussion this Thursday.

While questions remain over what must be done, what should be done, and what would be nice to do, the main point of discussion is what can be financed and how.

At the present time, one of the largest dollar-value lists is the "Proposed Community Improvement Projects WISH LIST." The grand total of projects is over $11.1 million. It includes a great deal of expansion on police and fire facilities, parks and recreation developments, paving, stormwater and landscaping projects, and many others.

At a less-costly level is the "Proposed Community Improvements Prioritized by the City Commission list. It has a grand total of slightly over $3.67 million. It includes only six major projects (compared to 16 in the larger list). They include roadway and stormwater, Rinehart Road irrigation, downtown stormwater, police and fire facility work, and community center expansion.

Still ahead is to determine which list is finally agreed upon, and how much that list is trimmed in projects and cost. Matters such as public safety, roadway & stormwater and recreation projects would have to be considered for public referendums.

Other questions still to be resolved are how to finance. Should it be bonds or bank loans? Regardless of which way, how will the bonds or loans be repaid?

The work session is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. Thursday in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 N. Country Club Road.

The meeting is open to the general public, and the work session agenda includes a call for citizen participation after the formal discussions of the plan.

Credit card fraud

By NICK PFEIFAUPE
Herald Staff Writer

CASSELBERRY — A massive fraud case has been uncovered by Casseberry police, resulting in the arrests of four persons including a Sanford man.

Police Investigator Richard Baldwin said, "It is one of the most in-depth and organized fraud cases I have ever seen, with contact between Casseberry and New York."

The case started Saturday when officers were called regarding a person attempting to purchase jewelry at the Casseberry Target store.

According to police, the subject attempted to purchase the items, but when the cashier attempted to get credit card approval, the card company had blocked the account due to what was said to be extreme spending going on with the account throughout the day.

Police were able to locate a vehicle in which the four persons were riding. Officer Kevin Brown, arresting officer, commented, "A laptop computer was found on the front seat of the vehicle. It had a magnetic card reader and modem attached to it. It appears that the subjects were verifying valid cards through the card companies before attempting to make purchases."

Two of the men were arrested as

Longwood eyes future

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A city with landscaped boulevards, tree-lined paved streets with sidewalks, a major recreation park, sewers service to attract commercial and industrial development and within 20 years having the entire city off septic tanks and on city sewers.

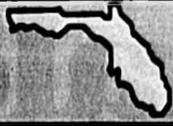

Those are just a few of the ideas discussed Monday night as the Longwood city commissioners figuratively gazed into their crystal ball to see what the future might hold for the city.

W. Shelton Smith, city administrator presented an outline of plans for projects for the next five, 10, 15 and 20 years. He said the city needs a current mission statement and vision statement to be reviewed yearly and updated as needed. The plan would take the city to the year 2015.

Smith requested the various department heads attend the work session to answer commissioners questions. Mayor Iris Benson said the session was not meant to be a budget review and told Smith to dismiss the employees from the meeting. However, commissioners Annamaria Vaccaro, Ron Sargent and Bill Winston said they would like the department heads to stay. Commissioner Jim Carrico agreed with Benson that the session was only to begin formulating a "wish list" of city plans. Although budgets were not discussed, Smith said the

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Suspect's camera may hold evidence

ST. PETERSBURG — Investigators looking into the Saturday rape of a dancer believe the suspect may be involved in another assault which was also captured on videotape.

David Raymond Stetsel, 49, was being held today in the Pinellas County Jail in lieu of $135,000 bond in connection with the rape of a dancer that was filmed.

But after seeing the videotape and arresting Stetsel on Saturday, detectives saw what they believe was another rape of a different woman. They have not received a complaint stemming from the incident.

"The videotape of the assault speaks for itself," said sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Greg Tita. "There are other victims on that tape."

Detectives also were reviewing some 20 additional tapes they confiscated from Stetsel's house Saturday.

As for Saturday's rape, the tape reveals the whole thing, Tita said.

"It was non-consensual, and she was verbalizing that on camera: 'No, don't do that. I don't want this to happen...'"

The victim went to Stetsel's home Friday night and may have engaged in consensual sex before he handcuffed her to his bed and to himself and raped her, Tita said. Only the rape appeared on tape, he added.

Harassment allegations unsubstantiated

JACKSONVILLE — An investigation of alleged sexual harassment at a Naval Air reserve squadron found some cases of improper behavior but determined most allegations were unsubstantiated.

The report, recently released by the Naval Inspector General's office in Washington, was a response to complaints made in July 1986 by three female members of the Naval Reserve Squadron 84 here.

They alleged they endured sexual innuendoes and routine harassment in the 240-member all-reservist squadron. They said their complaints triggered retaliation from their superiors. Investigators said many of the allegations were "seriously flawed, often by lack of timeliness or failure to follow established relief procedures."

Navy investigators found that 34 of the 42 cited claims of harassment were unsubstantiated. Five were partially substantiated, and three were substantiated.

— That Hospital Corpsman First Class Heather Rodenberger's request to join the air crew was improperly denied.

— That Petty Officer Deborah King was wrongly ordered to receive counseling for reporting alleged harassment to a military hotline.

Relative's plea for inmate to surrender

MIAMI — As officials swarmed the dense grounds of west Dade County looking for an escaped convict, a banner flying overhead begged him to turn himself in.

And as Juan Jesus Fleitas, 30, continued to evade officials for a second week, his family went on television asking him to surrender.

"Think of mom. She's very sick about this," Pope Fleitas said in Spanish on television Monday.

The name of the escapee's uncle, who grew up with the convict, also graced the banner that flew overhead.

"Juany. We love you. Please turn yourself in. Pope," said the banner.

Fleitas has been at large for two weeks after he and five other escapees fled from the Florida State Prison in Jacksonville, Fla., in late 1986. He is the only one still on the loose.

The Florida Department of Law Enforcement rented the banner plane for $674 from Aerial Sign Co. in Pembroke Pines and distributed fliers with Fleitas' picture and a physical description in west Dade County, where several sightings have been reported.

Hospital, HMO form health care network

MIAMI — Jackson Memorial Hospital and Physician Corp. of America have formed a health-care network linking Florida's largest medical center and the for-profit health-maintenance organization.

PCA's 550,000 members get access to the University of Miami's teaching hospital owned by Dade County, offering innovative, high-quality care to the patients and potential new income for the public hospital.

"It's the trend of the future that hospitals will have to tie in with these HMOs in order to get patients," Arthur Hertz, treasurer of the Jackson's Public Health Trust board, said Monday.

PCA, Jackson and the university promoted the alliance, the product of negotiations over two years, as "the most advanced agreement of its kind" nationally between a major teaching hospital and private health-care company.

Dr. Bernard Fegal, medical school dean, said the collaboration "will serve as a market-driven response to health-care reform, offering customer-oriented affordable health care."

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Retirees drifting away from Florida

Traditional retirement areas losing their share

By RANDOLPH E. SCHWAB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans are scattering more when they retire, drifting away from Florida, California and other traditional magnet states.

Population researcher Charles F. Longino Jr. blames it to the silt in of a deep river channel, spreading the flow out "so that more boats are getting out to docks on the smaller streams and slightly fewer are coming to the big places."

"I think this is probably a long-term phenomenon which has been noticed for the first time ... I think what we've spotted here is a long-term trend," said Longino, a professor at Wake Forest University and Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Longino details the movement of retirees in a new book, "Retirement Migration in America," published by Vacation Publications of Houston.

Overall, Longino's study found that 25 states attracted a larger share of the nation's moving retirees in the period 1985-90 than in 1975-80. By comparison, 17 states stayed the same and 11 lost shares — indicating the greater dispersion of retirees.

Retirees are a lucrative prize for states that can attract them, Longino explained. Those that were most successful in the past, such as Florida and California, seem to be losing market share.

At the same time, North Carolina has gained sharply, and Virginia and Georgia moved into the top 10 for the first time. North Carolina, which was in 27th place in 1980, was in fifth spot with 3.4 percent of movers in the 1980 count.

Longino pointed out that most Americans stay put when they retire, with 84 percent of people age 65 and over saying they want to remain in their current homes.

