Cruise tickets still available

SANFORD — Tickets for "Cruising down the River on a Sunday Afternoon," are still available. The cruise is the sixth annual fund raiser for the Sanford Downtown Historic Waterfront Association and St. Lucia Festival. Sailing on board the Rivership Grand Romance will be this Sunday from 3 until 6 p.m., with dancing, music, entertainment and light hor d'oeuvres included. Cost of the cruise is an $18 donation.

Proceeds will be used by SHDWA to upgrade the lighting in the historic district and along the waterfront. The St. Lucia organization will use its proceeds for free entertainment during the St. Lucia Festival, scheduled Dec. 11 and 12.

Tickets are available at Main Street Welcome Center, 101 W. First Street, First Street Gallery, 203 E. First Street, Chamber of Commerce, or by phoning 322-5600 or 323-9178.

Entertainment book out

Congressman Bill McCollum was to be presented with the first copy of the Entertainment '94 book this morning. The book is used as a fundraiser for hundreds of area non-profit organizations. The issue to be released today is with United Arts.

This year's edition contains listings of over 250 restaurants as well as a variety of civic and cultural events in Central Florida.

Last year, Entertainment '93 helped raise over $200,000 for area organizations.

FP&L closes payment centers

SANFORD — The Florida Power & Light payment office at 301 Myrtle Ave., will close effective Oct. 8. It is one of 28 such offices to be shut down across the state.

FP&L spokesperson Alicia Whitley said electric bills may then be paid by mail, or at Eckerd Drug Stores. "We have contracted with Eckerd's to handle all of our bill payments," she said, "and we believe it will provide more facilities at which to make payments than we have had in the past."

"We did this as the result of a survey we conducted in the 1980's of our payment offices," Whitley said, "and our customers said they wanted better hours, more locations, and additional options."

"Eckerd Drugs has over 250 stores in Florida which is certainly more locations," she commented. "As for the hours, some of Eckerd's are open until 9 p.m., some 'til midnight, and some for 24 hours."

FP&L bills can also be paid by automated fund transfers which can be arranged through banks. "I believe in doing this we have fulfilled the suggestions of the majority of our customers," she said.

Signs announcing the closure have already been posted at the Sanford office. After that time, Whitley said some department functions will continue to operate in the building, but eventually it will be completely vacated.

Lotto has one winner, again

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's weekly Lotto game ended on a winning note for the third consecutive week, with a single ticket providing sole claim to a jackpot estimated at $7 million.

The winning ticket, purchased last week in Fort Lauderdale, had all six of the numbers drawn late Saturday: 10-16-26-28-41-47.

In addition to the single big winner, there were 160 tickets with five of the numbers, worth $1,814.50 each; 8,901 four-of-six winners worth $78.50 each, and 178,994 three-of-six tickets worth $5 each.

This week's Lotto drawing will again be for a jackpot estimated at $7 million. Such estimates are based on projected sales, long-term investment rates, funds from any rollovers and a 20-year payout to one winner.

Architect proposes land swap to Sanford

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

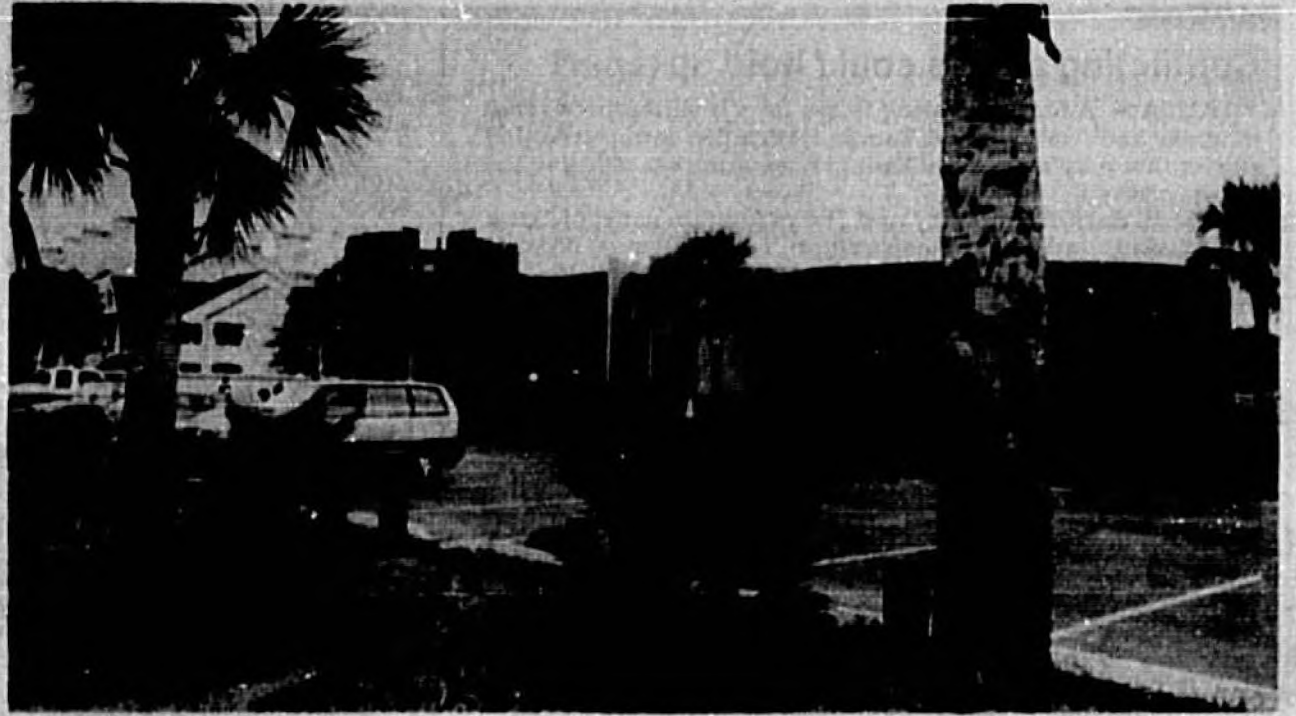

SANFORD — For 21 years, architect Eoghan Kelley has owned and operated his offices at 601 W. Seminole Blvd. at the northern end of North French Avenue. Sanford City Commissioner Whitey Eckstein is suggesting the structure, with its unique rounded architecture, could become a Seminole County Sports Museum.

Eckstein's proposal was prompted as the result of a commission meeting in August, when Kelley, represented by former Lake Mary Mayor Randy Morris, offered to turn the building over to the city.

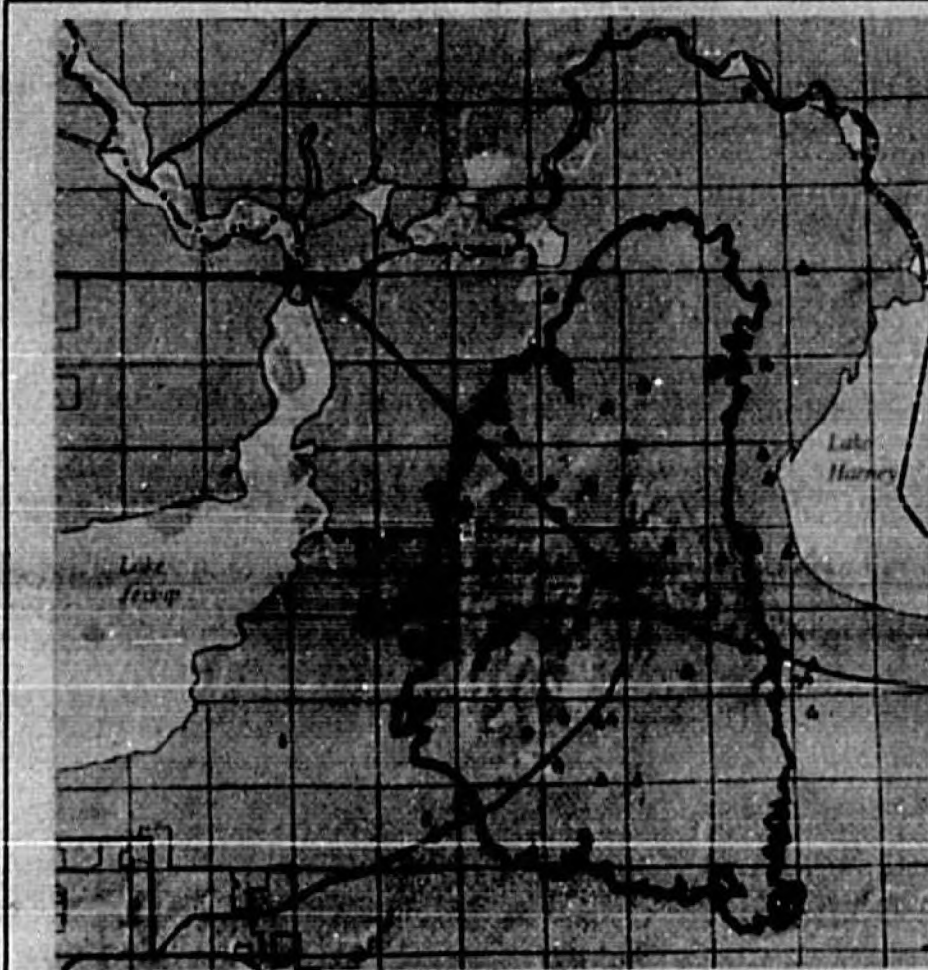

"I had discussed the idea beforehand with Randy," Kelley said, "and I figured within two or three years, I would be wanting to move out of the place, and we thought it might be good if the city wanted it."

Morris made the initial suggestion during a commission work session. He reported that Kelley was proposing a trade of the lakefront building "for property of equal value," owned by the city. The particular land is adjacent to Oregon Avenue, and is located to the south of the area in which the Seminole Towne Center Mall is located.

Consultant recommends increased regulations

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

GENEVA — A hydrogeological consultant serving on the Geneva Freshwater Lens Task Force recommends strengthening water quality and quantity regulations in the area of the Geneva Bubble.

Devo Seereeram, appointed by Seminole County, told his fellow task force members Thursday additional stormwater retention, banning future industrial uses and allowing wellfields of several widely-dispersed shallow wells, rather than a few deep wells.

Seereeram also recommended increased protection around sinkholes and sinkhole ponds that could provide a pipeline for pollutants directly into the Bubble drinking water supply. He also suggested requiring larger or double septic tanks where soils can't "scrub" nutrients from the seepage.

But Seereeram recommended against any changes to the Seminole County borrow pit ordinance, saying it was one of the toughest in the state. Seereeram said he has provided his services for several borrow pit proposals in the county, including several in the Geneva Bubble area.

"Seminole County has the strictest borrow pit ordinance in the state, far and away," he said.

