Crystal Lake swimming?

Lake Mary eyes long range plans

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY - Several approaches Lake Mary may make toward reopening Crystal Lake as a public swimming area are under consideration.

The possibilities surfaced as as management personnel from the engineering firm of Dyer, Riddle, Mills & Precourt, Inc., made a final presentation of their master infrastructure study during a city commission meeting.

The report, requested by the commission on May 17, 1990, is aimed at informing the city of problems and possible solutions regarding such matters as the stormwater, street system and lake water quality of the city's infrastructure.

Of special concern was Crystal Lake, where the city's former public swimming beach was closed down five years ago by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services for a number of

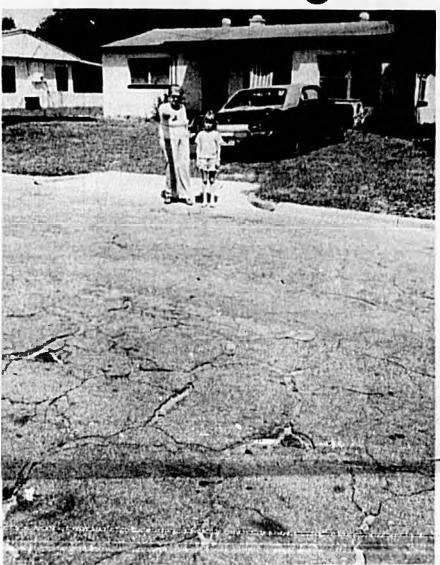

Ron Ferland, DRMP's project manager led off the Thursday-evening presentation. Ferland said some of his group's tests, especially for Crystal Lake, showed it was bad while others showed it was good. "It ended up about 50 percent each way," he said, "some of our results were incompliance, while others were out."

The two steps Ferland suggested the city should take to enable the lake to be reopened for use were to petition the Department of Housing and Rehabilitative Services to change their standards required on that lake, and to evaluate possible treatments of the actual beach area. He said he could not find any substantial damage from waste materials or sewage in the lake, and that he found the it contained ingredients of a normal ecological nature.

Studies on all eight major Lake Mary lakes had been made on such matters as the location, drainage, nearby homes and construction and the amount of pollution in each lake.

Ferland reported that overall results of the study, undertaken during this past year, showed

Sanford weighs repaving of streets

SANFORD - If the City Commission approves a request from the Public Works Department at tonight's meeting, there will eventually be a number of city residents and motorists who will be happy with repayed streets on which to drive.

Four main areas are being recommended for complete repaying. They include 4th Street from Mellonville to Locust Avenues: both Laurel and Elm Avenues from 3rd Street to 13th Street, and a patching job on S.R. 46. West of Poplar Avenue.

All four of the city streets to be considered have been in need of repaying for a number of years, and while they have all been previously listed on city plans in the past, they had to be deferred because of pending Utility System construction. The utility work however, has now been completed.

Ruth Bennett, who has fived on 4th Street for the past 35 years, said she will be very happy if it is finally repayed properly. "Ever since I've lived here, it's been in poor condition," she said. "The city comes armind about once a year, plugs up a few holes, then within a couple of weeks, the paving materials dry out and the holes come right back."

Public Works Director Jerry Herman gave assurance that this orly not be just a patching of holes. rather it will be a complete repay ing. The various projects will receive a total of 22 036 square yards of paving materials, plus almost the same amount in milling. When current pavement is dug up. crushed and used for a base on which to apply the concrete, the process is called milling

Herman said if the City Commission approves the projects, there is at present, no specific starting time for the repaving projects, but he added. "It should get underway in the very near future, and will probably take only a couple of weeks to accomplish."

One street that has long been the subject of complaints about its condition is not on the list. Seminole Boulevard, along the lakefront, is full of holes, uneven in many places. and badly in need of a complete reworking.

Sanford City Manager Bill Stinmons said Seminole Boulevard cannot be repaired as easily as the other streets. "It would have to be dug up and completely redone in order for it to be done properly," he said. Simmons, a member of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce said the chamber, following surveys and extensive committee work, has placed Seminole Boulevard as a number one priority project in an effort to get it rebuilt and repaired. He said he expected it wouldn't be too long from now before it comes about.

Herman said the cost for the new paving will be funded by Local Option Gas Tax revenues, and will be done by Seminole County personnal without the need, to hire. any outside contractors

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.in. at City Hall, 300 N. PArk

HRS working on new breath analysis rules

By Associated Press

ORLANDO - Central Florida attorneys are successfully using the lack of state standards for breath analysis tests, one of the best weapons against drunken driving, to defend their elients.