But those who do relocate have become the focus of intense marketing campaigns, creating a "mailbox economy" in retirement communities whose residents receive a monthly infusion of cash from pensions, investments and Social Security. Becoming a retirement center can be a real economic boon for a state, Longino said, and the process tends to feed on itself. Once an area becomes known as a retirement center, services move in and it becomes more attractive to retirees — until it becomes too crowded or too old.

"California has really become, in the last decade, more of a sending state than receiving state. The net balance has shifted," Longino said. "Probably it partly has to do with immigration, floods, earthquakes and so forth," as well as economic conditions.

Florida is a different story, he said. The dropoff there is more recent and smaller.

"I suspect what is going on is the that North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and parts of Virginia are beginning to form a barrier between the Northeast and Florida," Longino said.

Florida has been the unchallenged giant as a retirement haven for decades, peaking in the 1975-1980 period.

Hill says he hopes he inspired killings in Massachusetts

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Paul Hill, awaiting death for the slayings of an abortion doctor and his volunteer escort, said the man accused of killing two abortion clinic staffers in Massachusetts did a "chivalrous thing."

The killer and former minister also encouraged other anti-abortionists to follow his example during a WSVN-TV interview broadcast Monday from Florida State Prison in Starke.

It was Hill's first interview since the shooting deaths of two receptionists and the wounding of five other people Dec. 30 at two abortion clinics in Brookline, Mass.

John Balvi III, 32, a hairdresser of Hampton, N.H., has pleaded innocent to a federal gun indictment and state murder charge.

"I'm definitely pleased John Balvi went in and defended the unborn children," Hill said. "I think what he did was a chivalrous thing."

Hill, 40, of Pensacola had predicted others would follow his example in a Dec. 30 interview with The Associated Press. At that time he also said he hoped to be executed because he felt his death would incite further anti-abortion violence.

"I hope my example will result in saving many, many lives," Hill said. "Yes, I truly believe the best way to serve my cause is to act as I did act."

Hill was convicted of murdering Dr. John Bayard Britton, 65, of Pensacola Beach, and retired Air Force Lt. Col. James Barrett, 74, of Pensacola last July 29 outside a Pensacola women's clinic.

The shotgun attack wounded Barrett's wife, June, 69, also a volunteer escort at the Ladies Center clinic.

"I didn't enjoy it," Hill told WSVN-TV. "It made my flesh shrink back, but I knew I needed to do it."

Hill told the AP last month that he was inspired by Michael Griffin who fatally shot another abortion doctor, David Gunn, last year at a different Pensacola clinic. Griffin, 68, of Pensacola is serving a life prison term.

A former minister in the Presbyterian Church in America and Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Hill contends killing abortion providers is justified to prevent abortions.

"Killing John Britton was justified," Hill told WSVN-TV.

For brotherhood

Martha Woodard (at podium), widow of the Rev. John H. Woodard, accepted the Brotherhood Award on behalf of her husband from the Sanford Martin Luther King celebration committee. Anita Gail Choate presented the award, which the committee gives to the person they believe best represents King's philosophy of community service. Representatives of the community and the city, including Commissioner Kerry Lyons and Mayor Bettye Smith, were on hand to applaud all that Woodard did for the community during his 18 years at the Allen Chapel.

In this county, juveniles pay for their crimes

By The Associated Press

PALM BAY — Brevard County prosecutors are running a new program that teaches juvenile delinquents a lesson and enables their victims to be reimbursed for their losses.

Nonviolent youngsters charged with vandalism, shoplifting or theft get a chance to earn cash to pay for their crimes through a grant from the U.S. Justice Department.

"We've always had intervention, but this is really aggressive intervention," State Attorney

Norm Wolfinger said about the program, which involves all of the county's police agencies, the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and the Private Industry Council.

When 13-year-old Kristy Cooper was caught vandalizing a Palm Bay house with two friends last year, authorities decided she should pay the owners $133 in damages. She didn't have the money, but her mother, Judy Nazon, thought her daughter should be held accountable.

Mrs. Nazon went to Project Payback. Her daughter went to work part time for All Service Graphics Inc., where three-fourths of her salary went to the victim and the remainder to Kristy.

Wolfinger's office conducts an in-depth background check with police agencies and the school board to determine whether the applicant is suitable for the program.

Those admitted get 4½ hours of work ethics training and are found temporary jobs.

"The whole idea is to teach these kids a skill and a trade and get them off the streets," said program coordinator Debbie Davis, who traveled to Iowa and Alabama to study similar programs. "There's nothing like it in the state of Florida," she added.

The juveniles typically are between the ages of 12 and 17. They can clear their records by completing the program successfully.

Bob Schultz, who owns the business where Kristy works, was so impressed with her performance, he decided to retain her as a part-time employee. Kristy was better prepared for a job than many adults are, he said.

SANFORD — Florida Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford has announced that nominations are now being accepted for the "Commissioner's Ag-Environmental Leadership Awards" for 1995.

"These awards, now in their second year, highlight the environmentally sensitive agricultural practices that have been developed and implemented by Florida farmers," he said in a press release. "These awards give credit where credit is due."

Crawford explained that modern farmers are increasingly sensitive to the environmental consequences of their practices and have made major strides in preserving the earth's natural resources while harvesting its bounty to feed the nation and the world.

"Florida farmers are pioneering ways to ensure a reliable source of food and fiber without degrading the land and water that produced it," Crawford said.

Entries must be postmarked no later than Feb. 1. Farmers may nominate themselves or others in one or more of seven categories: Wildlife protection and habitat conservation; Pesticide/Nutrient management; Water Quality; Soil and Water conservation; Waste management/recycling; Overall grower; Overall non-grower.

Travelers: Florida sometimes tacky; no longer unspoiled

By The Associated Press

ORLANDO — While security from crime is important, many domestic travelers are not returning to Florida because it isn't the quiet, unspoiled, sun-drenched vacation land they expected, new surveys show.

Some of the reasons for a drop in repeat visits may be high costs, steady urbanization and excessive commercialism, the surveys say. Crimes against tourists are a concern but not a deciding factor for many.

A preliminary report of focus group surveys conducted in New York, Atlanta, Washington and Toronto will be presented to the Florida Commission on Tourism, meeting this week in Fort Myers.

"This is the information we've needed to figure out why people aren't coming here and what we need to do about it," said Bill Sims, chairman of the advisory panel.

Florida tourism was down 2 percent for the first 10 months of 1994, compared with the previous year.

A series of crimes involving tourists in 1992 and 1993 damaged Florida's image, especially in foreign markets. The number of European visitors declined nearly 20 percent in the first seven months of last year.

Sims cautioned that the focus group information is only anecdotal, that the groups represent small samples and were only one part of a larger study. Except for Toronto, there was no information from foreign countries.

Some travelers perceived Florida as expensive as an island vacation.

"If value is an issue, that concerns me," Sims said. "We've never really targeted the value issue in all the advertising the state has done."

In New York, respondents believed crimes against tourists were not a problem north of Fort Lauderdale.

In Atlanta, focus groups had negative images of Florida's urban areas, including Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Daytona Beach and Orlando. In Washington, groups felt Florida was dominated by Miami and Walt Disney World.

"The idea that they consider it urbanized is kind of surprising," said Donna Ross, a commission member and executive vice president of the Florida Attractions Association.

Some people felt a "sun destination" was somewhat unappealing because of skin cancer concerns. Others considered the state only for people with young children, while some simply found it "tacky."

Rumor mill in Lake Mary

Now is not the time for Lake Mary residents to panic. Rather, it is the time to become more informed than ever.

This Thursday the Lake Mary City Commission is holding the second of its Capital Improvement Program work sessions. Because it is much too extensive to be brought up during the regular commission meeting, it will begin at 5 p.m.

Since the first Capital Improvement Program meeting, several residents have indicated concern over what the city leaders are trying to do. The word "bonds" has often been used in referring to the discussions taking place.

For many, even the mention of the city entering into a bond agreement indicates the need for a large scale tax increase in the near future. At the present time, no massive increase has been determined to be the only way to handle improvements.

This Thursday, the commissioners will discuss bond indebtedness which already exists, as well as what the city's bonding capacity is at the present time, and what funding resources might be available beyond the bonding.

Commissioner Sheila Sawyer says she has heard many rumors about what the city would like to do if the bonds could be floated. At the present time however, these are merely that, rumors. If some were true, it would indeed mean a heavy burden on taxpayers.

