Sanford Engineer Foresees Blight With Expressway Land Reservations

By Brian Sullivan Herald Staff Writer

A right-of-way reservation for an alignment of the Seminole County Expressway through Sanford would "do much to stifle growth and would contribute greatly to urban decay.' sald Sanford City Engineer Bill Simmons.

On Wednesday the Seminole County Expressway Authority's three advisory committees selected a final alignment recommendation to be presented to the expressway authority June 24. For the recommendation to become the actual route, a simple majority of the seven-member expressway authority must vote in favor of it.

After a seven-month study, consultants decided on a proposed 16-mile, $245 million expressway

Lake Jesup and proceeds through several Sanford neighborhoods before meeting interstate 4 about one mile south of State Road 46.

The authority is made up of the five Seminole County Commissioner. Fred Streetman, Bill Kirchhoff. Sandra Glenn. Bob Sturm and Barbara Christensen: Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith, and Lake Mary City Commissioner Paul Tremel.

Tremel has said that he is opposed to the expressway coming through Lake Mary and Smith says that her position hasn't changed since April when the Sanford City Commission sent a resolution to the authority route that crosses the western end of opposing the expressway coming through Sanford.

"I may not be able to do much with my one vote." Smith said, "but I'll vote no.'

"There's no reason to tell them again." said Sanford Commissioner A.A. McClanahan. "They know how we feel."

But dealing with the imminent aspects of the potential expressway. Simmons sees the primary problem for the city coming from the use of the "right-of-way reservation." a device whereby the authority may "reserve" all property lying within

Blake said she's participating in the Seminole Community College Adult Literacy program to get her GED (General Equivalency Diploma). so she can become a nurse instead of continuing to work as a motel maid.

She started her studies in October

Blake is just one of many Seminole Countians who are finding they dropped out of school too soon, and without a high school diploma they can't take advantage of employment opportunites that increase as the community grows.

Her literacy skills were good when she left school. Blake said, so it isn't as hard for her to catch up on her studies as it is for those adults who never caught on to basic literacy skills. She has found that a high school diploma is a requirement for most jobs and for advancement. Others with less basic skills find that they can't even apply for a job, because they can't comprehend or fill out an application.

North Fights Disclosures

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Lt. Col. Oliver North replied Friday to a request for disclosure by sealing his argument to a federal appeals court considering whether to reveal a contempt-of-court action against him.

Attorneys for North, continuing his battle to keep secret his role in the Iran-Contra scandal. filed under seal his reply to petitions from Public Citizen, The Washington Post and Dow Jones &

The petitions asked the U.S. District Court and U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to make records public in North's legal battle against a grand jury subpoena from independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh.

North's response is due in the lower court Tuesday.

Patty Goldman, an attorney for Public Citizen, said her group received from North a one-page motion to seal his reply to the petition, and a brief reason why.

North's attorneys, asking the court to seal his reply, argued that making the response public would reveal grand jury information, the documents said.

"The unsealing of the documents currently under seal, or even portions thereof, would result in disclosure of such (grand jury) information," the brief memorandum said.

"Disclosure of this argument would result in the very revelation counsel seeks to avoid," it

North attorney Barry Simon declined to comment on the response.

The development came as North's attorneys also continued to battle with congressional Investigators attempting to secure the Marine's private and public testimony on Capitol Hill. North is under federal court order to testify to Congress, with limited immunity from prosecution, but refused this week to meet in private

To date, North has refused to testify, citing his constitutional right against self-incrimination.

Central Florida Zoo directors, reacting to criticism of its policy of meeting in secret, have agreed to open their meetings to the public and

Wayne Weinburg, president-elect of the board, said the policy-making body wants to deal openly and keep the public well informed about its activities.

The board has been caught up in a controversy over the firing of longtime zoo executive director Al Rozon and has been the target of editorial and public complaints of its insistence on closed meetings. Newspapers have complained about the difficulty of accurately reporting the board's actions by having to rely on versions provided by various board members.

Objections to the closed-door sessions grew after a a June 10-11 meeting at which Rozon was formally terminated and the press and public, including honorary zoo board members, were kept out of the meeting.

Lake Mary Recall Petition Faulty, Says City Attorney make it easier to secure a recall day: Mayor Dick Fess and commis- of the governing body is sought to be By Genie Lindberg

An affidavit submitted in accordance with the city charter by five residents of Lake Mary announcing their intention to begin a petition drive for the recall of Lake Mary's mayor and three city commissioners was for nought, according to City Attorney Frank Kruppenbacher. A state statute, he said, supersedes the Kruppenbacher said in a memo to City Clerk Carol Edwards that since the charter provides for recall of the mayor and commissioners. Florida Statutes apply to recall petitions for elected officials in Lake Mary. The statute states that procedures provided for in the act be uniform referendum. The city charter calls for the five qualified voters who commence the recall campaign to gather signatures of at least 15 percent of the qualified voters registered to vote at the last regular city election. State statute, according to Kruppenbacher, requires a recall petition be signed by at least 10 percent of the total number of registered electors in a municipality of 500 or more but fewer than 2,000 registered electors, such as in Lake Mary. In the city's last election in 1985 there were 1.981 registered voters.

The catch may be that a separate petition must be signed for each person targeted for recall. Four persons are targeted for recall as stated by the affidavit filed Thurs-

Commissioner Arthur "Buzz" Petsos was suspended from his post by the governor after he was charged with burglary. His trial is set for June 26. ty Sees Protection In Council's Policy

By Jane Casselberry traid Staff Writer

The city of Sanford, which has bonded for $16-$17 million to implement the first phase of its wastewater treatment facility. sees the new nigional policy approved Wednesday by the East Central Florida Regional Planning Council as a way to protect its service area boundaries against other governments or private utilities that might intrude in its territory.

Sanford City Planner Jay Marder said the city has gone on recorded as endorsing the regional plan. Sanford has a strong interest in maintaining its service area boundaries, he said, and the city commission adopted a resolution strongly supporting several of its key elements.

"The policy plan protects wastewater service areas and facilities already established such as the ones Sanford established through a federally funded 201 facilities program." Marder said. "The regional policy plan recognizes that fact and has a policy to protect the service area.

Marder said Mayor Bettye Smith and the city commission encouraged the Regional Planning Council to continue and strengthen its intergovernmental role in ensuring local governments provide cost effective public service and facilitles without duplication.

"Right now." Marder said.
"few if any mechanism are in place to ensure that public facilities and service areas public and private entities coordinate in a logical way whether city. county or private companies.

Marder said, "The city is saying the East Central Florida Regional Planning Commission and comprehensive regional policy plan are going in the right direction by establishing some intergovernmental mechanism to assure facilities can be to find out if there are glitches in established and planned in a more efficient and logical manner.

Seminole County Commission Chairman Fred Streetman said he was "reasonably pleased" with the 495-page regional policy plan.

The Regional Planning Council gave final approval at the last of a series of 13 public hearings. The meeting was held at the Altamonte-Hilton Hotel. The plan is scheduled to take effect July 1, unless the state's Joint Administrative Procedures concerned." Committee says it doesn't comply with state law. The document, which took the council's staff 22,000 hours and 20 months to prepare, is designed to manage future growth in a six-county area that includes Seminole, Orange, Osceola, Brevard, Lake and Volusia.

Streetman said County Commissioner Sandra Glenn played a leading role in formation of the plan, particularly in terms of local government input into the amendment process. The major concern was that the Regional Planning Council not posture reviewing service areas to ensure they are in deed efficient and don't duplicate. This is important now that there is a limited amount of resources. Public transportation and grant funds for utilities have dried up."

power from local governments, selicipiposed target date is to have the plan done by the end of the year. He doesn't anticipate tweston there was a lot of many changes in the city's mandatory language — a lot of plantas result of the one adopted by the regional council because for utilities have dried up." more permissive and encourag-ing language in the amended Streetman said "There will be an opportunity to ammend it. it's not set in concrete.

It's a vast document." he said. "It's a vast document," he said.
"It's going to take a little settling and regional councils review put to find out if there are glitches in the plan doing things people Marder said there is nothing the plan doing things people didn't anticipate and if there are. we would be recommending changes. I'm not aware of anything that would be a red flag as far as this county goes at this point in time."

'Basically, it's a good document as far as enviornment is concerned. At the end some proper language of guidance to local governments in environmental and other issues. but it is very strong in environmental areas as far as regional impact is

Ninety amendments passed Wednesday in effort to quiet objections from Orange County. The Regional Planning Council's authority was reduced and local governments given the right to determine design of roads and set other service levels.

Longwood City Planner Chris Nagle sald, "Just how much the regional plan will effect Longwood and other cities will depend on how it is implemented and interpreted. Our comp plan has to be consistent with the regional plan."

Nagle said although legally the deadline for submitting the There is no overview, no agency itself in such a way to take away city's plan is Dec. 31, 1989, his planners who are preparing its comp plan calls for it to be consistent with the regional plan. '

"We won't really know how it will be effected until the state unusual in the plan. "It doesn't propose anything extraordinary in my opinion." he said. "It is a compilation of logical steps, procedures and policies with much common sense. There will be people who disagree with me on that.

He said has has no doubt that in working with the regional policy plan there will be diferences between Sanford and the county in interpretations and definitions. "I wouldn't be surprised if there were differences over semantics," he said.

Marder thinks the plan will have an over all positive affect on development and will be as much of a challenge to local governments as it will be to private sector develpers, builders and contractors.

"It's going to have some effect on the way people do some things and they may not like it." he said, "but by and large most development is relatively well thought out. Economics are such that it requires developers to do something realistic. They can't just go out and do something completely illogical. There will be some gray areas."

Navy Orders Stark Captain Home Other Officers Relleved Of Duty

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Navy has ordered the captain of the missile-damaged USS Stark and two of his officers relieved of their duties immediately and to return home but stopped short of recommending immediate court-martial.

The order Friday from Adm. Caritale Trost, the chief of naval operations, was sent at the request of the head of the U.S. Central Command. Gen. George Crist, who is responsible for military operations in the Persian Gulf, the Navy said.

Troot's order to Capt. Glenn Brindel effectively spelled

Justice Officals Blasts Prosecutors

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Justice Department, in its second attack on the authority of independent counsels in a week, says Whitney North Seymour cannot compel the Canadian ambassador to testify at the perjury trial of ex-White House aide Michael Deaver.

The department, in an express attack against the authority of the special prosecutor, maintained Friday that diplomatic relations — including the question of immunity for Ambassador Allan Gotlieb - are best left to the executive branch, and Seymour's request to a federal court for a subpoena should be denied.

Deaver, whose trial on a five-count indictment has been delayed, twice claimed in lawsuits that Seymour is operating without constitutional authority, a view supported officially this week by the Justice Department.

Attorneys for Deaver said Friday he plans to ask the Supreme Court next week to consider the constitutional question, dismissed this week by a federal appeals court.

the 300-foot wide corridor of the proposed alignment: and pro-hibit my further business gruwth constituting more than 20 percent of a property's value.
For Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith this is, "the scarlest scenario."

Simmons said, "By reserving it the authority freezes economic progress within the area until that time when, or if, they decide to acquire it."

With the right-of-way received tion the expressway builders may reserve the property lying in the proposed path for up to ten years — without paying a cent to the property owners.

"For years that property will be in limbo," Simmons said, "no real expansion of the building or property and no guarantee that the authority will actually purchase it at the end of the reservation period. Even if they move to buy the property it will be another one or two years before design and construction can be completed."

Chairman of the authority's technical committee. Gerald Brinton, said he expects right-of-way reservation to take place as early as September if the authority chooses the recommended route.

'I'm optimistic." Brinton said. "I think they (the authority) will opt for going all the way to Interstate-4, and I think that the public will have some of their fears appeased with the addition of a noise buffer on either side of the expressway."

Brinton said the buffer will include trees, berms and an eight-foot wall. Brinton calls the buffer "noise mitigation" and said that a lot can be done for the $2 million sum proposed to be spent on it.

But, according to Simmons, a mail businessman whose busi- tion takes place."

The path of Erinton said he sees 1989 as near happens to lift in the path of the expression will be able to expand very little during reser-vation, and may be treated as a pariah by potential buyers of his property. So he must wait it out for five years, or ten, waiting for the expressway to give him his money so that he can move on.

But even after all that, the expressway powers may in the interim of those years decide not to put the expressway through that route after all.

But if acquisition is the end result, then it is done in two

 By purchase, where some negotiating takes place and an agreeable price for the property is derived. Or, if the property owners refuse to sell.

 By comdemnation, where property owners are forced to move, but are paid market price for their land.

Brinton said in hardship cases, such as a job transfer when the residents need to sell their home but cannot, the authority may consider purchasing the property outright, even though the acquisition period is still on the hortzon.

But the potentially disastrous economic effects that Simmons forsees is in the period between reservation and acquisition.

"At a time when Sanford is entering a period of rapid growth this 'freezing' could have staggering effects on the local economy." Simmons said.

To avoid this, Simmons has told the city manager and commissioners he would like to be assured of complete financial feasibility for the project to hasten the "limbo" period to one of acquisition.

"The shorter the time between reservation and acquisition, the less damage to Sanford," he said. "The financing really needs to be in place before the reserva-

Violence Continues As Students.

Monks Want Election Reforms SEOUL, (UPI) - Anti-government protests flared up in Seoul and elsewhere in the country for the 11th day today as students defied government threats of extraordinary measures to sud the disturbances.

Some 2,000 students and Buddhist monks kicked and beat police with umbrellas after authorities blocked the monks from conducting an anti-government rally. Police fought back for 10 minutes before breaking it up with tear

The protesters demand constitutional reforms to provide for direct election of the president. Opposition leaders contend next year's presidential election will be a farce because the current electoral college system is skewed to ensure election of the ruling party nominee.

President Chun Doo Hwan broke off debate with the opposition on election reform last April and ordered the election held under the present system.

Premier Lee Han-ky said Friday the government would be forced to make "an extraordinary decision" if it became impossible to restore law and order to the nation. He did not elaborate but violent protests continued throughout the

Bomb Blast in Spain Kills 15

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — A car bomb blast that killed 15 people and injured 38 in a department store was the first such attack aimed at civilians during the 18-year-old separatist campaign by Basque guerrillas, officials said.

Officials blamed the Basque guerrilla group ETA for the Friday blast that caused the worst toll ever in Spain from a single separatist attack.

Barcelona civil governor Ferran Cardenal said the afternoon attack was a "qualitative jump" in violence by the Basques since it was the first car bomb ever aimed at a civilian target.

ETA, a Basque-language acronym for Basque Homeland and Liberty, has aimed most of its attacks at military and security forces during its 18-year-old battle for an independent state in three northern Basque provinces. Of the 538 people killed by ETA since it took up arms in 1969, 230 have been civilians.

Pindling Returns To Power

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) - Voters shrugged off allegations of drug-related corruption to return Bahamas Prime Minister Lynden Pindling to power in the island nation he has led for 20 years, unofficial returns from parliamentary elections showed today.

Unofficial results broadcast over a government-owned radio station reported Pindling's Progressive Liberal Party had won at least 29 seats in the 49-member House of Assembly, giving him a clear majority. The elections concluded a five-week campaign during which the opposition charged the Pindling administration with leniency toward drug smugglers using the 700 islands lying off the southeast Florida coast as relay points for ts of cocaine and marijuana to the Unite The Parliamentary Registrar's Office was expected to announce the official results today.

World Buys $900 Billion In Arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The world spent a grand total of $900 billion on weapons in 1985, with the Soviet Union accounting for 31 percent and the United States 28 percent, a new government report says.

The superpowers also continue to be the leading arms exporters, with the Middle East the major arms buyer, said the annual survey report issued Friday by the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

From 1981-85, the Soviet Union exported $55.7 billion worth of weapons and the United States, $49.2 billion, the report said. The United States led the Soviet Union during two of those years, 1983 and 1985.

