Army's Nurses
In Philippines
All Found SafeLiberated At Prison,
Go To Work Caring
For Manilla Wounded

SANTO TOMAS PRISON CAMP, Manila, Feb. 9. (Special) —The long ordeal of the "Angels of Bataan" and Corregidor, the American Army nurses who cared for American and Filipino wounded in the black days of Japanese invasion, is ended at last and all are accounted for.

American troops who liberated this civilian internment camp found them. For all their reasons to celebrate, they would not pause in their newly found work of caring for the wounded in the fight to free Manila.

By way of repaying, they returned in again having obtained from the Americans a supply of drugs, brought to them by 1st Cavalry troops, to work with.

Imprisoned in these islands since early 1942, they knew nothing of penicillin. They thought soldiers were joking when promised that a large American hospital unit would arrive within a few hours and their work would be ended.

Two of those nearly working tonight survived Japanese bombing on Bataan. They were Rose Marie O'Logain, of Chattanooga, Okla., and Rita Palmer, of Hampton, N. H.

Some of the nurses freed at Santo Tomas were taken there after unsuccessful attempts to escape.

About 100 Army nurses were caught in the Philippines when the war began, an arduous effort was made to evacuate them when it became clear that all was lost. Only two groups reached freedom, one by submarine and another by Navy flying boat.

A third group got as far as Mindanao Island before their flying boat was disabled. Many months later they were brought to the Santo Tomas camp, where they joined other nurses in nursing for the sick.

Silver halide, trail Captain Maude C. Davison, of Washington, and her able First Lieutenant Josephine Neibert, of Parlin, Colo., who commanded the huge Hospital No. 2 on Bataan, still head the nurses.

Major Ruth Bradley, who was long stationed at Bataan's Little Baguio Hospital, was only recently transferred here.

Earleen Allen, of Jacksonville, Fla., recently was reunited here with her husband, Captain Garrett Francis Alexander, whom she was transferred to Corregidor with other nurses when Bataan fell. At that time, her husband remained on Bataan.

Vivian Weissblatt, of Portland, Ore., wife of Frank Weissblatt, United Press correspondent, who was the only correspondent captured by the Japanese on the battlefield in this war, was found among the nurses on the camp. Her husband, who was also captured and captured in the early days of the Bataan campaign, is in a prisoner of war camp in Japan.

Mrs. Weissblatt was at Bataan and Corregidor. For more than two years she handled the diet for internment camps, feeding several hundred small children and trying to keep them nourished out of a small variety of available foods.

Artillery Is Used In Manila Against Japs

Superfortresses Hit At Iwo Jima While Smaller Bombers Get Ships, Planes

(By Associated Press) American tanks and artillery smashed at building-entrenched Japanese in the mined Manila streets today as Superfortresses blasted Iwo Jima. Superforts, with smaller bombers and fighters, destroyed or damaged 180 Japanese planes, and dive-bombers in widespread weekend raids.

Allied aircraft and PT boats added more than 30 barges to the toll. The most southern part of Manila was transformed into a battlefield. Bombers joined the land attack squeezing suicide Japanese units into a triangular area with their backs to Manila Bay. The Pasig River was crossed again.

The latest advances in the biggest close-quarter battle of the Pacific war were placed by Maj. Gen. Vernon D. Mudge's First Cavalry Division. Using amphibious vehicles, it forced the Pasig a mile east of Manila on Saturday and then hammered 2200 yards into the southeastern part of the city to join forces with Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler's 37th division in Pandacan.

The 37th division meanwhile pressed southward along a two-mile front. Its west wing was meeting tough resistance in the Ermita district near the Manila dock area, where the most formidable enemy force still in Manila was holding out in pill boxes and fortified buildings.

The 11th airborne division in a fast advance from Manila bay front, plunged within two miles of the city's southern outskirts, and within three miles of a line Hon with the 37th.

