

Stevenson Backers Organize National Business Council

SEATTLE (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson announced today the formation of a 50-member National Business Council of "well-known leaders in business and finance" who are supporting his bid for the presidency.

The Democratic nominee said the step is in line with his view that "it is well for both parties to be as inclusive as possible—to try to speak for the best interests of all groups and thus for all the people." Through it, he expressed the hope, his views can be made known on the "respective roles and mutual interests of business and government."

In addition, he said, "I believe the Democratic party and its future administration will reflect a balanced representation of the interests of all groups."

The announcement came shortly after he had denounced the Eisenhower administration as a big business administration "narrowly representative of a limited interest."

The denunciation came as he told a wildly cheering Seattle audience last night that the United States government should represent "the interests of all the people and of no narrower group."

Without naming Eisenhower, Stevenson said the nation's future, in this age of social revolt and communism and nuclear power, "will be met only by an administration—by a president, an executive, who assumes the full responsibilities of his elected office."

"Undue delegation of responsibility . . . diminishes the office of the presidency," he said. An estimated 6,000 persons turned out to hear Stevenson at Seattle's Civic Auditorium.

Stevenson announced today that honorary co-chairmen of his National Business Council for Stevenson are William L. Clayton of Houston and Joseph P. Kennedy of New York.

'Knowledge First Step To Action' Confab Keynote

"Knowledge is the first step to action" is an old proverb. More recently, it's the keynote of central Florida's district conference on handicapped children, to be held in Tampa October 11-12, at the Tampa Terrace Hotel.

According to Roy Holler of Sanford, who is Vice-Chairman of county Children's Committee, the Tampa meeting is the first ever planned specially for the area. Discussions by experts from state agencies, private organizations, and national foundations will center on what services will be available for handicapped children in central Florida counties, and what local groups can do to improve these services.

In short, knowledge about what is now being done is the starting-point for improvement and expansion to keep up with growing population.

The picture in central Florida includes both big and little counties. State, private, national, and civic organizations cooperate in providing services—but often make gaps. The purpose of the Tampa meeting, according to Holler, is to increase understanding of problems, and ways to deal with them.

"Parents, teachers, civic and community organizations and professional people will all find something of value here to take home," he said. There is no registration fee for attending the conference.

Many counties in central Florida can't provide "big county" services for children, he said. One solution might be to combine efforts on an inter-county basis.

It's all for a very practical reason. Unless helped, handicapped children grow up to be handicapped adults: tax consumers, not tax payers. Even ignoring the human side, it's cheaper to help as many as possible grow up to be producing members of society.

Advisory Group Puts Finishing Touch On Articles
ORLANDO (AP)—Constitution drafters applied a finishing polish today to the much amended article dealing with the executive branch of the government and began cleaning up other loose ends from their laborious sessions here.

The Constitution Advisory Commission has only a very complete article left to get on of the 20 it started with 10 days ago, but this one deals with the broad and controversial field of home rule for cities and counties.

There is much work to be done, however, in shaping up some phases of other articles which the commission passed over because it could find no immediate answer or because it needed more information.

At the top of the list of unfinished business is legislation on apportionment. The commission had expected to take up this subject yesterday but passed on instead to less provocative articles dealing with taxation and education. A provision requiring separation of the races in public schools was written into the new Constitution in exactly the same form it is in the present charter.

There were some demands at public hearings to take out the section on the ground it was contrary to the U. S. Supreme Court desegregation ruling. But Circuit Judge Hugh Taylor of Quincy remarked: "If you want to give our work the kiss of death just take this out."

Water Levels Are Higher Last Month

Water levels in Florida lakes and streams were generally higher in September than August but continued below normal in the southern part of the state, the U. S. geological survey reported.

Stages of the St. Johns River, Lakes Orange and Butler showed increases of 0.1 to 2.0 feet, with Lake Weir showing a decline of 0.3 foot.