Since January, five judges in Orange County have sided with defense attorneys. Prosecutors there have appealed the decisions.

If upheld by the appellate courts, the rulings would require prosecutors to present costly expert testimony to prove the machines are reliable.

"The practical effect is that state attorneys are not going to be willing to make an extensive showing of proof in every case." said Orange County Judge Stephan W. Carter, who made the initial ruling in January. "They have limited funds and thousands of DUIs.

The Issue, meanwhile, has spread to the Tampa Bay area, where a Hillsborough County judge is expected to hear arguments April 1. A date has not been set in two similar cases in Pincilas. The breath analysis device tests exhaled breath to measure the amount of alcohol in the body. A person must blow into the machine for seven seconds. In Florida, a percentage of 0.10 is consider high enough for a conviction of drunken driving.

Attorneys are arguing that Florida health officials have failed to compile statewide testing standards for the machines, raising questions about the accuracy of their results.

Law lets criminals hide convictions

ST. PETERSBURG - Tens of thousands of people in Florida are hiding their criminal backgrounds from police, employers and potential victims, thanks to a state law that lets them deny they were ever arrested.

A six-month investigation by the St. Petersburg Times found that at least 68,000 people in Florida since 1974 have had criminal arrest records scaled, according to a computer analysis by the newspaper.

While other states strictly limit what crimes can be sealed, or require defendants to prove they have reformed. Florida's statute is full of loopholes, the Times reported Sunday in a copyright story.

In Florida there's no wait and anything can be hidden charges of rape and robbery, murder and arson, forgery and fraud. People can get cases sealed even if they plead guilty. It's a law, critics say, that may actually encourage crime, not deter

Legislature to tackle budget, tax

TALLAHASSEE - House and Senate committees plan to hammer out the details of their versions of a $28 billion budget this week, laying the groundwork for the one critical task facing the Legislature each year.

But as the annual 60-day legislative session moves into its fourth week, lawmakers will also be considering other high-profile issues.

Topics expected to come up in committee include the creation of a new department of elderly affairs, the appropriation of $91 million to provide health care for poor pregnant women and the modification of Florida's $25,000 homestead exemption.

The first award to be presented on tonight's show (9 p.m. EST on ABC-TV), following a production number with Jasmine Guy and Steve LaChance, will be for best supporting actress. The announcement in this category could be the first indication of a "Dances

With Wolves" rout. Coming into the 63rd Annual

Academy Awards, Kevin Costner's epic. Western had 12 nominations, the most of any film. With a best supporting actress victory for Mary McDonnell, "Dances With Wolves" may collect a wave of momentum and never look back until it gallops off with the best picture Oscar.

Here, then, is a viewer's guide to the Oscar telecast, based on a script subject to change, with pivotal moments described. Plan refrigerator and bathroom visits accordingly.

Stay tuned to see if Madonna does anything nasty while singing "Sooner or Later" from Award No. 1: Best Supporting Actress. Miss McDonnell (Stands With a Fist in "Dances With Wolves") is not the clear favorite for supporting actress, but her competition is weak. The upset pick would be Whoopi Goldberg. the dimestore psychic of Award No. 4. Best Supporting Actor. Graham Greene (Kicking Bird in "Dances With Wolves") is nominated. Even if Bruce Davison wins for his depiction of a selfless care-giver in "Longtime Companion." this should not be seen as a "Dances With Wolves" defeat.

Award No. 10, Film Editing. This category can be a beliwether, and "Dances With Wolves" is in it. Last year, "Born on the Fourth of July" won both here and for best director for Oliver Stone. It lost best picture to "Driving Miss Daisy." Upact specials: "The Godfather Part III" and "GoodFellas."

Reba McEntire, who lost most of her band in a recent airplane crash, is set to follow with her version of "I'm Checking Out" from "Postcards From the Edge." This might be the evening's most emotional moment.

Award No. 15: Cinematography. Last year's winner was "Glory."

State probes Southern Bell's customer refunds

Associated Press

MIAMI - Four state agencies are investigating Southern Bell for allegedly withholding mil. Custome lions of dollars owed to custom. refunds. ers for out-of-order phone lines.

Just last month, Southern Bell agreed to pay a $4.9 million settlement for shortchanging pay phone commissions.

Three former Bell employees have told investigators that Florida's largest phone company systematically falsified its records to show it didn't owe refunds on the out-of-order lines. The Miami Herald reported Sunday.

