John Meisch, Sr., W. M. Scott and W. A. Leffler, of Chase & Company, hold the opposite view, the marketing agreements are outlawed under the recent court ruling. Mr. Leffler said that his company has always been in favor of voluntary agreements, and he is of the opinion that there is ample legislation under which such agreement could be formed. Mr. Meisch said that he believes the court order vacates the agreement, and Mr. Scott, expressing his own view, said he could not see the point in endeavoring to amend it in the formulation of a new pact.

The meeting in Lakeland tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock before the Supreme Court, held down its decision yesterday, and the meeting will be held as scheduled. Mr. Scott and Mr. Whithurst both explained that committee members are really acting now as trustees of the old marketing agreement, expired on Dec. 1. The business of the old committee will be wound up a

Looking Ahead

Planning for the future is an essential of the telephone business if the service is to be adequate, for a telephone system cannot be built overnight.

Commercial engineers must study each area today, predict what its increase or decline in population will be several years in the future, and then estimate accurately how much telephone plant will be needed to serve the community.

Southern Bell and the other Bell operating companies also forecast their needs for apparatus and supplies quarterly during the year. This enables the Western Electric Company to buy raw materials and schedule its manufactures evenly over the year.

In the Bell Laboratories, scientists are constantly developing new, faster, more economical telephone apparatus.

This looking ahead is one of the factors which have caused Bell System telephone service to become acknowledged as the world's best.

You, too, should look ahead. In your business, it may be that improved conditions indicate the need for an additional telephone line. In your home, you may do without a telephone for a while—but when an emergency arises, the telephone has to be there before you can use it. Have your telephone put in now.

For information about modern, low-cost telephone service, call the telephone Business Office.

Celery growers were several weeks ago asked to sign a new marketing agreement, but not enough signatures were obtained to put it into effect.

Citrus Pact Out WINTER HAVES, Jan. 2 (AP)—Plans for a federal marketing agreement for the Florida citrus industry were well under way, it was learned last night, when the Supreme Court decision invalidating the Agricultural Adjustment Act was handed down.

The Senator S. L. Holland of Bartow, a leader in effecting the basis of new dispatches outlining the decision, the lack, as if the industry will have to rely on voluntary action.

At Auburndale, Chairman L. P. Kirkland of the Florida Citrus commission said the group was to have discussed a proposed agreement at its next meeting Jan. 9.

The commission recently agreed to a proposal of Governor Shultz to act as a control committee should a marketing plan be put into effect.

No Fan Dance For CCC Boys, WPA Promise To Taxpayers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. Harry I. Hopkins' Works Progress Administration wants all taxpayers to get this straight—none of their hard-earned $1,000,000,000 work relief money is going to aid needy fan dancers.

The case in question popped up in Minneapolis in the person of Miss Ruby Egan, a smooth, 17-year-old brunette who had been supplying the "hot club" for a night club floor show there.

The police caught her on the story goes, with a raid. The agent said Miss Egan had been doing her work "without a ticket" and that she had been paid for the job, the story isn't entirely true. He added the WPA should then look up and how Mr. Hopkins was sending money to her for making work for her boys who needed it.

Miss Egan, the story goes, got on the government payroll. She was a girl of 17 and her fans out on the civilian conservation corps boys, and only the boys.

A Minnesota paper reported her success. Her party was on the front page with the caption: "Federal Fan Dancer No. 1." Sally Rand had a real competitor.

Representatives from Kansas, West Virginia, Oklahoma and Sanford, Chamber of Commerce will meet in the Chamber of Commerce building in Sanford tomorrow afternoon to discuss State Road No. 1.

Justice Daniel, 88, of Tallahassee, and his brother, William, 82, and William, 80, estimate that together they have drunk 94,700 glasses of wine in the last 60 years.

apply to the WPA for a job, but she wasn't eligible. You had to be on relief rolls to work under the program, and she hadn't been receiving any federal dole."

Civilian Conservation Corps headquarters didn't want any part of the story. One official was emphatic in saying: "It's none of our business. If there's a fan dancer working for the government she's on the WPA and not the CCC payroll."

"We do have some entertainers in our camps, but they're all furnished by WPA from the needy actors. Most of the boys they do are from Shakespeare. It's probably true—but don't use my name—that the boys would welcome a fan dancer in a change."

