The Value Of Washing And Pre - Cooling Celery

The greatest loss to the retailer handling celery in the "rough" is from sand cuts. Yellow spots develop on the outer ribs and form sand cuts on the "rough pack" necessitating stripping in the market and consequent loss to the retailer.

Through the Dutton method of washing and pre-cooling, celery is thoroughly washed and stripped before packing, making a much more valuable package than the old method of field grade and pack as it is the NET WEIGHT of solid celery that fixes the value of a crate of celery.

Government weights show Dutton Washed- and Pre-Cooled packages weigh more than the average sand-filled field pack.

Efficiency Of The Dutton Plant Methods

The Dutton Plants have been developed from ACTUAL necessity—the two large central plants, one at Oviedo and the other at Sanford, permit greater economies in washing and pre-cooling celery than would smaller plants distributed throughout the celery district.

From every angle of efficient and economical operation the central plants of the Dutton Celery Pre-Cooling Company serve both shipper and receiver better than any other present day plan.

Plant Capacity

The capacity of the Sanford plant is 30 car loads of washed and pre-cooled celery a day while the Oviedo plant is half the capacity of the Sanford plant.

Immediately following the washing and packing of the Dutton, Osceola, Sonny Boy, Vican and other brands of celery used for the washed package, a system of conveyors deliver the crates to the pre-cooling chamber. This room has 720 individual crate containers sufficiently large to immerse the crate in circulating ice water for 30 minute periods. 12 crates per minute or 720 crates or two carloads per hour is the capacity of the pre-cooling chamber.

The pre-cooling department can work day and night, cooling and loading continuously at the rate of a car every 30 minutes. Reduced to the basis of ice making, the cooling system in the Sanford plant develops 192 tons daily.

The Risen One—The God of

ye slew and hanged on a tree.

THE MAN OF FIFTY

"I'm fifty years of age," said he,
"and so I have to go,
This job is for a younger man.
I've grown a trifle slow,
They want a youth who hasn't learned the things I've come to know."

"Oh, I am wise in sorrow now,
I know how close are tears,
I know the joy that is worth while; the false when it appears."

"The man or woman learns a lot
who lives through fifty years.
I'm far more tolerant than I was; I'm not so quick to blame."

"I've cast my prejudices away, my temper doesn't flame
Any more the way it used to do when youth was mine to claim."

"I have acquired in fifty years
the calm which age bestows,
I know what disappointment is
and how it comes and goes.

"I've also learned very much dearly our friends and foes,
But that is wisdom I presume that business cannot use.

"At fifty days for constant strife
A man is apt to lose
And so to keep in this pace a younger man they choose."

Some More Facts

As this is the last day of "Know Florida Week", we will celebrate it by giving a few more of the interesting facts about Florida as prepared by the Florida state chamber of commerce. There are thousands of these facts, only a few of which most of us would know off hand, but all of which we should know. Here is a very small list of them:

"Iron ore is found in Levy county, near Bronson. The Confederacy is said to have utilized this iron during the Civil War for the manufacture of cannon.

"St. Petersburg established the first open air post office in America.

"The tangelo is a cross between the tangerine and the grapefruit.

"The limequat is a cross between lime and kumquat.

"The peat in the muck soils of Florida holds tremendous fuel possibilities.

"Daytona Beach is known as the finest ocean beach in the world.

"Key West has the southernmost golf course in the United States.

"Spanish moss is an air plant.

"The egret is a Florida wading bird prized for its plumage.

"The blooming of yellow jasmine is the first harbinger of spring in Florida.

"Madleny, county seat of Baker County although southwest of Jacksonville, is only five miles from the Georgia state line. Examine the map.

"Florida observes both eastern and central time. The dividing line is the Apalachicola river.

"If one traveled northward from Palm Beach and stopped on the latitude of Jacksonville he would be in the Atlantic ocean about 60 miles east of the Gateway City.

"The Marquis de La Fayette upon his visit to this country in 1825 was given an entire township in Florida by the state in appreciation for his assistance to the colonists during the Revolution. The township adjoins the City of Tallahassee on the east.

"Jefferson County and Monticello were settled by kinsmen and friends of Thomas Jefferson from Virginia just 100 years ago.

