

Absentee Workers Are Big Problem To War Industry

By WENDELL LUND
Director, Labor Production Division, War Production Board

Absenteeism in war industry is not the simple problem of one pay day's work. It is a problem which swells waiting lists for work, and it is a problem which makes it difficult to get the most out of the workers.

For example, Mary Smith was a department supervisor in an airplane factory in Los Angeles. Found of her work, eager to do her share in the war effort, she kept rolling on schedule.

But troubles piled up at home. Her husband was away at a lather in another factory. Her sister managed to keep an eye on her three youngsters, but she herself didn't get much chance to be with them. Stores in her neighborhood closed at 6 p. m. She didn't get home until 7. It was pretty tough to shop. And then she was behind. She hadn't had a chance to get housework done. Dirty laundry was piling up. The vacuum set came down with a cold. She stayed home two days to catch up.

John Brown worked on the ship yards at Newport News. "Battered" in a noisy, crowded rooming house, exhausted from the strain of a job new to him, he couldn't get enough rest off shift. His only acquaintances were nearby workers in the plant. His family, wife and two children, were in Charleston, W. Va. They couldn't find a place in Newport. Spring came, with it hot weather. Brown's day off was a Sunday. This particular one, he hopped a train for Charleston to spend the day with his family. Getting a rest at home was so good that he stayed three days. He figured it was worth losing two days' pay but a cost. Well, Bam two days of needed work.

Those are just two examples of the causes of one of the biggest American war production problems today—a problem that can be solved only one way through community cooperation in the "boom-towns" which have mushroomed since the war.

That very mushrooming, a government survey recently showed in the rest areas behind the mounting tide of absenteeism. It's a problem involving housing shortage; lack of time for needed shopping; inadequate transportation; care of a married woman trying to do her job and run her home, too.

The War Production Board and War Manpower Commission are seeking cooperation of civic and public agencies on health, housing, transportation, recreation and other problems in the community and are solving "in-plant" problems through more than 2,000 plant labor-management committees.

Efforts are made to approach each problem in a positive way. One firm put German workers in the pay envelopes of absentees with the explanation that this was "Hitler's" payment for the day you took. That method flopped, because there was no way of telling whether a death or serious illness might not have struck responsibly the absentee. If such were the case, it only made the worker angry.

Another firm achieved considerable success in hitting unnecessary absence by holding drawings on unspecified days with prizes going to the winners. If they were on the regular.

Many firms have cut absenteeism by having soldiers and

Typical Housewife Chosen By OPA To Help Ration Plans

By MARGARET KRRODLE
WASHINGTON, Mar. 30. (AP)—"Typical" housewife, Mrs. Philip L. Crowley, of Huron, South Dakota, runs a tractor, rides a horse and reads public library books almost by the bushel. She thinks she's typical because she spent 20 years raising three children, never had a maid (only an occasional servant when the children were babies) and graduated into community service as her children grew up. When she came to Washington a few days ago, she had cut her housekeeping to three hours a day and was way out front in fixing up the farm situation in South Dakota, particularly in her home county, Beadle.

The western rancher's daughter never met Public Administrator Prentiss Brown until a national woman's organization recommended her as the housewife to represent American women in OPA policy making and interpretation.

In her white cotton dress, shoes, tweed skirt and her No. 17 coupon shoes ("as much like boots as possible"), she looks like a grown-up all-American outdoor girl. Her eyes are blue, and her brownish hair rolls back from her face.

When she appeared at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference, she wore a chic, two-year-old hat which she bought because the winds of South Dakota couldn't blow it off. She has such glowing natural color in her cheeks that she needs little makeup. Her wedding ring is plain gold. She wears no other jewelry and no nail polish.

Mrs. Crowley says her paternal grandparents got to South Dakota by ox team and her mother and grandparents by flat-bottom boat from Tennessee. She rode a horse with a western saddle and one-half mile to school, and though nothing of riding 25 to 30 miles horseback in a divided skirt before she came east for the job. She insists postmen on a horse would kill her and save eastern horses seem stiff-legged.

