

Expert Warns Women Against The Use Of Any Form Cosmetics

CHICAGO, June 11.—Cosmetics were described as instruments toward skin ills and homeliness, rather than auxiliaries of beauty when Prof. H. N. Cole, associate professor of dermatology at Western Reserve University, spoke today before the convention of the American Medical Association.

Professor Cole deplored the increasing use of cosmetics, which he said, were always harmful to the complexion, and revealed statistics showing their consumption and data on the prevalence of poisonous substances in many common beautifying agents.

"What was once considered poor form is now the mode with the average woman, certainly in cities," he said. "Most women paint; all of them use powder of different types. The average woman uses at least some of the long list of cosmetics, and yet many of these women are unaware of the danger they are running from such use."

There is the pure mechanical obstruction by creams, powders and rouges employed on the face. The pores in our skins were intended by nature to serve as lubricating and excretory ducts. If these are constantly closed off, the mechanical obstruction alone is bound to injure any skin.

"Then we have the specific chemical action, depending in the first place on the susceptibility of the patient; secondly, on the strength and duration of the application, along with the character of the nostrum applied, for example mercury, arsenic, parabenzyl-jendamine."

"In 1919 American women spent $205,000,000 in the quest for beauty by way of the cosmetic path, while in 1921 manufacturers put out $75,000,000 more of cosmetics than in 1919. Today the question of beauty ills and dangerous conditions has become important enough to come before the convention of physicians occupied chiefly with advanced methods in the diagnosis and cure of diseases."

Cabinet Officers and Health Chief Urge Nationwide Support of Move To Raise America's Home Standards

JAMES J. DAVIS DR. HUBERT WORK DR. HUGH S. CUMMING

To the endorsement and support of leading national organizations of men and women numbering millions of members, Better Homes in America can add the strong support of leading officials of the federal government.

Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, formerly Postmaster General, and past president of the American Medical Association, Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, and Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, Surgeon-General of the U. S. Public Health Service, all are members of the Advisory Council of Better Homes in America and strong backers of this educational movement, which will demonstrate "better homes" in many hundreds of communities during the week set aside for that purpose.

Dr. Work says of the movement: "Better homes mean better people. Man's progress is measured by his home-environment, which in turn reflects his social advancement. We look at the world through the windows of our home, and our vision is tinted by the life we have set up within its walls. And when we pass over the threshold we carry with us the influence of our home setting.

"Comfort from modern working appliances, health from sunshine and fresh air, inspiration from harmonious surroundings and contentment from simple living should be the aspirations of all home-builders, for these things affect the character of our children. They help to make the home a refuge where we may pause after the day's work to gather strength for further achievement."

Secretary Davis, on the same subject, says: "Civilization is known by the homes its people live in. Past achievements in arts and sciences are reflected in the permanence of architecture and convenience of the habitations they permit behind and are told in stories of home and fireside. For civilization is built by man as a means for more happily spending the short years of his life. Mere houses are not homes nor architectural elegance the object of man's creative genius. The structures men erect are raised for a purpose. Better men build better homes; from better homes come better men."

Surgeon-General Cumming has written as follows: "Unhealthy homes, and unhealthy homes make unhealthy people. This constitutes a vicious circle, the tendency of which is to make health conditions progressively worse. The Better Homes movement interrupts this vicious circle, so that health conditions tend to improve progressively. Cheerful, attractive, well lighted, well ventilated and well planned houses furnish ideal conditions for the retention and improvement of health. They furnish a great incentive to hygienic living and at the same time provide the physical surroundings necessary for its practice. I am heartily in favor of this movement."

FOR INACTIVE KIDNEYS

When the kidneys are in need of a good flushing take FOLEY PILLS, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys. They promptly and effectively flush the kidneys, increase their activity and bring pleasant relief. FOLEY PILLS, Dorchester, Iowa, writes: "I can truthfully say that FOLEY PILLS are the best I ever used. I had lots of trouble with my kidneys and liver; I couldn't lift anything my back was so weak. Every morning I was dizzy, could hardly walk, but now I feel fine." Sold everywhere.

The average length of life of a business man is said to be two-thirds that of a farmer.

SICKLY, PEEVISH CHILDREN

Children suffering from intestinal worms are cross, restless and unhealthy. There are other symptoms, however. If the child is pale, has dark rings under the eyes, bad breath and takes no interest in play, it is almost a certainty that worms are eating away its vitality. The surest remedy for worms is White's Cream Vermifuge. It is positive destruction to the worms but harmless to the child. Price 35c. Sold by Union Pharmacy.

Sharing in Florida's Prosperity

There are more opportunities today for profitable investment in Florida than you may find in any other section of the country. Shrewd business men in the north and south recognize this fact and are investing more and more money every year.

Opportunity lies on every side here. It finds its more fertile field where growth and development center. It has singled out Miami in a very especial manner, because that city is one of the fastest growing in the country, and because the spirit of Miami keeps step with its tremendous growth.

Coral Gables leads every section of Miami in rapidity of growth, beauty of development, in its power and ability to do great things in a short time. Coral Gables, Miami's greatest suburb, therefore rivals Miami itself in the attention it compels for serious minds in every section of the country.

Investors at Coral Gables are not all wealthy men—far from it. Anyone with a little money can buy property here for a small initial payment. Easy monthly payments will care for the balance. Before you have completed payments on the property it will have increased greatly in value.