Works Progress officials in Washington were a little aghast. After telephoning to WPA headquarters in Minneapolis they made this statement:

"It just isn't so. There's not a bit of truth to it. Miss Egan did not work for the WPA."

KU KLUX KLAN

Wherever seeing we also are commended about what so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.—Hebrews 12:1

An one newspaper puts it, when better flights are made Lindbergh will make them.

This is about the time of year that we finally get used to writing it 1936.

Haven't seen much of the war news lately. There's been too many wars at home to read about.

They say there are more tourists in Miami this winter than at any time since last winter. It's always June in Miami.

An exchange suggests that these people who are criticizing government expenditures are just a lot of fuss-budgers.

Lotsa people are eagerly awaiting the time when AAA will pay farmers for not raising parasites.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Dallas Traffic Committee hopes to convince motorists that accidents are avoidable. Well be content if they realize pedestrians are.—Dallas News.

Dictator Gomez of Venezuela paid off the national debt of that country. But he was a pro-War dictator, not up to modern tricks.—Chicago News.

However, there's the one to be said for the organization of a Third Party: It would give Mr. Borah another one to be against.—Miami (Ga.) Telegraph.

J. P. Morgan says it was the German submarines that got us into the last war. But what started German submarines sinking our ships?

Deposits of the First National Bank in Miami are up to 25 million dollars. At the depth of the depression they totalled scarcely more than half that sum.

If the Supreme Court judges keep whittling away at the New Deal, they may get it down to a while to the point where Constitutional Democrats will appear as K.

The way some of these Lindbergh critics talk you'd think the Federal flies ought to be considered and forced to come down to this country to stand guard.

The Liberty Leaguers are now roaring because the Government is too much, and the Government is too little. How many of them want a constitution?

The National Party's platform is to give the AAA the money that the AAA has been withholding from the farmers.

Founder's Day Exhibit

We heard the other day in connection with Founder's Day, a day to commemorate the founding of Sanford which will be celebrated on Feb. 8, that there will be an exhibit of old things in the possession of local families. This will not only be of great interest but will have a definite educational value because one of the easiest ways in the world to make history "come alive" is to see the things the people of the past had around them.

An old homespun quilt has about it some of the rugged fortitude and patience of the pioneer wife who wore it; a hand-turned work bench somehow retains in its solidity and sturdiness of construction a bit of the personality of the man who so carefully joined it; and a rare bit of fine lace brought down from Virginia to the Deep South in a leather bound trunk in an ox-cart has in its intricate pattern the charm of the nuns in the French convent who made it and the lovely women who have worn it.

It has been said that one can read the history of a race in its architecture, and this is equally true of its furniture, its attire, and its objects of art. The eighteenth century revival in England of the antique arts of Greece and Rome is reflected in the classic revival in America. The furniture of Duncan Phyfe, perhaps the best known of American cabinet makers, who lived during the first quarter of the nineteenth century, shows both our close relationship to England in the influence upon Phyfe's work of the English cabinet-makers, Hepplewhite and Sheraton, and the revolutionary spirit of the new republic in the numerous eagles that adorn his pieces.

It is a fine thing for the community to have an interest in and a knowledge of old furniture and old things for it gives an invaluable background that enables one to be an intelligent judge of beauty in line and form in the furniture of today, for except in the more extreme modernistic pieces, modern furniture is rarely original. It is based on the styles of the past, and if we can recognize the good in the old, we are then more qualified to judge the new. With such fine reproductions being made these days, there is plenty of opportunity for selecting just the piece from just the period that one wants.

Since the human mind is captivated by things smoothed down in the current of existence, a well worn piece of silver, a friendly old briar pipe, an antique rug with its colors blended and softened by age, we predict that the exhibit will have much of interest. Anyone who has any rare old pieces in his possession is urged to show them for Founder's Day is for every person in Sanford, whether his ancestors happened to be making interesting experiments in Florida with celery about the time of the Big Freeze, whether they were raising sugar cane in Louisiana, or occupying pulpits in New England.

Will Justice Awaken?