The former employees said fabricating records was a routine practice throughout the state. Southern Bell has confirmed. some records were falsified in Dade County, company spokesman Spero Canton sald. The utility has launched its own inquiry. "We're trying to find out the validity of this," he said. Canton also noted that the accusations come from fired employees; one was dismissed for medical reasons, the other two for alleged misconduct. Frank Falsetti and Nancy D'Alessio, who worked for the phone company in Dade, told investigators in January that complaint handlers routinely were ordered to fabricate reports to show problems were corrected promptly.

Sometimes, they said, workers lied and reported that customers weren't home or that the repairmen weren't allowed inside - when all along customers were waiting for help.

Falsetti sald he handled customer complaints about phone lines used for burglar alarms. He said he was ordered by his boss to report that service problems were corrected right away even though they were fixed much later.

"The recorded elapsed time would only be about five minutes, a physical and mechanical impossibility." Falsetti said in a sworn statement. "We were instructed to do this even if a call came in at midnight when no employees were working. This falsification procedure cheated customers out of refunds. The Florida attorney general, the statewide prosecutor, the Department of Law Enforcement and the public counsel are trying to determine how much money is owed and whether criminal wrongdoing was involved, said Les Garringer, a senior assistant attorney general.

"We don't know the extent of the unpaid refunds and manipulation of records," said Public Counsel Jack Shreve, whose office represents utility customers for the Legislature. "But this is not something inadvertent. It did go on for a period of many years. We're looking for how high in the company people knew about it." It's been going on in South Florida for at least 10 years. D'Alessio and Falsetti said.

Donald Babair, a former service manager in Orlando, told a state investigator in January that the same things happened in his Central Florida service district.

Temperatures indicate previous day's high and evernight low to 8 p.m. EST.

State targets high-risk employers

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — The state is moving ahead with work on a project that was supposed to be finished 15 months ago — making a list of Florida companies with the worst safety records.

In 1989, state lawmakers gave the Department of Labor and Employment Security until January 1990 to compile the list. The goal was to monitor highrisk employers until they reduced work-related injuries.

Lawmakers also gave regulators new authority to inspect private companies and fine them if necessary, a power they had not had before.

The measures were a response to skyrocketing workers' compensation insurance rates. Rates for everyone are going up in part because of a small percentage of companies with bad records. according to regulators and

But Marsh said he hopes that soon he'll find a way to fairly pick companies that need help. His office began reviewing 1989 through the old list and contact accident data this month.

Early last summer, the accident-list materials were shipped to a new safety research office in Miami. At the time, officials said the project was moved to take advantage of researchers at universities in the Miami area.

But the safety office was closed last month after developing only a preliminary list.

Yet late last spring, members of a state workers' compensation oversight task force reviewed an earlier preliminary list of high-

Paying dues

It took Japan's Parliament longer to approve the country's financial contribution to the Persian Gulf War than it did the allied coalition to fight and win It. After weeks of bitter legislative and public resistance and some last-minute horse-trading, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu won approval recently of a measure authorizing payment of nearly $9 billion toward the war effort. Together with last year's pledge, Japan's total commitment now approximates $13 billion.

The sum is impressive, but it came grudgingly from a country that's easily able to afford it, that gets more than 70 percent of its oil from the Persian Gulf and that wants none of the money to be used to defray costs of the fighting, preferring, instead, that it be used only for postwar reconstruction. Japan has not been a cheerful giver.

There are complex reasons for this, largely growing out of World War II's disastrous results for Japan, which persuaded most Japanese to reject militarism. In the Gulf crisis, however, this principle has been stretched so far that neither non-combat military units nor even medical teams went to the Gulf, facts not lost on a U.S. Congress alredy spoiling for a fight with Tokyo on a number of trade issues.

Most Japanese are very sensitive to this problem. Some Japanese firms reportedly are hesitant even to seek reconstruction and supply contracts in the Gulf now that the war is over, for fear of looking like crass opportunists. And Japanese political leaders now say that they recognize that political responsibility goes with economic power Whether that recognition is translated into policy and practice remains doubtful.

A similar reluctance has been evident in Germany, where, despite majority support for the allies, anti-war and anti-American sentiment are voiced by substantial minorities. After long hesitation. Bonn has roughly matched Tokyo's financial pledge. More important, Germany sent an anti-aircraft contingent to Turkey and allowed U.S. forces to use Germany as a prime staging area; now, Bonn is engaged in postwar diplomacy and its military is helping to clear mines from the Persian Gulf. All that is a far cry from Tokyo's dithering.

What's troubling is that it's late in the day for two rich, globally engaged countries still to be holding back in the global arena, as if somehow they were exempt from far-off crises. History has something to do with that, of course, but so do smugness and hypocrisy.