Before you invest at Coral Gables inspect the property carefully. Subject its claims of superiority to the most rigid test. Compare it with the best that you know of. Come to Coral Gables on one of our special free sight-seeing tours, and then decide in your own interest whether you can really afford to pass up the splendid opportunity for investment that it offers. May we reserve a seat for you in the next bus leaving this city for Coral Gables?

MADISON GARDEN CONVENTION

Platform Adopted and La Follette Planks Rejected
publican National Convention assembled for their first taste of a night session.
Consideration and adoption of the party platform was the order of business. There was a prospect of a flurry or probably a fight with the presentation of the La Follette planks from the Wisconsin delegation.
It was not unlike a night at the opera for Cleveland folk who have been used to coming to entertainments in the public hall. Delegates and visitors in evening dress were sprinkled through the sections on the floor and the great banks of seats in the galleries. Women delegates and visitors made the most of the occasion and many came in evening dress.
The band and the great organ alternately furnished the music. Over in an inconspicuous corner of the hall, enclosed in a glass box was a young man with a great audience. He was the radio announcer and long before the convention came to order he was speaking to millions of listeners from Cleveland.
As usual the convention was slow in assembling. The hour of 3 o'clock fixed for the opening, passed with only a corporal's guard of delegates on the floor and with the galleries dotted only here and there with spectators.

Painleve May Be Named Successor French Executive

both houses of parliament this afternoon. Until the election of a new chief executive by a joint meeting of the chamber and senate Friday the executive power will be wielded by the acting ministry under M. Francois-Marsal.
M. Millerand is the sixth of the eleven presidents of the third republic to leave office by resigning, but in no previous case has the means of bringing this event about been so brusque. (Edouard Herriot, as head of the new majority of the Left, emerging from the recent elections, refused to accept M. Millerand's offer of the premiership. The new majority demanded that the president resign as he was not in sympathy with its aims.)
When the Versailles congress Friday elects M. Millerand's successor, the Francois-Marsal ministry will resign.
Saturday is expected to see Herriot again called to the Elysee palace and tendered an invitation to form a ministry, which this time he will accept with alacrity.

Rules To Overcome Electric Shock Are Given Medical Men

CHICAGO, June 12.—The rules for first aid in cases of high voltage shock are based on the fact that the victim's lungs become paralyzed, and success in saving life depends upon keeping up artificial respiration until normal breathing is resumed. Wills MacLachlan of the National Electric Light Association, told the American Medical Association's convention today.
"Since cases are on record of lives saved after three and one-half hours of artificial respiration, four hours of effort are recommended before artificial respiration is given up," he said. "The rules are as follows:
"The victim is cleared from the current, either by shutting off the current, or pulling him away with the aid of rubber gloves, dry clothing, or sticks of wood, to serve as non-conductors. If it is necessary to cut the wire, a hatchet or implement with a wooden handle should be used and the operator should turn his face away to avoid the flash. The patient is then laid face down, with one arm up and the other supporting his face so that the mouth and nose are free for breathing. Artificial respiration should be begun at once, while an assistant loosens the clothing necessary, holds ammonia to the victim's nose and keeps him as warm as possible. If the victim must be moved, this should be done in a reclining position, and the artificial respiration should be kept up. After he resumes breathing, he should be watched, and if he stops, artificial respiration should be resumed. The prone pressure method is that in which the man patient and presses both hands on the small of the victim's back, releasing the pressure rhythmically every two or three seconds, and imitating his own breathing as much as possible.

Americans Aid Eastern Europe to Settle Memel Problem, Old Incentive to War; Davis Credits Peace Victory to League

NORMAN H. DAVIS ARTHUR BULLARD

Norman H. Davis, Under-secretary of State during the Wilson administration, has recently completed service as chairman of a commission of the League of Nations which succeeded in throwing open to world traffic the River Niemen, an important waterway of eastern Europe and a likely subject of war for several years. Shown with Mr. Davis is Arthur Bullard, editor of "Our World" and noted writer on international affairs, who acted as Mr. Davis' assistant in the painstaking investigation conducted by the commission.
Mr. Davis believes, according to statements he made on his return to New York, that the permission gained from Lithuania for the Poles to use Memel, the port at the mouth of the Niemen, has averted a more than possible international conflict and is typical of the kind of help that the League, in which the United States, can offer to the world.
"I am not and have not been," he said, "and it should not be necessary to say that Mr. Wilson was not—in favor of making any commitments ever to use force in an unknown contingency. I think that if the United States were in the League they would not be any less necessary to use force, but if occasion should ever arise it should, of course, be left entirely to Congress to determine whether or not we should use it. But one of the most remarkable developments of the last two or three years is the realization, to which I have referred, that the force of public opinion is much more effective than any other force. That is the power the United States would bring to Geneva."
"I do not for a moment believe that this country should try to run the world or to interfere in the internal affairs of the nations of Europe or elsewhere, but I do believe that our stake in the world peace and progress is so great, to say nothing of any moral duty, that we can not afford to be absent when other nations are sitting around a table dealing with any questions relative to peace and prosperity, which are of such vital importance to us. We can not afford not to throw all the weight of our moral influence toward securing the aims for which we entered and fought the war, and those aims can best be secured by co-operating in the maintenance of rules of conduct among nations, whereby disputes may be settled by the orderly processes of negotiation, conciliation and courts of justice."
"There is every evidence that the vast majority of the American people are strongly in favor of outlawing war. It does not seem to be fully recognized as yet, however, that the covenant of the League, which has now become a law for fifty-four nations of the world, does outlaw war for at least nine months over a given controversy, until the League has had an opportunity to bring about a conciliation. The League may not prevent all wars, but it can, by this means, prevent a lot of wars."
