Boys accused of vandalizing church

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Two 9-year-old boys accused of vandalizing a church have been returned to their families for home detention and ordered not to have contact with each other until their arraignment for burglary.

The boys, whose names were not released, broke into the United Methodist Church sometime after Sunday services, police said. The vandals entered classrooms stocked with toys and educational material and went on a rampage, smashing windows and electronics and smearing walls with paint.

"There's no reason," said the Rev. Robert Bruce, pastor of the church vandalized. "I think it was just a couple of kids who were bored and out on a Sunday afternoon. One of them had a bad idea, and the other went along."

Bruce spent Monday trying to put his church in order. In room after room, books and toys were scattered on the floor, furniture was overturned and walls were smeared with red, yellow and blue finger paint.

The vandals sprayed the rooms with fire extinguishers, coating the floors with a sticky yellow dust. Cleaners told Bruce the dust must be hauled away as a hazardous material.

The burglars entered the church by smashing a window on a main door and unlocking it. Blue paint was smeared on the door.

Bruce said damages ran into the thousands of dollars, but he didn't know the exact figure.

One of the boys had paint on him when police found him at his home a few blocks away. On Monday, prosecutors discussed bringing felony criminal mischief charges in addition to burglary charges.

Because of their age, they likely would be sentenced to counseling programs if convicted and would live at home, officials said.

The boys appeared with their parents in juvenile court Monday and didn't speak during a hearing in front of Circuit Judge Aaron K. Bowden. Arraignment is set for July 22.

One mother, who said she was a widow, wept as she answered Bowden's questions.

"I suspect his mother is going to keep a pretty good eye on him," Bowden said.

The other boy, who lived with his divorced mother, will live with his grandmother in Jacksonville, his parents said.

Man accused of gunning down parents

MIAMI — A 21-year-old man gunned down his parents and critically injured his sister in what appeared to be a family quarrel, police said.

Lamont Horne was taken into custody Monday night after he shot and killed his father, retired Metro-Dade police officer Johnnie Horne, 49, and his mother, Mary Anne Horne, 48, according to Metro-Dade police.

Horne also shot his sister, Inga Horne, a dozen times, police said. She was in critical condition today at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

Police were called to the family's home in Miami's Little Haiti neighborhood after a family friend talking to Mary Anne Horne heard gunshots, a scream and the phone line disconnect, said Angel Calzadilla, a police spokeswoman.

When officers arrived, the mother and father were dead. On her way to the hospital, Inga Horne told police her brother had killed her parents and injured her.

Inside the family home, Calzadilla said, chairs were turned upside down and there were signs of a struggle.

Police believe the gunman reloaded his .25-caliber gun several times during the shooting.

An Horne was put into a police cruiser, a distraught, unidentified brother repeatedly asked him why he killed his mother.

Though police believe a family dispute preceded the shooting, no motive had been established.

Fatal engine failure

Crack in recycled part blamed for Delta mishap

By BILL KACSON
Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A pre-existing fatigue crack on a recycled part probably caused an jet engine fan to blow apart during an aborted takeoff, killing a mother and son, federal investigators said.

The inch-deep crack began in a bolt hole of the fan's 100-pound titanium hub, which broke in two Saturday as a Delta Air Lines MD-88 began its takeoff roll in Pensacola, a National Transportation Safety Board official said Monday.

Part of the hub landed a half-mile away. The hub, also known as a disc, had been used on another engine and then installed seven months ago during repair of an oil leak on the engine involved in the accident, officials said.

"A crack of that size probably is sufficient to cause the separation of the disc," said NTSB senior metallurgist Michael Marx. "At this time we can't tell whether there's any structural problems that precipitated the crack."

Anita Saxton, 39, her son Nolan, 12, of Scottdale, Mich., were killed and two of her children were injured when the left engine ripped apart and blew metal shards into the passenger cabin.

Services for Saxton and her son were scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday at Community Church in Ludington, Mich.

The broken hub was being sent to Washington, D.C., for further study at the NTSB's laboratory. Board member George Black said the agency also will examine Delta's maintenance records.

"Looking at their inspection program and looking at the nature of this defect will allow us to see whether they should have caught it," Black said.

A Delta metallurgist did his own inspection and came to the same conclusion about the crack, Black said.

"I don't know that I'd call it used, but it was a part of an engine that was sold to Delta Air Lines, I believe, in 1987," Black said. "But it is not uncommon. I am told, to switch major components on engines when there's maintenance work done."

Delta said today that the Pratt & Whitney JT8D-219 engine is built so parts can be swapped out on a continually basis from other engines.

"They take it apart and do inspections to see how it's wearing and then it's reassembled as a modular unit," said spokesman Todd Clay. "It's not like you pull a part out and you throw it away."

Delta officials said it will wait for NTSB to complete its investigation before making any changes in its operation. Clay said the airline wasn't convinced the replacement hub or an oil leak observed by the crew just before the plane began its takeoff roll necessarily contributed to the accident.

"No one knows when it cracked," Clay said. "The crack could have come a second before it came apart, the crack could have been there."

A preliminary review of the cockpit voice recorder also indicated that the crew had detected an oil leak on a part as the bullet, just in front of the fan.

"It was dismissed and was no further discussion," Black said. He said the crew did not mention the leak initially interviewed by investigators and will be mentioned again about it.

Black said it was unlikely a leak was related to the engine failure, but that possibility will be investigated further.

The JT8D-219 engine, purchased in 1993, powered another plane in November when an oil leak on a front bearing produced smoke that was sucked into the plane through the air conditioning system, according to Federal Aviation Administration files.

NTSB officials said no other engine of the type used on the MD-88 has ever experienced a broken fan hub, but that the same thing happened to a General Electric engine in 1989, contributing to a United DC-10 crash in Sioux City, Iowa, that killed 112.

'Den mother' to the utility department

In her nomination for city of Sanford employee of the month, Nancy Jermyn said of Karin Cochran that "she's depended upon for everything and carries out all (the utility dept. staff's) demands with efficiency and acts a lot like a den mother at times, being a good listener and helping ... wherever needed." Judge denies accused serial killer's bid to dump his attorney

By PAT LEBLANC
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — A man suspected of killing four women in four states failed in an attempt to dismiss his public defender.