Seereeram also suggested Sanford's Site 10 wastewater disposal area was good for the replenishment of the Bubble by using highly-treated wastewater for agricultural. He suggested Sanford be allowed to increase the amount of wastewater pumped to the area.

Other task force members accepted Seereeram's comments without expressing their own

33 named semifinalists in National Merit Scholarship contest

By VICKI DeCORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Fifteen Lake Mary High School students, a Seminole High student and five students from Lyman High School are among the 33 students from Seminole County to be named as semifinalists in the National Merit Scholarship contest.

There are more than 15,000 semifinalist nationwide. More than a million students took the Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) at more than 19,000 high school.

Only those who are chosen as finalists are eligible for one of 6,500 scholarships that will be awarded next spring.

The scholarships are sponsored by some 400 corporations, company foundations, professional associations and about 200 colleges and universities.

The local semifinalists are:

- Seminole High
Neal A. Roeschlein, who plans to major in graphic arts, but who has not decided on a career goal.
- Lake Mary High
Travis Bennett, who plans to major in music and who plans to pursue a career in music.
Heather L. Bixler, who plans to major in music and who plans to pursue a career in music.

Donald Chu, who plans to major in biological sciences and who plans a career as a chemist.

Judith Cohn, who plans to major in religion and who plans a career in the ministry.

Michael A. Cone, who plans to major in architecture and who plans to pursue a career in architecture.

Carrie A. Johannesmeyer, who is undecided on a major or a career goal.

Melissa F. Lasky, who is undecided on a major or a career goal.

Justin M. LeBlanc, who plans to major in civil engineering and to become a civil engineer.

Park work gets nod from city

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Some additional improvements have been authorized for Derby Park. The matter was given consensus approval by the City Commission last week.

Commissioner Fred Pearl said the improvements include a new playground, a new picnic shelter, and a new restroom. The improvements are estimated to cost $1.5 million. The improvements will be completed by the end of next year.

Longwood kicks off campaign for 3 commissioners' seats

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — The candidates have qualified and two political committees have registered with the Longwood City Clerk signaling the official kick off the 1993 campaign for three city commission seats.

District 1 incumbent Harvey Smerlison is being challenged by Iris Benson, district 2 commissioner Fred Pearl is facing Ron Sargent and district 4 commissioner Rex Anderson is running against Annamarie Vacca. None of the incumbent commissioners opened campaign accounts before filing for re-election so they have not filed any contribution/expense reports yet. Mayor Paul Lovstrand and commissioner Steve Miller are not up for election this year.

The political action committee, Friends of the Longwood Police, which challenged consolidation during the last election, is supporting the amendment on the Nov. 2 ballot to establish the police department in the city charter. The committee chairman is Patricia Hockenberry, the treasurer is Donald E. Young.

The Longwood Better Government Committee is supporting the three candidates trying to unseat the incumbents. The committee opposes the city charter amendment, building a new fire station and any increases in taxes. The committee chairman and deputy treasurer is Jane Cleeton and the committee treasurer is Nelda Pryor.

Sargent, a mortgage broker, leads the candidates in terms of fund raising with $1,320 in contributions and expenses totalling $582.88. Contributors to Sargent's campaign are: former Longwood Mayor Henry (Hank) Hardy III, who lists his occupation as office manager, $250; Michael L. Thompson, retired, $500; Mary Dell Hardy, housewife, $200; Lynette Dennis, retired, $50; Gerry Korman, attorney, $100 and Sargent, $100.

On a report for the first three months of the year, Sargent made a personal loan to the campaign of $100

Mays adopted by stepmother

SARASOTA — Kimberly Mays, the 14-year-old who was switched at birth and "divorced" her biological parents, has been legally adopted by her stepmother.

Sarasota Circuit Judge Becky Titus granted the adoption Friday by Darlena Mays, who is the third wife of Robert Mays, the man who raised Kimberly.

A month ago, a judge affirmed Mays' custody of Kimberly and said biological parents Ernest and Regina Twigg have "no legal interest in or right" to the girl.

The Twiggs have pledged to fight all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary. They had tried to block the adoption, but a judge denied their efforts earlier in the week.

John Blakely, the attorney representing the Twiggs, said his understanding of the judge's ruling was that the adoption would be nullified if the ruling giving custody to Mays was overturned.

Conflicting stories could hold up report

TAMPA — A federal hearing into a fiery collision between a freighter and two barges in Tampa Bay ended with conflicting stories that may make it difficult to determine exactly how the crash occurred.

After 16 days of testimony and 166 exhibits, a panel of Coast Guard and National Transportation Safety Board officials Friday wrapped up its hearings into the Aug. 10 collision but won't issue a report for months.

Attorneys ask for new trial

TAMPA — Attorneys for two white laborers convicted in the New Year's Day burning of a black tourist have filed a motion for a new trial on grounds of prosecutorial misconduct and judicial error.

Lakeland day laborers Mark Kohut and Charles Rourke were convicted in West Palm Beach earlier this month of abducting Christopher Wilson of New York City, dousing him with gasoline and setting him afire.

Wilson, who was left with burns over nearly 40 percent of his body, delivered the key testimony in an unusual trial marked by the abrupt exit of the lead prosecutor, who resigned in a dispute with the state attorney.

The mid-trial departure was one of six instances of prosecutorial misconduct named in the motion filed Friday.

A hearing on the motions for new trial will be conducted in West Palm Beach Oct. 22, the date Kohut, 27, and Rourke, 33, are to be sentenced on charges of attempted murder, kidnapping and robbery. They face three life sentences each.

Second man found guilty in murder

SHALIMAR — A second Fort Lauderdale man has been found guilty of murdering a 17-year-old boy and faces at least one life sentence for the slaying and related robbery and attempted murder convictions.

Prosecutors did not seek the death penalty for Marshall Aldridge, 21, convicted Friday, or Malik Omar Brown, 20, found guilty in July, in the fatal shooting of Donnell Robinson, 17, of Fort Walton Beach on Jan. 17, 1992.

Witnesses testified both suspects pulled their guns as they and two other men confronted Robinson and Randy Spears in Fort Walton Beach. Robinson was shot in the back as he fled across a vacant lot. Spears, 24, of Fort Walton Beach was chased into a nearby restaurant where he was shot and robbed.

Circuit Judge Jack Hefflin last month sentenced Brown to life in prison without parole for at least 25 years, the only alternative to the death penalty for first-degree murder. Brown received a second life term for robbery and the attempted murder of Spears, who survived.

Hefflin set Aldridge's sentencing for Nov. 2.

Two other suspects, Robert Curtis Willis, 23, of Fort Walton Beach and Eibert Laasley Sr., 44, of Fort Lauderdale have pleaded guilty to third-degree murder and are scheduled for sentencing Sept. 27. Willis faces a maximum of 15 years and Laasley 17 under sentencing guidelines.

Chrysler Canada's unions say yes

TORONTO — Chrysler Canada's unionized employees have said 'yes' to a job-building deal forged by their union and the No. 3 automaker in North America.

More than 80 percent of those who cast a ballot approved of the deal. Of 10,500 workers, 6,255 turned out for the vote Sunday which was held in four Ontario cities — Windsor, Brampton, Toronto and Ajax.

The results of the vote affect workers at Chrysler's six Canadian plants.

The three-year deal was hammered out last Tuesday just minutes before a midnight strike deadline. It marked the first time in six rounds of contract talks that Canadian autoworkers have reached a tentative accord without going on strike.

The deal calls for increases of two percent this year, 1.5 percent next year and one percent in the final year of the contract.

Grand Jury: Biggest fiasco in state's history

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — A grand jury has called Florida's social services agency's rush to put a giant welfare computer on line one of the biggest fiascos in the history of the state.

Top administrators at the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, the report said, acted unethically, ignored checks and balances, and wasted millions in building the FLORIDA computer, which has piled up $260 million in errors since it began handling welfare cases two years ago.

The Leon County grand jury report, filed with the court last month and sent anonymously to the St. Petersburg Times, makes blistering criticism of officials involved in purchasing and developing the $104 million system.

Former HRS Secretary Bob Williams is portrayed as a man whose conduct was "incompetent, improper, wrongful, negligent and deceptive."

The report said Williams allowed himself to be manipulated by officials working on the project, failed to slow the project as problems mounted, procrastinated in firing key officials, didn't keep informed and kept some problems from the governor and the Legislature.

Williams declined to respond to the criticism.

Williams' predecessor, Gregory Coler, acted out of political motivations and presided over a computer project where "all checks and balances were ignored," the grand jury states.

Coler, the HRS secretary during Gov. Bob Martinez's administration, put the project on a fast track for completion just as he made his re-election bid, the report said. Coler, now a consultant in Tallahassee, denied the political implications.

Viann Hardy, former deputy secretary for management systems, is described as violating purchasing laws, signing off on false reports to the federal government and trying to subvert the competitive bidding process on computer contracts.

Project manager Judy Mitchell was "not competent," "knowingly misled" HRS officials and acted in a way that was "illegal, improper and wrongful," the grand jury said.

Mitchell and Hardy were indicted by the grand jury on several charges after a yearlong investigation. Both women maintain their innocence.

The grand jury made a host of recommendations, including asking that procedures be set up to avoid bias toward vendors and to penalize people who do show bias.

"If any good is to come out of this deplorable affair," the report said, "it can only be through substantial changes in the attitudes and performance of public officials and the laws and rules that control their power, authority and responsibility."

HRS Secretary Jim Towey, who was named head of the agency after the computer problems were uncovered, said Saturday he still has not seen the grand jury report.

"In fairness to our employees, I need to hear their version, and I want to sit down with (State Attorney) Willie Meggs and his people and find out what they learned in their investigation," he said Saturday.

Way back when

This is Sanford's entire Fire Department sometime between 1920 and 1925. Oddly enough the fire chief, George P. Paxton, is not in this picture. From left to right are Jack Horner, A.L. Thomas, Grady Duncan, R.T. Thomas, Mack Matthews and Joe Tatum. Tatum had two daughters. They were Susie and Eunice. One of them also appears in this photo but no one is sure if it is Susie or Eunice. Susie married I.V. Stenstrom Jr. He was the grandson of Sanford's early dairyman, Neils Julius Stenstrom. I.V. Jr.'s father, Iver Stenstrom Sr., was an engineer for the Atlantic Coast Line. The younger Stenstrom later operated a tire shop in Tampa for many years. R.T. Thomas, an uncle of A.L. Thomas, was the husband of Mrs. Maude Thomas who still resides in Sanford. A.L. Thomas now operates a barbershop in the building which appears in back of where he is standing in this picture. His brother operates Otto's Barber Shop on South French Avenue. Grady Duncan later was employed by the city of Sanford as a building official. Paxton retired as chief of the department May 12, 1925 when he turned over his duties to Chief Mack Cleveland Sr., father of former state Senator and presently local attorney Mack Cleveland Jr.