Mr. Crowley is manager of a clinic and hospital in their home town. Their second son, John, is a junior in high school, he with Dick, who enlisted in the U. S. Army, is at Fort Knox, Ky., and their daughter, Mary Jane, 12, is in private school at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

"I'm not a technical person," she insists, "but I've studied the problems involved in her new job from her 20 years of 'buying food, preparing it myself, serving it and cleaning up afterward.'"

Perverved Justice Is Caricatured In Wood Carving

SOUTH BEND, Ind. Mar. 30. On a visit to Palacio de Bellas Artes in Mexico City, Mexico, the Rev. John A. O'Brien, Ph.D., LL.D., of South Bend's University of the Sacred Heart, is carving in wood by Carlos Husarek Roche, of Jalapa in the Mexican state of Vera Cruz.

While Father O'Brien was studying the figure, called "A Concept of Justice," Mr. Roche, who is a lawyer, approached and explained how he came to represent the noble virtue by an ugly plotting female.

He said that in his work as a lawyer he had seen cases where bribery, corruption, power and privilege wrote the verdict instead of the facts and the principles of law. He determined to represent a caricature of justice

Government Uses Farm Workers To Produce War Food

By ROBERT GRIGER
AP Features Writer

FORT LUTON, Colo. Mar. 30. Thirty mule-driving cotton-tobacco packers have been sent to Arkansas to help produce war food in sun-dried Colorado. It's the first contingent of 60,000 American families that the war will uproot this year in a campaign to solve the farm manpower problem of raising foods desperately needed at home and an world wide battlefront.

The U. S. government is sponsoring the mass migrations. The 60,000 families will be scattered throughout the country where farm help is needed and where they may produce war foods with maximum efficiency. They will come from regions where there is drought, a labor surplus or other unfavorable conditions.

They are year-round farm hands and will be placed in more or less permanent jobs, bringing their families with them. Some are migratory workers, as the government has another plan for the migrators.

For the Arkansians it was an overnight reversal of living conditions and habits. With a mile or two they grew corn, cotton, tobacco or hay in Arkansas. Most of their farms were from 30 to 60 acres. Some never had been higher than 1,000 feet above sea level in their lives.

At Fort Lupton they are a mile high. Two-mile high peaks of the peaks of the Rockies, snow frosted, form a backdrop for the farm fields. They're going to work on Colorado ranches spread over as much as 1,000 acres. They will handle cattle, help grow sugar beets or vegetables and they'll be driving tractors, not mules.

"There's no reason why we won't make good Colorado farm hands," said Silas M. May, father of 10 children who has farmed in Arkansas 20 years.

"Many of my friends said it was foolish for me to try this new life at my age. But I say farming is farming, no matter where you are."

Another of the farmers, Garner Jenkins, neighbor of May in Independence county, Arkansas, said:

"Maybe we won't be entirely happy. But we can farm! That's the important thing."

Cost of the migrations is borne by the government. As soon as the farmers reach the new region, they go to school for two weeks. In Colorado the Arkansians had to learn how to irrigate, talk practice seldum necessary in their home state.

Farmers who need ranch hands may visit camps in which the migrating workers are housed. The farmer and his prospective hired hand deal directly with each other, not through the government, in making their working agreement.

Farmer E. B. Davis of Fort Lupton needed a hand and he visited the farm school where the Arkansians were in training.

Helping To Lose

Not many in this country really want to lose the war but some, more or less unintentionally, are helping to lose it by not doing their full part to win it.

- 1- Report to work late—stall around—spend at least one hour each day in the rest room or at someone else's desk gabbing. 2- Keep continuously finding fault—low rate everybody and everything. 3- Ask dumb questions—ignore your superiors—go over their heads. 4- Become a "leave rider"—when you have a day's leave due you, take it immediately. Be sure you are absent the day you are most needed on the job. 5- Join the A-W-O-L club and encourage others to join. 6- Knock off for lunch at least 10 minutes before the designated time and practice being extremely busy and interested in your work one-half hour before quitting time. 7- Completely ignore regulations and tech orders, and above all, disobey the orders of your superiors. 8- Don't worry about plane crashes caused by poor and faulty workmanship—the pilot has a parachute—so what! 9- On all supply forms, be sure you mix up the numbers—forget classes and sizes—this will tend to give the supply officer and his assistants perpetual headaches. 10- Be a social planner—plan your dates and trips in advance—if the job's behind time—to hell with the job! Don't let a little thing like your job interfere with your good times. 11- Keep the telephones busy with your personal calls—this prevents urgent official business being executed. 12- By strict compliance with the above, you'll rate a medal for "biting the hand that's feeding you."