The intent of the work sessions is to approach the city's needs in keeping with the city's financial abilities.

Over the years, various subjects have been approached such as the need to improve approximately 12 miles of city streets which are unpaved. Discussion has been held regarding the development of a downtown historic district. There has been talk about expanding the public safety complex.

All of this has been exactly that, talk. Nothing has been decided to the point where hundreds of thousands or millions of dollars are needed.

Mayor Lowry Rockett and members of the commission have all publicly stated that they will not inflict a burden on the taxpayers, but they do want to insure that the rapid growth of Lake Mary will not cause any severe hardship down the line.

This Thursday's work session begins at 5 p.m. It may be difficult for people to attend at that time, but it is important for people, merchants, business owners, residents, potential developers, to know exactly what the future may bring and what may be required in the way of financing.

The meeting is open to the public, and we urge attendance. It is the best way to avoid continuation of the rumor-mill which could easily get out of hand and cause problems.

Insurance for commissioners

Regarding your article on Dec. 21, 1994, in which it was stated that the commissioners of Sanford had voted to grant themselves "free" hospitalization insurance at the expense of the taxpayers. Are we playing Santa Claus to the elected officials? Fringe benefits are offered to those who work for it, not part-time employees. We wish to voice our disapproval of this action and think it should be voted on by the taxpayers.

Hollywood assaults American values

I was invited to the premiere of the new John Singleton flick "Higher Learning." I decided not to go. Like all too many offerings from Hollywood these days, this was a "feel bad" movie. It was an orgiastic two hours of cinematic hate and violence.

How do I know this when I didn't see the movie? Because a close friend worked on it. And even he acknowledges that the film he co-produced is dark. And not even he is willing to say that this film that depicts college as a war zone pitting blacks against skinheads against gays will promote goodwill among moviegoers of different races, genders and sexual orientations.

But that's Hollywood. The producers and directors and actors are untroubled about the deleterious effect their work may have on broader society. They are more concerned about their billing on the movie marquee and their cut of net profits.

The idea that the studios might put out wholesome films rarely, if ever, enters the minds of the moviemakers. They just want to sell tickets. If that means gratuitous sex and violence, or excessive profanity and scatology, or stoking the embers of racial and sexual enmity, so be it.

The blame does not reside entirely with the filmmaking crowd. The film-reviewing set also deserves a rebuke for heaping unqualified praise

on decidedly violent films like Oliver Stone's "Natural Born Killers" and Quentin Tarantino's "Pulp Fiction."

Yes, maybe Tarantino found an artistic new way to show a head blown off the body of its owner. But are the critics the least bit concerned about the effect this scene might have on the teen-agers who've flocked to see the latest work from this celebrated young director?

As one Hollywood producer lamented to me, "All of the critics were raving about 'Pulp Fiction'. Why didn't I see a word of warning? A 15- or 16-year-old needs to be protected from it. It can do great damage to young minds."

The idea that the studios might put out wholesome films rarely, if ever, enters the minds of the moviemakers.

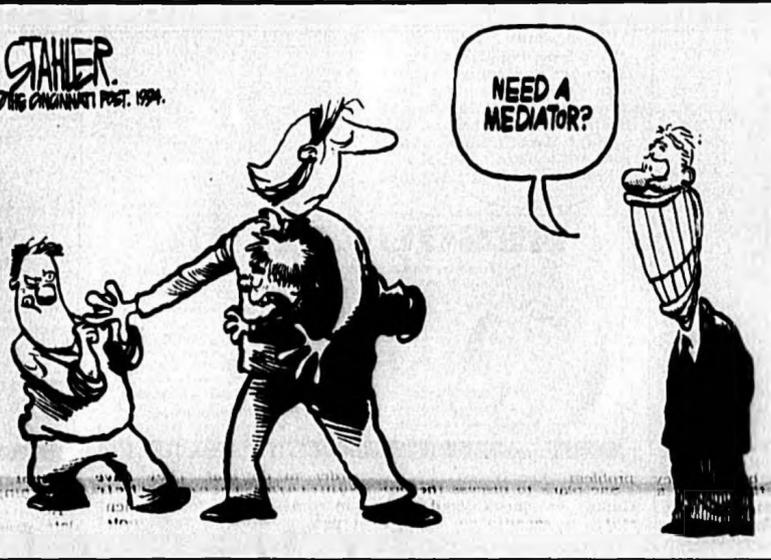

Indeed, a growing body of evidence shows a link between ersatz violence on film and television and real-life crime and violence among young offenders. This makes Hollywood culpable for at least some of the 2 million or so violent crimes committed each year in this country.

Filmmakers like Singleton and Tarantino and Stone disagree. They say that their pictures simply reflect what is happening in society. They bristle at suggestions that their films might have a pernicious influence on impressionable young moviegoers.

But it is disingenuous to suggest that Hollywood does not have a tremendous influence on society. When Clark Gable stripped off his shirt in "It Happened One Night" revealing his bare chest, millions of American men abandoned their T-shirts. When E.T. was brought out of hiding by Reese's Pieces, every kid in America had to have the little candies.

What goes for T-shirts and candies must also go for violence and prurience.

The irony of this debate is that Hollywood considers itself so enlightened on matters of social policy. Most of the film industry folks who are only too happy to put socially unredeeming material before the public think of themselves as socially conscientious.

'All I ever wanted was a job'

WASHINGTON — As flattered as she was on Monday to be cited as a success by House Speaker Newt Gingrich before a roomful of well-wishers and reporters in a Capitol meeting room, Isabelle "Boots" Wright kept wanting to ask a question:

"What about my husband?" she wanted to interject. "I couldn't have done it without him."

She wishes that strangers who applauded her for having risen from "saled girl" to head luncheon chef at a successful Silver Spring restaurant — while putting three children through college — knew how much her late husband, William, a taxi driver and gas company employee, contributed.

But she said nothing. Like most well-bred 70-year-old ladies, Wright is reluctant to appear ungrateful when folks are trying to be kind.

The event was a news conference for the National Restaurant Association to announce a food service industry pledge to hire and train welfare recipients.

Its point — that restaurant work is unfairly perceived as unworthy — was well taken. Association President Herman Cain said such work is dismissed as "low-wage, dead-end, hamburger-flipping, pizza-swinging jobs." Cain, a former dishwasher who's now president and chief executive of Godfather's Pizza, said 60 percent of restaurant owners started at entry level.

Certainly Wright sets a wonderful example. The idea of any company's youngest, lowest-paid employees rising over the years to prominence — and paying for college for three children — is appealing.

Wright just wants you to know she didn't do it all by herself.

She's old-fashioned that way. That's how she raised her children — strict, like my parents raised me — and how she views the working world.

Wright chatted on a recent weekday before preparing the day's pot roast at Mrs. K's Toll House, an American cuisine restaurant in a century-old stone tudor.

Despite being used by Republican icon Gingrich as an example of how far anyone can go without welfare — Wright never finished high school — she's a registered Democrat who hasn't voted Republican since going for Eisenhower. "When the Republicans were in there, I had to work at Mrs. K's," she says. "When the Democrats were in there, I had to work at Mrs. K's."

But she and the news conference architects are in accord when it comes to the current welfare system.

"Young people get mad at you for saying this," she begins, a bit gingerly. Wright, it seems, hates to offend.

"But sometimes I'm in line at the grocery store, and all these young people with food stamps are buying these beautiful pieces of meat. And I have to pick over mine. ... I disapprove of that. ... I'm almost 71 years old, and I still have to work."

She pauses. "Actually, I don't have to." Gesturing at the restaurant's antique-filled sitting room, she says, "This is my life. Coming here is like coming home."

Her story is similar to that of many hard-working older women. Wright grew up poor, she says, "like everyone else," in Virginia's rural Caroline County. When her aunt, Dorothy Morris, a now-retired baker at Mrs. K's, offered in 1940 for 16-year-old Isabelle to move to Washington to work with her, the teenager jumped at the chance.

She moved in with her aunt and worked hard. Two years later, the self-described "little ol' country girl" met William Wright, whose shiny, black Ford, good family and religious ways made her quickly decide, "This is what I want." A year later, they married.

In the meantime, she was impressing her bosses, who promoted her to buegirl to baker to cook. Today, manager Paula Kreuburg, great-granddaughter of the original owner, who hired Wright, describes her as "a dream. ... She has no classical training, but I would put her up against any chef."