"I'm represented by the same people who threatened to kill me," Glen Rogers told a judge Monday, explaining his five-page, handwritten motion to discharge attorney Joan Corcoran.

"I have great fear ... that the office of public defender and all of my court-appointed attorneys are predisposed as to my guilt," he wrote. "The state of Florida has already said they are going to kill me, when in reality they should be trying to learn the truth."

Circuit Judge Diana M. Allen denied Rogers' bid to fire Corcoran from the high-profile case despite his charges that Corcoran was incompetent and had a conflict of interest. The judge set trial for Oct. 21.

The judges' also turned down Corcoran's request to withdraw from the case. The attorney said Rogers, 33, refused to heed her advice and contacted the news media when he wanted to publicize his concerns.

Rogers is charged in Tampa with first-degree murder, robbery and auto theft in the Nov. 5 stabbing death of 34-year-old Tina Marie Cribbs, whose body was found in a motel bathtub.

He was driving Cribbs' car when he was arrested by Kentucky State Police on Nov. 13 following a 15-mile chase. He was extradited to Florida five months later.

Rogers, of Hamilton, Ohio, also is accused in the slayings of women in California, Louisiana and Mississippi as he crisscrossed the country, working at county fairs and carnivals.

Two bodies were found in bathtubs, one in a burning truck and one woman's on a punctured waterbed in her apartment.

At Monday's hearing in Tampa, Rogers told the judge he did "not know what I am charged with."

Rogers said he asked Corcoran for a copy of the indictment, but didn't get it. He said he was told she was too busy to send him a copy, too busy to see him weekly and too busy to work on his case.

Questioned about the accusations, Corcoran said she had 11 other cases, a trial and other matters to juggle.

But the judge said she was satisfied Rogers was given competent counsel.

Still, Rogers said he would file a motion to represent himself. "I can hardly wait," the judge said.

Rate of consumer debt slows

By MARTIN GRUTENBERG
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Debt-burdened consumers are finally taking a bit of a breather. The government says consumer debt rose in May at the slowest pace in more than three years.

The amount of debt owed by Americans rose at an annual rate of 4.9 percent in May, down from a 7.3 percent rate in April, the Federal Reserve reported Monday.

Both gains were the smallest since mid-1993 and were far below the double-digit increases turned in during much of the past two years as consumers went on a borrowing spree.

Analysts attributed the slowdown to both consumers and lenders becoming more cautious, reflecting the fact that delinquencies and personal bankruptcies have been rising in recent months.

"The credit card companies are tightening their standards. They are offering fewer new credit lines than they were just six months ago," said Paul Getman, an economist at Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Getman predicted consumer spending will begin to slow if lenders continue to tighten credit standards. Consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of total economic activity and has been the major driving force behind the current expansion.

The May advance left total consumer debt, defined as loans not secured by real estate, at $1.15 trillion, up $4.7 billion from April. It passed the $1 trillion mark for the first time last year.

This measurement of consumer debt does not include home mortgages, home equity lines of credit or any other loan secured by real estate.

David Wynn, chief financial economist at DRI McGraw Hill Inc. in Lexington, Mass., cautioned against reading too much into the drop in the rate consumers are adding to their debt burdens.

"We are not seeing a major swing in credit habits. We are seeing a minor swing as the consumer becomes a bit more cautious," he said.

The category of consumer credit that includes credit cards rose at an annual rate of 18.1 percent in May, down from an April rate of 20.3 percent. The increase left debt in this category at $444.4 billion, a gain of $6.9 billion from April.

The slowdown was more pronounced for auto loans, which rose at an annual rate of 3.4 percent in May, compared to an April increase of 10.8 percent. The May advance left auto debt standing at $360.5 billion.

The category of debt that includes loans for mobile homes, education, boats, trailers and vacations fell for the second straight month, declining at an annual rate of 8 percent, following a 13.1 percent rate of decline in April. The decrease left debt in this category at $340.1 billion.

Torch run through town

The heavy heat clung to those who lined U.S. Highway 17-92 Monday morning, patiently, uncomfortably waiting.

The mood was festive even though the day was not. Oppressive heat undulated from the road dotted with a cross section of Seminole County residents from Casselberry to Sanford. A typical summer day, one better spent inside an air-conditioned building.

The Olympic Torch run passed quickly through downtown Sanford, along the lakefront, and headed north on its final leg to Atlanta.

For that short time, the heat seemed to matter little. Some shed silent tears, mostly unnoticed, mingling with summer sweat. Some cheered. Some watched in hushed reverence.

Ironically, the origin of the torch is with Adolph Hitler at the 1936 Olympic games. We wonder if those spectators who watched that summer in Munich felt as those who watched Monday.

Because Monday, our misunderstood diversity, our inability sometimes to feel compassion for those unlike us, our fear of that which is different, all left us. In one brief and united moment, we felt the real meaning of the torch that carves light from darkness, and ignites in us all the spirit to do our best each day.

May we never again forget.

Big difference

Listen up all you great and wonderful people out there in "never-never-land" ... Question and answer time. Test your knowledge on the subject of "truthfulness" when it involves politics.

Q: What is the one big basic difference between many D.C. Republicans and D.C. Democrats?

A/R: Many D.C. Republicans actually do lie from time to time but they know it.

A/D: Many D.C. Democrats actually do lie much of the time and they haven't got a clue. Many D.C. Democrats wouldn't recognize the truth if it belted them right in the chops.

And now that you know the big basic difference, don't you feel much better and safer? Sure you doll Me too!

Foundations back race preferences

Polls continue to show that the California Civil Rights Initiative (which would bar race preferences in state employment, contracts and college admissions) is overwhelmingly favored by the state's voters. But its liberal opponents, who are determined to defend the practice of granting preferences to less-qualified applicants who belong to some favored minority, aren't giving up without a fight. In that fight, they are getting immense help, in the form of cash grants, from some of America's biggest and best known tax-exempt foundations.

You may think that, in return for not having to pay any taxes on the hundreds of millions of dollars they hand out every year to anybody they please, such foundations must avoid contributing to purely political causes. And indeed section 501 (c) 3 of the Internal Revenue Code, under which they are authorized, does prohibit them from doing so. But the truth is that the big foundations, which without exception are staffed by liberals and totally dedicated to the promotion of liberal causes, regularly drive a Mack truck sideways through the tax laws.