POLICE BRIEFS

Domestic violence

Jamie Jerome Brown, 25, 111 McKay Blvd., Sanford was arrested Friday night and charged with domestic violence battery after a fight with his girlfriend. He was arrested at 1405 W. 12th Street after his girlfriend alleged Brown began choking her during a fight.

Brown allegedly slammed the woman's head against the windshield of his mother's car, breaking the glass. The arrest report says Brown then threw his girlfriend to the ground. Brown's mother said she did not want to press charges for the broken windshield but the girlfriend is pressing domestic violence battery charges.

Strong arm robbery

An Altamonte Springs man was arrested Friday for strong arm robbery when he struck a Sanford business security guard.

Andrew Dupree, 28, 932 Lake Destiny Drive, attempted to leave a department store in the 3600 block of Orlando Drive after allegedly putting his clothing over new clothing he tried on in the dressing room. When a store guard attempted to detain Dupree, he allegedly hit the guard with his fists. After the attack, other store employees and the guard detained the suspect until police arrived. The merchandise was returned to the store, according to the police report.

Rest stop artest

Winfield Theodore Baumann, 31, 6619 Piney Path Road, Charlotte, North Carolina was arrested Friday at the Longwood I-4 rest area after police ran a computer check and found the suspect was wanted on two counts of obtaining property by worthless check and two warrants for failure to appear.

DUI Arrest

Michael James Kwas, 28, 464 Sun Lake Circle, Lake Mary was arrested and charged with driving under the influence Friday night by Lake Mary Police. An officer observed the suspect at a convenience store on Country Club Road and paced the suspect vehicle which exceeded the 30 mph speed limit on the road. After the traffic stop, the odor of alcohol was detected. Results of breath tests showed Kwas' blood alcohol levels were .129/.129.

License fraud

William James Roush, 33, 100 Pine Circle Drive, Lake Mary was arrested at the Florida Driver License Branch on East Airport Boulevard Friday after admitting to office officials he had given a fictitious name in applying for a license.

Warrant arrests

The following individuals were arrested on warrants:
 • Mark Dalton Clark, 22, 109 W. Buchanan Ave., Orlando, violation of probation/possession of cocaine.
 • William Harold Faux, 48, no local address, VOP/DUI felony.
 • Antoine Atkins, 30, 240 Oxford Road, Fern Park, VOP/Trespass.
 • Jason Andrew Lucas, 4426 Scenic Lake Drive, Orlando, failure to appear/dealing in stolen property.
 • Lisa Dawn Ackley, 29, 106 Bulova Dr., Apopka, VOP/theft.

Mother sues, says school knew her son was suicidal

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — When 13-year-old Shawn Wyke hanged himself from an oak tree in his front yard four years ago, it was a suicide that seemingly came without warning.

Now, his mother claims that school officials knew he had tried unsuccessfully to take his life the day before but kept it to themselves.

"This was a cry for help," said the mother's attorney Clay B. Rood. "That cry was ignored."

In a $2 million federal negligence lawsuit set for trial here next week, Carol Wyke alleges administrators were aware the sixth-grader tried to hang himself earlier in the boy's bathroom. And after calling him to the office and quoting him scriptures saying suicide was not "the Lord's will," they did not order psychiatric care, keep him under watch or even call his home.

Within hours, Shawn was dead.

"It could have very easily been prevented," Rood said. "Shawn was your classic all-American kid, pleasant, popular, athletic, attractive. He apparently had an inability to cope with relatively minor teen-age things — he just needed somebody to talk to."

The defendants in the suit — the Polk County School Board and the principal and assistant principal of McLaughlin Middle School in Lake Wales — maintain they were unaware of Shawn's previous suicide attempt until after his death.

"It was tragic," said former McLaughlin Principal Max Linton, now principal at nearby Frostproof High School. "We had no prior knowledge this would happen. No one did."

Why Shawn took his life remains a mystery. There was no note, no hint of any involvement with drugs or alcohol.

Ms. Wyke, a 36-year-old single mother and convenience store worker who now lives in a Tampa suburb, refused to comment on her only son. Her attorney said Shawn was given in-school suspension once for fighting and there was normal friction between the boy and his mother, dealing moodily with her refusal to allow him to play football.

Teachers and administrators agreed there was nothing outwardly unusual about Shawn, who had been at the school only a few months after moving to Florida from Pittsburgh.

"I didn't know anybody who didn't like him," said English teacher Shari Mansfield. "He had a temper but he never showed it in the classroom. He was a normal, polite young man. That's why it was such a shock."

The beginning of the end, according to the suit, came on the morning of Oct. 16, 1989, when a classmate walked in the boy's bathroom and interrupted Shawn before he could hang himself with a shirt. The classmate told his own mother, he said, "to be certain that none of the work we have accomplished up to this point is damaged because of any water runoff or erosion."

Kirby said a two-day rally has already been set for the Derby Park in December. "This will be two days of fun-type races," he explained, "with the contestants from all around the country competing for trophies."

He added that the events are not related to the Akron Soap Box Derby, and winning the rally events will not qualify a person for entry into the national derby event.

Regarding the remaining items on Phase II and III, Kirby told the commissioners he hoped it could all be completed by a maximum of two years, and hoped funds could be obtained through a matching grant from Florida Recreation Development Assistance Program and money raised through the local recreation program.

Dave's World is a funny place to be, says Barry

By JIMMY GOLEN
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — I swear I am not making this up.

Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Dave Barry now has a TV show based on his life and it (the show), he says, has all the things he doesn't have in his actual life, like plot, interesting characters and a well-lit home with things on the walls.

"Dave's World" premieres Monday on CBS at 8:30 p.m. EDT. Barry fans, especially the alert readers who fill his mail with newspaper clippings about animals that crawl out of plumbing or fall from the sky, will wonder how it all translates into a 30-minute sitcom.

So did Barry. "When I saw the script, I realized that you can't just take a column that I've written" and put it on TV, he said.

"If you did, I mean, it would end in four minutes and everyone would be killed by exploding toilets."

Harry Anderson, making his comeback from "Night Court," stars and plays the character that is "very loosely" based on Barry.

The rest of the show is, as Barry would never say, made up. "They've been real nice about asking me if I have any suggestions or anything, but I don't really know much about television," he said after a speaking engagement here.

"It's really theirs and not mine. And it's almost embarrassing the attention that I've gotten, unless of course it's a big success, and then I'll take credit for it."

Barry won a Pulitzer for commentary and the column he writes for The Miami Herald is syndicated in more than 400 newspapers.

He has also written six books; the show is based on two of them.

To that list of achievements he can now add acting, sort of. He makes his debut with an 18-word cameo that stretched the limits of his talent.

"I played the part of a guy who had no acting ability," Barry said. "I came on and forgot my lines, is what I did."

He hasn't seen any of the episodes except the one he was in, and even then, he said, "I was too busy trying to remember my 18 words to actually notice what anybody else was saying."

But he said he had fun working on the show and it was nice to get out of the hurricane magnet he calls both home and office.

He is also supplementing his income — and his material — with speaking appearances.

At last week's annual banquet of the Baton Rouge Chamber of Commerce, for example, he got to meet an assistant to Mayor-President Tom Ed McHugh (Official Campaign Slogan: "Two Titles, No Waiting") who, after calling him "Barry," made him an Honorary Mayor-President and presented him the keys to the city.

Then, the state's newest public official promised to fix parking tickets for everyone in the room.

Woman caught with Rx pot

BELLINGHAM, Wash. — A Florida woman who has permission to smoke marijuana for medical reasons in the United States was turned back at the border by Canada Customs.

Elvy Musikka, 48, of Hollywood, Fla., was barred from entering Canada on Wednesday at Blaine for carrying 20 joints, a two-day supply for treatment of her glaucoma, a debilitating eye disease. She is one of nine people with U.S. government permission to use the drug as medicine.

She and four fellow advocates for legalizing the drug worked the phones Thursday in Bellingham to raise about $1,250 from supporters in California to pay fines and regain their impounded van.

The group was headed for Vancouver, British Columbia, on a three-month national "Stop the Drug War" promotion that began Sept. 10 in Seattle. The GAINESVILLE — A bloody palm print on an apartment wall helped police make an arrest the day after a University of Florida student was stabbed to death and her roommate slashed in their off-campus apartment.

Richard Anthony Meisner, 27, was arrested Sunday in Orange Park, northeast of Gainesville, and charged with first-degree murder and attempted first-degree murder.

Police put Meisner's home under surveillance after matching his print because of a prior arrest in Alachua County, Sheriff Steve Oelrich said.

In a slashing that brought back memories of five student slayings that rocked this college city in 1990, police said Gina M. Langevin, 26, of Miramar, was found Saturday in the living room of her apartment with fatal stab wounds in her chest and back.

Her roommate, 24-year-old Jena Hull, of LaBelle, suffered multiple stab wounds to her head and torso. She was in critical condition at North Florida Regional Medical Center as of last report late Sunday.

Ms. Hull eluded her attacker by clinging to a second-floor guardrail, police and family members said.

"It was the balcony that saved her life," said Pauline Townsend, Ms. Hull's great aunt. "We're lucky to still have her."

Ms. Langevin was a graduate student in architecture. Ms. Hull was a former student who planned to re-enroll. Police released no motive for the attacks, but Oelrich said Meisner was an acquaintance of Ms. Langevin.

Meisner also has been identified by another roommate, Eden Matthews, from a photo lineup. Matthews picked Meisner as the man who came to the door of the apartment asking to see Ms. Langevin. Lt. Emery Gainey, spokesman for the sheriff's office said.

The stabbings occurred at an apartment complex near the Interstate 75-Newberry Road interchange west of the City of Gainesville and northwest of the university campus. The complex is popular with students.

"One of the things I moved into this particular complex is because I felt secure," Kara Shafer said. "For this to happen here is really, really freaking me out."

A Florida Department of Law Enforcement spokesman said there was no indication the attacks were connected to the 1990 slaying murders of five Gainesville students, which also occurred in off-campus housing near the city and campus.

A Louisiana drifter, Danny Harold Rolling, is awaiting trial on five counts of first-degree murder in the 1990 mutilation slayings.

Dr. Art Sandcen, dean of students at the university, said counselors would be available on campus Monday to talk with students about the attack.

Authorities had increased patrols in the community following the stabbings, Gainey said.

Phase II has been projected for sometime in the future, at a cost estimated at $123,200. Phase III, even further away, would cost approximately $85,300.

During Monday's city commission work session, Kirby explained how two of the projects in Phase II should be considered as soon as possible to insure that prior work is not damaged by erosion.