If Germans and Japanese don't want the United States to be the only world power, or don't like the way it wields that power, they ought to say so forthrightly.

Vietnam vs Iraq

As the wife of a Vietnam veteran, I can sympathize with the feelings expressed on the evening news recently, by some area Vietnam veterans. They are threatening to boycott or protest parades and homecomings for veterans of the Persian Gulf War.

The Vietnam veterans were cheated of proper welcoming and homecoming. They were heroes and were ignored, forgotten and left to deal with the anguish — alone.

I know the hell we went through for the first 14 years of our marriage when my husband wouldn't discuss his involvement in the Vietnam War; he was ashamed of having served. There have been years of nightmares, but a visit to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial "Moving Wall" in Orlando three years ago, began to change all that. Attending the Brevard Vietnam veterans reunions have been even more of a healing experience.

Now, exactly 20 years later — he'll be coming home from another war. I can't bear to think of him coming home to the kind of reception he and other Vietnam veterans received. He has fought with this issue over and over in his head. His heart told him it was his duty to serve in the Persian Gulf but his mind told him he would be a fool to do it again - for an ungrateful nation. Somehow, in the back of his mind...the fact that he truly was proud to be an American always surfaced. His unit was called to active duty and he went. I have constantly assured and reassured him that his homecoming would be very different this time.

We can't change what happened 18-20 years ago, but we can do what is necessary to assure it never happens again - in our lifetimes. Two wrongs don't make a right. We do not need another generation of troops (some a little older) coming home from the desert sands where they put their lives on the line - to protest over a hero's welcome - the welcome they so justly deserve - as did the troops coming home years ago.

I beg these Vietnam veterans to come out in full force - and welcome these troops home - so they can keep them from the kind of suffering they know all too well. There could be some healing in their efforts - knowing they were part of a generation that cared.

The oddest thing about the SMSU furor was another controversial incident, which had been reported as follows:

A couple years ago, a former SMSU dorm resident assistant was shot to death in a woman's apartment where he was hiding, masked. When the woman entered her bedroom, the man attacked her - and her boyfriend shot him. The woman's apartment had shown signs of a break-in the previous night, so her boyfriend had accompanied her home armed with a gun. In the aftermath, information was leaked to the press from files SMSU had kept on the attacker.

Think tanks enhance states

BELLEVUE. Wash. - When John Carlson and several other young political activists organized the Washington Institute for Policy Studies in the mid-1980s, their first project was to be an analysis of the state's finances from a conservative perspective.

They logically assumed that a document detailing the yearly budget of Washington's state government would be readily available to the public - but they were repeatedly rebuffed when they sought to obtain one.

"Initially, we thought the difficulty we were encountering was caused by a typically sluggish bureaucracy," says Carlson, now the institute's president. "Then we realized that there was no unified budget document anywhere inside state government."

The product of that unnerving experience was the institute's first major public policy proposal - that Washington's taxpayers be provided with detailed information about the state's annual budget.

Since that time, the institute has dealt with dozens of other matters, ranging from education to regulation. "But we stress economic issues." says Carlson, noting that the state budget remains of paramount importance. The Washington Institute typifies an especially salutary development in recent decades - the establishment at the state level of issue-oriented "think tanks" (both conservative and liberall that once existed almost exclusively in Washington, D.C.

Indeed, the nation's capital is home, to dozens of organizations such as the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, Economic Policy Institute. Brookings Institution. Heritage Foundation and American Enterprise Institute.

But they focus on federal issues in an era when governance has become decentralized. Thus, the new groups have found a receptive constituency among people throughout the country concerned about state and local matters ranging from taxation to con-

It operates research projects dealing with Issues such as recycling, pesticide contamination, air pollution, voter registration and consumer protection. Typical of the professionally researched studies it has produced is an analysis of the state's hazardous waste

Another liberal research group. Washington Fair Share, is also based in Seattle but maintains additional offices in Tacoma. Yakimaand Spokane. Among the issues upon which it places a high priority are health care, education and the state's minimum wage. Just as the Washington Institute was founded by three young conservatives in 1985, Washington Fair Share was established by three young liberals in 1983. (The older Washington PIRG was launched in 1976.)

Washington Institute typifies an especially salutary development.

To finance their operations, the two liberal organizations rely primarily upon small contributions collected in door-to-door canvasses of homes across the state. Their conservative counterpart obtains most of its financing from targer donations made by foundations established by corporations or wealthy indi-

But their work remains unfinished. "There still is no requirement for a synthesized state budget." says Carlson. "We're insisting on that. With all these smart people around, why is there so much chaos and disorganization?"