The superpowers were followed as arms exporters during the four-year period by France, $19.6 billion; Britain, $8.7 billion: West Germany, $7.6 billion: China, $5.4 billion: Italy, $4.9 billion; Poland, $3.9 billion, and Czechoslovakia.

Khomeini's Exile Home Wants To Forget Him

NAJAF, Iraq (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini slept here. And prayed, and walted.

There's no plaque on the wall to commemorate his stay. though. And residents say they would tear him to pieces with their bare hands if he ever came back.

For 14 years. Najaf, a dusty Islamic holy city, was the base from which the ederly Iranian exile slowly built a movement that overthrew the world's oldest monarchy.

Bitter memories are all Najaf has left for its once-honored guest, who during his years here nurtured an anonymous exile into worldwide fame and a fundamentalist revolution that brought down the U.S.-backed Shah Reza Pahlavi of Iran.

Today, his religious school is shuttered, his few followers ostracized, and refugees from Iranian artillery attacks on the southern port city of Basra live in his house.

"I remember that he was an old man, with a big grey beard. black turban, sometimes alone or with friends from Iran," said Sheikh Thamin el-Mayahi, a member of Najaf's religious committee. "He rarely spoke to any of us (fraqis). He was a loner - sad, unhappy and very gloomy.

"If I saw him here today, I would tear him to pieces with my bare hands and teeth. Everyone must kill him and throw his body in mud."

"I helped protect him here." said a local security officer who declined to give his name. "We escorted him when he walked around and also guarded his agents attempted to kill him.

"If I had known then what I know now, I would have taken out my pistol and shot him dead myself."

The source of this vehement hatred - publicly shared by all in Najaf who knew him - is the conviction that Khomeini betrayed Iraq, which gave him asylum from 1965 to 1978, four months before he returned in triumph to Tehran.

Najaf has for 14 centuries been the world's most respected center of Shilte Moslem teaching and a shrine visited by millions of Shlite pilgrims.

It was from Najaf, overlooking palm tree orchards on the edge of a desert that stretches to Syria and Jordan, that Khomeini laid the foundations for his revolution.

His brief stay in a Paris suburb before arriving in Tehran on Feb. 1, 1979, is better known than the 14 years in Najaf, 100 miles south of Baghdad, but it was Iraq that gave Khomeini the springboard to mobilize his Moslem forces.

The two biggest mistakes Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ever made, many who follow the Middle East say, were allowing Khomeini to leave alive and then starting a war with him.

"But how were we supposed to know he would turn out so bad?" protested el-Mayahl. "He came here out of the generosity of Iraq and our great President Saddam Hussein. But he was a devil and tricked everyone."

The religious leaders of Najaf also feel cheated, because Khomeini has built Iran's own holy city of Qom into what is house in case any of the shah's today considered the leading center for Shifte religious study.

the SCC Learn to Read Program the SCC Learn to Read Program Harriet Little, coordinator for and an instructor in basic adult education, said a special effort is being made to reach not only line like Blake, who are just short of a high school diplorate. but also those who lack the basic literacy skills expected of a third or fourth grader. Skills they must have to get and keep a good job, in most cases.

Promoters of literacy are not only reaching out to the illiterates, but are educating employers or potential employers to the special needs of this group, which. Little said. add up to one in five of all over the age of 25 nationwide. That is the purpose of the telecast, which there is no charge to view.

The show features Hugh Downs, host of ABC's 20-20, It is scheduled for broadcast to 1,000 sites across the nation. The purpose of the program is to bring together the leadership of existing literacy programs and civic groups with leaders from business, government and labor, who are concerned with reducing illiteracy among youths and adults, Little said.

The teleconference follows a similar one that addressed community college and public school involvement in wiping out illiteracy, which was shown last winter. A third in the series, on upgrading labor skills with an eye on the needs of the 21st Century, is to be scheduled for September.

Invitations to Tuesday's telecasts were sent to 3,000 area businesses and officials, but you don't have to have received an invitation to attend, Little said.

it's important for employers to realize that some of their that they lack the reading comprehension or math skills needed to advence in their jobs. Some job applicants, she said may turn away when asked to fill out a form, because they can't read and write.

Illiteracy is primariy a problem for some who were in the education system of 10 to 40 years ago. Little said, it's hoped that today special effort is being made within the school systems to ensure that these besic skills aren't neglected.

Most adults who can't read and write dropped out of school before reaching a literacy level expected of a fourth or fifth grader. Others have no literacy skille at all.

They depend on others to help them read. When confronted with reading material they might say they left their eyeglasses at home, or might ask to take the material home, where it would be read to them by a friend or relative.

Some have gained their job skills by taking materials home for their spouses to read to them as they memorized the material. Or when confronted with a work guide they might say they don't have time to read it, 'Just show me how to do it.' Little said.

"We would love to be put out of business." Little said. But for now SCC has a major task of offering adult education programs, beginning with basic skills and advancing into the GED program. The program is open to all over the age of 16. The program emphasis one-on-one instruction with over 100 volunteers participating as

The goal, she reid, to in a gradual progression to transform the illiterate into self-sufficient workers. In some cases, she said, that takes support within the workplace, as well as in the community and at hon.c.

The SCC program expands into the community. Little cites as an example, on-site training for Sanford city maintenance, parks and sanitation workers. where they can learn basic skills or work toward a diploma after work at a city facility.

Some employers, such as WalMart, also participate by paying for costs incurred by employess completing their GED studies. There are also other financial opportunities available for these students and Blake said she is in a program in which she is paid to study.

The board has since found itself trying to clarify action taken at the meeting, specifically in regards to compensation for the fired executive director. At issue is whether the board agreed to pay Rozon for the two and one-half years left on his three-year contract. The board president said it did not: Rozon's lawyer said it did.

At the close of the meeting. which lasted from 6 p.m. on a Thursday to 12:30 a.m. on a Friday, lawyer J. Cheney Mason announced to the press that the board had voted to continue paying Rozon's salary in twice-weekly installments over the next two and one-half years.

This week, however, board President Susan Morris said the board's intention was to continue paying Rozon until it could further explore its options. Mason strongly disputed Morris' claim, saying he was assured by the board's legal adviser. Leo Rock, that the board would meet the terms of Rozon's contract.

Rock could not be reached for comment Friday. However, board member John Smith said Rock informed him and several board members that he had told Mason emphatically the board was retaining the option of ceasing the payments at any

Patsy Nininger, board secretary at the time, wrote down the motion to include it in the minutes. She also was reported to have read the motion back to the board before the vote.

But Morris said the minutes have yet to be provided to the board by Nininger, a Rozon supporter who resigned in anger moments before the vote. Nininger has not been available for comment on how she believes Smith's motion was constructed.

Lawyers File Late Briefs Against New Service Tax

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Lawyers for seven groups have filed last-minute briefs with the Florida Supreme Court opposing the new consumer services tax, saying state officials have falled to prove the tax is constitutional.

The high court has set Monday for oral arguments on the new tax law, which extends the five percent state sales tax to a range of previously exempt services. The tax applies to legal fees, advertising, newspaper subscriptions, some banking services, construction and many other services beginning July 1.

Malpractice Rates May Increase

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Insurance Commissioner Bill Gunter says he will decide early next week whether to grant a 30 percent increase to the largest medical malpractice insurer in Florida, despite the objections of doctors who say they could not pay higher rates.

St. Paul's Fire and Marine Insurance Co. has requested a rate increase that would average 29.8 percent statewide. but would increase doctors' premiums in Dade and Broward Counties by 63 percent. St. Paul's spokesmen said the company would stop selling malpractice insurance in Florida on July 1 if that request is not granted. That would leave about 5,300 doctors without insurance.

Skyrocketing rates and a growing lack of malpractice availability have already forced many doctors to drop out of high-risk specialties and left many hospital emergency rooms short of staff.

Rock Songs Help Abuse Victims

TALLAHASSEE (UPi) - A Florida State University social worker who uses lyrics to rock songs to help treat child abuse victims says he is skeptical about claims that rock music is destroying America's young.

FSU Professor Nicholas Mazza sald Friday he uses song lyrics from current recording acts like Glass Tiger and Whitney Houston to help get abused children to talk about themselves.

Discussing the lyrics, Mazza said, is particularly effective in reaching adolescents dealing with intense emotions because adolescents feel the lyrics speak in their language.

Both courts involved in the petitions have considered North's constitutional attack on the 1978 Ethics in Government Act and challenge of the subpoena, which the appeals court last week sent back to U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson with orders to revolve the question.

Papers in the case have been scaled since May 8 when Robinson secretly found North in contempt for refusing on constitutional grounds to comply with a grand jury subpoena demanding a sample of his handwriting. Another secret proceeding was initiated April 23 and later dismissed by the appeals court.

Earlier this week, special prosecutor Waish told both courts that opening the proceedings -"matters of great public interest" - would not Impede his grand jury investigation, and both he and North could still keep secret whatever portions must remain under seal.

The public interest group and newspapers have asked both courts to release the transcripts of court proceedings, court orders, opinions, and other motions in the case not covered by the federal law requiring grand jury secrecy.

Goldman said her groups will appeal the motion to scal as soon as possible.

"We will be ready to file Monday in the court of appeals and in federal court Tuesday, if we're served the papers quick enough," she said. "The scaled papers on scaled papers is getting outrageous.'

Walsh also urged openness.

"Given the posture of this case and the proceedings to date in both the court of appeals and the district court," he said, "Independent counsel believes that nearly the entire record in the case can be made public without impeding the work of the grand jury or implicating the restrictions" on grand jury secrecy.

"Virtually all future proceedings also can be held in public," Walsh maintained.

Sanford's Mike Fall does not deny he suffers from xenophobia: fear or hatred of foreigners.

He really has nothing against foreign soccer players — as long as they remain just that — foreign players.

Fall, who said foreign players led to the demise of the North American Soccer League (NASL), is looking for the game of soccer in the United States to be dominated by home-grown players like himself.

"The game has to be Americanized," Fall, a successful professional indoor player, said. "We have to get the outdoor game going again and it's important we have a pro outdoor league made mostly of American players."

Fall is back in the Central Florida area to work at coach Larry McCorkle's Lake Mary High Soccer Camp. He just came back from a successful season in which he helped the Louisville Thunder capture the American Indoor Soccer Association championship. Fall hopes to continue his outdoor play as a member of the USA Pan-Am Games team and the USA Olympic team, two teams he says can generate a lot of interest in soccer in the United States.

'If the Olympic team does real well it

'if it wasn't for foreigners, there would still be an NASL and I would be playing in it.'

will get a lot of exposure and get a lot of people interested in soccer." Fall said. "It would also be good if we get a strong showing from our 16 and under and 19 and under teams playing this summer in the Junior World Cup."

Fall said he is doing about six weeks of youth summer camps this year because he feels it is important to give the younger players proper training in their early years.

"The caliber of youth soccer is really good compared to when I played." Fall said. "Now the kids have a much better advantage because they are starting younger and they have a lot of good coaching, particularly in this area."

Fall, who played his high school soccer at Orlando Bishop Moore, played in the NASL when it was in its lean years, just prior to when it folded.

For a while, with world-renowned players such as Pele, the NASL was a good drawing card but the foreign players turned out to be only a quick fix for the league and fan interest soon slacked off as foreigners shipped in and out through the league's revolving door.

"They should have had a rule about foreign players," Fall said of the NASL. "Most countries allow only two foreigners per team. The NASL started hiring foreign coaches who in turn brought in all foreign players. If it wasn't for foreigners, there would still be an NASL and I would be playing in it."

While professional outdoor soccer is

While professional outdoor soccer is practically non-existent in the United States, the indoor game is alive and well. The Major Indoor Soccer League (MISL) had a successful 1987 season in which its league playoff games were mostly sellouts.

Fail has a chance to joing the MISL next season as he has been offered a contract with the Los Angeles Lazers.

"The indoor leagues, especially the MISL, are pretty stable," Fall said. "Mostly because fans can identify with the players and there are a lot of Americans playing. In some cities, the MISL sells as well as the NBA."

* Fall said the outdoor game is also beginning to make a comeback through centralized leagues.

"California has its own pro league and it's practically all California players," Fall said. "And it's going over pretty well because the fans are all going out to see people they are familiar with. We need more of that because it's important that American soccer be played by Americans."

Mike Fall, a standout for the AISA Louisville Thunder, said professional soccer needs to become Americanized.

Watson, Wiebe Lead Open

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Ten years after their historic struggle in the 1977 British Open. Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson may be heading for a duel to decide the champion of the 87th. U.S. Open.

Watson grabbed a share of the second-round lead Friday with Mark Wiebe after shooting the best round of the tournament, a 5-under-par 65. The two stood at 3-under 137 through 36 holes over the Olympic Club course beside the Pacific Ocean.

Nicklaus was lurking a stroke behind after a second-round 68. Jim Thorpe, Tommy Nakajima, Bernhard Langer and John Cook were all even with Nicklaus with two-round totals of 138.

Ironically. Nicklaus and Watson played a practice round together Wednesday. Nicklaus joked the two veterans were playing so poorly they would not even survive the cut.

"I thought both of us would play somewhere Saturday, but it wasn't here." Nicklaus, a fourtime Open winner, said. "I thought I was playing terribly and I thought he was playing worse."

Watson, 37, mired in a three-year winless drought, posted six birdies with just one bogey. He sank a 50-foot putt at the third hole for a birdie and rolled in a 30-foot birdie putt at No. 9.

"I felt more confident out there today that I have in a long time," Watson, who won the Open in 1982, said. "Winning this tournament would mean I'm back."

Nicklaus, 47, started with a birdie then followed with 10 successive pars. He birdied No. 12, bogeyed the 14th and posted a birdie at No. 16. Nicklaus is confident he can win an unprecedented 21st major championship.

"I have to believe that I can win," Nicklaus said. "If I don't believe that, then I have no business even being out here and playing."

At Turnberry in Scotland in 1977, Watson and Nicklaus battled neck-and-neck over the final 36 holes. Watson fired 65s over the final two rounds to edge his rival by a stroke. To add to the drama, the two played the last two rounds together.

Four years later, at the Masters, Watson held off Nicklaus again in a thrilling finish, and at the 1982 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Watson holed a miraculous chip shot on No. 17 to beat Nicklaus.

Wiebe, a local favorite who attended nearby San Jose State, fired a 3-under 67 to pull even with Watson. Wiebe holed out a 140-yard wedge shot for an eagle-2 on the 12th hole.

"I didn't even stop to think about what I was shocting today until I signed my card and said. 'All right," said Wiebe, No. 50 on the 1987 money list.

The Olympic layout played easier Friday than in the first round. Occasional drizzle softened the greens and fairways while there was almost no wind. A record 24 players broke partying an Open record set two years ago. Just seven golfers managed to finish below par-70 on Thursday.

First-round leader Ben Crenshaw shot a second-round 72 and was at 139 with Scott Simpson, Bob Eastwood and Masters champion Larry Mize. Another stroke back were Craig Stadler, Russ Cochran, Lennie Clements, Mac O'Grady, Masashi Ozaki and Ed Dougherty.

Seve Ballesteros and defending Open champion Raymond Floyd faltered after first-round 68s. Ballesteros ballooned to a 75 and Floyd had a 73.

Four former Open winners — Watson, Nicklaus, Floyd and David Graham — were among the record 77 players who survived the cut, which was at 147.

Seven former Open winners missed the cut — Lee Trevino, Larry Nelson, Hubert Green, Johnny Miller, Fuzzy Zoeller, Hale Irwin and Andy North. Paul Azinger, the No. 1 money winner on the PGA Tour this year, also failed to make the cut.

Tick... Tick... Tick... Mosure Drops Bomb

Tick, tick, tick.

Dave Mosure walks slowly toward the principal's office. Tick, tick, tick.

Dave Mosure raps gently on Wayne Epps' window.

Tick, tick, tick.

Dave Mosure makes his wathrough the door.