"Tupelo honey, produced in the Apalachicola river valley, is the only honey known that does not granulate or become rancid."

New Markets

The position of Florida as a sort of stepping stone to South America is one of its most convincing indications that a great era of prosperity awaits it in the future. American business men are constantly looking for new fields to exploit and new markets to which they can export their products. They find both of these in South America.

"One reason why American business men must devote ever-increasing attention to the export market," says the Tallahassee Democrat, "is set forth graphically by Theodore M. Knapp in the current issue of the Magazine of Wall Street.

"In the past, says Mr. Knapp, American business always had a rapidly-growing home market, due to the constant increase in population. Between 1900 and 1910, for instance, population increased by 13,000,000 or about 21 per cent; between 1910 and 1920 it increased by 16,000,000.

"But immigration has been cut off, and the birth rate is falling. In a short time our population will increase at the rate of less than a million a year, and by 1950 we will quite possibly have a population stabilized at about 160,000,000.

"Yet productivity is constantly increasing. Mr. Knapp points out that since the home market is not increasing in proportion any more, American business must develop its own markets abroad—or suffer the same sort of depression that has overtaken agriculture."

Inquiry Answered

"Jesus Teaching About Himself" is the subject of this lesson. It covers several topics wherein Jesus speaks either of Himself and His work or reveals Himself as the Messiah of God. Matthew writes about the answer Jesus gave to John in prison; His denunciation of His rejecting His thanksgiving to the Father; His cure on the Sabbath day; and further answers to His foes. We can only consider briefly a few of these outstanding facts on which something particular is taught about Himself by our Lord.

The World's Window

By Pierre Van Paassen

This vast world of ours is a small place after all. This is a fine and shipwrecked platitude we know, but this is true nevertheless, the following incidents, or accidents, rather, may serve to illustrate: One raw day in July, 1918, a reconnoitering patrol, of which we formed part, was sent out to see whether it would be feasible for the brigade to cross the Cambrai Canal that day without too much trouble. Trench warfare was over at that time. The patrol set out, walking past the advance posts in the pitch dark, until within about 100 yards of the canal bank, and then proceeded the rest of the way more warily, that is to say, in the manner of the beasts of the field, on hands and knees. Before we reached the water, a suddenly sickly dawn surprised us. The enemy also spotted us and opened up with a machine gun, which the Sergeant aware was the one that had been taken from us the day before. Two of the patrol were promptly hit somewhere in the legs. They made a quick round about and, leaning on each other's shoulders, started back for the line again. "Well, goodby, be brave today," we all yelled, and the gunner came up and shot us again. We managed to drag the boy out, but as we were dragging them in the lorry, a shell came over from Germany, quick fire and shell. The Germans apparently knew the location of that road, crossing better than we did. Mind you, the flying shrapnel went in mid-air, pieces of the car's machinery. Personally we were fine in the air and then landed backward in a cloud of steel. The somewhat numbered us. One of the patrol, among them the first two wounded, was killed outright.

We revived sufficiently a little later to see some Germans looking over the debris of our car. They had crossed the canal. Helped by some of them, the remnant of the patrol was brought under a nearby bush and hidden. And there we found ourselves sitting in a corner, waiting on the darkness of fate which had made prisoners of us. Fighting was going on outside and from time to time the German stretcher bearers brought in some of their own wounded. They went on till nightfall. When it got dark the place was quite full of wounded and the British had rebounded. Some Germans of the Intelligence Service came in late and questioned us. One of them was an amiable fellow, who distributed good cigars. "They're from the dock of a Russian Grand Duke," he said. He also said he thought we would be evacuated that night if possible and shipped to a prison hospital in Germany.

At last, that moment, as he spoke there was heard a turning of the engine of a truck on the driveway. Four or five soldiers crowded in the opening, bayoneted. They were Canadians. They were, what shall we say, a little exhilarated. Canada served him to the troops. He was poked stuff. The foreman of the soldiers had a mouthful of tobacco and some of his partner was missing. His shirt was in tatters. We immediately learned that they belonged to the Canadian Mounted Rifles, who, upon reaching France, had had their horses taken away, a fact which they had had cause of them to transfer their spurs from their feet to their elbows in order to be able to scratch their backs the better. Anyway, here we were, liberated after having been virtual prisoners for the better part of a day. And the tables turned on the Germans who were with us in the old farmhouse.

