Life drama on a rainy afternoon

Myong Bell, 30, of Sanford was injured Thursday when she was struck by a car as she attempted to cross a street. Sanford police said Bell, an employee of San-Del Manufacturing, at 2240 Old Lake Mary Road, had crossed the road to roll up the windows of her car prior to a rainstorm. As she was returning, police said she apparently walked into the path of a northbound 1987 Chevrolet, driven by Tequila M. Richardson, 18, of Sanford. Bell was airlifted to Orlando Regional Medical Center, where her condition this morning was listed as stable. No charges have been filed pending completion of an investigation.

SANFORD — The quiet of the dark, humid afternoon was ripped apart by about a half dozen blasts.

A silver car sped away down the silent street, but returned moments later. Another shot rang out and then there was silence.

Sanford chamber ready for change

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Wanda (Coley) Kelly, former president of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce, has been named interim Executive Director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

She will be replacing Dave Farr, who has resigned his post to enter into the private business sector. Farr's resignation is effective July 27th. But Chamber President Brent Adamson, said Kelly will come on board on July 24th.

"I'm really looking forward to working with the Sanford Chamber," Kelly told the Sanford Herald. "In some ways, I'll be dealing with the same people and some of the same community I worked with in the county chamber, but in other ways, the Sanford chamber has always had some other avenues which I believe will be an excellent challenge."

Kelly explained that her position with the county chamber was identical with Farr's position in Sanford. "I was president," she said, "but I was actually the fulltime chief officer. The equal to the Sanford Chamber's presidential title is what the county calls the "chairman," so it's just a difference in names, and not job classifications."

Kelly left her position as county chamber president on February 21. She said she would not comment at this time regarding whether she planned to submit her application for consideration of the Sanford job on a full time basis. "They haven't officially advertised yet," she said, "and at the present, I haven't given it serious consideration."

Meanwhile, Farr said he has already turned over at least seven applications to the board of directors for consideration. Adamson said the search will not begin until after this weekend, during which time the chamber will begin advertising for the position in the Sanford Herald

Sprouting along pastoral route

For weeks, motorists traveling north on Rinehart Road out of Lake Mary have watched as utility poles sprouted beside the road. Strung with wires that resembled a web spun by a drunken spider on speed, the once pastoral route began to resemble an industrial complex. The most recent poles installed might be described as a poor man's goal post, two tall uprights with a third pole wired in place spanning between them. A spokesman for Florida Power and Light notes most of the new poles are temporary and will be coming down when construction is complete. Existing H-poles are also being removed with the installation of lowering metal mono-poles for transmission of power from DeBary to Winter Springs.

Grant would improve boating facilities

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Surrounded on three sides by water, criss-crossed by rivers and dotted with lakes, it seems natural boating is big in Florida.

Seminole County Commissioners were briefed on a $313,000 grant for improvements for Lake Jesup Park which would include:

- a paved access road and 37 parking spaces, $125,000
  - improved boat ramp, $30,000
  - dredging the existing canal for better access, $40,000
  - a pavilion with tables and grills, $25,000
  - self-contained restrooms, $28,000 and
  - solar parking lot lights, $35,000.
- The engineering cost plus permit cost, pre-agreement is an additional $30,000 bringing the total grant request to $313,000.
- The money would come from the Florida

Boating Improvement Program. The law requires a percentage of all commercial boat registration revenue go the Florida counties to improve recreational boating facilities for the public. As of June 26, $495,754 was available for Seminole County from the Boating Improvement Fund. All expenditures by the county are 100 percent reimbursable.

The project is scheduled for completion for March 1996.

FLORIDA BRIEFS

New trial ordered in child's battery

TALLAHASSEE — The state Supreme Court ordered a new trial for a Bay County man serving a life sentence for the sexual battery of his girlfriend's son.

Testimony about an earlier conviction for attempted lewd assault on a 12-year-old niece shouldn't have been allowed in Ramon Saffor's trial, the court ruled Thursday.

Two of the seven justices disputed the ruling, saying the two incidents were similar enough to allow the earlier case to be considered in Saffor's 1991 trial.

Such testimony can be vital to prosecutors in cases that hinge on a child's word against an adult's, said Assistant Attorney General Wendy Morris.

"It says, 'I'm not alone out here, he's done this to other kids.' It really gives that child more credibility," she said. Prosecutors hadn't decided whether to ask the Supreme Court to rehear the case, said Morris.

Saffor was accused of attacking the 10-year-old son of his live-in girlfriend. The child said the two were sleeping in the same bed when Saffor woke him up, pulled down his pants and sodomized him.

Over objections from Saffor's attorney, the court allowed testimony about the incident with the niece four years earlier.

She testified that while staying at her aunt's house, she was awakened when Saffor came into the bedroom and put his hands under her pajamas. She said Saffor withdrew his hands when she asked him to leave.

Looking good

MIAMI — Charges that enforcement operations were altered to make one of the nation's immigration hot spots look good became an instant political football.

Attorney General Janet Reno asked the inspector general's office Thursday to investigate allegations that Immigration and Naturalization Service supervisors received a congressional delegation on a fact-finding trip.

Republican presidential candidate and California Gov. Pete Wilson blamed President Clinton, saying the fault lies with him for a lack of leadership.

Wilson, the target of an INS investigation over charges he hired an illegal alien as a maid in the 1970s, demanded INS managers be subpoenaed to determine what happened during the visit last month.

Nearly 150 illegal aliens were moved out of a detention center and staff was added during delegation tours in Miami. INS employees charged in a letter released Wednesday.

Reno referred the case to her agency's inspector general, an independent investigator "responsible for determining the facts and circumstances of allegations raised and any misconduct," said spokeswoman Ana Cobian.

"There is no time frame because we don't know what information or facts or circumstances they will discover," she said.

Walter Cadman, INS district director in Miami, has not directly responded to the specific charges raised by 50 employees in the open letter to the House immigration task force.

Surgeon suspended

TAMPA — The surgeon who amputated the wrong foot of a patient at one hospital here has been suspended from practicing at two others amid questions over a procedure in which he removed a woman's diseased toe.

"What we can confirm is there was an incident in surgery, and that Dr. Rolando Sanchez has been summarily suspended, pending an investigation," said Robin De La Vergne of Tenet Healthcare Corp., which owns Town & Country Hospital and Memorial Hospital. The surgery occurred Tuesday at Town & Country.

Sanchez removed the fourth toe on the woman's right foot. De La Vergne said. The surgeon did not return a telephone call from The Tampa Tribune on Thursday.

"The investigation is about a potential breach of hospital policy and procedure, not his medical judgment or the care he provided," De La Vergne said.

She would not identify the patient or elaborate further. To do so might jeopardize the investigation, which will be conducted by the institution's medical staff, she said.

Nina Botcher of the Agency for Health Care Administration said state inspectors were, by coincidence, in the hospital this week. The hospital's risk manager told them to expect a report of a surgical mishap.

University Community Hospital filed such a report last winter after Sanchez removed King's left foot rather than his right, both of which were diseased from diabetes.

The incident jeopardized the hospital's Medicare funding and prompted regulators to scrutinize its accreditation. The Medicare funding is no longer threatened; the accreditation is still under review.

Sanchez and UCH settled with King for about $1.15 million. About two years ago, the surgeon settled a claim with another patient, after repairing the wrong hernia, the newspaper reported.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Foster care Lawsuit against HRS to be dismissed

By ADAM YEMANS
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — A lawsuit seeking to move children out of foster care faster will be dismissed after the state improved its system but hundreds of youngsters still are looking for permanent homes.

