Carter To Israel

Breakthrough In Mideast Talks

CAIRO (UPI) — In an apparent breakthrough toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, President Carter told the Egyptian Parliament today he has a commitment from both countries that the pact will be linked to a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

Egyptian officials said they are making tentative plans for a possible signing of a peace treaty Tuesday at Mena House in the shadow of the Great Pyramids just outside Cairo.

But on the occupied West Bank, only hours before Carter's scheduled arrival in Israel, government troops intercepted and killed a four-man Palestinian death squad trying to cross the Jordan, marring the peace mood and the president's announced breakthrough on linking the treaty to Palestinian self rule.

Carter unveiled the breakthrough on linkage to a special session of Egypt's People's Assembly in Cairo at the end of the first leg of his unprecedented open-ended peace mission aimed at securing the first pact ever between Israel and an Arab state.

"There can be little doubt that the two agreements reached at Camp David — negotiated together and signed together — are related, and that a comprehensive peace remains a common objective," Carter said.

"Just in recent days, both Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat have again pledged to carry out every commitment made at Camp David. Both leaders have also reaffirmed that they do not want a separate peace between their nations."

That affirmation, announced by Carter on the third day of his tumultuous reception by hundreds of thousands in Egypt, appears to answer Cairo's demand for a firm, visible link between the two Camp David frameworks. The linkage question has snagged negotiations on the treaty since mid-November.

The Assembly speech revealed officially and publicly for the first time that the Israelis have accepted that idea of linkage as well as American officials who had been committed to a comprehensive Middle East peace will be stated by both sides in separate letters attached to the peace treaty.

Carter also appealed to the Palestinians to join the peace process and said he was still committed to bringing about negotiations between Jordan and Israel and Syria and Israel, as was implied in the second framework for peace worked out at the Camp David Summit. The first document outlined the Israeli-Egyptian treaty.

In another key point, Carter seemed to rule out the possibility of any formal defense alliance with either Egypt or Israel. "Our policy is that each country should have the ability to defend itself, so that it does not have to depend on external alliances," he said. "The United States does not seek a special position for itself."

American officials said the president decided on this dramatic personal attempt to negotiate a peace treaty because he believed time was running out and it was "now or never" for peace in the Middle East.

Egyptian officials, planning for a treaty signing Tuesday, are hoping that Carter will get Israel's agreement to the proposals that were put together in Egypt between Carter and President Anwar Sadat, and that Carter will return for the signing with Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

American officials believe that in the light of the often painful experience in these negotiations the Egyptian hopes are excessively optimistic and overlook some of the complex detail that has yet to be negotiated.

But the Americans believe there is a good chance that the main issues can be dealt with by Carter and he will leave Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to clean up the details.

Health Advice Is Just A Telephone Call Away

Do you have a problem with drinking, drugs or smoking? Do you have an unwanted pregnancy or want to know about family planning and birth control? family life are as near as a Seminole County's telephone.

By calling 688-3000 — the number for Florida Hospital's Tel-Health Service — you can get tips on how to remain healthy through preventive health, how to recognize signs of illness, when to consult your doctor and how to adjust to a serious illness.

By giving the Hospital Auxiliary volunteer on duty the number of the tapes in the Tel-Health Tapes Library to which you wish to listen, you can anonymously learn what you always wanted to know but were afraid to ask on more than 200 health-related subjects.

A brochure listing all of the tapes by subject and number is available free to anyone calling the Tel-Health number to request one. The free tape service is funded by the Florida Hospital Auxiliary and through private donations.

Orlando was the third area in the state to obtain this service which began here April 24, 1978. Since that time more than 100,000 calls have been logged.

According to Kathy Henson, director of Health Education for Florida Hospital, they receive from 300 to 1,500 calls a day — mostly from women, but also from men and children.

"When we first started tapes on sex related problems used to be the most popular, but now it has broadened out and we get genuine requests for all sorts of subjects across the board," she said. "We get a lot of inquiries on drugs and alcohol, there's also a lot of interest in dental tapes."

Many physicians and dentists now refer their patients to the tape library for factual information on various subjects.

The library has tapes on the care of the patient as nurse, nutrition, health education programs offered by Florida Hospital, ways to cut your medical costs, medical insurance, Medicaid and Medicare, prescriptions, and Social Security.

There are tapes on child rearing from care of the newborn to teen rebellion, including ones on "Where did I come from, Mama?" "Under Physical Fitness there are 'Sport Tips for Youngsters,'" "Little League Elbows" and "Exercising — Warm Up Slowly."

Another service soon to be available through Tel-Health will be Tel-Hospital. This will be available through a physician's recommendation and to the patient in the hospital and will center on hospital procedures.

"Many grateful people call to thank us for the help the tapes have given them," said Miss Henson. "One man whose child was in the hospital with meningitis called to say the information he received on the subject had relieved some of the anxiety he was feeling."

"One woman said her husband had listened to a tape on emphysema and as a result quit smoking and his health had improved," she said.

Boy May Have Fallen In Tub Drowning Deaths

Sanford Police today were continuing their investigation into the bathtub drowning deaths of two children in an effort to determine how the accident happened.

An autopsy completed Friday afternoon revealed the older of two boys who drowned in the bathtub of their 100 Lake Monroe Terrace home, in Sanford, Thursday had sustained a bump on the head.

Dr. G. V. Garay, Seminole County medical examiner, said 3 1/2-year-old Tully Kelt had a bump on his head which could have occurred as the result of a fall. Tully and his eight-month-old brother Terry were first found face down in about six inches of water in the bathtub of their home between 5 and 5:30 p.m. Thursday by their mother, Bluette Kelt, 38.

The two boys had been dead about 30 minutes to an hour when they were discovered, according to Dr. Garay.

"I had just put down my packages when I came into the house, and Bluette came running to me, screaming and sobbing," Mrs. Kelt said.

"She said her daughter yelled, 'Mom, Mom, the boys are dead. They're in the bathtub,'" Mrs. Kelt said she ran into the bathroom and saw the children floating face down in the water.

"I couldn't believe it. I was in such a state of shock, about the only thing I remember is pulling one of the boys out and trying to revive him. I don't even remember who pulled the other child out," the boys' grandmother said.

"I feel so sad today. I just don't know why this had to happen," the grandmother said.

Efforts to revive the children by emergency crews at the scene and later by medical staff at Seminole Memorial Hospital were unsuccessful.

State Certified Woman

Lake Mary Firefighter A First

By BOGGER ROY
 Herald Correspondent

Carol Hoffman joined the Lake Mary Volunteer Fire Department in 1972.

Two years later she became the first woman in Florida to complete the 106-hour firefighter's training course and become state-certified as a firefighter.

Michelle Davis, a 28-year-old ambulance attendant, became a member of the Canaberry Fire Department about a year ago. She has also completed the firefighter's course.

Both serve as volunteers and both are married — to spouses of spouses.

"Why did they become firefighters?" Michelle said she would like to know. "Just not being able to sit around and do nothing, so I went in to see for myself. I was surprised."

Carol became a volunteer because she could "see the need of the people."

Michelle said she and all the Lake Mary volunteers were men, most of them working during the day, so fire protection wasn't sufficient during those hours.

"I could see they were short-handed during the day," she said, so she and four other women joined the department.

The other four have since moved or dropped out of the department.

Carol insists that her husband, Wayne, who is also a member of the department, was the "instigator" in her joining the department.

"I started out just taking pictures and doing some other little things for the department. Since my husband was a member, he finally talked me into joining." She adds that while going through the 200-hour training program "I never would have made it without my husband."

Michelle met her husband, Robert, who is a Canaberry firefighter, while she was attending an emergency medical technician (EMT) training program in which he was also certified.

Unlike Carol, Michelle would like to be a paid, full-time firefighter, however her eyesight does not meet the state requirements.

The state also requires that firefighters pass a rigid "physical agility" test in which the applicant must run 1 1/2 miles in 12 minutes or less, do push-ups, and perform other agility tests of strength and agility.

"I could do most of the stuff except for the push-ups," she said, "so I started working at the time 'my husband and I and another couple went out to dinner for our anniversary. We were almost at the restaurant when we had a call of a cardiac. We turned around and went to the scene and there I was, giving CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) in my evening gown."