Heavy rains from hurricanes flooded increased stream flow in West Florida and elsewhere in the state, seasonal showers kept

MAN SHOT; MISTAKEN FOR TURKEY PUNTA GORDA

Getting shot by mistake for a turkey has proved worth $7,300 to a Miami bottled gas distributor.

A Charlotte County jury awarded that sum last night to Ray Clement, who was hit in the back of the neck by a load of birdshot while hunting in a swamp near here.

The defendant, Douglas Parker, Fort Myers book store owner, admitted he shot Clement but maintained Clement's head, decked in a red trimmed hunting cap, bore a great resemblance to that bird.

Fever Continues Oviedo Fix-Up

By MARIAN JONES
OVIEDO—The remodeling and cleaning-up fever is still spreading in Oviedo. Charles T. Niblack has repainted his store building, until recently occupied by Bob Ragsdale, who has bought out Bob Bennett's Radio and TV Service in Sanford.

Take a look in the Oviedo Drug Store. The gals behind the fountain are very sporty these days, displaying small green and white aprons and dainty caps to match. These with their white dacron or nylon uniforms are quite the trick.

We understand that Ben Ward Jr. and his pretty wife, Colleen, are going to be Oviedo residents—building a lovely new home in their grove adjacent to the L. A. Hardy home. We are so glad to have this nice young couple with us.

Douglas Jackson has recently built four new homes south of town and has sold them and is planning on building more. Keep up the good work, Doug.

We cannot leave out our new beauty parlor, owned and operated by Mrs. A. M. (Lois) Jones. Many speculations were afloat while the addition to the Jones home was underway. It is lovely, resembles a duplex. It is situated on the Sanford Highway, just inside the city limits.

A visit to Lois' Shop reveals what we knew we would find. Anything Lois has anything to do with is just about tops. The shop is equipped with modern furnishings. Ladies can relax with ease now while being "pretitled up". Chairs you can lean back in and prop your feet up. And best of all—it is air conditioned.

Husbands, don't expect too much from the little wife now. She may have to visit the beauty parlor more often.

DYNAMITE SHIPMENTS HALTED
TAMPA (AP)—Mayor Nick Nuccio has ordered a halt to dynamite shipments through Tampa as too dangerous.

It was reported recently that more dynamite is shipped from Tampa than from any other port in the United States. Most of it goes to South America for mining and oil well operations.

Test Knowledge Of Our President's

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS School is back in session and the presidential election is just around the corner so now is as good a time as any to test your knowledge of our country's presidents.

Did you know for instance, that John Adams was the only president to live to see his son inaugurated president? That Abraham Lincoln was the first president born beyond the boundaries of the original 13 colonies? That Martin Van Buren was the first president born under the Stars and Stripes?

Here are 13 questions. See how you make out.

- 1. What three presidents were born west of the Mississippi River?
2. How many bachelors have been elected president?
3. Washington twice had a unanimous vote in the electoral college. After him, who came the closest to being a unanimous choice?
4. Both Franklin D. Roosevelt and his wife Eleanor were related to Theodore Roosevelt. Who was the closest?
5. Did any other president besides Franklin D. Roosevelt attempt to win his party's nomination for a full third term?
6. Who served the shortest time in the office of president?
7. One college has produced four presidents and another three. Name the colleges and the presidents.
8. What three vice presidents later were elected president without first filling the top office by death or assassination?
9. Who was the oldest man ever to be elected president?
10. The youngest?
11. Which president never spent a day in school?
12. What three presidents found romance and married while in office?
13. To resolve a deadlock, two presidents were chosen by the House of Representatives and one by a special election commission. Name them.

- 14. Most presidents were either lawyers or soldiers but the office has been held by a tailor, an engineer and a newspaper editor. Who were they?
15. Give the full first names of Cleveland, Wilson and Coolidge. Answers-no credit for partial answers.
1. Herbert Hoover, West Branch, Iowa; Harry S. Truman, Lamar, Mo.; Dwight Eisenhower, Denison, Tex.
2. Buchanan and Cleveland.
3. James Monroe missed being a unanimous choice by only one vote in the electoral college when elected to a second term in 1820.