The work consists of drainage and pondwork, sidewalk/valley gutter and starting area platform, including materials, labor and equipment.

The cost for the work is estimated at $9,200. Kirby indicated all of the money would come from donations in the community, and would not be taken out of the city's budget.

"We really need to bet this work done as soon as possible,"

Should teens pray at school?

Last Wednesday, an estimated 50 students at Seminole High School gathered around the flag pole area in the early morning, and joined hands for prayer. The event was part of the National "See You at the Pole" program.

While it took place on school property, it was done a half hour before classes, and was not instigated or led by any school officials.

Seminole County School officials say there is no prohibition against individuals praying on school property, or even within an actual classroom, as long as it is not school led or school initiated.

This event was held a half hour before classes began, and students took it upon themselves to lead the prayers.

Some even commented that a few students have been meeting for a brief prayer before school begins almost every morning.

Unfortunately, there were other students Wednesday morning who seemed to enjoy mocking those who participated. The praying youngsters were not causing anyone harm, nor were they causing those who chose not to join them any anguish.

Yet those objecting felt obliged to ridicule the other students. They could have merely ignored what the gathering was doing. Because of catcalls and other unkind remarks they chose to make, we must wonder if prayer makes some people feel threatened.

On the national level, because of objections by a few people, our government has removed prayers or other religious activities from inside our public schools. As a result, they cite the Constitution which calls for the separation of church and state.

Whether or not that was what our forefathers originally intended, it is a matter constantly debated through the years.

The one thing that should never be separated is an individual and his or her rights and freedoms to practice religion.

Regardless of whether a person is Jewish, Christian or some other religion, the beliefs should not be forced upon others. People should however, be allowed to exercise their personal beliefs in words and actions, as long as they don't interfere with others.

It is comforting to see these students becoming involved in prayer. Their actions were sharply contrasted with those of other teenagers, just a day later, who allegedly gunned down a British tourist in north Florida, or shot a vagrant over a piece of pizza in south Florida.

Regardless of a person's beliefs, the children who gathered for prayer Wednesday at Seminole High School must be commended. They are doing what they believe is needed to help overcome the increasing problems in our community, state and nation.

School problems

Recently, the actions of several Sanford Middle School parents were depicted in a less than positive light. These parents chose to stay and be supportive rather than move several years ago. They have given in countless ways to supports, SMS, SHS and the community.

The Johnsons were cited, in particular, as having pushed for reasoning instead of reporting that they were members of a committee of local outstanding school supporters. Check your records — this fight was to increase population for funding equal to other Seminole schools and would have benefited all children.

As a PTSA our intent was to increase school spirit with fun activities and increase discipline of those troublemakers who were leading others astray and laughing at the administration. A meeting, re violence and lack of discipline, was met with denial from the previous administration. If there were no problems how can Mr. Moore say that conditions have greatly improved? Discipline is eroded by children when they light up on school property, walk across the grass, run, drive recklessly and disrespect teachers. The administration blames parents but I've seen students display behavior at school they would never display at home. Perhaps teachers and administrators need instruction in working with parents so they don't throw their hands up and say I quit, as many have done. We all lose when that happens. And, reporters, please do just that — report all the facts, just the facts and nothing but the facts.

P.S. When is the last time a school board member paid a surprise visit to a campus?

Integration that refuses compromise

Michael Meyers, the director of the New York Civil Rights Coalition, is one of the last of the unyielding integrationists. And to achieve that receding goal, he will, as one of his colleagues says, "walk alone if he has to."

During a session at New York Law School a couple of years ago, black students accused him bitterly of being an inauthentic African-American because he opposes establishing all-black public schools. He further enrages some black nationalists by scolding — as he told Newsday — "the cult of blackness, the charade of power and the fascination with flamboyant black militant types who are feted by the media."

Meyers has no memory of his father and was raised by his mother, who worked as a domestic. He grew up poor and alert in Harlem and the South Bronx. His older brother was killed during a mugging in Harlem.

Two of his high-school teachers told Dr. Kenneth Clark — the black psychologist and life-long integrationist — about Meyers, who then came to work for Clark as an intern. They have remained close and when Meyers, at Antioch College, protested the administration's creation of an all-black dormitory and study center, Dr.

Clark, an Antioch trustee, supported Meyers. For his heresy, Meyers was beaten up by some black students. And Clark, a minority on the board, resigned in protest against re-segregating black students.

Eleanor Holmes Norton took Clark's place. Michael Meyers, meanwhile, had filed a complaint against Antioch with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The college insisted — as many do now — that the segregated building was just a "theme dorm." Meyers said he did not see anything new in Antioch's variation on the theme of segregation. Meyers won the case.

Dr. Kenneth Clark told me that this stubborn young man would bear watching. Meyers earned a law degree at Rutgers, and from 1978 to 1984, he was with the NAACP — serving as personal aide to Roy Wilkins and as assistant director. He then worked briefly with Benjamin Hooks. Meyers grew impatient with what he considered the NAACP's retreat from integrationist principles, and left.

In 1986, Meyers co-founded the New York Civil Rights Coalition, a gathering of 33 civil rights, civil liberties, religious, community and other groups trying to break through racial and religious stereotyping in what New York Mayor David Dinkins used to call "the gorgeous mosaic" of New York City. The coalition engages in protest marches, reconciliation outreaches, and education, in and out of classrooms.

Meyers is usually at odds with most black leaders in New York. None, Meyers feels, do enough for integration. Some years ago, he resigned from the prestigious 100 Black Men because it refused to accept women.

Much of his crisply focused energy is currently directed at stopping two new schools in New York. This fall, the Ujamaa Institute — a high school aimed at attracting black and Hispanic males — will begin.

For his heresy, Meyers was beaten up by some black students.

Mideast peace rises above past

There is no other way to describe the pace of change in the Middle East over the past three weeks except with the hackneyed adjective, extraordinary. As with Anwar Sadat's dramatic peace pilgrimage to Jerusalem 18 years ago and Menachem Begin's response, leaders on both sides of the age-old conflict have again decided to risk much to achieve much more. If they succeed, their accomplishment will dwarf even the collapse of the Soviet empire in historic magnitude, though obviously not in immediate effect.

This is written knowing that it risks being overtaken by events. By the time this column is read, what held promise as a breakthrough to an Arab-Israeli settlement may have collapsed. In the Middle East, nothing is as certain as uncertainty. The forces of war have long been more powerful than the impulse to peace. But that is only stating the obvious. What the Rabin government in Israel, the PLO and Syria separately and collectively seemed to decide over the late summer was that continued intransigence is a loser. With each giving a little, each could gain a lot.

That is not the way hardliners see it. Israelis have ample reason to mistrust Arab intentions, having been in a state of war or non-recognition with most of their neighbors for 45 years. The nation's hawks believe Israel has a God-given right to the occupied territories. At their most extreme, they believe the only good Arab within their borders is a dead Arab.

On the Arab side, the Palestinians have sipped at the table of vengeance and diaspora for the same 45 years. At the core of the PLO's existence has been a vow to destroy the state of Israel and reclaim their lost lands. Outside the boundaries of what was once the colonial entity known as Palestine, hostility toward Israel in word and deed has informed and driven Arab foreign policy, barring only Egypt after the Camp David accords 15 years ago. The repeated humiliation of military defeat when rhetorical belligerence was interrupted by actual warfare did nothing to improve or alter the Arab world's approach.

But that is the stuff of relatively recent history. If that were all there was to the Middle East, peace would have come much sooner. If it were a 20th-century phenomenon such as Marxist-Leninism or totalitarianism, the Arab-Israeli conflict might have been settled as quickly as the Berlin Wall was torn down.

It isn't, which is why it hasn't. The first causes of hatred go back thousands of years. Claims and counter-claims are Biblical in their antiquity and intensity. To try to argue and win by reference to history is to plunge into a tunnel without end.

That was what made the Camp David agreement so compelling in its simplicity, though so dissatisfying to many Arabs. It set aside the old arguments and dealt with the concrete here and now. It changed some conditions on the ground, such as returning the Sinai to Egypt, and set up a framework for changing more, such as limited Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank and the prospect of wider negotiations with the other Arab belligerents.

The process has always been known as land for peace, a formula whose simplicity masked its inherent difficulties. On the one hand, Israel felt safer with the expanded borders it won in the 1967 war and reconsidered the wisdom of returning the conquered territories. On the other, the sad fact of life is that after Camp David, most of the Arab nations refused to join in. They demanded a guaranteed outcome before entering negotiations. What might have been a breakthrough turned into a dead end of meaningful but limited impact.

There is something else important to be said about Camp David and about the current situation, which at least momentarily seems to hold great promise. Whatever role the United States might have as an honest broker — and Jimmy Carter was central to the outcome in 1978 — the basic decisions are the responsibility of the concerned parties alone. While the Carter administration in 1977 and the Clinton administration in 1993 tried to pretend they were centrally involved in the original breakthroughs, they actually had little or nothing to do with them. Sadat shocked Washington with his dramatic gesture. The secret Israeli-PLO negotiations in Norway were held at more than arm's length from the U.S. Department of State.

That is as it should and must be. An imposed peace won't work in a region where enmities go back so far and are so deep. Whatever its shape, it would only add another layer to the landfill of regional grievances.

A successful regional effort, however, no matter how limited its immediate effect, would be a breakthrough of historic proportions. Arabs and Israelis would have overcome their shared past. For reasons of mutual self-interest, they would have declared that settling old scores is good for nothing but creating new ones in an endless cycle of retribution and revenge.

This is written knowing that it risks being overtaken by events.

Foley wants party harmony on NAFTA

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., has drafted some political rules of engagement for the congressional battle over the North American Free Trade Agreement.

Rule No. 1: Keep carnage among Democrats to a minimum.

"One of the things I'm concerned about, even though I'm a strong supporter of NAFTA, is that the debate and resolution of this issue not be a divisive carry-over problem for the Democratic Party," Foley told us during a 90-minute interview last week. "We don't need to have NAFTA and our disagreement about NAFTA infect, so to speak, our health-care decisions."

Rule No. 2: NAFTA will be a vote of conscience for Democrats, who can't be strong-armed into switching their votes.

"What I cannot do is take a firm and even emotional opponent of NAFTA and bring him in and sit down and say, pointing my finger at him, 'you've got to support the president and I want you to go out and vote for NAFTA.' No way, I couldn't do that with a pistol," Foley said. "The same things is true in reverse. (Majority Whip) Dave Bonior, D-Mich., isn't going to be able to take some member and say he's got to oppose NAFTA."

Rule No. 3: NAFTA proponents are getting routed on the rhetorical battlefield. It's time for a counter-offensive.

