DELTONA — They'll be toasting in more than 1996 at midnight on Dec. 31 in Deltona.

They'll also be celebrating the birth of the community as the second largest city in Volusia County.

Nearly 55 percent of the voters in Deltona were in favor of the city's incorporation when the ballots were counted at the conclusion of Tuesday's election.

Deltona, a mostly residential community that is named for DeLand and Daytona Beach, must now establish their government. Voters will return to the polls in November and December to elect a mayor and six members of the city council.

Yesterday's 7,610 to 6,216 vote was a reversal of the previous votes taken on the issue in 1974 and in 1990.

Rival community groups have fought long and hard for their respective sides, establishing strong

Oviedo: New mayor, councilman

By NICK PFEIFAU

OVIEDO — Only 11.5 percent of eligible voters in the city of Oviedo cast their ballots yesterday, including 53 absentee ballots. The turnout produced a new mayor, new council member, and approval of a $6.1 million utility revenue bond.

The voters also approved amendments to the city charter on a vote of 680 to 245.

Regarding the special utility referendum, the city had requested approval to enter into a bond agreement not to exceed $6.1 million, for financing, design, permitting, acquisition, and construction of Phases I and II of the Oviedo water system master plan.

According to the proposal, it is to increase the water supply as well as quality. In pre-election publicity on the matter, the city sent out a statement that said, in part, "Oviedo's current well fields draw water from a layer of fresh water that is directly above a highly mineralized layer of water. If we were to increase the pumping rates of the existing wells, the highly mineralized water would be drawn up. This water is hard to treat and produces undesirable drinking water."

Voters of Oviedo were convinced the bonding proposal was needed, and approved it by 822 to 204 votes.

SANFORD — The two latest business additions to the Seminole Towne Center area will be discussed this Thursday at the Sanford Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

Both Red Lobster and Olive Garden restaurants are asking for conditional use permits to sell alcoholic beverages.

Both restaurants are owned by GMR, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Darden Restaurants, Inc.

The Red Lobster restaurant is to be built at 20 Towne Center Circle. It is designed to have 240 dining seats with 15 lounge seats. It is planned to be open Sunday through Thursday from 11 a.m. until 10 p.m., and Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m. until 11 p.m.

According to Red Lobster Representative Earlene DeGagne, the restaurant will boast a warlike decor, recently being added to new Red Lobster restaurants around the nation.

The Olive Garden Italian Restaurant, to be located at 10 Towne Center Circle, will be a full service establishment, operating the same hours as the Red Lobster.

Plans call for it to have 268 dining seats and 27 in the lounge.

Both requests to be brought before the P&Z meeting this Thursday night are for conditional use permits for the purpose of allowing alcoholic beverage sales for consumption on premises.

According to DeGagne, "all employees who handle alcoholic beverages receive in-house

Lake Mary studies future land use, sets millage rate for taxes

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Cities are required by state mandate to continuously file and update a comprehensive plan. Referred to as the comp plan, it is designed to inform the state regarding possible future development of property, not only as presently planned, but in the future years.

How the land will be used in the future therefore, is called Future Land Use. It has nothing to do with present zoning restrictions, although may appear to be similar. Lake Mary Senior Planner Susan Deines explained that even land presently zoned as agriculture, could be considered as commercial development in a Future Land Use plan.

Several items pertaining to Future Land Use are scheduled to be brought before the Lake Mary City Commission this evening.

One involves slightly less than 26 acres located on Emma Oaks Trail, approximately 1200 feet west of Lake Emma Road.

The property owner, C.T. Thermonos, has petitioned the city to voluntarily annex the land. It will be considered under Ordinance 7-46.

If that is approved, the next ordinance, number 7-49, concerns the same property, but requests a change in the land use amendment. In the county zoning, under which the property has been listed, it is medium density residential. If it is accepted for annexation, the request is for a change to low/medium density residential.

The change in density is the result of commission and staff discussions. Deines has noted that this designation may served as a transitional use between more intensive urban uses such as the light industrial uses to the north, and the lower density residential uses to the south.

Also scheduled for consideration at tonight's meeting are two matters pertaining to 31.5 acres located on Ruchart Road, south of Timacuan, and east of the Southern Securities office building. The request is to change the Future Land Use Element of the comp plan

Delay granted in murder trial

MIAMI — A judge has granted a 60-day delay in the second-degree murder trial of a man charged with shooting to death a burglar who broke into his auto repair business.

Manny Roman was spending the night at his business, which had been burglarized several times before, when the shooting occurred Nov. 14, 1992. Killed was Stanley Dixon, 35, a drug addict with a long criminal record.

Roman wasn't arrested until eight months after the shooting, and the case has received national attention amid a groundswell of support for Roman.

His trial was scheduled to begin Tuesday, but prosecutors sought a 60-day delay to review whether to proceed.

Dixon was struck by five bullets in the front and six bullets in the back. Prosecutors concluded Roman reloaded.

Roman, 57, insists he acted in self-defense and has rejected a plea bargain that offered him community service instead of prison time.

"I hope everything comes out alright," said Roman, a Cuban immigrant. "I hope the law recognizes my life was in danger that night and my action was in self-defense and to protect my life."

Toxic spraying prompts 270 lawsuits

BAKER — The spraying of a toxic sealant on a school roof while students and teachers were in class has prompted at least 270 lawsuits and workers' compensation claims.

Teachers and students have complained of respiratory and eyesight problems, headaches and other ailments since the sealant was sprayed at Baker School in late 1992 and early 1993 by workers dressed in spacesuit-like protective clothing.

Individual and class-action suits have been filed against the Okaloosa County School District, the sealant manufacturer and a company that applied the material.

School district risk manager Jim Palmer said no one from Technical Coating Applicators, a Panama City company contracted to spray the sealant, warned school officials of any danger.

Technical Coating officials have contended it was the school district's responsibility to warn people inside the school.

The chemical is called Neogard and contains isocyanates, known to cause neurological, central nervous system and respiratory problems.

It is manufactured by a division of Jones-Blair Co. of Dallas. Officials there had no immediate comment Tuesday.

Traffic-stopping raccoon doing well

PENSACOLA — A raccoon that virtually stopped Labor Day traffic for two hours while he was rescued from a light pole on a 3-mile-long bridge was doing well and should be released soon, a veterinarian said.

Traffic returning to Pensacola from beach areas on the busy holiday slowed to a crawl until Gulf Power Co. lineman Rick DeLopp went up in a cherry picker and plucked the animal from atop the pole on the Pensacola Bay Bridge.

The raccoon slipped out of DeLopp's snare and hung from the cherry picker's bucket for a couple of seconds before falling. Dr. Cliff Owen, a veterinarian, caught him in a net that slowed but did not entirely prevent him from hitting the pavement.