- 4. Eleanor. She was Teddy Roosevelt's niece; Franklin was only his fifth cousin.
5. Ulysses S. Grant sought a third term but the nomination went to James Garfield.
6. William Henry Harrison served only from March 4 to April 4, 1841.
7. Harvard has produced John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt. William and Mary College produced Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe and John Tyler.
8. John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Martin van Buren.
9. William Henry Harrison at 68.

CHAPTER 13 THE CAPTAIN was at dinner that night. He was a jovial old sea dog with a red face and bristling gray hair, and he laughed continually. The passengers, seeming to take their cue from him, were jolly too. Everyone seemed to be enjoying himself, Val thought.

But she and Dirk had said practically nothing since they had commenced eating. Probably I am naive and stupid, she thought, and again she had a frightening feeling that she was getting well out of her depth. It was no longer any use trying to tell herself that all this was none of her business. Now she knew there was no escape. She was involved not only by circumstances but emotionally.

"You don't have to look at me all the time. You can glance toward the doctor's table occasionally," Dirk said dryly.

She felt the color rush up under her blue eyes. "Why should I want to look at him?"

"Why not? Surely he's the answer to any girl's dream, especially a young nurse's," he added crudely.

Bruce was sitting at his table surrounded by his middle-aged harem; he looked unusually handsome in his dress mess uniform. The women were chattering eagerly to him and to one another. The storm had subsided; the good weather was with them. The cruise had really begun.

"There's a notice up on the board that there'll be dancing tonight," Dirk remarked.

"Oh, really?" His smooth voice mocked her. "You're dressed for it, aren't you? And darn pretty dressed, as I said before. I don't know nurse know so much about clothes or where to buy them."

"A friend of mine is a mannequin. She's the same size as I am."

He pushed his plate aside and rested his elbow on the table. "Yes, probably you can fit a mannequin's clothes. You have the figure; all the same, you could never be a mannequin."

"Why not?" she asked, laughing. © 1934 Maysie Oregi. Reprinted by permission of Avalon Books. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

"THE MAN WHO WASN'T THERE"

The kindest thing that can be said about our present Congressman is that he was 'man who wasn't there'.

HE WAS NOT THERE when he needed his support on important legislation.

HE MISSED BY IMPORTANT ROLL CALLS on significant legislation.

HE MISSED THE QUORUM ROLL CALLS.

HE FAILED TO INTRODUCE AND PASS any important legislation for all the people of the district in the past 8 years.

He openly admits his record is not what he did but WHAT HE DIDN'T DO. He laughingly admits he missed the roll calls as though it were a big joke. To me, proper attention to the vital matters of our country by our elected representatives is not a laughing matter. It is an affront to our citizenry to have our Congressman boast of a 'do-nothing' record.

The day arrives, farewells are said—crew board their aircraft and then are gone, fading into the eastern sky. From now on the safety and well being of the flight crews and transport passengers are in the hands of God and the vast system operated by the military and civilian agencies. Aircraft are constantly tracked by ground radar units within the continental limits of the U.S., further out to sea the latest and newest airborne radar units and the sea looking Texas towers continue plotting the course through the sky. Even further out the flier is not alone. The internationally operated ocean station vessels provide a watchful eye and friendly aid in the passing aircraft as they maintain their 24 hour watch through fair and foul weather. Although the chances of a mishap are indeed small, the precautions taken are elaborate. Should an aircraft miss a reporting period (about once every hour) the nearest units of the Air Sea Rescue Service are alerted. Radio stations try to establish contact and inform other aircraft or surface vessels known to be in the area to keep a look out.

"It can be truthfully said that the airmen of today do not leave their aid and protection of their comrades, friends and families behind. The modern day miracles of electronics made available to us by the people of our country permit us to take "it" with us. We are as safe as God and country can make us. See you in March," were the comments of VAH-11 officers as they prepared to depart for their temporary location in the Mediterranean area.