"We've left the rhetorical field entirely to the opponent. ... Very few members can tell you quickly what is the good side of NAFTA. There is a seminar-like defense of NAFTA. But the other side is, 'this is wrong and it's going to cost jobs and, by the way, if you are going to vote for this we're not going to forget it.'"

NAFTA may be one of the most nettlesome issues Foley faces this fall, but there's also health care, political reform and re-inventing government, each requiring different coalitions. That's why after the president, Foley may have the second toughest job in Washington, trying to shepherd an increasingly unruly flock of free-lancers in the House who are fracturing along ideological, geographical and even racial lines.

The art of coalition-building should be smoother with the end of divided government. At least that was the political fantasy some Democrats labored under after Clinton's victory — but it's a fantasy Foley tried to dispel early on. He recalls a meeting attended by a group of Democratic House members just before Clinton's inauguration. One member rose to giddily proclaim: "Now everything is going to be great."

Foley corrected his colleague: "I said the problems are going to be there. They are going to be different problems. Comparatively they are going to be welcome problems because we're all glad to have a Democratic president." Foley then asked for a show of hands for how many remembered Jimmy Carter, whose relations with Congress were stormy at best.

"There were blank looks," he recalled. "I think out of 70 people, seven or eight put up their hands. ... For most Democrats who are now in the House, there was no recollection of serving with President Carter."

If many Democrats can't remember Carter, no Republican can recall the last time the GOP controlled the House. "In the House there is sort of a pessimism about coming into majority leadership," said Foley. "Republicans have never had, in the living memory of any single member of the House, a role in leadership. So that creates a kind of 'we're the opposition, you guys won the election. Don't ask us for help.'"

Rule No. 1: Keep carnage among Democrats to a minimum.

45th Emmys Awards

Cable TV and HBO star at primetime show

By LYNN LEBER
AP Television Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Six years ago, when the Emmy Awards first opened the door for cable television, Home Box Office acted the part of the polite newcomer and claimed just three statuettes.

At Sunday's 45th Annual Primetime Emmy Awards, an emboldened HBO reflected the growing strength and broad creative reach of cable TV, winning more trophies than any of the traditional networks: CBS, ABC or NBC.

"I don't think the generation growing up now is going to say broadcast and cable," HBO Chairman Michael Fuchs said afterward, predicting that all TV will be seen as a seamless unit. "We broke the barrier."

The cable channel won 17 Emmys, including 11 creative arts awards given in a Saturday ceremony. NBC came in second with 16 awards, followed by CBS with 14 and ABC with 12.

Broadcast networks have been nervously watching their dominance ebb as viewers gain more choices through cable. Sunday's Emmy Awards bolstered critics' arguments that network quality is losing fading as well.

The ceremony, hosted by Angela Lansbury, was broadcast by ABC from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium.

Big series winners with three trophies each were NBC's "Seinfeld," named outstanding comedy series, and CBS' "Picket Fences," which won the best drama series Emmy.

"We started off so small it's going to be easy to thank people because there's like two people to thank here that even knew we were on," said series star Jerry Seinfeld as he accepted the award.

"Seinfeld" costar Michael Richards was named best supporting actor in a comedy for his role as the eccentric Kramer. Writer Larry David took home an Emmy for a notorious "Seinfeld" episode about masturbation. Rosanne Arnold, who has sounded off about her top-rated series' lack of Emmys, was named outstanding lead actress in a comedy series for "Rosanne." But she wasn't even there.

Co-star Laurie Metcalf won her second consecutive Emmy for supporting actress in a comedy, giving the ABC show a total of three awards in its five-year history.

A trio of honors also went to HBO's send-up of reality-based TV movies, "The Positively True Adventures of the Alleged Texas-Cheerleader Murdering Mom." Holly Hunter was named best actress in a miniseries or special for the movie.

"Picket Fences" stars Tom Skerritt and Kathy Baker, who play husband and wife Jimmy and Jill Brock, were honored as best actor and actress in a drama.

Ted Danson's win as best actor in a comedy series for "Cheers" wasn't enough to push the NBC series past "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" to become the most-honored program in Emmy history.

"Cheers" ended up with a total 28 awards in its 11 year run; "Mary Tyler Moore" has 29.

Miss Moore won set a record herself Sunday, winning her seventh career trophy for the Lifetime cable network movie "Stolen Babies" to tie former costar Ed Asner's top Emmy acting tally.

When HBO claimed its awards in 1988, two of the three were for the documentary "Dear America: Letters Home from Vietnam."

History proved a gold mine this year as well, with the HBO movies "Stalin," about the murderous Soviet dictator, and "Barbarians at the Gate," a comedic look at the R.J.R. Nabisco takeover, tying for the best made-for-TV movie award.

The networks, much lambasted for their instant, ripped-from-the-headlines movies, didn't have a single entry in the category.

'Murder, She Wrote' star loses 13th time

PASADENA, Calif. AP— Is Angela Lansbury the Susan Lucci of primetime award shows?

Miss Lansbury has been nominated for an Emmy Award 13 times, and each time she's gone home empty-handed.

The star of CBS-TV's "Murder, She Wrote," which first aired in 1984, lost the best actress in a drama series trophy Sunday to Kathy Baker of CBS' "Picket Fences," which premiered last fall.

"Thirteen's a good number for me," Miss Lansbury said when the nominations were announced in July.

But Miss Lansbury shouldn't feel so bad. Miss Lucci, star of the ABC-TV daytime soap "All My Children," has been nominated 14 times — losing each time.

and received $20 from Dorothy Ross. He spent $15 for bank charges.

Sargent's original expense report listed several payments from petty cash to petty cash and repayments of loans by Sargent to the campaign funds. After city clerk Geri Zambri notified the candidate the report was incomplete, Sargent said he would file an amendment.

Vacca has collected $390 plus a $100 loan from herself for her campaign. Vacca contributors are: Korman, $100; former mayor Hardy, $250; Jimmy Ross, retired, $20 and Artinella Crouse, housewife, $20.

Benson list a $100 contribution from attorney Gerry Korman and a $60 donation from herself. She spent $24 in banking charges.

All three of the challengers have pledged not to use signs during their campaigns to reduce pollution, relying on fliers and door-to-door campaigning. Cleaton, who chairs the committee backing Sargent, Vacca and Benson said has it stands now, the committee will not put up political signs during the campaign either, although she stopped short of making an iron-clad statement banning any signs.

"We don't have any signs now, and really no plans to get any," Cleaton said.

A more effective way to campaign, Cleaton said, is handing out literature outlining candidates qualifications and the records of the office holders. "That way, you are there to answer their (voters') questions," Cleaton added. "Besides the signs really don't give voters any real information and the masses of signs just cause confusion."

Commissioner Rex Anderson said he plans to use political signs during the campaign but added he will remove them immediately after the election and not pollute the environment. "Signs are good for name recognition," Anderson said, "but I will take them down as soon as the election is over."

Commissioner Harvey Smerilson said he is all for keeping political signs off the streets and out of the city. However, if other candidates have signs, he'll use them too.

"I'd be glad if no one puts up any signs," Smerilson said, "but if the other candidates (or their backers) put out signs, I will too."

views, but Mike Rich, representing the citizens' groups, Save Our Bubble, demanded equal time to make a similar presentation.

"There are some things we agree with, but our group should have equal time," said Rich.

Task force chairman Pat Harden ruled Rich was not due equal time, saying she did not know Seereeram intended to use the forum to state his views. Harden said she thought the consultant wanted to provide testimony of his professional experiences.

"The chairperson misunderstood what he wanted to do," said Harden.

Harden said each task force member will be given an opportunity to discuss their views and vote on each issue as they arise in preparing the task force's final report to the Legislature, due in 10 weeks.

In other discussions, Hugh Mitchell-Tapping, director of the water use regulatory division of the St. Johns River Water Management District, said the Geneva Bubble appears to lie fully within an area 20-foot or higher above mean sea level and extends to about 240 feet below sea level.

All of the wells contaminated with saltwater lie outside that boundary and all of the drinkable wellwater is within that boundary, he said.

The county dump and a small portion of Site 10 lie in that boundary, Mitchell-Tapping said.

Also, the Geneva Bubble may be two bubbles, he said. He said local residents living generally north of Osceola Road said the groundwater flow appears to be easterly, northerly or northeasterly, toward the St. Johns River. But residents living along the southwestern edges of the bubble say the water flows west, towards Lake Jesup.

Mitchell-Tapping said the separate flows may be caused by a thick layer of clay in the northern area of the Bubble, which may allow groundwater to "run off" into the river. The county uses that same clay layer as the bed of the dump.

located. It is also near land owned by Kelley's mother.

"This isn't a case of swapping square feet for square feet," Morris said had told the commission, "but based on the evaluation of the property on the lakefront, he would like to have an exchange for property on Oregon which has an equal value."

The commissioners listened to Morris' presentation, but indicated no desire to either look into a trade or ignore the offer. "It was just something for them to think about," Morris said.

A suggestion that the building might be a good location for a Chamber of Commerce was rejected when it was determined that not enough parking space was available.

During last week's city commission meeting, the first and only suggestion for use of the property was made. Commissioner Whitey Eckstein proposed obtaining the Kelley property, and turning it into a Seminole County Sports Museum.

"I know many of you won't necessarily agree with this," he said, "but I believe it may be an excellent location for a Sports Museum. We certainly have enough sports starts in the city's history to really have some excellent displays," he added.

"The way I would conceive it," he continued, "is to close Seminole Boulevard between the Kelley building and the lakefront which would provide some additional parking area. The building would then become directly located on the lakefront and be a very beautiful location for such a museum."

Some of the commission questioned why he referred to it as a "County" sports museum rather than a "Sanford" facility. He responded that by using the county designation, it would not only provide a wider range of sports personalities for museum displays, but might also allow the obtaining of Tourist Development grants for building remodeling and other needed work.

"It could certainly be a major focal point for our city," Eckstein said. "It will certainly attract people down here if we develop it properly."

Commissioner Bob Thomas commented, "While I'm not saying I fully agree with Mr. Eckstein, I will say that he has given us the first definite idea for the property's use." He continued, "Now if we all start coming up with some ideas, we may even find a better suggestion."

Eckstein added that he sees such a sports museum as a facility with which all of Sanford's projects could be tied together, such as the Main Street program and Waterfront development.

Commenting on Eckstein's suggestion, Kelley said he had not thought of a sports museum. "But I believe it would be a valuable asset to the city," he said.

"This is something which would be in the perfect location to attract people into downtown Sanford from the Seminole Towne Center Mall. And those are the people who have money," Kelley added. "The only way downtown Sanford can continue to survive is to bring those people and their money downtown."