Iraq owes billions for farm products

WASHINGTON - Saddam Husseln lost the Persian Gulf War, but in the process he proved that there is such a thing as a free lunch. Saddam stopped paying his commodity credit bill to the United States when Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2 - a credit that should never have been extended in the months leading up to the invasion. The bottom line is, Iraq got the U.S. agricultural exports it ordered and America didn't get its money. The outstanding bill at the Agriculture Department (USDA) is $2 billion.

The USDA should not have been surprised that Saddam turned out to be a bad risk. The General Accounting Office had been the USDA about that possibility for years. it doesn't take a Monday-morning quarterback to wonder why Iraq was given billions of dollars in credit - 25 percent of all the credit extended by the export guarantee program. There were plenty of signs even before the invasion that the bills might not be paid.

The USDA should not have been surprised.

Allan Mendelowitz, the GAO investigator who looked into the credit given fraq, says it was simply a bad loan. The USDA did a risk analysis, rated fraq as a "reasonable risk" market in 1989, and then continued to extend credit. If Saddam had gone to one of Charles Keating's high-flying savings and loan offices, he couldn't have gotten an easier loan with fewer questions asked.

The Commodity Credit Corp. is a federally insured loan program to help foreign countries buy U.S. farm products. A country places an order, a bank loans them the money to pay for what they buy and then the federal government guarantees that the loan will be paid if the foreign nation defaults. The USDA assesses the credit risk of the countries, and another federal board, the National Advisory Council decides whether the credit policy is in syne with U.S. foreign policy. Our reporter Jonathan Ullman looked into the handling of Iraq under that program. During the Iran Iraq War, the United States wanted to help Iraq. Iraq needed food but was short on cash (all those tanks cost money), so the credit program for fraq was born in 1983. Iraq became the 10th largest buyer of U.S. farm products — including buying 20 percent of American-grown rice in 1988 - using taxpayers' money. As Saddam's poor human rights record got longer, including the gassing of his own people, the State Department continued to insist that the United States had more to gain by maintaining a friendly relationship with Iraq. In September 1989, the USDA extended $30 million in additional farm loans to Iraq. but an internal USDA memo warned against issuing a press release about it. The fear was that if the USDA made a big deal about Iraq's credit, someone in Congress might come down hard on the whole guarantee program.

By the beginning of 1990, the bills were piling up. The general sales manager at the USDA. F. Paul Dickerson, wrote a memo to his boss acknowledging that the bills were high, but adding that to cut off fraq then would be taken as "unwarranted and an affront to their dignity," and that might prompt Iraq to stop paying anything. The USDA believed the best way to guarantee payment of the old loans was to continue giving fraq new ones.

When the USDA submitted a $1-billion credit proposal for Iraq to the National Advisory Council in 1990, the NAC finally got nervous. The Atlanta branch of an Italian bank was under investigation for allegations that it had loaned money to Iraq under the USDA program, but that not all of the money went for farm products. The NAC said Iraq should get only $400 million in credit.

Movies, books, prime time play to the dark side of an audience fascination with its dark side is an ancient and perannial phenomenon. However, some periods are more fertile than others. Judging by the spate of serial killers, vampires and psychopaths inhabiting today's books, films and TV shows, this seems to be one of those times.

By NANCY SHULIRS AP Special Correspondent

Had any good nightmares lately? Try seeing a movie. reading a best seller, or turning on the TV during prime time. Popular culture is unleashing a panoply of monsters, from serial killers to vampires to psychopaths, all playing to a bloodthirsty audience.

But what does that say about

The dark side has always held fascination; exploration of evil is as old as humanity. But horror also tends to be cyclical. flourishing at moments of acute anxiety. The current proliferation of dark themes in literature. television and film speaks volumes not only about who we are as consumers, but about the anxieties that define our times.

"Essentially, horror has little to do with fright," says scholar James B. Twitchell of the University of Florida, who says horror is to teen-agers what fairy tales are to children: education in the guise of entertainment. "Beneath the horror is a prescriptive text. From watching horror movies, adolescents learn to avoid pitfalls of dating and mating."

To some extent, horror is perennial. Each generation must learn its lessons of sexual initia-

But in an era of date rape and AIDS, with many people staying single into their 30s and beyond. sexual and reproductive worries aren't restricted to adolescents. People are looking for partners in a world in which making those connections is becoming increasingly difficult," says Harold Schechter, an English professor at Queens College. "There's a growing sense that you can't know anyone, that we're living in a world in which people wear masks."

