ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Residents of Seminole County have the opportunity to meet candidates for county offices Tuesday night at the Eastmonte Community Center in Altamonte Springs.

Beginning at 7:15 p.m., candidates for county commission and school board along with elections supervisor will be on hand at the center, located off Magnolia Avenue south of State Road 436 at the intersection with County Road 427. At 7:30, candidates will field questions from the audience in a forum.

The forum is sponsored by the Seminole League of Homeowners' Association Inc.

Meteor shower peaks Wednesday

ALBANY, N.Y. — The annual Orionids meteor shower is scheduled to shoot through the Western Hemisphere this week, peaking at 3 p.m. Wednesday, and astronomers say it should be visible anywhere skies are clear and dark.

A meteor, or shooting star, is a piece of rock left by a comet that begins to burn and glow because of friction when it hits Earth's atmosphere.

The Orionids shower results from the Earth passing through particles left by Halley's comet, said Harold Story, an astronomy professor at the State University of New York at Albany.

Another shower, the Draconids, made its annual appearance on Oct. 9, alerting stargazers and UFO watchers up and down the East Coast. One meteor crashed into the trunk of a woman's car in Peekskill, N.Y.

The Orionids will be around from Monday night through Thursday, said astronomer Alan French of Scotia. He suggested the best viewing comes without the use of binoculars or telescopes.

Winning ticket sold in Dania

TALLAHASSEE — Whoever owns the one ticket with all six numbers chosen last week can claim all of a rollover Lotto jackpot of $11 million. Lottery officials said.

The ticket was bought in Dania, officials said Sunday. It bears the lucky numbers drawn late Saturday: 9-15-22-35-45-46.

Lotto outlets sold 236 tickets with five of the numbers, and those are worth $4,161.50 each, while 12,847 tickets had four numbers and are worth $111.50 each. Another 238,425 had three numbers and are worth $5.50 each.

Mayors blast survey

Morris, Smith: Phone rate hike to call Orlando unfair

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The mayors of Sanford and Lake Mary are fuming over a survey Southern Bell mailed last week asking local customers if they are willing to pay higher rates for an expanded calling area.

"I'm mad," said Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith. "It's a piece of work," said Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris.

Last week, the approximately 33,000 Southern Bell customers in Sanford, Lake Mary and Geneva began receiving survey ballots requesting their input on increasing their no-toll calling area to include Orlando and much of Orange County. Morris said he got dozens of calls from people concerned about the content of the survey. Many people believed Lake Mary commissioners wanted to raise rates for all north Seminole County customers.

"We don't support an increase," said Morris. "We do not endorse it."

The added service calling area, about 290,000 additional telephone numbers and 20 new exchanges, would result in a $3.25 increase to the current basic service rate of $9.50, resulting in a new rate of $12.75 per month. The basic business service rate would increase from $25.75 to $34.65 under the proposal.

The higher rate would remain in effect for two years or more then be reconsidered by the Florida Public Service Commission.

The chief thing upsetting to the two city's officials is the survey doesn't indicate that Lake Mary, Sanford and county commissioners oppose the proposal. Local officials want the expanded toll-free calling area but not at a higher price than

Sheriff's review board is ready to study excessive force cases

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Members of Sheriff Don Eslinger's Civilian Review Board are looking forward to having key input into his decisions on excessive force matters.

"We have a great opportunity for the community to look at this process and see what decisions are being made," said Oscar Redden Jr. of Sanford.

"The reason I submitted my application is because I have monitored Sheriff Eslinger and how he handled things, such as in Midway," continued Redden, a car salesman. I want to know what is it we can do to help open communications between the community and the sheriff's office."

Thursday, the 14-member CRB met for the first time to discuss their role and what their responsibilities will be. Eslinger told committee members they will be divided into two seven-member groups to review complaints of excessive force in six-month rotations. They will also review existing use of force policies and procedures to make recommendations for change.

Eslinger said he is pleased with the makeup of the board and is eager for their input.

"I'm very pleased with the makeup of the board," said Eslinger.

Response to food for volunteers enthusiastic

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A new food-for-volunteering program has been received with enthusiasm by Seminole County residents, an organizer says.

A total of 140 families will pick up 170 boxes of food on the first distribution day of SHARE later this month.

"It was much better than we expected," said Jean Metta, program developer. "Our sign-up was such a bad, rainy day. We didn't think hardly anyone would show up."

The program allows anyone — rich or poor — to purchase boxes of food valued at $25 to $35 for $13.50 each and a voucher showing someone has received at least two hours of volunteered time. The volunteer work can be for anyone, a neighbor, a volunteer organization, any person or group that can use a helping hand.

The packages will be distributed Oct. 24 from 10 a.m. until noon.

The next registration will be Oct. 27 and 29 from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. and Nov. 7 from 10 a.m. until noon. The food programs' offices and distributions are made at Zavre

Group seeks businesses to help school programs

By VICKI BOESCHNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Karen Wall believes businesses have to get involved in helping the schools better educate the students of Seminole County.

"Money is tight everywhere," Wall said. "Teachers need money for special projects. Students need special incentives to learn. But the schools just don't have the money to finance those kinds of things."

Wall, a member of the board of directors of the Foundation for the Advancement of our Community Through Schools, said that group, which since 1986 has been financially supporting programs like the Teacher of the Year program, teacher mini-grants and student incentive programs, will be actively seeking the support of the business community this year.

FACTS is a non-profit organization staffed by volunteers from the business community.

"We believe very strongly in the schools," she said.

Ernie Cavallaro, chairman of FACTS, said the emphasis in the past has been on fund-raising and getting the money directly to those who can best use it.

This year, he said, the group is looking for corporations to make long-term commitments to the schools.

"We want to have half a million dollars in the fund so that we can begin to support these programs off the interest," he explained.

Longwood airs school bus safety

By NICK PPEWFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — Longwood officials say they expect to examine the safety of children waiting for school buses tonight. The item was not on the original city commission agenda, but citizens are planning to rally.

The demand for improvements was prompted by an incident, Oct. 9, on S.R. 46-A involving students waiting for a school bus. The accident caused the death of one child and critical injuries to two others.

The Longwood action tonight is following similar action by the Lake Mary City Commission last Thursday night, at which time the commission was presented with a resolution calling for immediate action by the Seminole County School Board to re-examine all bus stops for safety.

"The matter came up too late to have it placed on the formal agenda," said Longwood City Administrator Jim McFellin this morning. "But we have prepared a resolution identical to that in Lake Mary, for consideration at tonight's meeting."

Commissioner Paul Lovstrand commented. "The way it looks, the people apparently think we don't care about the safety of the children, but we do care."

He added, "I also believe however, that we should look at this problem in a cooperative effort with the school board, and not go off on our own and do something that may make the situation worse."

Deputy Mayor Rex Anderson said he had received a number of calls complaining about traffic problems and speeding near school bus

Court upholds murder conviction

LAKELAND — An appellate court has upheld the murder conviction and life sentence of Thomas E. Coe in the petty-training death of his 2-year-old stepson. Coe was convicted of first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse after repeatedly dunking Bradley McGee headfirst in a toilet as punishment for soiling his pants. The 2nd District Court of Appeal upheld the July 1980 conviction and sentence on Friday without giving a written opinion. Coe must serve 25 years in prison before being eligible for parole. Sheryl McGee Coe pleaded no contest to second-degree murder in her son's 1980 death and was sentenced to 30 years in prison. Under the plea, she admitted no guilt but accepted punishment for the crime. The state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services had returned the toddler to his parents two months before his death, despite warnings from foster parents and the failure of the Coes to complete alcohol abuse treatment and psychological counseling. The case sparked sweeping changes in the way the HRS handles child custody cases. At the time of Bradley's death, the agency's first priority under law was family reunification. The law was changed in 1980 to make a child's safety the first priority.

Suspended sheriff's son sentenced

PENSACOLA, Fla. — The son of a suspended Florida Panhandle sheriff has received a probationary sentence for breaking into a fish camp trailer to go along with the jail term he is serving for auto theft. Circuit Judge Michael Jones placed Jeffrey Coffman, 25, of Milton on probation Friday for 18 months. The sentence will start after he completes his one-year term in the Escambia County Jail and four years of probation for the auto-theft conviction. Coffman's father is Maurice Coffman, who was suspended as sheriff of neighboring Santa Rosa County when he was arrested in August on charges of illegally helping his son get out of scrapes with the law and accepting bribes from a marijuana grower. The elder Coffman allegedly came to his son's aid in the May 1991 break-in at the Ski Land Fish Camp near Milton. Florida Department of Law Enforcement agents said the Santa Rosa Sheriff's Department failed to follow up on the break-in although the younger Coffman's fingerprints were found at the scene. Jones also ordered the younger Coffman to pay $867.40 in restitution to the trailer's owner.

Day-care worker acquitted in son's death

PENSACOLA — A former day-care worker who tearfully testified she was trying to save her baby's life has been acquitted of shaking the child to death. Renee T. Jernigan, 27, tightly embraced her lawyer Friday when the Circuit Court jury found her innocent of second-degree murder in the July 4, 1991 death of her son, Shane. "I'm glad it's over," she said later. "My son can finally rest." Her son died in a hospital seven months after she allegedly shook him violently when he was 2 months old, leaving him in a vegetative state. The single mother who lived on welfare testified the infant woke up "fussy" on Dec. 22, 1990, and she tried to pacify him by holding him on her shoulder to see Christmas lights. Suddenly he became quiet, could hardly breathe and turned white, she told the jury. She said his jaw locked and he seemed on the verge of swallowing his tongue.

Band members hot - real hot

LAKE WORTH — The John I. Leonard High School marching band was hot — really hot. So hot that woolen uniforms proved too warm for eight band members marching in Friday's Homecoming parade. Three were taken to area hospitals where they were treated for heat exhaustion and released. "It was just really hot," said Jason Clark, 16, who plays the saxophone but grabbed his friend's bass drums when he started feeling faint. "His face was turning purple. I grabbed the drum and carried it for three lights." Two ninth-graders went to Palm Beach Regional Hospital and a 10th-grader went to Wellington Regional Hospital, said band director Tim Skinner. Five other students felt weak as they tried to complete the 3-mile route, but were not hospitalized, he said. "It was just too much sun for the uniforms," Skinner said. Friday's high at Palm Beach International Airport was 87 degrees. Although band members practiced during the hotter summer months, they were allowed to take breaks frequently, Skinner said.