Both women claim the public seems to accept them, although Michelle does admit that people are sometimes "a little amazed" when she shows up.

Michelle concedes, however, that at first the firemen didn't seem sure a woman could do the job.

"When I first joined, I had to work at it to show them I could do it, but after I proved I could do the job they all seemed to learn to drive the trucks," she said. "It just seemed like any other part of my training."

Of course, being a woman in the fire service is sure to cause some peculiar circumstances. Carol will "never forget" the time "my husband and I and another couple went out to dinner for our anniversary. We were almost at the restaurant when we had a call of a cardiac. We turned around and went to the scene and there I was, giving CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) in my evening gown."

Michelle concedes, however, that at first the firemen didn't seem sure a woman could do the job.

"When I first joined, I had to work at it to show them I could do it, but after I proved I could do the job they all seemed to

On Energy Emergency Power Officials Calling For Action

By MAX ERKLETTIAN Herald Staff Writer

Florida Power & Light (FPL) officials claim a search by alternative fuel sources for supplementary fuel to supplement depleting low sulfur fuel supplies will leave the governor no choice but to declare an energy emergency.

Gov. GRAHAM

Such an emergency declaration would lift anti-pollution standards prohibiting the burning of fuels with more than 1 percent sulfur for a maximum of four months.

Several utility companies have claimed use of higher sulfur content fuel is the only alternative to "brownout" — a loss of electricity — however, Graham's office plans to review the claims of the utility companies in an effort to determine if alternatives are available, other than declaring an emergency.

Another problem with natural gas is that the Florida Gas pipeline which would transmit the gas to FPL cannot handle the volume of natural gas needed by the firm to fuel the depleted low sulfur fuel, according to Cook.

Deputy Bettye Smith in counseling session

Victim Advocates: A Growing Program

The Seminole County Sheriff's Department, in cooperation with other law enforcement agencies in the county, has expanded a victim advocate program to assist victims of sexual assault.

The program will be headed by Bettye Smith, who had been operating a counseling service for sexual assault victims and a rape prevention program for several months as an unpaid reserve deputy of the sheriff's department.

With the expansion of the victim advocate program for use by all the county's municipalities, Mrs. Smith now is a paid deputy, she said.

"Other people will be milling around in uniforms trying to catch a rapist, our only function will be to stay with the victim and be his or her friend," said Mrs. Smith.

As soon as a law enforcement agency receives a reported sexual assault, Deputy Smith or one of the four persons working with her will be dispatched to the scene with law enforcement officers. The program will be in operation 24 hours a day, seven days per week, according to Mrs. Smith.

The victim advocates will not bring the victim to the hospital. The advocates will stay with the victim through all physical examinations and interviews with law enforcement agents. If the offender is apprehended, the advocate follows the case by going to court with the victim and offering emotional support, according to Mrs. Smith.

The advocates do not provide professional counseling for sexual assault victims, Mrs. Smith emphasized. However, the advocates do arrange for such professional counseling. The advocates also assist in any emergency needs the victims might have.

"In the case of transients who need a change of clothes, food and shelter, we try to provide those things," commented Mrs. Smith.

The advocates also aid law enforcement officers in obtaining descriptions of the attackers, according to Mrs. Smith, and making sure that information is disseminated to other area law enforcement agencies. In addition to educating the general public, Mrs. Smith has begun training sessions for officers in Seminole County law enforcement departments. The programs are designed to heighten the officer's awareness of the needs of sexual assault victims, said Mrs. Smith.

"We've already done the program for our department and we're going to do it for others," Mrs. Smith noted. During a meeting with Seminole County police chiefs this week, Mrs. Smith said, the program received a unanimous endorsement.

"Police officers don't need to know how to investigate rapes, they already know that," noted Mrs. Smith. "They need to understand the emotions of the victims. It's extremely important for women to know it is not the victim's fault. Women do not ask to be raped."

Any groups wanting the program rape awareness-prevention program can contact Deputy Smith at 322-5115.

Olympic Jubilee Added

The Golden Age Olympics will have a new look this year. The advisory committee has voted to incorporate a Jubilee format along with the competitive events to provide entertainment in the late afternoon or night for participants in the week-long event in November.

A Monday night "Beauty Contest" for men and women, a Thursday night community sing and a Saturday night talent show are among the new activities being considered.

"We want to keep it loose and enjoyable," said Golden Age Olympics Chairman Jim Jernigan.

Realizing that problems build up over the years and wishing to make improvements as they go, the advisory group also has recommended other changes. Trophies will not be awarded to the overall men and women champion this year. In the past, overall champions were chosen on a points accumulated basis.

"The decision was based on the fact that it caused too much of a problem for participants trying to accumulate points rather than concentrate on the areas they were best in," said Jernigan. "It was unfair and put too much pressure on them to compete in many events. At the present time we will keep no point total."

"We will revise some of the track and field events and will eliminate the decathlon as such," he said. "We want to integrate into the track and field more emphasis on individual event participation."

Some new events are under consideration — such as competitive diving and synchronized swimming. "We will eliminate the final awards ceremony Saturday night; there has been too much absenteeism on the part of the recipients, as many of them have left town by then," said Jernigan. "Awards will be given immediately after the events wherever possible."

At the next meeting (April 4) of the advisory committee all ideas will be finalized so that schedules can be printed. The first publicity mail-out to recreation departments, senior clubs, chambers of commerce around the state and to former participants will go out between May 1 and 15, Jernigan said.

"We need to plan our program around where the interests lie and keep it flexible so that it will be a success," he added.

The Golden Age Olympics held each year during the second week in November is co-sponsored by the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce and the City of Sanford.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — John Thomas Draper, the electronics wizard who used a whistle in Captain Crunch cereal to duplicate the phone company's secret signal for free calls, is in trouble again.

Friday, he was sentenced to prison for a year for violating probation by again placing long-distance phone calls without the equipment he had used. Draper, who has been convicted three times in six years.

Draper is employed by a Palo Alto computer firm, where he said he is creating a new language that will enable computers to talk to one another.

The judge also ordered psychiatric treatment for the 39-year-old electronics expert, who keeps making long-distance phone calls on blue boxes, computers and other gadgetry.

But Judge Peckham allowed Draper to serve his sentence under the federal work furlough program after his lawyer, Ronald Barkin, pleaded for leniency.

For Federal Positions

Ten Judges Nominated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Florida's two senators have nominated 10 people for nine federal judgeship positions — including five for new judgeships in the Southern District, which stretches from Key West to Vero Beach.

Sens. Lawton Chiles and Richard Stone selected the nominees Friday from a list of 46 candidates recommended by the Florida Judicial Nomination Committee.

Their appointments are subject to formal nomination by President Carter, clearance by the U.S. Justice Department and ratification by the Senate.

Those nominated for the new Southern District judgeships are: Third District Court of Appeals Judge James Keboe, 54; Eugene P. Spellman, 46, a Miami attorney; Edward B. Davis, 46, a Miami lawyer specializing in taxation and securities law; Broward Circuit Court Judge Alice Hastings, and James C. Paine, 54, a senior partner in a West Palm Beach law firm.

If Hastings' nomination is confirmed, he would be the first black federal court judge in South Florida.

The others nominated were: Florida Supreme Court Justice Joseph Hatchett — who is eligible for a Middle District District position only if he is not appointed to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans as anticipated — Lynn C. Hight, 41, of Panama City, District spot, and William Castagna, 55, a Clearwater attorney, for another Middle District position.

If Hatchett does not get the appellate post, he would receive the Middle District spot position for which Salcines has been nominated.

Salcines, 41, for a Middle District spot, and William Castagna, 55, a Clearwater attorney, for another Middle District position.

Marvin: She Asked $100,000 To Leave

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Actor Lee Marvin has testified his former mistress Michelle Marvin agreed to get out of his life and stay out — but she wanted $100,000 to leave, or $15,000 a month to stay in Europe.

Her original offer was to go away for $50,000, but she increased that to $100,000 because "prices had gone up," Marvin said.

Marvin testified in his own behalf for the second day Friday in the trial of a suit brought by Mrs. Marvin, who is seeking the same property rights she would have had if they had been married during their six-year affair.