BOOM, BOOM,

"That one hurt," Epps said about his popular head coach's decision to accept the defensive coordinator's position at Miami Killian High. "I really liked Dave and he did a real good job. I was as shocked as everybody else when he dropped the bomb."

Epps' feelings were univeral.

Mosure, through as exhausting work ethic, had gained the respect of all during his six years in Sanford. For four years as defensive coordinator, his defenders went after ball carriers like raw meat. They were hungry enough to devour a conference and district championship in 1981.

Mosure was an automatic choice for the head chief when Jerry Posey stepped down from a sagging program three years ago. Mosure's first season was 4-6, nothing to bring around the bowl scouts, but he was installing his system, weeding out the bad apples.

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)

— Ivan Lendl must curse the day
he won Wimbledon. The junior title, that is. No boy's champion for the past 15 years has graduated to winning the men's title and the current World No. 1 is no exception.

Lendl's ambition to lift the men's singles crown has yet to be realized and all he has to show for his preparations for this year's championship starting Monday are a dose of flu and being bumped from the No. 1 seeding by two-time champion Boris Becker.

Lendl won the Wimbledon boy's singles in 1978. He was then almost a year older than was Becker when the West German skipped the junior event and took the senior Championship for the first time in 1985.

But if Lendl — who lost in last year's final to Becker — ever gets his hands on Wimbledon's famous silver cup, he can take heart from the fact that the last junior champion to win the senior title was Bjorn Borg. Four years after his 1972 junior triumph, Borg began his series of five consecutive senior titles, and a place in the record books of the sort that Lendl craves.

Lendl has won both the U.S. and French Open titles for the past two years. But it is Wimbledon he needs to win to satisfy his own desire to be known as one of the all-time, all-round great tennis players.

"I want to win Wimbledon and to do that I would gladly forfeit my French title and throw in last year's as well," Lendl said recently.

After taking the French title for the third time June 7, the 27-year-old Czechoslovak has had a miserable time. His agents entered him in a grass court tournament in Edinburgh to prepare for Wimbledon, but other players pulled out and Lendl's only full match all week was against his own coach, Tony Roche.

Lendl struggled in his only game on grass since the Australian Open five months ago. Rain curtailed and then ended the tournament. Lendl ended up in bed in Scotland with flu.

On the face of it, there could hardly have been a greater contrast with Becker's preparations for a crack at a third successive Wimbledon title. The through the Queen's Club tournament — despite London's traditionally persistent June rain — and beat Jimmy Connors in the final. But Becker's normally deadly service was broken five times by Connors, and the West German admitted, "of course I have to play better" if he is to win Wimbledon again. Becker is scheduled to open the Championships Monday against Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

The three other seeds in Becker's quarter of the Wimbledon draw are players he beat at Queen's — Americans David Pate (15th). Tim Mayotte (10th) and Connors (7th), and his first tough match should be in the fourth round where he is likely to meet either Pate or Yugoslav Slobodan Zivojinovic, who took Lendl to five sets in last year's semifinals.

Becker is odds-on favorite to win the title again, with second seed Lendl next, and Pat Cash, Stefan Edberg and Henri Leconte the best-tipped outsiders, according to London bookmakers. The last time they got it badly wrong was when the unseeded Becker came from

Pagliarulo Blast Lifts Yanks In 13th

United Press International When Joe Sambito failed to 'put the pitch on the dime' Friday night, Mike Pagliarulo put it into the right-field seats at Fenway Park

Pagliarulo led off the 13th inning with a home run to ignite a five-run rally that carried the New York Yankees to a 10-5 triumph over the Boston Red Pagliarulo sent Sambito's 1-0 delivery into the first row of the right-field seats to put the Yankees up 6-5.

"I felt strong and I didn't think I was being a hero going into my fourth inning," Sambito said. "I must have thrown that pitch a million times to leftles and I got them out. You can't put a pitch on the dime every time."

Pagliarulo, who belted his ninth homer of the season, was only the fourth left-handed batter to homer off Sambito, 1-2, and the first since Bill Buckner on Sept. 1, 1978.

"It's real nice to do it in front of my family and friends," said Pagliarulo, who hails from Medford, a Boston suburb. "I knew it would end sometime. That's what makes this game so crazy.

New York's 18 hits were a season high for the team.

Hard-Luck Dodgers Lose In 11 Innings

United Press International Orel Hershiser and his Dodger teammates produced a familiar scenario Friday night: Hershiser pitched well and the Dodgers failed to score enough runs.

Kevin Bass scored Bill Doran with a sacrifice fly in the 11th inning to give the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over Los Angeles.

Hershiser 7-7, allowed seven hits over 10-plus innings, strikcareer-high 14. ing out a which also equaled the National League high this season. Dave Meads, 5-1, pitched the 11th inning for the victory.

In the seven games Hershiser has lost this season, the Dodgers have provided him with a total of 18 runs, an average of 2.6 runs a

"He pitched awesome." Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda said. "An outstanding game. It was just a crime we had to lose. We had a lot more scoring opportunities than they did, but we just couldn't capitalize on them."

Doran opened the 11th with a single to center off Hershiser. Craig Reynolds followed with a single to left, moving Doran to third. Ken Howell relieved and struck out Glenn Davis before Matt Young came on to face Bass, who lifted his runproducing fly to right.

Governor Met With SMU Boosters, Talked Payments

DALLAS (UPI) - Within weeks of a 1985 promise to NCAA officials Southern Methodist was cleaning up its football program, Texas Gov. Bill Clements was meeting with boosters to map out continued payments to players, according to a report compiled by four United Methodist Clements knew as early as 1983 SMU players were being paid to play and, when the university's president objected. he told him "not to be so self-righteous." according to the 48-page report released Friday.

SMU eventually would suffer the stiffest penalty ever handed a college football program because of the improper payments. The NCAA in February banned the Mustangs from fielding a team in 1987, and university officials later canceled the 1988 season.

The four bishops had been studying the case since early March, shortly after Clements disclosed he approved continued payments to players after SMU went on NCAA probation in 1985.

The bishops said, within a month of Clements' meeting with the NCAA Infractions Committee in April 1985, when he said SMU "will not tolerate any misbehavior whatsoever in the future," he met with renegade boosters Sherwood Blount, George Owen and William Stevens to discuss "winding down" payments to players already at SMU.
In August 1985, Clements went against the wishes of SMU president L. Donald Shields and university Trustee Edwin L. Cox and ordered athletic director Bob Hitch to continue the payments — less than three months after SMU went on NCAA probation.

"Clements asked him (Hitch) whether the payments could be continued, and when Hitch responded that they could, Hitch recalled Clements telling him specifically and unambiguously, 'then do it,'" according to the report.

Clements and Shields also clashed over paying players on Nov. 11, 1983, the day Clements began a three-year term as chairman of SMU's board of governors.

Shields complained about the payments and was told by Clements "to calm down and not be so self-righteous," the report said. Clements told Shields "to stay out of it" and "go run the university." it added.

Kelly: No Basketball At Tulane

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) - Tulane President Eamon Kelly. who abolished men's basketball at the school two years ago because of a point-shaving scandal, says college athletics are still too scandal-ridden to resume the game.

The university Board of Administrators voted unanimously Thursday to recommend reinstatement of the men's basketball program, leaving the decision of when to "The board suggested that basketball would improve the quality of life at Tulane." Kelly said. "I do not feel the conditions are appropriate at the present."

He said the problems that led to disbanding of the Metro Conference team in 1985 still exist in college athletics. "When I discontinued basketball, I indicated I would like to see a change in the national environment before I reinstated basketball," Kelly said. "I need to see an environment where academics and financial integrity are the primary characteristics of inter-collegiate athletics.

Draft's True Impact: 1990

NEW YORK (UPI) - Marty Blake, who runs the NBA's scouting combine, says it will be 1990 before he'll be able to assess the 1987 draft.

Among other things, that is when this year's top prospect, David Robinson of Navy, is scheduled to enter the league.

But Blake isn't referring to the Navy center specifically when offering his assessment of the 150 or so players who will be selected in the 1987 draft scheduled for June 22 in New York. Two to three years is the amount of time he says it takes to judge any given pool of basketball

"Everybody's got what I call the 'Instant Gratification Syndrome' - we want a guy to come in and be an instant hero," says Blake.

Robinson, the pride of the Navy and the prize of the San Antonio Spura in this year's lottery jackpot, is such a player. But he has a two-year commitment with the military before he can seek gainful employment in the NBA.

Barring a major trade, San Antonio will be selling Robinson on the virtues of Texas and tacos after naming him the No. 1 pick overall. However, his status with the Spurs after his two-year hitch will have to be settled by a judge or an arbitrator.

The Spurs maintain that a little-used provision in the league's bylaws predates the collective bargaining agreement (which ended after the season and presently is the object of negotiations between the owners and players) and allows a team to retain the rights to a player serving a military commitment until his duty is over.

The union claims Robinson should be treated like all other players and enter the draft again in 1968 if he is not signed by the Spurs. In either case, if he remains unsigned, he would become a free agent after two

Look at it this way, if David Robinson is out of the league for the next two years, our guy at No. 2 is conceivably going to be the most talked about rookie in the league."

That player is most likely to be 6-foot-5 Dennis Hopson of Ohio State. The Suns have been beset by a drug scandal which re-turned Walter Davis to a drug rehabilitation center for a second time. Hopeon averaged 29 points a game and could provide some offense spark for the Suns.

The Los Angeles Clippers, the worst team in the league last year, have the fourth, 13th and 19th picks in the first round. Last year they didn't pick until the third round. Also picking twice in the first round will be the Spurs (23rd). Seattle (fifth and ninth) and Chicago (eighth and tenth).

One exception is the New York Knicks who traded the rights to their lottery pick to Seattle for guard Gerald Henderson. The other exception also involves New York which traded Darrell Walker to Denver for its No. 1 pick (eighth overall) and then swapped that to Chicago for Jawann Oldham.

Pony Baseball Tabs Pinto Stars

By Mike Dame

Opecial to the Herald

WINTER SPRINGS — What has already been an exciting season for the 7- and 8-year-olds of the Seminole Pony Baseball Pinto Division concludes next week when the all-stars of the National and American Leagues meet for a best-of-three series.

Sixteen lucky players were named to the roster of each team. For manager Ken King's American squad the following were picked: Jimmy Parsons, Brian Stensrud. Scott Dearaff, Jason Bernosky. Jason Gaines, Danny Pursell, Matt Robinson, Allan Gehr, Jimmy Rabun, Jason Kirst, Michael Evans, Mike Halaychick, Mario Delflacco, Shawn St. Dennis, Brad Fess and Aaron Black.

The Salvagio's and Dan's dominated National team, managed by Bill Corrente, includes: Joey Knipp, Angelo Amato, Billy Appeling, Barry Sommer, Kenny Birch, Andy Neufeld, Michael Breendelli, Dustin Owen, Kenny Kramer, Brian Clark, Jeremy Parker, Adam Sewell and Mathew Wright. Miller, Chris Louwsna, Christian Sanders, Kenny

1. The two teams got serious on Thursday night as they held practice at muddy Five Points 'Complex. Both teams appeared up for next week's challenge, which is to win the best-of-three series between the two teams beginning Monday night at 7:30 at Five Points.

The National squad would seem to have an edge, for both teams that played in the championship game—champion Dan's Restaurant and Salvagio's Boys—are National League teams. American League manager King did say, "They should have the edge, but we're gonna be

King's team has been marked as a squad of sluggers, led by home-run hitting Deiflacco, Black and St. Dennis, who each hit over ten homers this

The National team, on the other hand, is noted for its fine defensive play from such players as shortstop "Peanut" Neufeld and first baseman Birch, both from Salvagio's.

"Our defense is gonna shut them down," National assistant coach Don Owen said. "The only way they're gonna beat us is if all of them hit homers."

"They do have a very effective defense," King said of the National squad, "but I feel that based upon the season in which most of the games were fairly high-scoring, this should be a high-scoring series. "I would be surprised if the tearn that wins does so with less than 12-15 runs."

The National League does have a powerhouse of its own, however, in the bat of Dan's Owen. Owen smacked nine homers on the season and led his team to the championship with three homers in two games against Salvagio's.

Five returning all stars will aid King's American League team in their quest for victory: Parsons, Gehr, Black, St. Dennis and Delflacco.

"I'm very pleased with our picks," King said. "If both teams are hot, it could be an exciting series to watch."

Florida-Georgia Battle Saturday

By Scott Sender

Berald Sports Writer

ORLANDO — In most football All-Star games, the athletes give their best efforts, but won't be heartbroken if their team loses.

But Saturday night's Third Annual Florida-Georgia High School football All-Star game has a unique twist to it: both teams want to win, badly, "We have had a great time down here." Georgia coach Ray Lamb, who has coughed Commercee High School to three state championahips in his 20 career, said. "But we are all here for one reason, and that's to win."

Florida has had the best of Georgia in the first two games as Florida has won both previous two games as Florida has won both previous encounters. "We know that they will be ready for us." Florida coach Carl Madison, who has coached since 1956 and is currently the coach of Pensacola Pine Forest, said. "We are smaller than we have been in the past couple of years, and they are bigger. I still that we have an excellent chance to win the football game, though."

The game will be played at Orlando Stadium.

There are plenty of tickets still available. Reserved seats are $10, while general admission tickets are $7.50. The game benefits the Florida Elks Children's Hospitals and kickoff is scheduled for 8.

Each team will be composed of the 35 top players in each respective state. "This is really the cream of the crop in this game." Madison. who has been an assistant coach in the two other games, said. "These kids are all super athletes, and we're just looking forward to going out there and seeing what they can do."

Florida underwent several player changes in the past week as nine players that were originally scheduled to play in the game were forced to drop out. "We have been trying people at positions that they don't normally play." Madison chuckled. "We had a lot of kids drop out for one reason or another, and it really disrupted our practice schedule. Hopefully, we can overcome the obstacles that we have had."

One player that was forced to drop out due to a death in the family was Pensacola's Emmitt Smith. Smith, who will attend the University of Florida next year, was ranked as one of the top high school football player in the country.

"Losing Emmitt Smith certainly doesn't help our cause." Madison said. "We do have a good group of kids, though."

Madison said that the key to the game will be the play of his offensive tackles: Jacksonville Ribault's Reggie Dixon and Lantana Santaluces' Joe Ostazewski. "Our entire offensive approach depends on our tackles." Madison said. "Their desensive tackles are bigger, so Reggie and Joe are going to have their hands full."

The Florida team has 13 players on it that will be attending the University of Florida this fall. One of those players is Auburndale quarterback Billy Deeds. Deeds is coming off a slendid senior year as he was voted as a Bally All-American and first team All-State selection. "It's good to playing with guys that are going to be Gators this fall." Deeds said. "I got to know all of the guys that will be going to Gainesville this fall, and I'm glad I got the opportunity to meet them. You read about them all year, and it was nice to able to sit around and talk with them."

One of Deeds' teammates, wide-receiver Terrance Barber, is considered to be a prime threat according to Lamb. "Terrance Barber is probably one of the better receivers that I have seen, and we're probably going to have to double cover him in this game," Lamb said of Barber, who will be joining Deeds at Florida this fall. "This kid is as fast as a deer."

John Starkey and end Ardine Daniels returning, the defense would be even better than '86. Yes, 1987 would be the "Year of the Seminole."

The Seminole Athletic Conference coaches, to a man, agreed. All six picked the 'Noles as the team to beat.

Mosure seemed to have success at his feet, yet, he walked away. Walked away from two years of blood, sweat and tears with his boys. Walked away when he was about to enjoy the rewards of those three tortures. "It's crazy." Mosure admitted.

Crazy is putting it mildly.

Here was a man who was too good to lose. A man who made men of boys. Hard work and Dave Mosure went hand-andhand at Seminole. There really was no off-season for a Seminole football player. He demanded dedication and received it. He preached sacrifice and it was given. Quarterback Blake's injury last season supplied the disappointment.

Blood, sweat and tears were a way of life.