The paratroopers also were within about two miles of a southern prong of the cavalry force which went over the Pasig on Saturday near the Philippines Racing club, also known as the Santa Ana track. The crossing was the second made this day by the cavalry. Earlier it had breached the Pasig near San Pedro Makati, a mile southeast of the race track.

One wing of the cavalry plunged into eastern Manila to clear the Santa Ana residential district and then sweep up around a big hook of the Pasig for a junction with the 37th.

Beaufield and Fort

Other mechanized cavalry ranged about a mile and a half southward to reach the area of Nielson military airfield and Fort McKinley.

Warplanes attacking in the path of First cavalry battered Japanese artillery installations at Fort McKinley.

In western Manila, Maj. Gen. Robert B. Beightler's 37th Infantry, moving south from their first bridgeheads continued to meet stubborn resistance from the Japanese battling in the Ermita district below the walled city of Intramuros.

(The Tokyo radio claimed that all American attempts to cross the Pasig had been frustrated and said the Yanks were "nailed down" on the north bank by Japanese artillery.)

Maj. Gen. Joseph M. Swing's 11th air corps troops cleared the south outskirts of Manila with a swift dash up the Manila bay coast to within two miles of a junction with the First cavalry striking toward Nielson cavalry field.

The paratroopers drove through the coastal towns of Paranaque and Bacoor, respectively four and two miles from Manila's southern boundary. Bacoor is two miles southwest of Nielson field.

Other airborne forces which had been fighting the Japanese around Nichols field, just east of Paranaque, seized 10 eight-inch and two six-inch guns, along with numerous small pieces. They also destroyed Japanese concrete pillboxes and ammunition dumps at the Nichols field area.

Where 'Big Three' May Have Met

Quick Action On Bank Asked By Roosevelt

Future Full Of Promise And Danger, Says President In Note To Congress

(WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, 1945) Coming on a future full of promises and dangers, President Roosevelt asked Congress today to carry out the Bretton Woods agreement for world economic cooperation. In his first major statement since leaving for the Big Three meeting, the President asked specifically for "prompt action" in authorizing American participation in a proposed international bank and international monetary fund.

Office of War Mobilization renewed its appeal for national service legislation as a compromise manpower "control plan" was reported under preparation.

(WASHINGTON, Feb. 12, 1945) Meats finally disappear from civilian markets by midsummer, government food officials predicted today. The forecast accompanied new steps to divert the larger portion of current production into war stocks.

Cotton supplies could be expected, however, to reappear when fall marketing of livestock begins their normal season.

With late fall marketing falling below previous expectations, the agriculture department cut its forecast of cotton production for the year from 1,200,000,000 pounds to 1,200,000,000. Last year 24,000,000,000 pounds were produced.

May Fall To Lowest

It is possible that per capita civilian consumption this year may fall to the level it had since 1935 when meat supplies dropped after emergency imports of dried ham from Argentina and production was curtailed by means of the government's pig killing program designed to improve farm prices.

Per capita consumption in 1935 averaged about 120 pounds. Last year it was 140 pounds. Food officials said the year's average may be between 120 and 140 pounds, depending on length of the war in Europe, foreign requirement and livestock production trends.

There is little doubt that live meat supplies will be reduced sharply from the present rather tight condition. Live meat marketing and slaughter will be small in the spring and summer.

Berry Shipments Show Influence Of Price Ceiling

JACKSONVILLE, Feb. 12 (UPI)—The strawberry movement doubled at Phont City last week showing influence of new price ceiling, William L. Weller, Director of Farmers' Markets, said in his crop and market review yesterday.

"Appreciation for the nation's services goes to growers in the Florida vegetable Committee of OPA, having Washington was expressed by members of the committee which I am one, at a meeting in Orlando last week," Weller stated.

The Philippines Islands were under the control of Spain for 300 years before the Americans secured them in the war with Spain in 1898, Judge Malcolm said, adding that it is to this period of Spanish control that the Filipinos owe their Christianity. To Americans, he added, they owe their independence, for the Americans gave them democracy and taught them the way of freedom.