That is what they have done in financing liberal opposition to the CCRI. On April 21 the Council on Foundations, meeting in Atlanta, sponsored a "joint affinity group meeting" on "Affirmative Action: What's at Stake." Opponents prefer to call it "affirmative action," rather than race preferences, which are all CCRI would bar.) Organizations attending included the Association of Black Foundation Executives, Hispanics in Philanthropy, the Women's Funding Network, and the Working Group on Funding Lesbian and Gay Issues.

As plans were laid to allocate huge grants to the battle, those present were told that the tax laws were no problem. According to minutes of the meeting, which were acquired by Foundation Watch magazine, Tony Romero, a program officer at the Ford Foundation, declared that Ford's attorneys had assured staffers that IRS regulations permit it to defend affirmative action. This was a moral issue for funding organizations, he asserted -- "We need to put our grant dollars where our mouths are."

In that fight, they are getting immense help, in the form of cash grants.

In other words, Mr. Romero wants to take money generously left untaxed by the American people (who must then make up the revenue shortfall out of their own pockets) and put it where his mouth is.

No sooner said than done. The "Rights and Social Justice Program" of the Ford Foundation has awarded $1.4 million in supplemental grants (that is, over and above their regular grants) to 12 organizations to finance "research on the impact of affirmative action programs, strategy sessions and forums on the subject, and litigation, advocacy, and public education efforts." If you think that doesn't add up to barging right into the middle of a political battle, I have some New York bridge properties that might interest you.

The biggest grant, $550,000, went to the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law, which was to pass chunks of it along to such rabidly political organizations as the Women's Legal Defense Fund, the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

When college athletes turn pro

Washington--"Pretty cool about Allen Iverson, huh?" the cabbie said. "I mean, No. 1 in the entire NBA draft."

It was, I must say, just the sort of response I would have expected from him. "I don't begrudge the kid the honor or the money," I said. "But doesn't it occur to you that by leaving Georgetown University after just two seasons, Iverson has cheated himself out of a college education? And not just Iverson. Do you realize the first seven players selected by the National Basketball Association were underclassmen? They're being lured right out of school by the hope of a fat contract."

"No," the cabbie said. "Your nephew who quit school and joined the Marines may have been betting on the come. And probably a pretty good bet, at that. But these kids weren't speculating. The money is there for them. Why shouldn't they take it?"

I was trying to figure the best way to explain it to him when he piped up again. "I just remembered something," he said. "The last time we had this conversation, you wanted to keep basketball playing kids from getting into college, at least until they got their SATs up. Proposition 48 or something, you called it. Now you don't want them getting out of college, even to make a ton of money. What have you got against athletes?"

I explained that my problem wasn't with athletes but with the system that exploits them. "Colleges give them scholarships, not because they are scholars but because they can make some money for old U. Most of the schools don't care whether the kids get an education or not. They just use them until their athletic eligibility is up, and then ..."

"I thought you were complaining because the kids quit school before their eligibility was up," the cabbie said. "Big-time basketball schools spend a lot of money recruiting these kids, coaches hang their careers on these kids and then, first chance they get, they walk away. Who's exploiting whom?"

"Well, the NBA, of course," I said. "They're just using the colleges as their minor leagues."

"True enough," the cabbie said. "But let me ask you a question. Let's say your kid is a terrific trumpet player, so good that Julie Yard recruits him for their symphony, giving him a full scholarship, the whole thing. And then let's say along about his sophomore year, the Boston Pops offers him a permanent, well-paid gig. You think he should stay in college? Or take your field. If a journalism student gets offered a job on The Washington Post or The New York Times, he should turn them down and go back to school, study hard and hope that the same offer will still be there a couple of years later?"

They're just using the colleges as their minor leagues.

"You're mixing apples and oranges," I said while I was trying to think of something somewhat more to the point. Then I thought of it.

"You see, if it were just college kids who were being exploited, I might even concede a part of your argument," I told the cabbie. "But do you realize that two of the first 10 youngsters selected in the draft, three out of the entire 55, were high school students? I sat back to let my point sink in."

"So you'd make these high school kids go to college first?" the cabbie said.

"Of course, it's the only reasonable thing to do," I told him.

"And what about their non-athletic brothers. Would you make them attend college too?"

"Apples and oranges ..."

"OK," the cabbie said. "Let's say you make the kids go to college. Suppose they don't pass the entrance exam, then what?"

"Ever hear of junior college?" I said. "Let them go to juco, then transfer ..."

"So they can go to the university and be exploited?"

"Well, if you're so smart, what would you do?" I demanded.

"You're the one who's got a problem," the cabbie said, "but I could offer a couple of suggestions, although I'm certain you wouldn't like either one of them. You could pay college athletes, the same way you pay kids for working in the dining hall ..."

"And that would just encourage colleges to get into bidding wars for top athletes, like paying them $25K a year to keep track of lunar eclipses."

"Or you could get rid of intercollegiate sports."

That was too much. I gave the cabbie an careful about how so many of our youngsters would never get the chance for college except through athletics. "Take away college sports and you take away just one more incentive for young men to go to college, especially young black men. I guess you'd rather have these young brothers dealing drugs or flipping hamburgers."

"Apples and oranges" the cabbie said.

JOSEPH SPEAR

Everybody's a deep throat

This is how far the media have progressed in America:

During the presidential campaign of 1800, a scandal-monger named James T. Callender published in a Richmond newspaper foul rumors that Thomas Jefferson had sired five children by a slave named Sally Hemings. The stories have been repeated over and over through the years. In 1992, Hollywood even weaved these ancient whisperings into a film, and thus elevated them for our video generation to the status of established fact.

During the presidential campaign of 1996, one of the most respected newspapers in America printed a front-page story about the First Lady's ailments with a "motivational expert, during which Hillary Clinton was asked to imagine she was speaking with one of her idols, the late Eleanor Roosevelt. It was an exercise in role-playing, a technique routinely used by Fortune 500 corporations across the country. But when Hillary did it, it suddenly became a "seance" with a "psychic."