Karen Gievers, the Miami attorney who filed the original suit, said Thursday she believed the state's social services officials have made progress to prevent youngsters from languishing in foster care.

"The papers are being filed today, so this lawsuit will be going away," Gievers said at a news conference with Ed Feaver, acting secretary of the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services. "That doesn't mean the problems are solved."

The goal is to find permanent homes for children from troubled families. Officials said they wanted to prevent youngsters from growing up in foster care, like 20-year-old Mike Beard, whose mother turned him over to the state when he was four because she couldn't afford to raise him.

"When I was younger it was sort of tough getting used to new places but as I grew up it became easier," said Beard, who joined Gievers and Feaver at the news conference.

He still gets government support but attends culinary school and works parttime at a sign printing shop in Tallahassee. He lives on his own for the first time and wants a career as a chef at a resort hotel or "a big Italian restaurant."

Gievers had filed her suit on behalf of six foster children known only as A through F in the litigation.

She charged that more than half of Florida's foster care children had been in care longer than 18 months and nearly 1,000 had been in the system more than five years.

Gievers first filed the suit in 1990 but agreed to suspend it in 1992 for three years to give Gov. Lawton Chiles and HRS time to improve. She moved in January to restart the suit because she didn't believe the state had made enough progress.

To comply with a settlement between HRS and Gievers in February, the state reviewed the cases of nearly 2,000 children who have been in foster care for more than 18 months. HRS has moved to revoke parental rights for more than 300 of those youths so they can be adopted.

"The state is not the best parent for a child, never will be," Feaver said. "Our goal must be to provide short-term, stable care and to help children reach permanent homes as soon as possible."

Feaver touted a recent federal audit that showed Florida's foster care system had improved and now had one of the best compliance rates in the nation.

The settlement will require the 15 HRS districts throughout the state to publish statistics about foster care and how many children are available for adoption in their region, Gievers said.

More than 9,000 children are in foster homes in Florida, with more than 1,600 awaiting adoption. Gievers said about 600 of the children were age 5 or younger.

"Those Floridians out there who are thinking of adopting a child but want a young one, we've got them," she said. "These kids need families. They don't need lawyers and caseworkers and counselors. They need families, good, loving, supporting families."

Records: Big bucks spent on lawmakers

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A probe into the finances of a once-powerful lobbyist convicted of cheating on his taxes is providing a revealing portrait about the business of influencing legislation.

While representing the Cleveland Clinic, a prestigious medical group, Bernie Parrish spent more than $267,000 trying to curry favor with legislators in 1987.

But Parrish, 57, reported just $3,399.11 in expenditures. He has been convicted for violating federal income tax laws and could face up to 15 years in prison.

Parrish's tax records from the late 1980s show how much money was spent trying to influence 160 members of the Florida House and Senate to pass a bill letting the Ohio clinic's doctors practice in Florida without obtaining a state license.

Records obtained by the Internal Revenue Service showed the medical organization spent $267,812.52 in getting its bill through the Legislature in 1987, the New York Times Regional Newspaper Group reported Thursday.

Parrish only reported $3,400 because most of what was spent was not required to be reported by state law, written by the very legislators who often benefit from the expenditures.

Some $250,000 was paid by the clinic in fees to Parrish and three other lobbyists. Parrish got $50,000 up front and a $100,000 bonus once the bill became law.

Other lobbyists — including Don Lamonica and Jack Cory — split $50,000 in up-front money and a $50,000 bonus.

Bonuses, or so-called contingency fees, paid to lobbyists after bills are successfully passed or killed have since been banned by law — one of the few significant lobbying reforms in recent years.

The records from Parrish and the clinic also give unprecedented detail on how legislative leaders were wined and dined. State law allows legislators to accept free meals and drinks, although they are paid a $50 daily stipend while in session.

Lobbyists have to report how much they spend on entertainment and meals for lawmakers. But the reporting is done by category, with no details on exactly how much was spent on which legislators or where.

The clinic paid $1,431 for a dinner at the private Governor's Club in Tallahassee with the clinic board and members of the Broward legislative delegation. Another $267.65 went for a dinner with then-House Speaker Jon Mills, D-Gainesville, and other House members.

Sens. Jim Scott, R-Fort Lauderdale, now Senate president, and Tom Jennings, R-Orlando, asked Parrish for a VCR for the Senate Republican Office. Using clinic funds, Parrish bought a $280 unit. A color television and stand, costing $400, also were given to the GOP office, the records show.

Cory, a lobbyist who worked with Parrish, sent in a $2,843 bill that was covered by the Cleveland Clinic. His list included a $175 meal with Scott and a guest. Scott was the prime sponsor for the clinic bill.

Cory spent $118 on flight tickets for three state representatives, including Ron Silver, now a Democratic Senator from North Miami Beach.

Rep. Jack Tobin, D-Margate, attended at least four dinners where he and other guests spent nearly $900, which was picked up by the clinic, the records show.

POLICE BRIEFS

Domestic violence arrests

● Ned Stephens Jr., 34, 25011 Lost Arrow, San Antonio, Texas was arrested by sheriff's deputies for battery. His ex-wife alleged Stephens grabbed her arm and pushed her to the floor during an argument in the 2400 block Water Street. The man admitted he grabbed her arm but said he did not push her to the floor, the arrest report stated.

● Pleasure Arnett Sutton, 22, 74 Seminole Gardens was arrested by Sanford Police Wednesday for aggravated battery after a verbal fight with her boyfriend became physical. Sutton allegedly broke flower pots around the victim then broke a quart beer bottle and attacked the man, according to the arrest report. Putting up his arms in a defensive posture, he was cut. He was treated at Central Florida Regional Hospital.

Drug arrests

City County Investigative Bureau agents conducted two undercover operations targeting street drugs Tuesday night.

● Samuel Carson, 52, 3074 Truman Blvd., Sanford was arrested for sale and delivery of a controlled substance after offering to sell crack to an undercover agent at Magnolia and DeSoto streets.

● Benjamin McCloud, 38, 1045 North St., Longwood was arrested by CCIB for sale and delivery of a controlled substance at Plumosa Avenue at Lake Mobile.

● Sanford police arrested Jeanette Ford, 26, no address listed, for possession of crack and drug paraphernalia after an officer observed what appeared to be a drug transaction in the 1800 block of W. 13th St. Wednesday between Ford and a male subject. Ford appeared to transfer something from a small lip balm-type container to the man, the investigator states. After the arrest, police found a pipe used to smoke crack on Ford and the small tube contained the drug.

License related arrests

● James Scott Richardson, 19, 1415 Windsor Ave., Longwood was arrested by Longwood police for possession of a fictitious driver license. Employees of a night spot suspected the ID was fake when the teen attempted to use it to buy alcohol and notified police. The fake ID listed Richardson's birthdate as Nov. 20, 1973 while his valid license listed Nov. 20, 1975. After being advised of his rights, Richardson told police he and some friends made the ID at Vanderbilt University where he is a student.

● John Joseph Miller, 30, 136 N. 9th St., Lake Mary was arrested by Sanford police Wednesday at 2535 S. French Ave. for resisting without violence and driving with a suspended license. Miller allegedly ran from the scene after an officer stopped him for having a headlight out at Osleola and 3arita streets. When he was apprehended, a computer check showed his license was suspended.

● Yolanda Kay Hodges, 24, Lake Monroe, was arrested by Sanford police for driving while her license was suspended at 806 Orange Avenue.