Owen said the animal was uninjured from the fall although he had a scratch on his chin and a chipped tooth that occurred some time before his rescue.

"He just made some bad choices about transportation," Owen said.

Initial tests showed no indication the animal, about a year old, is suffering from rabies.

Budget cuts would effect homeless

TALLAHASSEE — Homeless advocates warned that proposed federal cuts to programs that provide shelter and training to people who live on the streets would exacerbate their need for help.

"We have 60,000 people in the state of Florida at any one given day, roaming the streets, looking for a place to stay, a meal to eat and health care and everything else that goes along with being homeless," said Lee Breyer, a board member of the Florida Coalition for the Homeless.

But budget proposals in Washington make dramatic cuts — or eliminate — funding for emergency and transitional shelter, training and education and programs designed to help veterans and the mentally ill, according to Marcus Hepburn, president of the Tallahassee Coalition for the Homeless.

"These cuts will assuredly create more homelessness in our community," Hepburn said.

Families make up a third of Florida's homeless population and children 14 percent but they usually seek anonymity in an effort to protect their dignity, Breyer said.

"They are part of the hidden homeless," he said. "They're finding places that are out of the public eye."

Offices set up to help stop Medicare fraud

By KAREN TESTA
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Using 44 phantom medical clinics, billing and transportation companies, one man was able to bilk $120 million from the federal Medicare program by charging for services that were either not performed or unnecessary.

While the high figure is unusual, the method is not.

An estimated $2 billion is lost each year in South Florida to Medicare fraud. And the lure of unsuspecting elderly who congregate here makes it the nation's top spot for such crime, prosecutors say.

Now, it is also the new home of the country's first satellite anti-fraud office, which opened Tuesday.

"There's no place in the country more in need or more receptive to this kind of effort than South Florida," said U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, who cut the ribbon on the office, a division of the Health Care Finance Administration.

The office's six staffers will train new law enforcement staff, assist investigations and conduct outreach programs in the community to teach Medicare recipients how to guard against fraud. Workers speak both English and Spanish.

In recent years, Medicare fraud has become the crime of choice for con artists looking for big, easy money.

There are relatively few safeguards in place to screen people and companies who apply for a Medicare provider number, which allows them to tap into virtually unlimited federal funds.

Until recently, many crooks who applied used a post office box as an address. That is no longer allowed in South Florida and will be prohibited nationwide by this fall, said Jud Berk, senior adviser for the Health Care Finance Administration.

New York, California, Illinois and Texas also are hotbeds for Medicare fraud, she said, but do not have satellite, anti-crime units.

The work of the Miami anti-fraud office, which costs about $300,000 a year to operate, will be evaluated in four to five months. If it is successful, similar offices may be set up in Brooklyn, N.Y., and Los Angeles, Berk said.

Of the billions spent annually across the country on Medicare, Graham said $1 of every $10 goes to fraud. In South Florida, $1 of every $8 is siphoned off by swindlers.

Graham said he would soon introduce legislation which, among other things, increases the civil and criminal penalties for fraud.

The nation's worst Medicare fraud case yet came to light this summer in Miami, when Akiyoshi Yamada was charged with stealing $120 million over three years through a network of four dozen clinics.

Yamada pleaded guilty to two counts of mail fraud and faces up to 15 years in prison. He was among 37 people arrested this summer for a total of $145 million in alleged fraud in South Florida, home to 2.5 percent of all Medicare recipients.

Nudity ordinance enforced

By Associated Press

TITUSVILLE — Summer may be waning, but Brevard Sheriff Jake Miller is getting ready to turn up the heat on nudists frequenting Playalinda Beach.

Miller said Tuesday he would begin issuing citations and arresting nudists as soon as Canaveral National Seashore reopens, possibly by Friday. The seashore, which includes Playalinda, is closed because of Thursday's planned launch of the space shuttle Endeavour.

Previously, Miller said he would not enforce an anti-nudity county ordinance passed in May until a court challenge filed by nudists was resolved. The Orlando Sentinel reported today.

His plans changed because the court challenge is moving slowly and Brevard County commissioners want to see their ordinance in action.

Abortion shooting Group plans meeting in Pensacola

By Associated Press

PENSACOLA — The leader of a religion-based abortion-rights group says she does not believe holding its annual conference in Pensacola — the scene of three anti-abortion slayings — will prompt more violence.

But the Religious Coalition for Reproductive Choice is taking no chances. Off-duty police are being hired to protect the Sept. 17-18 conference, and the exact locations of meetings and other events will be kept secret until a few days before.

"We certainly don't want to do anything that is going to further ignite that community and endanger those folks," the Rev. Katherine Hancock Ragsdale said Tuesday.

The Episcopal priest from the Boston area is president of the Washington, D.C.-based coalition of 38 organizations.

"We felt it was really important to show our solidarity with women, health-care providers and the religious people in Pensacola who are pro-choice," said coalition program director Laurie Shepard.

Pensacola anti-abortion activist Vicky Conroy called the conference a political maneuver to attract attention the coalition could not have gotten by holding its conference in Washington, as usual.

"They would be lost in the shuffle of politics in Washington," Conroy said. "In order to gain notoriety, they've chosen Pensacola."

Ragsdale denied the group is coming here for the publicity.

But, she added "We obviously don't abhor publicity. We think it's absolutely essential that people come to understand that the vast majority of religious people and religious denominations are pro-choice."

Three of five people who have been killed by abortion opponents nationwide, including the only two doctors, have been slain in Pensacola. The other two were receptionists at abortion clinics in Massachusetts.

Dr. David Gunn, 47, of Eufaula, Ala., was shot March 10, 1993, as he arrived to perform abortions at Pensacola Medical Services.

Dr. John Bayard Britton, 69, of Fernandina Beach, and retired Air Force Lt. Col. James Barrett, 74, of Pensacola, died outside another Pensacola clinic, the Ladie Center, on July 29, 1994. Barrett's wife, June, was wounded but survived.

More than 80 speakers, activists, religious leaders and others are expected to attend the conference.

Events will include the presentation of the first annual Jim Barrett Memorial Award for "promoting constructive discussion of women's reproductive rights, health and related issues." It will go to the Pensacola Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of which the Barretts were members.

Mechelle Lynn Dover, 29, 1325 Vine Street, Jacksonville and Melina Shea Robertson, 22, 1065 Second Place, Longwood were arrested by Sanford police for affray after the two engaged in a confrontation at a gas station at 3803 S. Orlando Drive on Saturday night about 10 p.m.