How could a man who has worked so hard to rebuild a decaying program leave when victory was ripening on the vine? It was a question that must be answered. Maybe not administration, but one that needs to be explained to Mosure's players.

, Many were devastated by his abrupt departure. Due to the timing of the resignation - after the students had gone home for the summer — Mosure did not get to meet with the team. This was unfortunate. When something of this nature occurs, the team should always be the first to know.

The seniors, especially, were hurt by Mosure's decision, and they wanted to know why. They were at an impressionable age. They had lived the Mosure Principle for three years now, and one can understand why they felt the rug had been pulled from under them.

"He kept telling us all the rumors about him leaving were not true," Lewis, the leader of the defense, said. "I don't think it was fair to the team that he left. I feel if he was going to resign he should have let us know in advance.

"A lot of players, a couple days after, didn't even know."

Lewis said the hurt may last a long time. "A lot of guys are going to take it the wrong way that he was leaving," he con-tinued. "Maybe if he would have sat down and explained it to us. it would have been all right. This isn't going to hurt our season, we got to turn it around."

Lewis, a sensitive young man, was, of course, speaking while emotionally distraught. He had just lost the best coach he ever had and was devastated. He was not in a mood to think of what was best for Mosure, only what was best for the Seminole football team.

Which was Dave Mosure. Later, he softened. "I wanted to talk to him myself," Lewis said. "I know there must be a good reason for what he is doing, but I just don't understand it. I have too much respect for him to lose it just like that. "But after he built the base for this good team. I don't see how he could leave it. That's the shock of everything. He told all the rumors about him leaving were just made up.

"Coach Mosure has for the community and the everybody's respect and he still will have it, because we know there has to be an explana-

> Mosure returned to Sanford early last week and met with some of his players. He tried to explain his move.

The 38-year-old Memphis State graduate has visions of coaching at the college level. He was a graduate assistant at the University of Miami previously and still has strong ties to the Hurricanes. Strong enough to be mentioned as a candidate for the team's position as strength coach.

Mosure, however, did not want that position at this juncture. He did, though, want to return to Miami where he starred at Palmetto High as a prep.

Simply, Miami is home.

Mosure coached South Miami to three district titles before coming to Seminole in 1982. He said, even back then, he yearned to coach at Killian.

"I used to stop there after practice and talk with the coaching staff." Mosure said about Killian. "We had a lot of things in common. I told myself then if I ever had a chance to coach there, I wanted to do so.

"Sometimes the opportunity only knocks once. That's why I had to take it. even though it was very tough to leave these kids. They are a great group of klds, but I wanted to go back to Miami."

There were other reasons. Seminole County football will never rival Dade and Broward county football. Miami and the Panhandle area are the hotbeds for prep football. Seminole County does not — and probably never will — give its coaches the freedom which those areas do.

Mosure wants to coach in the big time. The big time is not Seminole County. This is no reflection on the players or the coaching staff. He has to do what makes him happy - even if it hurts others.

There is no resentment on my part," Straub said. "He's got to do what he feels is best for him. I can't believe that he would leave us before this year. but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he built the pro-

"I'll still play for him. for what he has built. I went over to his house the other night. He said his biggest regret was that he couldn't get together with the whole team.

"It's up to us to go on. It's a big blow, but we have to keep together and not let this bring us down. He was like a father to a lot of us. We spent more time with him than our families." Mosure said the feeling is mutual.

'No doubt my heart will be with them when they open up with Titusville," Mosure said. "They'll be playing for a different coach, but I hope there will be a place for me in their hearts."

No doubt.

Sukova Downs Evert On Grass

EASTBOURNE, England (UPI) - Chris Evert's grasscourt preparations suffered a setback Friday when she was beaten by Helena Sukova, her potential quarterfinal opponent at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

The Czechoslovakian fought back to defeat Evert 4-6, 6-4, 8-6 in a marathon match lasting 2 1/2 hours' to earn a place in the final of the $200,000 women's tournament at Devonshire Park. Her opponent in the showdown should emerge early Saturday in the completion of the the semifinal between defending champion Martina Navratilova and her doubles partner Pam Shriver. The final should take place later Saturday.

nowhere to win two years ago. Cash, the No. 11 seed who is the favorite with Wimbledon's teeny-bopper female fans, defeated Lendl in the Australian Open semifinals in January. only to lose in the final to Edberg. He was also soundly beaten by Connors at Queen's.

Despite his grass court prowess in Australia, fourth-seeded Edberg has never got beyond the fourth round at Wimbledon. Nor has his third-seeded compatriot Mats Wilander, losing finalist in the French Open and in a segment of the Wimbledon draw that includes at least five other Swedes.

Wimbledon without John McEnroe, for the second successive year, will be like strawberries without cream sour cream, for many. But Connors should step into the breach left by the temperamental McEnroe's absence, officially through a back injury.

Champion in 1974 and 1982, Connors has not won a tournament for more than two years. But in the past 12 years, he has failed only once to reach the Wimbledon quarterfinals, and the 34-year-old "Grinder" should be able to clown, graft and grunt his way at least that far again.

Connors is seeded seventh. Apart from promoting Becker above Lendl, the Wimbledon organizers have stuck to overall ranking lists in determining seedings - which means that Spaniard Emilio Sanchez is seeded 16th, even though he has never won a match on the grass of the hallowed All-England

Club. Like Lendl, Martina Navratilova is determined to win Wimbledon this year. Before she gives way to Steffi Graf. Navratilova wants badly not just to extend her consecutive Wimbledon titles to a record six this year, but also to overhaul the all-time record of eight women's singles titles - an achievement Navratilova will equal if she wins again this time.

"Helen Wills Moody's name is on that plate eight times. I want the record nine," Navratilova said. "I know it's greedy but, if anyone can do it, I can."

Navratilova opens her campaign against one 18-year-old West German, Claudia Porwick, and on July 4 is seeded to meet the other — Graf — in the final.

Graf herself sees Navratllova as the natural favorite, even though the American has not won a tournament this year whereas Graf goes into Wimbledon with a 39-match unbeaten streak, stretching back to when she lost to Navratilova in New York last November.

"I think Navratilova will be more eager now," she said. "In some ways she was happy about the (French Open) final. She was disappointed about the way she lost, but she knew she was playing well."

Since defeating Navratilova two weeks ago to become the French Open's youngest chain-18th birthday. She skipped the pre-Wimbledon tournament at Eastbourne to concentrate on practicing at the All-England Club itself.

Even with the poor weather I have been able to pratice every injury.

day," she said. "This year I am better than ever on grass.'

Graf missed last year's Wimbledon through a virus illness, and in 1984 and 1985 she was eliminated before the quarterfinals.

She will need a few easy matches in the early rounds, and admitted "the draw looks good." In the first round, Graf plays Argentina's Adriana Villagran, then meets either Tine Scheuer-Larsen of Denmark or Holland's Nicole Jagerman. None should present a problem.

Graf's title bld should really be tested in the quarterfinals. where she is seeded to meet arch-rival and doubles partner Gabriela Sabatini, and the semifinals, where she should come up against fourth seed Hana Mandlikova, beaten finalist last

Navratilova, meanwhile, has to get used to the idea that she and Chris Evert are going to meet in the semifinals instead of the finals of tournaments since Graf usurped the position of World No. 2.

She also has to win to make sure of remaining World No. 1 as Graf closes in on the top spot. The fact that she has not been defeated in 34 matches at Wimbledon since losing in the 1981 semifinals to Manlikova bodes well for Navratilova.

Apart from McEnroe, only Sweden's Kent Carlsson and Argentine Martin Jaite among the world's top 16 men will be plon. Graf has celebrated her absent from Wimbledon. Claycourt specialists, they do not want to embarrass themselves too much.

Among the women, World No. 7 Zina Garrison and No. 14 Kathy Rinaldi are out because of

Lake Mary Authorizes Initial Steps To Study Crystal Lake

By Genie Lindberg Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary Commissioners ducked into city hall Thursday during a rain shower and dove into a meeting full of water

Among those issues were Crysial Lake pollution problems. water line hook-ups for some residents whose homes have not been connected to the city's water system, a call for citizens to voluntarily cut back on water use and a $600 donation to the city's youth baseball teams for water usage.

Concerning Crystal Lake, City Manager Bob Norris asked for guidance from the commission as to whether he should allocate funds in the upcoming budget for testing the polluted lake. The city had applied for a beach permit at Crystal Lake sometime before Norris had arrived in January, he said, and that the permit was denied to the city based on the testing of the lake.

"To assess the problems in and around the Lake is going to take some money," Norris said. He added that the end result would probably be to test everything including water tables. levels and even how the lake shifts.

City Attorney Frank Kruppenbacher said that sometimes the University of Florida assigns students environmental studies and perhaps something of that nature could be done for Crystal Lake.

Commissioner Paul Tremel said "It's ludicrous to sit here and call ourselves 'The City of Lakes' without doing something to restore Crystal Lake."

The commission eventually agreed to authorize Norris to advertise for bids for a study of Crystal Lake. He is to report back to the commission at their next meeting on July 2.

Discussion concerning about 170 citizens whose homes have not been hooked-up to the city's water system was initiated by Kruppenbacher who said he wanted to see the commission take action on "a very important matter" because city policy calls for those citizens to be connected to the water system.

Commissioner Charlie Webster said that those homes not hooked up to the city's system have wells, some that were hand dug as far back as 1927 and many of those citizens were not in a position to pay the fee outright.

Kruppenbacher said he has consulted with a representative of the Bond Council in Tallahassee on the Issue. He said the Bond Council representative spoke with the Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) that financed the bonds for the construction of the city's water plant. FmHA said it only requires that the city can demonstrate it has sufficient projected revenue to insure the debt and that the manner in which the city went about collecting the hook-up fees from the citizens did not matter to them. Mayor Dick Fess sald the city was financially solvent and could assume the FmHA security.

Fess recommended that citizens could hook-up to the existing water system at a rate that would have to be determined by the commission after Kruppen-

the Bond Council, Kruppenbacher and Norris were asked by the commission to contact the Bond Council in order to take steps toward implementing a pricing structure for those 170 people who would have to connect to the city's system. New developments have no option but to hook up to the city's water system which is according to city policy, he said.

Norris said that for a new subdivision which already has water lines installed and has a tap in the line for each house in the subdivision that was done by the developer, the city charges a tap fee of $23 per house, with an additional fee of $88 for meter include hardware costs such as installation plus an impact fee of

The existing cost, if the city does the tap work on older lines. is much higher, Norris said, and added that a time-schedule for payment is what the commission is considering for those homes that would need to be hooked up. Those citizens, as it is now, would require the city to do the work which would cost $181 for the tap fee plus a meter installation charge of $88 plus the $842.84 impact fee. The commission is to review the options that Norris will present at its July 2 meeting and to act on the final disposition of the issue, Norris said.

Fess, in his mayoral report. called for citizens to voluntarily reduce their amount of lawnsprinkling to conserve water during the dry weather months in an effort he said would conserve water and minimize the impact of surface wells and the city's nguifer. He also asked that staff look into the possibility of selling "water-reduction kits" to be used in shower heads to restrict water use. He said the kits had been sold by the city several years ago.

The money had been budgeted for last year to help team members purchase grass and sod to be used in an area at the city's water plant where the teams practice. However, Fess said, through the teams' resourcefulness of having sod. grass and labor donated, they did not use the money. The teams also received and installed sprinkler heads to preserve and maintain the grass, Fess said. "I recommend the $600 be donated to the teams for water usage." The commission agreed.

Outstanding Dad

'My Dad Is A Christian Man. He Taught Me Faith, Love, Patience'

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Sanford Artist Ashby Jones said it was "The biggest surprise of my life," to be nominated and named the Sanford Herald's "Outstanding Dad."

Jones, 65, said it brought tears to his eyes to read the winning letter his 43-year-old daughter wrote and which was selected as tops by a panel of Herald ludges.

Readers were asked to submit letters of nomination for their favorite "Outstanding Dads."

Jones said his daughter's letter brought back memories of little things he had forgotten about — like the time they were fishing in Crystal Lake and his then 9-year-old daughter caught a tiny bream. As she was bringing the bream ashore it was swallowed by a nine-pound bass that her dad had to help her land.

In nominating her father as outstanding Leslie Jones Vanlandingham, of Memphis, Tenn., wrote:

"I believe that until you have a child of your own, you don't truly appreciate your parents.

"Early recollections of my dad are of watching him building and fixing things around the house. He was our very own "handy man" and I had no doubt that he could build anything or fix anything in the world. He would let me 'help' him by letting me hammer nalls into pieces of scrap wood.

"I liked to watch my dad. He always did such interesting things — like digging wells, or inadvertently starting fires in the woods behind our house while trying to burn trash, or making a milkshake at the drugstore where he worked part-time, or feeding the chickens he was raising in the back yard, or jumping in a lake to save a fish I had hooked but couldn't bring in.

"Many times when my mother was out, we would prepare a special dish that he had me convinced was 'sweet air.' Making this dish was a special time, because it involved only the two of us and we could make the 'air' however we wanted and as much as we wanted — and we could cat as much as we wanted. Years later I learned 'air' was only beaten egg whites, sugar and chopped apples, but I thought he and God had a special arrangement so Daddy could cook and sweeten 'air' to cat. This was some of that 'quality time' that we are so familiar with in today's busy lifestyles.

"I don't live close to my dad anymore, but I know he's always there when I need him. My dad is a Christian man. He taught me faith, love, patience. Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is out, he will not depart non it. Only now, that I have a child of my own, do I totally understand the true meaning of that verse.

"Submitted lovingly by his daughter."
Leslie and her brother Glenn, 36, of Daytona Beach, grew up in Sanford where their father met and married their mother, Clayda, 45 years ago. The Joneses met and married in the First United Methodist Church in downtown Sanford. And the church, where they are both in the choir and where Jones teaches Sunday School and is on the board, has always played an important part in their lives, Jones said.

"My mother was my influence," In religious matters. Jones said. "My father worked seven days a week to a professional by Drag Sanford) and went to church. But I give my mother credit for the Christian influence."

But his father's pharmacy career has also influenced Jones, who as a boy began working as a "soda Jerk" at McReynolds Drug Store in Sanford, where for about 40 years "they had the best chocolate milk shake in the world," he said. Those milk shakes, Jones said, are part of the memories of Sanfordites who are over the age of 30.

Through the 1930s and '40s Jones worked at McReynolds', and since his recent retirement after 24 years as administrative assistant for the Seminole County clerk for the county commission. Jones has gone back to part-time duty at Steve's Pharmacy in Sanford.

"I believe I attended more county commission meetings than any other human being in Seminole County. No one has been commissioner 24 years. There was enough excitement to keep it interesting. Many times people got so mad about things." Jones said.

An accomplished landscape artist who has studied with three area teachers including Sanford's E.B. Stowe, Jones said he hopes that oil painting will be his avocation in his senior years. He had a two-week school scheduled in North Carolina to "go out and paint mountains." Le's also set to show his work in late October along with 265 artists in Greenville, S.C.

Jones said he is a member of Toastmasters and also spends time gardening, golfing and playing with his grandchildren. His grandchildren are his son's sons, Ashby III, 9, and Patrick, 5, and Leslie's 3-year-old daughter, Joy.

Jones, who was a machinist by trade and who knows a lot about mechanics, said he's alway been pretty handy around the house, except for the time his daughter recalled in her letter, when he was building a chicken coop and let a trash fire get out of hand. "I burned up the woods half way to Orlando back in the '50s, but there was no damage done. If there was I never heard about it," Jones said.

"Sweetened air" isn't his only specialty when it comes to cooking. Mrs. Jones said her husband is famous for his biscuits and pancakes.

Since his retirement, she said, he's so busy she needs an appointment to see him. But she wouldn't be too shy to make one, after all she asked him out on their first date on a Seminole High School Sadie Hawkins Day, when the girls got a chance to make the first move. "It was Sadie Hawkins Day, so I had no choice," Jones said.

His greatest accomplishment, he said, was "picking the right wife."