Longest peacetime curfew

Bar hours caused by storm leave customers miffed

By JIM BARROW
Associated Press

FLORIDA CITY — It's 9:40 on a Saturday night and time for last call at the Last Chance Saloon (New motto: "This is really your last chance now.") Disgruntled customers down their beers, stamp out their cigarettes and head back to what's left of their homes as the nation's longest peacetime curfew clamps down on areas left dark by Hurricane Andrew. "People can't take this that much longer," said Debbie Jensen of Homestead, who keeps one eye on the clock as she wraps up an evening out with friends at a neighborhood bar. "You can't relax. You've got to gulp your food down and rush to get home." "We've been through enough. We don't need this."

Dade County officials imposed the 10 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew because the hurricane on Aug. 24 wiped out more than 7,000 street lights, leaving neighborhoods pitch-dark. About 4,500 still need to be repaired or replaced, and utility officials say they won't even start work in some areas until Nov. 5. Many residents also still don't have phones. "People can't call for help if they need it," said Homestead Police Maj. Chuck Habermehl, who adds that most residents appreciate the curfew. "We know it's working," Habermehl said. "Not to sound flip, but there's such a thing as early bird dinner or an early movie. That's what I've had to do." No one can predict when the curfew — already 2 months old — might end. It is the longest peacetime curfew yet, according to officials with the Federal Emergency Management Agency, who say the one after Hurricane Hugo lasted 11 days. Many residents, still traumatized by Andrew's destruction and with memories of looters fresh in their minds, said they support the curfew — especially now that federal troops brought in to help have pulled out. "We're all so much afraid," said one woman at the Last Chance Saloon. "I'm scared to death. We need to have some kind of discipline. Since the military left, all we have is this curfew." The curfew, and about six times the usual number of police. Reinforcements from state agencies and departments as far away as South Carolina have swelled the number of patrolmen on an average night from eight to 50.

Way Back When

A couple of weeks ago The Herald published a photo of the then "spiffy" Sinclair Service Station located on the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Second Street. Old timers will recall that this particular "filling station," as they were called in those days, was owned and operated by Ray Fox Sr., a highly respected and well-known Sanford resident. "Way Back When" readers may like to see this photo of Ray in his "service" attire. It is not certain when this photo was made but take a good look at the trunk and spare tire cover of the car behind Fox and see if you can determine the year, model and make of the vehicle. If you can, please contact Julian Stanstrom. By the way, according to the sign on the gasoline pump the price of gas was 13 cents per gallon plus an eight cent tax. That must have been a state tax because it is believed there was a federal tax on gasoline at that time and no Florida sales tax. The monies raised by the tax on gasoline went into Florida's general fund and was used for all purposes.

8 landfills on federal cleanup list

ORLANDO — Eight Florida landfills are on the federal Superfund cleanup list, but they represent just a small part of the state's buried hazardous waste. Half of the 350 landfills that have closed since 1980 are contaminating ground water. "We're trying to make an honest effort to look at the old sites and determine if there is a problem with them," Richard Tedder, head of the state Department of Environmental Regulation's solid waste program in Orlando, told The Orlando Sentinel in a Sunday story. "Probably every one of these sites is contaminating ground water to some degree," said Tom Moody, head of DER's solid-waste program in Pensacola. At stake are the aquifers, vast underground pockets of fresh water in layers of porous limestone that provide 90 percent of Florida's drinking water. As late as 1963, counties could close a landfill and forget about it. Today, it's not unusual for 250 monitoring wells to be required at an operating landfill to determine if ground water is being polluted. There were no regulations regarding landfill design until late 1985, when bottom liners were required. The initial standards were toughened in 1990. The most dangerous landfills today are those that had no barrier installed between the waste and the ground and no thought given to what was dumped into them.

Therapists descend on Miami Beach to counsel each other

MIAMI BEACH — As the conference got under way, Miami's Mayor Xavier Suarez said he'd love to stay longer but had an appointment with his family therapist. The crowd loved it. It's a long way from the 1940s and 1950s, when therapy was a bit like cancer — a mysterious malady better not mentioned casually. Today counseling is squarely in the mainstream. More than 4,000 practitioners gathered in Miami Beach this weekend for the 50th anniversary conference of the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy. The therapists were as different from one another as the pastel Art Deco buildings this city is known for. Women in high hair and small skirts, men in slouchy Don Johnson blazers and beards. Buttoned-down Ivy League types, others in shorts and tennis shoes.

The therapists also vary in training and approach. What they share, association members say, is a commitment to preserving families — and the "family values" so much discussed this election year. "When I grew up in the 1950s, the focus was on your physical needs," said Brenda Moore, an addiction counselor from Bradenton Beach. "You didn't think about whether your emotional needs were being met." A new world has opened up since then. In the early days, the association's membership was about 250. Fifty years later it's up to 20,000 — still just a fraction of the more than 200,000 therapists practicing around the country. Consumers are well-advised to choose among them carefully.

Domestic killings

Study: Possessiveness, self-defense are major causes

By The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Most local men who kill their mates do so out of possessiveness while women generally kill in self-defense, a criminal justice professor says after looking at seven years of domestic violence.

Before Jan. 1, the term domestic violence applied only to spouses. But it has been expanded to include any criminal offense resulting in the injury or death of one member of a family or household committed by another.

Twenty-seven percent of all homicides in Duval County result from domestic disputes, according to the Jacksonville Sheriff's Office. Men accounted for 14 of the 25 victims and for 20 of the 28 killers.

Seven of the homicides involved current and former spouses or lovers. The others involved parents, children, siblings or third parties who intervened.

While the number of murders nationwide has risen dramatically in the last few years, the murder rate among intimates has remained relatively stable, according to Christine Rasche, a criminal justice professor at the University of North Florida.

"It is almost as if a certain percentage of the population cannot get along with each other to a fatal extent each year," Rasche said. "Community prevention may have an effect on drug crime and homicides. But it is hard to know what you can do to keep husbands and wives from getting homicidally angry with each other."

In a study covering a seven-year period, Rasche said she found that the single biggest motive for Jacksonville men who killed their mates was a fear of the loss of the relationship.

"Either they (women) were stepping out on them or actually trying to leave them," Rasche said. "But that motive, possessiveness, accounted for more than half of the homicides."

Women, on the other hand, generally killed in self-defense or because they could no longer tolerate an abusive relationship, according to Rasche.

The shelter movement, which began in the early 1970s, has reduced the number of women killing their mates nationwide, Rasche said.

"Women saw that they had alternatives where before they say they had no choice," she said. But the number of men who kill wives and girlfriends has been going up. "That's pretty depressing," Rasche said. "The shelter movement perhaps has saved some women from being murderers, but the lack of mandatory programs for batterers means that men who kill will kill someone."

Greeley: Church, government tend to ignore abusive priests

By The Associated Press

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill.

— The Rev. Andrew Greeley, an outspoken Roman Catholic priest and writer, said Sunday that neither the church nor government has been willing to do much about priests who sexually abuse children.

"The sexually maladjusted priest has been able to abuse the children of the laity and thus far be reasonably secure from punishment," Greeley told a lay Catholic group called Victims of Clergy Abuse Linkup.

"There is no power of church or state that is willing to force priests to be accountable for their behavior," he said.

About 300 victims of sexual abuse by clergy, the families of victims, lawyers and others attended a weekend conference on such abuse.

Trio charged in armed robbery

Joseph Watkins, 21, 2271 Broadway, Sanford, Marcus Sherod Lyons, 18, 2381 Dolar Way, Sanford and Terrence Irvin, 19, 2511 Crawford Ave., Sanford, were all charged with armed robbery when they were arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Friday.

Deputies said that an investigation into an Oct. 15 armed robbery in which Michael Analey was robbed at gun point of a necklace and a ring, revealed that the three were the ones who committed the crime.

Analey and another witness positively identified them for deputies, officers said.

They were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held without bond.

Traffic violations bring arrest

Alessandro D. Dantonino, 30, 434 Longwood Cir., Longwood, was charged as a habitual traffic violator and with driving with a suspended license when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said he was stopped when he failed to yield to traffic.

They said that a computer check of his identification found that his license had been suspended several times for failing to pay fines. It was revoked for 60 months in Jan. 1981 for being a habitual traffic violator, deputies said.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Drug charges filed

Ronald Demetree Hampton, 25, 2221 Greenway, Sanford, was charged with the sale and delivery of crack cocaine when he was arrested by Seminole County deputies on Friday.

Deputies said they were conducting an undercover investigation at 13th Place and Olive Street in Sanford.

Deputies said they purchased a substance, later positively identified as crack cocaine, from Hampton.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $3,000 bond.

License infraction brings arrest

Nicholas A. Rybicki, 23, 411 Lake Blvd., Sanford, was charged with driving without a valid license and with possession of drug paraphernalia when he was arrested by Seminole County Sheriff's deputies on Saturday.

Officers said they stopped him for driving without tail lights. Deputies checked his identification and found that he did not have a driver's license, they said.

They said they also found a beer can with holes in the side of it in a clothes basket in the car. Deputies said that "based on law enforcement experience" they believed the can was used for smoking marijuana.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Domestic violence alleged Jimmy Johnson, 44, 919 S. Oak Ave., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Saturday.

Police said they heard him make several threats to his girlfriend. Police said Celeste Johnson told them that he had hit her in the face and head. Police said her face appeared swollen.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500 bond.

Warrant arrests

• Cedric Lyle Butler, 19, 1910 Southwest Rd., Sanford, was charged in connection with a warrant for resisting arrest without violence. Deputies said they found him at home. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

• William George Strichko, 440 Mellonville Ave., Apt. 1, Sanford, was charged in connection with a Lake County warrant for battery. He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

• Steven E. McCutcheon, 20, 225 Stevanage Dr., Sanford, was charged in connection with a warrant for failure to appear in court on charges of driving on a suspended license. He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $350 bond.

Research defends plain white bread

By DIANE BUSTON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — For kids, the beauty of white bread has always been its squishability.

Peanut butter sandwiches could be flattened into an almost paper-thin, slightly sticky, misshapen square. Plain slices rolled nicely into balls to lob at siblings or mash into mock Communion wafers for kids who liked to play church.