Arrested for stolen property

A man and woman from Longwood were arrested by deputies for dealing in stolen property after they attempted to sell a custom-made GI Joe dog tag which had been stolen.

Joshua Heath Simmons, 20, and Wendy Gross, 18, both of 1515 W. Marvin St., were arrested after they tried to sell two GI Joe dolls and the tag. Simmons was also arrested for retail theft and Gross faces a possession of marijuana charge when the drug was found in the glove compartment of her impounded car.

The man who made several of the custom tags to sell at a doll show, identified the pair. He alleged they were in his business shortly before he discovered the merchandise was missing.

Smith trial: Six jurors sequestered

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN
AP National Writer

UNION, S.C. — As jury selection dragged, the prosecutor in the Susan Smith case repeated he will not plea bargain but would be comfortable if she pleaded guilty and allowed the judge, not a jury, to impose sentence.

At the end of Thursday's session in Circuit Judge William Howard's courtroom, only one new juror was selected, bringing the total sequestered to six. Twelve jurors and six alternates are being sought.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope, who has sought the death penalty for Ma. Smith in the drownings of her two young sons, presented the idea of a decision by the judge while talking with reporters.

"I think Judge Howard is a fair judge. I think it would be a fair decision by Judge Howard ... I'd be comfortable," Pope said Thursday evening.

Defense lawyer David Bruck, standing nearby while Pope spoke, declined to say whether his client had considered going to the judge.

"I really don't want to comment on that and I'm not sure it was proper for anyone to comment on that," he said, apparently referring to Pope.

"All I did was state what the law is," Pope responded when contacted later.

Pope repeated he was unwilling to consider a negotiated guilty plea — even for life in prison without parole.

Without confirming plea bargain terms the defense has suggested, Bruck has said. "There's nothing new we can offer. There's nothing more."

Mrs. Smith, 23, is charged with drowning her sons, 3-year-old Michael and 14-month-old Alex. She claimed for nine days that a carjacker kidnapped the boys, then confessed on Nov. 3 that she strapped them into her car and rolled it into a lake.

On Thursday, a sixth juror was chosen, a white woman in her 50s. That brought the panel to two white women, two white men and two black men.

They were being sequestered at a motel in nearby Spartanburg after being moved from one on Union where some complained rooms were small and smelled, Union County Supervisor Donny Beitenbaugh said.

Sixteen of 40 prospective jurors interviewed through Thursday were disqualified because they said they could not consider a death sentence.

All prospective jurors have been given lists of the potential witnesses and asked if they know any of them.

Jury selection was slowed when the judge noticed that Mrs. Smith's ex-husband wasn't on the prosecution's witness list, though he may be called.

Howard then recalled the five jurors already seated and determined they did not know Smith.

He also recalled five potential jurors whom Bruck had struck from the jury pool, using half his 10 challenges, to determine whether they would have been disqualified because of a relationship with Smith.

From talking films, career in law

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — If he wanted, 91-year-old federal appeals Judge Giles S. Rich could retire and spend his days reflecting on a career in patent law that dates to the early days of that amazing invention — talking movies.

But the nation's oldest and longest-tenured federal judge still on active service is too busy refereeing a dispute over a newer innovation: VCR-plus technology for programming home video recorders.

Rich can perhaps be excused for his devotion to the federal law giving inventors exclusive rights to their creations, because he co-authored the last major revision enacted by Congress in 1952.

"The patent system was 200 years old in 1950, and I've been part of it for nearly one-third of its life," Rich noted in a recent interview.

As a young lawyer in 1929, "one of the first jobs I had was to take a stack of patents on talking moving pictures and study them and give advice to clients."

The "gimmicks and gadgets" in Rich's office give testimony to his lifelong interest in figuring out how things work.

He has an old sewing machine, the kind operated by pedal power. He has tinkered with car engines and grandfather clocks and once put together a model engine for a prop jet that still works. There's a model of the Apollo lunar module.

"I thought that was just about mankind's greatest achievement — to fly to the moon and come back," he said.

As a boy in Rochester, N.Y., Rich worked for a man who put together human skeletons. His father, Giles Willard Rich, became a patent lawyer after drafting patent applications for some of George Eastman's turn-of-the-century inventions in photography.

Rich first aimed for a career in commercial aviation, but flunked the eye test. So he turned to patent law, which he basically taught himself because the Columbia University School of Law offered no courses in that legal specialty.

The Constitution authorizes Congress to temporarily give inventors the exclusive right to their ... discoveries. "The idea is to encourage innovation through financial incentive. Who would spend the money to develop and market new inventions if someone else could immediately copy them?"

During 27 years in private legal practice, Rich helped inventors get patents on "the greatest variety of stuff you can imagine" — a dump truck, an electrical switching device, even an air-raid shelter.

But the federal law was confusing. It said only true inventions could be awarded patents, but didn't give a definition.

Folks in Washington decided it was time to rewrite the law, and Rich was one of several experts chosen for the task. He suggested the standard that still prevails: Something can be patented if it would not have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in that area.

It took years of lectures, articles and court rulings by Rich before the new standard took hold.

But what a world it opened up: A 1980 opinion drafted by Rich got the biotechnology industry going by allowing patents to be awarded to newly developed living things.

President Eisenhower had named him in 1956 as the first patent lawyer on the U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. That court was merged with another in 1982 to become the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

After 39 years, Rich has been on active status with a full caseload longer than any other current judge. And he is older than almost every other active judge in U.S. history — even Oliver Wendell Holmes retired from the Supreme Court before he turned 91.

But don't think that his age makes Rich a pushover. One lawyer who argued before him this week got an earful.

"You've just dragged this defendant through all this expensive litigation. To what purpose? You haven't presented a case," the judge said sternly but without raising his voice.

What keeps him going? An even temperament and a moderate lifestyle, say his former law clerks, but also an active interest in young people and modern things.

"He has survived so long and kept his mind intact largely by staying in discourse with bright young people," said Paul M. Janicke, a University of Houston law professor who clerked for another judge but lunched regularly with Rich.

"He feels just as comfortable with the forefront of technology as the old technology," said lawyer John Witherspoon, who clerked for Rich during the mid-1960s. "He is still very much a modern man."

Actions speak louder

Who do they think they are fooling? The Ku Klux Klan: a fine upstanding, conservative, family organization? Do they really expect us to believe that?

The Ku Klux Klan has always stood, they said, against the tyranny and oppression that keeps them from life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

What they stand for is making sure that no one who is different from them (be it in the form of race, religion or national origin) is allowed to pursue any happiness of their own.

On the surface, a gathering of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan this past Saturday in Geneva could be the participants at one of Ross Perot's "United We Stand" rallies or the "Ditto Head" listeners of Rush Limbaugh.

Why then do they meet in the back woods of Seminole County behind strong-armed security guards wearing mirrored glasses? Why do they wear T-shirts demanding "Equal Rights for Southern Whites"? Why do they don the infamous white hoods as they light up a cross against tyranny?

Certainly, minority groups are also dissatisfied with government oppression. Will the Klan meet here in Midway or in the Goldsboro district to form a coalition with those who are equally oppressed?

Grand Titan John Pipes acknowledges the Klan has earned a bad reputation over its 130 year history.

What with proud talk of lynchings, threats, cross-burnings, and even murders, their rapport with mainstream society has been poor.

Things are different now, of course, they say.

Peace, love and country music. Still, they refuse to change the name or to lose the hooded robes or to meet more openly.

As we all know, actions speak louder than words. So far, they've shown no willingness to do more than talk of their fine virtues.

Certainly any group is entitled to its privacy and to setting its own guidelines for membership.