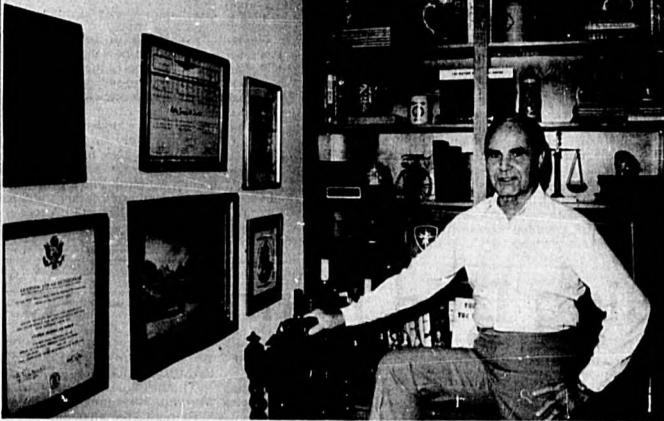

They reared their children in "basically the way we were both brought up." Jones said. "We didn't spare the rod, but we didn't do a lot of spanking. What a difference a generation makes! You have a different outlook when you're grandparents. I guess that's why parents get the job of raising children. We're very indulgent.

"I'm very happy with my children. We had some problems, but came through with flying colors. Looking back, it could have been a lot

Mary McWhorter Albright of Lake Mary, wrote the letter that won her father, James Luther McWhorter, 2302 Lucretia Court, runner-up in The Herald's annual Outstanding Dad competition.

Mary's letter is as follows:

"After the death of my mother, when I was nearly eight years old and my three sisters ranged from ages 9 to 13, my father, James L. McWhorter, retired from his career as an Air Force pilot and moved to Sanford in order to raise his daughters in the area where he grew up. For the next five years, after which he remarried and acquired still another daughter, he unselfishly devoted himself to his family with an abundance of love, patience and hard work.

"The typical weekday began well before dawn with my father washing and hanging on the line to dry, clothing which had amassed from the previous day. Then he would fix a hot breakfast of either Cream of Wheat or Oatmeal, along with toast, butter and beverage, set the table, and awaken the four of us in order to eat and prepare for school.

"After taking us to school or to the bus, he would begin his "work day" as a real estate agent and later, a broker.

"Evenings and weekends were just as hectic ... dinner and school lunches to prepare, classes and studying for a real estate broker's license, lawn to mow, homework to explain, church, Sunday School and meetings to attend. Yet my lather always managed to have the time to take us on picnics, play croquet, go for boat rides and water skiing, or pretend to try and step on our toes, while chasing us around the house.

'Everyone Loves My Grandpa'

Jill Buddenhagen of Lake Mary nominated her grandfather in The Herald's annual Outstanding Dad competition. Her letter, which won runner-up honors, is as follows:

"These days it's not too often that we find an Individual who devotes his whole life to helping others. This is why I find my grandfather. Lester Buddenhagen, so special. I've been living with my grandfather since I was two years old, and for 18 years he has given his all to see that I've gotten only the best things out of this world.

"Although he retired from his plumbing and heating business 15 years ago, due to a heart attack, he hasn't stopped working. It's just that now he's 73 and doesn't take money for his services. His pay is in the joy of helping others. He works at Manna Haven in Sanford six days a week for most of the day. Here, he helps cook breakfast and dinner for the needy and hungry people in our community. He also does a lot of work at Pinecrest Baptist Church, which he attends regularly.

"Perhpas the most amazing thing about my grandfather is his ability to keep on going. For instance, about two months ago, he went in the hospital for a triple bypass operation. Everyone thought that he would finally slow down but, to our surprise, he was all healed up and back to his regular routine within a couple of weeks.

"My grandfather is definitely an outstanding dad.

Parenting Matters

More Men Seek Family Life

Changes in social behavior and family styles are causing difficulties for fathers in defining and fulfilling their roles. In past years, masculine and feminine behaviors were well-defined, and the roles of mothers and fathers were more clearly designated. Parents are undergoing a tremendous shift as more mothers are entering the work force. The upshot is that men are increasingly choosing a more meaningful role in nurturing their children.

Strong cultural blases exist against men actively participating in parenting. If a man has been reared to regard holding, cuddling, soothing or being tender as nonmasculine; and if traditional masculinity is important to his self-image, he's less apt to be an effective father. With few role models, fathers may be uneasy in making and responding to children's expressions of love and warmth. Nevertheless, a reflection of a larger phenomenon of the 1980's is that men are seeking to enjoy more home and family life.

An increasing number of studies regarding the effect of paternal involvement on the development of children have been conducted. The research indicates that children whose fathers were actively involved with them during their early years enter school with higher IQs and greater chances for success in school. The children have better relationships with peers, a broader sense of humor, and a stronger self-concept.

Research demonstrates that fathers show different and predictable kinds of behavior while playing with their children. They touch and poke more; they speak and react in stimulating ways that produce heightened reactions. As early as one month, an infant's shoulders and eyebrows rise in an expression of expectant joy when father's voice is heard. A child with an actively involved father is indeed fortunate.

The emphasis on a father's participation in prenatal classes, delivery rooms and parenting seminars help fathers to develop a more involved relationship with their children and home. The logical point for men to get involved in parenting is in the beginning. The days when men had little more to do with the birth of their children than to pace in the waiting room and hand out clgars to stranges are no longer acceptable. Men become fathers on the same day that women become mothers, and emotional support for them is equally important.

The father's vital role in the child-rearing process is beginning to be valued more than ever. Parents, regardless of their sex, are not born with an inner knowledge of how to parent. The father who allows himself to be excluded in the parenting role will feel resentful and left out. Conversely, a father who participates actively in parenting will grow with his children. Few life experiences are more maturing and satisfying than guiding a developing child into a productive and happy adult. Motivated fathers will feel a family responsibility that will protect the endangered family in our society today.

passed away, and six weeks later my much-loved dog died. When were sorry to hear about my mother's death, it would remind me of my dog, and I have replied, "Thank you, but my wonderful dog also died, and I miss him very much." I would see their eyebrows rise, then silence. But the truth of the matter is, I really loved my dog

My husband tells me not to mention our dog at these times. "People will not understand," he says. "They probably will think that you are strange."

Abby, why should I not say exactly how I feel? People who know me well are aware that I am a fairly straightforward person. And I don't care what the others think.

In order to spare my husband embarrassment, what do you think I should say? My dog was 14 years old, and his death left a great emptiness in my life. My mother was sick and elderly, and her passing was a relief. I hope you will say that I have a right to my honest feelings.

STRAIGHTFORWARD

DEAR STRAIGHT: Everyone has a right to his "honest feelings," but when someone expresses sympathy on the death of your mother (as sick and elderly as she may have been), for you to bring up the death of your "wonderful" dog, and how much you miss him, is demeaning to the memory of your mother.

with me? I am very much attracted to men who smoke cigars. It doesn't matter how old the man is, or whether he's good-looking or not; if he has the aroma of a cigar on him, I just can't resist wanting to get close

I'm 28 years old and considered attractive. Ever since I was a little girl I have loved the smell of cigars. My father never even smoked eigarettes, but my grandfather smoked cigars constantly, so that's probably what turned me on to loving them. I can barely remember my grandfather. He died when I was 8

Now I'm going to tell you something you won't believe. Unless there is eigar smoke around, I can't get excited about the man. I had a boyfriend who smoked eigars just to please me. but eigars made him sick and that ended our romance.

Now I think I should try to overcome this eigar mania. Would hypnosis help? Or should I see a psychiatrist? With so Come Sunday, the world will pay homage to a very special fellow. He is the husband-the father-the breadwinner and the sturdy foundation of our community. We pause to do him honor. He may be gruff, and stern, and tanned of face, but he is Dad. Just get an x-ray of his heart if you really want to see something rare.

What strange, but wonderful people these fathers are. They are the world's easiest victims of love's attack. Just pour on a little attention, seasoned with about two parts of tenderness and give in very small doses ...since he could never stand a big dose. Then just sit back and watch his big heart warm up. It will respond in true father fashion.

Way Of The Cross Leads Back To Sanford

By Jane Casselberry Herald Religion Editor

The way of the cross leads home for ordained Baptist minister John Butler, 37, who began his cross-carrying crusade along Sanford's lakefront seven years ago. He'll be back in town to speak at a revival at the Lighthouse Church on E. Ninth Street. Sanford from June 28 to July 1.

Since starting his roadside ministry he has been to more than 30 states and has traveled over 12,000 miles. The 12 by 7 feet wooden cross he carries weighs 85 pounds and bears the message "Jesus Loves You." He wears out a cross a year and travels in a donated van in between cities. He parks it in shopping centers while he walks streets and highways in that area handing out tracts and witnessing to the curious.

The hardest part of his nondenominational Cross Crusade is the mocking, rejection and ridicule he sometimes receives. He's even had stones thrown at him. been shot at and threatened with Nathan. 3. is undergoing knives. He has also been criticized by some religious leaders Orlando Regional Medical who don't understand what he is trying to do.

One pastor demanded, "Why don't you get a job?" Butler invited him to join him a day's problems," Butler said.

walk. "This is the hardest work I've done in my life." he explained. "walking 10 to 12 miles a day in the sun, carrying a cross. The difference is there is no pay check at the end of the week.

"I've tried to give it up and go back to a normal view of religious order preaching from a pulpit, but there was no peace in my heart. Butler said."

"I'm not conning anybody. 1 don't ask for donations. I live entirely by faith." he said. "The manipulating, conning and begging by some greedy TV preachers is is not of the Lord. It's man's way of building his own kingdom."

His wife. Susan went with him on his treks for three years. before the birth of their three children, made it necessary to establish a home base. Now Butler says he stays gone a month at a time then comes back to Orlando to be with his family for awhile before heading out again.

He said his youngest son. treatment for leukemia at the Center's cancer center and his disease is now in remission. "Just because you're a Christian doesn't mean you are immune to

AIDS Is Testing Human Compassion

Forecasters say our living habits and styles are going to be drastically affected by the AIDS epidemic. Fewer will eat in restaurants as people worry about who is preparing their food. The thin look will go out of fashion. Thinness will be associated in the public mind with the AIDS look.

AIDS will be in the way people treat one another.

Not since some desperate men built bomb shelters 30 years ago and armed themselves with shotguns to ward off neighbors who might try to share their refuge from a nuclear attack have we seen such cruel evidence of how people can turn on their own kind in a time of danger.

Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, whose landmark work with the dying and the terminally ill has won her the gratitude of suffering multitudes, talks bitterly about her efforts to establish a hospice for abandoned children with AIDS.

She started on the project three years ago on the Virginia-West Virginia border. "It has been three years of frustration and impotent rage," she says.

One ambulance driver who called himself a reborn Christian told Mrs. Kubler-Ross that, If there were an ambulance call for one of the young AIDS sufferers.

he would not respond. "Another man who claimed to be a born-again Christian said if I set up the hospice and one of these children were to try to go to school, the doors would be locked," she says.

It seems unlikely that heart-

But where we will notice the less attitudes toward children biggest change as a result of are related to the moral repugnance many people feel toward older AIDS victims. More likely that fear is responsible. When people are fearful, they often react in inhumane ways.

The churches have yet to address this problem. Are there limits to how far Christians are required to go in showing compassion for suffering human beings? Does a threat to our safety and well-being relieve us of our responsibility to be kind? If it is true that "they need love most who deserve it least," can we withhold the hand of brotherhood from those whose conduct we do not approve?

The Irish poet Oscar Wilde tells a touching story of friendship in his autobiographical "De Profundis." In 1895. Wilde was sentenced to two years at hard labor for immoral behavior involving another man. The world that had applauded him turned away in disgust. His friends left him to his fate. All but one.

As Wilde later told the story. "As I was brought down from my prison to the court, he waited in the long dreary corridor so that before the whole crowd he might gravely raise his hat to me as, handcuffed and with bowed head. I passed him by. Men have gone to heaven for smaller things than that ...

may think it dangerous to come in with just an ace and a queen over East's two-heart bid. Since the takeout double promises spades, one should view the South hand as though it were supporting an opening bid of one spade. South's bld says: "I think i can make this contract.

Period. North bid game, since he had extra values, and East's heart raise suggested that South would have no more than a doubleton heart. But the contract was not easy to make against proper defense. South played low from dummy on the opening heart lead. East won the queen and returned the suit to dummy's ace. Declarer now played a club to his ace and a spade up to dummy. West declarer can ruff a heart and lead again toward dummy's spade queen. But it should be equally apparent to West that his partner has the jack. It will be child's play for him to play a fourth heart so that East will make a trick with the spade jack. Declarer solved the problem. Instead of returning to his hand to lead up to dummy again, he led a low spade from dummy. guessing correctly that West had started with only the A-3 of spades. Was this absolutely the right play? No one can say for sure. Declarer must base his judgment on the perceptions inc receives at the table. It's certainly true that West might have been dealt A-J-3 of spades, and some other play would work. But not this time.

Making Music For Vets Live, Exciting, Dynamic

Making music videos is a fix-it-in-the-mix process that leaves plenty of room for trial

Presenting a superstar line-up live on stage of RFK Stadium in Washington and before a nationwide cable audience making it work as both music and television - is another kind of challenge.

It is, as producer Ken Erlich says, "sort of like the Rose Parade ... without streets." Erlich, HBO's helmsman for the "Welcome Home" concert for Vietnam veterans July 4th, is no stranger to live (or, in this case, tape-delay) TV. A long-time teammate on the Grammy Awards show, Erlich has been putting 15 live acts into three hours of airtime for nine years So, he's not intimidated by this Fourth of July bill of Linda Ronstadt, James Brown, John Fogerty, the Four Tops, Kris Kristofferson, Anita Baker and Crosby, Stills & Nash - plus a cable TV audience of millions.

In fact, says Erlich, it's the very possibility of something unexpected happening that makes these mega-shows exciting music and exciting televi-"Performance is what makes these shows work — not camera tricks or angles or editing magic," says Erlich. "We want the show to be professional, to run smoothly, but we don't want to take the passion and the spontanelty out of it. "I wish more television was like this. One of the reasons there's no exciting variety programs on TV anymore is that people got too good at it. It got too slick." Although he has a crew of nine cameras and a massive support system that includes nationwide stereo simulcast and an 800number phone link for fund raising. Erlich knows that the ingredient making an event like this truly special is something you can neither engineer nor

buy. It's called magic.

the stage, and then we stay out of the way," Erlich says, "We watch the feedback from the audience to the performers, and the energy is positively synergistic. It's live, it's exciting. it's dynamic. "An event like this - like Live-Aid, like the Anmesty International concert — has such a community spirit among the performers, a feeling that these guys are all getting together to do something good. If we can keep that spirit present and let television stay secondary, then

"We do our homework, we set don't work: there's no script, no rehearsal. We don't have a song list. But it does work. And when It works, it's...magic.' It seems appropriate somehow that an individual who doesn't do things by the numbers and who prefers passion to predictability should help welcome the Vietnam vets home (late, but heartfelt.) mundane. Flipping 'round the TV dial... (BU) Europe - "Rock The Night" It's easy to see why this pop metal band has become such an immediate commercial success. The music is a carbon copy of the Scorpions — with all the muscle and menace removed. The video is early Ratt. The song's hook is a note-fornote rip-off of David Essex' 1973 hit, "Rock On." And the lead singer is a dead ringer for Heather Locklear. The only thing remotely original about this band is...is.... There's nothing remotely original about this band. Rating: Mundane. (BU) Tom Petty & the Heartbreakers — "Jammin' Me" The videoclip recaptures the exhuberance of the Cars' hit 'You Might Think" with its delight in the sheer mechanical wizardry of the medium itself. The succession of images and their inventive juxtaposition make up for any lack in the song itself - and there are many. Worth seeing even with the sound turned off. Rating: Very, Very Good. There's too much performers up there and let sexual violence (enough to get them do something," is his ideal - the clip banned in Britain), but it's an integral part of this frightening look at life in the dead-end lane. The song is a work of contract- fulfillment: the videoclip is a work of art. Rating:

The drippy ballad — a surprising and undeserved chart-topper - is an insult to rock 'n' roll; the video is an insult to women everywhere. Consign the record to the waste bin and confine the video to the porno house. Rating: Horrid. (BU) Fleetwood Mac - "Big Love" The Big Mac is back, and back on top. What have the years wrought? Well, Stevie Nicks hasn't changed a bit unfortunately. John McVie looks like her father. And Lindsey Buckingham, with his frozen

Over-Time Pay Cut

Budget Dictates Deputies' Patrols

Herald Staff Writer

A Seminole County sheriff's deputy assigned to patrol duty said patrol deputies are not getting over-time pay, but are being given time off instead.