Then came the natural movement, whole grain, high-fiber breads and the notion that, somehow, white bread was bad for you.

In an attempt to dispel negative attitudes toward white bread, Continental Baking Co. of St. Louis, which makes the granddaddy of sliced white, Wonder bread, paid for a study of bread and diet by the Cooper Institute for Aerobic Research in Dallas.

The conclusion: white bread won't make you gain weight and, when used in a high-fiber diet, is an OK nutritional choice.

"White bread is not bad for you," said Ruth Carpenter, associate director of the Cooper Institute.

The institute's study was accepted for presentation to the American Dietetic Association's annual conference starting today and Continental couldn't be prouder.

The baking company scheduled an opening day rally outside the Washington Convention Center where the dietitians were meeting.

Banners proclaiming "We knead white bread," "White bread is the right bread" and "Thumbs up for white bread" were prepared to wave alongside the colorful balloons that have been the Wonder trademark for decades.

Comedian Elaine Bosler was booked to speak to the crowd.

"The reason we are doing the rally is because white bread gets knocked so much," said Lisa Wolford, spokeswoman for Continental, which introduced the first sliced bread in 1930.

Carpenter, the author of the Cooper study, said she was slightly embarrassed by all the hoopla.

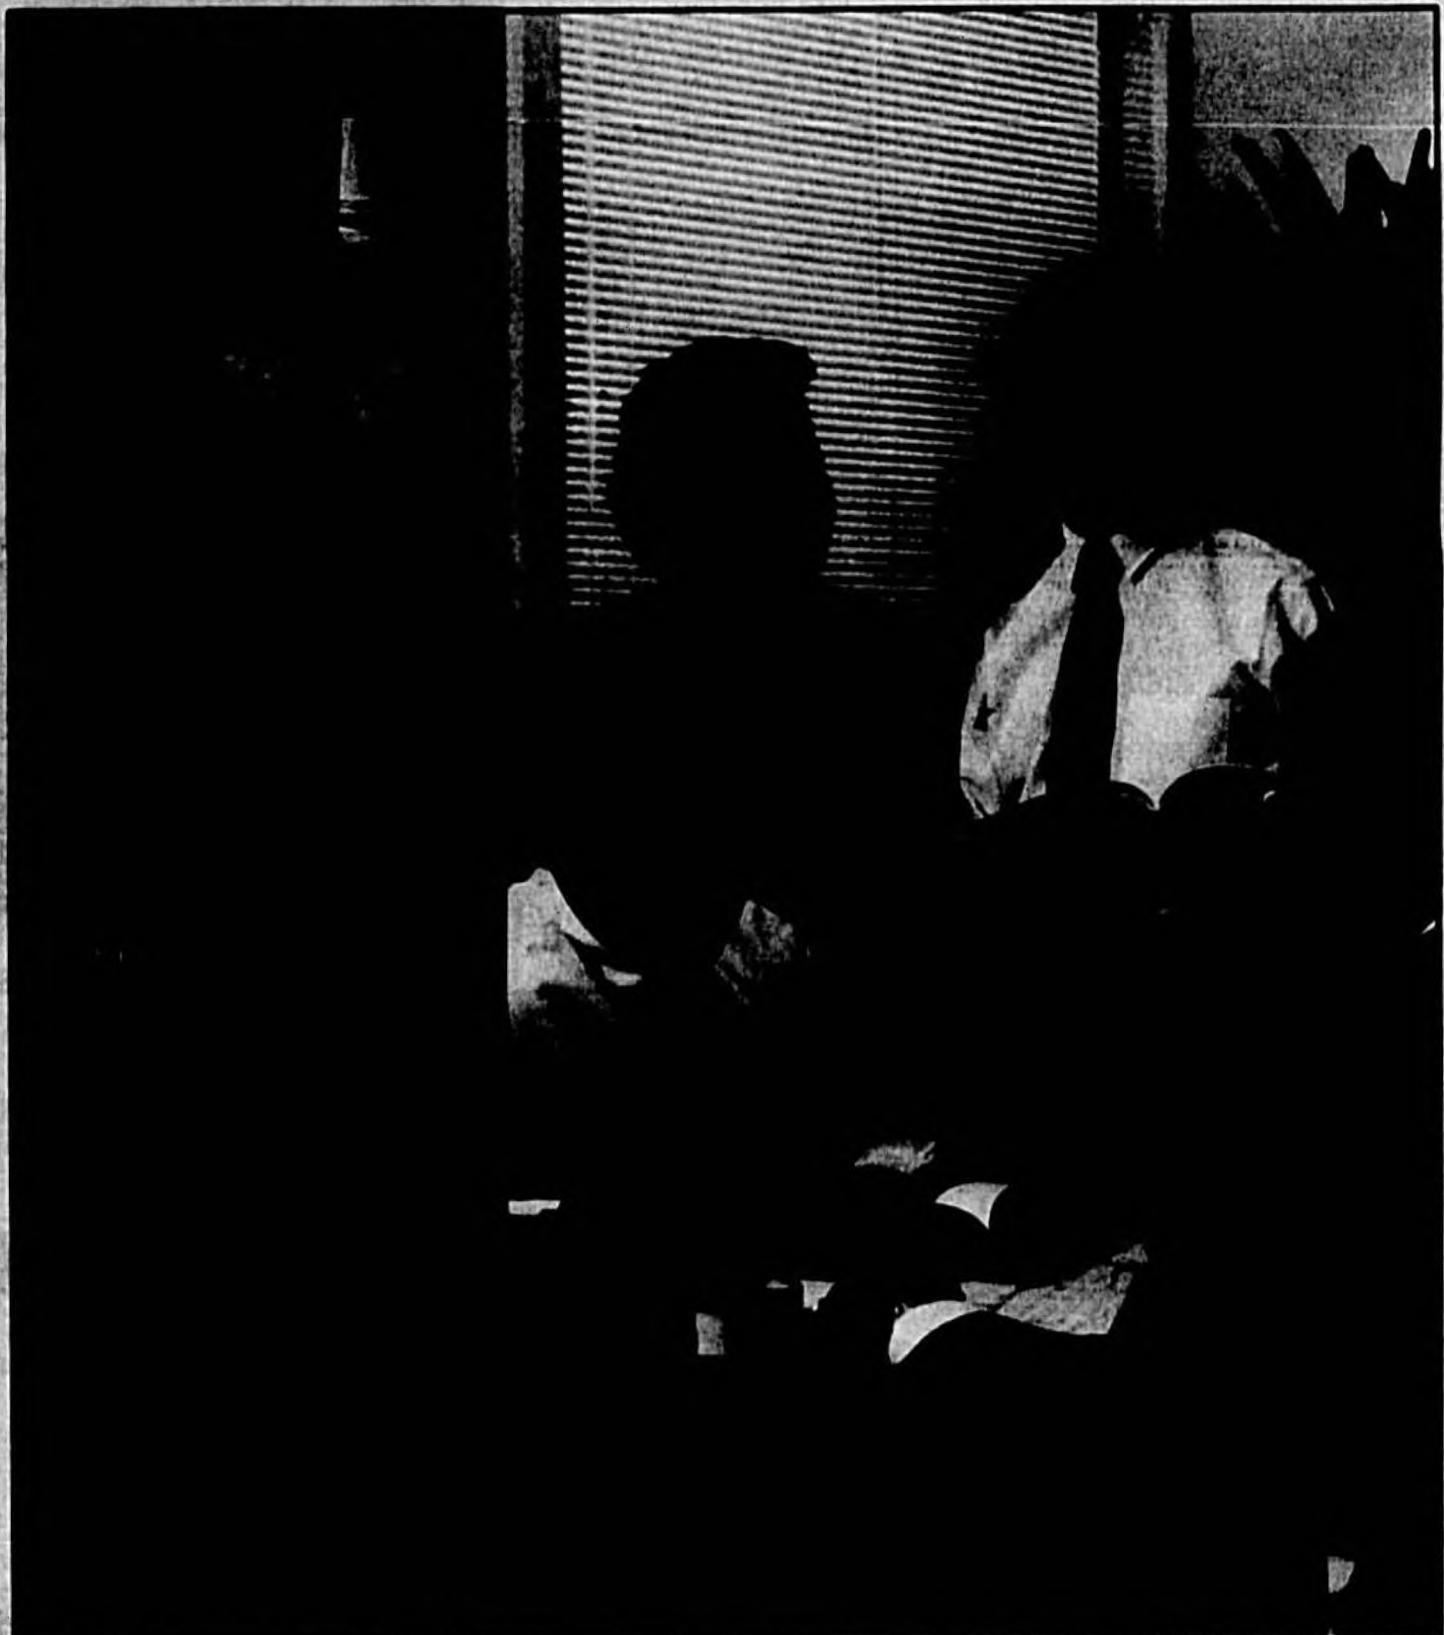

"As a scientist you really tread a fine line between wanting to get your information out there so it can be used by the general population, but not appearing to be solicitous for any group or company," she said.

Carpenter said the idea for the bread study was her own and she connected with Continental when she was looking for money.

"We wanted to look at increasing people's carbohydrate intake," she said. Because there is a belief that bread is fattening, she conducted the study to find out if eating different amounts and types of bread — regular or low-calorie — would affect nutrient intake levels, body weight and body composition.

For the study, 92 women and 28 men, ages 25 to 50, were divided into four groups. One group followed its normal eating routine. A second group added four slices of reduced calorie bread to their daily diet; the third, eight slices of reduced calorie bread; and the fourth, eight slices of regular bread.

All the bread was supplied by Continental. Subjects could choose between white bread and "family wheat," which has the same fiber content.

Mealor for Lake Mary commission

The only incumbent seeking re-election in Lake Mary this year is David Mealor. Although he is seeking city commission seat 3, rather than seat 1 which he currently holds, there is no reason to oust him.

Mealor has just completed his second two-year term on the commission. Many major projects were approved during that time, including the undergrounding of power lines on Lake Mary Boulevard, creation of the city's new major sports complex, and the massive paving and drainage project which will come up for a public referendum on Nov. 3.

Mealor has taken an active part in discussions of these matters and is familiar with all of the details of each of them. He deserves to remain on the commission to follow through with the successful completion of these projects.