This obviously is an anxious And Americans of all ages are out for blood. Given the buying power of American teen-agers, it's no surprise that NBC slotted gothic vampire soap opera "Dark Shadows" in prime time, there are no fewer than eight vampire movies in the works, and the novels of Stephen King and Anne Rice ("Interview With the Vampire". "The Vampire Lestat", "The Queen of the Damned") are best sellers.

"The period in human maturation when exploring darkness is an important way to control anxiety is adolescence," Twitchell says. "If you look at who is driving the pop culture markets mass-market books, blockbuster movies, and fringe and prime-time TV - you see that it is an audience of adoles-pushed aside other authors on the best-seller list. The levels of sophistication and subjects he addresses are levels of adolescent anxiety. It's what happens if you open that door, what will you see in that dark closet?"

Not all pop culture monsters are make-belleve. Adults' bogeymen are more flesh-andblood, outwardly indistinguishable from the rest of us. Hannibal Lecter, the seemingly urbane serial killer known as "Hannibal the Cannibal" in the movie "The Silence of the Lambs," is one such, and others are bound to follow.

"Killers are a personification of the world outside hearth and home, increasingly a place of peril." says Schechter, author of two books about serial killers. "Deviant" and "Deranged." They included fact-based dramas about a father who drives his daughter to murder, a domineering mother and her serial-rapist son, and a remake of "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?", a gothic tale of aging sisters, one helpless, one deranged.

Not exactly the Brady Bunch? In fact, they're wholesome family fare as reflected in a funhouse mirror. It stands to reason that they coincide with renewed emphasis on family life and traditional values. Schechter

U.S. closer c setting up Arab land base

by GEORGE ESPER AP Special Correspondent

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia - Gen. H. Norman chwarzkopf says the United States is closer than ever to establishing a permanent land base on Arab soil — a goal governments in the region Arab Boil blocked for many years.

The U.S. commander in the Persian Gulf War told reporters Sunday that the base would not include American ground forces.

He also said that the American troops who remain in the gulf will go home after a permanent cease-fire is signed with Iraq.

Iraq's government newspaper, Al-Jumouriya. on Sunday denounced the cease-fire terms set by the allies as aimed "at usurping fraq's sovereignly, mortgaging its will and holding its wealth hostage."

The U.S.-led coalition, which halted hostilities ast month after driving Iraq from Kuwait, says it will not sign a permanent cease-fire accord unless Baghdad destroys its chemical, biological and nuclear arsenals and agrees never to resume production of the weapons, among other condi-

Prisoner releases, however, continued. A Red Cross official in Riyadh said 1,000 fraqi prisoners of war traveled to the Saudi border post of Arar on Sunday and were handed over to Iraqi officials. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Also Sunday, hundreds of Kuwaiti soldiers who spent months in Iraqi prisons returned home to their war-wrecked nation, where they were rected by weeping relatives and celebratory ursts of machine gun fire.

Banks in the emirate opened Sunday for the first time since fraqi troops shut them down in December.

Thousands of cash-poor Kuwaitis lined up to et new Kuwalii currency, and then they went on hopping sprees at newly reopened stores.

Since Kuwait was liberated on Feb. 27, some U.S. forces have begun helping the Kuwaitis rebuild their nation.

Other American soldiers are occupying part of southern Iraq, where they are keeping an eye on Saddam Husseln's troops.

Schwarzkopf said the soldiers are not expected to remain in Iraq after a permanent cease-fire. But a permanent truce has been complicated by the rebellions by Kurds in northern Iraq and Shitte Muslims in the country's south.

Schwarzkopf said U.S. logistics troops could be in the gulf as long as eight to 10 months to help load up equipment, but that the vast majority of soldiers will be home before then.

Nearly 100,000 of the 540,000 American troops sent to the gulf in Operation Desert Shield have departed, the Central Command says.

The command, now based in Rivadh, plans to return soon to its headquarters in Tampa, Fla.

Congress regains life as war ends

By STEVEN KOMAROW Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Ready or not, like it or not, Congress seems to be happily getting back to normal.

Since the 102nd Congress convened in January. lawmakers have seemed consumed, overwhelmed by the war in the Persian Gulf.

Republicans spent their time attacking Democrats who voted against it. Democrats mounted their defenses and both sides patted themselves on the back for conducting such a serious debate.

President Bush's postwar speech to a joint session of Congress earlier this month may have provided the closure needed for the legislature to move on.

With passage last week of the spending bills to cover Operation Desert Storm, Congress showed itself ready to tackle other issurs.