Now the rest of the story. The other day we were told a spell on an easy chair behind a sidewalk kiosk on the Boulevard Montparnasse in Paris, when we noticed a gentleman who kept on eyeing us so strenuously that we almost grew uncomfortable under his stare. Finally the man came over and holding out an open cigar case, he said: "Perhaps you will have another cigar?" We looked at the man frankly amazed. But as he smiled most genially, we proceeded to give ourselves to one of his gold-handled cheroots. While we did so he added: "You remember Beppe? I brought you a cigar there

Mrs. Wigging Hostess At party Yesterday

In honor of Mrs. Stephen Robins of Greenwich, Conn., the bridegroom of Mrs. A. Battelle Peterson, Mrs. M. B. Wiggin, entertained at a bridge party yesterday afternoon at her home on Magnolia Avenue. As honored guest Mrs. Bobo was the recipient of novelty costume jewelry, a gift from the hostess.

Throughout the afternoon bridge progressions were enjoyed by the guests and late in the afternoon scores were added and prizes awarded. High score prize, a white silk bag and chifon handkerchief, went to Mrs. A. W. Lee Jr., while cut prize, a double deck of playing cards, was awarded to Mrs. G. J. Loucks. Mrs. Fred S. Dager held low score and given a wooden novelty server.

Pastel colors predominated in the decorations used in the living room of Mrs. Wiggin's home. Vases and bowls of gladioli and delphinium were arranged in various places, while the tallies and score pads were designed to represent butterflies in pastel shades. Calendars and fern adorned the sun parlor, while in the dining room was a profusion of red roses and snapdragons.

At the tea hour a salad and sweet course in pastel shades was served by the hostess assisted by Dorothy and Mary Wiggin and Louise Perkins, all dressed in pastel-colored dresses. The refreshment table was centered with small silver baskets filled with sweet peas and tied with bows of tulip in delicate shades.

Those invited to be with Mrs. Robins were: Mrs. A. Battelle Peterson, Mrs. D. D. Caldwell, Mrs. Ralph Wright, Mrs. J. H. Hintermeyer, Mrs. Walter S. Coleman, Mrs. A. W. Lee Jr., Mrs. L. P. Coley On School Farm

Five hundred sixteen crates of number one outcry was just packed by the local chapter of Future Farmers of America as a means of obtaining actual experience in the outcry fields and incidentally obtain funds for the activities of their organization.

The above amount of outcry was cut from a plot of less than one-eighth of an acre grown on the school farm by the boys who outcry as part of their farm training work and represents practice work and study in all branches of the production of such a crop.

The boys were supervised in this work by Mr. Fred Dorner, head of the Seminole Agricultural Club, who states, however, that quality of the crop as well as the standard package they put up. The yield was considerably above the earlier average.

Fruit Regulations Are Pointed Out By Eradication Board

Most serious and really difficult problem in the citrus industry is the control of the fruit fly. This insect has been found in every county in Florida and has caused great damage to citrus crops.

The most effective method of control is the use of traps and sprays. The traps are set in the trees and the sprays are applied to the leaves and stems of the trees.

Florida advertising is a dividend-paying investment for the people of this State

..about Florida

FLORIDA'S "million-dollar message" is being read by millions of readers all over the country and in far corners of the world this winter. Community campaigns, Florida products and the great transportation companies are telling the world about this state in countless columns of newspaper and magazine space everywhere.

Advertising is the greatest economic stimulus in modern business practice—and this active force is working for Florida, to build prosperity, to increase progress and to quicken the pace of business.

Magazine articles and news stories which are being printed about Florida have a value which cannot be measured in dollars and cents. One magazine alone, with a circulation of 1,300,000, recently devoted 93 pages to the colorful story of Florida's attractions.

The result of the tremendous volume of Florida publicity in Northern publications is evidenced by the increasing tide of tourist visitors now pouring into the state. Some idea of the size of the tourist traffic may be gained from the fact that 44,302 southbound tourists from 47 states crossed the St. Johns river bridge last month alone.

The world is hearing about Florida, learning about the attractions of this garden spot of the nation, and through this investment in publicity, the people of Florida are receiving dividends in terms of increased business prosperity.