But if they are truly trying to re-establish themselves as the Klan of the '90s and leave the infamous reputation behind while maintaining the historical fight against oppression, they will need to change much more than the propaganda. They need to change their actions. Perhaps they should recall that the Bible says "He who conceals hatred has lying lips, and he who spreads slander is a fool." (Prov. 10:18)

We don't believe their talk of strong family values and clean, wholesome fun.

When they show they can come out of the woods and make some tangible changes in their actions we might believe.

Militias and media

The media has done a great injustice to the militias and all freedom-loving people across the land. They have put words in our mouths that none have as far as I know, ever uttered. The purpose and resolve of these groups are purely defensive in nature, and have never been in the past, or to this day, meant to overthrow this government by force of arms. You in the media know this but went ahead and splattered good people with political excrement anyway.

Millions of Americans watched as the church at Waco, Texas burned to the ground and the people inside were incinerated. As an isolated incident this could have been overlooked, but it was not an isolated incident and it was not suicide any more than Vince Foster shot himself. The government lied and continues to do so with a little help from their media friends.

Our property is no longer ours, our jobs are being taken away as the government pays companies to move American factories overseas. Regulation, false and contrived environmental crises, overrun with illegal immigrants. What did you expect from the American people, the welcome wagon?

Crazy conspiracies? Who needs the New World Order? We've got HB 896 that will finish off the rights of law-abiding Americans, tap your phone, stop free speech, put you in jail for writing a letter like this one.

United Nations shock troops? Nope, don't need them either because Ms. Reno will have her federal strike force to silence any and all dissidence. Just like the communist Chinese government. If the press would tell the truth we would not be in this mess, but since they won't we must look out for ourselves, and that is what the militias are for.

By the way, media, your estimates of militia strength are off by a factor of 100 and rising.

Cringing over criminal coddling

John J. DiIulio Jr., 37, makes more common sense talking about crime than anyone I know. He is a professor at Princeton University, a Senior Fellow at the Brookings Institution and a working criminologist. He is "tough on crime," but he supports gun control and the assault weapons ban. He was born a Democrat, and he says, "I expect to die a Democrat."

Until about three weeks before the passage of the major crime legislation in 1994, he was a supporter of the bill. And then something happened that led DiIulio later to call it "a rotten legislative oyster." Here is how he describes what went on:

"I had thought the bill was a big step in the right direction, not perfect but good. I appeared on the Brinkley show and said that. Then, before the bill was passed, behind closed doors, and with many members of Congress unable even to get a copy of the bill, some of its toughest and most important parts were watered down so much as to make them almost worthless."

"They changed the fine print in the 'Truth in Sentencing Incentive Grants.' Instead of pushing the states to reform their penal codes to make violent prisoners serve at least 85 percent of time sentenced, they allowed the states to spend money in ways which do little to keep prisoners in prison longer.

"They watered down a provision to put an end to liberal federal judges issuing orders that declare a prison 'overcrowded,' which then ends up putting criminals out on the street, and letting judges run the prisons. That's the choke hold on the whole criminal justice system."

"The anti-incarceration lobby was calling the shots, acting through Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee and through the Justice Department. Janet Reno, who is the Ramsey Clark of the 1990s, and a bully, did nothing to stop it. She buys the whole line. The White House also did nothing."

And then something happened that led DiIulio later to call it "a rotten legislative oyster."

"The anti-prison people have been at this for years, trying to make Americans believe that prisons have failed and that we're not much threatened by violent criminals. The big players are the ACLU, the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, The Sentencing Project, and the Justice Project of the Edna McConnell Clark Foundation."

"Most Americans believe we have 'revolving door' justice, and that violent criminals belong in prison, where they stay incapacitated for a serious amount of time. I think they're right. Violent criminals who should be in prison are committing crimes on the street."

"In 1993, according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics data, which are the best we have, there were 11 million violent crimes committed. Only about 200,000 resulted in felony convictions, about 90 percent of those were plea-bargained, and only about 120,000 criminals ended up behind bars, where they serve less than half their terms."

"The anti-incarceration lobby believes that too many people are in prison. These are the same people who said, 'the rich get richer and the poor get prison.' They've had enormous influence on the Clinton Justice Department."

The abortion debate rages on

BOSTON — If you want to freeze-frame a single image for the Abortion '95 Yearbook, try this one: A close-up of Sen. Robert Smith and his pink plastic fetus.

For a few extraordinary minutes during the Senate's rough-had ride over Dr. Henry Foster, the New Hampshire Republican offered an inflammatory diatribe. With the fetus doll in one hand, and illustrations in the background, he ranted about "partial birth abortions."

This had about as much to do with Henry Foster as anything else that happened in the final days when the doctor's nomination and reputation became a ping-pong ball in the presidential ego match between candidates Dole and Gramm. But it was a perfect picture of the updated anti-abortion strategy in the latest phase of its trench warfare.

Using his fetus doll and his pointed scissors, Smith narrowed the cast of the moral debate down to two characters: the innocent fetus and the guilty doctor. Excuse me, the innocent child and the guilty abortionist. Or, as Smith suggested in the escalating language of the anti-abortion right: the baby and the murderer.

What was missing in this bizarre discussion? For one thing, a portrait of the real fetus. Most of the minuscule number of late abortions — four one-hundredths of 1 percent of all abortions — are not picture-perfect dolls but tragically deformed fetuses with little or no chance of life.

But the other missing part of the story was of course the pregnant woman. Her health, the real possibility that this pregnancy threatened her life, her pain at choosing to bear or abort such a deformed fetus, her decision — all were absent.

The senator didn't chastise her or call her a murderer. He ignored her. The human "container" of the pink plastic fetus simply never got into the picture.

This is what's happening now. With women's basic right to choose secured by the courts and supported by the public, the pro-life movement has switched from trying to make abortion illegal to trying to make it impossible. And the easiest target on their screen is the doctors.

One part of the strategy comes from the grass-roots level, where the word "target" is all too literal. The extremist order of the day is the terrorism and even murder of doctors like David Gunn and John Britton. It's also intimidating medical students with threatening letters and "joke books" in the mailbox: "What do you call 2,000 abortionists chained to the bottom of the sea? Not enough abortionists."

Another part of the strategy is to turn doctors into pariahs. In defeating Dr. Foster, both Dole and Gramm were collaborators, demonstrating that any doctor who provided this medical service could be disqualified from public service.

The third part is through legislation. Among the dozen or so bills rolling through Congress in the past weeks — bills that would ban military women overseas from getting an abortion with their own money, bills that would take abortion coverage out of all federal health plans, bills that would ban Medicaid payments for abortions in cases of rape and incest — two of the most clever and damaging are aimed directly at doctors.

The bill Smith supports would ban a late-abortion procedure — even if it's the safest one available — and turn doctors into criminals. If Congress can ban one medical procedure, it can, of course, ban the rest.

The other bill would undo the medical profession's abortion-training requirement for Ob-Gyns. This requirement, which already has a conscience clause for doctors who object, was established to increase the number of doctors who now how to perform abortions.

What it all adds up to is a kind of supply-side strategy. In its hardened phase, the pro-life movement seems to have given up making their case to pregnant women. They've given up on reducing the demand. They're in the business of reducing the supply.

In this climate, it's not surprising that a United States senator uses the same incendiary language — "abortionists," "murder" — as the assassins who shot David Gunn and John Britton. They are all on the same track.

When Smith and his fetus doll left the Senate podium, Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., challenged him: "If you want to outlaw abortion, if you want to make it a crime ... bring that legislation to the floor, I'll debate you toe-to-toe, and I'll win that battle."