Grimmest Year

The Truman Committee has been telling Americans to brace themselves for the toughest, grimmest year of the war. The committee says there have been three basic weaknesses in government, which are now being corrected.

First, inadequate over-all planning within government agencies at the beginning of their various programs, with a consequent delay in getting these programs to work effectively. Second, conflicting authority and responsibility for various phases of the war program, also resulting in delays and buckpassing. Third, a hesitancy of government to adopt unpopular or unpleasant policies long after the facts clearly indicated such policies were necessary.

That's a good, straightforward statement, and the nation breathes more freely after hearing it. Especially since the Truman Committee expressly says that smoother running of the whole machine may now be expected.

It is natural, in a democratic nation, that confusions should arise. Democratic governments are intended to function in peace, not in war, though when the citizens are sufficiently aroused to danger, democracies function better even in war than totalitarian governments do.

But Americans can take a grim, tough year. They are now geared for it.

Greek Spirit

The Greeks, who were probably fighting for liberty at Troy 3,000 years ago, and then fought for it at home when the Achaics swarmed down on them, and have been fighting for the same thing pretty much ever since, are busy now in the hands of the Germans. Here they fight with dollars. And when anyone remembers that the average Greek is not a wealthy man, it is amazing what they are doing with their American-Hellenic National War Bond Drive.

In the city of Cleveland, O., alone, where there are 8,500 Greek-Americans, they had a quota of $500,000, and actually raised $650,000. If there are five of those Greek-Americans to a family, it means that they raised about $900 per family. It may be safely assumed that nearly all of it came out of their own pockets. And they are not willing to stop yet. How can they quit, they ask, when their relatives in Greece are enslaved? And how can they quit when, as they say, "our brave American warriors are fighting for us across the seas?"

Who can doubt now that the glorious race which gave inspiration to our own country in its infancy will be free again?

PAPER SCARCITY

NEW ORLEANS (LA.) STATES

You have undoubtedly read of the advance in the price of white paper. This material on which your newspapers and magazines and other reading matter is printed has been advanced in price $4 a ton.

You also have noticed that your favorite newspapers and magazines are having to reduce their size, because of the shortage in paper and because the government has ordered a cut in consumption. WPA says that another cut will be necessary in a few months.

We hope you don't run short of reading matter, but if you do, the department of labor has a series of brochures out of press talking about saving paper in various cities. This document for Richmond, Va., contains a page for Kansas City, Mo. It says in fact, tons of paper are used because practically all the cities in the country are covered with newspapers.

The information contained in these is not of date, but it is a good idea to get the government's suggestions for saving paper. The 1942 paper shortage flooded many of the cities and caused, last year, the best of them to be out of paper.

Welfare Board's Success Is Due To Local Personnel

The highly successful administration of Florida's welfare program by the State Welfare Board is due largely to its distinctive local setup, Mrs. Mary G. Holler, member of the District 12 Welfare Board, said here today.

Instead of an unwieldy and top-heavy organization of 87 county boards, there are 12 district boards, each with representation from all of the individual counties comprising its area and based upon population. The grouping of counties into large enough units so that administration of welfare activities may be handled economically and efficiently is actually the key to the success of the district system, Mrs. Holler added.

Each district, she went on to explain, has a district office and unit offices. Their number and location are determined by logical population centers and distances to them, rather than by the arbitrary limitations of county lines.

While the pattern of district organization aims to reduce the overhead cost of multiplicity of independent units, Mrs. Holler said, the resources of the individual counties within the district are kept in sight and close relationship is maintained with other administrative units functioning on a county basis.

