Housing Authority project.

For at least three months, there has been no one to do housework for Mrs. Simpson, who is paralyzed on the left side of her body. She lives on the five meals a week brought to her by the Seminole Federation for Senior Citizens Meals on Wheels program, while roaches fight for scraps of food left in her kitchen, unused for mon-

State Health and Rehabilitation Services officials say they are now looking for a nursing home bed for Mrs. Simpson, and they expect to be able to move her within a few days.

Sanford Housing Authority Director Tom Wilson said yesterday an exterminator will be working on the apartment as soon as a place can be found for Mrs. Simpson to stay until maintenance workers spray every niche of the dwelling with insecticide.

And a spokesman for the Bay Area Home Health Service says a cleaning team soon will be assigned to help Mrs. Simpson. One would have been assigned sooner, but no one ever notified the organization that a problem existed.

Volunteers and employees of several dorganizations which help the aged and needy have known about Mrs. Simpson's plight for over a month. Many of them have suddenly snapped into action over the past two days, apparently thanks to some pushing by Sheriff's Deputy Ed Schuckman, a volunteer director of the Seminole Federation, who Schuckman said he had seen only one person living in worse conditions during the time he has worked with the elderly in Seminole. He has warned HRS officials they have only a few more days to get Mrs. Simpson into a proper home.

If she is not moved soon, Schuckman says he will use the Baker Act, the state law providing for the commitment of individuals who are harming themselves, at least to get her into the haspital for a few days of proper food and medical care. There is no information on exactly how long Mrs. She has been living in the city-owned apartment for sheet five years. Until about two years ago, HRS supplied her with a housekeeper who worked about half a day, once a week, cleaning the apartment.

But one day HRS Director of Social and Rehabilitative Services Sally Green received a messa telling her the one homeomaker assigned to Seminole was needed elsewhere in the state. The position was simply eliminated, and all persons ing the service were left without it. When Housing Authority workers made their uarterly inspection of Mrs. Simpson's apartment August, it was in decent condition, Wilson

"That apartment has gone down, down, down," said Wilson, calling the conditions discovered on an inspection Tuesday "deplorable."

The squalid conditions in Mrs. Simpson's apartment were first reported to the Federation on October 26 by the Visiting Nurses Association of Drange, Occools and Seminole counties, said Federation head Andy Knight.

Mrs. Simpson immediately began receiving one meal a day, five days a week from the Federation, said Knight, adding he called the Housing Authority, HRS and the Seminole Health Department to inform them of the situation.

But Wilson said he first heard about the severity of the problem on Tuesday, when a health department sanitatarian happened to mention the situation to a Housing Authority administrator. He claims Knight may have either called the wrong office or simply asked for an exterminator, rather than demanding aid for a woman living in filth. Green said she has tried on several occasions to nove Mrs. Simpson into a nursing home. But Mrs.

Simpson and a relative always changed their minds when a bed became available, preventing HRS from taking any action, Green said. Both Green and Knight said they never contacted Bay Area Home Health Service because the ention had deteriorated to the point where a major cleaning effort "with shovels" would have been necessary, and the job would have been refused by the community service organization.

But a spokeswoman for the group said a spokesmen in turn homemaker would have been sent to Mrs. Simpcan do no more.

Housing Authority and HRS spokesmen said all Mrs. Simpson had to do for aid was contact them. 'She has a phone, doesn't she?" was the comment of several social service officials. Mrs. Simpson has no phone. It is difficult for her even to move into her wheel chair unaided, said

Knight, adding she has been found on the floor several times by Meals on Wheels volunteers. Knight said Mrs. Simpson, who gives her age as "over fifty," apparently by 20 or 30 years, is suf-fering from the first stages of senility, and no longer can remember recent events. Additionally, Knight and others say they have been unable to reach Mrs. Simpson's relatives to discuss her current problems. Frieda Simpson just keeps saying she's fine, everything's fine — asking only for a plug of apartment, the roaches and flies running up and down the walls, the refrigerator containing only a package of pork rind and a few onions amidst mold