Open container arrest

Willie Devine Lawrence, 35, 112 Country Club Drive, Sanford was arrested by Sanford police Saturday for an open container violation when he was seen sitting at Lincoln Court with an open 16 ounce can of Silver Thunder beer.

Grand theft arrest

Rodney Real, 26, 506 Rivera Drive, Altamonte Springs was arrested by Lake Mary police Saturday for grand theft. Real had purchased an airless paint sprayer from a home improvement store in the 4000 block of Lake Mary Boulevard. Real allegedly returned to the store after putting the merchandise he had paid for into his vehicle and took an identical model from the shelf past the cashier who had helped him before, saying he wanted to compare models. He was stopped by the manager and asked to return with the $500 sprayer which he had not paid for and was later arrested.

License related arrests

- Michael Wayne Davis, 18, 177 E. Floyd Avenue, Lake Mary was arrested by sheriff's deputies for driving under the influence and driving while license is suspended/revoked after they were called to investigate an impaired driver on Heathrow Boulevard. Davis allegedly created a disturbance at the gate while trying to get into the guarded community. His blood alcohol levels measured .147 and .136 during breath tests.
- Linda Sue Ortiz, 31, 200 Palm Place, Sanford was arrested by deputies near U.S. Hwy. 17-92 and County Road 427 for driving while her license was suspended and carrying a foreign license while the Florida license is suspended. A computer check showed her Florida license was suspended and she was carrying a valid New York license. She was arrested following the investigation of a traffic accident.
- Beth Allison Lee, 18, 9 Sleepy Hollow Cove, Longwood was arrested by Longwood police for running a stop sign at Windmill Way and Tarry Town Trail and driving with a suspended/revoked license.

Unmarried coupling

Living together not just for the young any more

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Unmarried couples: not just for the young anymore.

One of every eight Americans aged 45 and over is in a nontraditional household, the American Association of Retired Persons reported Tuesday.

But public policy has failed to keep pace with the changing living arrangements of these millions of people, the association said in a study entitled "The Real Golden Girls."

Once the province of young people wary of marriage, households made up of unmarried couples now are home to more than 885,000 people 45 and over, most living with someone of the opposite sex, the study said.

While the bulk of the nation's 5 million-plus unmarried couples involve people under age 45, the share in older age groups has been growing steadily over the last several years, AARP reported in analyzing Census data.

Many of these arrangements exist because partners fear losing pension and other retirement income from a former spouse if they remarry, it said.

More than 700,000 people older than 45 live with roommates that the study said sometimes recall "The Odd Couple." Like Felix and Oscar, widowed or divorced, unrelated men become roommates for companionship and security. While men are more likely to become roommates, women tend to wind up together when one invites another to share her home.

Medical visitation rights and decision-making are traditionally reserved for next of kin, the report noted, raising problems for people living in nontraditional households.

In addition, Social Security and pension benefits are designed for the so-called traditional family household.

AARP, an advocacy organization for people aged 50 and over urged policy makers to seek ways to accommodate nontraditional households.

Other types of nontraditional household detailed in the report include:

—Golden Girls: Like the characters in the television show, these are groups of older women who were friends or neighbors in their youth. They reunite as roommates after divorce or the death of their spouses. They are included in miscellaneous nontraditional families, accounting for more than 1.7 million people aged 45 and up.

—Grandparent caregivers: A half-million grandparents make homes for grandchildren without either parent of the children. They can face legal problems in medical emergencies and cannot add the youngsters to their medical insurance. These households account for 551,000 people aged 45 and over.

—Extended families: Large families of nonimmediate relatives who share homes and incomes. More than 5 million people 45 and over live in extended families.

—Group homes: This is often the choice of the disabled who live together with staff who can provide health and home care. Group quarters account for about 26,000 people in their middle and older years.

Finishing work on defense spending bills

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — More money for weapons and the revival of plans for a national missile defense system are the main thrust of Senate bills to strengthen America's defenses in 1996 and future years.

The Senate votes today on a $265 billion bill to authorize defense spending in fiscal year 1996 — $7 billion more than President Clinton requested.

That vote follows passage Tuesday evening of a parallel bill to appropriate $243 billion for specific Pentagon programs next year, $6 billion above the administration's request.

The most contentious issue in both bills was the decision to add $600 million to the president's $3 billion request for national missile defense. Half of the increase would go to build a multi-site anti-missile system that challenges the basic principles of the 1972 U.S.-Soviet Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

The Senate planned to vote today on a compromise plan on missile defense worked out after Democratic objections to the original Republican proposal threatened to delay passage of the bill.

The compromise, crafted by senior members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, commits the Pentagon to developing an anti-missile system, but not, as in the original version, to deploying a system by 2003.

It calls for negotiations with Russia on changing the ABM treaty, the cornerstone of Cold War nuclear deterrence that limited both superpowers to only one anti-missile site.

It says the United States should consider withdrawing from the ABM treaty if those negotiations fail.

Republicans made clear they would push ahead with their goal of constructing a ground-based national defense system to protect Americans from the growing missile threat from such rogue nations as North Korea and Iraq.

"We owe that to the American people," said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, one of the architects of the compromise. "This sets a clear path to deployment," added Sen. John Warner, R-Va., another key player.

Opponents accused the Republicans of trying to revive President Reagan's vision of a space-based "Star Wars" defense system, and warned that Russia would renege on other arms reduction pacts if the United States unilaterally disregarded its ABM obligations.

"The ABM treaty is the foundation on which all the arms control agreements we have are based," said Sen. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D.

Republicans, he said, want to "build a brand new gold-plated boondoggle called 'the Stars Wars program' at the very time that we have spent months trying to figure out how to balance the federal budget."

Much of the other additional funding in the two spending bills is aimed at making the military more combat-ready by beefing up spending on existing equipment such as the Comanche helicopter, "smart bombs," fighter planes and naval destroyers.

Included is $1.5 billion requested by the administration for a third Seawolf nuclear submarine; $1.17 billion to buy 24 F-18 fighters, double the number requested; and $400 million more than the administration sought to deploy smart bombs and missiles on existing bombers.

The Senate bills, however, do not have any new money to expand the fleet of B-2 stealth bombers beyond 20 aircraft.

The House appropriations bill provides $540 million to resume B-2 production but rejects any new money for a third Seawolf. The House has passed its version of the authorization bill and is to resume debate on the appropriations bill Thursday.

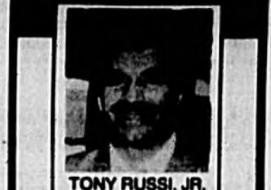

Authorization bills establish programs and set up general funding for those programs. Appropriations bills provide specific spending amounts for those programs. The difference in spending between the two Senate bills is largely due to the fact that some defense appropriations are considered in separate legislation for military construction and Energy Department nuclear weapons programs.