The deputy said that the patrol division, which has an allocation of 55 officers to cover ten zones, is shorthanded and when deputies are given time off in lieu of overtime pay that puts a greater burden on those on duty and brings poor service to the community.

The deputy alleges that because on some shifts there are only eight or nine deputies on duty those on the job don't have adequate time to cover calls and sometimes it is 30 minutes before a deputy responds to an emergency call.

"There are no calls that have a 30-minute response time," Seminole County Sheriff John Polk said. "We would bring in a supervisor. No call takes 30 minutes to respond to, not even barking dog calls. I've received no reports what-so-ever of a back up of 30 minutes."

The Seminole County Commission has given approval for the addition of nine patrol deputies to the sheriff's staff in the coming fiscal year. That, Polk sald, was a top priority in his budget.

Polk said it is also within his legal right to allocate "comp-time," time off, instead of payment of over-time at the rate of time and one-half. Comp-time is accrued at the same rate of time and one-half.

Last year was the first year that the Seminole County Sheriff's Department paid any over-time. In requesting funds to cover over-time, Polk used a Florida Sheriff's Association guideline formula, which was too high, estimating a needed four hours of overtime per week per worker.

That brought a return to the county commission of unused funds. but Polk said, his allocation for have been $30,000 in the hole over-time payment for this year is about to run out, so he is cutting back on over-time pay.

"I've been told there's some grumbling. We get a certain amount to cover over-time and a certain percent goes to each division. If we kept going like we're going we would over-all and the patrol division would have been $70,000 in the hole," indicating that some monles allocated to other divisions would have gone to the patrol division.

"I put out the order to cut out the overtime a couple of weeks ago. We're going to run out of money," Polk said. "We had a budget of $415,162 for over-time and have spent $271,438. It's going to run out."

Polk's budget director, Betty Simco, said that she allocated $15,000 per each two week pay period for the complete department. Over-time payments vary from month to month, with it being perhaps $10,000 for one pay period followed by a pay period with a $20,000 payment in over-time.

Polk said his staffers are making a big mistake if and when they start counting on overtime when they are setting their family budgets.

"You can't count on over-time," he said.

Polk said the increase in comptime has caused him to be unable to guarantee that eight of the 10 zones will be covered each shift. "That called for a lot of overtime, because of sickness or vacations. We dropped back to seven zones for June, July, August and September."

Polk said he hasn't received any increase in calls from citizens about a lack of patrol or slow response time to calls.

Big drains on over-time funds this year have included expanded needs of the new, larger jail, more call-outs for the SWAT team, and involvement in about four searches for a missing Lake Mary girl, Polk said. He said a recent change in patrol policy, moving that division to a central location in Longwood, from Sanford, and allowing all deputies to drive a patrol car home, was intended to cut overtime. The deputies no longer have to come into the office to surrender their car to another deputy and supervisors are picking up reports in the field, so unless they have evidence to turn in, patrol deputies can go straight home after the officer from the next shift enters his or her zone, Polk said.

In another effort to curb over-time, Polk is considering consolidating his patrolmen into four squads. On any given day two squads would have the duty for 12 hours each. Cur-

Boost U.S. Might With Defense Tax

WASHINGTON - The anti-jobs coalition in Congress is in full swing. Not content to deny jobs to unskilled workers through sharp increases in the minimum wage, it now seeks to increase sharply the penalty imposed on firms for hiring

As is belitting an organization with an agenda as bold as this one, it has already set up a Political Action Committee to raise funds and to generate support. The organization, Coalition Against Growth in Employment, is headquartered here.

CAGE's director, Albert Finloft, is a cheerful and endlessly optimistic man. I asked him about the philosophy of his organization.

"Our underlying philosophy is based on four fundamental truths," he explained.

"First, we need lots and lots of new social programs. Second, we don't have the money to pay for them. Third, we don't want to raise the money through higher taxes. The fourth follows from the first three: business should pay for everything.

"The real breakthrough came with the introduction of Social Security," he said. "There was a recognition that we needed a program to give people retirement income, and we paid for it by putting a tax on payrolls. In a way, the minimum wage is an extension of that; we just force employees to pay more when they hire unskilled workers. The crucial thing, though, is to make employers pay."

I asked Mr. Finloft if this didn't create something of a disincentive for firms to hire

"Oh, we never worry about little side effects here at CAGE," he replied. "The program's the thing, not the little financial consequences.

Mr. Finloft went on to explain CAGE's next big push.

"Senator Kennedy has introduced a bill to require employers to pay for health insurance for their employees. It's a classic example of our philosophy: we think it's important that everyone have health insurance, we don't want to pay for it, and so we're going to make firms pay for it when they hire workers." 💹 💮

I was going to object that this measure, once again, would discourage employment at a time we clearly need to increase it, but I figured it wouldn't do much good. I asked instead what CAGE had in mind for the future.

"We have really big plans." Mr. Finloft said excitedly. "While in the past we were pretty much limited to the idea of taxing the employment of workers to pay for domestic social programs, we see no reason to stop there ... '

Could he mean?

"Yep. We think the way to pay for defense programs, for example, is for employers to pay a payroll defense tax. We figure the government is providing defense for employees; there's no reason their employers shouldn't pay for it.

"On a more general note, we figure a new payroll tax for deficit-reduction is in order. We've got to eliminate the deficit, and we see no reason employers shouldn't pay for that, too. In fact, when you think about it, everything the government does benefits employees in some fashion or another, and that benefits the employers of employees, and so...'

I told Mr. Finleft that, whatever the merit of a particular program, the consequences of financing it were worth considering. When programs are financed by forcing businesses to pay more the more people they hire, it seems pretty logical to predict that not as many people will be hired.

Taxing an activity discourages it. Surely, I suggested, there are better things to discourage than giving people jobs.

"I do wish you'd stop carrying on about all these little side effects," Mr. Finloft sighed. "We want to focus on the positives. Have I told you about our idea to finance the space program...

Science Update

Eyeprints, A New Way To Confirm Identity

By Elisabeth Malkin UPI Writer

MIAMI - Suspects booked into the Dade County Jail answer the required questions, press their inked fingers on paper and then look, one eye at a time, into a small box mounted on the wall.

The equipment in that box offers the fastest and most reliable method of positive identification developed yet: an electronic picture of the blood vessels at the back of the eye.

Because each retina boasts a unique pattern, which is first recorded with an infrared scan and then stored in a computer, the procedure is virtually foolproof.

"You can't fool Mother Nature." said John Harvey, a consultant for EveDentify Inc., the Beaverton, Ore., company that developed and markets the technology. Harvey specializes in developing the computer programs for use in Jails.

Two of the boxes, called EyeDentification System 7.5 and known informally as EyeDentifiers. are installed at the jail. The Dade County Corrections Department eventually hopes to place 38 throughout the jall at an estimated cost of $440,000, sald Capt. Kevin Hickey, the department's deputy director.

The corrections department at Dade County, larger than systems in 26 states, is the first and biggest to use the technology. EyeDentiflers are also in place in Brevard County, and Lavoylles Parish, La. The system is being tested at Leiber Correctional Institution in Ridgeville.

Inmates are curlous about the equipment, tucked in beside the telephones, said Officer Leon Lewis. who is responsible for taking the readings.

"They want to try. Even guys tha. have been here before, they want to try," Lewis said. "It's more like a space age thing to them: modern technology, here we go again."

The EyeDentify technology, which was installed permanently at the beginning of the year following a nine-month pilot program, is already used to make sure the right prisoner is released from the jail, into which between 110,000 and 115,000 people are booked a year.

"I'd spend $440,000 on that alone." Hickey said.

About once or twice a year, the wrong inmate goes free, Hickey sald. "Sitting in the holding cells, one guy buys another off," he said. Prisoners being released from the jall are only asked a series of questions, such as their social security number and mother's maiden name. Fingerprint identification can take four hours or more in areas where files extend into the hundreds of thousands, so it is not used. In many cases, an expert's visual confirmation is needed.

The Evedentifler also spots habitual offenders in under one minute, regardless of the name they give. About 65 percent of the people booked into the jall are arrested after their release, Hickey said.

When all the EyeDentiflers are in place, they will be able to track prisoners as they move from one area of the 25-year-old jail to Scientists have known since 1935 that the pattern of blood vessels at the back of each eye is unique. But it took Robert "Buzz" Hill, an electronics engineer, and his father. Dr. Robert Hill, an opthalmologist, about eight years, starting in 1975. to combine various optical and electronics techniques that record and store the pattern.

An infrared scan passes over a small circular area at the back of the eye, determining the location and distribution of the deeper blood vessels in the retina. About 30 to 40 of the larger blood vessels, measuring from 100 microns (one-millionth of a meter) to 250 microns, are identified through readings at 320

As darker colors, in this case the blood vessels, absorb light and brighter colors reflect it, the amount of light returned from the retina gives the pattern.

Light detector photo cells in the EyeDentifier respond proportionately to the intensity of the light that comes back and it is transformed into an electric current. That current is then converted into digital impulses so it can be stored in the computer.

Looking into the EyeDentifler, the viewer lines up a series of yellow dots that appear suspended in space. Enrolling does not hurt and bloodshot eyes make no difference in the recorded pattern.

There is no danger to the eye. Harvey said, comparing the amount of light exposure to opening the refrigerator to get a can of beer.

The computer gives an accuracy reading, foiling any attempts to avoid enrollment.

Once recorded in the system, a person simply looks into the lens and the computer compares the retinal pattern with a stored template.

The EyeDentify system is used by firms to control access to restricted areas and to monitor employee attendance. It is in place, for example, at Sandia Labs in Albuquerque, N.M. and in the mailroom at the Arkansas Democrat in Little Rock, said Gretchen Buder, administrator of sales for EyeDentify.

"Suste can't punch Tom in when he's late," she said.

Quirks TV In The Himalayas

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) - Television is about to reach into the remote sections of the Himalayan kingdom.

Government officials said Monday that Nepal plans to establish a national television network with the help of Japan, which will send a team of experts this month to do a feasibility study to expand the current network.

Ravindra Rana, an engineer for Nepal's state television, said the cost to broadcast to remote areas of the kingdom was high, but the government has given the project top prior-

Muddy Feet And The GOP

The presidential nomination is not all that is at stake on the Republican campaign trail these days amid the lengthening shadows of the Reagan era.

The soul of the party also is up for grabs. Whether the GOP sails further to the right or tacks back toward the center of the American political spectrum will be determined largely by the choice of Mr. Reagan's heir.

Centrist candidates such as George Bush. Robert Dole and Pierre S. du Pont could be expected to temper the more-conservative aspects of President Reagan's economic and social policies. On the other hand, Jack Kemp. Paul Laxalt and the Rev. Pat Robertson would accelerate the rightward tilt begun in 1980.

This ideological split ought to produce a healthy debate on policy choices, but for now is highlighting divisions within the ranks that had been muted for the last seven years. "Bush bashing" has become a favorite pastime of those who hope to overtake the front-runner.

The most visible among these are some in the Kemp campaign who challenge the traditional Republican agenda with 'populist" ideas aimed at wooing blue-collar voters, blacks and other traditional Democrats. Referring to Vice President Bush's mainstream backers, Kemp's press secretary asserts: "They don't like these muddy feet on the freshly cut greens of the old Republican country club."

Despite the unremitting scandal of the Iran-Contra affair, the Republican contenders appear eager, for the most part, to claim Reagan's imprimatur. That could change swiftly, however, if new evidence implicates the president in the illegal transfer of profits from Iranian weapon sales to the Contras.

Bush, the logical inheritor of the Reagan mantle, has been so reluctant to disagree with the president in public that it is difficult to distinguish the two men's views on the issues. The vice president is in the uncomfortable position of not wanting to appear disloyal to Reagan while also needing to articulate a separate identity. The last incumbent vice president to perform this balancing act successfully was Martin Van Buren in 1836. Still, it is time for George Bush to speak more for himself and less for the Reagan White House.

Laxait, who is not encumbered by the vice president's institutional ties to the Oval Office, can be expected nonetheless to capitalize on his close personal relationship with Reagan. The Reagan-Laxalt friendship undermines Bush's claim to the Reagan legacy. It also hurts Kemp's efforts to consolidate the support of ultraconservatives. But many observers believe Laxalt lacks the political fire in the belly needed to see the nominating battle through to the finish.

Of all the Republican rivals, only Dole has moved to distance himself clearly from current White House policies. He has criticized the president's policies in the Persian Gulf and the emerging superpower agreement to reduce nuclear arsenals. It's anyone's guess whether this strategy will appeal to Republican voters during the months ahead.

In the twilight of Reagan's presidency, the future of the Republican Party is no longer his to mold. Instead, the fate of the GOP now passes to the next generation of leaders, beginning with the new helmsman who will emerge from the primaries of 1988.

U.S. Has No Sense Of Shame

Whatever happened to the notion that a public official or military officer who fouls up badly should either resign, be fired or, in some cases, tried and punished? It seems the Reagan administration has no sense of shame to produce either a resignation or a firing — to say nothing of an indictment or a prison sentence.

It's true that Oliver North was forced to resign because of the still-unbelievable deals he arranged with Iran's terrorist government and terrorist mercenaries in Nicaragua.

But President Reagan described him after these revelations as "a national hero." The President has not changed that judgment in light of revelations that North was promised financial payoffs by fellow conspirators that may have included a large bequest in the will of Albert Hakim — Gen. Richard Secord's business

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams. who lied to Congress over illegal operations in Nicaragua, refuses to resign despite demands that he do so from key members of Congress both Republicans and Democrats - who insist his credibility is gone.

Secretary of State George Shultz has described his deceitful assistant secretary. Mr. Abrams, as so valuable that he is considered sensational."

If dishonorable reprobates like North and Abrams are praised by their bosses even after their skulduggery is exposed, how can we expect to maintain public respect for high public officials? Is it any wonder there is growing cynicism toward an administration that expresses no moral or political indignation toward North and Abrams and their pals Hakim and Secord?

The same lack of indignation has been demonstrated toward lapses of responsibility on the part of military officers. In 1982, when 241 Marines died at the Beirut airport from a single terrorist bomb, not one military officer resigned or was fired or court-martialed in this shocking breakdown of command responsibility.

To be sure, the young terrorist who drove the bomb-carrying truck into the barracks was a culprit. But so were officials and commanders who knew that the same technique had been used to blow up the American embassy a few weeks earlier, but did nothing to provide effective security against such an attack.

Who is going to resign or be fired for not taking elementary precautions against the attack against the U.S. naval vessel Stark. which cost the lives of 37 young U.S. seamen? Those men died because of a senseless air attack by an Iraqi pilot, but they also died because their commanding officer failed to order proper precautions and defensive actions.

President Carter took the blame for it. but I have always suspected that the military botched the Iranian hostage rescue operation. Maybe the mission was ill-advised and doomed from the start, but it was also handled with ineptitude by military personnel who either didn't know what they were doing or how to do it.

When Argentine forces moved against the Falkland Islands several years ago and caught the British off guard, British Foreign Minister David Carrington promptly took the blame and resigned. Carrington is a man I have admired for years and still do. He took the blame for an embarrassment that was not clearly his fault, but he did it courageously and without alibi,

The Facts Of Welfare

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (NEA) Here's a portrait of a typical welfare recipient: a black, poorly educated woman with a large brood of children who has little interest in work and has been on the public dole for much of her adult life.