Wright loves her work, her children — who work for the U.S. Army, Bell Atlantic and the U.S. Postal Service — and even, since her husband's death in 1989, her independence. "I always wanted to do things on my own."

Ask her about that segment of today's youth who seem unable to stand on their own and she sighs. "I think today's children — maybe they get too much. You have to need things, to push yourself. To know there's no other way to get it besides work."

Suddenly, she's unconcerned about what anyone will think.

For Wright, fresh from being honored on Capitol Hill for a lifetime's effort, the whole thing's simple. Hard work equals opportunity, whoever is in power.

"All I ever wanted is to have a job," she says. "For my children to have a job. And I don't care who gives it to them."

Wright just wants you to know she didn't do it all by herself.

Martin Luther King stood for fairness

Our local school board created a firestorm when it announced that the school system wouldn't observe the Martin Luther King holiday this year so it could make up a snow day. They argued that it wasn't the only holiday designated as a make-up day -- Presidents Day was also fair game -- and that since the King holiday was the first since the snow day, its number was up.

The local chapter of the NAACP was outraged, but what surprised me most was the huge outcry from the white community. The "speak out" phone line to our newspaper lit up like never before, and hand-delivering and faxing letters to the editorial page immediately.

This holiday meant so much to so many. Some wanted to honor King and believe he had been the kind of exemplar of nonviolent protest we especially need to emulate today. To others, the man himself wasn't as important as what he symbolized, which is our national recognition of the long history of injustice blacks have suffered and their agonizing fight for equality.

Others were offended that it had taken the nation and the school system so long to officially adopt the King holiday and that the school system canceled it at the whim of the weather. Some believed the act trivialized what King stood for.

Some were irked that a few banks and other institutions in our city had been slow to observe the holiday while happy to observe all other traditional days off, and considered it a willful refusal to recognize our history of slavery, segregation and hideously unfair treatment of blacks. To them, the school system's cancellation was an extension of this insensitivity.

That the brouhaha over the King holiday happened when it did was ironic to those of us closely watching our state's attorney general argue before the Supreme Court for an end to the desegregation order imposed upon Kansas City, Mo., 10 years ago. The cancellation happened two days before the Supreme Court appeal. Many of us who want our schools to observe the King holiday also want an end to the desegregation order. A dichotomy? We don't think so.

Just as King fought for fairness, we believe an end to the desegregation order is a fight for fairness. To remedy some ugly abuses that left Kansas City inner-city schools terribly underfunded and unequal to other, mostly white, schools, a federal judge imposed an order which has resulted in the state paying $1.3 billion to Kansas City schools while other Missouri schools have received less to make up the shortfall.

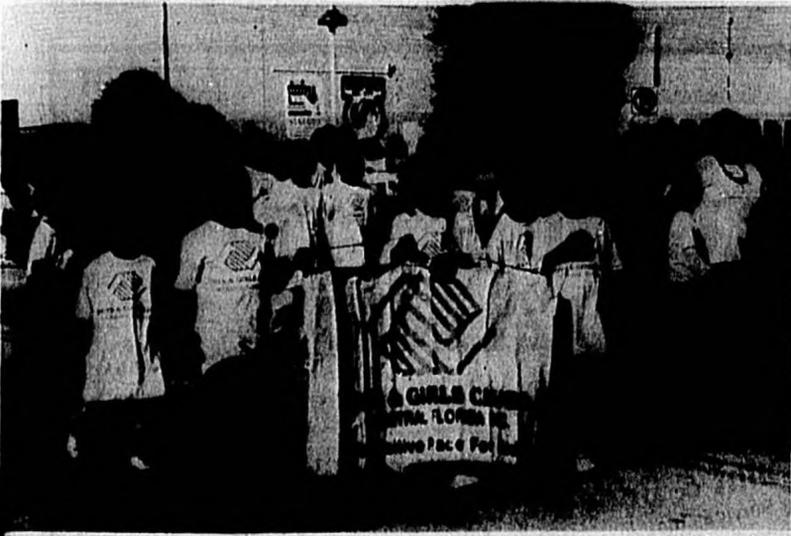

Kansas City schools now spend an average of $13,500 per student yearly, while other Missouri schools spend an average of between $3,000 and $4,000. Missouri has poured money into Kansas City's inner-city schools to the tune of Olympic-size pools with glass floors so coaches can analyze dives, world-class indoor running tracks and magnet programs that private-school parents dream of.

Yet all of this expenditure hasn't achieved the integration it was hoped. They built it, but they didn't come. Suburban parents didn't rush to send their kids to inner-city schools. They wanted their kids to go to neighborhood schools, even if they didn't have Olympic-sized pools.

Many who value what Martin Luther King fought for believe he was above all, practical. "This is not fair" was his message. We have gone beyond what is "fair" and taken it to the absurd.

Just as King fought for fairness, we believe an end to the desegregation order is a fight for fairness.

"We want to say we support King's philosophy of civil unity, but she said she saw no evidence that others shared her views."

"I know they say one person can make a difference, but I'd like to see some others support me in that."

One of the organizers of the Sanford celebration, Dolores Brown, told the Associated Press she still encounters prejudice against blacks, "but progress is being made and more people have become more involved in these activities. We've seen improvement over the years."

At the conclusion of Monday's parade, the crowd gathered along the waterfront to dance, listen to music, eat, play basketball or just stand and talk to friends.

"Isn't this beautiful?" asked Marcia Stanley. "God blessed us with a beautiful day to bring all these people together to do His work."

Sharynn Davis was impressed with the cheerful attitude of most of those present at the festival.

"You get this many people together and they're bound to fight, but they aren't doing no fighting out here."

The celebration in the park began before noon and ended as the sun set.

"It's a wonderful thing Dr. King inspired here," said Jerasin Smith.

"I like the hot dogs," added her five-year-old brother Donte. "They're the best."

Nursing home fire

LONGWOOD — There were a few tense moments early this morning at the Meridian Nursing Center, 155 Landover Place in Longwood. Firemen were called when smoke was detected in the building. According to fire department Battalion Chief Michael Hockenberry, "we had to evacuate about 50 people from the building until we could determine exactly where the smoke was coming from and whether or not there was any danger."

Hockenberry said the smoke was found to be coming from an air handler of the heating unit. No one was injured and there was no serious damage to the building.

capital improvement program is part of the 20-year plan and he asked the department heads' input as part of the planning process.

The administrator also recommended within five years, the city buy or build a sewer plant. He suggested a private company build or purchase a plant which the city would lease. Under provisions of an agreement, the plant would ultimately be Longwood's. The other option is for the city to get out of the sewer business, buying the service from another system.

"I'd like to own a sewer system," Smith told the commissioners when asked which alternative is better, based on his experience. The sewer system could be built on a pay-as-you-go basis budgeting $200,000 to $300,000 annually, he recommended, not by borrowing money.

Within 10 years, Smith suggested the city build a new fire station and establish a true Public Safety Department combining the police and fire departments which would save city money. The city might also establish a Senior Center and child day care.

He also proposed parking and facilities for a ride-sharing program for commuting workers. Annexation of enclaves inside the city limits and area on the outskirts of the city was also discussed.

Vacca and Carrico noted Casselberry and Lake Mary are growing with new commercial and residential development, while Longwood is not. Revitalizing vacant commercial properties along the major roads will also be encouraged. John Brock, planning and building director, told the commissioners the owner of Longwood Plaza off U.S. Hwy. 17-92 and State Road 434 is planning a serious upgrade of the nearly vacant property within 12 months.

Vacca noted that if the city does not expand its tax base, through new development and annexation, taxes will have to be raised to maintain services. Eventually, services might be cut, she added.

The commissioners discussed at length residential sewer hookups, which Benson labeled a "political hot potato." The commissioners indicated they will review proposals to make it affordable and attractive for homeowners to get off septic tanks and on sewers. Benson said there are about 2,700 septic tanks in use in Longwood.

Further discussion of the 20-year plan is scheduled at a Feb. 13 work session.

Juveniles

quency with the Department of Justice, Juvenile delinquency matters continue to be handled by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitative Services to the reform move, the agency had depended on a network of alternate facilities and congregate care for youth after the legal detention period has passed. Juvenile Justice is in the process of formulating congregate placements.