Regarding the proposed land swap, Kelley observed, "I have no desire to stick anybody with anything. I have outgrown the space at my office, and it's time I thought about putting it to some better use."

He added, "When I get ready to sell it, I would prefer that it goes to help improve the city, rather than for commercial development. After all, land along the lakefront is hard to come by, and this particular parcel is in one of the best locations for the city to develop as an attraction."

Mormons reject dissidents for 'abandoning their faith'

By PATTY HENNETZ
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Two Mormon dissidents summoned before church courts to answer charges of abandoning their faith were excommunicated Sunday.

Paul Toscano, founder of the Mormon Alliance, a group that investigates cases of alleged spiritual abuse by church leaders, said he met with 15 Mormon stake leaders at a hearing that began at 6 a.m. and concluded nine hours later.

"They said I wasn't a bad person," Toscano said. "They said I had done apostate acts. I had done actions and said words that ... gave them no choice but to excommunicate me."

Toscano was one of several independent Mormon scholars and feminists recently ordered to appear before church disciplinary councils. Another, Makine Hanka, said she was also excommunicated following a hearing Sunday.

In the past, the church has moved against adulterers, bigamists and, more recently, right-wing survivalists. But the move against those who publicly differ with church leaders on issues of doctrine, history and the role of women in the church is new, say those accused.

Church spokesman Bruce Olsen has said the hearings do not represent a concerted effort by the church's central leadership. Instead, various local churches are simply moving to discipline members who have made public statements seemingly contrary to church teachings, Olsen said.

During his hearing, Toscano said, the stake president and 14 others played a tape of a talk he gave at a symposium last month. He said the officials were particularly upset when he mocked a governing church general authority.

The vote to excommunicate him was unanimous, Toscano said.

The actions come months after Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles identified feminists, homosexuals and intellectuals as the three dangers facing The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

D. Michael Quinn, a former professor at Brigham Young University who has written about admitting women to the Mormon priesthood, faces an excommunication hearing Sept. 26.

Also facing hearings are Lynne Whitesides, president of the Mormon Women's Forum; Avraham Gileadi, who has published books raising doctrinal questions; and Lavina Fielding Anderson.

Clinton hopes to save health care dollars by eliminating med fraud

By LAURIE ASSEO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Clinton's health care plan will propose expanded laws and tougher penalties aimed at reducing the fraud and abuse that costs the medical system tens of billions of dollars every year.

"We intend to make it very clear: Health care fraud will not go unpunished," Hillary Rodham Clinton said last week.

The plan being unveiled Wednesday will "send a strong warning to those who would steal from the American taxpayers," added Mrs. Clinton, who is overseeing development of the universal health insurance proposal.

Fraud is responsible for up to 10 percent of the nation's $900 billion-a-year health care tab, according to health care experts.

"That's a heckuva wake-up call these days," said Bill Mahon of the National Health Care Anti-Fraud Association, a coalition of law enforcement and health insurance groups.

The government already is stepping up its enforcement. National Health Laboratories Inc. of La Jolla, Calif., agreed to pay $111.4 million to settle accusations it overbilled government insurance plans, while two blood-testing firms paid a total of almost $40 million last week to settle false claim charges.

Mahon estimated that only 1 percent to 2 percent of all health care providers deliberately jack up their income by billing for care they don't provide, ordering unnecessary tests and or taking kickbacks for patient referrals. But a small number of people can cause massive financial damage, he added.

According to a draft plan circulated on Capitol Hill, Clinton plans to propose:

- Barring more doctors from referring patients to laboratories and services owned by the doctor, and from taking fees for making patient referrals. Such laws now apply only to care provided under federally funded programs such as Medicare and Medicaid.
- Federal civil fines for all who submit false claims. Such fines now apply only to federally funded care. Wrongdoers also could be forced to forfeit assets resulting from health care fraud.

• New criminal laws barring health care fraud, false statements and payment of bribes to public or private health care providers.

• Automatic exclusion from public or private health care plans for anyone convicted of health care fraud, or neglect or abuse of patients. This law currently applies only to care given under federally funded programs.

The civil fines for false claims would be raised to $10,000 per claim and triple the claim amount, from the current $2,000 and double the claim amount.

A new trust fund would be created with fines and penalties paid by wrongdoers. It would finance enforcement efforts coordinated by the Departments of Health and Human Services and Justice.

Cemeteries lost hundreds of graves in summer flood

By PATRICE DRAVINO
Associated Press Writer

HARDIN, Mo. — Hundreds of caskets, burial vaults and human bones — the remains of several generations — may never be recovered from a small lake gouged into a small-town cemetery by summer floods.

Backwaters from the flooded Missouri River surged through the Hardin Cemetery in July, working loose more than 700 of its 1,544 graves, many dated to the 1800s and others unmarked.

The water swept tombstones, vaults, caskets and bones into farm fields, hung them on fences and trees. It deposited some up to 14 miles away.

Two months later, 393 vaults or caskets have been recovered, along with uncounted skeletal remains. Ninety-four individuals known to have been buried in the cemetery have been identified; 314 graves remain unaccounted for.

He and Jerry Brown, an assistant director of the Missouri Funeral Directors Association, believe numerous vaults and caskets lie in about 15 feet of water.

But State Emergency Management Agency officials say pumping out the lake would be difficult because it lies below the water table. They also say it would be costly and could prove fruitless — divers last month couldn't tell what was in the murky water.

The decision whether to pump the water or move the cemetery is up to the cemetery board and SEMA, which is financing the cemetery recovery. It has cost about $100,000 so far.

"We're trying to go as quickly as possible on this," SEMA director Jerry Uhlmann said last week. "This is a horrible situation, and we're trying to correct it. The biggest problem is there's no place to pump the water out to because there's water everywhere around it. And that area is all level."

Only a small corner of the cemetery survived. Now it drops away 6 feet to a jagged, muddy bank from which vaults and caskets grotesquely protrude. Where the murky water laps at the bank, more dislodged caskets loom just below the surface. Toppled and broken gravestones are everywhere in the mud and water.

The floods washed away the oldest section of the cemetery, including a segregated part where blacks were buried decades ago. Many of those graves were unmarked.

Searchers find bones in the mud daily, and Snow predicts farmers will be ploughing them up for years to come.

A temporary morgue has been built on the county fairgrounds, and almost 500 families have come to an assistance center for counseling and to provide descriptions of their loved ones, how they were buried and anything that might help identify them, Snow said.

"The emotional situation for families has been more (painful) in the recent burials than in the earlier burials," Snow said. "It's still a shocking fact, but at least they have gotten their first grieving process out of the way."

"Some people have had some humor in it. One (man) came to me and he said, 'Dean, don't get me wrong, I loved my Dad dearly, but I can see humor in this because my Dad never liked to stay put in one place more than three or four years at a time.'"

"He said, 'Let us know when and if you do find Dad.' And his wife piped up and said, 'Yeah, because we want to see just how far he got.' And that is how they're dealing with it."

Overall, the shock seems to have lessened since summer. "Most of the people I've talked to have come to grips with it," said Shirley, the cemetery association president, whose great-great-grandparents were buried in the flooded area.

Harry Happy, 86, whose forebears settled in Ray County in the 1850s, said the graves of 21 family members were washed away, including that of his great-grandfather. The graves of his two wives were untouched.

Man who threatened Gifford arrested for raping another

LYNCHBURG, Va. — A man police say told a woman he raped in North Carolina that he wanted to kidnap TV personality Kathie Lee Gifford was arrested Sunday at a bus station.

Richard D. Jones, 33, of Shelby, N.C., was taken into custody without incident, said Capt. Tommy Litton of the Gaston County, N.C., police. He was picked up on a warrant involving the rape, which authorities said occurred on Wednesday.

Jones is charged with tying up, beating and raping a 59-year-old Gaston County woman. During the attack, police said, he told her about plans to kidnap Ms. Gifford.

"He had made mention that he would like to kidnap her and get some money," said Gaston County police Capt. Archie Huffstetler.

Police recovered a scrapbook that Jones apparently made containing pictures of Ms. Gifford from celebrity magazines, Huffstetler said. Authorities said the scrapbook was left at the rape victim's house.

On Friday, Gaston County authorities told police in Greenwich, Conn., where Ms. Gifford lives, about the threats. They also notified Ms. Gifford's security staff at an Atlantic City hotel where she stayed while working on the Miss America pageant.

Ms. Gifford appears on the daily talk show "Live with Regis and Kathie Lee." She and Regis Philbin were hosts of Saturday night's Miss America broadcast.

The North Carolina rape victim said she recognized her attacker "and" let him enter her house when he came to the door.

She said the man tied her up, raped her and forced her to write him a check for $1,400. He fled in her car after a neighbor who cut herself doing yard work knocked on the victim's door, police said.

Jones was held without bond pending extradition proceedings.

Health groups competing

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The nation's major health, consumer and business groups are stalling to make their voices heard in the din over President Clinton's health reform plan.

With television ads, a blizzard of faxes and non-stop news conferences, they are eager to put their spin on the debate as it shifts from the inner sanctum of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue to the more wide open corridors of Capitol Hill.

Asked to list the toughest group he must win over, the president told "Newsweek" magazine that doctors ranked first, followed by small business and insurance companies. "Building credibility among doctors is important, having doctors feel good about this plan," he said.

Here is a look at what some of the various groups are saying in advance of Wednesday's launch of Clinton's far-reaching proposal to reshape the health system.

• American Medical Association
"Our reaction to the president's preliminary plan is mixed," said Dr. James S. Todd, executive vice president of the AMA.

The AMA backs an employer mandate, comprehensive benefits for all and sweeping insurance reforms — all central features of Clinton's plan.

But "we are cautious because elements of the plan seem to place economics ahead of patients," said Todd. "We find disturbing the degree of proposed government and corporate intrusion into the relationship between physician and patient."

"We are also concerned that the means to finance reform is unclear," said Todd, who added that malpractice and antitrust reforms don't go far enough.

HEALTH INSURANCE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA

The White House and the insurance industry trade group have exchanged heated words over a $1.7 million HIAA advertising campaign that claims Clinton would force people "to pick from a few health care plans designed by government bureaucrats."

"We would stop our ads tomorrow if they would agree" to abandon plans to make people buy insurance through "state monopolies," said Bill Gradison, the HIAA president and former Republican congressman from Ohio.

"We support universal coverage. We want the federal government to establish the benefit package. We want to eliminate exclusions for pre-existing conditions," said Gradison. "We want people to keep coverage if they change or lose their jobs."

"It's simply not true that we're against health reform," he said hoarsely. "Today the life or death of an insurance company is in the hands of its customers. Under this plan, it would be in the hands of the government."

• Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association
The drug industry is relieved that Clinton decided against rigid price controls, just a few months after he accused the industry of profiteering.