She's right. And that's precisely why the anti-abortion leaders have shifted the battleground. It's a different struggle now. The question is whether women will be left with the hollow legal right to choose abortion and no doctor who dares to provide it.

If you want to freeze-frame a single image for the Abortion '95 Yearbook, try this one.

Hillary: Leave our jobs alone

Dear Hillary — My guess is I am probably the 53rd op-ed scribe to comment on your new column-writing venture, but if I may be so presumptuous, even this possibly can be a lesson for you:

Columnists are garrulous people. It is a requirement of the job. The day you are stumped for something to say about any subject, however shopworn, is the day you should start thinking about a different line of work, say hosting a talk show, where on a bad day all you have to do is ask a question and somebody with something to sell will fill the airwaves for you.

Other columnists have had mainly positive things to say about you, Marsha Mercer of Media General News Service griped a little bit ("I don't reform the nation's health care system ... why should Hillary invade my turf?"), but she was mostly supportive. Mary McGroarty of the Washington Post even offered some tips — ignore hecklers, defy Bill on occasion, speak up for the voiceless, spice up your writing with reporting. And she had a hint for the days you draw blanks: Write about Socks.

Well, forgive me Hillary, but I get paid to be a sourball — a task that comes very naturally to me, by the way. Therefore, in keeping with my mission, as well as my inclination, I have to say I resent the hell out of your new endeavor.

Do you have any idea how expensive newsprint is these days? Editors all over America are trimming features to save paper and make ends meet. What do you think they're going to bump to make room for you? Not Snoopy, I can tell you. Or Calvin and Hobbes either. No sir, it's going to be a poor, hard-working columnist. You are going to put people out of work, o h m a s.

Speaking of Himself, I know you said when you announced that you would be following in the footsteps of famous columnist Eleanor Roosevelt that the product would be political and was not timed to help out in Bill's re-election effort. You said this on a Monday. On Tuesday, the Clinton-Gore '96 machine broadcast the first TV ads of the campaign in two dozen markets across the country. Looks awfully suspicious to me, Hillary.

I can't believe you are desperate for exposure. Everything you do is newsworthy. Snap your fingers, the press comes running. So why do you have to kick a columnist out of work?

If you are in need of bigger ego boosts, then for heaven's sake, do something that would really get you some notice. Challenge Rush Limbaugh to a debate. Co-host Crossfire opposite John Sununu. Go on Letterman and do a stupid human trick. Ape the Old Man and go on Leno and play an instrument — personally, I think it would be fun to see a first lady banging a xylophone — or go on MTV and talk about your knickers.

I don't know if you're aware of the problems attendant to the job, but there are a few. Deadlines, for one. Editors for another. You are going to be edited, Ms. First Lady. Hah!

Then there is the matter of your CADD rating.

That's CADD, as in Columnists Against Darned Deceivers, only in your case, so as not to appear too disrespectful, we'll call it Columnists Against Danged Deceivers. This is a public service organization I started last year to help readers and viewers discern the difference between authentic pundits and ersatz ones. Between the diamonds and the zircons, so to speak.

Columnists are garrulous people. It is a requirement of the job.

NASA's famous room relinquishes control to new $250 million center

By MIKE DRAGO
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The slim neckties, cigars and buzz cuts vanished years ago, but the flight control room of Apollo 13 probably would have recognized Mission Control — until now.

NASA switched command of shuttle Discovery to its new $250 million Mission Control Center on Thursday, marking the first time in 30 years that a U.S. spacecraft is not being commanded from one of two flight control rooms in Houston's original Mission Control.

Veteran astronaut Story Musgrave made the first call from the new room Thursday night to Discovery after Johnson Space Center director Carolyn Hunton cut an inaugural white ribbon to make it official. The shuttle had blasted off earlier in the day from Cape Canaveral, Fla., and released a communications satellite.

"That old mission control center is an icon. It's been a symbol for billions of people of humanity's pursuit in space," Musgrave told the five astronauts.

"The next 30 years, hopefully, will carry us just as far as the last 30 years did," replied shuttle commander Terence "Tom" Henricks.

This morning aboard Discovery, Henricks displayed a plaque commemorating the new control center. "It's not the rooms that make the difference, it's the people that man those rooms," he said.

Aside from better aesthetics, such as improved lighting and spaciouly arranged gray-blue consoles, the most noticeable difference between the two centers is the way engineers monitor information streaming down from shuttle computers.

The old center relies on a lumbering and inflexible — but highly reliable — mainframe computer system. Controllers sit for hours staring at monochrome displays, rows of numbers, flashing lights and backlit buttons designed in the 1960s.

A network of 200 generic but powerful computer workstations, each able to perform 120 million operations per second, is the core of the new center. Controllers now have color monitors with advanced graphic displays and custom software that allows access to the latest data with the click of a mouse.

NASA says the new center will save money in the long run — despite its $250 million price tag — because it's cheaper to operate and maintain.

The old control rooms, with their tiers of cramped consoles, were first used during Gemini 4 in 1965. Before that, spacecraft were controlled from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The rooms and their inhabitants — male flight controllers in white shirts and black ties, most of them chomping on cigars or puffing cigarettes — became familiar to millions of television viewers during the Apollo moon landings of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Hollywood made Mission Control famous to younger generations in the current blockbuster film "Apollo 13."

In recent years, some female flight controllers have joined the ranks, no smoking has become the rule and the men's shirts and ties are often more colorful.

block of W. Fourth Street in Sanford arguing with the driver of the silver car, raced back to his house where his children were covering inside. Two bullets had crashed through a front window.

The children and Felton's sister, who also lives in the house, were all uninjured. Neither had Felton been struck.

"It was a little frightening," a neighbor said. "This is such a quiet, quiet neighborhood."

Felton was not available for comment this morning and Sanford Police are not sure what he and the driver of the car were arguing about when the shots were fired.

Off. Mike Pitt did find the other man, however.

Willie Melton Jarrels Jr., 23, was arrested a few moments later in the silver Nissan, at 28 Castle Brewer Court.

He was arrested for aggravated assault and two counts of shooting into an occupied dwelling.

"The second charge of shooting into an occupied dwelling came when one of the shots went into a house a block away where Lottie Lester-Kelly and her baby were watching TV," Cmdr. Dennis Whitmire of the Sanford Police Department said.

Neither mother nor child was injured in the shooting.

Whitmire said the shooting was an isolated incident and that there haven't been an increase in the number of shootings in recent months.

"No, this was just two men arguing," he said. "It was not a drive-by shooting or anything like that."

A neighbor who said she was cleaning her house at the time of the shooting said she ran to the door as soon as she heard the shots.

"It's a nice quiet neighborhood," she said. "We haven't had anything like this before."

The neighbor described Felton and his sister as "nice and very clean."

"They are just a nice quiet family," she said. "It's such a shock."

Whitmire said the investigation is continuing. Another arrest may come in the case today.

Study: AIDS treatments do not prolong survival

By RANDI HUTTER EPSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Patients in advanced stages of AIDS respond better to treatment drugs than do those who start taking medicine immediately after becoming infected, a new British study found.

The lead investigator, Dr. Mark Poznansky of St. Mary's Hospital in London, said Thursday he hopes the results will provoke debate among experts about "what we are really doing for patients with medical interventions."

In other words: Are the side effects of treatment, such as nausea and vomiting, worth it?

The study of 436 patients, to be published in Saturday's British Medical Journal, implies that AIDS drugs delay symptoms but do not prolong survival, researchers said.