Five days later, a Washington newspaper that lusts for respectability but constantly comes up a peck shy of a bushel bannered a story that alleged the president of the United States had been sneaking out of the White House to visit a paramour in a local hotel. No sources were quoted to back up this sensational charge, but it immediately became part of the Bill Clinton legend, accepted as fact by columnists and comedians.

Take the Hillary story first. It appeared in the Washington Post, a newspaper which is normally a stickler for attribution, but which, for some unwholesome reason, grants a blanket exemption to its famous Watergate reporter, Bob Woodward, whose latest book was the basis of the story. It has become Woodward's practice to identify no sources, saying only that his tales are "based on interviews with hundreds of people." His first and most celebrated book had one Deep Throat. His latest, "The Choice," has an army of them.

Hillary's self-help expert, Jean Houston, does indeed sound like a New Age flake, and I personally believe that most of this spiritual-connection stuff is charlatanic sludge. But Houston has published 15 books and counts General Motors and Xerox among her clients. Why was this fact not emphasized? I will offer my opinion: Woodward's book is a boring piece of crud, and this was the only thing in it sensational enough for the Post to use as an Informercial/story.

Take the Bill story, published in the Washington Times. It, too, was based on a book, "Unlimited Access," written by Gary Aldrich, an FBI agent with 30 years of experience, including a stint in the White House. It was rife with shocking disclosures: White House employees had seen homosexual acts between members of the staff; Bill bedded an "attractive but a little dizzy" female worker; one female intern didn't wear underwear; and, of course, the juiciest tidbit of all, the president's nocturnal assignations at the Marriott Hotel.

His source for this story, Aldrich wrote, was a "highly educated, well-trained, experienced investigator who is conducting his own investigation into the Clintons."

Any reasonable editor would have said, wait a minute. I don't care how much FBI experience this guy has. He is a button-down conservative. His publisher, Regnery, is a right-wing house. The language in his book shows he hates the Clintons and their minions.

Woodward's book is a boring piece of crud.

Outspoken critic quits McDonald

By RICHARD KEN,
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — One of the Federal Aviation Administration's harshest critics is leaving her government watchdog job — but that doesn't necessarily mean she's turning her attention elsewhere.

Mary Schiavo, the Transportation Department's inspector general, resigned Monday to pursue writing and speaking opportunities, her office said.

Schiavo has been a media mainstay in recent months and has offered blistering assessments of the FAA; her public visibility increased dramatically in the aftermath of the ValuJet crash.

But she has not been free of criticism herself; members of Congress have suggested that she should have passed her concerns on to them before airing them publicly.

According to her office, Schiavo's resignation was effective immediately. She had left the office, and was unavailable for comment, aides said.

"She wants to speak and write, and probably work as an attorney again," said Mary Helen Rice, a staff assistant.

Her husband, Alexander Schiavo, told The Washington Post that Schiavo was six months pregnant and leaving for personal reasons, including her desire to spend time with their 2-year-old daughter. "She wants to have some private time with the family. That's essentially what it is," he was quoted as saying in today's edition.

Her departure follows the announcements that two top FAA officials would resign, but apparently is unrelated. They resigned under pressure for reform at the agency; Business Week reported in its current issue that Schiavo would leave her $118,700-a-year job if she could secure a lucrative book advance.

Since ValuJet Flight 592 crashed into the Everglades on May 11, killing 110 people, Schiavo has appeared on television and has testified before congressional panels looking into airline safety and the FAA's performance. The FAA is part of the Transportation Department.

Schiavo, 40, was appointed Transportation's inspector general by President Bush in 1990. As a former assistant U.S. attorney, she brought a prosecutor's investigative background to the job and, as a licensed pilot, aviation expertise as well.

Late last month, she told a House panel that she had complained regularly to the FAA about what she considered its lax inspection practices and the problems they created in effectively monitoring rapidly growing airlines such as ValuJet.

"Unfortunately most accidents are preventable. Planes don't fall out of the sky unless something is wrong," Schiavo told the House Transportation panel.

But she also acknowledged that she had not written the FAA about her concerns — prompting congressional criticism.

"If you make a comment like that, those words have consequences," said Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., the ranking minority member of a House aviation subcommittee. "People take note of someone saying something like that, and you have to substantiate those remarks. She didn't."

Under federal law, inspectors general are required to pass on to Congress within seven days any problems requiring immediate attention.

But Congress has received no "seven-day letter" from Schiavo.

In response to questions on the matter from The Associated Press, Schiavo provided a letter she sent on July 2 to Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska. In that correspondence, Schiavo asserted that the "judgment of what constitutes a serious or flagrant problem is to be made by the inspector general."

She also noted that the "seven-day letter" had been used just 10 times in the 12 years between 1978 — when the inspector general law was passed — and May 1990.

"The consensus of the inspector general community," Schiavo wrote to Stevens, "was that the seven-day letter should be used in those situations so egregious as to require congressional oversight to produce a satisfactory resolution."

Like all IGs, Schiavo is required to provide semiannual reports to Congress. Her most recent submissions — including an April 22 report on the aging fleets used by commuter and some other airlines — offer no specific complaints about any airline, including ValuJet.

But in her letter to Stevens, she said she had used the semiannual reports and other routine reporting methods to convey to Congress her assessment of the FAA and the airline industry.

he also was elected to the Florida Legislature for the Lake Seminole area.

However, McDonald did more than just politics. He was the president of The Title Group, Inc. of Seminole, president of the Florida Land Title Association and president of the American Land Title Association.

It was these positions that allowed McDonald and his family to travel the world. According to his wife, Mary Lou, they did 40 state conventions in a year in 1982 and even toured China when it first opened in the '70s.

"But we always came home to Sanford because we loved it," Mary Lou said. "We either came home to lick our wounds or prepare for the next trip."

While he was home, McDonald did his best to stay involved in the community. He was a devout Christian, attending the First United Methodist Church of Sanford, district governor of Rotary International, chairman of the board of trustees for the Central Florida Regional Hospital and was on the board of Sun Bank, NA before it became SunTrust.

"Everything he did, he did well," said Jack Horner, a 30-year friend of McDonald. "He was always up front with people and you could always trust him."