And it welcomes the proposed prescription drug coverage for all Americans — with some caveats.

But John Gibbons, a PMA spokesman, said the industry objects vehemently to Clinton's demand for a 15 percent rebate on drugs sold to Medicare patients and authority to "blacklist a new drug (from Medicare) if the health and human services secretary deems it overpriced."

That would "chill investment in biotechnology and pharmaceutical research," the PMA says.

• National Federation of Independent Business
"We don't see where giving somebody health insurance is more important than having a job," said John Motley, the vice president for government affairs at the 810,000-member NFIB, which is waging guerrilla war against making all employers pay a large share of workers' insurance costs.

"We're getting ready to subsidize American's major corporations by making small businesses and their employees pay more," said Motley. "We're getting ready to have the second Chrysler bailout."

The NFIB is a lot more comfortable with reform plans that Republicans and conservative Democrats in Congress are proposing.

"We're going to do what we do best: go back home to the dry cleaners and restaurants and grocery stores and get them involved in the fight," Motley vowed.

• American Association of Retired Persons

Perhaps no group is more crucial to the Clinton administration's hopes for health reform than the 33-million-member AARP, voice of America's seniors and soon-to-be seniors.

Top AARP officials lobbied hard for the drug and new long-term care benefits in the Clinton package.

"It's promising," said John Rother, the AARP's legislative director. "But I think that we still are concerned about the adequacy of the proposed financing."

AARP is also concerned about the possibility that states eventually could fold Medicare patients into their health alliances.

If that should happen, Rother said, "we want it quite clear that Medicare beneficiaries must get the same benefits as everyone else."

Right now, they pay higher out-of-pocket costs and have no protection against catastrophic medical bills, said Rother.

Agricultural exports to EC expected to rise

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. agricultural exports to the European Community are expected to increase in fiscal 1993 because of more sales of oilseeds and their products, say agriculture economists.

"U.S. imports from the EC are growing more rapidly than exports, led by high-value products," said a recent situation and outlook summary on Europe by the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service.

In fiscal 1992, U.S. exports to the EC totaled $7.2 billion, compared with imports of $4.7 billion.

Crop production is expected to decline in 1993, it said.

"Production of wheat and coarse grains will fall only slightly, despite CAP (Common Agricultural Policy) reform price cuts and the set-aside program," the report said.

"Smaller cereal area will be partially offset by the recovery of yields from last year's drought-depressed levels," it said.

On oilseeds, the report said changing competitive conditions and poor weather at planting time should reduce EC output.

Sugar production is expected to return to normal levels in the EC after a record crop in 1992, it said, adding that "reform in the sugar sector was put off for another year."

The EC is implementing its CAP reform, changing the way domestic support is provided to EC farmers, the report noted. It affects most agricultural sectors, with the biggest change in cereals, where support prices will be cut 33 percent.

The reform will lower feed prices for livestock producers, the report said.

"With lower feed costs, consumer prices for pork and poultry should fall, increasing consumption. Higher pork and poultry production in 1993 should boost subsidized exports that compete with U.S. products," it said.

Beef support prices in the EC will fall 15 percent by 1996, it said.

"Lower CAP prices, combined with expected reductions in arable crop production, could contribute to a decline in EC farm income in 1993," it said. "However, significantly higher direct payments and reduced input costs for livestock producers will offset all or part of the lower value of crop production."

The report noted that negotiations on EC membership with Austria, Finland, Sweden and Norway started earlier this year and said support for arctic and Alpine farmers was the main agricultural issue. "Accession could occur as early as 1995," it said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department will donate about $27 million worth of farm products to the Russian Federation under the Food for Progress program.

The commodities include 29,400 metric tons of vegetable oil and 2,200 metric tons of pork. The donation will be distributed or sold by the Russian government to help develop agricultural and economic reforms within the Russian Federation.

Scientists drugs close to home

By PAUL RABURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — After searching jungles and rain forests, American scientists are turning to their own back yards in a quest for new medicines.

Drug maker Pfizer Inc. and the New York Botanical Garden will launch a $2 million project to screen tens of thousands of American plants for compounds that could be used to fight disease. The project is to be announced today.

"No one has really systematically gone through temperate flora and looked at it the way we're going to be looking at it over the next three years," said Paul Armond, a botanist at Pfizer Central Research in Groton, Conn.

The agreement is significant for its size and because, unlike other such projects, it focuses on American plants, said Walter Reid of the World Resources Institute in Washington, who has studied the commercial potential of biological resources.

About a quarter of all medicines come from plants, but U.S. plants "have hardly been tapped," Reid said. Interest in screening plants for new drugs has grown since the mid-1980s, he said.

Scott Skiles golf

LONGWOOD — Scott Skiles, voted most popular Orlando Magic player of the 1991-1992 season, is hosting the first annual Scott Skiles Celebrity Golf Classic on Monday, September 27 at the Alauqua Country Club in Longwood.

Joining Skiles and celebrity friends will be Alauqua resident Gary Player, who will hold a golf clinic at 8:15 a.m. prior to tee off time.

Power Play, a regionally based sports marketing firm, is coordinating this event for Frontline Outreach Inc. In addition to a pairing party Sept. 26 hosted by Heritage Grill, in the Sheraton-Orlando North, other happenings will include a silent auction and lunch awards ceremony.

Registration is $350 per player. Shotgun start at 9 a.m. Call (407) 898-PLAY for entry forms.

Orangewood stays No. 4

MAITLAND — The Orangewood Christian boys soccer team held onto its No. 4 ranking in the Class 1A State Poll despite being held to a 1-1 tie by No. 10 Master's Academy last Friday.

The top seven was unchanged as well as No. 10, while Sarasota Christian and Bradenton Christian enter the poll at No. 8 and No. 9.

The top 10: 1. Lakeland Christian (6-0); 2. St. Petersburg-Keswick (3-2-1); 3. Lake Worth Christian (4-0); 4. Orangewood (4-2-1); 5. Tallahassee-Maclay (3-3); 6. Pompano Beach-Highlands (4-1); 7. Miami-Florida Bible (5-1-1); 8. Sarasota Christian (4-3-1); 9. Bradenton Christian (5-2); 10. Master's Academy (5-0-1).

AROUND THE STATE

Lightning shock Panthers

MIAMI — Bill Lindsay made a bit of history by scoring the Florida Panthers' first goal in their home exhibition debut, but they lost to the Tampa Bay Lightning 4-2 Sunday night.

Chris Gratton, Rudy Poeschek, Bryan Fogarty and Rob DiMato scored for the Lightning, who have won two of three games against the expansion Panthers in the exhibition season. Denis Sevard had two assists.

Gord Murphy scored the Panthers' other goal.

The Panthers lost their opening preseason game Thursday in Lakeland to Tampa Bay, 4-3, then earned their first victory by beating the Lightning 5-1 Saturday in Jacksonville. The teams meet again in Orlando on Saturday.

AROUND THE NATION

Hammond breaks drought

Chris Hammond ended his seven-game losing streak, pitching the Florida Marlins past the Chicago Cubs 2-1 at Wrigley Field.

Hammond (11-11) got his first time since July 2, and squeezed home the winning run. Bryan Harvey struck out the side in the ninth for his 45th save and Jeff Conine hit his 11th homer.

Mansell wraps up title

NAZARETH, Pa. — Nigel Mansell is an expert on making adjustments.

The 40-year-old Briton made the adjustment from Formula One, where he was the reigning champion, to the Indy car circuit, where all the cities, venues and most people were new to him.

Next came oval racing, something totally foreign to a man raised on road courses.

Sunday, Mansell worked with an ill-handling car until it got right, winning the Bosch Spark Plug Grand Prix and the PPG championship.

Mansell, who had tears in his eyes after climbing out of his Ford Cosworth-powered Lola, joined Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil and teammate Mario Andretti as the only drivers to win both Formula One and Indy car titles.

Mansell shot past Paul Tracy on lap 47 and led the rest of the way, beating runner-up Scott Goodyear, the only other driver on the lead lap, to the finish line by 19.042 seconds.

There were no cautions in the race and Mansell set a record of 158.686 mph, breaking the mark of 148.526 set by Danny Sullivan.

Majesty opens new season with familiar result

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — New season, same results. Trinity Assembly of God from Deltona picked up right where it left off in June, besting a very good Sanford Central Baptist squad 13-6 on the opening day of the Sanford Church Softball League Fall Season at Chase Park Saturday morning.

Ike Mendoza had four hits and John Sever, Mark Rood, Jeff Pandoff and Tony Colon collected three hits each as Trinity, which plays under the team name of Majesty, amassed 21 hits in cruising to its 15th win in 17 starts, including going 4-2 to win the Spring Tournament, since joining the Church League.

FELLOWSHIP DIVISION		CHASE PARK
First Nazarene	123	110	1 - 6 17
Nativity Catholic Crusaders	104	202	4 - 7 13
Sanford Christian No. 1	000	000	0 - 0 6
First United Methodist	201	030	4 - 0 10
Trinity Assembly Majesty	102	033	1 - 13 21
Central Baptist	100	035	2 - 8 12

FUN DIVISION		PINEHURST PARK
Nativity Catholic Disciples	020	000	2 - 3 4
All Souls Catholic	090	200	4 - 10 12

In other games at Chase Park in the Fellowship Division, Lake Mary Church of the Nativity Catholic-Crusaders edged Sanford First Nazarene, 7-6, and Sanford First United Methodist blanked Sanford Christian No. 1, 6-0.

In the only game played in the Fun Division at Pinchurst Park, Sanford All Souls Catholic topped Lake Mary Church of the Nativity Catholic-Disciples, 10-2. Because of a couple of teams pulling out of the league late, Sanford Christian No. 2 and Antioch Missionary Baptist from Oviedo will both play their first games next week.

Next Saturday at Chase Park, Nazarene will play Sanford Christian No. 1 at 9 a.m.; First Methodist will take on Central Baptist at 10 a.m.; and the Nativity-Crusaders will face Trinity-Majesty at 11 a.m.

Wallace bangs way to victory in Splitfire

By WAYNE WOOLLEY
 Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. — Rusty Wallace bruised some feelings and Dale Earnhardt's Winston Cup points lead and told competitors to be ready for more.

Wallace's 28th career victory Sunday in the NASCAR SplitFire 500 at Dover Downs International Speedway allowed him to cut his second-place gap to 181 season points behind Winston Cup front-runner Earnhardt.

His seventh win of the season on a track that's given him difficulty his whole career came as a good omen as he prepared for the final six races of the season.

"I've got some of my great racetracks coming up," Wallace said.

Three of Wallace's wins this year came at tracks where the circuit is returning during the final six races.