Lawmakers gave final passage to a much-delayed $30 billion infusion of eash to settle the accounts of failed, federally in-provide drought aid to over the options and not the California, and OK'd observance basic vehicle. They picked some of Greek Independence Day on March 25. The Senate approved a slew of Bush's nominations. including former Florida Gov. Bob Martinez as Bush's drug policy director, and voted to give Gens. Colin Powell and Norman Schwarzkopf. Meanwhile, the debate on the legislation covering Gulf War the government to spend more costs showed little disagreement money on "enhancing" its on the military spending at gold medals to the war leaders.

The House passed a bill to purchase, lawmakers argued and rejected others, dickering all the way.

For example, the score at week's end was Wheat 1. Datry

Both of those agricultural sectors had amendments riding on the back of Desert Storm.

The wheat industry wanted exports, that is, having Ameri-

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - For a cause that sounds morally unassallable, the civil rights movement is finding the going difficult these days.

lts No. 1 goal, a new civil rights act, was vetoed by President Bush last year, with no discernible negative consequences for him. So advocates are trying again this year.

But there's an awful lot at stake - from the Democrats' control of the Senate to the credibility of the entire civil rights movement.

The politics of this legislation clearly come down to who does the best job of defining what it's about," said Democratic pollster Geoff Garin, who has polled for supporters of the bill.

Though the bill had wide support in Congress last year, winning a veto-proof margin this year won't be easy. The bill is intended to reverse a series of 1989 Supreme Court decisions that increased the burdens of proof on plaintiffs in jobdiscrimination suits.

That makes it areane. technical, difficult to understand and harder still to explain.

And opponents, who include the White House and Republican leaders, have distilled their argument to one easily understood word - quotas.

That's how Bush denounced last year's version and it's the word the bill's supporters are trying to avoid this year. The bill does not require quotas in hiring and promotion - indeed, they are fliegal. But opponents argue it would prompt employers to use them anyway to avoid job-bias suits.

"The Republicans think that if they can make the civil rights bill purely about race, and sort of win the argument that it is a quota bill, then they've got a great wedge to use against the Democrats." Garin said.

Democrats say they, too, reject quotas. But they acknowledge the potency of the other side's argument, and they have tried to shift the public debate by emphasizing another angle: the bill would increase women's rights by allowing them to collect damages, beyond the back pay now allowed, in sexual harassment and discrimination suits.

Information phone service controversial

By ROBERT NAYLOR JR. Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Until 1980 no one had ever beard of a telephone number with a 900 area code.

Then came an experiment by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and ABC. The televislott network asked its viewers to eall either of two 900 numbers to say whether they believed Jimmy Carter or Ronald Reagan had won a presidential debate.

It was the proverbial beginning of the end for Carter - who lost the unscientific poll and later the election to Reagan. But it mangurated the fastest growing and possibly most debated telecommunications service since Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone.

The 500,000 people who called that first 900 number paid 50 cents each for the call. Last year, millions of people called more than 13,500 companies with 900 numbers, spending, by some estimates, as much as $1 billion. Some of them weren't too happy with what they got in return At its advent, 900 service was "ballyhooed as having tremendous potential for offering all kinds of new information age services for consumers," said Gene Kimmelman of the Consumer Federation of America. "Unfortunately, for every opportunity, there seems to be some kind of shady practice that goes along with it

Lions-

Calapa struck out six and allowed no earned runs as Oviedo improved to 6.2 in the Seminale Athletic Conference.

"He's (Calapa) been pitching very steady," said Lion coach Mike Ferrell. "Nothing spectacular, he's just getting them out and you can't ask for anything more than that."

Doing the damage for Oviedo were Blanton (2-for-3, double), Pete Arcomone (2-for-3), Mark Bellhorn (2-for-1). Erik Jordan (1-for-1), Kevin Twiggs and Bubba Fore (1-for-3 each) Calapa (1-for-4) and Rufus Boykin and Miguel Rodriguez (one run scored each).

Providing the offense for the Greybounds, now 11-5 overall and 3-4 in the SAC, were Donny Bazler (2-for-4). Frank Harmer (1-for-2, double), Chad Stemer (1-for-3) and Doug Porter and Andy Spolski (both 1-for-4).

In Saturday's win, the Lions fell behind 3.0, then used a four-run second and a three-run fourth to go ahead 7-4. The Buccancers scored two runs in the sixth to get to within one but Blanton shut the door the rest of the way. Mainland was able to stay close because of sloppy fielding by the Lions, who committed five errors.

Ryan Alkire was the big gun for the Lions with a 3-for-4 day. Also contributing to the 13-hit attack were Jordan (2-for-2). Twiggs and Boykin (both 2-for-3). Fore (2-for-4, double). Arcomone (2-for-4) and Blanton (run scored).