"Survival is a real thing for Frieda, she's on the edge of surviving. She's slowly deteriorating, physically and mentally," said Knight. But like the representatives of the other Mrs. Simpson, he says his agency is doing all it can for her, making sure she gets five meals a week and referring problems to other agencies, whose spokesmen in turn say they are doing their jobs, and

Pope John Paul II Meets

With Orthodox Patriarch

ISTANBUL, Turkey (UPI) — Pope John Paul II's meeting today with the Orthodox patriarch of Constantinople is central to the pontiff's effort to heal the nine-century rift between Roman Catholicism and the separated Orthodox churches of the East.

The session between the pope and Patriarch Dimitrios I is considered the highlight of John Paul's three-day visit to Turkey, which has been marked by a cool official reception and unprecedented security in the nation that is 98 percent Moslem.

More than 1,000 people have been placed in preventive detention in the martial law cities of Istanbul and Ankara to stifle possible demonstrations against John Paul in what is potentially the most dangerous visit of his 13-month reign. Contrasting sharply with adoring crowds who wildly cheered the pontiff on earlier visits this year to Mexico.

Welfare Unbridled

Welfare goes unchecked, the rogue elephant of Washington. Successive efforts to reform and restrain runaway federal welfare programs have eluded every president going back to the time of John F. Kennedy.

And small wonder. The nation's welfare constituency has grown so powerful and there are so many trade-offs between competing factions that even a simple reorganization of public assistance programs has become all but impossible.

Last year, for example, President Carter's bolder-than-usual welfare reform bill collapsed of its own weight after Congress grafted on $18 billion in additional benefits.

Now, instead of reorganizing the federal welfare bureaucracy and its 182 programs, some of which overlap or conflict with each other, the White House has quietly sponsored a new bill that simply tidies the messier loose ends of certain aid programs and tightens federal control step by step at the expense of the states. As usual in approaching the welfare monster, the administration's proposed changes are being pushed as "reforms."

A few days ago, the administration's 1979 welfare reform bill, HR 4904, passed the House with little notice, being overshadowed by events abroad and presidential politics at home. Nevertheless, this was the first time in eight years the House has approved legislation making major changes in the nation's welfare system.

In broad terms, HR 4904 would amend existing law to impose a national minimum level of support for welfare recipients throughout the United States. It would require all states to provide cash Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) that, in conjunction with food stamps, would give each household an income equal to at least 65 percent of the federally defined poverty level of adopted in the state of Washington by a 2-to-1

States also would be required to offer help to two-parent families with children when the principal wage earner was unemployed.

In order to win political support in Congress, the administration's bill provided increased federal contributions to state welfare costs by about $900 million. The heightened federalization of welfare quality for voter consideration next year, under the bill prompted Congressman Barber B. according to the Coalition of American Public Conable, R-N.Y., among others, to denounce it for Employees. leading the welfare program "in the wrong

Despite the wide margin of support for this latest welfare "reform," a coalition of California corporate and personal income-Republicans and conservative Democrats came tax rates in half. An alternative proposal, within five votes of passing an amendment that which would lower taxes for low- and middlewithin five votes of passing an amendment that would have permitted states to set work requirements for welfare recipients. Unfortunately, such local control is not envisioned as welfare reform by the Carter administration and its liberal allies on Capitol Hill.

But even those forces may not suffice to save HR 4904 in the Senate where Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., awaits, sword

Sen. Long wants to see work requirements oughened and he favors giving block grants to states to run their own welfare programs. It appears unlikely this welfare bill will escape death or mutilation in Sen. Long's committee proving that questionable reforms are as immune to passage as unquestionable ones.