The question of whether and when to administer AIDS drugs has vexed both doctors and patients, who during the past few years have come to realize that neither a cure nor a vaccine is imminent.

"I think it is pretty clear that there is a benefit but it is small and short-term," said Dr. Henry Sacks, head of the AIDS clinical trials division of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine. "I think this study is consistent with that."

The British investigators traced 339 patients who had been taking a variety of AIDS drugs for about three years before getting full-blown AIDS. They compared their survival rate to that of 97 patients who did not seek help until they became very ill.

Those who got treatment early suffered fewer AIDS-related infections. Yet once they got sick they died, on average, a year sooner than those who did not take any drugs until severe symptoms began.

Sacks said the overall conclusion are similar to findings that emerged in an overview of AIDS studies he published in The Annals of Internal Medicine last month.

No names of persons having already submitted their resumes to the chamber have been released.

Regarding another change, the chamber's Administrative Assistant Edwina Midkiff, who also resigned, has been replaced.

Andrea Farmer, who had served as treasurer, director, and chairman of the Tourism and Image Committees for the chamber, recently submitted her resignation to those posts. Farmer has left her professional occupation as marketing director at the Central Florida Zoological Park, after accepting a position as marketing director with the Orlando Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber President Adamson has subsequently appointed Sandra Glenn to replace Farmer as treasurer.

Farr has announced that Javier Falcon has taken over that position, as of June 26. "He and his wife are lifelong Sanford residents and both are Seminole High School graduates," Farr said. "As such, Falcon is already familiar with the area, and jumped right in at this new job."

Midkiff had served with the chamber for over four years.

Schools

are starting classes a week later than other elementary schools. They will open their doors to students on July 24.

The students will, however, attend classes 15 days longer over the course of the school year than their counterparts at other schools.

The teachers will be in an extra week of in-service training next week to learn new teaching strategies and ways of teaching youngsters with special academic needs.

"It's very exciting," said Dr. Rita Ramsey, principal of Pine

Crest. "We are looking forward to a great year."

Ramsey said the teachers and administrators are putting a renewed emphasis on the basic skills that students need to build a strong academic foundation, but that will not be the sole focus of their efforts.

A concerted effort is being made to go out into the community to meet the families of the students and to see where they live.

Both Pine Crest and Midway draw from a large geographic area and a variety of socioeconomic strata.

"We have to get out there and get the families involved in the school and in the students' education," Ramsey said.

The idea of educating the "whole student" is nothing new, but this new effort at breaking the mold is different in the fact there is an extra emphasis on reading, language arts and math.

"Those are the three subject areas we are concentrating on this year," Ramsey said. "We feel this is where our students need to improve the most."

The additional 10 days of classes will be used to be sure the students get the most possible instruction and that there is time for remediation when it is needed.

Hopkins clinches by winning finale

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Glasurit Paint gave it their best shot, but Hopkins Meats had enough to hold on to clinch the championship of the Sanford Recreation Thursday Men's Slowpitch Softball League at Pinchurst Park.

Hopkins Meats (10-2) took leads of 8-0 and 9-1 in the game it needed to win, but Glasurit Paint (2-9) almost snatched victory from the jaws of defeat, closing to within 10-8 and having runners on first and third in the bottom of the seventh inning before a ground out ended the game.

The win proved to be very important for Hopkins as Nobles Construction (9-3) also held off a challenge by No Escape to win 13-9.

In the other game, all 12 players who appeared in the game for No Escape (4-8) scored in a 17-10 triumph over Creek (4-7).

Blowouts close out Chase race

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — The Sanford Recreation Thursday Men's Slowpitch Softball League at Chase Park came to a close with a relatively uncompetitive evening as all three winners cruised to easy victories.

League champion M.A. Erectors (10-2) finished the season with a split of its doubleheader, losing to Baskin-Robbins/Florida Sport Wear (4-6) 11-6 before clubbing Wayne Denach Inc. (5-5) 20-2. Ken Rummel Chevrolet (4-8) ended on a two-game win streak by dumping Beer:30 (5-6) 19-2.

Baskin-Robbins' win was not as close as the score indicated as the winners led 11-2 in the fifth inning before M.A. Erectors mounted a small rally. The other two games were decided early, both games being halted by the 12-run mercy rule in the fifth inning.

CLERMONT — On the whole, Oviedo Little League enjoyed a 4-for-6 run through the District 14 All-Star tournaments played over the last two weeks.

In the fastpitch softball district playoffs, which finished up last week, Oviedo's All-Stars swept the 9-10, Major (11-12), and Senior (13-15) district championships.

This week, Oviedo teams made it to the final game in three different age groups of the District 14 baseball tournaments host by South Lake Little League, but came away with just one crown.

Windermere finished on top in the Seniors (14-15) Division, beating Apopka 2-0 in the championship. Also qualifying for the district semifinals were Casselberry and Rolling Hills.

According to District 14 administrator Chip Ford, the four baseball champions advance to the Section III tournament next weekend at Gibsonton's East Bay Little League, which is located southeast of Tampa off Interstate 75 north of the Hillsborough-Manatee county line.

Section III also includes Districts 3 (Orange and Osceola counties), 4 (Polk), 6 (Tampa), and 13 (eastern Hillsborough County).

Play in the Big League (16-18) Tournament is scheduled to begin on Thursday, July 20, with the other four age groups cranking up on Friday, July 21.

The Section III champions advance to the state tournament.

Shopping for light bulbs How to make wise buying decisions

Light bulbs are such a frequently purchased item that most are bought by shoppers who give little or no thought to comparison shopping for them. Yet, prices vary greatly. For example, a standard 40, 60, 75 or 100 watt light bulb of an unknown brand is sometimes sold for as little as 15 to 25 cents on special sales. Meanwhile its counterpart of a well-known brand may regularly sell for up to 1,000 percent more ($1.50).

Most shoppers have never read all of the information printed on a light bulb package — information which federal law requires to be placed there. This is information the shopper needs to make wise buying decisions.

Most shoppers think they are buying light bulbs by the amount of light the bulb will give; in reality, they buy bulbs by the amount of electricity the bulb will use. Wattage is a measure of energy consumption, not amount of light.

Shoppers need to learn to read labels to seek reliable information and to use this information as a basis for purchasing decisions.

Light bulbs are labeled by the amount of energy needed for operation, not by the amount of light given off by the bulb.

CONSUMER FOCUS
BARBARA HUGHES/GREGG

Although there is some correlation between wattage and lumen of light emitted, there is considerable difference in the number of lumens of light given off by different brands of bulbs of the same wattage. (Example: one 100 watt bulb of one brand may give off 1320 lumens of light while another brand emits 1750 lumens of light).

There is a correlation between the amount of light given and the expected life of an incandescent light bulb. In most instances the more lumens of light given off the shorter the hours of use (life) of the bulb. Incandescent bulbs are available with several different types of finishes, including: coated (light, whitish coating to reduce glare); soft white (heavier white finish — usually inside bulb) to diffuse light and help avoid eye strain; tinted pastel coatings (example: yellow to provide light without attracting bugs); clear glass (no coating — usually less expensive and good for use with lamps that have glass reflections or globes).

The light in an incandescent bulb is produced by resistance to the flow of electricity through a tungsten filament placed inside a glass bulb filled with an inert gas (a gas that will not burn).

On an average, lower wattage bulbs give fewer lumens of light per watt than bulbs of higher wattage. Example: a 40 watt bulb of one brand gives 440 lumens of light (11 lumens per watt) compared with a 100 watt bulb of the same brand which give 1750 lumens of light (17.5 lumens per watt).