The House and Senate bills must be reconciled before the final legislation is sent to the president.

In other action on the authorization bill Tuesday, the Senate approved $50 million for a resumption of nuclear testing. However, it agreed to language offered by Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., making clear that the money is meant only to prepare for testing, and does not authorize an end to the U.S. testing moratorium.

Say thanks to mail carriers

"Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." Sound familiar? Is it the official motto of the U.S. Post Office and Postal Service? No. The post office has no motto.

But on Sept. 7, 1914, when the New York Post Office Building on Eighth Street was formally dedicated, a well-meaning architect, William M. Kendall, had the inscription put on the building he helped design. Since that time, it is the accepted, (but not official) motto.

Except for not having snow to contend with during their rounds here in Central Florida, our postal workers certainly live up to that old saying. Delivering mail may appear to be an easy job to some. But it takes a special type of person to handle these duties and responsibilities. Those who question this should put themselves in the postal worker's walking shoes for a few trips. It won't be long before sore feet and aching backs will give you a good example of what it may be like.

Although not mentioned in the unofficial motto, postal carriers are also threatened by dogs, irate homeowners, and even robbers. Some are ridiculed, threatened, and even sexually harassed. Yet, day after day, they continue to deliver the mail, not only that letter from a loved one, but the bills and bulk mail as well.

About the only time the general public even thinks about a postal worker is when the cost of mailing a letter goes up a few cents. Then some people have a tendency to question if the money is being well spent and well managed.

But have one day come about without delivery, for example, due to a hurricane, people look at this saying, and complain that carriers aren't doing their jobs.

On this 81st anniversary of that building dedication in New York, even though the slogan was only the work of an architect, let's spend at least part of today showing appreciation for our postal employees and their managers.

Going through rain, heat, gloom, the barking dogs, and all the rest of the hazards isn't easy. But they are doing it on a regular basis, and serving our needs. They deserve our thanks.

Promoting beliefs

As the official spokesman of the United Klans of Florida, Templar Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, I would like to go on record as stating that it is the policy of this organization to promote its beliefs openly and publicly. We promote our beliefs via literature distribution, rallies and by granting interviews to the media.

We do not resort to violence to get our ideas across to the public.

It is the policy of the Templar Knights to expel any member caught advocating violent acts. It is also our policy to expel any member caught using illegal substances. We have expelled such types in the past and will continue to do so, without regret.

We do not condone the tragic act of violence in Oklahoma, nor do we condone public officials who use the incident as a cheap way of collecting a few extra votes. The way to promote an ideology is to put it before the public in an honest and straightforward manner, without fear. If you can't win people to your point of view without violence, you cannot win their hearts. Any change of government brought about through violence and terror cannot last and cannot hold the hearts of the people for long.

The Templar Knights will continue to speak out openly and publicly and to promote our beliefs peacefully in the public arena. Those who seek to use acts of violence as a means of expressing themselves can look elsewhere for a home. Such types will find that the door to the Templar Knights is closed to them.

Americans are still free to speak out without resorting to senseless acts of violence to make a point.

States may propose budget amendment

The American Legislative Exchange Council, a group of preponderantly conservative state lawmakers from around the country, recently held its annual meeting in San Diego. A range of subjects were discussed by the 1,500 attendees, but the most intriguing was the idea of calling the first constitutional convention in nearly two centuries.

Were ALEC an unimportant organization, then the subject of a constitutional convention might not be taken seriously. But its membership includes the speakers of 32 state legislatures and 34 majority leaders. If they unanimously decided that there ought to be a convention, then they very well could make it happen.

The purpose of such a convention would be to offer amendments to the constitution. Article V extends this power to the states as a way to compel Congress to act on a constitutional amendment that the people and the state legislatures want.

The last time there was a serious prospect of a state-led constitutional convention was just after the turn of the century. The state legislatures wanted Congress to pass an amendment allowing for the direct election of U.S. senators.

Congress finally proposed the amendment in 1912, but only after 30 states (of the required 31 at the time) passed resolutions calling for a convention. Had Washington remained unresponsive to the states, the convention would have been held and the amendment ultimately enacted without Congress' help.

Eight decades later, a similar scenario is shaping up. Although little has been written about it, 32 state legislatures have adopted resolutions calling for a convention to propose the balanced-budget amendment. If two more states sign on, the American people will witness the first constitutional convention since the document was ratified in 1787.

But the state resolutions call for a limited convention. That means that delegates can only discuss a single amendment. In this case the constitutionally required balanced budget.

The reason the state legislatures endorsed a limited rather than open constitutional convention is that they wanted to allay any fears of a runaway convention, in which delegates conceivably could re-write the entire constitution.

Such fears are unfounded, of course. Even if delegates took complete leave of their senses, and radically rewrote the constitution — say replacing the presidency with a monarchy or reinstating Prohibition — the proposals would still have to be ratified by three-quarters of the states.

So, then, since there is no real danger of a runaway convention, it makes sense to hold an open convention where not only the balanced-budget amendment is considered, but also several other amendments that are supported by a solid majority of the American people.

For instance, a term-limits amendment applying to members of Congress almost certainly would be ratified by the states. However, the House failed to pass term limits earlier this year and the bitterly divided Supreme Court declared that states may not limit the terms of their congressional representatives. The only way to get term limits, to reflect the will of 70 percent of the public, is by way of a constitutional convention.

The most intriguing was the idea of calling the first constitutional convention in nearly two centuries.

Vision never stops evolving

WASHINGTON — As a youngster growing up in the '60s and '70s, I saw it at least a dozen times — Alfred Eisenstaedt's unforgettable Life magazine cover shot, taken 50 years ago, of a sailor kissing a nurse on V-J Day in Times Square.

To my teen-age eyes, the uniformed pair's embrace represented the perfect picture of wartime romance: spontaneous, passionate, urgently but innocently sexy. The horrors of war, the photo said, are over. Let the good times begin again.

Eisenstaedt's death recently at 96 gave us another glimpse of what became his signature shot. Once again, I admired its perfect composition, how it captured, through people whose faces we never see, a nation's rekindled joy.

But it sparks something different in me today than it did when I was 15. Some classic images — such as Mathew Brady's bleak Civil War compositions — would seem to have a similar impact on viewers of any era. Others suggest different things to different people at different times.

A few years ago, I ran across the Eisenstaedt photo in a newspaper war retrospective and waited to feel the same soft sentiment it always engendered.

But for some reason, I found myself wondering: What was the nurse feeling at the moment the photo was snapped?