She has asked for the cost of half of his estate, estimated at $2.5 million when they broke up in 1970.

Marvin, sitting a few feet away, shook his head in annoyance and disbelief as Marvin said of offers he made around Christmas, 1968 and a few months later in 1970 at his beach house in Malibu. "She said she would get out of my life and I would never hear from her again for $50,000," Marvin said.

"What was your reaction?" asked his attorney, David Kagon. "I was worthless. I said it was impossible." The next time, Marvin said, she raised the price to $100,000 because "prices had gone up." Then she suggested she go to Europe and "reorganize her life," he said, and he agreed, but changed his mind when she said it would cost $100,000 to $15,000 a month for an indefinite period.

Kagon led the actor over the many periods when they lived in hotels or on location, going

Controls On Oil Prices

President Carter should exercise the power vested in him by the 1975 energy act and end all price control on oil May 31.

The present price is set by the government. The price for much of our domestic oil is set far below the price we must pay for imported oil.

We end price controls, the price of domestic oil will rise in the free market, probably approaching the price of imported oil.

Price control discourages production. Producers hold back, hoping for a higher price. This was what happened to natural gas, too. But a compromise bill enacted last year allowed prices of natural gas to increase gradually until 1985, when price controls on newly discovered gas will be lifted entirely.

And what has happened? Since the partial deregulation of natural gas prices, the supply of domestic gas has suddenly increased.

We find ourselves with a surprise surplus, a gas bubble, and we are encouraging industries to burn more gas instead of oil.

The price control on oil discourages conservation. It keeps the price artificially below the world market price. So industry and the public are, in effect, subsidized to use more oil.

The most effective conservation measure we can think of would be to allow a free market in oil, both domestic and foreign.

That would raise the price of gasoline, for instance, and what better way to encourage the purchase of smaller cars?

The price control on oil encourages imports of foreign oil.

By discouraging domestic production and encouraging domestic consumption, it makes us evermore dependent upon foreign supplies.

No wonder the deficit in our foreign trade jumped to $3.1 billion in January. And what does that do to the value of the dollar overseas?

The main argument against oil price deregulation is that it will add to inflation.

It will certainly do so in the short run. But in the long run it will reduce inflation.

We cannot continue indefinitely in a fools' paradise. Sooner or later we must pay the piper. And it will be more inflationary the longer we delay.

Shortages are appearing. Gas stations are closing. Foreign countries are raising their oil prices. The dollar is sinking. It is time to quit selling our own oil short.

Necessary Evil

There is a certain political irony in Congress' sudden interest in sacrificing the $2.3 billion revenue-sharing program for the states on the altar of fiscal austerity.

It's as though Congress, harried by the mounting clamor from state capitals to balance the federal budget, is threatening to show the provinces that the budget-cutting knife is two-edged.

But on reflection, both Congress and the states may find that this particular form of revenue-sharing can be paroled sharply or even eliminated without undue pain and with potential benefit for the taxpayers.

As Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, noted just the other day, the states' collective budget surplus for 1978 was $29 billion.

With that kind of money piling up in state capitals from Sacramento to Richmond, the case for retaining Washington's $2.3 billion revenue-sharing program is suspect, indeed.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., posed the pertinent question: "The majority of states have budget surpluses so why should we support them when we have a deficit?"

A better case, or at least a genuine need, can be established for maintaining federal revenue sharing for cities and local governments.

Many hard-pressed cities and metropolitan counties now rely on these funds to make ends meet.

And until these local governments can develop stronger revenue bases, the $2.4 billion federal revenue-sharing program for cities and counties will remain a necessary evil.

JULIAN BOND Jimmy Has 1980 All Sewn Up

Jimmy Carter has made it expectable for political candidates to run full out for the 24 months preceding the actual election.

This practice is a boon for the schedulers, publicists, speechwriters and pollsters. Political writers must also benefit from waxing sagacious more than a year before they use so.

But the poor voters lose. It's one thing to have your political senses assaulted twice as often and for twice as long as they used to be. It's another to know that most of those called will never be chosen.

Master strategist Ham Jordan has already drafted the 1980 version of the 1978 Carter battle plan that made "Jimmy Who?" the sleeper of the century.

It will maintain the outsider's posture that won hearts and minds, while adding a "tough" posture to reassure the growing number who believe the Carter administration is all can't and won't.

Although Carter doesn't, most others do take Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., at his word that he will not be a candidate in 1980 and expects to back Carter's campaign. Only the death of his mother could make him change his mind, friends say, but obviously something else might, too.

The Carter people, and many others, believe that California Gov. Jerry Brown won't travel East, that his 6-0 staling over Carter in 1978's fading primaries meant only that he was never in a summer season that glorified newness, and that his lifestyle and politics will repel rather than attract the embattled citizenry of the less laid-back East and Middle West.

With no other action among the Democrats, attention will focus on the small army assembling under the Republican banner.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., is telling people he plans to run and will make a formal announcement this summer. Baker has been hoping that his Watergate effects will finally pay off.

Anyway, I will remember the first time I heard the song in its native habitat, so to speak. It was during a visit to Atlanta in the winter of 1947. A friend met me at the airport and took me to the Owl Room in the Anley Hotel.

Although it was only about 4 p.m., the Owl Room was as dark as playing in the back, a few months ago when the owl sweet song so recently honored.

We groped our way to a table and my companion ordered cocktails.

"I thought Georgia, 'but not THAT,'" I said. "It is," she replied, "but not THAT."

The singer then replied: "We sing the Anley Roof. Not long after we arrived, a waiter came and apologetically removed our drinks, explaining that 'We are having a raid.'"

Nothing else happened. The place remained as calm as before. Several minutes later, the waiter brought the drinks back, and that was the end of that.

Another Carter Appointee Scandal?

WASHINGTON — Another of President Carter's sub-Cabinet appointees may be caught up in a financial scandal. He is Sterling Tucker, a respected District of Columbia political figure, who is Carter's newest assistant secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Tucker was unaccountably last year for mayor of Washington, D.C., and had the usual campaign debts. We have now obtained a sworn affidavit that accuses Tucker's attorney of trying to pay off one creditor by promising Tucker's help in obtaining government contracts for him.

The affidavit also charges that Tucker did not voice any surprise or objection when the creditor told him of the alleged offer. Both Tucker and his attorney, Woodrow Boggs, have vehemently denied any wrongdoing. But we have obtained charged tape-recordings that lend credence to the charges.

The affidavit, obtained by our associates Gary Cohn and Sam Fagg, was signed by Sherwood Ross, a media consultant. Tucker vowed up owing him $10,720 for work in the mayoral campaign.

Unlike Tucker's other campaign creditors, most of whom agreed to settle for about 30 cents on the dollar, Ross refused to accept partial payment for his services. He is suing Tucker for the full amount.

This suit places on Ross, the son of a U.S. 2nd congressional district. The next day he called Boggs and then Tucker, while a private investigator announced the appointment of Gary Anthony Droze, son of M. and Mrs. Fred A. Droze of 1281 Oxford Road, South Seminole, to the Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs.

A senior at Lake Howell High School, Droze has participated in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and was captain of the varsity cross country team. Droze's appointment, which means a four-year scholarship worth more than $100,000, is one of about 1,400 the Air Force Academy is expected to make for the 1979-80 school year.

Droze went through a rigorous application process to get where he is. He was among more than 800 high school seniors from around the state who applied for an interview with a nominating board appointed by Stone. The board of community leaders, interviewed 181 students and nominated 50 — 10 for the military academy and 10 for the Air Force Academy, 20 for the naval academy and 10 for the merchant marine academy.

The nominations were sent to academy officials who are now ranking them and appointing a select few. Fifteen of Stone's nominees have received appointments so far.

Students interested in qualifying for a service academy appointment next year should contact Stone's military affairs assistant, Sgt. Peter Butler, at 2630 N. Monroe St., Suite 200B, Tallahassee 32303.

State Rep. Bobby Brantley has been scheduling regular visits to his district of Seminole and Lake Counties to meet with and talk with citizens about legislation, problems or complaints they have with state government.

The next city on his schedule is Lake Mary where he will be at the post office on March 17 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Brantley said he chose Saturday for the visit, hoping it is the most convenient time for everyone.