"A SMOKE-FILLED ROOM" Harry M. Daugherty, Warren G. Harding's campaign manager, predicted with uncanny accuracy that his candidate would be picked as the 1920 G. O. P. presidential choice by a small group of men "around a table in a smoke-filled room" after other candidates had "gone the limit."

He and Mrs. Wood have two children. The Woods will live at a small group of men "around a table in a smoke-filled room" Point, Ga., while Maj Wood is stationed at Headquarters Third Army.

More Americans Should Become Waste-Conscious: Step To Future

It may seem ridiculous, in this era of bounteous prosperity, to talk about that light-lipped New England judicial assertion, "Waste not, want not." But it is not ridiculous at all. Foresight is never ridiculous.

It is exactly such a time as this, when we are spending and consuming at an unprecedented rate, that we should think about the future. American's resources are amazingly stupendous, but they are not without limit, even though new resources are being uncovered everyday. Even though our ingenuity and our skill at producing know no bounds, the basic wealth of the land—the oil and coal and gas and iron; the fertility of the soil — is something that cannot be increased.

That is the framework within which all that we do as a nation must be done. And this is the fundamental reason for conservation of resources.

There is a good deal of loose thinking about conservation. There is a tendency to regard it as strictly a matter for broad county, state, or national policy, without much relationship to individuals. But the plain fact of the matter is that conservation, like so many other things, begins at home.

One aspect of this truth was set forth strikingly the other day by Ernest F. Swift, executive director of the National Wildlife Federation. He wrote that "the real key to food conservation is the American garbage can, the greatest of all storage bins for waste foods."

Now this has nothing at all to do with legislation and policy be it on the local, state or national level; this has to do primarily with the individual and his conscience and attitude.

If millions of Americans become waste-conscious, and act individually to conserve food — and other resources — a great step forward will have been taken.

General Store

Quite a few persons not yet in their dotage can remember a time when the old-fashioned general store was a common sight in America. Such a store offered a surprising variety of consumer goods; practically everything, in fact, that was available to consumers in those simpler days.

Then, of course, diversification set in. One store handled this kind of goods; another handled something else. Even in tiny hamlets, several establishments were required to sell the merchandise that might all have been dispensed from a general store a few years or decades earlier.

Now history has come full circle, as it has a way of doing. Here and there about the country, elaborate shopping centers are coming closer and closer to being fancy, super-duper descendants of the old general store. The designers of these establishments might not relish this view of their brainchildren, but the similarity is inescapable.

One of the most resplendent of such places has just opened on the outskirts of one of our large metropolitan centers. It includes some 70 separate establishments, ranging from department stores to small specialty shops, all under one roof surrounding a court where there are gardens, a fish pond and a sidewalk cafe.

This is the general store raised to the nth power. It is a kind of symbol of the deep and far-reaching changes that are taking place in the average American's way of life.

Misling, however, will be the big tub of butter usually displayed in the middle and only aisle of the old-fashioned country general store, the barrel of flour, ginger snaps, sugar, flower, meal or grits. The odor of spices, and of the coffee mill, may be the bin of "fat-back" or the yards of smoked sausage and lines of smoked ham that rimmed the back of the cracker barrel politician's corner.

There are many memories lingering in the oft-remembered reminiscing of the "general store" of years gone by.

More often, as these stories and memories are recalled, comes quickly the realization that this is 1956!

See you at the sidewalk cafe next January!

Americans Expect Too Much

Whoever is elected president will be a disappointment. This is not to deny either President Eisenhower or Adlai Stevenson, but means merely that Americans expect too much. They want the president to be both a great politician and a great administrator, two qualities rarely found in the same man. That is the way Harlan Cleveland, dean of the Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, points it out in the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Few presidents live up to this expectation. Presidents must spend much time persuading Congress to do what they want, or telling it what the executive departments are doing. They must build up political coalitions in their own support, and keep in touch with innumerable special groups in Congress and out which might make trouble if not kept friendly.