His continued input based on experience in dealing with the matters will be greatly needed in years ahead.

At times, he has found it necessary to change his opinion on a particular matter, but only after extensive study of a problem, and listening to input from the city staff and citizens.

Mealor studies complex matters closely before making a decision. He admits there are cases when he may vote in a direction other than what citizens may initially want, but he aims his decision on what he believes is in the best interest of the entire city.

Mealor's opponent, Sheila Sawyer, has been involved in city problems for several years, having been a consistent spokesperson on behalf of the citizens, especially in matters pertaining to the spending of tax dollars.

Her public input at commission meetings has often given the commissioners an additional viewpoint on critical matters.

We commend Sawyer for her vigilance. As not all citizens have time to become involved in investigations of various proposals, we hope she would continue to serve as the spokesperson for the citizens of Lake Mary in the role she has taken in the past.

Mealor originally indicated he would not seek re-election to seat 1, because of the opportunity to advance his career as a university professor. "I looked at the prospects of moving," he said, "but my family and I decided that Lake Mary is our home, and none of us wants to leave."

Jim Lorman subsequently qualified to seek election to seat 1, with the understanding that he would not be opposing Mealor. When Mealor made his decision to run, he qualified for seat 3, which has been vacated by Paul Tremel who has chosen not to run for re-election.

With three of the five positions on the Lake Mary Commission on the Nov. 3 ballot, experience and involvement must not be diminished.

David Mealor should be allowed to continue serving Lake Mary as a member of the city commission.

NAT HENTOFF

Gays: Fear and loathing in Oregon

Recently, in Eugene, Ore., I was talking to a gathering of bookshellers from all over the Northwest. Most of them were wearing buttons: No. 9.

Ballot Measure 9, which will be on the Oregon ballot Nov. 3, is a drastic proposal that would strip gays and lesbians of a large catalog of basic rights. They would be official pariahs. And many non-homosexuals could be punished under Measure 9 for "encouraging" homosexuality. This is part of the actual language of Measure 9.

"State, regional and local governments and their departments, agencies and other entities — including specifically the State Department of Higher Education and the public schools — shall assist in setting a standard for Oregon's youth that recognizes homosexuality, pedophilia, sadism and masochism as abnormal, wrong, unnatural and perverse and that these behaviors are to be discouraged and avoided."

Homosexuality, therefore, is bracketed with such criminal behavior as pedophilia and sadism. With more and more cities and states striking down laws that discriminate against homosexuals, Oregon may banish them from society and, for that matter, from the state itself.

As Timothy Egan pointed out in The New York Times: "Some legal scholars in the state say the measure could be used to remove homosexuals from teaching positions and state jobs — and as a basis to take books from libraries and deny parade permits and liquor licenses."

In Springfield, Ore. — near Eugene — the same group pushing the statewide Measure 9 and financed largely by Christian fundamentalists has already succeeded in getting similar language into the city charter. That law prevents Springfield from doing anything to protect gays and lesbians from discrimination, and it orders the town and all its agencies not to "promote, encourage or facilitate homosexuality." That could mean, I told the bookshellers in Eugene, that if I taught in a high school or a public college and recommended books by Andre Gide or James Baldwin, I could be fired for "promoting and encouraging" homosexuality.

From people living in and near Springfield, I heard chilling stories of physical attacks on gays and lesbians there in celebration of the passing of the municipal act making them less than third-class citizens.

I told the group of bookshellers that I thought Measure 9 would eventually be declared unconstitutional. It violates the Oregon state constitution's right of freedom of expression and is also overbroad and vague in its language.

But these court battles could go on for a long time and meanwhile — as has already happened in Springfield — a good many lives would be damaged.

Indications are that the vote will be close. So, when Bill Clinton came to Portland, Ore., last month, the expectation was that the candidate — who claims to be a true believer in universal equality — would say something about this profoundly discriminatory proposal.

Yet, as reported by J. Jennings Moss of the Washington Times, "Bill Clinton didn't take the cue. Even though many who cheered him at a noontime rally yesterday lofted signs opposing a strict anti-homosexual state referendum, Mr. Clinton kept mum on his support for gay rights."

Bracketed with such criminal behavior as pedophilia and sadism.

THE DEBATE? HE THOUGHT PEROT WAS SUPPOSED! WE LOVE HIS SPUNK, HIS CANDOR, AND HIS COMMON-SENSE APPROACH TO PROBLEM-SOLVING.

ABSOLUTELY!

AND NOW WILL YOU VOTE IN NOVEMBER?

BUSH.

CLINTON.

HODDING CARTER

One reason to vote for Clinton

Before you get to the end of this column, you will discover that it is a presidential endorsement, so I'll end the suspense before it builds. Bill Clinton is my choice. To which there is a fitting response: So what?

But there is a larger issue underfoot than the state of my political mind, or yours. What is the point of endorsements anyway? When your local newspaper announces which way it sees an election, what's going on?

About 30 years ago, one of the crustiest men I ever knew in the news business issued a warning to all of his fellow journalists that went something like this: "Think twice before you endorse anyone for public office. If he wins, you'll be held responsible for him ever after, and you will deserve what you get."

On the other side of the argument, my newspaper editor father thought it was as irresponsible to hold your tongue as it was not to vote. The men who wrote and ratified the Bill of Rights didn't give the press virtually unchecked freedom in the First Amendment because they loved or respected the press of their time, he insisted. They endorsed freedom of the press for the same reason they endorsed freedom of speech and religion. They expected Americans to exercise what the Constitution granted — vigorously, openly and often — because truth could emerge only in the marketplace of contending views.

Given the fact that he was often out of step with majority opinion where we lived, he did not expect people to follow his lead blindly. It was just as likely many would take their cue from his position in a negative way. The "kiss of death" theory held that his endorsement could be fatal to a candidate's chances.

But that only mattered if you thought of your role as king-maker. If, instead, the endorsement was meant to focus opinion and stimulate informed debate, to present arguments for a point of view in a world in which no one had a mortal lock on truth, then you had no alternative. To fail to speak out was to fail the political process.

So much for general theory. As to how you should decide between candidates, there were two other points central to Dad's thinking. First, no party, faction or individual should be allowed to hold power for very long. Second, politicians should be held to account for what they had done or failed to do.

That is why he endorsed both Tom Dewey and Dwight D. Eisenhower for president in 1948 and 1952. The Democrats, in whose number he counted himself, had held the presidency long enough. The republic's good health demanded change. It was time to throw the rascals out.

In 1992, that time has come again. Twelve years is enough time to take the measure of anyone or any party, and 13 years is too many when the first 13 have been marked by economic rot and profound contempt for the people. Failure to change leadership when that leadership has presided over the steady deterioration of the nation's fiscal and moral health is not merely wrong, it is suicidal. Not to change in our current condition is to endorse disintegration.

When this was written, only two of the debates had been staged. But what was on view in both underscored another important point. Bankrupt of ideas and bereft of a record on which to run, the Republican ticket could offer nothing better than smear, innuendo and the pretense that they were not responsible for the past.

Who do you trust, the president and his surrogates demand, "Slick Willie" Clinton, the artful dodger, or President George Bush, the lion of Kuwait and World War II combat hero? It's the wrong question, a point made clear in his own inimitable fashion by Ross Perot in the first debate. No, he didn't have a lot of experience in office, he admitted, particularly in running up a $4 trillion debt. Besides, he added, what concerned him were not the decisions made by a young man in the formative early stages of his life, but those made by a mature man in a position of authority.

For George Bush, that is the fatal rub. He has failed to understand that the economy is in trouble and that government should lead in efforts to revitalize it. As a result, he has done little or nothing while millions of Americans have lost their jobs, annual deficits have reached record highs and the national debt has soared into the stratosphere.

He also does not seem to know that it is not enough to believe in the rightness of your policy decisions.

Clinton is my choice. To which there is a fitting response: So what?

JACK ANDERSON

DEA needs to keep a much tidier shop

WASHINGTON — As espionage yarns go, the story unfolding inside the Drug Enforcement Administration borrows more heavily from the slap-stick antics of the Pink Panther's Inspector Clouseau than an Ian Fleming novel.

Congressional investigators are finding that some of DEA's most sensitive computer secrets could be at risk — not from high-tech hackers or black-bag jobs, but just simple sloppiness.

In one case, a sensitive document was found lying unattended in a FAX machine tray in a regional DEA office. It had been transmitted from a foreign country, and disclosed the name and Social Security number of an undercover DEA agent working overseas, as well as details of an ongoing DEA operation.

This and other examples turned up during a month-long probe of DEA computer security by congressional investigators, revealing sometimes gaping holes in the security systems of the front-line agency in the war on drugs. Other examples include:

— A DEA communications equipment operator obtained sensitive criminal investigative data from the DEA's own database, Narcotics and Dangerous Drug Information System, or NADDIS, and admitted to unlawfully disclosing the information to a drug trafficker under investigation by the agency. DEA was told that the suspected drug trafficker had paid the communications equipment operator for the information.

— A foreign service national working in a DEA foreign office was granted unauthorized access to the NADDIS system and obtained sensitive criminal information over a two- to three-year period in violation of DEA policy.

— A contractor data analyst accessed sensitive NADDIS investigative information outside of her official duties. Specifically, the analyst obtained sensitive information on a pending investigation of an individual she was dating.

— In some instances, DEA employees used obvious passwords like "DEA," or shared passwords, or even worse, left passwords taped to computer terminals.

DEA's assistant administrator of the Intelligence Division, David Westrate, defends his agency's security systems. "DEA is not leaking information," he recently told a congressional panel. "Our investigations have not been compromised, nor is there any evidence to show that lives have been endangered as a result of computer information leaks."

Rep. Robert Wise Jr., D-W.Va., chairman of the House subcommittee on government information, expressed his growing concern in a letter to Attorney General William Barr earlier this year:

"I am troubled by DEA's carelessness in handling the security of classified information. ... In fact, it reflects a level of casualness which is not acceptable for a professional federal agency, and particularly one which is involved in the dangerous business of fighting the nation's war on drugs."

In one of the most egregious security lapses, congressional investigators found a computer system that contained data used by agents to monitor suspected drug trafficker's telephone calls. It was located in a room with a broken lock on the door. The password to the system and instructions on how to retrieve information had been left in plain view beside the computer. The name and phone number of a drug suspect was actually taped to the computer screen.