Wallace's Pontiac beat Ken Schrader's Chevrolet by .41 seconds, followed by the Chevys of Darrell Waltrip, Dale Jarrett and Harry Gant.

The winner drew the ire of several drivers by touching off a wreck that heavily damaged five other cars. Wallace set off a chain reaction crash on a restart on lap 370 that also ruined Earnhardt's day when the five-time champion was running second.

Starting behind Hut Stricklin, Wallace hit Stricklin in the left rear, sending his Ford into Earnhardt and Ricky Rudd. Earnhardt wound up 27th.

Wallace speculated that Stricklin missed a gear and wasn't able to get out of his way.

"When I launched, he didn't launch as quickly as I did," Wallace said.

Earnhardt, whose car was badly damaged, blamed Wallace.

"I don't know what Rusty was thinking," Earnhardt said. "He ran right into the 27 (Stricklin). The 27 didn't miss a gear. He was running right along beside me."

Wallace said he has been hit from behind many times on restarts.

"It's each guy for himself," Wallace said. "When you take 40 cars and put 40 drivers in them and tell them to go, we don't put on our See Racing, Page 2B

Arena chases Mr. Florida crown

By NICK PFEIFAU
 Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Can a local business and family man from Lake Mary regain the title of Mr. Florida he held in 1987? It sounds like the opening of a soap opera, but it's the real-life challenge Matt Arena has given himself this year.

In 1987, Arena, who was a bodybuilder and sixth grade physical education teacher at the time, captured the lightweight division title of Mr. Florida.

On Oct. 2, he will be at the Van Wezel Performing Arts Hall in Sarasota, shooting for the title again in his first national comeback attempt.

Arena thinks his chances of winning are good. "Keeping focused on training is a little harder now that I have to pay the bills," Arena said, but his staff and clients know how dedicated he is to his sport.

A Lake Mary fitness trainer and author, Arena runs a Speed and Strength Building Camp for children 10 through 18 each summer, as well as directing the annual drug-free bodybuilding contest, the Seminole Classic, each year.

Saddened by being part of a sport often renowned for steroids and drug use, Arena says he will be competing drug free.

He trains every morning from 5:30 until 7:30 Monday through Saturday, and cycles 15-20 miles every other day.

His diet consists of cream of rice with six egg whites, chicken breasts, red potatoes, green beans, and protein

Strategy or mind games? Only the coach knows

Are they mind games or is it strategy?

As the high school athletic season begins to unwind, strange (to the casual observer) things are starting to happen with their accustomed regularity.

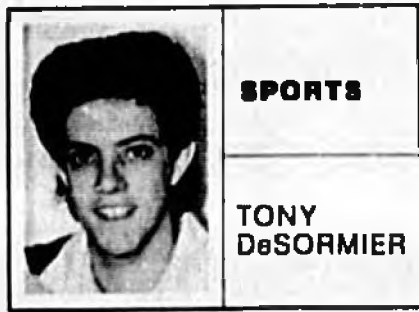

What kind of strange things?

One week after winning their first meet in four years, the Lake Howell High School girls cross country team competed in the Lake Mary Invitational the following week with some notable deletions from its roster.

This past week, a similar situation occurred involving the Lyman High School girls cross country team, who ran in the Edgewater Invitational without Ktanh Bresnick, one of the top runners in the state.

Odd? Depends upon who you talk to.

Cross country, like swimming, wrestling, tennis, and golf, is really an individual sport in the trappings of team competition. As a result, what is in the best interest of an individual may be in the best interest of the team.

SPORTS

If an athlete is ill or nursing an injury, it does that individual and his or her team no good to compete that day. While the effort may be a morale boost, the result probably will do more harm than good.

Sometimes, coaches have no choice. If an athlete won't get clearance from his or her doctor to compete until next week, then the coach has to go with who is available and hope there is a next week.

At this point in the season, still six weeks away from the district meets, teams are just beginning their internal competition to see just which athletes are going to make up the team from week to week, never mind in the postseason.

Also, where the regular season is actually part of the state championship qualifying process in football, volleyball, basketball, soccer, baseball, and softball, the regular season in the individual/team sports serve more as practice and preparation for the district meets.

Towards that end, coaches use regular season meets to get athletes into competition shape and gain experience. Since teams can only enter seven runners in a given cross country race, coaches will use a rotation of sorts, giving some athletes a week off from competing.

Finally, not every race is run to be won. Sometimes a runner is told to maintain a certain pace for one reason or another, regardless of what that may mean in terms of finishing position.

Why? In some instances, a runner may be putting in mileage work during a race, where just completing the distance is more important than the time it may take to complete the distance. It's also common for a veteran runner to accompany a inexperienced teammate through a race or two.

Where strategy becomes mind games is when and where coaches choose to enter which runners, remembering that one coach's strategy can be and often is perceived by other coaches and athletes as mind games.

Sewing club gathers

Every Tuesday from 9:30 a.m. to noon, the WOOPIE Sewing Club gathers at the Lake Mary Senior Center, 158 N. Country Club Road, to make baby clothes, and items for nursing homes as well as items for the Christmas Store. The items made by the club are donated to preemie babies, nursing home residents and gifts for the annual Christmas store.

Get the facts on xeriscaping

The term xeriscape may seem imposing, but it's just another word for landscaping techniques that conserve water. Any landscape, whether well established or newly installed can conserve water by using some or all of the seven basic principles of xeriscaping.

Most people associate xeriscaping with cactus or desert plantings mainly because the concept of xeriscape began in the western part of the U.S. But you can have a beautiful landscape, using many of your favorite plants, and have a water efficient landscape by using the principles of xeriscaping.

The first principle of xeriscaping involves planning a design. Many people can successfully create their own landscape design. And with the recent interest in xeriscaping, many landscape professionals are available to help with the design. It is important in xeriscape to group your plants together by their water needs. Thirsty plants like azaleas and annual flowers are grouped together and separated into different zones from drought tolerant plants like junipers.

The second principle is efficient irrigation. Irrigate turf areas separate from other plants as turf requires more frequent watering. Consider using low volume or drip irrigation in planting beds. Check your irrigation system often and adjust when necessary. It is best to irrigate on an "as needed" basis rather than on a regular schedule.

GARDENING

The third principle is practical turf areas. Turf is perhaps the largest water user in the landscape. Locate it where it provides a function and eliminate it from impractical areas such as dense shade or areas that are difficult to mow. Turf areas can be replaced with ground covers, shrub beds or mulches where practical.

The fourth principle is soil improvements. Adding organic matter will improve soil and help with moisture retention. Types of organic matter include compost, peat moss, leaves or grass clippings. As these materials break down, they also release valuable plant nutrients.

The fifth principle is to use mulches. Mulch helps conserve moisture and if organic, will add organic matter to the soil. Mulch also moderates soil temperatures and discourages weeds. Organic mulch materials include bark or wood chips, pine straw or compost. For mulch to be effective, place a 3-4 inch layer in planted areas.

The sixth principle is to allot appropriate maintenance. Be sure to plan for maintenance in your landscape. The way you fertilize, mow, control pests and prune all effect water needs. By xeriscaping, you develop a low maintenance landscape that will avoid many of the problems associated with a conventional landscape.

The seventh principle is to use low-water plants. Native or drought tolerant plants can withstand periods of little water or survive on natural rainfall. Native plants are adapted to our seasonal weather fluctuations. Place the right plant in the right place according to its growth. For instance, plants that require frequent pruning to keep in bounds are labor intensive and should be replaced with dwarf or low growing varieties that require less pruning. Large growing plants should be placed in areas that will allow them to grow to natural size.

For more information about water efficient landscaping call the Cooperative Extension Service Office at 323-2500, ext. 5558. Xeriscaping plant guides are available at no cost to the public. The guide contains a listing of drought tolerant flowers, ground covers, shrubs and trees.

Seniors hear about the future

Chris Uary, director of the Sanford Senior Center, left, was the guest speaker at a recent meeting of the Sanford Senior Citizens Club. President Dot Markle, right, presided over the meeting. The seniors learned about many events being planned for seniors over the next few months.

Woman who are sheltered may later be left exposed

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "In the Dark in Canada" could have been written by my mother. She and Dad were married for 40 years when they found out that Dad had cancer. The doctors said he had about a year left. Chemotherapy was started immediately, but after 11 months, he took a turn for the worse and died.

Before his illness, my mother had never paid a bill or balanced a checkbook. She had never put gas in the car or checked the oil. Dad did everything for her. All Mother knew how to do was cook, keep house and raise children.

When Dad died, Mama got a crash course in reality, Abby, please print this. There are many women out there who need to wake up.

THEIR DAUGHTER
DEAR ABBY: Re "In the Dark in Canada": When I'd ask my husband where we stood financially, he'd say, "Don't worry, honey, you will always be well taken care of."

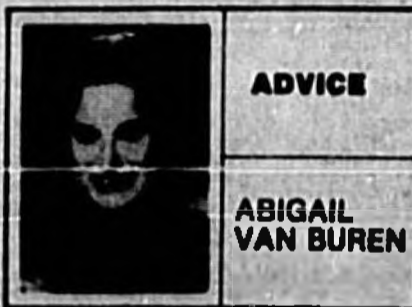

We lived very well — actually, too well for what we could afford. We had nothing in the bank, and my husband had debts I knew nothing about.

You can probably guess the rest of the story. My husband died suddenly, and I had to sell our home and go back to work in order to survive — at age 44.

CONNECTICUT SURVIVOR
DEAR DAUGHTER AND SURVIVOR: For years I have urged my female readers to make themselves fully aware of their financial situation should anything happen to their spouses. Specifically, their husbands should share with them information about assets and debts, insurance policies, contents of their will, etc.

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter from the woman trying to justify taking things from hotels, stating that she thought guests were expected to take things as souvenirs since they bear the hotel's name:

Abby, I place monogrammed

ADVICE

towels in the guest bathroom. That does not mean I expect guests to take them home as "souvenirs" of their visit to my home.

The reader states that the cost of "souvenirs" is built into the price of the hotel room. That does not justify stripping the hotel room of everything that isn't bolted down.

Customers pay higher prices when they shop at retail stores because of the cost of shopping, which is passed on indirectly to the customers.

I am sure your reader is an honest person who has just not thought the matter through. She did state that she took "some" ashtrays and water glasses.

I can readily understand how a person might assume it is all right to take "one" ashtray, or even "one" water glass, but taking "some" indicates that the guest is very likely collecting these articles for home use rather than souvenirs.

Thank you for printing this letter, since it seems to be an ongoing problem for hotel owners everywhere.

PATRICIA GETZER, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR PATRICIA: I recommend that guests ask hotel management if they may take an ashtray as a souvenir — the chances are, it will be offered as a gift.