The district director is the executive secretary of the district board and the administrative head of the district staff and is responsible for the administration of the program in her area.

The district boards and their units are the most important component parts of the State program because they are the nearest and closest to the people, Mrs. Holler said. There is a district welfare board office in every county and applications for assistance should be made to the nearest one, she added.

Mrs. Holler said it is important to understand that in order to obtain Federal participating funds in the social welfare program, the State must operate under a plan which conforms to the requirements of the Federal Social Security Act for proper administration of Federal Funds and equitable treatment of all applicants for and recipients of public assistance.

She pointed out that the Federal government can stop matching funds if the State violates conditions of the plan.

WHAT'S COOKING

BROOKS FIELD, Tex., Mar. 31, (AP)—Pvt. John G. Volant notified while on KP duty that he had been accepted by the Field Artillery Officer Candidate School at Fort Sill, Okla., for training. Candidates for the officers school automatically become corporals. Corporals don't have to help the cook, so, says Brooks Field, Field newspaper, Volant "made KP a fitting farewell."

General Andrews, Bold, Jaunty Is Popular With Men

AP Feature

The man who probably knows when, where and how the Allies will invade Hitler's fortress in Europe is Gen. Frank Maxwell Andrews, commanding general of United States forces in Europe.

Bold and jaunty, Andrews is popular with his men. Silver-haired, striking looking, he golfs well, likes martinis, carries a riding crop, vows: "I don't want to be a general who dies in bed."

Born at Nashville, Tenn., in 1881, Frank Andrews, quarterbacked his high school eleven, entered West Point in 1902, graduated in 1906 as a cavalry lieutenant. He served in the Philippines and Hawaii, played polo, married his general's daughter.

Born at Nashville, Tenn., in 1901, Andrews joined the army after the outbreak of World War I, commanded army field force. At war's end he served with occupation forces in Germany, returned to study at advanced schools, command the GHQ air force.

Hero of Caribbean and Panama defenses for nearly 1941 until last November, he flew his own plane almost daily in treacherous skies to check camouflage and anti-plane installations. After heading United States Middle East forces, he took his present job this February.

Dr. William Church of Boston patented the first type-composing machine in 1822, in England.

It apparently hasn't found a way to cut down the size and number of circulars and pamphlets gotten out by the various and sundry bureaus in Washington and elsewhere.

Miss Juanita Pollard Weds Hollis Collins

Characterized by dignity and simplicity the wedding of Miss Juanita Pollard of Long Beach, Calif. daughter of Mrs. May Pollard to Petty Officer Hollis Collins son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Collins of Abilene, Tex. was celebrated Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Hill on Magnolia Avenue with Rev. W. P. Brooks Jr. officiating. Pastel flowers and greenery decorated the living room where the vows were spoken.

The bride entered with Miss James Crapps who was her only attendant and chose for her wedding a suit of light blue tulle with a face veil and a corsage of white roses showered with orange blossoms.

The bridegroom had as his best man Jack Williams SK 12 of Jacksonville.

After the ceremony a small reception was held after which the couple left for a short honeymoon. Petty Officer Collins and his bride are now residing at 338 East Park in Winter Park.

Dinner Serving 1 Or 4

- Beans and Tomatoes, Escalloped
- Raw Vegetable Salad
- White Fried Potatoes
- Margarine or Butter
- Cherry (Or Other Fruit) Cuddler
- Tea

Beans and Tomatoes Escalloped

- 1 1/2 cups cooked navy beans
- 2 tablespoons chopped onions
- 1/2 cup diced celery
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 2 tablespoons butter or melted margarine

1 2 1/2 cups chopped tomatoes

- 1/2 cup buttered crumbs
- Mix beans, seasonings, butter and tomatoes. Pour into buttered, shallow baking dish. Cover with crumbs, bake 2 minutes in moderate oven.

Raw Vegetable Salad

- 1 cup crisp raw cauliflower
- 1 cup diced crisp raw carrots
- 1/2 cup chopped onions
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons French dressing

Mix and chill ingredients. Pass in small dish.