Oviedo will face a stern test Friday when the Lions travel to Orlando to take on Dr. Phillips starting at noon. The Panthers are rated No. 4 in the Class 4A state poll after being rated as high as No. 2 in the nation

"We've got nothing to lose." said Ferrell. "It's a big game for us. It gives us a chance to show how good we are. It will be a good tuneup for the Colonial Tournament.

Also contributing were Kevin Driscoll (single, double), Dorn and Carry Stewart (two singles each), Sellers, Gonter and Lee Andrews (one single and run each) and Doug Koegler (single). Providing the offense for Grace and David Taylor (three singles and one run each). Paul Mock (two singles, run). Dave Ferrcau (two singles). David Samuel. equivalent fertilizer per 100 square feet. Fertilizer should be applied evenly, kept off the foliage and watered in. Daylilles can withstand dry conditions but will need to be watered during prolonged droughts. They grow well in sun or semi-shade.

Christian were Charlle Cutshall

When daylilles become so crowded that flower production is reduced it is time to divide them. Dig up the clumps and with a sharp knife, sever the rhizome between the fans of leaves. Leaves should be cut back to within 4 to 6 inches of the crown. Replant the divisions as described above.

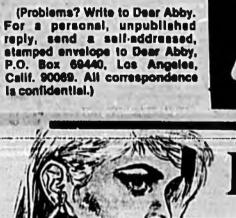

For the best display, plant 10 or more plants of the same color in informal groupings or plant daylilies in groups of 3 or more in bays of informal shrubbery. Daylilles, which range in size from 2 to 4 feet, have many other landscape uses and can add color and interest in many landscape situations.

Coccyx pain has

DEAR DR. GOTT: Since 1988 I've been plagued with coccyx tion on arthritis, I am sending pain. This condition followed ong periods of sitting while writing a book. There are no signs of pain when standing, walking, running or jumping only when lying on my back or sitting in a relaxed position.

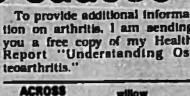

Why does the pain continue?
DEAR READER: Although the term "pain in the tail" is often reserved for the sensation we experience in dealing with unpleasant situations and irritating people, true coccygeal pain can be very uncomfortable.

Arthritis of the bones in the lower back can cause this pain; however, there are other causes, too. For example, the lower intestine may be the source of such pain. Internal hemorrhoids (swollen veins inside the anus), rectal infections and fissures (cracks) and rectal tumors must be ruled out in any patient who suffers chronic pain over the coccyx.

I remember once seeing a patient who had put up with excruciating pain for days. My first clue to his disorder was a tiny dimple, just below the coccyx, that seeped a little pus. Later, after the patient had been anesthetized, a surgeon discovered a huge abscess, which had arisen in a pilonidal sinus - a congenital malformation consisting of an abnormal tract or opening between the rectum and the skin. I was surprised the patient had not suffered symptoms earlier because, judging from the size of the abscess, it must have been there for months.

Coccygeal pain can also be caused by gynecological infections in women and, obviously, by injury to the coccyx itself. When one of my patients fell from a ladder and landed on his bottom, his coccygeal fracture caused pain on sitting until the

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

You are defending against a suit contract and decide to lead from a holding of three small cards. Which one do you lead top, middle or bottom?

If it is an unbid suit, even the experts cannot agree on the best choice. But if it is a suit partner has bid, there is no dissension. If you have supported your partner, lead high from three small; if you have not, lead low.

Enet-West used this un: derstanding to produce a had the club ace rather than the sparkling defense on today's hand. The one-club opening was Precision, showing 16 plus points. The one heart overcall was slightly unorthodox with dummy's club loser. To prevent only a four-card suit, but East this. West would have cashed wanted to help his partner find the best lead.

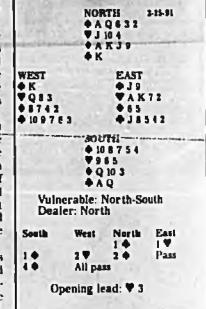

After supporting his partner. West led the heart three. Having the two, East then knew his partner held a heart honor, ten with his father, the late which had to be the queen. So he Oswald Jacoby) are now avail-won the first trick with the king and returned the two.

When returning your suit, you traditionally lead your original fourth highest. Therefore West knew that his partner had overcalled on a four-card suit. West won trick two with the heart queen and returned his last heart. Finally East produced the coup de grace, leading the 13th heart. West ruffed with the spade king, promoting East's Jack as the setting trick.

How did East know that South spade king? If South had the spade king, on the fatal fourth round of hearts he would rull high in hand and discard this, West would have cashed the club ace when in with the heart queen.