A sensitive document was found lying unattended in a FAX machine tray.

Hubble trouble

Flawed telescope mirror hid problems

NEW YORK — Federal authorities say a contractor withheld data that would have revealed focusing problems with the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope before it was sent aloft. The New York Times reported today.

NASA's inspector general may demand that the contractor pay substantial damages, the newspaper reported, citing unidentified federal officials.

NASA disclosed that Hubble had blurred vision in June 1980, two months after it was launched from a space shuttle. At first it was assumed several warning signs were overlooked.

But NASA investigators now say they have evidence that the Danbury, Conn., contractor, owned by Perkin-Elmer Corp. for most of the 1980s, misled the space agency into thinking the telescope's 8-foot mirror was perfect, the Times said.

In one case, the newspaper said, they say a photograph of a test of the mirror's smoothness — known as an interferogram — was clipped around its edges, stripping it of wavy lines indicating trouble.

Ronald R. Rigby Jr., leader of a mirror-polishing team for Perkin-Elmer, said NASA is "looking for a scapegoat" to deflect charges it was lax in overseeing the telescope's production.

Hughes Aircraft, which bought Perkin-Elmer's optics division in 1980, said it wasn't responsible because it didn't own the division at the critical time in the mirror's fabrication. Hubble originally was hailed as a technological triumph — the most powerful telescope ever sent into space. It was expected to scan distant stars and galaxies with a clarity 10 times that ever achieved.

But the mirror flaw threw Hubble's focus off. A $1 billion shuttle mission is planned for next year so that astronauts can fit the telescope with corrective lenses.

Residents in Lake Mary recently asked the school board to create a safety review board.

State sees end to 'smog city' status for Florida metro areas

By The Associated Press

Environmental officials say Florida's major metropolitan areas may soon be clear of their "smog city" status.

By the end of this year, Broward, Dade, Duval, Hillsborough, Palm Beach and Pinellas counties can claim to have gone three years without enough air-pollution violations to stay on the list, said Larry George, chief of the air monitoring bureau at the state Department of Environmental Regulation.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency rules say that an area may be redesignated after three years without a violation. A violation is chalked up if a metro area has four or more pollution readings above allowable limits within three years.

Besides meeting the standard, state and local officials will have to prove to the EPA that the air quality improvement is a result of permanent and enforceable emission reductions, not something that can be laid to a quirk of nature.

They also have to devise a 10-year maintenance plan to convince federal officials that despite continued growth and added cars, the air will stay clean.

George said this shift in focus from correcting pollution problems to preventing them is good.

"There's nothing left as far as the Clean Air Act that we haven't done," he said.

In fact, the motor vehicle inspection program Florida started in 1991 in the six counties goes beyond what the act requires for marginal areas, like Hillsborough and Pinellas counties, but George said it likely will become a requirement in the 10-year plan.

The chief pollutant in Florida is ozone.

Ozone forms through a chemical reaction when components of factory and car emissions mix with sunlight. Cars emit the most pollutants when idling in traffic, and environmental officials estimate they are responsible for 70 percent of the low-altitude ozone pollution problem.

When ozone is high in the atmosphere, it helps protect people from harmful rays of the sun. But when it is within breathing distance, it can damage the lungs.

Because vehicles are the main culprit, DER officials say local agencies will have to work closely with metropolitan planning organizations to make long-term traffic and population projections.

George said the DER hopes to submit the reclassification request to the EPA next June.

"I think we owe it to the public," said Iwan Chronenko, air pollution director at the Hillsborough County Environmental Protection Commission.

"The number of violations we had in the past doesn't happen now."

But he added that if the weather doesn't cooperate, the area could be "right back in the pickle jar."

Buses

zones. "If we can do anything at all to help the children," he said, "I'm ready to take action."

In Lake Mary, the resolution presented Thursday called for immediate action by the Seminole County school board to reexamine all bus stops. Longwood resident Chris Mylett was one of the main public speakers during the meeting.

"We are asking Lake Mary's support," he said, "and we plan to gather at the Longwood City Commission meeting Monday night to ask for similar support to get the school board to take action."

Mylett, the father of three, said he had personally checked bus stops in the Longwood and Lake Mary areas and found many problems. "The children waiting for a bus are being made to stand too close to the roadways where cars are just flying by," he said. "The way I see it, the school board is denying the right of my children to be safe."

"In addition to Lake Mary," he said, "I'm asking Longwood's City Commission to adopt a resolution preventing children from getting picked up from the major streets in the area."

Lake Mary adopted the resolution unanimously Thursday and sent a letter to the school board Friday morning. By late Friday, the board responded, saying it would establish an intergovernmental safety committee, as requested by Lake Mary.

The school board said it planned to have a resolution approving the committee on the agenda for its Oct. 27 meeting.

The Longwood City Commission meeting is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight, in the commission chamber of the Longwood City Hall, 175 W. Warren St.

Survey

now paid by Orlando-area customers. Orlando residential customers now pay $10.30 per month to call about 530,500 numbers without a toll.

Under the proposal, Sanford-exchange customers would be able to call about 528,500 numbers for $12.75, about the same sized calling area for almost 24 percent more expense. Geneva customers would be able to call about 512,500 numbers for the 24 percent increase.

Morris and the other officials contend it is unfair for local customers to pay more than Orlando customers for similar service. Morris and Smith suggest customers reject the plan unless they make a lot of calls to Orlando and would realize a savings. Also, customers with specialized one-way toll-free service may see a cost reduction under the proposal, said Morris and Smith.

"I would urge them to say 'no' unless they truly want it," said Smith.

Also, Morris said the survey is misleading because it states the Lake Mary City Commission has requested calls between Sanford and Orlando be toll-free. While Lake Mary commissioners initiated the call for toll-free calls, they were joined by Sanford and county commissioners.

Morris said he did not have an opportunity to review the survey before it was mailed.

"This makes it look like Lake Mary is trying to push something on people in Sanford," said Morris. "That can't be farther from the truth."

Larry Strickler, Southern Bell area manager, said he also didn't review the survey before it was sent and agreed the wording should have included Sanford and the county.

"It probably is misleading in that all three governmental entities have requested this," said Strickler this morning.

Strickler said he also would have emphasized wording that indicated failure to return the survey would be counted as a 'no' vote.

"We want as many people who want it to respond as possible or else their votes will be counted as 'no' votes," said Strickler.

the complaints that come before us," said CRB member Clarence Counts of Oviedo, an assistant federal public defender. "The citizenry needs to have confidence in the people they hire to protect them. Maybe we can help to improve relations between the sheriff and the people who pay his salary."

"Maybe it will have some meat to it and we'll be able to do something," said CRB member Keylor Chan of Longwood, occupational license manager for the Seminole County Tax Collector's Office.

The CRB will review excessive force complaints after an administrative review or internal investigation is completed. Estlinger will then close the investigation and decide whether to agree with the findings. After he makes a determination, Estlinger will submit the entire case file, including evidence and tape recorded interviews, to the CRB.

CRB member Donald Rehman of Longwood suggested they review the findings before Estlinger makes a determination, but Estlinger said such investigations are confidential under state law until he "signs off" on them.

The CRB will recommend whether the allegation was founded or whether additional investigation is warranted.

Estlinger will then consider the CRB recommendation in his final decision whether the complaint was valid or not. If the complaint is determined valid, it will be submitted to a five-officer committee comprised of sheriff's and accused's appointees to determine if discipline is warranted. Estlinger will then make the final decision on what degree of discipline should be meted out.

Each member of the group, appointed by a panel of community leaders, will be required to take an extensive training course to acquaint them firsthand with the day-to-day operations and training facing sheriff's deputies. The required training includes 16 hours on the road with a patrol deputy, including at least eight hours at night; a four-hour tour of the John E. Polk Correctional Facility; a four-hour "shadow" of City-County Investigative Bureau agents; and a six-hour training session in the sheriff's use of force policies and procedures.

Estlinger said he hoped the members can complete the training by Dec. 1 in time to begin reviewing cases.

Florida donated personnel and facilities for the production of a videotape that shows what FACTS has done in the past and where it hopes to go in the future.

The 10-minute tape, which includes views from some of the teachers who were helped with projects through grants and incentives from FACTS.

Diane Lewis, 1980 teacher of the year, had once received a FACTS mini-grant to get her "Body building by Dr. Frankenstein" program underway. Lewis, who is now a district resource teacher, said she used every dollar she received from FACTS to buy supplies and travel to national conventions to show off her idea.

The project, which allowed students to build their own human beings from scratch using everyday household items, was featured in several national science publications.

"We like to promote the truly unique ideas that help the students learn but that the schools just can not afford to fund," Cavallaro said.

FACTS is considering hiring a part-time grant writer, who would be the only paid member of the FACTS staff, to find the money that is available for teacher grants to help them continue their education.

"There's money out there and we want to get it for our teachers," Wall said.

Presidential campaign '92

Bush needs boost; attacks may carry backlash

By JOHN KLING
AP Political Writer

EAST LANSING, Mich. — President Bush, Bill Clinton and Ross Perot close their debate triphedder tonight with the pressure squarely on Bush to chop Clinton's lead. But the president faces an accompanying risk that any strident attacks could backfire.

The three candidates meet for 90 minutes tonight at Michigan State University, their presidential debate finale and the tone-setter for the two-week dash to Election Day.

"I'm just going to answer the questions," a confident Clinton said Sunday before staging mock debates with advisers. "I believe if we make the changes that I'm advocating, it will really build this country enormously."

As the front-runner, Clinton's goal was little changed from the first two debates: press his case that Bush's economic approach has failed while trying to raise the comfort level of those who reluctantly are backing his candidacy.

"I'd just like the American people to know that I care very deeply about these things that I've been talking about for a year and that I believe they can make a difference," the Arkansas governor said in Ypsilanti, where he spent the weekend preparing for the debate.

The stakes were far higher for Bush as he tried to extend the Republican grip on the White House to 16 years. Trailing Clinton in national polls and in most of the big electoral battlegrounds, the president needs to mount a historic comeback if he is to win a second term.

"I don't think it is going to take a bombshell," Bush campaign manager Fred Malek said Sunday. "We think this election is very, very winnable."