For the first time, I noticed that she is bent over backward, at a nearly 45-degree angle, with her leg slightly twisted to help her maintain her balance. Because she isn't returning the sailor's hug — her visible arm hangs at her side — it is inaccurate to describe their connection as an embrace. But neither is she pushing him away. The woman appears as impassive as a rag doll — neither reciprocating nor rejecting the advance.

The sailor's physical intent, however, seems clear. You can read his resolve in the way his whole upper body bends hers back, the way one arm encircles her waist while the other forms a crook perfect for positioning a head for a kiss. The clenched elbow ensures that she's not getting away — though there's no real suggestion that she wants to.

Eisenstaedt said that he happened upon the shot while scouring Times Square on that momentous day. He noticed a sailor in the Navy's distinctive blue uniform grabbing, kissing and hugging every woman in sight. Following him, the photographer waited until he grabbed a slim nurse all in white — and then snapped.

Analyzing the resulting photo, reading the sailor's and the nurse's disparate body languages, I wonder.

Is she, as I once assumed, as rapturous as the man holding her? Is she as caught up in this moment of liberation, in the longed-for end to a struggle unimaginable to those of us who never lived through it?

Or is she stunned by an intimate liberty being taken by a stranger before dozens of people? Was her impassivity that of someone caught unawares, or that of a woman who'd prepared herself, her lips, for the offering? Could she have felt some strange combination of all those things?

These may be '90s questions forced on a '40s vision, but I wish I knew. Knowing how time and celebrity can alter people's views, I'm not even sure I'd trust whatever the nurse's stated feelings about that moment were.

But somehow, the photo that once suggested only romance to me now whispers complexity. Because the photo hasn't changed, my eyes must have.

My wondering has less to do with what's right or wrong than with how a nation's vision may change with the years. The photo illustrates how an act that is tolerated or even lauded in one era might be generation later be regarded as unacceptable. It shows how 50 years — during which terms such as "date rape" became part of the lexicon, record numbers of women learned self-defense and women became "assertive" while men became "angry" — can alter an outlook.

Or maybe it's personal. In the decades between looking at the photo and seeing something wonderful and looking at it and seeing only questions, I have become a woman like many women. We've experienced enough uninvited touches — some that we pretended didn't matter, others that mattered far too much for pretense — to ask questions that once never would have arisen.

And I've met dozens of men who are sick to death of women's fears and suspicions — who, tired of feeling like the enemy, will wonder why anybody would see anything but joy in Eisenstaedt's still-amazing masterpiece.

While part of me wishes things were as simple — for the nation and for me — as they once seemed, most of me is glad for the questions.

And, because vision never stops evolving, I know this: Fifty years from now, I may look at Eisenstaedt's masterpiece and see something else entirely.

Analyzing the resulting photo, reading the sailor's and the nurse's disparate body languages, I wonder.

Bush bites tongue on Clinton's leadership

WASHINGTON — Former President George Bush continues to avoid press interviews because he can't help belittling Bill Clinton — whom he refers to in private conversations and correspondence with friends as "unbelievable."

"Aren't these people (the Clintons) unbelievable?" Bush wrote in a recent letter to a friend. "Can you believe they run things?"

Another close friend of Bush told us the former president has offered similar thoughts to him in private, adding that Bush is especially critical of Clinton's foreign policy. "Yes, he thinks the Clintons are so unbelievable," this friend said. "That's the word he's used with them. He thinks they're so repulsive. He thinks they're buffoons."

Bush's press aide Jim McGrath could not confirm that the remarks were made, but said he would not be surprised if they were true. He cited Clinton's policies in China and Haiti as two areas where Bush has questioned the judgment of his successor. In each case candidate Clinton spoke out against the Bush administration's handling of the issue, while President Clinton eventually adopted the same stance. "President Clinton built on what Bush has done" while giving his predecessor little credit, McGrath said.

Since leaving office in 1993, Bush has had little contact with Clinton, though he did appreciate a call from the commander-in-chief last spring. Clinton was calling to thank him for resigning his lifetime membership in the National Rifle Association after an NRA fund-raising letter referred to federal agents as "jack-booted government thugs." Bush confidants say he undertook the act as a personal tribute to a Secret Service agent who died in the Oklahoma City bombing. The agent had once been assigned to guard Bush.

Clinton was on a foreign trip at the time, yet he made a considerable effort to reach Bush by telephone — which he was able to do while in Ukraine. A source close to Bush calls it a warm gesture on Clinton's part, but says it wasn't all that great for Bush — considering the praise came from the man who took his job.

The last time the two presidents met was July 17 at the unveiling of Bush's portrait in the White House. Before that, it was at the now-infamous celebrity golf tournament at which Bush's drives accidentally struck two spectators, drawing blood from a woman who was hit in the head.

Ever the patrician gentleman, Bush generally avoids sharp criticism of the Clintons even in private gatherings of friends. Lately, however, some of these friends — many of whom served in his administration — have been pushing him to be more public about his real views. Otherwise, they fear the Clinton administration will continue to denigrate his record without response.

These friends are hoping to appeal to Bush's interest in establishing his place in history. Nearly three years removed from the White House, Bush still believes his presidency is underrated and his long years of service are not getting the credit they deserve. Some suspect the 71-year-old ex-president will be more outspoken in lectures affiliated with his $85 million presidential library at Texas A&M. The facility is due to be completed in 1997.

In the meantime, Bush occupies himself with his 13 grandchildren, and by boasting the political careers of two of his sons — Texas Gov. George W. Bush and Jeb, who plans another gubernatorial run in Florida. "As a proud father," one friend told us, "he's said that the careers of his children are his greatest redemption in the end."

Former President George Bush continues to avoid press interviews because he can't help belittling Bill Clinton.

community bases. The votes have always been won by fewer than 1,000 votes.

The community was established in 1982 when Elliot, Robert and Frank Mackle developed inexpensive housing on 15,000 acres of what was once scrub brush land to the east of the newly-constructed Interstate 4 that connected Tampa and Daytona Beach.

It was billed as an affordable suburban community that had all the services of a city without the need for city services. The developers had intended to sell the homes to northern retirees.

Instead, young families were attracted by the inexpensive homes and the proximity to businesses and employment opportunities in Daytona Beach, Sanford and Orlando. The younger residents had higher expectations than the intended buyers and soon they were clamoring for city services.

Those who favored incorporation also said that Deltona needed more local control. Today, matters for the city are decided by the Volusia County Council acting on advice from the Deltona Municipal Services District Advisory Board.

Those who opposed it said the services and control were not needed and that incorporation would only lead to higher taxes.

A study commissioned last year by the Volusia County Council concluded that Deltona could become a city without raising taxes, provided it does not change the services that are currently offered through the county.