The county's long awaited IBM System 32 computer has been delivered and set up at its temporary home on the third floor of the Roomlight Building. Jack Harwood, data processing manager, is presently programming information on Comprehensive Employment Training Act tracking and is in process of developing a data base for the library inventory and for utility billing. Community inventory and then training county employees to operate the work stations are anticipated projects when the IBM data base design system arrives.

No, says Josette Frank, 85, editor of the Children's Books of the Year Catalogue published by the Child Study Children's Book Committee at Bank Street College in New York.

When Dahl's book came out several years ago, it wasn't one of the catalogue's 600 or so titles, selected from 240-3,000 children's books reviewed each year by the Committee. The Committee Mrs. Frank has been advising for 34 years.

"We thought the book was devastating," she says. "Horrible things happened to children in it and there was not one decent adult. It was very well written, but do you want to present young children with a world in which all the adults are greedy and trying to gain advantage in a mean, nasty way?"

Because the book looked "young," she says, "I'm sure unaware parents seeing Dahl's name were attracted to it for their children much too young."

"Prejudices do come through," Mrs.

RONALD REAGAN Strike Turns Off Professor

Ronald Trowbridge has not led a very exciting life, at least not the kind about which novels are written and movies made.

He earned his doctorate in English Language and Literature at the University of Michigan some years ago, and for the past 14 years he has been a professor of English at Eastern Michigan University. He has edited an academic journal in his field, and has served on the Ann Arbor City Council.

But last September Ronald Trowbridge became involved in what was for him a very tense and unhappy event — a faculty strike.

Now the professors at Eastern Michigan University are not quite the downtrodden proletariat that Marx and Engels wrote about. Dr. Trowbridge characterizes teaching at Eastern Michigan as "semi-retirement." The pay was good, especially since most professors worked only about 25 hours a week.

The work was, as they say, "indoors, out-of-the-weather, and no heavy lifting."

Very many of the faculty members were determined to strike for a one-year pay increase of 20 percent. More important for many of them, they demanded an agency shop, where every faculty member would be required to pay into the treasury of the teachers' union. Only 300 of the 660 faculty members were members of the union, but they struck to force their demands on the majority who did not wish to participate.

Prof. Trowbridge refused to strike. For one thing, the strike was illegal under Michigan law. For another, he believed he and his fellow professors were already fairly paid for the amount of work performed. So on the day of the strike, he marched across the picket line into his classroom.

As a matter of conscience, he would not stay home and pretend to be "ill" — he would go to class and do the work he was being well-paid to do.

Dr. Trowbridge was astonished at the oaths directed toward him from his friends and colleagues of 14 years who walked in the picket line.

Here were distinguished, silver-haired, pipe-smoking professors, who just a week before had been expounding on the works of Milton and Shakespeare, cursing him in the vilest language.

The strike ended after two weeks, with the faculty winning a 3.5 percent pay raise and a modified version of the agency shop they sought.

After seeing what kind of men and women his colleagues had become on the picket line, Prof. Trowbridge decided to leave Eastern Michigan for Hillsdale college, a small liberal arts school that prizes individual liberty and conscience.

But what he learned about human nature at Eastern Michigan, Ronald Trowbridge will never forget.

Georgia On My Mind

The next Saturday night, we went out dancing. At midnight, the floor was cleared. Dancing on Sunday was illegal in Georgia, our watter said. But he kept right on serving drinks, which was against the law at any hour of any day.

These quaint mores were attributed to the state legislature.

The majority of its members lived in rural areas where politics and temperance went hand in hand. But when they journeyed in Atlanta during a legislative session, many liked to booze it up a bit. So enforcement of the ban on mixed drinks in the state capital was somewhat whimsical.

Once the session ended, the lawmakers would return home and score points with the voters by decrying the wickedness they had seen in the big city. Or so I was told.

Subsequently, the legislature made it all legal. And now it has chosen as the new state song one of America's all-time favorite cocktail lounge evergreens. Sic transit profubria.

These are some of the things I think about when I have Georgia on my mind.

Secret Service No Secret

Secret Service men were all over the place at Bethune-Cookman College this week while former-President Gerald Ford was there attending the 13th honors convocation of the school to receive an honorary doctor of laws degree.

Stories about the Secret Service over the years have told of their bravery and dedication, their willingness to die for their charges. Their appearance in Daytona Beach seemed, however, like a total waste of our money and their time.

Certainly anyone who had a mind to could easily have injured Ford. Many people were not wearing the hard-to-get credential seen during the appearance more than a year ago in Sanford of Vice President Walter Mondale.

The Secret Service people could be easily spotted. They were all dressed somewhat alike in business suits and highly polished dark shoes. The most nearly identical part of their appearance was the very bored expressions in their eyes.

Most interesting about the appearance was the 38th president was the great affliction in which he was obviously held by the audience, faculty and student body and special guests at the Moore Auditorium, the numerous rounds of applause and the standing ovations given him.