Still, aides promised Bush would be more aggressive than in the first two debates, but they conceded that the president needed to walk a fine line between drawing contrasts with Clinton and appearing too eager to attack.

"It can look desperate," said an administration official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

This official said Bush would argue that a Clinton presidency and a Democratic Congress would send taxes and spending out of control "as well as the need for strong character in the Oval Office. ... He has to hit these themes very strongly, but not in a shrill or desperate way. He's got to get people to stop before they close the deal with Clinton."

Perot entered the final debate running a distant third in national polls, conducting his independent campaign through the debates and a series of network television ad buys instead of traditional personal appearances.

"I think the American people need to be looking for change. And there's only one method of getting change and that's to take both of these parties out of circulation for the time being and let's get somebody who will address problems," Perot coordinator Oren Swindle said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

Bush, who was flying to Michigan today, staged mock debates in Washington on Sunday as his campaign tried to shake the air of inevitability settling over a race Clinton has led since July.

But even as they insisted there was time to turn the race around, many Bush advisers conceded privately the odds were long, a sentiment voiced repeatedly by academics and analysts from both parties.

"By the middle of October, most people have made up their minds," said Benjamin Page, a Northwestern University professor who studies public opinion. "With time so late there aren't many things he can do, and the most dramatic things he could do might very well backfire. I think at this point people would be inclined not to believe it and resent any attempts to muddy the waters."

Tonight's format is split. In the first 45 minutes, Jim Lehrer of PBS will serve as single moderator. While looser than the formats used in either of the previous debates, this format is more restrictive than the approach that led to the contentious vice presidential debate. The candidate questioned by Lehrer will get two minutes to respond and the other candidates one minute each to rebut.

Democrats in office?

Clinton administration could change Florida politics

By GARY ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The growing possibility of a Democratic administration in Washington is creating symptoms of Potomac Fever among Florida political figures.

Many prominent Florida Democrats have close ties to presidential nominee Bill Clinton, particularly Lt. Gov. Buddy MacKay. In fact, MacKay was one of the founders of the moderate Democratic Leadership Council that helped launch Clinton.

Others who might be in line for jobs in a Clinton administration are Secretary Carol Browner of the Department of Environmental Regulation, Commerce Secretary Greg Farmer and former American Bar Association president Talbot "Sandy" D'Alemberte.

It's expected by many Democrats that Clinton would offer MacKay a prominent slot in his administration, perhaps a Cabinet office such as Housing and Urban Development, Commerce or Treasury. The Office of Management and Budget is also spoken of as a possibility.

MacKay, who has served as chairman of Clinton's Florida campaign, said he's happy as Gov. Lawton Chiles' right-hand man but would be interested in Washington if the right offer came along.

"I didn't get in this to get a job. I've got a job I like," MacKay said. "If I had a chance to take some of these ideas and put them into practice across the country, that would be interesting."

MacKay has already said he's running for governor in 1994 if Chiles decides not to seek a second term.

I didn't get in this to get a job. I've got a job I like.

Should MacKay go, that might be an indication that Chiles does plan to run — as many close associates say he now intends after reorganizing his staff with the hiring of Capitol veterans Tom Herndon as chief of staff and David Coburn to run the budget office.

"There's got to be a compelling reason not to run," said Bud Chiles, the governor's son. "Everything points to him doing it."

That could scramble the plans of Attorney General Bob Butterworth and Orlando Mayor Bill Frederick and other Democrats, who would have to think twice about challenging Chiles in the Democratic primary.

Browner, one of Chiles' most successful agency chiefs, came to Tallahassee from vice presidential nominee Al Gore's U.S. Senate office, where she was legislative director. Browner has spent the past couple of weeks in Little Rock, Ark., working on a transition team set up to find people for a potential Clinton administration.

"She's communicated to us that she's not looking for an appointment and she's not expecting an appointment," said DER spokeswoman Jo Maglino. "It would have to be a really good offer."

Nonetheless, Browner is being mentioned as a possible chief of staff for Gore or for a post such as the Environmental Protection Agency, although she probably would have to settle for No. 2 at that department.

Farmer, who lobbied Congress for Northern Telecom before joining Chiles, has a compelling reason to take a Clinton administration job: his wife, Susanne, is U.S. Rep. Pete Peterson's chief of staff and lives full-time in Washington.

"There's no question we'd like to be in the same city," Farmer said. "I've done Washington. At the same time, I would not rule anything out. We'll see what happens."

Farmer is a close associate of MacKay's, running his unsuccessful 1988 U.S. Senate campaign and serving as MacKay's chief congressional assistant in the U.S. House for six years.

D'Alemberte, who recently completed his term as Bar Association president, is a member of the Steel, Hector & Davis law firm which has close links to the Democratic Party. He's being mentioned as a potential U.S. Supreme Court nominee or, more likely, as solicitor general.

"It's something he's wanted to do for a long time," said Steve Uhlfelder, a law partner of D'Alemberte's.

There are others: retiring U.S. Rep. Dante Fascell, whose international expertise might make him an ambassador; former state Labor Secretary Frank Scruggs; and Tampa Mayor Sandy Freedman.

"I'm going to be active in the transition," MacKay said. "We've got some very talented people in Florida."

Polling today as vital as shaking hands

By FRED BAYLES
AP National Writer

CHICAGO — When the phone interviewer asked the woman to rate George Bush, there was a long sigh.

"It's difficult to answer," she finally said. "This whole family values thing really ticks me off."

The woman, a moderate Republican from affluent Lake County, Ill., had already given Bill Clinton and Ross Perot low marks. But she liked Sheila Smith, a Democratic challenger for Congress she knew little about.

"At least she's a woman," she explained.

For Smith's pollster, Mike McKeon, the answers offered hopeful clues: voter dissatisfaction, a willingness to jump parties for a candidate representing change. Small details — age, income, attitudes — augured well for Smith's uphill run against conservative incumbent Phil Crane.

"Stuff like that gives me goose bumps," said McKeon, a rumpiled political veteran whose regional work has earned him a national following. "She might be behind in the numbers, but numbers aren't the important thing. It's the moods and trend."

It was McKeon's job to tease those insights out of 15 simple questions put to some 400 voters in the early October tracking poll, and offer compass points for the final weeks of Smith's shoe-string campaign.

"The candidate doesn't have enough money to educate the people, so the best polling shows what voters want taken care of and what they think is the most feasible way of doing it," he said. "It's a way of getting you on the same page as your constituency."

McKeon is among the cadre of professional pollsters ingrained in the nation's political process. Once few in number and relegated to large, well-financed races, pollsters now swarm around contests from Congress to county commissioner.

Presidential polls still draw most attention — both the Bush and Clinton campaigns shift strategies based on daily tracking polls in key states. But candidates of all stripes won't make a move without their pollster's pulse-taking.

issues, ads, appearances — they're all driven by what pollsters tell them.

"Polling is an efficiency tool," said Alan Secrest, whose Alexandria, Va., firm polls for Democratic congressional candidates. "It may be 5 to 10 percent of a campaign budget, but it helps you spend the rest of money more efficiently."

Not everyone is a fan. Doug Bailey, whose daily political tipheet reports on polls, calls the efficiency of polling "insidious."

"As much as people say they don't do it, they do use the polls to shape their words," Bailey said. "Fewer and fewer candidates have the foggiest notion of what they stand for because they rely on the polls."

Forty years ago public opinion polls weren't a big deal. Harry S. Truman, the most-emulated president in this year's White House race, had little use for them. "I don't wait for any polls to tell me what to think," he said.

Over the next few decades the stature of pollsters like Lou Harris and George Gallup grew. But polls were expensive, time consuming projects that required armies of people bearing clipboards door-to-door.

"Twenty years ago when I started my company, 90 percent of polling was door-to-door," said Peter Hart, a longtime Democratic pollster who started with Harris. "Now it's less than one half of 1 percent."

The shift started in the mid-'70s, when Democratic strategists used volunteers on phone banks for congressional candidates.

The technique caught on. Aided by faster and cheaper technologies, from computers to telecommunications, scores of political pollsters have sprung forth from campaigns and campuses, creating a cottage industry around Washington.

The job goes beyond tabulating how people will vote. "We take it to the next step: This is how things are, this is why and this is how we can change it," said Ed Gooss, whose Virginia firm polls for 70 Republican candidates for Congress.

Beyond its accessibility, polling became necessary to track the opinions of a changing society.

"You used to be able to go to local community leaders, union heads, church leaders, and have a good idea of what people were thinking," said Stan Greenberg, Clinton's pollster.

"Now the union has grown weaker and political machines have faded," he said. "Members of Congress no longer have the social fabric to communicate directly with the electorate. They have to rely much more on polling."

Polling has become increasingly complex. Computers dial random numbers, record and analyze responses. Specialty firms offer lists of registered voters cross-referenced with telephone numbers.

Academics like Greenberg, a former Yale political scientist, provide 6-inch thick books of statistical analysis, charts and graphs. Focus groups use "people meters" to gauge reaction during round-table discussions.

There is talk of a future where issues are tested on computers programmed to react the way voters think.

For McKeon, a 46-year-old street smart thinker who apprenticed in Illinois' tough political leagues, the gizmos and gimmicks miss the point of polling. He quotes from Albert Einstein: "All knowledge of reality starts with experience ... propositions arrived at by purely logical means are completely empty of reality."

"If you're not getting any of the human condition you're not doing the job," McKeon explained. "You never go wrong if you stay close to the streets and back yards."

McKeon did a simple benchmark poll for Smith in April to test her chances against Crane, a 12-term incumbent. He found weakened support for Crane in a newly redrawn district hit by white collar layoffs and economic ills.

The poll did more than convince Smith to run: it showed the Democratic Party — and contributors — that she was viable.

"If we didn't have a poll, we wouldn't have had a legitimate candidacy," said Smith, an entrepreneur with three businesses. "It was probably the best investment at the start."

McKeon's October poll was a model in simplicity. To establish the issues, people were asked to describe major problems facing their area. To gauge political orientation, they rated candidates for president and Congress.

McKeon also asked who was more likely to support a gas tax increase. Crane has supported a 1 cent increase; Smith is opposed.

The results were heartening for Smith. She tied Crane at 36 percent each. A majority — incorrectly — picked her as the likely supporter of the unpopular gas tax.