Applauding justice's awakening where reckless and drunken driving is concerned, the Florida-Times-Union is inclined to think that a curb will eventually be put on this class. On this question it declared recently: "Aroused public opinion throughout the country against the careless and reckless element among motor vehicle drivers is resulting in severe treatment of those who drive, or attempt to drive, while drunk. Several instances have been reported from Florida communities during the last few weeks in which drivers have been given sentences sufficiently severe to teach them that they must not sit behind the steering wheel while under the influence of intoxicants.

"One of the latest of these reports comes from Tampa. There a few days ago a judge sentenced a drunken driver to stay away from the wheel of a car for sixty days or pay a fine of $20. At first he was sentenced to pay $45 or serve 45 days in the stockade. Later, however, the case was reopened and the driver given a chance to get out for $25. The remaining $20 of the fine was suspended on the condition that he was to quit driving for sixty days.

"The Tribune reports that the sentence was taken as a short cut to the regulation of automobile driving by permit. It is further stated that if the plan works, and there is no good reason why it should not, it may be common practice for motorists to be taken out of the driver's seat by the courts for drunken, reckless or fast driving. Attention is called to the fact that the Department of Commerce grounds' aviation for violation of rules of the air, and there is every reason to believe that similar treatment of automobile drivers would be just as effective.

"In Charlotte, a judge sentenced a white man a few days ago to six months on the chalking gang for drunken driving, and another to sixty days for the same offense. In doing so, he declared that he would give a chalking sentence to every person in his court on a charge of drunken driving.

"I am merely reflecting public opinion," he stated in passing the sentences. "Some day soon the people of the state are going to demand that mandatory jail and road sentences be written into the law. Please make it clear that I am no crank on the subject of liquor. I simply do not believe that driving and drinking can be safely combined.

"That kind of treatment of traffic law violators may be severe, but it is the kind that will quickly solve the problem of traffic accidents. There are two things the driver does not want to suffer. One is to be denied the privilege of operating his car, and the other is the serving of a sentence in prison or on the chalking. Neither is a very general desire on the part of the public to see such drastic measures adopted unless they are the last resort in bringing the offenders to their senses. Apparently the assessment of fines will not accomplish the purpose, however.

"Something must be done to curb the evil of traffic accidents. Their toll is altogether too heavy, both in life and property. This fact is given strong emphasis by the records in several counties of the State of Florida during 1935. More than fifty lives were lost in this county, and more than 400 throughout the State. It is too high a price for the privilege of driving a car. In order that the reckless driver may be brought to a realization of the danger to himself and to others, without resorting to imprisonment, or on the chalking, without

The President's Challenge

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Jan. 8.—President Roosevelt has resumed the offensive. Of late he has, at times, seemed almost apologetic. By a dramatic stroke last Friday evening, he put his emphasis on the spot. They must answer "yes" or "no," or explain.

If the New Deal has retarded recovery, as they maintain, the President challenges them to introduce legislation to repeal it all. This, to say the least, is embarrassing strategy. Instead of Mr. Roosevelt being obliged to prove the success of each plank in his structure, he puts it up to the opposition to demonstrate the failure.

For instance, Mr. Borah will have to make clear why he favors social security, even to the inclusion of the Townsend Plan. Also, few Republicans would court defeat by declaring against the AAA, and most indicate why they favor it and yet are concerned for the sanctity of the Constitution.

But to admit any of the New Deal is good is to confess it may have helped, instead of retarded, recovery. Abraham Lincoln, when he freed the black man, used the same logic which Roosevelt used. Slavery, he argued, is either good or bad. If bad, abolish it—if good, why limit its field of operation? Why shouldn't it be spread to New England and the West?

There is this difference between the Lincoln and Roosevelt arguments: Slavery was just one thing—bad or good. But the New Deal is a great mixture of many things. Some may be good and others bad. The net result, however, has been a restoration of confidence and an increase in buying power, and in the use of it.

As I have gone about observing the 40 (more or less) alphabetic combinations in action, I have wondered just how we should have pulled through without them. What would the 600,000 young men leaving school during the past three years have done, had there been no CCC camps to absorb their explosive energy? What would have become of us, if the federal government had failed to provide homes and work in our cities for 600,000 transients?

How would the 40 million dependent upon charity for their very existence have conducted themselves without the CWA, FERA, PWA, WPA? Farmers were resisting foreclosures with violence. What would have been the outcome without government mortgage loans and prosperity restored them under the AAA?