Also — and perhaps this is their heaviest duty — they must be agreeable to millions of voters, and make speeches all over the country during and between campaigns, trying to maintain their popularity.

It's a great life, all right, but it's hard not to weaken while enjoying it.

Look At Federal Aid Problem

WASHINGTON — While Democrats and Republicans blame each other for killing federal aid to education—actually both had a part in killing it—here is a look at the federal aid problem.

For generations the government has been providing money for education in one form or another. There are now at least 56 programs of federal aid to education. This year Congress voted over a billion dollars to pay for them. Some people express fear that if the government extends such aid to the states to build needed classrooms, eventually the government will try to control education.

There is, of course, a counter argument: Since members of Congress come from the states and it is they who would vote school aid money, they could cut off the money any time they thought the government was leaning toward control of education.

Nevertheless, foes of federal aid stick to the old symbol of the camel getting his nose under the tent. Last year the special commission, headed by former President Hoover, which examined government functions, said: "It is who pays the piper, calls the tune."

This was the camel symbol in another form. The Hoover Commission reported it saw no need for federal aid in school building. A few months later in 1955 the White House Conference on education said some federal aid was needed. Both President Eisenhower and the Democrats—in statements—agreed it was needed. Congress didn't approve.

No matter who's president, Congress will probably wrestle with the idea next year. It has been doing so for 10 years or so. Here are some examples of government aid in the field of education:

Washington veterans an education. The program continues. No one has seriously argued this money was used to influence what the veterans were taught.

This year Congress voted 31 million dollars for vocational education: money handed the states to pay the expenses of training people in various vocations, such as farming, trades, industries, home economics and so on.

This year Congress voted 100 million dollars for the school lunch program.

Then there is the program called school assistance to federally affected areas. The government makes payments to school districts which suffer a financial burden due to sudden and substantial increases in enrollment because of federal activities. Congress this year voted 113 million dollars for repair and maintenance of schools in these affected areas and 100 millions for building new ones.

Eric Cosby Designs New Type Comb

By HAI BOYLE

NEW YORK — The quickest way to wealth is to improve some simple object millions of people buy or use every day.

Example: The man who first thought of putting a crinkle in the old-fashioned wire hairpin — so it would stay in better — made a million dollars.

"When you think of the hundreds of millions of human beings who lived and died trying to have an original idea, it seems odd that none thought of improving the ordinary comb, isn't it?" asked Eric L. H. Cosby.

"But no one really had a new idea in combs for at least 6,000 years."

No one, that is, until Cosby bent his brow to the task.

Cosby is managing director of Keal, Inc., a firm whose fine brushes have served the crowned heads of Europe since 1777, when George III was trying to give his American colonies a quick military brushoff.

An inventor since boyhood, Cosby became interested in combs during a visit to the British Museum. He noted that combs found in ancient Egyptian pyramids varied hardly at all from combs in present day use. Although the human skull — even among teenagers with crew cuts — is ordinarily rounded, the combs appeared designed for flat-heads.

"Why should they be?" Cosby brooded.

So he designed a new type comb. It is a flexible comb, fitted into a plastic shell, and bends to fit the shape of the head.

"With each stroke it covers five times the area of the old-type comb," said Cosby, "and it gives the scalp a gentle massage. It is particularly helpful to men with thinning hair as it glides over the bald spot without scratching. Balding men are physically as well as emotionally sensitive."

Georgia Still Great Agricultural State

DETROIT — Georgia is still a great agricultural state, said its governor today, but "the dreamy and romantic old way of cotton and plantations has gone forever."

"The era of mint juleps, crinoline belles and banjos in the moonlight has disappeared. The old cotton age which brought wealth and privilege to the few and brought endless hours of toil and travail to the many has melted away in the mists of eternity."

Gov. Marvin Griffin went on to tell of a "new giant... in our economic picture... titanic industrial development" in a speech drafted to attract new business southward to his state. His appeal was directed to some 100 industrialists of this motor car metropolis invited to a luncheon at the Detroit Athletic Club.