Frequency cases involve juveniles who have broken the law. Dependency cases deal with pre-teens and teens who are victims with no place to go. Sometimes the delinquency and dependency are linked as in the case of the 14-year old. His mother placed him in Boys Town to get him away from her youngest child after she learned the abuse had recurred. The teen "mouthed off," the mother said, and Boys Town turned him in to the Juvenile Detention Center, refusing to take him back.

"The problem is they expect a juvenile to be released in 21 days," the mother commented. "They cannot detain them for longer than that, but yet they cannot deal with the case in a satisfactory manner in 21 days. So there's a time lapse between the 21 days and the time they are adjudicated."

She said because of the nature of the offense, her son needs therapy in a long-term facility. If he pleaded to a lesser charge, he might be released and the problem not addressed.

The teen has pleaded no contest to the charge, after some hesitation, and remains in detention awaiting sentencing. The sentencing range falls between level 6 or level 8. The higher the level, the more severe the offense and the defendant is more likely to be sent to a secured facility. Boeco said the youth might be assigned to a youth facility either in Marianna or Okeechobee.

"I'm not worried about what he's done. It's done and over with. I'm going to have to live with that," the mother said. "I'm worried about him turning into an adult with the same problem."

She plans to discuss the problems she encountered with state representative Marvin Couch (R-Oviedo) later this week. Cases of juveniles committing sex-related offenses are not uncommon, Boeco said.

"That is not a normal situation. It is not something we do on a regular basis," Stuart Doyle commented about the suggestion the two young teens would each be housed in a hotel with a caseworker until appropriate placement could be made. Doyle is a District 7 media specialist for the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS).

"The only time, typically, that we would put someone in a hotel is when it is a family awaiting services and there is no place available for them," Doyle explained. "and it is not for an extended period of time. It is just temporary until whatever housing is being prepared for them is actually ready. We work with the Human Services Council in order to do that. They have something through their emergency funds management program called a hotel/motel program for emergency lodging. That's really designed for victims of crime, abuse or people who have been burned out of their homes or whatever."

HRS contracts with Boys Town to take juveniles.

"From what I understand, our providers, like Boys Town, are not under any obligation to accept any of the children that are considered HRS children," Doyle explained. "In other words, even though they may have a contract with us, there is no such thing as a 'no reject clause.' In other words, if they decide that a child may be a threat to themselves or the other children or whatever, they can turn those children away."

"Placing children in hotels...it doesn't happen," Doyle said. "What happened was something that was presented as an option because we really could not find anywhere to place the children at that given time. It is not something we normally do."

According to the most up-to-date juvenile justice statistics available, in 1993, there were 996 felonies and 1,458 misdemeanors delinquency cases received. Of that number there were 343 cases detained and 54 of the detained cases were committed.

Prior to efforts to reform the juvenile system, judges complained lack of space in state detention facilities sometimes resulted in them sending teens home after sentencing to wait for a space to open up so they could serve their sentence. More beds in secured and non-secured facilities are being provided for juveniles now.

John Doe, although names were listed. John Doe #1, was tentatively identified as Paul Neglia of New York. John Doe #2 was listed as possibly being either Eric Soderquist or Harold Eric Gross, of New York. Both were charged with possession of stolen credit cards, resisting without violence, and concealing of evidence.

The third person was identified as Salvatore Neglia, of Brooklyn. He was charged with possession of stolen credit cards and concealing of evidence.

The fourth person was Gregory Wayne Levins, of 111 Candewick Court, Sanford. He was charged with possession of stolen credit cards and concealing of evidence.

All four were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

As of yesterday morning, only Levins had posted the required $10,000 bond.

Investigating officers say they found hundreds of dollars of electronics, cigarettes, 11 bottles of Dom Perignon and jewelry, all believed to have been purchased with credit cards. Investigators say they believe the purchases had been made throughout Seminole County.

Three of the men reportedly arrived Friday afternoon from New York and met Levins, then started their shopping spree. The credit cards were reportedly stolen in New York, then the magnetic strips were apparently modified.

Investigators have contacted the U.S. Secret Service and FBI, and requested them to look into the interstate transportation of altered/stolen credit cards.

NATIONAL BRIEFS

Clinton visits flood area

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Nobody claims they can fool Mother Nature, but President Clinton wants California voters to believe he at least makes it easier to cope with her.

In a one-day visit loaded with political implications, Clinton today was touting his administration's goodwill effort after last year's earthquake and promising even more help for this year's flood victims.

With 54 electoral votes at stake in the 1996 presidential election, the White House cannot afford to look laggard in responding to California's natural disasters — fires, floods, mud slides or earthquakes.

"You could bill yourselves as a full-service disaster area," Clinton joked Monday night, arriving in south-central Los Angeles to commemorate Martin Luther King's birthday.

Presidential hopefuls?

WASHINGTON — They passed up the opportunity to announce dueling 1996 presidential bids on a TV interview show. But Bob Dole edged ever closer to a candidacy and Ross Perot displayed the homespun style that took him so far in 1992.

Perot was in folk mode Monday night as substitute host on CNN's "Larry King Live" program. There were no charts, no challenges and no flashes of temper — just genial, back-to-back interviews with Dole, the Senate majority leader from Kansas, and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

The Texas billionaire's most aggressive line of questioning had to do with whether Dole would in fact be a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

"Keep in mind, what better place to announce it than on 'Larry King Live,'" the guest host cackled. Perot did just that nearly three years ago when he embarked on his historic independent bid.

"Maybe I should ask you that question. We could both announce it here together," Dole said wryly.

When Perot refused to take the bait, Dole noted that he has formed an exploratory committee and then moved a bit further toward a candidacy.

"I think we're leaning in that direction," he said. "I think it's probably going to happen."

Congress pitches balanced budget

WASHINGTON — Congress is ending a holiday break by reuniting efforts to attach an amendment to the Constitution that would require a balanced federal budget.

While the Senate Judiciary Committee was taking up the balanced budget amendment today, the House stood ready to pass the first bill the new Republican-led Congress will send to President Clinton — a measure making lawmakers subject to the same laws as private employers.

The Senate panel's approval of the amendment requiring a balanced budget by 2002 would set the stage for floor debate as early as next week on the top item of the Republicans' "Contract With America" agenda.

The House Judiciary Committee approved the amendment last week.

Affirmative action

WASHINGTON — Two views of government efforts to give special aid to racial and ethnic minorities again confront the Supreme Court: Does affirmative action help level the playing field?

Federal contracts worth billions of dollars — perhaps the future of all government affirmative action as well — could be at stake as the nation's highest court studies a closely watched dispute from Colorado.

After hearing a hour-long argument today, the court is expected to announce its decision by July.

Under one of the myriad affirmative-action programs mandated by Congress, the Transportation Department's Central Federal Lands Highway Division gives contractors on federal projects a 1.5 percent bonus if at least 10 percent of their subcontracts go to "disadvantaged business enterprises."

State seeks death penalty

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith sobbed and wiped tears from her eyes, held her hands over her face, then stood mute when the judge asked how she would plead to charges of drowning her two sons.

She is "lost in an ocean of grief" since confessing to killing the two boys, her attorney says; she writes them letters and talks to their photographs.

And as lawyers prepare to debate her sanity, the prosecution said it would seek the death penalty so people remember that her sons, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex, were the real victims.

WORLD BRIEFS

Earthquake nightmare comes true

OSAKA, Japan — Japan's nightmare of a devastating urban earthquake came true today when a powerful quake tore through several western cities, killing more than 1,000 people, injuring thousands and wreaking spectacular devastation.

Hardest hit was the port city of Kobe, where the early morning quake toppled hundreds of buildings, touched off raging fires, collapsed roadways and knocked trains off their tracks.

"I thought it was the end of the world," said 84-year-old Minoru Takasu, whose house fell down around him in Nishinomiya, outside Kobe. "I'm happy to be alive!" he told the Asahi newspaper.

The earthquake, with a preliminary magnitude of 7.2, was the most violent to strike a densely populated area of Japan since 1948, when a quake killed more than 5,000 people in the northwest city of Fukui.

National police said 1,042 people were known dead, 577 missing and 3,669 injured. The toll was expected to rise as communications links were restored and victims pulled from the rubble.

Tokyo escaped unscathed. The quake was barely felt in the capital, 280 miles to the east.