More than 55,000 people live in Deltona these days. About 1,300 new residents move in each year.

According to the Volusia County Supervisor of Elections office, about 43 percent of the registered voters turned out for Tuesday's elections.

or an 80.1 percent favorable reaction.

Regarding the city council, Miriam "Mimi" Bruce won election over John Hodgkin to serve as the new mayor, replacing Judith A. Green, who did not seek re-election. Bruce reportedly obtained 754 votes, or 71.3 percent, while Hodgkin received 303 votes.

While there were two city council seats with expiring terms, Group I councilman Phillip E. Hampton chose to seek re-election, and was unopposed.

In the one council seat on the ballot, for Group II, George Vele defeated Charles McLaughlin, Jr. drawing 58.1 percent of the votes cast. The final tabulation was 805 for Vele, and 457 for McLaughlin.

Vele replaces Councilman Michael S. Craig who did not seek re-election. The next regular Oviedo City Council meeting is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 18. With special sessions called for Sept. 11 and 25.

The City Clerk's office reported the new mayor and council members will be officially sworn into office at the October 2 council meeting.

alcohol awareness training which provides instruction on proper carding procedures, identifying and handling intoxicated guests and applicable liquor laws.

In addition to the two restaurant requests, additional items scheduled for this Thursday night's P&Z meeting include a request for an automobile dealer/sales establishment at 2501 Sanford Avenue (corner of 25th Street), and a request for conditional use of property at 1311 Oak Avenue, for the purpose of establishing an elementary school, church operated.

The P&Z will also discuss changes to the Sanford Lane Development Regulations landscape, buffer and tree requirements, relating to barbed wire/cyclone/chain link fence prohibitions.

The Planning and Zoning Commission will meet beginning at 7 p.m. this Thursday, Sept. 7, in the commission chambers of Sanford City Hall, 300 N. Park Avenue.

from commercial to high density residential.

The property is owned by Hubert Earley and Patrick Stenstrom.

Here again, if the Land Use element ordinance, 750 is approved, the next action by the commission at tonight's meeting will be consideration of a developer's agreement for the land use element.

Subject to approval by the city and subject to compliance with all applicable federal, state and city code requirements, the Earley/Stenstrom property is projected for a maximum of 283 dwelling units.

The Lake Mary City Commission meeting is being held tonight rather than on the regularly scheduled first Thursday of the month because items to be considered include the first reading of the proposed fiscal year 1996 budget and setting of the millage rate.

This Thursday night, the Seminole County School Board is scheduled to discuss its budget and millage, and Lake Mary Mayor Lowrey Rockett had previously explained that the two entities could not arrange for budget hearings on the same night.

Tonight's Lake Mary Commission meeting will begin at 5 p.m. with a special budget workshop, followed by the regular meeting beginning at 7 p.m.

Because the meeting is not being held on the regular date, it will not be telecast on cable to Lake Mary residents this evening.

People with cancer aren't expected to heal themselves. People with diabetes can't will themselves out of needing insulin. And yet you probably think, like millions of people do, that you or someone you know should be able to overcome another debilitating disease, depression, through sheer fortitude.

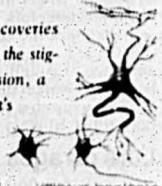

The fact is, in the last decade we've learned that simply snapping out of a depression would be a physical impossibility. Because new medical research has taught us that depression is frequently biological in origin, caused by a chemical imbalance in the brain. This is good news because it reclassifies depression as a physical disease instead of a mental illness.

While these recent discoveries should help relieve some of the stigma associated with depression, a look at history also helps. It's a well documented fact that Abraham Lincoln was depressed for most of his adolescent and adult life.

You see, depression doesn't discriminate. Anyone can get it. And today you can find books written about admitted sufferers Mike Wallace, Joan Rivers, Dick Cavett, and Kitty Dukakis just to name a few.

Please call 1-800-717-3111 if you or someone you know needs help. With this better understanding of depression and a 80% success rate with treatment, we hope you'll see that the only shame would be not calling.

Government recalls flammable scarves

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of thousands of Indian-made sheer rayon and rayon-blend ladies' scarves are dangerously flammable and should not be worn, the Consumer Product Safety Commission warned today.

The agency and 17 importers are recalling 375,000 of the chiffon scarves because they violate the federal Flammable Fabrics Act by burning faster than a sheet of newspaper, officials said.

"If it burns in less than three and a half seconds, then it fails. And that's what we have with these scarves," spokeswoman Kathleen Begala said.

The scarves, all made in India, have been sold nationwide by large retail stores, small boutiques and sidewalk vendors for between $2 and $28.

They are all labeled "Made in India" and "100 percent rayon" or "65 percent rayon/35 percent metallic," Begala said. The vast majority carry the "Fashionique II" label, though not all scarves of this brand name violate the law, she said.

The recall is the largest by the commission involving clothing. Last September, the agency recalled 250,000 rayon and rayon-cotton blend skirts imported from India over similar flammability concerns.

The scarf recall involves square and oblong sizes, in print and solid patterns, some with metallic threads, gold paint designs or sequin trim.

The consumer agency said it had not received any reports of injuries, but warned consumers to stop wearing the scarves and return them to the retailer, where possible, to avoid serious burn injuries.

"If you have a scarf that's made in India, that says 100 percent rayon, that says 'Fashionique,' that's a pretty good indication that this could be in the recall," Begala said. "I would take it back."

Retailers will issue refunds, credit or information on how to receive a replacement scarf, Begala said.

The following brand names appear on scarves that failed flammability tests conducted by the commission: "ATG All that Glitters, Hasting & Smith, April Cornell for Cornell Trading, Casual Corner, Berkshire, Peppermint Bay, Sterling Styles, Putumayo, and Willis Hill for Accessories Int'l."

In addition, scarves without brand names that also may have failed the tests can be identified by the following RN numbers: RN13962, RN36791, RN52466, RN62500, RN63408, RN71290 and RN79756.

These retailers sold the largest number of scarves involved in the nationwide recall: Bon-Worth, Burlington Coat Factory, Caldor, Cato, Hit or Miss, Mervyn's, Ross, T.J. Maxx, Simply 6/Simply Fashions and Venture Stores.

The following 17 importers are participating in the recall: All that Glitters, Ameer Sales Inc., Associated Merchandise Corp., Berkshire Fashions Inc., Cefjon Fashions Inc., Cornell Trading, Delhi-York Inc., Fashionique Int'l, Shalom & Co., Accessories International, India Cottage Export Inc., Pier 1 Imports, Sago Imports, Sonali Corp., Sterling Styles Inc., Sud Amerique Trading and U.S. Shoe Corp.