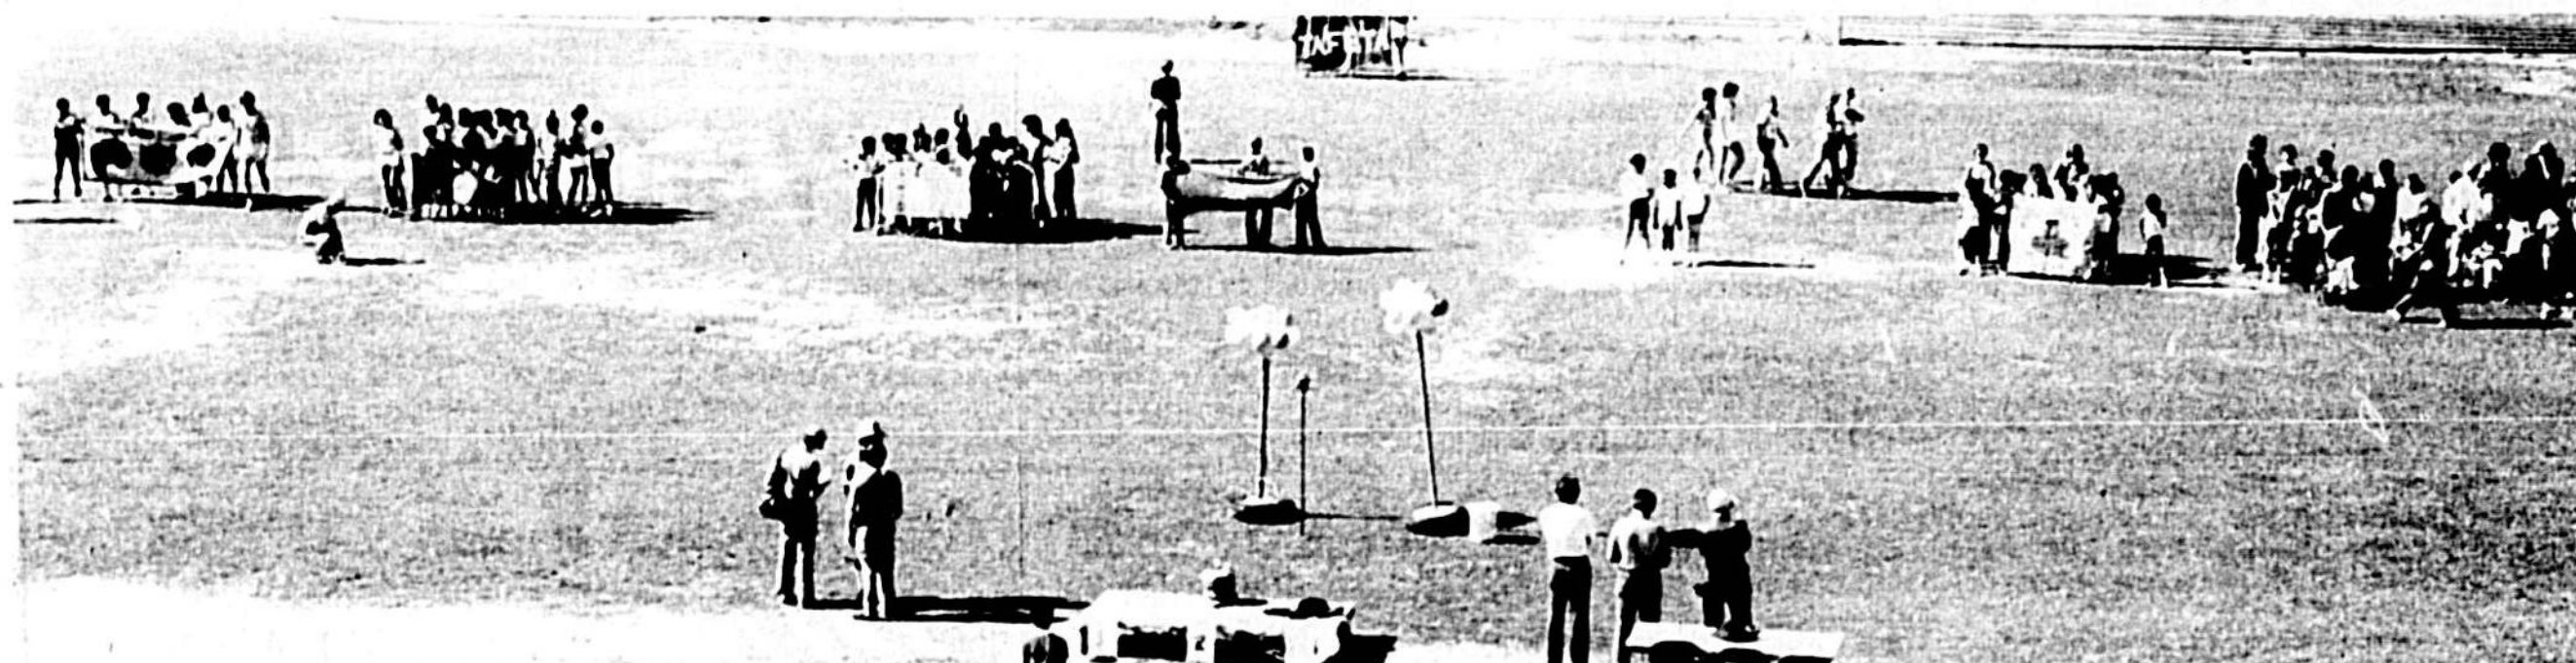

The laughter and the big puns was generous and shared by all and the applause for him was not scattered, but rather full and round.

One of the embarrassments of Ford's brief 30 months in office was his WIN (Winning in Name) campaign which was that kind of fluff that he had started. One of the introductory speakers, remembering the incident, told the experience, however, "May your WIN button increase."

Ford's remark to the gathering were sentimental, centered on faith in God and love of country. Yet the speech did not sound true, but rather sincere. At one point he as the former president told of the

Q. On a football team, is the QB, in the leading team, considered the offense or the defense? I read that the receiving team is the offense when it gets the ball. Is this true? Please clear my head. —John Perce, Westley, R.I.

Q. In a basketball game, if the kicking team definitely is the offense, I mean, on a punt, suppose the kicker decides to run with or pass the ball instead of booting. That definitely constitutes offense. When the receiving team puts the ball into play on the first down after exchange of possession, that's offense. Is your head clear now? How about the sinuses?

Q. I have heard a lot of talk about Bill Walsh, but when will he be 100 percent again? And if he doesn't spend the season with Portland, what other team is his first priority? —Matt Schaefer, Orange, Ore.

Q. Whenever I watch the New England Patriots play, commentators use the greatest label on tight end Ross Francis. Why? I have never seen him make a great play, and I have seen him make more than one bad play. Why is he called the greatest? There are a lot of tight ends in the game better than Francis, but they never get the ink. Your comments, please. —Lanner Williams, Mobile, Ala.

Q. I don't think we've been watching the same player. Francis is one of the great natural talents in professional football. And his record reflects it, though there has been some criticism that he'd maximize his ability if he concentrated 100 percent on every play. That's why Dave Casper of the Oakland Raiders generally gets the All-Pro nod. There's nothing wrong with Francis, though, as long as he stays off a motorcycle (he recently cracked up on one).

Q. In this year's football bowl games, Stanford, which lost four games, defeated Georgia; UCLA led Arkansas; Notre Dame beat Houston; Alabama defeated Penn State. The three winning teams and UCLA had one thing in common — they were all beaten by USC in the regular season. We have always known the best strength of the South, Midwest and East was strong, but this is ridiculous (making Alabama the best team).

Q. I'm not an Oakland fan. But it's not like to Kenny Stabler. All we hear any more is how many interceptions Kenny threw this past season. How many of his 10 interceptions were tipped or hit a receiver? —Randy Carroll, Mobile, Ala.

Q. Who is the most inspirational athlete you have known? —George C. Newell, Jr.

Q. I am sure by that you mean one who had the ability to inspire people — particularly if they were his cohorts in a team game. My choice may be a strange one. I pick Bobby Layne, the old Detroit and Pittsburgh quarterback who is in the pro Football Hall of Fame. He wasn't the greatest player. He wasn't the most field general. But I don't know of anyone who had greater ability to rally his teammates around him, especially when the going got tough. Anyone who played with Bobby will never forget him.

Irwin's 62 Forces Tie

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (UPI) — Hale Irwin took on a defenseless Inverrary East Course Friday and it was no contest. The 33-year-old, 128-year pro played the 7,127-yard, par-72 layout with a record 62, breaking both the course and tournament records and tying a personal mark.

Irwin goes into today's third round of the $300,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Golf Classic tied with 19-year veteran Tommy Aaron at 9-under-par 125 for a one-shot lead over Larry Nelson.

Nelson fired a 3-under 69 Friday for his 128. Charles Coody finished at 69-37, and Grier Jones fired a 67 for his 138. Tied at 138 were Randy Erdine with a 67; Wayne Levi, 73; Bill Rogers, 67; and Mark James, 71.

Jack Nicklaus played himself out of contention for his fourth straight title at Inverrary by shooting an even-par 72, just barely making the cut at 2-over-par 164.

Healthy Harvey Glance World's Fastest Sprinter?

AUBURN, Ala. (UPI) — As fast as Harvey Glance is in one year, he has proven himself as the "World's Fastest Human" — at least for the 1979 indoor track season. "I feel I've already established myself as the world's fastest human," the Auburn University senior says. "The only person I see challenging me for that spot indoors is (Houston) McTeer and I've beaten him more times than he's been in."

Glance, a member of the United States' 1976 Olympic team, believes his chances of enhancing his national reputation will improve since he is a stronger sprinter outdoors. And, for the first time in two years, he is completely healthy. "His goal is to run again in the 1980 Olympic games and make up for a disappointing fourth place finish in the 100 meters in the 1976 games at Montreal. "I'm excited about that. July day when he went into the finals of the 100 as one of the favorites based on his impressive win in an early preliminary heat."

"I think my biggest problem is in that race with the U.S. 400-meter relay team," Glance says. "When I came out of the blocks I didn't have the lead I want. As a matter of fact, I didn't have a lead at all."

"I was in fourth place after about 40 yards and I touched and tried to get back into the race," he recalls. "I made a quick burst and got back into the race at about 60 meters and that's when I hit me — you can't run 100 meters that way. "I'm excited about that. July day when he went into the finals of the 100 as one of the favorites based on his impressive win in an early preliminary heat."

Cummings Claims SOKC All-Distance Medley

It only took two greyhounds from the Cameron Cummings Kennel to win the All-Distance Medley competition at the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club this week. But what nice greyhounds they are!

Nolo Contendere broke on top. But he injured himself going around the first turn and trailed in. Mick's Wind Out broke fifth, but had moved into fourth position by the curtain turn.

He favored Titans and had a game-high 19 rebounds. Mike O'Brien, who has the Cardinals' highest scoring average, finished with 23 and B.B. Davis had 20.

The race for wins champion appears to be shaping up as a two-day contest. Timeless Gift has won 11 of 13 starts, while Steam Train has won nine out of 17.

A Warning: Brazil Juice

Market 'Takeover' Near

United Growers reported Brazilian citrus interests had made their move toward a "takeover" of the United States bulk juice market sales traditionally dominated by Florida. The Orlando-based grower organization said it had received reports that Brazilian representatives were actively soliciting bulk juice customers outside of Florida — customers almost exclusively served by Florida processors.