And so welfare unbridled continues on out of control, increasing by geometric proportion as new programs are added and old ones are liberalized until 59.6 million Americans are estimated to receive some form of welfare benefits. Almost 60 percent of welfare recipients in certain categories are non-poor. Welfare payments are up to about $80 billion annually and total transfer payments are estimated to exceed

$250 billion a year. Such sums recall De Tocqueville's warning about American democracy in which he suggested great danger from politicians and an Is it, we wonder, expecting too much that among the numerous presidential candidates taking to the stump some will come to grips with the welfare crisis that ranks with energy and inflation among the country's most acute

The result was the Kathleen Anderson Com-Around prehensive Work Center, Inc., which supporters hope to get operational by the first of the year. Anyone who has ever been involved in getting a non-profit project of this sort established realizes this is a difficult and frustrating time.

The need is there and recognized, the potential clients are waiting, the group is chartered, a building has been leased for $1 a year from the Seminole School District and some funds have been raised to help renovate it. But a concerted effort is needed this month to give the center the final push it needs to actually get open.

The latest fund raising event for the center will be a dinner and Danny Treanor 'Roast' to be held Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at Buck's Restaurant at the Sanford Airport. Treanor is a popular WFTV weatherman and members of the celebrity panel who will do the roasting include TV personalities Carole Nelson, Carol Stanton Granstrom, Bob

In addition to the full-time director, the work center has a board of directors. A grant-in-aid has been secured from the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation Services to pay the salaried personnel, however, problems are being encountered as the center is not yet fully perational with clients.

There is a need for supporters and a keen public interest as to the plight of handicapped persons. A waste of human resources exists if such persons are not utilized to their full potential and presently after they leave school there is no place for them to go. Lions Face Gainesville Eastside

Oviedo's 11-0 Mark Grew Week By Week

Four years ago, when Joe Montgomery first took over the head coaching job at Oviedo, not much was expected of him

After all, football fortunes at the 3A school had been anything but spectacular in the previous seven years and there was a long established acceptance of a nasty tradition - reasons, the Lions have captured the imagination and heart of Seminole County. The have nots have turned into the haves. The great pumpkin has arrived. Oviedo has grown up. The Lions have learned how to WIN.

Friday night, on home turf, or as Monty puts it, "Mole Cricket Municipal Stadium" Oviedo tangles with Gainesville Eastside in the second round of the Class 3A state playoffs. Once again, in test number 12, it will be multi-talented quarterback Troy Kessinger taking the snaps for his triple threat backfield that boasts the Orange Belt Conference's leading passer in Kessinger and leading rusher in tailback Marvin McClennon. Toss in the power running of fullback Mike Scott and his crunching blocking and it all adds up to a nicely balanced offensive arsenal.

Joe Montgomery's triple threat backfield includes tailback Marvin Mc-Clennon taking the pitch out, Mike Scott at fullback leading the blocking and quarterback Troy Kessinger at the controls. A survey of 26,886 pregnancies found 156 infections of the amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus for every 1,000 births in which the mother had sexual intercourse in the final month before delivery.

The infection rate was only 117 per 1,000 births in women who had not engaged in sex. Amniotic infections are responsible for a high per-centage of fetal and newborn deaths, although the rate now is probably not as high as the period surveyed,

Teen Girl Survives Fall

NEW YORK (UPI) — A teenage girl who fell five floors down an airshaft was impaled Wednesday on a spiked iron fence for several hours before rescuers cut her loose with portions of the fence still in her, police

A Bellevue Hospital spokesman said Lori Morgan, 16, of Old Bridge, N.J. was in critical condition following surgery to remove the iron fence spikes in Rescue teams freed Miss Morgan from the 12-foothigh fence in the alley next to the building only by sawing through the spikes. "Miraculously there were no vital organs hit," the hospital spokesman said. "That's what saved her."

More Babies Die In South

ATLANTA (UPI) — A preliminary study indicates children born in the South are more likely to die before their first birthday than those born in other regions of the country. The Southern Growth Policies Board and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, in the joint report released Wednesday, said Southern children also have less chance than other U.S. children of living with both parents at home. In addition, students at Southern schools have less money spent on them by the state, more chance of being held back in the

HEW regional chief Sara V. Craig attributed the less favorable climate for the upbringing of children in the South to