NATO warplanes return to Bosnian skies

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — NATO warplanes returned to the skies over Bosnia this morning, striking at Serb targets in response to the rebels' failure to move heavy weapons from a 12½-mile exclusion zone hugging the Bosnian capital.

"We have plenty of targets. We have plenty of work left to do," Adm. Leighton Smith, the commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, told a news conference in Naples, Italy.

There was no immediate indication from NATO, or from reports from inside Bosnia, on where or when the planes struck. No detonations were heard early this morning in Sarajevo, indicating the targets were outside the city.

NATO attacks resumed Tuesday after a four-day hiatus because the Bosnian Serbs failed to fulfill NATO and U.N. conditions.

France turns deaf ear to protests

PAPEETE, Tahiti — Turning a deaf ear to protests echoing around the world, France ended its three-year moratorium on nuclear tests with a blast a half-mile beneath a volcanic South Pacific atoll.

The underground explosion Tuesday made the lagoon at Mururoa atoll heave and froth like a whirlpool as the shock wave lashed the water, sending up white foam and mist, a video released by the French military showed.

But the 13 ships in a Greenpeace-led protest flotilla in international waters around the atoll could detect no sign of the test. Most participants learned of it only through radio reports.

The explosion was the first of eight nuclear tests planned by France. French military personnel said the blast Tuesday was designed to test software so France can conduct future tests in computers, without actual detonations.

Making women's goals a reality

HUAIROU, China — In a theater jammed with women singing, "We're going to keep on moving forward," Hillary Rodham Clinton today urged activists from around the world to make sure that the high-minded goals of a U.N. conference on women become a reality.

On a rain-drenched morning, senior American officials accompanying the first lady got a taste of the heavy-handed treatment that women activists have complained about for days in this village 30 miles outside of Beijing.

Criminally security forces, posted at entrances with their arms locked together, shoved away Donna Shalala, the diminutive secretary of Health and Human Services, and Winston Lord, the assistant secretary of State for the Far East.

The two officials were in a crush of hundreds of people struggling to get in the gates and then through a huge backup at metal detectors at the main entrance. Even Betty Friedan, godmother of the U.S. women's movement, couldn't get in.

After a half hour of trying, Shalala and Lord were finally admitted through a side door, their clothes soaked and their hair plastered on their heads.

"The women's movement has been through tougher things than this," Shalala said good-naturedly.

Luis ravages two islands

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Tearing apart roofs and rolling seas that swallowed beachside hotels, Hurricane Luis ravaged two Caribbean islands before heading today toward Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Two people died in storm-related activities even before the arrival of the 700-mile-wide maelstrom of wind and rain, one of the most powerful hurricanes in decades.

With the hurricane still 150 miles away early today off Anguilla in the British Virgin Islands, shrieking winds and torrential downpours brought down trees and power lines in Puerto Rico.

Once the storm passes Puerto Rico by nightfall, forecasters expect it to head north into the Atlantic and away from the U.S. mainland.

Workers honored for decades on job

By CONNIE CASS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Hallie Stillwell has been a teacher, a cowgirl, a newspaper columnist, a storekeeper and a justice of the peace. There's one thing she's never done: Sit and do nothing. At 97, she's not planning to start.

"As long as I'm able to be on two feet, I'll be working," Mrs. Stillwell said from her West Texas ranch.

Jack Bettell is the same. He's been fixing things — first radios, then TVs and VCRs — since he came to New York City at age 19, a Polish Jew orphaned by the Holocaust.

"I'd be unhappy if I couldn't do something with my hands," said Bettell, 72. "I couldn't possibly just sit around."

An early retirement heavy on fishing or golf or travel may be the caper to the American Dream, but it doesn't interest everyone. For some, work is its own reward.

You can see it in the faces of Mrs. Stillwell, pleased with herself after officiating at yet another wedding, and Jack Bettell, content among his wires and picture tubes. Their portraits, along with 35 others bearing the same easy dignity, make up a Smithsonian exhibit, "Going Strong! Older Americans on the Job."

Curator David H. Shayt was inspired by Harvey Wang's series of black-and-white portraits of New Yorkers laboring in disappearing trades — hand-stuffing feather pillows, filling seltzer bottles, digging graves by shovel instead of by backhoe.

When the curator learned that Wang was traveling the country, photographing all sorts of elderly workers from logger to minister to newspaper editor, he knew he had the makings of a show for the Museum of American History. The exhibit continues through Oct. 28.

"The wrinkles, the calloused hands, the soiled jacket, the rusty zipper. The matted up shop that looks like a war zone," Shayt said. "It's real. It's uncontrived."

Since they were caught on film, some of Wang's subjects have died or grown too feeble to work. But on the wall of the Smithsonian, all of them carry on.

Great-grandmother Roberta Blackgoat herds sheep in Big Mountain, Ariz. Mackey Brown of Spokane, Wash., sells fire extinguishers in his seventh decade of peddling door-to-door. Percy Brigham of Cascade Locks, Ore., casts nets into Oregon's Columbia River for salmon and sturgeon, as he has since 1930. Victor Gellineau of New York City paints names on the Empire State Building's frosted glass doors with a hand-lettering he perfected decades ago.

Alongside them are John Causarano of New York City, the blacksmith; Harold C. Cotton of Greensboro, N.C., the hat blocker; Lucy Pearson of Pearsonsville, Calif., who sells hubcaps; and Dorothy Donegan of New York City, jazz pianist.

Many of the photographs are from "Harvey Wang's New York," published in 1990. Others will appear in the book entitled, "Holding On: Dreamers, Visionaries, Eccentrics, and Other American Heroes," a collaboration with National Public Radio reporter David Isay, due out in October.

The pictures and museum captions allow only a peek at working lives too full to be squeezed into a fraction of a second and a few dozen words.

After all, Mrs. Stillwell took her first job in 1916. A teacher in the border town of Presidio, Texas, she tucked a six-shooter in her skirt to fend off Mexican revolutionaries. She married a cowboy in 1918, and helped build a 22,000-acre ranch, a store and a campground. On the side, she writes a weekly column for the newspaper in nearby Alpine, Texas.

Bettell gave up his storefront in Queens, a borough of New York City, after 37 years, when the rent climbed too high. Now he fixes televisions at a friend's shop. The rest of his time goes to sculpting American Indian faces out of hardwood and painting them bright colors, a passion he can't quite explain.

Once in a while, he carves a face he remembers from the concentration camps that nearly killed him.

Some of the Smithsonian staff criticized Shayt's exhibit for failing to note that many elderly Americans keep working because they can't afford to retire.