Russia appeals for peace talks

GROZNY, Russia — Its army bogged down in Chechnya's capital and its commitment to democracy under attack, Russia appealed for immediate peace talks with Chechen rebels — and this time didn't demand that they disarm first.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin went on national television Monday night to urge negotiations "with all interested parties and forces" and a simultaneous cease-fire.

"The future of Russia, our future, depends on resolving the crisis in Chechnya," Chernomyrdin said. He said the war was "calling into question" Russia's integrity as a state and its efforts to build democracy.

The United States has criticized the invasion, saying it has diverted Russia's attention and resources from crucial democratic and market reforms.

Get More Than You'd Expect At Best Pawn

Webster's Dictionary defines "pawn" as "something delivered to or deposited with another as security for a loan." Best Pawn owner John Melanson got into the pawn business because he felt it was "the coming thing" — because he could offer affordable, quality merchandise to people who need it, as well as loaning money to those in a financial bind.

Best Pawn will buy, sell or trade most anything of value. The shop, located in the Pinecrest Shopping Center (corner of 17-92 and 27th Street in Sanford) is loaded with items ranging from answering machines to xylophones. Melanson takes consignment items as well as collateral items on 30 day contracts. At the end of the items are returned to customers at the end of the contract for a set fee. All items are carefully inspected by Melanson before they are sold to make sure they are in good working order. Right now, Melanson has many name brand items in stock, ranging from tools, guns, electronics, water and snow skis, exercise equipment, fishing equipment and boat motors, guitars, golf clubs, chainsaws, used Nintendo games and micro-waves, to men's decorative cufflinks, pieces of jewelry and loose stones.

Melanson specializes in jewelry. He is a bench jeweler, offering repairs. He had twenty-five years experience in the jewelry business. Best Pawn also offers free jewelry cleaning. Melanson is originally

He then attended Daytona Beach Community College for two years, majoring in business. He has lived in the Orlando area for the past 15 years and opened Best Pawn in Sanford this past March.

Melanson invites everyone to come in and browse. Melanson says a lot of people stop in to look and shop when shopping the other stores in the Pinecrest Shopping Center. # Throw out the records

'Hounds, Pats hook in tough boys' soccer match

From Staff Reports

LONGWOOD — Records can be deceiving. Whenever two teams from the Seminole Athletic Conference get together for an athletic contest you can normally throw out the records, especially in soccer, because despite the records the level of talent is generally pretty close from team to team.

That was very evident Monday night at Lyman High School's Carlton Henley Athletic Complex as the home-standing Greyhounds scored two goals in the final 16:30 of the game to give Lyman a 3-1 victory over the Lake Brantley Patriots in boys' soccer action.

Neither team could score in the first half and it wasn't until 26:33 remained in the contest before the Greyhounds, who have 18 wins, could net a goal against the Patriots, who have just three wins this season.

Lake Brantley came back to tie the game four minutes later, but Lyman came up with the two late scores to claim the win.

"It was a real good game," said Lyman head coach Ray Sandridge. "We got some goals at their end, but they (Lake Brantley) have a good team, much better than their record would indicate."

The two schools split the preliminary games, with the Greyhounds taking the freshman game 2-1 and the Patriots claiming the junior varsity contest 3-0.

After the scoreless first half, Lyman got on the board when Brad Massey took a throw-in from Geoff Chianese and put the ball in the back of the goal.

Lake Brantley tied the game at 1-1 with 22:26 left on the clock as Phillip Claneauhl came up with a loose ball bouncing around in the box in front of the Greyhound goal and pounded the ball into the net.

The eventual game-winning goal came with 16:30 left as Jason Kendall, in his first game back after a suspension, drove past two defenders to score and give Lyman a 2-1 lead.

The Greyhounds added an insurance goal with 1:16 left as Brian Diebler scored after a pass from Rob Evans.

Lyman outshot the Patriots 19 to seven and had four corner kicks to three for Lake Brantley.

Shane Lapina saved three shots in goal for the Greyhounds to get the win, while Matt Hawkins stopped nine shots for the Patriots.

Lyman improved to 18-3-1 with the win, while Lake Brantley fell to 3-12-2. The Greyhounds will host the tough Sandcrabs from Seabreeze High School in a non-conference game on Friday night at the Carlton Henley Athletic Complex. The doubleheader starts at 5 p.m. with the junior varsity contest. The varsity game kicks off at 7 p.m.

Holiday play

While their schoolmates were enjoying a day off Monday, the Lyman and Lake Brantley boys' soccer teams were hard at play, with the Greyhounds coming on late to win 3-1. In the top photo, Lyman's Rob Evans (No. 8) gets the glad hand as he is introduced prior to the game. Evans then went to work (bottom photo), here battling the Patriots' Danny Fedrich for the ball. Evans had an assist on the final Lyman goal.

Winter Volleyball League underway

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Department Winter Recreational Co-Volleyball League got underway Monday night with seven teams seeing action at the Sanford Middle School Gymnasium.

J.A.M.-Up Boat Repair was the big winner on the night, winning all six games it played. No other team won more than four games, give J.A.M.-Up a quick two-game lead over the pack.

Two teams finished the night with 4-2 records, putting Beer 30 and Westview Baptist Church in a tie for second.

Baskin-Robbins 31 Flavours is in fourth place after going 3-2 the first week (no result from a game with Nichols Outboard Service Center was received), one game ahead of Nichols, who was 2-3.

Kathy's Books & Baby Shop ended the night 1-5, while Park Air is still looking for its first win.

The Sanford Recreation Department offers two leagues. The Recreational League is a non-spike like, while the Power League plays on Wednesday nights. Both leagues play at the Sanford Middle Gymnasium and start play at 6 p.m.

Trust agrees to sell Buccaneers for record amount

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA — Flanked by two sons who will help him run the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Malcolm Glazer gushed about the prospect of turning around the longest franchise in NFL history.

"We're involved in several things, and they're all winners," the Palm Beach financier said. "We expect this to be a winner. We didn't come in here to have a losing team."

That's just what the Buys have been for 12 consecutive seasons. Yet Glazer spent a record amount — estimated at $192 million — to purchase the team. He made a commitment Monday to keep it in Tampa for a minimum of two years while he seeks a new stadium.

The three-man trust overseeing the estate of late Buys owner Hugh Culverhouse declined to disclose the purchase price, but indicated it was

Pro Sports Franchise Sales
The top five professional franchise purchases prior to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers sale announced Monday:
$183 million — Philadelphia Eagles, Norman Braman to Jeffrey Lurie, April 7, 1994
$173 million — Baltimore Orioles, won at a bankruptcy court auction by an investor team led by Peter Angelos and William DeWitt, Aug. 3, 1993
$160 million — New England Patriots, by James Busch Orthwein to Robert Kraft, Jan. 21, 1994
$148 million — Dallas Cowboys, by H.R. "Bum" Bright to Jerry Jones, Feb. 25, 1989
$128 million — Miami Dolphins, by the heirs of Joe Robbie to H. Wayne Huizenga, Jan. 24, 1994 more than the then-record $185 million Jeff Lurie paid for the Philadelphia Eagles last year.

Among the losers in a bidding war were baseball owners George Steinbrenner and Peter Angelos.

Glazer's bid was believed to have included a base offer of just over $170 million, leading to speculation that the final price might have included a $20 million payment to the trust if a new stadium is built for the new owner.

The important thing, the Rochester, N.Y. native said, is not how much he paid, but rather that he and his family are committed to operating the team in Tampa.

Only 14 months ago, Glazer was pursuing an expansion franchise for Baltimore, which lost the Colts in Indianapolis in 1984 and has been trying to replace them ever since.

He said he cried after finishing behind Charlotte and Jacksonville in the quest for teams, but is glad he did.

"If I hadn't, I wouldn't be here today," Glazer said. "And I sure as heck would rather own a team in Tampa than in Baltimore."

To guarantee he retains that attitude, local residents are going to have to support the team, which has the second-lowest season ticket base ($23,000) in the league.

Glazer and others who bid for the team stressed the importance of a new facility to any investor paying close to $200 million for a team. Culverhouse thrived financially because he only paid $16 million for the franchise in 1974.

Glazer insisted the purchase agreement include a clause requiring him to keep the team in Tampa a minimum of two years. The contract also calls for a $35 million penalty if the team is relocated within 10 years.