And in 1935 the Congress of the United States, with only six dissenting votes in the Senate, voted to give the Philippine Islands their complete independence beginning in 1946, and since the Japs attacked, this law has since been amended to guarantee complete independence as soon as the Japs have been driven out.

To the American civil service in the Philippines, Judge Malcolm paid great tribute, but to American complacency, lack of preparation for war, and its appeasement policy toward Japan, he had only words of reproof.

The compact signed in Provincetown Harbor by the Pilgrims bore 41 names; the entire company aboard numbered 101.

Accidental Deaths

Deaths from accidental injuries in the United States in 1944 numbered about 94,000, or approximately 7,000 less than in 1941, essentially a peacetime year, and 2,000 less than in 1942 or 1943, both wartime years, according to the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which bases its estimate on provisional data available at this time.

The decline in automobile travel which the company points out, was brought about by the rationing of gasoline, is given as the main factor in holding accidental deaths down in these difficult years when an increase could have been expected. During 1944, it is estimated, about 24,000 persons were killed by motor vehicles, approximately the same number as in 1943 but 16,000 fewer than in 1941.

Home accident fatalities are also reported as somewhat less frequent in the year just passed than in 1943, and about equal to those occurring in 1941. Fatal occupational accidents, despite wide industrial expansion and the employment of large numbers of green hands, were fewer in 1944 than in 1943 or 1941.

Catastrophes—accidents in which at least five persons are killed—took well over 3,500 lives in 1944. This figure is more than 300 above that for 1943, but 800 more than in 1942 and 2,500 above the number in 1941. Catastrophes due to explosions at military depots and explosive loading docks, to commercial air transport accidents, to conflagrations both in homes and in public buildings, and to tornadoes, caused more deaths in 1944 than in 1943. On the other hand, service flying accidents, explosions in ammunition manufacturing plants, and railroad and coal mine disasters each killed fewer persons in 1944 than in 1943.

The greatest loss of life in any one accident during last year, the company reports, was 322 deaths in an explosion of two ammunition ships in California. Four other major accidents during 1944 were the circus fire at Hartford, Conn., which claimed 168 lives, many of them children, the tornado which swept parts of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland last June, with a loss of life exceeding 150; a gas tank explosion, which killed 130 persons in Ohio; and the explosion on a destroyer at the entrance to lower New York Bay which took a toll of more than 100 lives.

Fair Exchange

The average citizen, devoting what little time he has left from war work to thinking about his postwar plans, is naturally interested in the administration pledge for 60,000 jobs. But in that thinking there is one factor frequently lost sight of. How are we going to keep up such employment? The obvious answer is exports, but that used half of the story.

To export large amounts of manufactured goods, we must have market's able to pay. And unless we ourselves are willing to buy, and import the goods of other countries, they will not have money to pay us for our exports. To subsidize exports in order to make jobs would seem like throwing away our resources, and would in the long run bring us neither prosperity nor friendly relations abroad.

There is apparently just one logical solution. That is to begin now laying the groundwork with lower tariffs and removal of other obstacles to free trade. We can then import from other countries the articles which they can make best, and in return sell them those things which they can't bring us. A fair exchange is no robbery.

Human Survival

This world is getting smaller, and its perils greater. Weapons reach farther and become more baffling. The immediate danger of "robot bomb" attacks on this side of the ocean, from European enemies, is discounted, but it seems inevitable that such contrivances will be used sooner or later, on a vast scale, if wars continue.

There may be newer and more powerful weapons produced, but there is no salvation in them. What one nation can do in this field, others can do likewise. Science is open to all, and more and more it threatens its own creators.

Civilization has arrived at a point where there is no safety except in mutual forbearance and righteousness. It has been said of old that they who take up the sword shall perish with the sword, but this is not enough. With our modern equivalents for the sword, both the righteous and unrighteous perish. The human race can be saved only by mutual forbearance and cooperation.