"He did a lot for his family, his community, and of course his church," said Sonny Rayborn, McDonald's friend for the last 40 years. "He was definitely a gentle man."

"He believed in honesty," added his wife of 48 years. "That's just the way he was."

Everyone, including Garnett White, another 35-year-long friend of McDonald's, said they felt that this stemmed from his father's strong influence; he was also very active in his community.

Born in DeLand in 1932, McDonald attended Stetson University and married the girl across the street. They raised 4 children in Sanford: Thomas H. of Orlando, Matthew J. of Sanford, Martha M. Crozier of In-terness and Cynthia M. Gules of DeBary. McDonald's family was awarded Sanford Family of the Year in 1972.

McDonald was also recognized as one of the five outstanding young men of Florida in 1963, graduated from the University of Florida's law school and was a veteran of the Korean War.

In addition to his wife and children, McDonald is survived by his brother, F. Morton, and his sister, Rebekah Boetic, both of DeLand and seven grandchildren.

Memorial services will be held at the First United Methodist Church at 419 N. Park Ave., Sanford at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, July 10. Visitation will follow in the Fellowship Hall.

Friends who wish, may contribute to the Stained Glass Fund, the Florida United Methodist Children's Home (both care of FUMC), or Hospice of Central Florida.

Interment will be at a later date in the Adamsville Cemetery in Sumter County.

Hurricane

early today described the storm as "dangerous."

On Monday, Bertha pushed through a string of northeastern Caribbean islands with winds of about 100 mph. The damage was less than anticipated and far less than the devastation wrought by hurricanes Luis and Marilyn last year.

But Bertha did claim four victims, two surfers who challenged nature's fury and drowned and two men killed in a car accident in Puerto Rico.

This morning the Coast Guard was searching for a boat with as many as 42 people aboard.

"The final transmission from the vessel said it was in the eye of the hurricane and people were jumping into the water," said Dennis Uhlenhopp, the Coast Guard spokesman in San Juan.

By 8 a.m. EDT today, Bertha was 125 miles east of the Turks Islands and moving west-northwest at a rapid 18 mph, with little further strengthening forecast over the next 24 hours.

Bertha is expected to make a turn towards the northwest over the next day. If it remains on that course it would miss Florida altogether, forecasters said.

"What I think will happen over the next 24 hours is it will turn a little bit towards the northwest and that's good news for South Florida," said hurricane specialist Max Mayfield.

"We still can't let anybody off the hook this is a very dangerous hurricane — 115 mph winds."

Officials urged coastal residents of Florida to prepare nonetheless, however.

"It could get close enough for us to put up a watch, but we are hopeful now it may turn toward the north," Mayfield said.

Puerto Rico got lucky Monday as the eye of the storm passed just to the north, within 45 miles of the island.

"The eye didn't miss the edge of the coast by much," said Mike Hopkins, a meteorologist at the Hurricane Center. "It could just as well as turned out the other way."

But the hurricane landed a direct hit on the Virgin Islands earlier in the day.

On St. Thomas, the main U.S. Virgin island, Bertha ripped roofs and doors off homes and littered streets with tree limbs and power lines. Plastic tarps were torn off houses left roofless by Marilyn last season.

But torrential rains did the most damage, flooding many homes and buildings.

"There's not a lot of damage, but I've been wet for 12 hours and every footstep I take makes a squishy sound on my carpet," said Jeff McCarey, a 26-year-old liquor salesman, as he surveyed the damage to his one-bedroom home overlooking Charlotte Amalie harbor.

"This is nothing the local rum can't cure," Darrell Conet, a 39-year-old government employee, said after the winds died down in Charlotte Amalie.

On the whole, islanders were relieved at the relatively light damage compared to last year's hurricanes.

"I feel very fortunate," said Tracy Booth of St. Thomas, although she added that her friends lost the roof of their house to the storm.

In the British Virgin Islands, yachts were overturned in Virgin Gorda, power lines downed and trees snapped in half as the eye of the storm passed over.

A surfer identified as Litton Jones, 35, of New York, was missing and presumed dead in rough seas and high winds off Puerto Rico. Another male surfer drowned in the U.S. Virgin Islands, said Gov. Roy L. Schneider. No details were immediately available.

Authorities also blamed the hurricane for two traffic deaths on Puerto Rico, in which a car ran off a rain-slicked road and hit a tree.

Amateur radio operators picked up reports that a ship was drifting in the hurricane off Puerto Rico, and that half of the 42 people on board were missing in the storm.

But the Coast Guard was unable to contact the vessel directly, and a search Monday turned up nothing.

The governors of Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands put police and troops on alert to prevent the looting that often follows hurricanes.

More than 200 people were holed up in shelters in Fredericsted on St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands.

American Airlines and Carnival Air Lines canceled flights in and out of Puerto Rico on Monday, but said they expected to resume operations today.

American Airlines, the U.S. carrier with the most routes to the Caribbean, canceled all 260 American and American Eagle flights to and from the U.S. Islands of Puerto Rico, St. Thomas and St. Croix; the Dutch island of St. Maarten; and Antigua.

Air service continued to other Caribbean islands not in the storm's projected path, such as Jamaica.

from 12-year-old Auguste Sadberry, who was molested by a teacher seven years ago.

Billy Campbell is now serving a life term, or a minimum of 35 years in prison, after his 1991 conviction for sexual battery on children.

Fired from a teaching job in South Carolina in 1978 for inappropriate behavior with a 7-year-old, Campbell moved to Tallahassee, where he had jobs at three different elementary schools.

At least twice, he got into trouble for his behavior, but he was able to find another teaching job. In 1986, Campbell was arrested after a student reported seeing him molest a classmate.

Approximately 20 states don't require any background checks of teachers, according to Brogan, who said he didn't know of any other state that has already established a database of fired teachers.

"As a nation, we've got an awful lot of work to do," Brogan said.

Historically, about 1 percent of the teachers fingerprinted have been arrested, Brogan said. What happens to teachers with arrest records will depend on the circumstances of the individual cases, he said.

The law also authorizes the state to conduct random criminal checks of teachers and requires all people who work at a school to be fingerprinted by January 1998.

The database should be in place in about a year, Brogan said.