It is very important to use the type and size light bulb recommended by the manufacturer of the lamp or light fixture. A bulb of the wrong size can pose a safety hazard. For example, do not use a 100 watt bulb in a lamp that specifies a 60 watt bulb. The wires used in a lamp or fixture may not be able to safely carry the 100 watts of electricity needed for operation, or the heat from the larger bulb may damage the fixture or lamp. Fluorescent lights are very different from incandescent lights. They operate on different principles. Fluorescent is more energy efficient. Fluorescent tubes are coated with a phosphor that transmit ultraviolet energy into visible light by molecular vibrations. The amount of light given off by the fluorescent is determined by the length of the tube. Also, the longer the tube the more the wattage.

Fluorescents use about 20 percent of the energy required by incandescent bulbs to produce the same amount of light. For example, a 20 watt fluorescent would give about the same amount of light given off by a 100 watt incandescent bulb. Most fluorescent lights use fluorescent tubes, which are sold by length. Although fluorescent tubes cost more than incandescent bulbs, they last about 10 times as long.

Reading improves relationship of dad, daughters

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two daughters, ages 2 and 4, and the wife of a man whose main interests are television, hunting and fishing. He loves his children, but spends very little time developing his relationship with the girls.

A wonderful thing happened a few months ago that I want to share. I am a firm believer that a child's education is not the sole responsibility of the school.

I took my girls to the library (their first visit), and we brought home an armful of books on animals. They started asking questions about the books. The next thing I knew, the girls were sitting in my husband's lap, and he was reading to them.

Much to my surprise, this has resulted in not only less television, but a much improved relationship between the girls and their dad. Now he reads to them every night! (He has even taken them to the library.)

A further benefit is that it has renewed my husband's interest in reading as well. Abby, keep reminding your readers how important reading is. Some television is educational, but selective reading can be far more beneficial.

A REWARDED READER, FRESNO, CALIF.
DEAR READER: May I quote myself?
 "If I could give young people one piece of advice, it would be read, read, read! In reading, you will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure. Our libraries are filled with knowledge and joy, and it's all there — free for the taking. The person who does not read is no better off than the person who cannot read." — Van Buren (1980)

DEAR ABBY: I have often read letters in your column from bereaved parents and other relatives regarding the insensitive and oftentimes cruel remarks made by others. May I add one?

My only daughter died of breast cancer. She was 36. A month later, when I went to my doctor for a routine checkup, I mentioned that my daughter had died last month, and I was still grieving for her.

My doctor said (and I quote him verbatim), "I know exactly how you feel; I had to have one of my little dogs put to sleep last month."

Needless to say, I changed doctors. APPALLED IN SEATTLE
DEAR APPALLED: Your doctor — like many others — regards his pets as his children. Although he was very insensitive, he meant no harm. Forgive him.

Daughter still depressed over mother's suicide 5 years ago

DEAR MARY: It's been five years since my mother committed suicide at age 62. I can honestly say that not one day has gone by since then that I haven't asked myself what I could have done to stop her or how I could have missed the obvious signs that something was very wrong. The day of her death she was arrested for shoplifting a sweater she could have easily paid for. They let her off with a warning, but that evening she took one of my dad's revolvers, drove to the parking lot of a vacant shopping center and shot herself. Her note said that she couldn't face the family after bringing such shame to us, but that would have been easy compared to the pain and guilt we've felt since she killed herself.

I feel like I should be over it by now but I still ask myself why this had to happen and sometimes I even find myself really mad at my mom for doing what she did and putting the rest of the family through all this pain. How can I get a handle on this and get on with my life?

GRIEVING DAUGHTER
DEAR GRIEVING: People almost never kill themselves for a single reason, but most experts

FAMILY COUNSELOR

believe that they have lost hope that whatever their circumstances are will ever change for the better. In "Suicide: The Final Solution," Paul Quinnett explains, "To be without hope is to be despairing of any future, of any relief, any cure and of any promise that things will ever change for the better. It is from this frame of mind ... that thoughts of suicide take the shape of an acceptable, if final solution."

Depression is also usually a factor, although a person needn't be completely despondent to attempt or complete suicide.

Other incidents often linked to suicide attempts include major losses through death, divorce or being fired, or other financial setbacks. An important fact for your family to be aware of is that approximately 25 percent of those who commit suicide have a relative who took his or her own life, and alcohol is involved in almost half of all suicides. Physical illness may lead to a perception of suicide as a way of escaping suffering.

Regardless of what factors contributed to your mother's suicide, it is time for you to release yourself from any feelings of guilt or responsibility for her acts. In order for anyone to have helped her, she would have had to let someone know she needed help. If you find yourself continuing to feel intense grief or guilt, you should discuss your concerns with a mental health professional.

Church celebrates anniversary

By MARVA HAWKINS
Herald Columnist

SANFORD - New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church, E. 10th Street, celebrated its 56th year of Christian worship service on Sunday, July 2.

The theme for the occasion was, "What Are We Seeking For?" based on Matthew 6:33.

St. John Missionary Baptist Church gave birth to New Bethel in 1932. The Rev. J.H. Henderson organized the church at the home of Lucille Brown, located at Cypress Ave.

They were originally members of St. John.

Founding members were the Rev. and Mrs. J.H. Henderson, Patsience Johnson, Pete Tillman, Charlotte Tillman, Ruby Bellamy, the Rev. E.A. Rucker, Deana Rucker and daughter, the Rev. Mack, the Rev. W.G. Mickell, Pearl Mickell and daughter, Theresa.

The church was previously located at 606 E. 11th St.

It then moved to a store front on Celery Avenue due to condemnation of the building. Another problem was overcrowding and the use of kerosene for lights.

In 1934 the Church located at 506 E. 11th St. was also condemned.

New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church

New Bethel then shared the CME Church located at Sanford Avenue and 8th St.

After a few years the pastor and members purchased an old house from Chase and Company.

The title was transferred and the church was later established under the pastorage of the Rev. C.J. Hurston and was later reconstructed under Deacon W.G. Mickell, E.R. Rucker and Pete Tillman.

In 1939 the New Bethel Church building was completed at the corner of 9th Street and Hickory Avenue.

Trustees of the church were Pete Tillman, Walter Eason, R.L. Peterkin and E.R. Rucker.

Ministers who have served a pastorage at New Bethel, from its inception until now, have been the Rev. J.H. Henderson, the Rev. C.J. Hurston and the Rev. D.T. Sutton.

Sutton remained at the church until his death in 1947. The Rev.

E.W. Wooten served until 1953. The Rev. P.M. Mitchell served as pastor until 1969.

In 1970 the Rev. T.D. Frazier was called as pastor and the members purchased two parcels of land located at 10th Street and Hickory Ave.

A new sanctuary was started and a parking lot and more construction began.

The Rev. Robert Doctor accepted the call to New Bethel in 1979. Under his leadership the new sanctuary was completed and the membership increased by 62 members.

This was accomplished within 14 months of his being named pastor.

He later resigned the as pastor in December 1985.

In January 1986 the Rev. William Lewis was called to pastor New Bethel Missionary Baptist Church where he is still faithfully serving.

Great growth was been seen at New Bethel in the 56 years of service to the community of Sanford.

The history can be expressed through the song that one of the old time members, Deacon Cleveland DeBose, loves to sing "Down Through the Years, the Lord Has Been to Me."

Ask the preacher questions

Question: A reader in DeBary wrote, "Dear Tony, I have worked with a man who is admittedly homosexual. I was studying the Bible one day and he said, 'I am a Born Again Christian, too.'"