Although that stereotype is widely embraced, it is not the reality in Massachusetts - or in most states where welfare programs and their beneficiaries long have been widely misunderstood.

Comprehending the realities of the welfare system is now especially important because the nation is polsed to undertake a major overhaul of its low-income assistance programs.

Useful in making that transition is a Massachusetts Department of Public Welfare statistical analysis of the recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, by far the largest of the country's federal-state welfare programs.

Nationally, AFDC provides almost $18 billion per year in cash benefits to 11 million people in 3.8 million families, most of them headed by

This is a statistical portrait of those AFDC families in Massachusetts:

 Almost two-thirds (64 percent) are white, while 18 percent are black and 17 percent are Hispanic. (The state's population is 4 percent black and 2.5 percent Hispanic, so both groups are substantially over-represented among welfare clients - but they hardly domi-

 Exactly half (50 percent) graduated from high school, while 16 percent attended college and 3 percent received a college degree. (This is a lower educational level than that of the general public, but welfare recipients are better educated than many believe.)

• About three-fourths (76 percent) of the families have one or two children — a figure almost identical to the statewide statistic.

 More than half (55 percent) the families on the welfare rolls remain there for less than a year, while only 14 percent are public charges for six years or more.

One important reason for those relatively short stays: Welfare assistance isn't very appealing. After paying for food, clothing. utilities and rent. a family of three has less than $2 per day for all other

WILLIAM RUSHER

Learn From Thatcher

Neil Kinnock won the campaign, but Maggie Thatcher won the election. That is the remarkable upshot of the recent British elections.

All the polls before June 11 servative Party comfortably ahead of both the Labour Party and the two-headed Alliance (the name given to the centrist coalition of David Steel's Liberals and David Owen's Social Democrats). But the press adjudged a television program produced for Labour Infinitely superior to anything put out by the Conservatives or the Alliance, and a small uptick in Labour's showing in the late polls was credited to it.

On Election Day, however, Britain's voters proved unimpressed. True enough, when the smoke blew away, Labour had improved on its 1983 showing by about 3 percent, to 30.8. But it was the Alliance that suffered, being down correspondingly by around 2.5 percent to 22.8. The Conservatives actually bettered their 1983 performance slightly, to 42.3 percent in the three-way contest. Most astonishing of all, their margin in the new House of Commons will be upwards of 100 - down from 1983's historic high. but nonetheless quite remarkable for an administration already in office for eight years.

What explains this amazing showing? To hear Mrs. Thatcher's critics, it's just plain selfishness on the part of better-off voters. According to Francis X. Clines of the New York Times, "even some supporters" of the prime minister are worried about "the rise of a supposedly selfish, acquisitive class, of the new elite of finance capitalism who have helped bolster the Thatcherite recovery. ... The criticism is that these latest victors in Britain's endless class warfare exhibit little sense of social obligation."

But the truth is that Margaret

Thatcher has taught an impressive chunk of the British electorate that Labour's tearful pleas for more "compassion" (for the needy, the unemployed, the elderly, the ill) showed Mrs. Thatcher's Con- result in policies that are actually counterproductive: that the socialist nostrums of the "nanny state" tend to make things worse, not better.

That is not to say that she or her party is opposed to properly designed and properly administered welfare. Many an American con-servative would be surprised at the extent to which British Tories brag about the governmental "services" they provide. But Mrs. Thatcher is also tapping into the great vein of enthusiasm for free-market principles that is currently sweeping the world. By greatly expanding home ownership and stock ownership, she is converting many thousands of previously "have-not" Britons into budding capitalists. As such, they are highly skeptical of Big Government and its claims to be able to solve serious social problems.

There is almost certainly a lesson here for the American conservative movement. Our liberals, having east about desperately for "new Ideas," have just about concluded (correctly) that there aren't any, and are drifting back to the reluctant conclusion that, like it or not, the Welfare State is their shtick.

The trouble, then, must be with the voters, whom Ronald Reagan has tempted into a cold indifference to the sufferings of the poor. Time magazine, however, has helped things along by reporting hopefully that "there are signs of a fundamental change in the nation's political weather" - i.e., back to "compassion," in the form of government handouts.

Margaret Thatcher's brilliant victory suggests that American conservatives have little to fear from this alleged trend.

Growing Up's Hard, Says AMA

By Gayle Young UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) - Two thirds of America's teenagers have used illicit drugs, two thirds who are sexually active don't consistently use birth control, and accidents, suicides and homicides are their leading killer.

Adolescence, traditionally viewed as a golden opportunity to grow and develop, has become a period of physical peril and mental anguish for too many youngsters, according to a recent report from the American Medical Association.

"I consider the health of our teenagers one of the top public health priorities today." said Dr. James H. Sammons, executive vice president of the association. "It is a national shame."

The AMA White Paper on Adolescent Health is a catalog of disturbing statistics on young people.

The mortality rate for adolescents aged 14 to 19 is 11 percent higher today than 20 years ago, according to the association. The paper suggests the increase is due to a variety of factors, including steady or increased rates of pregnancy, drug use, suicide and accidents.

Sammons also said he believes young people today have little regard for their health and are acquiring bad habits that may last them a lifetime. Adolescent girls continue to start smoking in increasing numbers, although the number of teenage boys who take

According to the AMA paper, teenagers from all socioeconomic classes are affected by the disturbing health trends. But, children of poverty-stricken families are much more likely to face drugs and violence, pregnancy and abuse than are children of the middle class or the well-to-do.

Irregular Regulations From The FCC

By Jack Anderson And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON — Has Big Brother been helping Big Business beat up on a new kid on the block? The Federal Communications Commission has put a small company out of business because of a single breach of the rules - and it did so on the complaint of a glant communications company that has gone unpunished for several more apparent violations of FCC regulations.

The case began in 1985 when MCI Communications and its subcontractor. Western Telecommunications, lodged a complaint with the FCC against a would-be competitor, TeleSTAR, which hoped to become a $1 billion digital microwave network serving the Southwest. TeleSTAR had started construction of a transmission facility in the foothills of the Rockies without first getting FCC approval.

The commission's hearing division chief and trial counsel concluded that TeleSTAR's vio-granting the company an operating license. But an administrative law judge refused to grant the license. TeleSTAR has appealed.

Copies of FCC documents, including material submitted by TeleSTAR, were obtained by our reporter Lisa Sylvester. They suggest that MCI had a lot of nerve accusing any other company of breaking the FCC's rules. For example:

- On more than 20 separate occasions, MCI began radio transmission without final FCC ap-

- In one case, MCI apparently began transmission more than four years before it even applied for FCC approval. The FCC application form was stamped as received in August 1984: the service test start date was recorded as April 1980.

- MCI seems to have committed exactly the same sin it complained that TeleSTAR was guilty of: beginning construction of a facility before it got FCC approval. TeleSTAR claims that MCl started lation of FCC regulations was not work on a microwave radio station intentional, and they recommended - route between Glenshaw (near Pittsburgh) and Eric. Pa., without permission. FCC documents show that MCI applied for a construction permit in July 1982, but didn't get it until December of that year. Yet only nine days later. MCI sought permission to begin transmissions on the route.

An FCC employee told us it would be "unusual" for such an extensive route - more than 100 miles - to be set up in just nine days.

Along with its appeal, TeleSTAR has filed a voluminous petition claiming that MCI has broken FCC rules on many occasions and gotten away with it. The FCC's associate general counsel. Sheldon Gutman, told us that "eleSTAR's accusations of discrimination are being handled as a restricted proceeding. As a result, he said, "there is very little anyone around here can say about this case." Gutman also refused to comment on TeleSTAR's own separate case, which is under consideration by the commission.

When we asked MCI about TeleSTAR's accusation, the comof investigating the allegations, but an investigation.

has not completed it. Company policy is to comply with all federal and local ordinances in a timely manner. All of MCI's sites which the company is currently operating are licensed by the FCC."

TeleSTAR's president, Noel Stewart, an electrical engineer and Marine veteran of Vietnam, said investors had pledged $40 million in new capital, but the lack of a license for the 500-mile route in Colorado and Utah had pushed the company into bankruptcy. Stewart sought help from Sens. Orrin Hatch and Jake Garn, Utah Republicans, and both have asked the FCC for an explanation.

"TeleSTAR has made some very serious and convincing arguments to support their allegations of misrepresentation of facts, misstatements, errors of substantive and procedural law, deliberate withholding of pertinent findings and unfair treatment." Garn wrote the FCC. He also asked Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of a pany replied: "MCI is in the process — communications subcommittee, for

Passing The Baton At The Fed: Volcker To Greenspan

By David F. Scott Jr.

The announcement on June 2 that Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul A. Volcker handed President Reagan his resignation letter a day earlier joited the nation's financial markets. The markets always overreact in a negative fashion to events that are initially perceived to increase financial uncertainty. IF you have a nose for anticipating "bad" events and understand how to trade in the securities market, you can get rich. Keep this talent for prognosticating rotten happenings to yourself; to do otherwise risks diluting your profit-making opportunities and besides, folks don't like to lunch with "Gloomy Gus." Just smugly enjoy your wealth.

Most of the nation's big-league financial press were on lunch-break with regard to forecasting Mr. Volcker's departure. On June 1, only a day before the Volcker news hit the streets. The Wall Street Journal told us "the chances of Mr. Volcker's reappointment have swung from almost negligible to very high." Moreover, we were told by the same source that we should not "anticipate any announcement (of Volcker's possible reappointment) before the economic summit in Venice. Italy." (See The Wall Street Journal. June 1, 1987, p. 3.)

So what happened? The White House informed the public on June 2 (the summit began on June 8) that Mr. Volcker had turned down President Reagan's offer to begin a new four-year term as Fed chairman starting in August. Alan Greenspan was immediately nominated by Reagan to take over the helm of the most important central bank on the globe.

Mr. Greenspan possesses professional credentials of the first-rank. He was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors for President Ford (actually appointed in the waning days of the second Nixon Administration), directed the study published in 1983 to strengthen the financial straps of the Social Security System, and presently heads the well-known economic consulting firm of Townsend-Greenspan & Co. Mr. Greenspan also possesses a Ph.D. in economics from New York University. This degree was earned in 1977 and meant far more to NYU than it did to Greenspan: years earlier he had dropped out of a doctoral program at Columbia. He was good at making Don't believe for a moment that Mr. Reagan went to the mats to keep Volcker in Washington! If that was going to be the case, two things would have happened.

First. Volcker's third term as Fed chairman would have been locked-up and publicized in a big way about a month prior to the Venice summit. By keeping the change in Fed leadership mute until a mere week before Venice. the Reagan administration minimized speculation by the six other participating industrial countries about the sagacity of the choice. Moreover, by making the personnel switch prior to Venice the administration avoided potential post-summit criticism of keeping an important event like this one totally dormant and, thereby, out of reach of any substantive discussion at all. The timing by the administration on this one was pretty good.

APPOINTED A PROPERTY OF A PROPERTY OF THE PROP

Second, had the administration been keenly interested in Volcker, and knowing full-well that he might not accept the offer, there would have been a "Volcker-like" name on the working list of possible successors. There was none. The person most like Volcker within the U.S. banking system is Mr. E. Gerald Corrigan. Mr. Corrigan is president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York - a post Voicker himself once held. Upon receiving Mr. Volcker's "No." President Reagan easily turned to Mr. Greenspan. There was no

Many observers have suggested that (1) no one can do the job as well as Volcker and (2) a problem with the decision-making independence of the Fed will surface because President Reagan and Mr. Greenspan belong to the same political party. Neither of these concerns should keep you awake at night.

On the first point, this country is literally full of competent, adreit financial practitioners, financial economists

A Woebegon Farewell

A man you may never have heard of has broken the hearts of many of your friends and neighbors. You may never know about it, though; Garrison Keillor is a fellow one shares with a trusted

Oh, these folks may have tried to introduce the unworthy to Keillor some foolish Saturday night. Sitting in a living room at dusk, they turned on their radios and silently watched their friends listen to the commercials for the Fearmonger Shop, Bertha's Kitty Boutique, Bob's Bank. They sidgeted through their guests' growing boredom with the sweet strains of a Scottish balladeer, or an aging bluegrass music giant. Too many years of television rendered some unable to understand the soft, barely audible words of Keillor as he told us stories of ourselves over the airwaves. After a steady diet of firearms and screeching tires, it becomes harder and harder to hear the gentle "shulub-shlub" of the heart.

But the time for converting friends is past. Keillor ended his 13 years as host of National Public Radio's "A Prairie Home Companion" June 13. He was simply tired, he said, finding it almost impossible to bring us what we've come to expect from him every Saturday night along with the good music and belly laughs: stories of the small but wondrous events of our lives, told to us with the wisdom of an adult through the eyes of a child.

It is this genius that made us love Keillor so, and depend on him to put some perspective on our disappointments and failures. As we made one concession to adulthood after another, we lost the joyful anticipation with which we viewed the world as children. Keillor somehow lived through the same failures and disappointments without shutting off the wonder and hope. He reinterpreted the small everyday actions of our lives, making us realize the heroism of just getting up another day. He showed us ourselves in a new light and made us love our own

I was a little surprised, then, at the sulking with which some Kelllorites greeted the news that he was leaving. They wonder how he could do this, and what would possess a man to step down at the pinnacle of success. (Keillor's latest book, "Lake Wocbegon Days," was a national best-seller. He was the darling of the media last year and featured on a recent cover of Time magazine.) I can only assume they either don't know how exhausting it is to reach down and pull out a piece of your soul and give it to others week after week, or have forgotten how taxing the creative process is.

Few of us ever reach the level of a Garrison Keillor, but most of us have walked in his shoes. Simple activities that don't get us much attention teaching a Sunday School class week after week, being program chairman for Rotary, leading a Brownle troop - can make us feel like there's nothing left between our ears and our socks but mush. And invariably when we quit, our leaving is greeted with more disappointment than appreciation for service rendered.

It's time to let Keillor go, to do his writing and gain the anonymity he lost as a celebrity in his own hometown. "That's unbearable," he told a news conference in St. Paul, Minn., when he announced he would leave his show. "To be a celebrity means that people don't invite you over for dinner anymore, because they figure you couldn't come." I hope eventually all of Keillor's monologues are made available for people to buy, because they are great report is attacking a straw man. literature as well as food for the heart. Report On SDI Riddled With Errors

Saturday, 30 May 1987, was an abysmal day for the city of Sanford. I was one of but a handful to hear Mayor Bettye Smith so accurately, so poignantly, address communal apathy regarding the day that was intended to be the Day of Remembrance for those who fell in defense of our nation. Her message was succinct - do we not care or have we forgotten

Some four years ago when KAL Flight 007 was intentionally and brutally shot down by the Soviet Union, your editorials rang with avowals that we would never forget... House of Representatives) had the opportunity to review the American Physical Society report, "Science and Technology of Directed Energy Weapons." Like many Americans, we were left with genuine concerns about the Strategic Defense Initiative after reading the report.

As you well know, most members of Congress must rely on experts to make informed decisions about SDI due to the highly technical nature of the program. Because the APS report if one of the few circulating that was produced by scientific experts, it has had a great impact on the SDI debate. In fact, it has been used repeatedly to condemn the SDI program and to contradict information released by SDI experts.

We respect efforts to thoroughly review SDI, and we strongly encourage continued scrutiny of the program. But we believe all studies should be carried out in a professional, objective manner and based on accurate scientific findings.

Recently, it was brought to our attention that the APS report on SDI is riddled with errors. Dr. Frederick Seitz, past President of APS and the National Academy of Sciences, concluded that the report is seriously flawed. Dr. Lowell Wood and Dr. Gregory Canavan, two renowned setentists working with SDL said that the report contains computation errors by factors ranging up to 100. All these distinguished scientists agreed that the Executive Summary of the APS report - which the press necessarily relied upon - is more negative and in many cases actually contradicts the body of the report.