"These reports must have basis for Department of Citrus Economic Research Department statistics show approximately 14 percent of 1978 Brazilian juice exports to the United States went on consignment directly from Brazil or through Canada and Mexico," said Executive Vice President Wilson McFee.

Best Gain In 6 Months For Stock Market

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, propelled by gambling, savings and selected blue-chip issues, scored its best gain in six months this week in active trading.
The advance was made in the face of uncertainties surrounding oil prices, inflation, interest rates and President Carter's efforts to persuade Egypt and Israel to sign a peace treaty.
The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 7.53 points last week, climbed 27.11 points to 842.86, the best performance since it rose 28.41 points the week ended Sept. 8.
Technical analysts said they were encouraged that the Dow broke through the 840 level where it had met some investor resistance. But they were not impressed that gambling stocks paved the way for the rally.

The New York Stock Exchange index added 1.4 to 55.81 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 2.57 to 99.54.
Advances routed declines, 1,353 to 464, among the 2,095 issues traded.
The week's surge began Monday when Iran returned to oil production for the first time in 59 days, raising hopes that shortages worldwide would be alleviated.
But the Persian nation said later it would produce only 3 million barrels of its valuable light crude oil daily, half the 5.5 million output prior to the revolution. And it plans to sell where it had met some investor resistance. But they were not

Other OPEC nations apparently plan to do the same with some of their petroleum. Observers doubt the open market will tolerate this action. But economists believe the official OPEC price will be around $20 a barrel this year, a boost sharply higher than the 14.5 percent increase agreed upon last December.
Higher oil rates played a large role in the 1.3 percent surge in January and below most predictions.
Nevertheless, the Carter administration and the Federal Reserve were disturbed by the figures. The Fed and three other regulatory agencies reduced yields on short-term savings certificates to moderate the nation's housing boom and cool the economy.

Also, there were indications late Friday the Fed may have tightened credit, a move that would dash investor beliefs that rates had peaked. Gabriel Hanover chairman, predicted higher rates by the end of the month.
Government reports that January factory orders rose 1.9 percent and key nondefense capital goods orders jumped 7.4 percent demonstrated the strength of the economy.
"The market's advance was rather remarkable since the week raised more questions than it answered about foreign and domestic affairs," said Monte Gordon, Dreyfus Corp. vice president.
Big Board volume totaled 144,546,000 shares, compared with 126,156,455 last week and 108,087,500 during the same week a year ago.
Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 155,062,260 shares, compared with 144,614,085 last week.
UV Industries was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 3% to 32 1/2%. The firm, which has announced liquidation plans, is fighting a takeover bid by Sharon Steel. Sharon revealed it had bought $46.8 million worth of UV stock.
Gambling stocks were the market's leaders. Del E. Webb was the second most active NYSE-listed issue, up 3% to 22 1/2%. Ramada Inns, the fifth most active issue, added 1 1/2% to 11 1/2%. Ramada sold its 7 percent interest in Webb.
Caesar's World, the fourth most active issue, soared 12% to 56%. The gambling firm, a 4 1/2-point winner last week after reporting higher earnings, said it could not explain the activity in its stock.
Among the other NYSE gambling issues, Playboy Enterprises climbed 4% to 22 1/2% and Bally Manufacturing 3% to 62%. On the Amex, Resorts International, the most active issue, gained 5 to 5 1/2%. Golden Nugget, second, climbed 9.

Her Signs A Unique Business

By JOAN MADISON

Herald Correspondent

Kelly's Signs is a unique business. It's the only firm of its kind in the county run by a woman.

And Kelly Caravello doesn't even need a sign to advertise her business.
A sign painter since her graduation from Winter Park High School in 1962, she's gathered quite a following, and most of her business is now repeat or referral.

"I don't have to prove myself," says the versatile artist. "I have only twice had somebody ask me to see a sample of my work." Which is good, since Kelly just doesn't have signs laying around.

There's only one thing she prefers not to do, and that's billboards. "I don't do billboards as I like to do what I do in the house," says the efficient worker who neatly does her sign work in the family room of her two-story house overlooking the 13th hole of the Rolling Hills Golf Course in Longwood.

"I get to stay at home and be with my kids," says the mother of three still at home - Theresa, 17; Brett, 12; and Shannon, 11.

There are other advantages too. "I'm not an early person. I don't like to get up early," says Kelly. And, of course, she likes the independence that comes with being self-employed. She's also free to travel with husband, Don, at will.

Painting signs just seemed to be Kelly's destiny. For a while she was a telephone operator, but she was always being "called to do signs and flip-charts." Then, when she worked as a dance instructor, she found herself painting signs; and as a sales person in real estate, she was, more often than not, painting signs.

Kelly Caravello paints signs of all types

So, it only seemed natural that, six years ago, with the support of her husband she started her own business. "Don's sort of my quality control," she smiles. "He does all the cutting out of the signs and installing them."
And now as Don is starting a business of his own in computer sales, Kelly's Signs will give the family a sense of financial security until Don's business gets established. A month's supply of wood, paint, and good brushes was all the inventory Kelly needed to start her business, besides tuna fish cans. Tuna fish cans fit well in the palm of the hand and are ideal containers to pour small amounts of paint. "All my friends are saving tuna fish cans for me," she laughs.

Kelly's work is usually priced out by time and material. Some signs - like "For Sale by Owner" - are a set price. Kelly has had some interesting experiences in her work. "I almost fell off the scaffolding once," she shudders. "My husband and I were doing the front of a building in Maitland. The scaffolding had broken. That was scary."
She's also learned to be flexible. "Recently she had a 20-foot real estate banner to get ready. It was too cold to hang it outside on the house to work on, so she put it upstairs in the hallway. "If anyone had to go to the bathroom," they

Free Classes Create Bazaar Articles

By MELENDIA EDMISTON

Herald Correspondent

The best things in life are free — or so the familiar old tune says.

But unfortunately good things such as products and services do not come in free packages too often anymore.

It may seem incredible, but for no cost at all, the United Methodist Women in Casselberry are welcome to come to the Community United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall every Thursday to learn a new craft.

Each week, someone teaches a craft such as quilting, macramé, quick point, needle point, crocheting, knitting, dolls and patchwork.

The craft classes were the idea of Mrs. Sharon Campbell, chairman of the "Newspaper Bazaar." "I love crafts and being with people," said the enthusiastic chairman. "Some of these ladies need fellowship."

They only get out of the house once or twice a week," she added.

While they are learning the

"how-to's" of every craft under the sun, they are also creating beautiful items for the fall bazaar to be held Nov. 2 and 3.

"It's going to be lots of fun for pickles, preserves and baked goods, and a cotton candy maker.

For the convenience of their customers, a nursery will be provided.

"Our prices will be reasonable and we'll have something within everyone's price range," Mrs. Campbell predicted.

had to crawl under the sign," she laughs. "It was almost as bad as when she had a large billboard (8'x32') to work on, only this time the dining room served as a work shop. "Don was in Vancouver and I was supposed to meet him. He told me I didn't have enough time to do the billboard...no to do it."

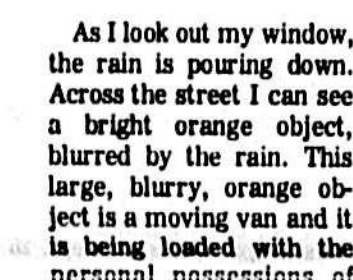

But without too much hesitation, Kelly decided that she would tackle the job—that it would allow her to pay for her ticket if she did. With the help of a friend, they worked feverishly all night. "We finished at 7:00 a.m.," she recalls, and at 8:30 a.m. Kelly was on her way to Vancouver, feeling very smug about her accomplishment.

However, that's not the only time she's worked all night. "Everybody waits until the last minute," she declares. "I don't have one customer that says, 'I want a sign. You can have it in two weeks!'"

"Signs are the last thing they think about," she notes. "When you are in business for yourself, you are afraid to say, 'What if I get this done in two weeks?' Somebody else will say they'll get it done tomorrow, and they may not, but they've got the job," she says. "So I say yes, and I stay up all night painting."