Over $7,000 Worth Of Food Given Schools

JACKSONVILLE, Feb. 12.—(Special) Commodities received by Seminole County schools in connection with the school lunch program during the salaried year 1944 were of a wholesale value of $2,000, according to announcement here today of Walter P. Callig, director of the Commodity Distribution Division of the State Welfare Board. Lunches were served to 2,000 children.

The commodities, furnished by the federal government, were distributed by the State Welfare Board as a public service, inasmuch as it is the only state agency charged by law with this responsibility, Callig said.

Commodities are also distributed to child-care centers and state and charitable institutions.

Callig stated, the federal government required an outlet for foodstuffs that because of man-

ket glut transportation blocks and similar causes would otherwise go to waste. Total distribution to all programs the past year aggregated $23,850 in value.

The School Lunch program, he explained, was continued by Congress after it had become aroused by the high percentage of rejections for military service on account of physical disabilities attributable to diet deficiencies during the growing period of life. Lunches are now provided for children on a nutritional instead of a need basis, as formerly.

The Canadian cut communications between the city and a second road and railway center at Gotha, seven miles south. The slashing advance of Field Marshal Montgomery's forces thus sheared through the northeast corner of the Reichswald, neutralizing that bunker-studded fir forest as a part of Kleve's defenses.

The front now was an arching one of about 17 miles, stretching from the Rhine on the north to the Maas on the south.

Field Marshal Karl von Rundstedt had at last managed to form a defense line on the south flank and a bitter struggle spread through the streets of Goch, northwest of Kleve.

This Dutch road junction on the banks of the Maas appeared likely to become another death pocket like one on the river farther north, where an attempted enemy stand was obliterated yesterday.

Gen. H.D.G. Crerar's Canadian First Army troops also seized the village of Zellerheide, three miles east of Goch and six miles west of Goch.

On the north flank, a gain of a mile and a half west swept up the villages of Millingen and Kellenberg on the Rhine bank five miles northwest of Kleve.

Bypass Trouble

A crossing of the Rhine out to the south, German again, had been made by the troublesome Neder Rhine, which branches off north from the Waal Rhine a mile and a half northwest of Millingen.

The Germans had not yet chosen to make a stand on this sector and advancing Allied troops were out of contact with the enemy.

A front dispatch quoted pilots as saying the Germans were digging trenches as far as 30 miles behind the Rhine, indicating that the enemy fears the broad river will be unable to hold back the coming Eisenhower offensive.

The U.S. First Army sector to the south was quiet except for an overnight advance of a mile and a half in the Schmidt area to the Roer, which for the first time put the Allies in control of all the Roer's west bank from Monchen, 18 miles northeast of Aachen, to Roermond, 30 miles north of Aachen.

Engineers studying captured Schwanenmauer Dam whose flood gates were destroyed by the retreating enemy yesterday said all danger of the enemy blowing a hole in it big enough to send a tidal wave down the valley was now passed.

The flood on the Roer was passing through the flood gates and from the conduits of the Uffel River Dam farther south, which the Germans dynamited yesterday

This isn't the first time Herb has been hit by tracks closing down. He had been married only two days in 1943 when Tropical Park here closed because of the gas shortage and he ran pleasure driving. That was, Herb declared, "some wedding present."

When this blow was dealt the new bridge, he seriously considered turning to the electrical field in which his father and father-in-law were engaged. But the fascination for steel flesh was too much for him and he went to New Orleans and then Narragansett Park, Rhode Island. It was there that he formed a partnership with Gene Fisher, his agent, and it was Fisher who helped him get back into the winners.

'Oscar' Award Nominations Are Announced

Films, Actors and Directors Are Cited; Industry To Elect

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 9.—"Going My Way," Paramount's Catholic priest and its stars, Bing Crosby and Harry Fitzgerald were nominated Sunday night for "Oscar" by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

About 9,000 members of the industry, with participants in the voting, selected the winners, who will receive the "Oscars" on the stage of Grauman's Chinese Theater March 16.