IN BRIEF

OCS Rams ranked fifth

MAITLAND — Orangewood Christian School was ranked No. 5 in the Florida Athletic Coaches Association boys' fall soccer state poll announced Sunday night.

The OCS Rams (9-3-1) trail Fort Lauderdale University (14-0-1), Lakeland Christian (11-2-2), Tampa Preparatory (12-2-2) and Tallahassee-McLay (8-3-4).

Rounding out the top 10 are, in order, St. Petersburg-Kewick (8-6-3), Orange Park-St. John's Country Day (7-4-2), Lake Worth Christian (8-3-2), Pompano Beach-Highlands (10-3-2) and Bradenton Christian (9-2-2).

Orangewood Christian hosts Lakeland Christian in a 4 p.m. game this Tuesday.

Marino, Dolphins rip Patriots

MIAMI — Dan Marino did everything Sunday except jump over a bench.

The Miami Dolphins' $25 million man took a scary spill when he stumbled over the New England bench after running out of bounds. But Marino bounced to his feet and threw his fourth and final touchdown pass moments later to help Miami beat the Patriots, 38-17.

It was Marino's first game with four or more touchdown passes since 1988, but the 17th of his career, tying John Unitas' NFL record.

Is Lachemann Marlins' man?

MIAMI — Rene Lachemann, reportedly the Florida Marlins' choice to become their first manager, speculates that the expansion team may wait until after the World Series to contact him about the job.

Lachemann, an Oakland A's coach for the past six years, has been interviewed for managing jobs with the Marlins and Texas Rangers. Baseball protocol frowns on major hirings during the sport's premier event.

"I have not heard anything from anybody — Florida or Texas," Lachemann said Sunday night from his home in Scottsdale, Ariz.

"I'm not puzzled, really. They can't make a decision during the World Series, from what people told me. I figure that might be what's happening. I can understand that."

Harbaugh shoots down Bucs

CHICAGO — Jim Harbaugh passed for a career best 304 yards, including an 83-yard touchdown to Anthony Morgan, in leading the Chicago Bears to a 31-14 victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on Sunday.

It was his first game since "The Audible" that led to a touchdown and an eventual 21-20 loss at Minnesota two weeks ago when coach Mike Ditka berated his quarterback.

Harbaugh completed 13 of 28 passes for two touchdowns to exceed his previous best of 303 yards against the New York Jets last year. The touchdown pass to Morgan was the longest ever against the Bucs and a yard short of Harbaugh's longest against Indianapolis last year.

Sprague evens Series

ATLANTA — Now everyone knows the name of Toronto's backup catcher, too.

Ed Sprague became the latest in baseball's week of unlikely heroes, hitting a two-run, pinch-homer in the ninth inning Sunday night as the Blue Jays stunned the Atlanta Braves 6-4 to even the World Series at one game each.

The scene shifts to the SkyDome on Tuesday night for Game 3, the first World Series game outside of the United States. Steve Avery will start for Atlanta against Juan Guzman.

Getting cranked up

Rams prepare for stretch run with tournament win

From Staff Reports

ORLANDO — It's almost showtime. With the Seminole Athletic Conference championship to be decided this week and the 4A-District 9 tournament two weeks away, the Lake Mary High School varsity girls' volleyball team started to get prepared by whipping through the field on the way to winning the Bishop Moore Invitational on Saturday.

The Rams (23-5) lost only one game in six matches on their way to winning the one-day tournament.

"It was a real team effort," said Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry. "Every match, someone looked good and someone looked bad. No one really shined completely all day. We had our good moments and our bad moments."

One of the most consistent performers was turned in by Lake Mary setter Lorie Boger, who was named to the all-tournament team.

Play began with the 10-team field breaking down into a pair of five-team pools. Lake Mary won its pool by knocking off Daytona Beach-Seabreeze (15-3, 15-12), Kissimmee-Osceola (15-8, 15-13), University (15-11, 15-10) and Jacksonville-Bishop Kenney (15-6, 15-5).

In the semifinals, Lake Mary thumped Lake Brantley 15-2, 15-5 while Palm Bay outlasted University (which advanced to the semifinals by virtue of its second-place finish in pool play) 15-6, 6-15, 15-6.

Lake Mary then defeated Palm Bay 15-6, 8-15, 15-8 in the championship match.

The Lake Brantley Patriots earned a spot in the semifinals by finishing second in its pool, beating Apopka (15-10, 15-8) and Kissimmee-Gateway (15-10, 15-11) and losing to Palm Bay (15-13, 17-16) and Bishop Moore (15-7, 7-15, 15-4).

Not only did the tournament give the Rams a chance to work on their game in a competitive setting, it gave Henry a chance to get everybody some quality minutes on the floor and see how they reacted in close matches.

"We played everybody all day long, except in the finals against Palm Bay," said Henry. "Palm Bay beat us in the West Orange tournament, so it was nice to get back and get a win from them. We played several defensive, scrappy teams and we needed that kind of play."

"We were looking to see what everyone could do. Everyone got in, so everyone's happy. We were in the gym from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. That can be tough on someone that's a sub. I played everyone a great deal and tried to rest the starters as much as I could. Everyone left with the good feeling that they had contributed."

Lake Mary will close out its regular season with three matches this week, hosting Lake Brantley on Tuesday before traveling to Bishop Moore on Wednesday and playing at Oviedo on Thursday.

After playing at Lake Mary Tuesday, the Lake Brantley Patriots travel to Eustis on Wednesday before closing out their regular season with a home match against Seminole on Thursday.

DOUBLE TAKES

Coming through

Lyman quarterback Todd Cleveland (No. 20, above) had a career night in the Greyhounds' 49-20 win over Spruce Creek on Friday, rushing for over 200 yards, three touchdowns and a two-point conversion. It was the first 200-yard rushing performance by a Seminole County player this season. What offense the Spruce Creek Hawks could muster came in the person of David Lynch (No. 21, right), who caught three passes for 39 yards and a touchdown. Lyman is idle this week and doesn't play again until Friday, Oct. 30, when the Greyhounds host DeLand. Spruce Creek is at home against Lake Mary this Friday, Oct. 23.

Methodists, SFWC take over leads

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Sanford First United Methodist and Sanford Family Worship Center moved to the head of their respective divisions, while Sanford Central Baptist has quietly moved into title contention in the Sanford Church Softball League's Fall Season.

Saturday at Lee P. Moore Park, Family Worship Center scored four runs in the top of the first inning and the defense held Antioch Baptist of Oviedo scoreless until the sixth as the Fun Division leaders coasted to an 8-2 victory.

First United Methodist's Dean W. Smith followed last week's shutout with a five-hitter, allowing one earned run, and struck out four and all 10 Methodist hitters either scored a run, drove in a run or had a hit as they knocked off Geneva First Baptist 9-2 to take over sole leadership of the Fellowship Division.

In the other game at Lee P. Moore, Lake Mary Grace United Methodist came from behind to defeat Lake Mary Nativity Catholic-Disciples 7-4.

At Chase Park, St. Stephen Catholic of Winter Springs led 8-0 before allowing previous Fellowship co-leader Lake Mary Nativity Catholic-Crusaders to score in an 11-4 victory, giving First United Methodist sole possession of first place.

But the biggest story was Central Baptist, which pounded Sanford Christian 9-1 to move to 3-1 on the season and within a 1/2-game of the Fellowship lead. Because of a scheduling problem, Central had a bye the first week of the season and then lost its first game to First Methodist 8-5. Since then though the 1990 Fall Champions have won three in a row to move into contention.

In the other games at Chase Park, Sanford All Souls Catholic used two big scoring innings to derail Holy Cross Lutheran of Lake Mary 10-4 and Sanford Church of God of Prophecy scored three runs in the

SAC volleyball chase comes down to final week

It's getting so that you can't tell the forest for the trees.

When the varsity girls' volleyball season began some six weeks ago, the Lake Mary Rams were the odds-on favorites to defend their Seminole Athletic Conference and 4A-District 9 championships. While they graduated two of the best players in the county's history, the Rams had plenty of size and talent returning.

And with two weeks remaining in the regular season, the Rams are still the favorites to sweep the two titles, but not by the overwhelming margin bestowed upon them back in September.

No one knows that better than Lake Mary coach Cindy Henry.

"Everyone in the county has improved," said Henry, whose team lost only one game on its way to winning the Bishop Moore Invitational on Saturday (see related story). "We have a more balanced team than we did a year ago, but we have those nights when no one wants to take the lead. Then we seem to follow whoever's having a bad night."

Last year, the Rams swept through the SAC on their way to a

SPORTS

TONY DESORMIER

33-2 season. This year, despite being a deeper, more offensively balanced team, Lake Mary is 7-1 in the SAC, 23-5 overall after the Bishop Moore tournament.

"It's a real weird year," said Henry. "Oviedo is always tough, Lake Howell plays great defense and Lyman and Seminole can both hit the ball well. The conference is very even."

So even is the SAC that the Rams' match with Lake Brantley (winless in the SAC this season) has Henry concerned.

"This is a rebuilding year for Lake Brantley, but they're still competitive," said Henry. "I'm worried about this week. We have Lake Brantley on Tuesday but the kids may be thinking ahead to Oviedo on Thursday."

It was Oviedo that snapped Lake Mary's SAC winning streak earlier this month, defeating the Rams at Lake Mary on Oct. 6.

Seven days later, it was Oviedo's turn to be upended, losing to Seminole in three games after winning the first game 15-1, further illustrating how competitive the SAC is this year.

"The hardest team to beat is the one you're playing that night. I don't care who it is," Henry said. "As a result, this year's 4A-District 9 tournament, scheduled for the first week of November, should be one of the most competitive in recent years."

Last season, Lake Mary, Lake Howell and Oviedo were playing at a level all their own. There were no pretenses of how on any given night, any given team can beat any other team; once the seedings were set, everyone knew it would come down to Lake Howell and Oviedo playing for the right to challenge Lake Mary.

This year, nothing's a lock. While Seminole will be heading to Flagler-Palm Coast for the 3A-District 6 tournament, the 4A-District 9 field will be filled out by four Volusia County schools. And several of them aren't too bad, either.

"Spruce Creek is usually pretty decent," said Henry. "And Deltona can scare you."

Which means there won't be any cakewalk to the district championship match for anyone this year. Everybody will have at least two (and possibly three) demanding matches to claim the district title. Considering that the tournament will be played over four days, emotional stamina will be as important as physical conditioning.