"They said I romanticized work," said Shayt, sitting in front of a photograph of a white-bearded silver prospector, age 77. "But I look at these faces and I say, 'Would these people really retire if they had more money? Is that the only reason they work?' I don't think so."

Ponder dominates NSS Late Models

By PAUL MARSEGLIA
 Special to the Herald

SAMSULA — Deland's Tony Ponder, driving "Your Season's Ticket" Lumina, dominated racing action in the 25 lap late model feature event Saturday night at New Smyrna Speedway.

Ponder, who notched his fourth win of the season, raced green flag to checkers to secure the victory. Four caution periods bunched the field for restarts, with Ponder easily pulling away from the 17 car field with each new green flag. Ponder took the checkered flag 15 car lengths ahead of Ricky Wood.

"I've driven this car once before, and each time I get behind the wheel the car is awesome," said Ponder, the 1993 NASCAR Sunbelt Late Model champion. "This crew does a good job getting the car race ready. It's a pleasure to drive a car that handles and runs as good as this car."

Rounding out the top 5 respectively were Mike Kubanek, Gary Tiffany and Russ Whitaker.

Chuck Vola outduelled David LeBeau to win the sportman feature event. Vola, who lead every circuit, raced LeBeau side by side for the last four laps before gaining a slight advantage coming out of turn four on the checkered flag lap. Danny Southard was third ahead of Ron Lufcy and Kenny Pratt.

Dave Waddell's misfortune turned out to be Chuck Clouser's good fortune. Waddell charged from the rear of the field to take the lead in the 50 lap bomber special. Once out front, Waddell pulled to a 10 car lead over Clouser. As Clouser was chasing Waddell for the lead, Waddell suddenly slowed and pulled behind the wall with mechanical problems.

Clouser had his mirror full of Jeremy Fitch, who had also come from the rear of the field, and Glenn Castro. With five laps to go, Castro got by Fitch for second place with a bump and run move. Castro was able to close on Clouser's rear bumper with the lead duo racing nose to tail to victory.

Fitch was third, Emil Etzler fourth and Mark Manfredi fifth. Conrad Grenier outclassed a 16 car mini stock field to pick up his 12th feature win of the season. Grenier, who was never headed, led Bob Doxle, Kevin DiMeco, Jared Allison and Ted Vulpius to the winner's circle.

Jerry Symons, racing the high groove, outdrove a charging Randy Hecker to win the modified main event. In tow behind Hecker were Raymond Mark, Bill Gunn and Joe Middleton. Other feature winners were Tony Newcome in the limited late model division, and Allan McCaffrey in the run about feature.

Microwave this dish in minutes

With simple addition you can discover why 8-Layer Tostadas is an ideal busy-day recipe. This recipe takes five minutes to pre-cook the meat, a minute or two to assemble and three minutes heating, adding up to dinner in 10 minutes or less.

It's an excellent microwave recipe that teens and older pre-teens can easily prepare enroute from one activity to the next. Whirlpool Corporation home economists suggest that you pre-cook the ground beef for them in advance and have the remaining ingredients ready. They can do the rest on their own.

8-LAYER TOSTADAS

- 1 lb. lean ground beef
- 1 pkg. (4.8 oz.) or 10 tostada shells
- 1 can (1 lb.) refried beans
- 3/4 cup salsa
- 1 pkg. (8 oz., 2 cups) shredded cheese for tacos
- Shredded lettuce
- Sliced cherry tomatoes
- Sour cream

Crumble beef into 1-quart glass bowl. Cover with paper towel. Microwave at high (100 percent) for 5 minutes until thoroughly cooked and no longer pink, stirring to break up meat once or twice. Add more cooking time, if necessary. Drain well and set aside.

8-Layer Tostadas

Spread 5 of the tostada shells with half the refried beans, 2 to 3 tablespoons each. Top with half the cooked ground beef, half the salsa and half the cheese. Arrange on large microwavable plate.

Microwave at High for 3 minutes until thoroughly heated and cheese is melted, rotating plate after 2 minutes.

Repeat steps 2 and 3 with remaining tostada shells. To serve, top with lettuce, sliced tomatoes and a spoonful of sour cream.

Serves 10.

Wedding hairdo calls for an apology

DEAR ABBY: My family is in turmoil over something that happened before my niece's wedding last week. My blond teen-aged daughter, "Kim," was slated to be a bridesmaid in her cousin's wedding. Two days before the wedding, Kim and a blond friend parted their hair straight down the middle and dyed half of it jet-black?

When I saw the two-toned hair-dos, I called my hairdresser and asked if the damage could be undone. It couldn't.

Abby, I know teens pull stunts like this as a form of harmless rebellion, so I gave what I thought was the best response: "So what; it'll grow out."

When we arrived at the rehearsal dinner the next evening, my sister (the bride's mother) threw a fit and ordered Kim to leave the party. She also told her she was no longer a bridesmaid.

I'm really hurt over my sister's reaction and I think she owes my daughter an apology. When I told her that, she reacted as if I were crazy. Do you have any words of wisdom on this?

MOTHER OF A REJECTED BRIDESMAID

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter chose a most inappropriate time to rebel. On a wedding day, attention should be centered on the bride. Your daughter's startling hair would have diverted attention away from the bride. Kim deserved dismissal for her thoughtless behavior.

The only apology in order here is from your daughter to the bride and her mother.

DEAR ABBY: There may be a simple solution to my problem, but as of now I have not figured it out.

Three months ago, my family and I moved to a new home in a new development. The neighborhood is very nice, the schools are wonderful, and we are happy here. The problem is mine, I am lonely. The neighbors are all quite friendly with one another, and I have tried to become close with them. They always seem happy to accept an invitation from me to go shopping or to come over for coffee, but if I do not initiate this, I don't hear from them.

ADVICE

It's not as if they don't like me, because I'm sure they would make up excuses not to see me if that were the case, and as long as I make the first move, they seem genuinely pleased to spend time with me. But I don't want to appear pushy or overly anxious, so I haven't called anyone in weeks.

I don't know if I should make my feelings known, or just stop calling and see if I ever hear from them. It hurts me every time I look out the window and see them all going shopping together while I sit home alone. Any suggestions?

DEAR ALONE: If you have not called anyone in weeks, perhaps these women think you are no longer interested in pursuing a friendship with them. Break the silence and invite them all over for a backyard barbecue so your families can become better acquainted. If they don't warm up after that, look for friends outside your neighborhood.

It's best not to depend solely on your neighbors for your social life. Involve yourself in community activities. Volunteer at the local hospital or library; join a garden club or genealogy society; volunteer for fund-raising drives or become a teacher's aide. The opportunities are endless. Trust me, you get more than you give when you volunteer.