A lobbyist for one of Florida's two teacher unions said educators understood the need for the law.

"It's certainly well-intended," said Marshall Ogletree, with the Florida Teaching Professional National Education Association.

He pointed to the abuse suffered by Auguste.

"If we can make sure that doesn't happen again, this will be a good piece of legislation," he said.

FTP-NEA has some 80,000 members in public schools, colleges and universities across the state.

Gary Landry, a spokesman for the Florida Education Association/United, said it was hard to be against the law.

"We certainly support making sure that our classrooms are safe and secure for our kids," he said.

Landry said the FEA-United, which has some 70,000 members, did have some concerns the law could be used as a witchhunt and about problems caused by standards that differ from district to district.

"As long as it's not abused, we stand in full support of keeping our classrooms safe," he said.

George Saunders, both experts in historical houses, Jerry Mills of the HPB recommended that Lessard be denied.

Mills cited protecting the historical integrity of the area as one of the reasons behind his recommendation, and the board acted on his advice, turning down Lessard's request for a C. of A.

However, Lessard said that he had conferred with "the only two experts within 80 miles," Saunders and Shuttleworth, about the windows and had been told that they were appropriate, so he went ahead with them. Lessard also said he had applied for a C. of A. two weeks prior to starting work but had not heard back, so he reapplied on the day he started work.

Lessard said he could not wait any longer due to the amount of damage being caused by the rain.

Commissioner Lon Howell said he was walking by that day and noticed Lessard doing work without a C. of A., so he stopped and told him to quit work. Lessard complied and waited for his hearing in front of the HPB, anticipating he would be approved. However, he was not, so he appealed the decision to the commission.

Six weeks later it made it to the commission's agenda where commissioners heatedly debated the issue and finally voted unanimously to overturn the HPB's ruling.

"I have newfound confidence in the system," Lessard said. "However, I would like to see the HPB reimburse fees when appeals are overturned. That would put them in a position to make sure they have grounds before they turn you down."

However, the appeals process was not without problems.

Howell insisted that no evidence be heard on the case that had not been presented to the HPB, just as the commission's by-laws demand. However, there was no transcript of the hearing to go by, so the commission had to make do with only the minutes. This caused some disagreement among the participants about what exactly had already been presented, but was overcome with a little cooperation.

Mayor Smith concluded that since the issue was subjective because of the disagreement between the experts and Mills, she said that the city must balance Sanford's historic integrity with the importance of the city's citizens.

To this, a huge round of applause ripped through the crowd on hand for the meeting.

The commission then voted to overturn the HPB's ruling and allow Lessard to keep the windows. However, they did ask him to make sure and not do any future work without permission.

Best reading programs combine sounds and meaning

By DEB ROSSMAN
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON — Hoping to end a lengthy debate, researchers launched a campaign today to convince educators and parents that the best way to teach children to read is by combining the sounds and meaning of language.

The campaign — "Learning to Read, Reading to Learn" — was announced here by representatives of the National Center to Improve the Tools of Educators, based at the University of Oregon, and 25 partner organizations.

More than a decade's worth of reading research and reports were reviewed to compile a list of the most effective strategies for improving reading instruction, especially for children with learning disabilities.

The campaign, financed primarily by the Education Department, stresses several principles for learning to read: Learn the alphabet, letter sounds and the relationship between letters and words, and understand that language is made of words and syllables. Children also must know spelling patterns, be able to identify words quickly, develop an appreciation of the written language and learn to read reflectively.

"For years, there have been many questions about how to approach reading instruction," says Edward Kameenui, an education professor at the University of Oregon who directed the reading research project.

"Now, the evidence is undeniable that a strategic approach — one that begins at an early age, teaches kids that language is made up of sounds, syllables and words, and is combined with literature — is essential."

This combines what is known as the "whole language" approach and "phonics" instruction, two methods that have been debated for a decade.

Phonics stresses reading letters and knowing letter sounds. Whole language instructors tend to focus on understanding the meaning of what is read. These teachers immerse their students in literature, but for the most part don't emphasize letter sounds and individual words without a context.

National studies report that more than one in six children will encounter a problem learning to read during their first three years of school, the researchers say. And children with learning disabilities who fall to read early end up falling further behind.

"The research strongly suggests that the recent swing away from phonics instruction is making it more difficult to lift children with learning disabilities out of the downward spiral and, in fact, may impede other students from learning to read," Kameenui says.

Jane Burnett, a spokeswoman for The Council for Exceptional Children, a Reston, Va.-based group that represents both gifted students and those with learning disabilities, favors a combined instructional approach.

Students with learning disabilities, such as dyslexia, which causes them to see letters backwards, often struggle with the whole language approach because they have trouble linking letters with the sounds they make, she said. Without this skill, these students cannot decode and read single words, let alone sentences, paragraphs or whole stories, she says.

California recently decided to re-emphasize phonics in language instruction, says Scott Hill, senior research and policy analyst at the California School Boards Association. In response to dismal reading scores, the California education department earlier this year called for a marriage between the two approaches.

American campaign consultants guide Yeltsin

By JOE ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Boris Yeltsin's successful re-election campaign was given a secret boost by three American consultants who preached the American-style campaign tactics of smiling, getting out to the streets and blasting the communists.

The three veteran Republican Party operatives, hired last February when Yeltsin's support rate had fallen to single digits in opinion polls, schooled Yeltsin's Russian staff in the art of the photo op, the purpose of a focus group and the effects of negative ads.

When they arrived, said George Gorton, Yeltsin's staff was organized like communist cells with no one talking to anyone else. A main campaign ploy was to contact factory managers under the assumption they would tell their workers how to vote.

Gorton, polling expert Dick Drener, and political analyst Joe Shumate have all worked on the political campaigns of California Gov. Pete Wilson. Gorton was campaign manager for Wilson's short-lived presidential bid last year. They declined to say how much they were paid by the Yeltsin campaign, although Time Magazine said they received $250,000 plus expenses.

They talked to The Associated Press Monday upon their return from Moscow, where they pretended they were selling thin-screen TVs and tried assiduously to avoid exposure of their real work.