"If you put everything you want to say on a sign, they can't see your name much less all that the sign says. It's a much nicer sign and much more readable if they keep it short," she declares.

Kelly's successful business is a sign that a woman can do more than anything she puts her mind to and that she can combine family and business and succeed at both—if she so wishes.

How wonderful to FINALLY be six. This thought must have gone through Matthew Bennett's mind on March 4, Matthew was the guest-of-honor at a yard party, celebrating his sixth birthday.

A "Star Wars" theme was carried out in the decorations and rocket cake. Games enjoyed by the guests included "Put the nose on the clown," and a balloon relay race, where each team had to sit on a blanket and pop the balloon. The children also decorated paper plates, which they later threw through a large ring.

Guests included brother Travis, Mada Clark, Mark Habib, Jake Lowe, Tyler Griffin, David and Jason Dapore, Bethany Wait, Stacy and Jaime Hornaday, Patrick Reilly, Trey Fisher, Andy Donlin, Ryan Rogers, Jeff Wells, John Nita and Alex Markak.

Oh, I almost forgot. The highlight of the party was father, Sam, equipped with a whistle around his neck, leading the youngsters through their games.

"Matthew told me his dad reminded him of the coach at school," said Mother Nancy.

'Lucky Lady' Has A 'Stroke' Of Bad Luck

You may remember reading in this column awhile back about "lucky" Ginny Brown of Fern Park, who won a trip to the Holy Land for two from a W.A.J.I. radio station contest. As it turned out, the "lucky" lady, has had a "stroke" of bad luck. On her first day in Tel Aviv, Israel, she fell and broke her hip in her hotel room. Her traveling companion, Mildred Gaddis, of Longwood, stayed behind to look after her in Tel Aviv, as the rest of the group went on to complete their tour and arrived back in Orlando Tuesday night. Mildred and Ginny did get to see London as the tour stopped in England. Although Ginny didn't fulfill her hopes of touring the Holy Land, I'm sure she saw a side of the modern day Israel that few tourists ever see. According to Deanne Williams of W.A.J.I., "Ginny is doing well and is a witness to those around her." As you can imagine, hospital and extra traveling expenses do not come cheap. There have been several "love offerings" taken up among the tours and

'Do You Know A Nice Girl For My Son?'

DEAR ABBY: Will you please find a nice girl for my son? Burton is 33, nice looking, plays the piano, and is not dumb. He's had three years of college, but he lacks ambition and drive.

He's gone out with lots of girls, but he never calls them. If they call him, or if I arrange a date for him, he'll go. He has a few friends, but if they don't call him, he doesn't call them. I'm sure the right girl could motivate Burton to be a little more active socially.

His father and I would like to be grandparents, but Burton is our only child and he doesn't seem to be in any hurry to have a home of his own.

He lives with us, has an 8 to 4 job, and that's his life. Do you know of a nice girl for my son, Abby?

WORRIED IN PATTERSON DEAR WORRIED: If Burton wants a girl he will have to find one himself. Perhaps one of his problems could be a mother who does too much for him. Burton sounds like a nice fellow. If he wants any help from me, I'll be glad to help him, but I can't intrude on a man's life because his mother asks me to.

DEAR ABBY: You constantly urge people to get someone other than their parents because their parents usually are the problem.)

Don't let up, Abby. Mental health is the most important thing in the world. I dread to think of what might have happened had I been so proud, ashamed, or stung or whatever it is that keeps so many people from seeking the help they need.

THANKFUL. DEAR THANKFUL: Thank you for the testimonial. I know of no one who, at some time in his or her life, couldn't have used counseling. Not everyone needs years of analysis. But in times of stress, sorrow or indecision, a few sessions with a trained therapist can work miracles. Help is as near as one's mental health clinic. And the price is always right.

At 14 my daughter was having problems. She wasn't popular, her grades were poor and we were constantly at each other's throats.

She threatened several times to run away, and I was worried. Her teacher called me in and recommended a psychologist. My daughter agreed to go "just once." It worked out splendidly.

It took only six months. (Both of us went so we could learn to understand each other better.)

Today my daughter is the mother of two well-adjusted children. When they showed signs of emotional turmoil, she saw to it that they went to a professional therapist, just as she did in order to understand themselves better. (Kids frequently need to talk to

Fuel Adjustment On Utility Bill Going Up

By DONNA ESTES
Herald Staff Writer

Not only will Florida Power & Light Co. (FPL) customers in Sanford and the immediate environs face the prospect of a power loss through brownouts in the next few weeks, but they will also be facing a 13 percent increase in the fuel adjustment cost on their monthly power bills.

"We received notice today that the cost of low sulfur oil has been increased by $2 per barrel or 13 percent from $15.45 to $17.45 per barrel. Regular sulfur content oil has been increased by $2.35 per barrel," Scott Burns, district manager for FPL said.

"Customers can look for the fuel adjustment portion of their power bills to increase. The fuel adjustment cost is controlled entirely by the cost of oil," he said.

Fuel adjustment charges have ranged from five cents to to-$14 per barrel for oil and the last price increase came only a month ago." Burns noted that the cost of oil to the power company before the fuel crisis of 1974 was $2 per barrel. The company has estimated it will use 40 million barrels of oil this year. "With 43 gallons of oil in a barrel, that's a lot of oil," he said.

Meanwhile, the firm is continuing its plans to appeal to Gov. Graham and then to President Carter with Graham's expected support for permission to use higher sulfur content oil.

Not only is the higher sulfur oil more plentiful, it is about $2 per barrel less even with the latest increase in cost, Burns said.

Currently, federal anti-pollution standards ban the burning of higher sulfur content oil.

Burns said without the lifting of the ban FPL's customers which include residents in the Sanford area—will be facing brownouts—loss of power.

FPL will be receiving 36 percent less low-sulfur fuel during this month, April, May and June, he said.

Officials Say Sanford Pay Dispute Over

Members of the Sanford City Commission said today they plan to vote tonight to pay a total of $1,120.30 to two city street department employees for time spent over a 10-year period in training with the Florida National Guard.

A search of city records over the past 10 years by Assistant City Manager Richard Cudgley indicated the city owes Danny Martin $865.06 and Kenneth Forsythe $255.24.

"Quite frankly, I think it has been the attitude of the commission to pay these guys and get on with it," said Commissioner David Farr. "Unless someone can come up with something that is very conflicting to show me otherwise, I really think we owe it to those gentlemen to pay them and I'm going to vote that way."

Commissioner Eddie Keith agreed with Farr's assessment. "I'm sure we're going to go on and pay it," commented Keith. "I think we have no other alternative."

Commissioner Julian Stenstrom noted the commission would have to approve the back pay to comply with state law. "If that's the law, that's the law. When I took my oath of office I swore to uphold the law," said Stenstrom. "I'm going to go along with

Irked Carter To Israelis: 'We Still Fall Short'

JERUSALEM (UPI) — U.S. officials said President Carter blew up in anger today when Israel interjected a "new serious complication" that brought his quest for a Middle East peace agreement close to failure.

The Israeli Cabinet in an all night session accepted some but not all of his proposals for an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty. Then Prime Minister Menachem Begin told parliament that the treaty could not be signed until after parliamentary debate.

American officials described this as a "new serious complication" and that the unexpected development caused Carter to explode in anger. Normally treaties are initiated, then signed and then debated by parliament before ratification.

"I will bring this treaty to this house (the Knesset) before we have fixed our signature," Begin said as Carter listened to a simultaneous translation of the Hebrew through earphones. "I take great pride in our democracy."

Carter had listened to the fiery parliamentary debate, instead by repeated interruptions of Begin by Geula Cohen, a disaffected member of Begin's Likud bloc. After a 10-minute dispute she was forcibly ejected from the chamber. Carter appeared somewhat bewildered as leftist deputies repeatedly heckled the prime minister with shouts and catcalls.

Carter had told the parliament earlier that "the people of the two nations are ready now for peace" but "the leaders have not yet proven that we are ready now for peace. They must persevere. With or without a peace treaty, the United States will always be at Israel's side."

Begin, in his speech to the Knesset, said, "the problems that are separating us are serious ones. We don't play around with words or niceties. It is not a matter of words. It is a matter of essence."