Sponsors were the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce and Pres. Charles T. Fisher of the First National Bank of Detroit. Griffin praised and thanked the chamber president, Ivan Allen Jr. of Atlanta, and its director, Walter Cates, for arranging the event.

The governor told his hearers he was sure they were well aware of the extraordinary business opportunities to be found in Georgia and that he would soon sketch the picture in broad outline.

"Come down and see for yourselves," he urged. "We will cooperate in every possible way to make a success of any new plants you may see fit to build."

He cautioned against any expectation of finding cheap labor, saying all he could promise in this direction would be workers "willing and eager to offer an honest day's work for an honest day's pay."

He said that many of the state's big new plants stand on "old cotton plantations and have absorbed the men who once plowed the fields and the women who used to help gather the crop."

"We have," he went on, "factory executives by the dozen who attest that these people make the most apt, the most productive workers they have ever found."

GOP, Demos Give Treasury Reports

WASHINGTON — The Republicans reported today they had more than a half million dollars in their treasury Oct. 1. The Democrats said they were almost $100,000 in the red.

The national committees of the two parties gave the figures to the Senate Elections subcommittee in response to a questionnaire. The Senate group has been keeping a running tab on campaign contributions and spending.

For September, the Democratic committee reported receipts more than twice those of the Republicans. The Democrats spent more.

DEMOCRATS — September receipts $382,047 and expenditures $602,808. Bank balance at month's end of $14,884 and unpaid bills amounting to $120,663. The Democratic committee began the month with a balance of over $664,625.

Cecil Tucker, Miss Myrtle Wilson Discuss 4-H Clubs

Various Committees gave their reports at Tuesday's meeting of the Junior High School P.T.A. which was under the leadership of Mrs. Michael Thomas. The meeting was opened by group singing, led by Mr. and Mrs. Ashby Jones, after which Mrs. George Pittard gave, as her devotional, a reading entitled "If I had a daughter."

Cecil Tucker and Miss Myrtle Wilson discussed organization of 4-H Clubs which are operated under the Extension Division of the University of Florida and sponsored jointly by County, State, and Government departments of agriculture. The organization is opened to boys and girls from ten to 21, and there are now 35,000 members in the state. In order to maintain membership, each member must carry on a project and must keep records on the project they select. The slogan of the 4-H is "Learning By Doing." There are now, in the Junior High School, 4-H Clubs for both the seventh and the eighth grades which meet on the first and third Tuesday of each month. Assisting with the 4-H work will be Mrs. Winegar, of the Florida Power and Light Home Department.

After the reading of the minutes by Mrs. Clifford Ables, the board made the recommendation that room count prices be $1 for 7th and $1 for 8th grades each month, except in February, which will be the Founders Day meeting. The formal recommendation was made and accepted that they would purchase new curtains for the auditorium.

Joe Stewart, Ways and Means chairman, recommended that the P.T.A. sponsor a county-wide Junior High basketball tournament as well as a variety show in which the participants would be P.T.A. members and teachers.

Luncheon Chairman, Mrs. M. L. Nichols, thanked the various mothers for donating potted plants for the luncheon and also Hugh Carlton, who donated material for curtains, which were made by Mrs. O. R. Smith and Mrs. C. R. Jones. The school janitor assisted the ladies with the hanging of the curtains.

Mrs. A. O. Roberts spoke on behalf of her husband and announced that the recreation committee had talked of having four dances during the year, the first to be held on Oct. 28. This is not a costume dance. Any proceeds from the committee will be used to purchase uniforms for the basketball team.

Jean Weigete and Ruth Spartz of VAH-7 were honored with a baby shower Tuesday night in Lou Johnson's home. Mary Libby was co-hostess, but was struck down by flu at the last minute, and was unable to come. The atmosphere was informal, as busy Lou is teaching 1st and 2nd grade at the Lake Mary school. The guests were served coffee and apple pie a la mode, as the honorees opened their many gifts. Attending were Ruth Notveile, Jean Stetson, Terry Price, Olivia Simmons, Mary Heath, Joanna England, Marty Millsapp, and Ida Radtke.