There is much that economists must criticize in the New Deal. A program of high prices and scarcity is no way to make a success of the Machine Age. Yet these have been part of the New Deal pattern, and the pattern has brought better times to a great majority of our people.

The President's message was as weak on foreign affairs as it was strong on domestic. That part of his address will bring applause from Republicans and Democrats alike. But it certainly promises no hope of preventing war. Mr. Roosevelt's claim for superiority of the nations of the western hemisphere over those of the eastern (because all the former are at peace) is a bit humorous in view of two facts.

(1) It is a few short months since the ending of several years of blood conflict between Paraguay and Bolivia. (2) Peace was brought about largely by the efforts of nations in the eastern hemisphere by the use of their peace machinery—the World Court and the League of Nations.

Mr. Roosevelt proclaims that we shall continue, during negotiations, and resort to negotiations both shall maintain our peace. Trade in other words essential. This with plain supporters of all groups of citizens, manufacturers, of motor vehicles, is, however, will prolong the war, and in the use they would likely to secure our eventual participation.

The President stated that 95 percent of the population of the world were and desired peace. But he ignored the history of his own country, and the present here it fits in, this peace to end war. If they succeeded enough at their usual business to provide within the nation with surplus populations, and if they had the strength to force international justice, they can now, beyond the wishing stage, be establishing peace.

So long as the machinery of international justice is not working, the machinery of international peace is not working. The machinery of international peace is not working. The machinery of international peace is not working.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE LINDBERGHES

BY WALTER LEPPMANN

It has often been said that Colonel Lindbergh has stimulated publicity by his efforts to avoid it. There is, undoubtedly some truth in the observation. To the romantic fascination of his career there has been added his indomitable and therefore mysterious, distaste for the very celebrity, which most public figures crave. Thus he has never become ordinary and mostly has never been hated. He has remained the incomparable youth, so noble in bearing and so fearless, who rode across the skies and conquered the imagination of mankind. He himself has grown older and weary of adoration and the burdens of his fame. But all his efforts to become pedestrian, substantial and settled have been defeated. He could not become uninteresting. He has been unable to dissipate the legend of which he is the hero.

It may be that a shrewd and worldly manipulator of the arts of publicity would have known how to satisfy and quench the popular interest. There have been many before him who became spectacularly famous and then, whether they liked it or not, passed into obscurity. That anyone can deliberately pass into obscurity is not so certain. But if it could have been done, Colonel Lindbergh has not known how to do it. Why should he have known? Why should he have known not merely how to fly the Atlantic, but also how to outwit the tabloid press?

It is asking too much that a hero should also be an expert in the management of popular opinion. Indeed it may be doubted whether a man sophisticated enough for that would have dared to fly alone across the Atlantic Ocean. The ability to calculate the vagaries of mass sentiment is perhaps not compatible with an heroic life, or with a satisty, or with any other life in which genius is dominant. For those who are able to stake everything on purposes beyond themselves are not likely to know how they will look in the mirrors of popular opinion.

For Colonel Lindbergh the sweet taste of triumph achievement has become sour in his mouth. This is not at bottom the work of the criminal who murdered his son or of the gangster and cranks who have threatened him and his family. The Lindberghs have known how to bear all that with far more than ordinary composure. But they could not continue to bear, and no family could have borne the ingenious, ruthless and unending inquisition which commercialized pandering to the curiosity of the mob has laid upon their private lives. They have been the objects of a pitiless hunt. Nothing, it seems, was left undone which might dredge out of the slime of the animal passion all imaginable varieties of lunatic envy and resentment and lust against their fame, their fortune, and their happiness.

It is all very well to say that all prominent persons receive crank letters, and that they should not be taken too seriously. Unhappily the Lindberghs have the most poignant reasons to know what monstrous designs are being hatched by the sinister cunning of the uncivilized portion of mankind, what darkly hidden lunacies can be stirred up. If the American public knew in all its detail the story of how the Lindberghs have been hunted, they would be even more horrified than they now are. Few of the details have been disclosed. But one can guess the character of them from the latest incident which involved nothing less than the finding of the Lindbergh child, the child who returned safe, although for a newspaper. That is only one in a series of such incidents which have included attempts of forced entry into their home, attempts to bribe servants and domestics, even violent attacks and hospital attendances.