Begin indicated that one of the major unresolved problems was a clause in the treaty giving it priority over Egypt's defense pacts with its Arab sister states — a clause Cairo wants changed.

"This is the heart of the matter," Begin said. "We have security problems" on the Lebanese, Syrian and Jordanian frontiers "where hostility remains."

Carter had tried to ease those fears. "Despite the progress of the past six months, we still fall short," Carter said in slow, almost painful tones. "... We have not yet fully met the challenge... We must again contemplate the tragedy of failure."

Using different approaches and terms, Carter repeatedly stressed the need for a commitment by Israel to take the risk required for peace.

"We are now at the very edge of Israel's eternal dream for peace. But we must make this beginning," the president said.

Israeli Troops
Shout Students

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israeli troops today fired into a crowd of Arab students demonstrating in the occupied West Bank against a peace treaty with Egypt and wounded three of them, one seriously, a military spokesman said.

you guys, you're just like everybody else."

In addition to working with the children directly, the officers involved in the arbitration program confer several times a month with members of the county's arbitration task force, according to Bernosky.

"I guess you can see I'm really enthusiastic about this program," said Bernosky. "It's really gratifying to see. And when you get a cop to say, 'I like it, let's give it a chance,' it's got merit."

Juvenile Arbitration Alternative To Lock And Key

By MAX ERKLETTIAN
Herald Staff Writer

The doors swing wide and Sgt. William Bernosky leads a young man and his parents into the back room at the Sanford Police Department.

"This is the booking room," Bernosky tells the boy. "This is where you get your prints taken and where it all starts and goes on, because once you start, it never stops."

The teen continues to the jail. There the youth is placed in a cell and the door slammed behind him.

"If you ever see two eyes grow, it's when that door shuts," said Bernosky, sitting in his office. "Then they know it's not Barney Miller. This is reality."

Reality in this case is the newly instituted juvenile arbitration program.

The arbitration program is an alternative to sending a first-time juvenile offender through the time-consuming court system.

The program works this way: the arresting officer must recommend arbitration. Following that recommendation, the child and child's parents or guardians must agree to the procedure within three days of being notified arbitration has been recommended.

The arbitrator must hear the charges against the youthful offender and make a ruling within seven days of receiving the complaint.

The arbitrator functions like a judge in that he or she can dismiss the case or pass sentence. Sentencing could include counseling, a work program or restitution in property damage cases.

At a time when juvenile crime is on the upswing, Bernosky said he feels the arbitration system is a curb against such a rising crime rate.

"The juvenile arbitrator is an alternative," commented Bernosky. "We're not talking about the hardened criminal. This is the first-time offender with no prior record. I think this gives law enforcement an alternative to suggest to HRS (State Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services) and the judges where the kids don't go to the detention center or jail."

The program also makes provisions for the offenders to learn their actions will not go unpunished.

"A lot of these kids have an attitude that they say 'hey, I'm a juvenile, what can they do to me?' Now these kids aren't getting off scot free."

The offenders who enter the juvenile arbitration program are usually sentenced to some form of work detail. Bernosky draws up a contract for the offenders and their parents or guardians to sign. The contract calls for the child to appear at a designated time at the police department as well, according to Bernosky.

"This one boy asked if he could come down a couple of days each week and work at the department," recalled Bernosky. "No demeaning work is to be done by these kids," noted

Oviedo's Centennial 'Rich Heritage' Celebrated

By ROGER ROY

A hundred years ago Oviedo consisted of a general store and post office on the south shore of Lake Jessup at a place known as Jessup's Landing.

Riverboats coming down the St. Johns from Jacksonville, far to the north, stopped to pick up cotton from John Mitchell's fields or perhaps some citrus, celery, or other agricultural products grown in the area.

Then they would make the long trip back to Jacksonville where the goods would eventually end up in northern markets.

Life in Oviedo was quiet, relaxed, and moved at an easy pace.

The past weekend, residents of Oviedo and its surrounding communities celebrated the 100th birthday of Oviedo and the easy lifestyle that has characterized the area.

The fact that Oviedo has survived 100 years is indeed a credit to the city and its residents have had to contend with.

It survived the "Big Freeze" in 1899, when the temperature dropped to 17 degrees and many people, financially ruined, left Florida. Thirty-five years later Oviedo not only weathered the Great Depression with the rest of the nation, but also had to contend with swarming insects that almost wiped out the area's citrus production.

Oviedo's pride of their past was evident throughout the centennial celebration, which began Friday night with a dance at the Oviedo High School. The music was a mixture of square dances, classical tunes, and country and popular music.

About 600 people, many of them dressed in the colorful costumes reminiscent of different periods in Oviedo's history, were on hand. At 9:30 Frank Wheeler and Mae King, long-time residents of Oviedo, were crowned king and queen of the celebration by U.S. Sen. Richard Stone. As king and queen, they presided over the weekend celebration.

Some had originally planned to speak at Oviedo High School on Sunday afternoon, but upon learning he was to appear on "Meet the Press", he flew in to make the presentation Friday night. Stone said he was impressed by Oviedo's history.

"In a state like Florida, that is so full of landmarks, how many places like Oviedo are there that have such a rich heritage?"

A centennial parade marked the beginning of Saturday's activities. An estimated 7,000 to ◎SUM DAY! If you add the numbers of the calendar days in March that precede Torner's birthday, you'll discover they total one-third the sum of the days in March that follow his birthday, which is on what day?

◎Mystery Word! A word there is, five syllables contains; take one away, not one of them remains. What is the word?

◎Rearrange letters to form three words associated with St. Patrick's Day: 1. DARE PA. 2. LEARN BY. 3. ROCK MASH. Time: one minute each.

◎Riddle-Me-This! What kind of baths do bees take? Bumble baths. Which soda did the Russians invent? Ready? Tear-apart-It.

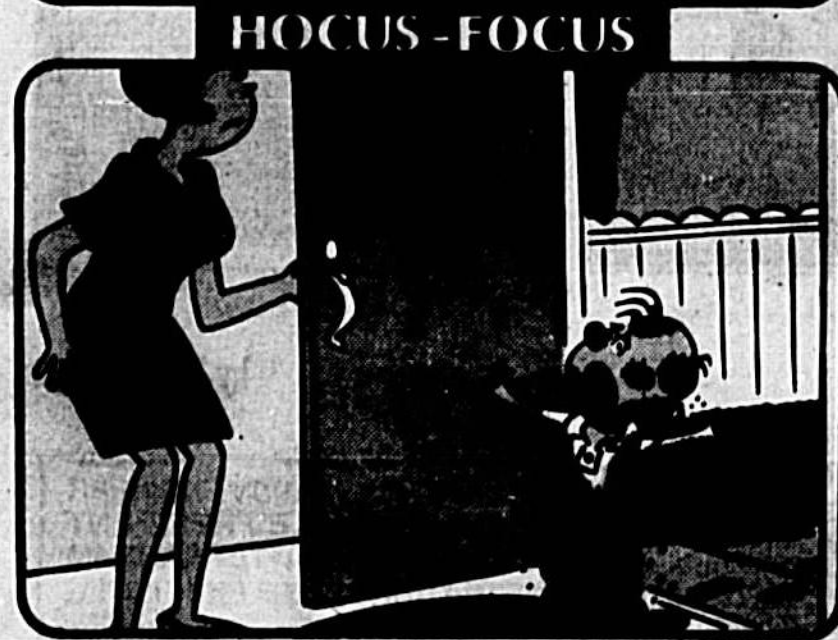

SHAMROCK SHERMANIANS

Practice this stunt for St. Patrick's Day and develop a line of blarney to go with it. Fold a sheet of paper into nine squares. Draw a shamrock in the center square. Tear the paper along the folds. Drop the squares into a hat or box.

Now, assure friends that on this day it is only fitting and proper that you should be able to find the shamrock. Here's the secret: Only one square (the one with the shamrock) has all four of its edges roughly torn.

OFF BEAT! Our drummer friend above is late for his parade. Can you help him catch up with his pals, top right?

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

1. The woman's hair is different. 2. The woman's dress is different. 3. The woman's shoes are different. 4. The woman's hands are different. 5. The woman's eyes are different. 6. The woman's mouth is different.