He said the Holy Spirit talks to him. He said the Law changed from the Old Testament and now we just believe in Christ and all our sins are forgiven... Please help me explain how wrong and misled he is."

Answer: You are to be commended for your concern for your co-worker, but it is a difficult thing to destroy the misconception of others. We all labor under the power of Satan who deceives and lies to the human heart.

The word of God is the right source for removing these deceptions yet we must be willing to believe what we read. Misconceptions are difficult to uproot because most are based upon partial truth.

It is true that the Old Testament Law is no longer in force, but it has been replaced by the Law of Christ (Galatians 6:2). Christ mandates the conduct of Christians. If we love him, Jesus tells us that we must keep his commandments (John 14:15).

Jesus honored and emphasized God's natural order of society. He taught his disciples that God created one man and one woman to be mates for life. Sin has severely damaged the ideal plan for man's happiness, but God calls his disciples to pursue the ideal (Romans 12:2).

Be patient and teach with humility the wonders of God's grace and forgiveness. Continue to share from God's word. The Bible must be the source of what we believe, not just the proof. This would help resolve the misconceptions.

Tony Black is the minister for the Sanford Church of Christ. He will answer any Bible related questions by writing to him at 800 N. French Ave., Sanford, FL 32773.

A Christian Mother

God gives us many gifts,
But for above all others,
The first and best He gives us
Is the gift of a Christian mother.

Her head bows over the scriptures
Teaching children from God's word.
Her hands are always busy
Doing service for her Lord.

Whenever her children need her
They know she's always there.
Her beauty is in the strength of faith
That she daily finds in prayer.

Her children love and bless her,
And in their lives we see
The lessons of the Savior
That were learned in mother's love.

Parental example is important

SANFORD - A poem recently came my way and it not hangs on my refrigerator reminding me of the strong influence my life can have over my children.

Countless prayers were requested and offered for my daughter and her recent surgery. God was good and blessed her with good health and a quick recovery.

We prayed together as we often do about trials or triumphs in life. It was exciting for me to see how they responded to God answering a prayer and spoke to friends about it. It was as if they had placed their wishes to a magic genie and they were granted.

Like the poem it's important to remember that children see our example of daily time with God and service to others. A phrase comes to mind, "Our life is the only Bible that some people read."

Children Learn What They Live is another poem that is power-packed for a parent striving to raise moral children. What an awesome task parents have in this day and age to drug-proof, encourage abstinence and discourage poor judgement.

Proverbs 22:6 says, "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." There is a fine line in sheltering our young and showing them the real world through the eyes of our Lord.

Children Learn What They Live

- If children live with criticism...they learn to condemn.
- If children live with hostility...they learn to fight.
- If children live with ridicule...they learn to be shy.
- If children live with shame...they learn to feel guilty.
- If children live with tolerance...they learn to be patient.
- If children live with encouragement...they learn confidence.
- If children live with praise...they learn to appreciate.
- If children live with fairness...they learn justice.
- If children live with security...they learn to have faith.
- If children live with approval...they learn to like themselves.
- If children live with acceptance and friendship...they learn to find love in the world.

How serious is Barrett's disease?

DEAR DR. GOTT: A good friend was recently diagnosed with Barrett's disease and he said something about the acids damaging his throat. Can you enlighten me about the seriousness of this malady? What is the recommended treatment?

DEAR READER: Reflux, the abnormal backwash of gastric acid into the esophagus, causes heartburn, bloating and indigestion: symptoms that may be indistinguishable from those of peptic ulcer. Reflux is commonly, but not always, a complication of hiatal hernia, a weakness of the sphincter that prevents stomach acid from flowing in a reverse direction. Reflux is usually treated by elevating the head of the bed at night, avoiding certain foods (such as coffee, alcohol, fats and chocolate), stopping smoking, and using antacids (such as Gelsul) or prescription drugs (Zantac and others) that reduce the production of stomach acid. Despite this therapy, however, the acid may chronically irritate the lower esophagus, leading to a condition called Barrett's metaplasia. This pre-malignant condition is potentially serious because it may not respond to the medical treatment that I mentioned. Surgery may be necessary to remove the abnormal tissue and prevent cancer.

Barrett's metaplasia is diagnosed by endoscopy (visual examination of the esophagus) and biopsy. DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife has advanced melanoma in the liver and is currently undergoing Interleukin 2/antibody treatment at a teaching center. Are alternative protocols available? DEAR READER: Melanoma is a highly malignant skin cancer which usually must be treated by extensive surgery to remove the growth and surrounding tissue that may harbor undetected melanoma cells. Unfortunately, even with apparently successful excision, the cancerous cells may metastasize (spread), to involve internal organs, such as the liver. Because metastatic melanoma is usually resistant to traditional therapy - making the outlook grim - many teaching hospitals are experimenting with drug combinations in an attempt to find a cure. Copyright 1995 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder
Good bridge players think of the right thing at the right moment. They don't wait until the post-mortem to find the winning bid or play. As Thomas Jefferson almost phrased it, the right man is in the right place at the right time. In today's deal, West overlooked a critical inference and allowed an apparently impossible game to make. That South hand, with its conspicuous lack of aces, is a little light for the jump to three no-trump; but it is a little heavy for an invitational two no-trump. When you smell a game, bid a game. West led the spade three: five, ace, two. Back came the spade nine. After South covered with the queen, West correctly ducked. If he had won, he couldn't have returned a spade without conceding an extra trick in the suit. South played a diamond to dummy's queen and continued with the diamond 10. Thinking South was trying to establish his suit, West ducked both of these tricks. But now South ran his six club tricks to make the contract. Whenever there is a long, almost solid suit sitting in the dummy like that and declarer attacks a different suit, it is cents to crossants that the suit is solid; that declarer has the missing honor. So, West should have gobbled the first (or second) diamond trick with the ace and switched to a heart, hoping East had that ace. Then East can lead the spade six through South's jack-seven to West's king-10. This gives the defense five tricks: three spades, one heart and one diamond. Phillip Alder's new book, "Get Smarter at Bridge," is available.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bada Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
July 15, 1995
Your best opportunities in the year ahead could come from your present endeavors. Instead of scouting for greener pastures, build a strong foundation from where you are. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your attention span could have definite limitations today and might cause you to make mistakes concerning your work. If you catch yourself drifting, shelve the job until later. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're indifferent today, you might come out on the short end of the stick. Make sure the arrangement isn't tilted in favor of your cohorts. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do not make commitments impulsively today. What is easy to agree to now might be very difficult to comply with later. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In financial and career matters today, you're likely to be alert to only small benefits while larger opportunities slip past. Think in both pounds and pennies. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might prove very competent at managing situations for others today, but you may not be so adept at handling your own resources. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should trust your common sense when handling tricky developments today, but trying to look good for others, you might feel tempted to ignore your insights. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you're trying to interest others in a venture or enterprise today, it would be best to underplay it instead of exaggerating its potential. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Remain optimistic today, but also be realistic about your hopes and expectations. Your options look good, but they might not be as good as you envision them. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Luck should not be used as a substitute for hard work and common sense today. Fate tends to be fickle while your reasoning can usually be relied upon. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not make any changes today if a promising matter is presently running smoothly. Your twists could end up at a cul-de-sac instead of an open road. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be on guard in your involvements with a dependent friend today. You might be drawn into something in a small way, only to discover that it's quite complex. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A friend with good intentions might make a commitment today on your behalf without your consent. Prepare to nip this in the bud. Copyright 1995 by NEA Inc.