Of course, before we get around to crowning district champions, there's still the SAC title to be decided, Lake Mary and Oviedo each having one conference loss. But before they meet on Thursday at Oviedo, Lake Mary has to get past Lake Brantley and Oviedo has to take care of Lyman on Tuesday night.

And there's no telling what impact this week's results will have on the district playoff.

It's strawberry time

Plants can be set out until mid-November

Just the mention of strawberries usually makes our mouths water. In addition to being both tasty and attractive, luckily, strawberries are well-suited to Florida's growing conditions and are relatively easy to grow. And now the proper time to plant strawberries in our area is upon us.

Even though the strawberry plant is a perennial it is best treated as an annual in Florida. The plant goes through a cycle of vegetative growth, flower formation, fruit production, then runner development. For those of you that have grown strawberries in the north, it is important to note that our production season is reversed.

Strawberry plants can be set out throughout October but no later than mid-November. The cool nights and short days of winter stimulate the plant to produce flowers which develop into fruits that are ready for harvest in about a month. Plants set out in mid-october should produce ripe fruit by Christmas. Berry production and harvesting continue throughout winter and into spring. As the weather gets warmer and the days grow longer, the plants will stop producing berries and begin to form runners. These runners will take root and become new plants. However, for most home gardeners, it is more practical to discard the plants at the end of the season and purchase new plants in the fall.

Although strawberries can be grown in almost any type of Florida soil, they prefer a well drained one which can be kept moist but not wet. A sandy soil with considerable organic matter is the best. Irrigation will usually be needed since strawberries have a shallow root system.

Strawberries are sensitive to day length and temperature and it is important to select varieties adapted to Florida conditions. Varieties like Dover and Florida Belle yield large fruit and are resistant to a common plant disease called anthracnose. Other recommended varieties are Florida 90, Tioga, Douglas and Sequoia. Everbearing varieties are not recommended in Florida.

Strawberries should be planted in raised beds approximately six inches high. For a 100 square foot area, broadcast about 2 lbs. of 8-8-8 fertilizer and incorporate it into the soil. Add the same amount of fertilizer in bands six inches deep and to the side of the beds. After the beds have been prepared, fertilized and well watered, cover each with a sheet of 1/2 mil. black plastic. Place soil on the edges of the plastic to hold it in place. Then cut slits in the plastic to insert plants. Space the plants 12 inches apart in the rows.

It's very important to always start with certified, disease-free plants which are available at your favorite garden center. Keep them moist before planting. It is extremely important to plant them at the correct depth so that the crowns are not covered and the roots are not exposed. Additional information can be obtained by calling the Agriculture Center and requesting Bulletin VC-9 "Strawberries in the Florida Home Garden." With proper maintenance and a bit of luck, you should start enjoying fresh strawberries by Christmas — what a wonderful present to yourself!

Extension programs are open to all regardless of race, sex, creed or national origin.

Mom proud of child born in mid-life

DEAR ABBY: "Found Love Late" wondered if it would be fair to a child to have a menopausal mother who looks more like a grandmother than a mother at PTA meetings. Let me answer that.

I had my fifth child when my fourth was in college. My slightly younger new husband wanted a baby, and I felt lucky to be able to have one.

Would I go down that road again? No way! As we age, we find we require more peace and quiet. At ages 40 and 50-plus, we tire more easily and our joints begin to stiffen. After running our son to school, Scouts, soccer, swimming, baseball, basketball, band and music lessons — plus homework and PTA — we have little energy left for each other. The years of participation in preschool and kindergarten were embarrassing, and I still feel out of place with the other parents.

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

"Found Love Late's" concern for a child's feeling if Mom is mistaken for Grandma is a legitimate worry. Fortunately, I have few few gray hairs at 58, but my 11-year-old son is still asked, "Is that your mom or your grandma?" Sign me...
ALSO FOUND LOVE LATE, TOO TIRED TO ENJOY IT.

DEAR A.F.L.L.: I received many diverse responses to that letter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When I was 42, I married a younger man. (He was 33.) We talked about having a child, but didn't know what our chances would be for having a normal, healthy child.

At age 43, I became pregnant with twins! Today, thank God, we have a pair of healthy, active, 10-year-old boys. I have never felt older than the parents of their friends; in fact, some of the younger moms look and act more like grandmothers than I do.

I say, "Go for it. If that's what you and your husband want!" These days, many women are marrying younger men, and we're going to see more women in their 40s having their first child.

NO REGRETS IN TACOMA
DEAR ABBY: Knowing what I know about having a child at age

47, I would certainly do it again.

Our "baby" is 24 now, and he has always been a joy to us. He's smart, good-looking, good-natured, and a very thoughtful, loving son. He's away at law school now.

I hope "Found Love Late" has as much good fortune with her child as we have had with ours. Sign us...

BLESSED IN RHODE ISLAND
DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who was thinking of having a baby at age 43. I think I have the right to speak for the child because my mother was 45 when I was born. My father was 52, and believe me, I was far from lucky. I was told often that I was an "accident," which didn't do much for my self-esteem.

My parents never took me to the circus, rodeo, fair or even to the park. The few times I went to an event like that I either had to walk or beg for a ride with a classmate because my parents were too old for such "nonsense."
I marched in the high school band for four years, and my parents never came to one game to see me.

I feel I missed most of my childhood because my parents were too old to be interested in such things. They were also too old to drive after dark.

MISSING A LOT IN NORTH TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I can't seem to forget the letter from that girl who wrote to you saying that she hated her freckles. I identified with her because I, too, grew up hating my red hair and freckles — millions of them! Then a young man who thought I was attractive enough to date sent me two dozen roses and enclosed this Dorothy Parker (I think) verse:

"Men lose their hearts and send their roses
"To girls with freckles on their noses!"

COPD is a consequence of many lung disorders

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm interested in obtaining information on obstructive lung disease and disorders.

DEAR READER: Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease is a serious lung ailment marked by low blood oxygen and high blood carbon dioxide, due to several alterations in lung tissue, notably loss of alveolar air sacs and increased mucus secretion. COPD is a common consequence of smoking, air pollution and many lung disorders, such as chronic bronchitis and asthma.

Treatment consists of drugs to release bronchial spasm, reduce mucus, eliminate infection, and improve ventilation (such as special breathing exercises and, in more severe cases, oxygen therapy).

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Lung Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

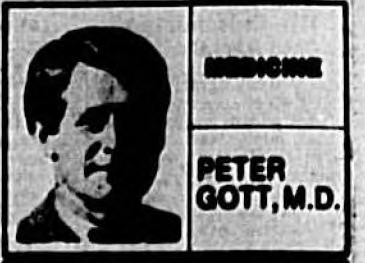

Also, you may wish to contact the local chapter of your Lung Association for brochures and other written material.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had a pelvic ultrasound that revealed a prominent endometrial "nest." Just what does this mean?

DEAR READER: Endometrium is tissue that lines the interior of the uterus. In some women, for no known reason, "nests" of abnormal endometrium may appear and grow outside the uterus. Called endometriosis, this condition may lead to severe abdominal pain and other symptoms.

Evidently, your doctor discovered just this sort of misplaced endometrial tissue during the ultrasound test. Are you having periodic bellyaches? If so, your endometriosis could be the cause. This is treated with hormone pills or -- if it is really disabling -- surgery to remove the aberrant tissue. If you're not having symptoms, you can safely disregard the ultrasound finding. Ask your gynecologist about this.

PETER GOTT, M.D.

By Phillip Alder

Sallust lived in the years just before the calendar went from B.C. to A.D. (I wonder how they numbered the years in B.C., not knowing that A.D. was on its way.) He pointed out that a person can be "greedy for the property of others, extravagant with his own." That sums up the declarer of today's deal rather well.

West opened the attack with the heart jack. Declarer won the first trick in the dummy, played a diamond to his queen and led a second diamond. West's discard was irritating. East won this trick and switched to the spade jack. South had to finesse, but when his queen lost and West returned a spade, South could do no better than win seven tricks.

South said: "The textbooks are right. Once I knew West was long in hearts, I should have played for East to be long in diamonds. I would have made an overtrick."

It is true that this is often a reliable guideline, but here South had overlooked the danger of a spade switch from East. With six top tricks in the other suits, declarer needed only three tricks from diamonds. South could afford to concede two diamond tricks as long as he didn't lose control of another suit while establishing the diamonds.

The guaranteed play is to finesse through East for the diamond jack at trick two. Even if West can win with the jack, he cannot hurt South with a spade switch. Whatever happens, declarer must end up with at least nine tricks.

South had greedily hoped to lose only one diamond trick, but had been too extravagant with his own resources in the suit.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 30, 1992

There is likely to be a line of demarcation between your social friends and your business friends in the year ahead. This should turn out to be a good policy and give you the best of two worlds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be stingy with friends today, but, by the same token, be careful about lending money to a pal who has yet to repay a previous debt. You'll feel foolish if history repeats itself. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might not accomplish your objectives today, owing to an inability to judge the strength of your opposition or obstacles. Don't go in kidding yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You might let your intuition take precedence over your logic and intellect today, rather than the other way around. This may not work out too well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A situation you're presently involved in might undergo some unexpected changes today. Instead of bucking the tide, try to flow with events. It will make the transition easier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Usually, you're pretty good at dealing with individuals on a one-to-one basis, but this could be your short suit today. Don't rock the boat in your relationships.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Work could be doubly difficult for you today, owing to a negative attitude or improper planning. Think positively, and draw up a set of blueprints before attempting tasks.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your expectations are not founded upon realistic factors, disappointments could occur today. Putting in a little and hoping to get back a lot is a formula for shattered dreams.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

You and your mate might reach an impasse today on an issue you both feel is significant. Confrontation can be avoided -- if you let it rest for a few days.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Before putting down the suggestions of others today, be certain you know what you're talking about. Your thoughts might appear equally as impractical to them.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Strive to be prudent in the management of your resources today. This is not a propitious time for extravagant shopping or reckless financial investing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Upon occasion, you can juggle several projects simultaneously and do a reasonably good job. However, it's best you stick to one thing today and dedicate yourself to doing that well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you participate in gossip today, don't be surprised later to learn you have been talked about by others as well. What goes around comes around.