Yeltsin's opponents would certainly have attacked him for using American consultants. News of their presence leaked out at the end of the campaign, but "if it had been earlier we probably would have had to pack up and go" because of the damage it would have caused Yeltsin, Drener said.

The three occupied rooms on the 11th floor of the President Hotel, Yeltsin's campaign headquarters, where they were protected by armed bodyguards and discouraged from going out. But they were also next to the office of Yeltsin's daughter and chief adviser, Tatyana Yeltsin Dyachenko.

She served as a direct conduit to the president for their memos and advice. Her presence "was the thing that saved the campaign, the single most important thing was having Tatyana," Gorton said. "Everybody else was either terrified of Boris ... or they were infighting."

Their advice to the campaign was to get Yeltsin out of Moscow more, a risky business when his negative ratings were worse than those of Stalin.

They pressed the campaign to stay on an anti-communism, pro-stability message, appealing to the fears many Russians held about Yeltsin's main rival, Communist Party candidate Gennady Zyuganov.

They also urged Yeltsin's people to make early overtures to nationalist candidate Alexander Lebed, heading off a proposed coalition among Lebed and other third-party candidates that could have sunk Yeltsin. If that coalition had been formed, Gorton said, "Lebed would probably be the president of Russia now."

After the first round of voting in June when Yeltsin narrowly came out ahead of Zyuganov, Yeltsin appointed Lebed, who came in third in the polling, his new national security adviser.

The three said one of their most difficult roles came when former First Deputy Prime Minister and Yeltsin campaign manager Oleg Soskovets early on suggested they provide advice on calling off the election if their numbers showed that Yeltsin was heading for defeat.

In May, Gorton said, those seeking to stop the election came up with a poll showing Yeltsin trailing badly. To counteract that, "we wrote a memo that said flat-out that the election is in the bag," he said. They had never before offered a client such ironclad assurances, "but we all wanted to make sure this process went forward."

The three worked with the Russians on relatively minor points such as replacing a poster of a scowling Yeltsin with a smiling version. They advised the ad agency to make their negative ads more subtle — and pull one poster that showed a hammer-and-sickle made up of cockroaches.

But Shumate said that "the most important thing we did" was getting the campaign to focus on anti-communism and the message that the future of Russian democracy was on the line.

New Israeli leader

WASHINGTON — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is likely to find in his talks here considerable U.S. patience as he works out a strategy for negotiations with the Arabs. But the new Israeli leader also can expect to be reminded that past promises must be kept.

Meeting today with President Clinton, Netanyahu is looking for understanding that Israel intends to be more selective in choosing among Arab peace partners and in yielding land to them.

It is an approach, he said before departing Israel Monday, that seeks to guarantee Israel's security. "We are not willing to accept the deterioration of security as an existing and natural situation," the assertive new leader said. That was a job at acceptance by the past two Israeli governments of the longtime U.S. maxim that the Arabs will provide peace only in exchange for giving up land that Israel says it needs as a buffer against attack.

Clinton and Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who held a warmup meeting with Netanyahu June 25 in Jerusalem, are signaling their sensitivity to Netanyahu's concern, especially in light of recent terrorist attacks on Americans in Saudi Arabia. Twenty-five Americans were killed in incidents in Riyadh and Dhahran.

Tough questions

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's top military advisers face tough questioning as two Senate committees begin investigations into the June 25 terrorist truck bombing that left 19 U.S. airmen dead in Saudi Arabia.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Monday the inquiries, which also include a separate House committee probe, will examine "whether or not the Clinton administration knew in advance of the danger."

Defense Secretary William Perry; Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and Army Gen. Binford Peay, head of the U.S. Central Command, spent part of Monday preparing for today's Senate Armed Services Committee hearing.

In a letter sent to Capitol Hill in advance of the hearing, Perry said U.S. military forces based in Saudi Arabia took extensive steps to improve security prior to last month's deadly blast at Dhahran. But in an acknowledgement that more could have been done, Perry also outlined measures ordered after the bombing to protect against terrorism.

Vote on minimum wage

WASHINGTON — After months of partisan rancor, the Senate finally is voting on a 90-cent-an-hour increase in the minimum wage.

But a Republican push to exempt millions of newly hired workers from the increase, plus employees of small businesses, threatened to plunge the Senate right back into the contentious election-year dispute that has snarled its proceedings for much of the year.

President Clinton has labeled the exemptions, proposed in an amendment by Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., as "poison pills" that would draw his veto.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said he assumed, but was not sure, all 47 Senate Democrats would vote against the amendment today. He said he hoped enough GOP senators — at least three — would side with Democrats to block it.

Concealing antenna towers

BOSTON — The steeple of the United Methodist Church in the scenic coastal town of Ipswich reaches out and touches more than just the heavens — it's also a cellular phone transmitter.

Same goes for a plastic tree near George Washington's Mount Vernon estate in Virginia, a flag pole in Pittsburgh and even the lights over the left field wall at Fenway Park, home of the Boston Red Sox.

Phone companies anxious to expand service without angering communities defensive about their history and architecture are concealing their antenna towers anywhere they can and paying rent for the rights.

"The industry is being forced, frankly due to strict zoning and community concerns, to be more innovative in the way they camouflage these towers," said Duncan Milloy, a spokesman for BellAtlantic NYNEX Mobile.

Infected with AIDS virus

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Less than two of every 1,000 young women in the United States are infected with the AIDS virus, and the numbers are falling sharply in the Northeast, where HIV is most common, new statistics show.

The figures provide more evidence that the AIDS epidemic has stabilized in the United States. In all, 6,230 pregnant women were found to have HIV in 1994, the year for which the most recent data are available.

Women in 45 states are anonymously tested for HIV when they give birth. The results provide a snapshot of the extent of AIDS among sexually active women, who are at highest risk.

The latest data, compiled by Dr. Susan Davis of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, were released Monday at the 11th International Conference on AIDS.

Marlins name new skipper

MIAMI — John Boles took over a Florida Marlins team with a $30 million payroll and expectations of contending for a wild-card playoff berth. But at the All-Star break, Florida is 40-47, which prompted general manager Dave Dombrowski to replace manager Rene Lachemann on Sunday.

The head of Florida's player development since November 1991, Boles had a record of 349-271 in 5½ years as a minor-league manager in the 1980s.