Whether they wanted to take a walk on the street, or go to the beach, or into a shop, they have had to be alerted. They have had to be escorted, to take elaborate precautions when they wished to do the most ordinary things, never knowing when some brass photographer or reporter, or some criminal or crank, excited by yellow publicity, was lurking in ambush to jump out at them. It has seemed at times as if they could never be safe and at peace unless when they were flying. Generally and by themselves over the great ocean and the waste places of the earth.

The Lindberghs, but it is to be said squarely, are victims from the tyranny of public journalism. They have had to be hounded to escape the evil of liberty make a fetish of order, of those who, seeing the horrors of unrestrained authority, will recognize no restraints on liberty. The civilized world has known since Greek thinkers first discovered the principles of human association, in a free society that the supreme principle is moderation in all principles.

The Lindberghs are the immediate victims of extrajudicial, cranks and journalistic pandering, but finally they are the victims of our failure to have made dominant in the moral traditions of this country the ancient wisdom of the humanists—that excess is the essential characteristic of vice and that in all truth, beauty and goodness there is proportion, moderation and restraint. That a journalist who respects his own liberties will respect the liberties of others, knowing that on any other terms his freedom will become a tyranny to his fellow men. There is no shorter cut than this to a remedy for the condition which drove the Lindberghs away. It cannot be remedied by catching a villain, by passing new laws, by ending communism, or on the front pages of the newspapers. It can be remedied only by a change of the public philosophy, by acquiring the conviction that such things as the Lindberghs have been subjected to are indecent, intolerable and inhuman.

That conviction must exist at the top among those who represent the good repute of our civilization, and it must be the real conviction of men who will respect the privacy of their own privacy, and will not encroach at the violation of the privacy of others. It is no use, for example, to deplore the departure of the Lindberghs and then to insist on some hydra emblem to stand for the death of someone else's private life. Genuine respect for human privacy does not exist unless one is ready to stand up for their rights, and those who have an infantile curiosity to learn of the facts of life, there has gone out of the public taste the capacity to realize and to mount the treatment of personal lives as a spectacle for the mob.

Dunn Re-Elected Mayor Of Sanford For Fourth Term

didn't feel I would get the same co-operation in the future I wouldn't take the office."

Upon vacating his chair at the council table, former Commissioner Spicer said it had been a pleasure to serve with the board the last seven years and to receive white-hearted co-operation from all those connected with the City government, and further Commissioner Lohman declared that he felt he could "say the same with all sincerity." Mayor Dunn replied that he felt he was expressing the opinion of all in saying he regretted to see Mr. Spicer and Mr. Lohman leave the board as they "have been of real service to the people of Sanford" and that he had been a "real honest-to-goodness pleasure" to serve with them. To this expression Commissioner Shinnholder added the observation "so say we all."

The Mayor then welcomed Commissioners Whitehurst and Dupree, saying to them that he hoped their association would be most pleasant and that the entire board will work together for the best interests of Sanford. Commissioner Whitehurst replied that he deemed it a pleasure to sit on the commission, "and I pledge you my hearty co-operation and support; do the best I can to help the City."

Missionary Society Has Meeting Monday

With about 50 members in attendance, the regular program meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church was held Monday afternoon at the church. An interesting pledge program was presented by Circle Number Five with Mrs. Porter Lansing in charge.

Mrs. R. W. Turner called the meeting to order after which the following program was given: Song, "Have Thine Own Way,"—Members.

Topic, "What Shall I Render unto the Lord,"—Mrs. Lapping. Hymn, "True Hearted, Whole Hearted,"—Members.

Poem, "Mrs. Lansing. Hymn, "The Church,"—Members. Scripture Reading,—Mrs. Lansing.

Meditation, "Try It and Prove It,"—Mrs. C. E. Williams. Hymn,—Members.

Prayer,—Mrs. John Alden Brown. Reading, "I Am Aware,"—Mrs. Lansing.