Cherry Cobbler

- Rich Biscuit Dough (1 Cup Flour)
- 1 1/2 cups seeded cherries
- 1/4 cup sugar

Yankees Will Not Forget Training In "Big Freezes"

By CHIP ROYAL.

ASSURANCE PARK, March 30.—The New York Yankees, under Manager Joe McCarthy, in particular, probably will never forget this year of the "big freeze," but if any team in the "big freeze" League figures to freeze the American League champs out of the pennant it had better take another look at the Yankees' pitching staff.

Regardless of whether the other players show out here before the opening ball, the Yankees are pumping their arms actively, and McCarthy will be able to nominate winners from a group of major leaguers who won 91 games last year, not to mention two Double A mound artists who were in the win column 48 times.

Yankee fans will probably rub their eyes and think that the story about the St. Louis Cardinals has been mixed up with that of the former Bronx Bombers, but "it ain't so McGee."

If you want to keep McCarthy in a good frame of mind, just talk about his pitchers and forget the catchers, basketball, boxing, and what not that has been going for spring training at this breezy sport.

"Regardless of how much the weather may interfere with our training plans," said McCarthy, "the pitchers are getting their daily workouts and will match them with any in the league when we get started."

Look at the earned run average. There's Bonham with 3.27. He won 21 games while losing five, and with many of the good hitters gone, he should improve this year. And that goes for Hornsby, Chandler, Brewer, Murphy and the rest of them.

After listening to the boss from Buffalo, you start checking the Yankees' roster and find that next to Ernie Bonham, Spud Chandler was the most effective heavier winning 16 and losing five with an earned run average of 3.12.

Going down the list, Hank Borowy won 15 and lost four with an average of 2.53. Alvey Bonaldi had 11 W and 11 L. Marv Brown, 8 W and 10 L. John Linn, 21 W and 37 L. John Murphy, 11 W and 14 L. Martin Russo, 11 W and 20 L. Bill Zuber, former pitcher of Washington, 9 W and 13 L.

The two rookies, Thomas Lynn from Newark, who has inherited Lefty Gomez's old No. 11, but not his fooling ways, had a record of 17 W and 31 L last year, while Charles Wensloff of Kansas City checked up 21 W and 23 L.

There have been so many surprises here this year that McCarthy admits he doesn't know what to expect next. "It will probably be that way all season," he stated. "I don't give any one the impression that I'm worried. We'll be as good as any of them, and they'll have to beat us to win any pennant."

Map Readers Get Headaches From Shifting Fronts

AI Features

Shifting scenes of war with their strange place names are giving many a map-reader a headache. Here are a few clarifications on nomenclature in the current fighting fronts.

NORTH AFRICA

English Are Learning Game Of Basketball

LONDON, Mar. 31. (AP)—Under the heading, "Patrols and Troops sets at All Hall," the London Press yesterday enlightened its readers on the American game of basketball.

The occasion for the description was the opening of the U. S. forces' tournament in the vast concert auditorium.

The 16,000-square-foot carpet has been rolled back to make room for the playing court and the athletes from 16 competing teams of the army, navy and air force have taken over the artists' dressing rooms for the three-day campaign. The opening round yesterday saw the Army Port Hamblets defeat a navy five, 23-22. The Southern Air Base whip the Air Support unit, 35 to 27 and the London Battle Command score a 16-14 decision over the G.I. Composite outfit.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

"SPOTLIGHT Bands", the radio program broadcast over Blue Network every week night for Coca-Cola, features the nation's favorite name bands. Their names mean something because their bands have something extra to offer. Coca-Cola got where it is by offering something that more than quenches thirst. It brings a delightful after-sense of refreshment, too.

In ice-cold Coca-Cola you find quality you count on. You find delicious taste that sets it apart. You find refreshment that goes into energy. Anybody can make a soft drink, but only The Coca-Cola Company makes Coca-Cola. The only thing like Coca-Cola is Coca-Cola, itself.

It's natural for popular names to acquire friendly abbreviations. That's why you hear Coca-Cola called Coka. Both mean the same thing... "coming from a single source, and well known to the community".