"The buck stops here," he said. "Tampa Bay is going to have this team forever as far as the Glazer family is concerned."

The sale likely will become official in March when NFL owners meet in Phoenix. Twenty-three of the league's 30 owners must approve

Volunteer of the Week

His work with Boy Scouts 'fulfilling'

By SUSAN WILSON
Herald Correspondent

LAKE MARY — Mike Johnston has been involved in boy scouting for three years now. He attributes his initial contact with the idea to his son, Steven.

Johnston, with his wife Cindy, also has two other sons. The family have made their home in Lake Mary for the last eight years of their 14-year marriage.

Not only does Johnston volunteer with the Boy Scouts, he is active with the First Presbyterian Church of Lake Mary as a church elder, youth leader and associate Sunday school teacher.

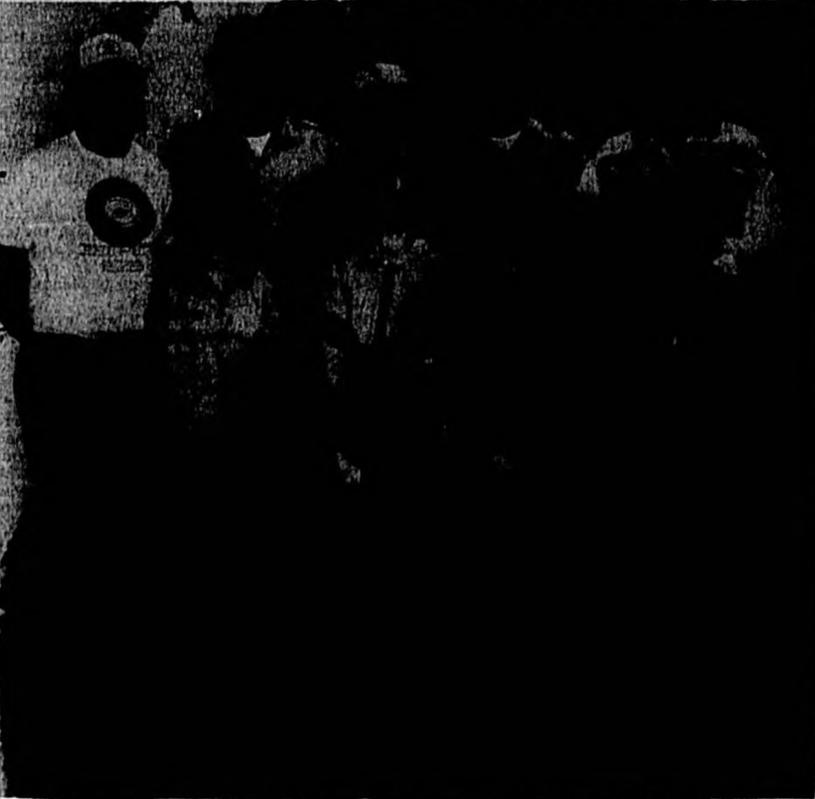

He spoke of his sons prodding to join the ranks of scouting. "My son, Steven, asked me to be a cubmaster," he said. "He's still in my pack. One of my sons is too young now for scouting and the other one just chooses not to be involved."

The job of cubmaster can be a very busy one. Johnston handles numerous phone calls to den leaders and parents to advise those involved of changes in schedules, camping dates, places and times. "The committee actually organizes the events," he said. "The chairman is in charge of the committee."

Much of Johnston's role in the organization consists of planning and assisting with camp-outs. "I plan the menu," he said. "I like outdoor cooking so I help with some of the cooking. I supervise the Cub Scouts so they learn how to cook."

Johnston was the archery instructor at a recent Cub Scout day camp at the Semoran Springs District camp. He was proud of the way the campers grasped the concept of archery. The awards ceremony is another duty that falls in Johnston's lap. "I call the den leaders," he said. "Different packs handle the ceremonies differently. I try to get the kids involved in saying what they had to do to earn their badges. There are badges of rank that they receive."

He further elaborated on the various badges and what they represent. There are Bobcat, Wolf, Bear and Webelos. Webelos stands for "We Be Loyal Scouts." The bobcat badge is one of the easier badges to get," said Johnston. "They just have to learn the Cub Scout pledge and law and some other basic about Boy Scouts. For the wolf badge they have to meet 12 requirements. Then, there are requirements under those requirements. They go through a year and a book for the bear badge; it's about the same as the wolf badge but it's a little more detailed than the wolf badge. The webelos like earning Boy Scout badges. There are engineering, outdoors, readyman and 21 different badges. They represent different discoveries of life, like things that life has to offer." Johnston described his work with the scouts as, "fulfilling. It's great working with my son and the other boys. I have a lot of fun camping. It's neat to see the boys growing and they get a lot out of it too." Although Johnston handles much of the activity within the pack but was quick to point out that he feels the leaders deserve a large amount of the recognition he is receiving. He asked that the leaders and the titles they hold be acknowledged. Bob Reinhold is the webelos leader and committee chairman. Thomas Stives is treasurer. Doug Thomas is a webelos den leader. Dennis and Lisa Petrin are den leaders of the bear den. Peter Prosen is a wolf den leader. Dewey Kemp is the tiger cub leader. Johnston also pointed out that many of the parents have organized and assisted with such events as the Pinewood Derby, camp-outs, the Rain Gutter Regatta, and trips to the fire department, police department, hospital and many other field trips.

For baby's safety, re-design strollers

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about your response to "Mildred From Minnesota," who wondered about using strollers with babies facing forward. Your response: "If the baby is facing its mother, the baby would have to ride backward. I would assume that babies, like adults, prefer to see where they are going — not where they have been."

Abby, before strollers came on the scene, we had prams and buggies with babies facing their mothers, but more important, with mothers facing their babies.

In my opinion, mothers facing their babies is more important than babies seeing where they are going. After witnessing a baby in a forward-facing stroller being strangled by the strap holding him in the stroller while his mother was totally unaware of the situation, I began observing stroller situations and talking to mothers. I found a frightening number of mothers who had experienced incidents with forward-facing strollers.

One mother did not know that her baby's foot was rubbing against one of the wheels until she walked around to the front of the stroller to pick up her baby, and saw his bloody foot! In still another incident, a baby was choking on a bonnet ribbon until an oncoming stranger alerted the mother.

Although manufacturers have vastly improved the safety of strollers, nothing is safer than a mother's constant view of her baby. Besides, do you really think the baby knows the difference between traveling forward or backward? I would think most babies would feel insecure seeing only strangers all the time rather than their own mother or father.

DEANNE BOWLEY, PORTLAND, ORE. DEAR DEANNE: It's been a long time since I pushed a pram — and even longer since I rode in one — but perhaps the mothers who are currently pushing prams will write with a more current evaluation of prams. And by the way, we used to call them "baby buggies." (Problem? Write to Bear Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Bear Abby, P.O. Box 6244, Los Angeles, Calif. 90060. All correspondence is confidential.)

For personal advice, just write Jerry

I have received a request from J.H. of Orlando about whether or not she should take the job in Miami that she has been offered. It is complex, because she is married and her husband has a good job in Seminole County. My answer to you is to hold off on that decision for awhile, as I think that you will be called back to another job opportunity here in the Central Florida area within another 60 to 90 days. Furthermore, your husband's position is getting even better where he is and is up for a raise in pay shortly. Please let me know the outcome, so we can print what happened in "Jerry Knows." Good luck. I wanted to clarify something for those of you who poo-poo this "psychic stuff." There are those persons who interpret, in their own way, what this means in some spiritual or philosophical way and those persons are entitled to their opinions.

What I am here for is to be informative and motivational, if not instrumental, in helping you to make better informed decisions "on your own" as you should be doing anyway. I'm not here to replace your physician, your minister, your attorney, or to convert you to a new way of thinking. I am here, as we are all here, to be in "fellowship" and communication with each other on a need basis.

To those of you who are interested, I say "Welcome!" to others I say "try it," you might like it. It might be a lost object that I find for you or even a leaky faucet that you didn't know you had or it might even be helping to "solve a crime!"