Prayer,—Mrs. Thornton. A play, "Intangible Legacies," was presented by Circle Number Five with the following members taking part: Mrs. C. E. McSharrow, Mrs. R. U. Hutchinson, Mrs. L. M. Swain, Mrs. W. C. Coleman, Mrs. John Clark, Mrs. Lansing, Mrs. C. E. Williams, and Miss Anna Lenora Brown.

After the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers," Mrs. Turner read an account of the past year's work and outlined plans for the new year. Plans for the Bible study were presented by Mrs. J. P. Hall, superintendent of study.

An instructive talk on Bible and mission study was given by Mrs. C. O. Bare, formerly of this city, now conference superintendent of missionary and Bible study of the Southern South Carolina Conference.

Mrs. H. B. McCall, Jr. read the minutes of a recent executive meeting and Mrs. F. P. Doss gave a short report. Pledge cards for the new year were distributed and Mrs. J. E. Preston presented the 1934 budget.

Mrs. Braxton Perkins, president of the N. W. Howard Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, stated today that the Sanford chapter will sponsor the presentation of "So Red The Rose," the play of the Old South to be shown at the Milledge Theater on next Wednesday and Thursday.

The movie was made from Stark Young's book that has won nation-wide acclaim from both the critics and the public. Mrs. William Massey, the president general of the U. D. C. of America at a showing of "So Red The Rose" in Hot Springs, Arkansas during the National U. D. C. convention gave her sanction to this play and asked that the Daughters throughout the country support it.

She said that the Hollywood producers had presented the script to her before the movie was filmed and asked if there was anything in it that might offend the southern people, and she assured the members of the convention that this picture gives a beautiful vivid, and never-to-be-forgotten picture of the Old South.

McKay then announced that Dr. Alder Haldy, extension lecturer on birds and conservation for the Audubon Society and the University of Florida, will speak at the school Thursday morning on the subject of the beauty of bird life.

The topic "Citizenship" was discussed by Mrs. J. C. Billo, Jr., and Mrs. Walter L. Morgan. Mrs. Morgan also read a paper written by Mrs. E. D. Brewster. Miss Fannie Biggers gave a poem "Safety."

Mrs. Smith Packed For State Club Job

Mrs. Ralph Austin Smith, former president of the Sanford Woman's Club and now vice-president of Section Seven of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs, was recommended today by the board of managers of the Woman's Club for the office of recording secretary of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs.

The recommendation was made at the monthly business luncheon of the club held today at noon at the club house on Oak Avenue and was endorsed by the entire membership.

Mrs. Smith was born in Marietta, Miss. and studied at the University of Alabama where she received a B. S. degree. Later she did graduate work at Denver University. She came to Florida in 1925 and made her home in Miami.

Her club work began when she became a member of the Junior Fortnightly Club in Marietta. She joined the Sanford Woman's Club in 1927 shortly after her arrival in this city, served as recording secretary in 1927, and in 1932 was elected president for a two-year term. She is now vice-president of Section Seven of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs.

No Dull Moments in "Whipaw" At Milne

As the first of the important news pictures which bring Myrna Loy to the screen after her European holiday, "Whipaw," in which she stars starring happily with Spencer Tracy, is showing tonight and Thursday at the Milledge Theater.

It takes its place among the most important war action pictures, "Whipaw" and Tracy present a stirring drama of unusual power.

In this new picture she portrays a fascinating character of an international spy of great shrewdness and Tracy in a supporting role will try to trap her through means. The whole story unfolds in the picture and the story makes a perfect combination for "Whipaw" entertainment.

The delightful picture which Myrna Loy has returned in "Whipaw" is a thrilling story of international espionage and action.

Eagle Scouts To Be Honor Guests Of Kiwanis Club

Announcement was made at today's meeting of the Kiwanis Club that all Boy Scouts of Troop 3—the Kiwanis troop—who attained the eagle rank last year will be guests of the club at its hall here in the Myrtle Hotel next Wednesday noon. Each boy is to be presented with a pin and permit set, and the presentation speech will be made by Karl Lehmann, former secretary of the Chamber of Commerce here, who will come from Lake county for that purpose.

Alden H. Haldy, former national representative of the Association of Audubon Societies but now extending leave for the University of Florida, was the speaker at today's meeting.

Guests at today's luncheon were Overstreet of Kissimmee, W. M. Garandson of Dade and E. R. Stave's Attorney Murray W. Stave and John Dighton of Sanford.