Fitzgerald became the first actor in "The Awful Truth" to be nominated for both the best performance by an actress and the best performance by a supporting actor" in "Going My Way." Nearest previous approach was in 1932 when Teresa Wright was nominated in both the women's acting categories but for two different pictures.

Others honored for the top performances were Cary Grant for his portrayal of an embittered Cockney met in "None but the Lonely Heart," and screen newcomer Alexander Knob for his interpretation of the late World War President in "Wilson."

None of the actors nominated were previous statue winners but three of the actresses nominated for best performances were former "Oscar" winners. Swedish star Ingrid Bergman, who was nominated for the top honor last year by screen Cicely Jones, was named for her performance in "Gaslight."

Others nominated by their fellow players were 1941 "Oscar" winner Claudette Colbert for "Since You Went Away"; two-time "Oscar" winner Bette Davis for her interpretation of the role of Paulette Goddard in "Mr. Skeffington"; Gloria Stuart for "Mrs. Miniver"; Gordon Jackson for "Mrs. Parkington"; and Barbara Stanwyck, who just missed the grade for her portrayal of Stella Dallas in 1937, named for her performance as cold-blooded mother in "Double Indemnity."

Other productions nominated for the best picture of the year besides "Young My Way" were "Double Indemnity," Paramount; "Gaslight," M.G.M.; "Since You Went Away," Selznick International, and "Wilson," Twentieth Century Fox.

Cited for the best performance by an actor in a supporting role were Humphrey Bogart in "The Seven Keys to Mystery"; Claude Rains in "Mr. Skeffington"; Clifton Webb in "Laura"; Monty Woolley in "Since You Went Away"; and Fitzgerald.

Nominated as the best actress in supporting part were Ethel Barrymore in "None but the Lonely Heart"; Jennifer Jones in "Since You Went Away"; Angela Lansbury in "Gaslight"; Alice Millian in "Dragon Seed"; and Agnes Moorehead in "Mrs. Parkington."

Directors honored for outstanding achievement were Billy Wilder for "Double Indemnity"; Leo McCarey for "Going My Way"; Otto Preminger for "Laura"; Alfred Hitchcock for "Rear Window"; and Henry King for "Wilson."

MILITARY Justice Warns Americans On Complacency

While all the other countries of the Pacific, the Japs, the Dutch, the Chinese, the Russians, and even the Filipinos are preparing for war, the United States not only failed to get ready, he said, but actually contributed to the arming of the Japs for this great struggle by sending scrap iron and oil to them which was stored for use against us.

Prior to Judge Malcolm's address, Andrew H. Stiles, well-known in the Club by George Touhy, visitors introduced were Bill Hull of Daland, Frank Seevers and Bryan King of Orlando, L. B. Mann, George D. Bishop and David Harold of Sanford. President Roy Holler presided over the meeting and Gordon Brinson had charge of the program.

A tentative Japanese peace offer was reported from London today after General Douglas MacArthur announced "The end is in sight" in the battle for Manila.

American ground troops seized the Cavite naval base on Manila Bay, captured Nicholas Field on the southern outskirts of Manila and silenced most of the big Japanese guns surrounding the Philippines capital.

London quoted a commentator over the government-controlled Tokyo radio as saying Japan's policy is not to reject any hand which offers peace.

Capture of the Cavite naval base and Nichols airfield were announced by Gen. MacArthur who said the end of Japanese trapping Manila garrison was in sight.

MacArthur reported enemy casualties of more than 68,000 for the five weeks of the Luzon campaign as compared with American casualties of 9,683, including 2102 killed.

Capture of the Cavite naval base put the Yanks on the shores of Manila bay for the first time.

It was the sixth B-29 and to our crew it was just one of us, and had good flight characteristics which enabled us to carry greater bomb loads and on less gas than other ships, and still have gas left."

Before embarking for foreign service, Lieut. Teague received three years of training in air schools, and a year of intensive study in a plant manufacturing B-29 planes.
