Alliance Church To Have Convention

The Annual Missionary Convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church of Sanford will begin next Wednesday and continue through Sunday. Interesting programs are scheduled for 7:45 each evening except Saturday.

The speakers at the convention this year will be R. J. Adam and Miss Harriet Beardslee. Pictures will be shown and native costumes displayed by the missionaries.

Mr. Adam will bring messages about the field of French West Africa where he has served as a missionary. He will be showing some excellent pictures of the work of the missionary in Africa during the series of meetings.

Miss Beardslee first went to the field of India in 1911. Her work as a missionary has been varied. She taught in the Boy's Bible School during one term of service on the field. Another term was spent almost entirely in evangelistic work among the young people.

Before returning to the United States recently she was the head of the Women's Bible School at Akola. This ministry, Miss Beardslee says, was the best and the most fruitful.

Theme of services next Sunday in Christian Science churches is the healing and redemptive work of the great Wayshower, "CHRIST JESUS" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon.

A verse from John (3:17) provides the Golden Text: "God sent his Son into the world to redeem the world, but that the world through him might be saved."

Included in Bible selection is the account of Jesus healing the man ill for thirty-eight years. "Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk. And immediately the man was made whole." (John 5: 8-9).

Correlative citations from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include: "The humble Nazarene overthrew the supposition that sin, sickness, and death have power. He proved them powerless. Divine Truth, Life, and Love gave Jesus authority over sin, sickness, and death" p. 228.

For Prevention or Healing... CALL THE DOCTOR

"Johnny's sick!" The words strike fear in your heart, although your child's name may be Mary, Jane, or Bob. You put him to bed and call the doctor. You give him medicine and nurse him tenderly.

It is easy to tell when your child is not well—physically, that is. And it is comparatively easy to provide whatever is necessary to heal him. But do you feel as much concern for his soul?

Perhaps you have not noticed symptoms of spiritual indisposition. Perhaps you have thoughtlessly disregarded his spiritual needs. Yet his body is only temporal. His soul will live on—and on—and on!

Your Church is like a doctor—ready to heal illnesses of the spirit, but even more eager to prevent them.

Attend Church regularly with all your family for spiritual check-ups, just as you call on your family physician for physical care.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake (2) For his children's sake (3) For the sake of his community and nation (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—If you live to be old and wise and sad enough, and see enough dear friends shuffle off this mortal coil, you learn one thing: there is no way to bring them back.

You can carve them in stone or say prayers to them once a year, in tenderness and recollection, but the laugh, the smile, the voice, the light in an eye—these are gone for good.

I learned it over again this morning when I stopped by at the Museum of the City of New York, a quiet place full of old paintings of men in wigs and all the other relics that collectors keep to remind them of days of glory. They have set aside one room in the museum, until April, to remember Gertrude Lawrence.

They have called the exhibit A Star Danced, after Gertrude's autobiographical book, and I entered it this morning with the feeling that maybe, through some magical process, I would be able to feel myself once more in her presence.

I do not know why men do this, why they hope illogically that some day they will awaken to find that someone they loved has been reborn, but they do. I suppose that to most of us death is so final, so incomprehensible, that we are reluctant to accept it, there is any way to bring back the museum has lit upon it. They have filled a room with posters of Gertrude's wonderful days in the theater, and they have built a small room within the room to imitate her dressing room. Here, things are strewn around as if Miss Gertrude just has stepped out for a moment and will be right back. However, the moment is so long.

THE VANITY DRAWER IS HALF OPEN and a wispy gray handkerchief with "GL" on it hangs out. There is an ivory-backed hairbrush, the familiar eyeglasses—she always was almost as blind as the proverbial bat—peeping from a case, a pair of blue slippers under the vanity, a portable radio opened and ready to play, costumes for The King and I hung on a rack and a bunch of lilacs-of-the-valley in a small vase on a small table.

Keys to cities are hung on the wall, including a big white wooden one from Boy's Town. On the wall, pictures of Shaw, General MacArthur and Gertrude's beloved theatrical pal, Noel Coward, look down.

On other pegs are hung the various service uniforms—Red Cross, etc.—she wore during the last war, along with the mortar board she wore when some college or other conferred on her an honorary degree.