Janie Miller and Jean Dooley poured coffee at the Mayfair Country Club, Wednesday morning. They have just joined the Golf Association, and were doing their bit for the Inter-City Tournament.

Don Brubaker left Tuesday with VAH-11. Polly has been redecorating her house on Mellenville. She is expecting company this week, a girl with whom she went to school—and I am not at liberty to say how long ago, either. Polly is giving free art lessons to one of the Girl Scout troops, and expects to start her regular classes in the near future. For more information, keep checking this column. And for new residents, who may not be familiar with Polly, she is an artist of considerable merit, besides being the mother of three, a popular model, and an excellent bridge player.

Church Is Entitled To Loyalty, Support

By A. Edna Shihohler

All times are troubled times. All people are troubled people. Whether or not civilization progresses depends not upon the troubles of a given time, but upon how the people of that time meet their trouble.

There has probably never been a time in the history of the world when enlightened education was available to more people than it is today. But education alone cannot be misdirected and offer no solution. If we say the iron curtain countries deny "enlightened" education to the masses of their people, we can partially excuse their failure to help solve mankind's problems. Here in America with our schools overflowing and almost unlimited information available to anyone wishing to seek it, we cannot make such an excuse. And yet, in spite of that fact, we have but to pick up a daily paper to find that hatred, violence, intolerance, jealousy, greed, and practically every other human vice that can contribute to world problems is about as rampant within our country as anywhere on earth.

Of the problems that trouble the world, those of science are the minor ones. They have been, are being, and will continue to be solved on the drawing boards and in the laboratories of the world.

Not so the greatest of all problems, the problem of human relations. Through all the centuries there has been but a single source for its solution — the Church. Regardless of its denomination, any Church of the Universal God, teaching the way of peace, points to the solution of that problem. Because the Church is demanding, mankind today, as did his forefathers, prefers to seek an easier way. In this era when there is destruction is the order of the day, mankind can no longer temporize with his obligations to the Church. We must either turn to it, support it, and live it, or submit ourselves to chaos and savagery.

The Church demands and is entitled to our devoted loyalty and support. There could be no better time than this "Searcher's Month" for every thinking person who sincerely seeks a solution to his own troubled times and to wholeheartedly renew his loyalty to his church, or to seek out a church and affiliate himself with it if he has none, regular attendance is then but one expression of loyalty.

Morrison Tells High School Group Journalism Helpful

Nine members of the Seminole High School Journalism Club met at a supper meeting last night at Mrs. Appleby's Restaurant were complimented by Charlie Morrison, member of The Sanford Herald's advertising staff, on their job in getting out the new High School page "Seminole Smoker Special" which appears each Monday in The Herald.

Morrison told the group, part of 22 young people interested in the subject "regardless of your desire to follow journalism as a career or as a hobby, it will be helpful as it gives you a means of self-expression." Mentioning some of the things for which a newspaper stands in a community, he stated that the biggest reward is in the careful perusal of copy was in proofreading. His listeners laughed at some of the "gaffs" and in mis-spaced spaces. The extended an invitation to the young folks to visit The Herald plant and see the processes involved in publishing a paper.

Present last night were: Pat Harrington, editor of the school page; Shirley Anderson, associate editor; Kay Jenkins, society editor; Fred Ball, feature editor and the reporters: Ann Vennison, Kay Ivey, A. J. Clements, Mary Jane Flynt and Bill Thompson. School principal A. J. Brackley and the club sponsor Ralph Ray, with his wife, were guests of the club.

Fletcher To Head Seal Sale Campaign

Don Fletcher, Paula nurseryman, was named to head the important winter fund raising seal sale according to the TB Association head.

Fletcher, last year, successfully headed the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce fair booth campaign.

Dabbs said that the Seminole County Tuberculosis and Health Association expected this year to stage the most successful Seal Sale Drive in the association's local history.