In addition to the technical errors in the report, we understand that there

> As members committed to ensuring the long-term national security of this nation, we believe the public must have a fair accounting of the SDI program. Therefore, we ask that you submit the APS report to the best technical peer review society is capable of offering and correct any errors before any further publications are submitted.

> We have alerted our colleagues to the recent findings on the APS report, and will continue to seek information on the SDI program. Therefore, we will be sharing your response with members of Congress and look forward to hearing from you.

I have decided that it is time someone compliment our city commissioners on their selection of a chief of police. It isn't every city that has a chief so hard on crime that he proves it by having his officers set up road blocks to check driver's licenses and he goes around pulling up garage sale signs because they are posted illegally and then cracks a major - and 1 mean major - one woman prostitution ring that he set up himself. Now this is real police work.

1 feel if he spent as much time on his job as he does talking to the women's club trying to convince them how great he is, or at another club playing twenty questions, he might know a little more about police work and what is going on in our town.

Since he has been chief there never has been a speed check set up on 27th Street or in Hidden Lake on Hidden Lake Drive. Yet these two streets are extensions of Daytona speedway. There are alot of children on both of these streets as there are on most every street in Sanford.

Then we come to the mounted officer. This is a real waste of taxpayers' money. I have seen her twice in the six months or so she has been on the patrol. Mounted officers are only effective in congested areas or for crowd control. There is no congestion in downtown, and the only time there is a crowd is for the Christmas parade.

Don't get me wrong. I am for a good police department. I just feel police officers could be better utilized.

Give PTL Back To Jim And Tammy

To borrow an expression from a woman ladore, "Can we talk?"

For years and years the Bakker family. Jim and Tammy, ran the PTL organization.

While they were at the helm, so to speak, there were never any financial woes such as a bankruptcy.

Now after many years of successful operations, there arise some very serious allegations.

Poor 'ole Jim Bakker admits to one. and only one, indiscretion. He positively denies any other wrongdoing!

Yet, everyone seems to want to condemn the Bakkers based on the allegations of a man who has "taken" control of PTL and has yet to offer any proof of his allegations! Is this just?

Would you send a man to the gas chamber based solely on the allegations of murder when there was no evidence of a crime? Of course not! Proof is the key word.

Funny, isn't it, that the Bakkers ran PTL all those years and within a couple of months after Falwell's group has control, they are filing for bankruptcy?

It is my personal opinion that Jim Bakker made one error. Who hasn't? His wife forgave him, why shouldn't everyone else?

If the Bible teaches "To err is human, to forgive divine" and "Let ye without sin cast the first stone," then who is Jerry Falwell to be judge, jury and executioner?

I feel strongly that PTL should be given back to the Bakkers, and they can save it!

Guess what? I do not now, nor have I ever watched or listened to PTL. I have never sent a contribution to PTL. I just believe that right is right, and what is being done to the Bakkers is definitely wrongf

Requiem For Strategic Defense Premature

By Jane M. Orient

Opponents of American homeland defense applauded a recent report by the American Physical Society with headlines like this: "Scientific Truth: Physicists' Report Shoots Down SDI Feasibility."

The truth of the matter is that the report did nothing of the kind. In addition, it is laced with technical errors that should acutely embarrass its eminent and prestigious authors when it is published as a serious scientific work.

Since no one is proposing near-term deployment of exotic weapons like lasers and neutral particle beams, the example, the Sidewinder missile.) The American Physical Society report ignores the only type of missile defense actually being considered by the Department of Defense.

It also ignores the reason for the sense of urgency that drives SDI proponents: the real possibility that the Soviet Union might have a first strike capability, and a nation-wide defense against retaliation, by the mid-1990s. The CIA has evidence of warm assembly lines ready to turn out antiballistic missile (ABM) components in massive numbers.

The authors of the report assert that we won't know about the feasibility of advanced directed-energy weapons for at least 10 years. Government scientists actually working on these five to seven years. The government utilized in routine air defense (for scientists naturally read the report with avid interest. They sought to learn something. And they discovered some astonishing errors, as detailed in a study by Gregory Canavan, a physicist of 25 years experience who has served as a high-level scientific advisor to the Air Force. Some of these errors are summarized in National Review. May

The report asserts that "nearly all the directed energy weapons under consideration for orbital use would require nuclear reactors as a power source" (Associated Press). Why? The physicists assumed that between 100,000 and 700,000 watts of electricity would be required for satellite housekeeping functions (such as temperature maintenance). But the actual power re- about 200,000 watts, and that another quirement is well known; a few thousand watts, a hundred times less than the report said. This amount is readily supplied by solar cells and

The physicists also state that one billion watts of power would be needed to run a neutral-particle-beam weapon. But that weapon is being designed to produce one-hundred-million-volt particles with a current of one-tenth of an ampere. From Physics I, watts equal volts x amperes, giving 10,000,000 watts for the power of the beam. Since three watts must be put in for each watt that comes out, the power requirement is 30,000,000 watts, 30 times less than the physicists calculated.

The American Physical Society report says that chemical lasers have only been tested at a power somewhat "one or two orders of magnitude" (a factor of 10 to 100) are needed. But a multimillion watt laser was demon-

Reagan Moving To Deregulate Drug Testing

AND ATTERETARING AND ATTERET FOR ATTERED AND ALL FREE FEET FOR THE FOR AND AND AND AND AND ARREST FOR FOR FOR

By B.D. Colen

WASHINGTON - Not content with the deregulation of the airline industry into competitive chaos, the Reagan administration is swiftly moving toward deregulating new-drug testing.

The White House has proposed allowing terminally ill patients to obtain potentially helpful drugs before they have been properly tested.

On an emotional level, this sounds sensible.

It gives dying patients the right to gamble on a new drug, rather than forcing them to go to the grave wondering whether participation in a controlled trial they couldn't enter might have saved them.

if this rule takes effect - and it be, the heart and soul of all may within a month or so - it would apply to new drugs that have shown promise of being useful in the treatment of a disease.

If such a drug is being tested in clinical trials, terminally fil patients suffering from the disease but not participating in the trials, would be able to obtain the drug through their physi-

A participant in a controlled clinical trial of a drug doesn't know whether he or she is receiving the new drug, a standard treatment or a placebo. But if this new regulation takes effect, a patient suffering from the same disease will be able to get the drug — not a sugar pill without participating in a trial.

And what AIDS patient would prove the health of the participate in a controlled trial of a drug like AZT instead of simply having his physician market drugs before they have write a prescription for the drug?

or just go to the doctor for a prescription?

And what of the hundreds, or thousands, of patients who use unproven medications outside the carefully controlled structure of a clinical trial? How many of them will die weeks, months or years earlier than they might if they didn't take an unproven new drug?

A new drug may look promising in the laboratory, and it may even look good when tried on an initial small group of patients. but when a large number of patients start taking it, potentially fatal side effects may turn

To see what this bit of "huparticipate in a trial of the drug, manitarian" deregulation might bring us, we have only to consider what happened when well-intentioned physicians routinely subjected premature newborns to high concentrations of oxygen. It became obvious to physicians caring for these inlants that the introduction of the use of supplemental oxygen led to a marked increase in newborn survival. Believing that if some oxygen is good, a lot must be better, they, increased the oxygen concentrations.

The problem is that the uncontrolled use of oxygen caused an epidemic of a condition known as retrolental fibroplasia. or RLF, which blinded at least 10,000 children.

Unfortunately, very little was learned from that debacle treatments are still being introduced willy-nilly into newborn intensive-care units because some physicians believe it is immoral to deny an infant a treatment that might be efficacious.

Deregulation of the airline industry has led to cheaper fares, along with increased over-booking of flights, increased flight delays and, many contend, a decline in airline safety.

How many RLF-like disasters will we see if we take this seemingly small step toward deregulating the pharmaceutical industry?

and monetary economists who could rather quickly learn the day-to-day mechanics of the chairman's job. Most have already mastered the underlying theoretical apparatus. Getting through some of the institutional and personal networks takes a bit longer. The embedded authority of the position, however, moves the personal contact side along in a reasonably short

Truthfully, what scares professional politicians is that someone might be selected for the position who in no way is beholden to them. The country is best served if the individual heading the Fed has no political or economic ax to grind. Such a person can objectively analyze the economic data, sift through the political arguments, and make a proper decision on monetary policy matters.

What Mr. Volcker accomplished was in no way magical. The outrageous inflation rates that this nation endured between 1978-1981 (recall that the consumer price index increased by an average of 10.9 percent during each of those years) were only subdued by (1) a severe cut-back in the rate of expansion of the money supply, (2) a resulting slowdown in commercial activity that led to a severe recession commencing in 1981, and (3) a run-up in the civilian unemployment rate which averaged 9.7

percent in 1982 and 9.6 percent in 1983. It took a national recession to get inflation under control. Volcker's contribution was in sticking to his guns; his number one priority was to wring the unacceptable rate of inflation out of the economy. The only way this can be done with certainty is to throw the economy into a recession. This is not meant to minimize Mr. Volcker's achievements - only to place them in perspective.

The second point on the independence of the Fed from the undue influence of the White House can likewise be set aside. The (economic) philosophical composition of the Board of Governors and the Federal Open Market Committee is plainly too diverse to be misdirected by collusion or a follow-theleader mentality. Too many careers are on the line to suggest a lemming-like mind set. It's task enough to get six to twelve of your close friends to agree with you, let alone generate consensus from such a number with whom you share predominantly a professional relationship.

What can be suggested, though, is a different way of evaluating the performance of the Fed chief. As was earlier noted, Mr. Volcker cooked up a humdinger of a recession that persisted for 16 months during his first four-year term (see table). That "ties" the 1973-1975 downturn for being the most severe since the end of World War II. At the end of October this year, the current economic expansion will have achieved five full years. Few last that long. Only the expansion of 1961-1969, which gave rise to "The Great Society," will surpass the present one from among postwar business upturns.

Post-World War II U.S. Recessions Period Bogan (Months) October 1949 November 1948 11 July 1953 May 1954 10 August 1957 April 1958 8 February 1961 April 1960 10 November 1970 December 1969 11 November 1973 March 1975 16 January 1980 July 1980 July 1981 November 1982

Also, we must be aware that no other Fed chairman in history has inherited the string of federal budget deficits being handed to Mr. Greenspan. This means the U.S. Congress has abandoned any semblance of fiscal responsibility. The only agency that can attempt to fine tune the huge domestic economy is the Fed. The burden of being chairman this time around is as challenging as it was eight years back.

If Mr. Greenspan can help keep the economy out of a recession for four full years, he will have done an extraordinary job. If he can avoid recession for two more years, that will be a darn good piece of work. Anything less will be only average. Under this complex backdrop we must wish Mr. Greenspan, and ourselves - Good Luck!

strated by SDI more than a year ago, and the Soviets have had such lasers for several years. (The Soviet claim they are for "medical research," but one wonders what sort of medical application involves blowing a hole a foot in diameter in a human body.) As the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization commented, "some technologies have shown several orders-ofmagnitude increase in performance" since the report was prepared.

Considering countermeasures that the Soviets might adopt, the report acknowledges that shielding an SS-18 missile against lasers would diminish its payload to "less than half." But nearly all the payload (the bombs) would have to be sacrificed. The authors used an incorrect value for the surface area of the upper stage of the publishing shoddy work.

While countermeasures by Soviet rockets are incorrectly portrayed as easy and cheap, SDI opponents frequently allude to the vulnerability of defensive satellites. Yet satellites can defend themselves by a variety of measures, including maneuverability, shooting-back, shielding, and decoys.

Based on the flawed American Physical Society report, John Tirman (of the Winston Foundation for World Peace) advised in a Los Angeles Times editorial: "the nation should start making plans for SDI's burial."

If SDI is buried, it will be primarily for political reasons. not technological ones. And a wrong decision could be followed by the burial of the United States as a free nation.

'Empire' Is Gore Vidal's 24th Novel

Empire, by Gore Vidal, (Random House, 512 pp., $22.50)

Gore Vidal has little serious competition as the premier contemporary American writer of historical fiction, and he is at his most enjoyable when his subject is the U.S. government. "Empire," Vidal's 24th novel, is his fifth about American politicians and political life. Chronologically it falls after "1876," the third novel, and prior to the earliest, "Washington, D.C." Vidal's historical fiction is consistently entertaining. He renders dry, facts into stories palatable to even the most rigorously non-studious reader. More than that, the omniscient narrator lets us in on the innermost thoughts of people who become characters in something better than mere history - the grand sweep of a well-plotted tale.

"Empire" is set at the close of the 19th century, when the United States had begun to emerge from international isolationism, one of the principal characteristics of its foreign relations.

Having defeated the Spanish fleet in 1898, Americans found themselves for the first time with significant foreign possessions - a nascent empire in the Caribbean and Pacific.

One of the most interesting characters in "Empire" is the man charged with running that new empire: John Hay, secretary of state under William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

Vidal portrays Hay as ambivalent about America and its new possessions. He is surrounded on one level by wife, family

The novel's structure is built around Caroline Sanford, who returns to America to make her mark on the world.

She brifgs to the task beauty, education and a pedigree that guarantees access to the very highest circles. She also scrapes together the money to buy the ailing Washington Tribune newspaper, which she remakes in the fashion developed by William R. Hearst.

Here dwell together still two men of note, who never lived

Life and Death in Shanghal, by Nien Cheng, Grove Press. 496 pp., $19.95)

Nien Cheng, who suffered 61/2 years of physical and mental torture in a detention house during the Cultural Revolution, has written a remarkable book that tells her haunting, fascinating story. At the same time, she sheds new light on the decadelong political upheaval that tore apart Maoist China.

Cheng, educated in England and the widow of a diplomat, was tormented during the 1966-76 revolution partly because of her wealth, her foreign connections and her intellectual background.

But, as she discovered during her years in solltary confinement, she was incarcerated mainly because she became a pawn in the power struggle between the ultraleft Maoists and more moderate Communist Party officials.

Hoping to induce her to confess faisely to crimes and foreign conspiracies that then could be traced to moderate officials such as Premier Chou En-lai, the Red Guards and Revolutionaries ransacked her home, subjected her to deprivation and torture and - as Cheng discovered years later - killed her only child.

"Life and Death in Shanghai" is an amazing story of one woman's struggle to survive, to maintain her dignity and to hold on to the truth. Often near death, she survived because of her intense spirit and refusal to submit.

Despite pain that often clouded her mind, she remained sharp enough to outsmart her tormentors - often quoting Mao to prove her point and confounding interrogators who thought they had a monopoly on Mao's sayings.

Cheng's account and graphic descriptions are especially compelling because the book is one of the few ever written by a woman who underwent political torture.

Equally fascinating, because of her perspective as a victim, is her account of the Cultural Revolution in which about 1 million people died. The book has its touching moments -

Cheng describing how a spider gives her the courage to continue fighting and how a detention house inmate quietly sings "Silent Night" on Christmas Eve. But mostly it is an intense, emotionally draining work. Even after her release, Cheng is tormented by trying to understand the death of her daughter and is absorbed with seeking a government apology for her own mistreatment. Cheng, who now lives in the United States, leaves the reader wondering how Westerners could have been so ignorant about the anarchy that gripped China.

The bigger schools attract the very biggest names in the disciplines they offer, but smaller, less expensive ones may catch tomorrow's superstars on the way up.

The more popular teachers' classes generally fill rapidly. The two-week class at the Anderson Ranch school in Colorado taught by the venerable Tage Frid, who has influenced more woodworkers in this country than any other man, fills within a week of the first offering.

The major schools set up their classes in different ways. Some courses cover just a weekend while others will run from one to three weeks. Tuition generally averages about $160 a week, although some schools will charge more for teachers in great demand.

Most schools offer a wide range of lodging - from private room to dormitory setting - at reameals. Another consideration is the cost of materials.