Outside, on the outer walls, are photographs and playbills that remind you of the excitement she brought to the people when the curtain went up Madame, Private Lives, Tonight at 8:30, Pygmalion, Susan and God—all of them.

Over there are photos of Candle-Light; you look and see Gertrude with Leslie Howard, somebody else who made magic in the theater until an accurate German machine-gunner delivered the plane in which he was a passenger to the bottom of the English channel.

Here are pictures of her with "dear Noel" in Private Lives. I wonder if anyone but those two could have spoken so spectacularly such whimsical dialogue as "Have you ever crossed the Sahara on a camel?" "Frequently."

THERE ARE LETTERS FROM GREAT MEN AND WOMEN—waspish notes from Shaw, warm notes from Gerald duMaurier—and one little pink letter written from Brighton that she must have treasured most of all. "Please excuse the way I wrote my letter, I only noticed it when I finished it," it concludes. It was written Feb. 8, 1928, by her daughter Pamela.

I looked at it all. I stood before the dressing room for a long time and tried to see Gertrude again, tried to picture her as she was when I lunched with her early last summer in her quiet house in the East 80s and virtually held my breath while she talked theater, so lovingly. However, it wasn't any use.

It was just a room, a room full of framed pictures and silken gowns and the sunlight coming in from Fifth avenue outside. I couldn't bring her back, so I stopped, at last, and went down the marble staircase and out into the sunlight that once was hers, too.

Rural Common Sense

By SPUDS JOHNSON

Recent declines in beef cattle prices have emphasized the importance of efficiency in raising livestock.

Efficiency in livestock production always has been important, but it is even more so in periods of declining prices. When prices drop, the inefficient producer may lose heavily.

During the past two decades Florida livestock producers have made notable progress and are, generally speaking, far more efficient than ever before. But they must strive for even greater efficiency in view of the prospect of lower market prices than they have received in a rather long time.

Dr. Henry Hamilton of the University of Florida Agricultural Experiment Station points out that in a time such as this the wise livestock producer will examine his operations more carefully than ever to determine where he can increase his efficiency and hold his production costs to a minimum. The Experiment Station economist notes that in periods of high prices some producers may not give careful attention to efficiency or production costs.

Some livestock feeds may be produced on the farm or ranch more cheaply than they can be bought, so the economist thinks it will be well for producers to endeavor to grow more of such feeds during the next year or so. Efficiency in feed production includes selection of the right crops or grasses, proper fertilization, and careful management.

When a producer loses a calf or a pig, his chance of profit from his livestock enterprise is reduced just that much, Dr. Hamilton says. Too, his loss not only includes loss of the animal from his stock for the market, but it also includes the feed and care of the animal's mother during gestation. In other words, the feed required to produce the animal.

Hundreds of meat animals are lost in Florida every year as a result of inefficiency, and losses of this nature in times of low prices may result in failure of a livestock enterprise. When margins of profit are low, more sales units are needed for profitable overall returns.

For maximum efficiency in livestock production, producers should take advantage of all research results that will help them, produce as much of their feed as possible, use labor-saving devices and equipment, take prompt measures for controlling diseases and insect pests, keep a sharp eye on markets, and produce as high quality stock as possible.

In general, farmers would benefit by producing higher quality animals than the average.

The most hits off one pitcher in one game in the majors was 26. They were smacked off John Wadsworth when Louisville was in the National League back in 1891.

DANNY BAILEY, 5, shows off the two quarters he hid from an armed bandit who held up the owner of a Los Angeles supermarket where his mother was shopping. The hold-up man snatched a dollar bill from Danny. "But," says the youngster, "he didn't get my two quarters! I hid 'em under a loaf of bread."

GIVE

Around the clock... 24 hours a day... 365 days a year... the volunteers and salaried workers of Red Cross Home Service stand ready to help servicemen, veterans, and their dependents solve their problems. They are backed by Red Cross staff workers at military installations, in hospitals, and in the Korean "halls," sending help, too, by a nationwide network of leased telegraph wire for rapid communications. To help maintain these services, support your 1953 Red Cross campaign generously.