New Bridge Tourney Series Is Scheduled

It was announced today that a new series of duplicate contract bridge tournaments will be sponsored by the management of the Myrtle Hotel beginning tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock and continuing thereafter every Tuesday evening for a period of several weeks. Mrs. George E. Kinnard will serve as director.

The Mitchell movement, which was used for the first tournament and which awards prizes to both North and South and East and West winners, has been selected for the new tournament. Reservations may be made by telephoning the hotel.

"Win Me" is a novel story in large measure in this new picture. She brings to the role a lightness and a spontaneity that is delightful to witness, and sets the heart of her talking. Mr. Tracy, the story moves swiftly and surely to a totally unexpected and thrilling denouement.

With the star in a novel role including Myrna Loy, John Quinn, Robert Warwick, Irene Franklin, Lillian Lightfoot, Wade Boteler and many others, each of whom contributes an outstanding performance. Quite in particular, is especially effective as a character actor who is handled by the simultaneous arrival in his household of twin babies. Myrna Loy and Tracy, William Ingegnoli as a sinister doctor, is extremely effective.

'Musty Reaction' Hit By President; Diners Miss Part Of Speech

Main Address Given
By R. F. Maguire,
Local Men Sure Of Victory At Polls

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—Highlights of President Roosevelt's Jackson Day dinner address:

"I declare to you that the real issue before the United States is the right of the average man and woman to lead a finer and happier life.

"I speak tonight to this Democratic meeting in the same language as if I were addressing a Republican gathering, a Progressive gathering, an Independent gathering, a gathering of businessmen or a gathering of workers or of farmers.

"It is true that I received many honors at the hands of one of our great parties. It is nevertheless true that in the grave questions that confront the United States today, I, as President of the United States, must and will consider our common problems first, foremost and pre-eminently from the American point of view.

"The people of America know the heart and the purpose of their government. We will not retreat.

"Whatever may be the platform... the basic issue will be the retention of popular government—an issue fraught once more with the difficult problem of disseminating facts in the face of an opposition bent on hiding and distorting facts.

Andrew Jackson... was compelled to combat epithets, generalities, misrepresentation and the suppression of facts...

Victory Forecast By Party Leaders

Young Democrats
Hosts To Many At Dinner In Sanford

Implicit confidence in the belief that President Roosevelt will be re-elected by tremendous majorities next November was expressed by the several speakers who attended the Young Democrats' Jackson Day dinner in the Mayfair Hotel last evening.

Raymer Maguire, Orlando attorney, delivered the stated address to the assemblage, but he talked beyond the time allotted to him and President Roosevelt had started his address before Mr. Maguire had concluded and the radio was turned on.

The dinner was attended by 74 men and women, most of whom signed a scroll which is to be forwarded to the party's national headquarters, along with similar scrolls from Jackson Day dinners throughout the land.

Mr. Maguire described Jackson as "the greatest leader of men this country has ever known, with one possible exception—Franklin Delano Roosevelt," and said that the founder of the Democratic party made "equal rights to all and special privileges to none" the shibboleth of the party.

"There are forces at work now, though, he said, that would destroy the freedom dating back to the days of Andrew Jackson, and these are government by minority, excessive taxation and graft, he stated.

"We have a government of blocs, and these blocs trade and swap votes for the purpose of making raids on the treasury, not in the interest of equal rights to all but to gain special privileges for the few," Mr. Maguire declared.

"The Democratic party from its inception has been the opponent of excessive taxation," he continued.

'Will Not Retreat' Says Roosevelt In Opening Talk - On Political Campaign

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, clearly aiming across party lines, last night formally opened the Democratic presidential campaign with an assertion that "the basic issues will be the retention of popular government."

Referring briefly to the clashing philosophy in the Supreme Court's opinions on the overthrow of the AAA as likely to reverberate for years, and touching on the aims of his administration in general the President concluded: "We will not retreat."

Speaking directly to a Jackson Day gathering of nearly 2000 Democratic leaders and adherents, who paid $50 a plate for their dinners, and by radio to hundreds of others, the President urged all to get "at the truth" behind "the smoke of charges and countercharges of a national campaign."

"I know you will not be surprised by the lack of comment on (Continued On Page Two)