Date for the mailing of the seals and appeal to Seminole County residents has not been said Dabbs, but final plans for the winter campaign will be completed in the near future when Fletcher's committee meets to put the final touches on preliminary plans already approved.

Christmas Seals will be prepared for mailing by various women's civic club groups in cooperation with Mrs. Lorraine Graham, Executive Secretary of the Seminole County Tuberculosis and Health Association. Local offices are maintained in the Brumley-Puleston Building.

FGGA To Become Flower Association

ST. PETERSBURG — History will be made here by the Florida cut flower industry on Oct. 19 when the Florida Gladiolus Growers Association becomes the Florida Flower Association, Inc., of which W. F. Kirschhoff, Jr., of Sanford, is a director.

The transition will occur during the annual convention of the FGGA, opening Oct. 18 at the PEG Hotel at Redington Beach, and will unite the state's 215,000 gladiolus industry with the burgeoning chrysanthemum industry, already producing an annual crop estimated at worth more than $3,500,000.

The new association will also include producers of such flowers as asters, Easter lilies, iris, dahlias, statice, snapdragons, sweet peas, gladioli and other commercial cut flowers. The result would be the largest horticultural group of its kind in the United States.

Behind the move is the aim of providing all cut flower producers in Florida with the advantages of a tightly knit, well managed central agency. Authorities both inside and outside the trade hail it as the most progressive step taken by an association of growers and shippers of floriculture.

"The potential of the Florida Flower Association is at least three times greater than that of FGGA," commented Philip J. Fleming, FGGA's manager, whose headquarters are in nearby Bradenton. "Since all cut flower producers have essentially the same types of problems, members felt we could benefit the entire floriculture industry by becoming the Florida Flower Association. It was upon this same principal that FGGA was founded originally."

Since its inception in 1941, Fleming pointed out, the Florida Gladiolus Growers Association has offered an outstanding example of progress through concentrated effort. "Glad" growing, he recalled, began some 33 years ago, but did not become of major importance on the floricultural scene until 1937.

In that year, a small group of producers saw the huge potential to be realized in banding together to handle such problems as transportation, marketing, merchandising and research. In April 1937 these far sighted men organized the Florida Gladiolus Growers Association, and during that year recorded shipments of some 3,500,000 dozen glads. Total acreage planted to glads in 1941 was about 4,300.

Transport Plane Still Missing

Seminole Raceway Is Established By Group In 1925

LONDON — Distress signals spurred a gigantic search today for a U.S. transport plane missing with 59 servicemen aboard. There was no hint of success.

At least 80 planes from bases in a half dozen countries—including giant six-engine U.S. Stratofortress bombers—an aircraft carrier and destroyers scoured the area north of the Azores in an effort to pin down the source of the message.

But back to base came these reports from the searchers: "No luck. Nothing sighted."

The missing plane, a C-118 Liftmaster of the U.S. Military Air Transport Service, was due at Lajes Air Base on the Azores, yesterday morning. It carried 50 Air Force personnel returning to the United States from duty in Britain and a Navy flight crew of nine.

After a long silence a string of SOS signals were picked up by commercial airliners flying early today between Britain and New York. Relief was expressed the distress calls might be coming from portable transmitters on rubber life rafts carried by the missing aircraft.

But in New York, three transatlantic pilots who heard the distress signals said they were later informed the calls came from land stations sending out alerts about the plane.

They said they got that information from station EJK in Ireland and from the Prestwick, Scotland, radio station.

Still another Pan American pilot reaching New York, however, said he picked up a signal which he believed came from "an original source" while his plane was 200 to 225 miles northwest of the Azores. He said he later received a land station signal from somewhere in Ireland.

A communique issued by the U.S. Air Force here said: "No clues to the whereabouts of the missing aircraft have been received since the SOS message intercepted by a Pan American transport at 2:15 a.m. GMT today. The source of this message was tentatively placed at about 150 miles north of the Azores. However, the search is being pressed with the utmost vigor."

A spokesman said it was possible other SOS messages picked up might have been relayed by various radios of the original distress signals.