We can reflect to last fall when Susan Smith admitted to killing her two children. Although many persons speculated that she was the culprit. It was a full eight days earlier that I had furnished information to the local sheriff's office, the FBI, CNN, and other media sources about that crime, its outcome, where the children were, how they were put into the lake, what lake, and a complete psychological profile of Susan Smith. All of this being done without having had to go there. Currently, every aspect of the psychological profile that I furnished is being similarly used as an investigative tool in that case by the defense as well as the prosecution. On a more local basis you can find me currently working, quite actively, in the case of Lake Mary resident Jamie Lloyd Swinehart. He is the young man who is accused of homicide in connection with the death of a 7-month-old child named Jose Trinidad.

As a psychic, I have already developed my own profile of this case and as an "investigative journalist" have compiled information that already, in part, has been turned over to authorities and defense counsel alike. As a matter of fact, I have literally become a witness and may be required to testify based on what I already know about this case.

I promise you that the information that I have already uncovered will be exclusive to the Herald. . . There are psychics who give lip service to the field of parapsychology and others who want you to call 900 phone numbers and others that put predictions in a "crock jar" and hope that some of them will hit.

Unlike Nostradamus who made predictions 500 years early, the practice of my profession, how I work it anyway, is a right now — position that can benefit you "now" not "later" as such. After all, where will you be in the year 2828?

I await your letters and look forward to meeting many of you in the near future. Let's face it. While this column will afford some peace and comfort to many, not to all, complete answers don't come written in a space provided by the newspaper. What this column is for, is to introduce you to information, direction, suggestion, opinion, or practical common sense values with application to those everyday situations that face each and everyone of us.

Just like with anything new, try to keep an open mind and don't take things too seriously; you just might learn something anyway. Don't forget to write and also include that self-addressed stamped return envelope (just in case I want to write to you).

Pope honors martyr at Mass in New Guinea

By VICTOR L. GARDNER
Associated Press Writer

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea — Pope John Paul II blessed the bones of a Catholic martyr at an outdoor Mass today, unaffected by a reported assassination plot in the Philippines and the arrest of a gunman here.

The pope rode between engagements in Port Moresby on Monday in a chair in the back of a pickup truck. A yellow awning provided his only protection — from the elements.

During the Mass at Sir John Guise Stadium, the highlight of his two-day visit here, John Paul beatified Peter ToRot, a lay teacher ordered to halt his missionary work by Japanese occupation forces in World War II. In 1945, a Japanese military doctor killed him with a lethal injection.

"The wars, concentration camps and intolerance of our own time have yielded a rich harvest of martyrs in many parts of the world," John Paul said.

"Today your fellow countryman ... has been listed among them."

Beatification, the last step before possible sainthood, is part of John Paul's program to give local models to Catholic communities, especially where they are minorities. Nearly a third of the 3.9 million people in Papua

New Guinea are Catholics.

ToRot's exhumed bones were carried in a tiny casket by a procession of bare-chested men and women wearing feathered headdresses and necklaces of shark and dog teeth. The casket was placed in a small thatched hut beside the altar.

ToRot's 49-year-old daughter, Rufina, called the ceremony "an indescribable joy. I'm so happy." An estimated 8,000 people attended the Mass in a downpour. Port Moresby's first rain in seven months.

Many in the crowd reached out to touch the pontiff as he was driven around the stadium, but security men surrounding the truck held them off.

Police said a Filipino was arrested while trying to enter the stadium with a fully-loaded, German-made pistol. He was being questioned, and police would not speculate on his intentions.

"We regard it as a serious threat," said chief police superintendent Dennis Samin. "We have no way of knowing what was in his mind, but it seems unusual to bring a pistol to a papal Mass."

The man was identified as Perfecto Santos, described as a long-time resident of this South Pacific island. He was charged with a firearms offense.

Three dozen knives also were confiscated, Samin said. He said that wasn't unusual because many residents carry knives to peel betel nut, a mildly narcotic nut.

Security for the pontiff, who survived a 1981 assassination attempt, had already been tightened because of threats that Muslim extremists would try to bomb an American plane to protest John Paul's tour.

In the Philippines, authorities announced Monday they had uncovered a plot against the pope during his visit there and had changed the route of his motorcade as a result.

Papal spokesman, Joaquin Navarro said the Vatican was not informed of the threats and that the only deviation on the motorcade route in Manila was near the airport.

"I thought it was because of the crowds," Navarro said. John Paul arrived in Papua New Guinea from the Philippines on Monday.

Police here said they were looking for two Iranians who had disappeared after checking out of a hotel three hours before the pope arrived. Police downplayed rumors of a threat but wanted to question the Iranians.

John Paul leaves Wednesday for Australia and Sri Lanka, the last stop on his 11-day Asian pilgrimage.

Fur trapping is way of life for father and son

By BOB ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

BOONSBORO, Md. — Pete Leggett rises at 5:30 a.m., grabs a sandwich and coffee and heads out to see if he has outsmarted any foxes.

For the next seven hours, he drives an 80-mile circuit, stopping at two dozen farms to check 48 traps scattered across Frederick and Carroll counties.

"There is a crop of fur every year. If you don't harvest it, Mother Nature will come in and mangle and distemper and rabies will kill it off," he said.

Leggett and his son Ron are perhaps the most industrious fox trappers in Maryland. During the 68-day fox trapping season, just ended, father and son trap some 800 red and gray fox. That's almost half the number trapped in the entire state last season.

After 30 years, trapping's become a way of life for the Leggetts. But it's a way of life some find intolerable.

In the past four years, the family has received at least eight threatening letters and several disturbing telephone calls, including one the family asked the FBI to investigate.

Peter Wood, fur campaign coordinator for the Washington-based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, said his group does not condone threatening tactics. But it strongly opposes trapping.

"These men don't belong on trap lines, they belong in jail. Until trapping is illegal, they will have the right to go around beating and clubbing animals," Wood said.

Wood claims the animals lay in pain in the traps and will chew off their limbs to free themselves.

The Leggetts, who bristle at the mention of animal rights groups, said they have never seen an animal chew off its foot. To demonstrate how the traps work, Pete Leggett lets one snap shut on his hand. He doesn't flinch.

The Leggetts had bumper stickers printed to respond to the animal rights groups. They read: "Are You Worshipping Animals, or God?" and "Has your life been saved through animal research? Millions have been."

Pete Leggett also argues fox trapping is no worse than euthanizing thousands of unwanted dogs and cats in animal shelters.

"People accept that because they say they are putting them to sleep," he said. "My question is: When are they going to wake them up?"

While Pete Leggett checks his traps every day, as the law requires, his son makes a different 100-mile circuit through Frederick and Washington counties checking 70 more traps.

If they find a fox, they kill the animal with a hard rap on the head using a wooden-handled pole with a metal fork at the end. The catch is put in the truck, and it's off to check another trap.

At the fur shed, they string each animal up by its hind legs for skinning, a job they perform in about three minutes. Clad in white, disposable coveralls to protect their clothes, the two men then dispose of the carcasses and put the pelts on wire stretchers for two weeks.

The shed is also where family and friends gather for evening conversation, sitting near a portable heater on unmatched chairs with white tube nearby for spitting tobacco juice.

"We know how to catch a fox. They are hard to catch if you don't know what you're doing," said Ron Leggett, 49, who has traveled with his father trapping coyote, fox, muskrat, mink, beaver and bobcats in 12 states.

Pete Leggett said that if fox trapping was halted, millions of the animals would die slowly of disease. And taxpayers would have to pay people to go out and kill nuisance wildlife. Ron Leggett added.

Dave Moore, a Keedyville cattle farmer who stopped by the shed, said he lost a $300 calf to a predator last year. This year, a $1,100 cow was killed and a calf was injured. The Leggetts have caught three fox on Moore's farm, but they think coyote or dogs might be to blame.

"Dave here thinks we're the greatest thing since candy kisses," Ron Leggett said.

Peter Jayne, the Maryland Department of Natural Resources' upland and furbearer games specialist, said the price of a red fox pelt peaked in the late 1970s at $60. It dropped to $8 in the early 1980s, and has rebounded to $18.

The Leggetts said the higher prices indicate that fur is on the rebound, as well. But Heidi Prescott, national director of the Washington-based Fund for Animals, disagrees.

"I think you'll find trapping a thing of the past by the turn of the century," Ms. Prescott said. "The market for trapped fur is dropping," she said. "They're going to have to find another way of life."