The Marlins' road record of 14-30 is the worst in the National League.

Smoltz, Nagy All-Star hurlers

PHILADELPHIA — John Smoltz of Atlanta will start against Cleveland's Charles Nagy in Tuesday's All-Star game, a matchup of last year's World Series Game 3 starters.

Cleveland's Kenny Lofton will lead off for the AL and play center field, and Wade Boggs of the Yankees will bat second and play third.

Baltimore second baseman Roberto Alomar will bat third and play second, followed by Frank Thomas of the White Sox at first. Cleveland's Albert Belle will bat fifth and play left, and Texas catcher Ivan Rodriguez will hit sixth.

Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken will hit seventh, followed by teammate Brady Anderson, who will play right field in place of the injured Ken Griffey Jr.

Lance Johnson of the Mets will lead off for the NL and play center, followed by Cincinnati shortstop Barry Larkin.

San Francisco's Barry Bonds will play left and hit third, Atlanta first baseman Fred McGriff will hit cleanup and Los Angeles catcher Mike Piazza fifth.

Colorado's Dante Bichette will bat sixth, followed by Braves third baseman Chipper Jones and Houston second baseman Craig Biggio.

Bonds wins home run derby

PHILADELPHIA — San Francisco's Barry Bonds beat Oakland's Mark McGwire 3-2 in the final of the Home Run Derby. Bonds, using a bat belonging to Houston's Derek Bell, became the first National League player to win since Ryne Sandberg in 1990.

McGwire launched nine homers in the second round, but Bonds, the only NL player to make it out of the first round, hit 10 in the second to make the final.

Baltimore's Brady Anderson and Seattle's Jay Buhner also made the second round. Two players, Milwaukee's Greg Vaughn and Florida's Gary Sheffield, failed to homer.

Coaching legend ill

BALTIMORE — DeMatha High School basketball coach Morgan Wootten, one of the few high school coaches to win more than 1,000 games, was listed in critical condition at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

It was unclear when Wootten was hospitalized and what he was being treated for. Wootten's program has produced at least a dozen players who went on to play in the NBA and about 200 who played in Division I college programs after leaving the Hyattsville school.

Volunteer of the Week

Nurse fills spare hours at Hospice

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Peggy Stickney began working with the Hospice of Central Florida organization over seven years ago as a weekend Hospice nurse. She has since left that position and volunteers in the Sanford branch of the Hospice of Central Florida Thrift and Gift III Shop.

According to Stickney, being a Hospice nurse allowed her "to get involved as a nurse, supplement income and keep up on nursing skills."

Although this 18-year Sanfordite has been employed full time since 1983 as an instructor at Seminole Community College in the nursing program Stickney still finds approximately three hours a week to give of her time, energies and abilities to help the Hospice organization prosper.

She has been assisting the gift shop for two years. "I work the cash register or price clothing when I work," she said. "Sometimes I come in to balance the drawer and work sheet."

Stickney cited that her interest remains sparked by the "comradery and social contact" and the fact that all the volunteers "know the work is for a good cause."

After Stickney's three children, Chris, Cory and Cricket, grew up and left home she said she had "always wanted to do volunteer work." Although life is busy being employed and volunteering, she wouldn't have it any other way. "I always believed in the concept of Hospice," said Stickney. "I wanted to do something different besides nursing and teaching so I decided to volunteer with the Thrift and Gift Shop."

In addition to her work with Hospice of Central Florida Stickney and her husband of 28 years, Dennis, are members of Chapter 2, Seminole Wings Motorcycle Group that consists of couples that ride Honda Goldwing motorcycles. Stickney handles the newsletter for the group.

She is also on the board of directors for the local unit of the American Cancer Society. Stickney is a registered nurse.

Color landscape with crape myrtle

Summer is here and the crape-myrtles are in full bloom, a native to southeast Asia. This tree is one of the most versatile plants you can find in the landscape. It is easy to propagate, with a long blooming period, drought-tolerant, grows under many soil conditions, and needs little or no fertilization. The flowering season for crape-myrtle begins in June and extends into the fall; flower colors range from red, pink, white, purple or lavender. Another important characteristic for which some varieties are selected, is the trunk color that varies from light straw to rich deep brown color.

Uses: It grows well in limited soil spaces in urban areas such as along boulevards, in parking lots, and in small pavement cutouts if provided with some irrigation until they become well established. Single trunk or multi-trunk specimens make ideal small shade trees for a sunny deck, terrace, or entrance walkway. They can be used as visual barriers, a specimen plant in the garden, or they can be used as foundation plants, in containers or even as large groundcovers.

Pruning: Heavy pruning is usually done each year, to promote heavy blooming. Pruning should be done in late winter or early in the spring before growth begins because it is easier to see which branches should be pruned. New growth can be pinched during the growing season to increase the number of branches bearing flowers. Pruning should be done to remove dead wood and old flower stalks, but many times crape-myrtles are pruned almost to the ground. With the availability of new dwarf varieties, severe pruning will not be necessary to control size.

GARDENING

New Varieties: "Acoma" and "Tonto" are two semi-dwarf varieties (less than 12 feet tall after 10 years of testing) with great potential to become landscape gardeners favorites. They are hybrids of Lagerstroemia indica (Crape-myrtle) and Lagerstroemia fauriei. Acoma produces heavy but smaller panicles with white flowers and a distinctive horizontal branching. This variety has a good powdery mildew resistance. As the tree ages, the foliage becomes yellow-orange during the fall with an attractive creamy bark. Tonto is a slightly taller variety than Acoma, with large panicles with red flowers and an upright and rounded type of growth. It has a good resistance to powdery mildew. Other promising varieties are "Cherokee", 10-12 feet tall, with bright red flowers; "Bluxi", 25 feet tall, pale pink flowers, orange-red fall foliage, hardy and mildew resistant; "Powhatan", 14-20 feet tall, clear yellow fall foliage, medium purple flowers; "Natchez", 30 feet tall, white flowers, resistant to aphids; "Muskegee", 24 feet tall, light lavender flowers and "Tuscarora", 16 feet tall, with dark coral pink flowers. They all have demonstrated resistance to powdery mildew in the trials.

Pests and Diseases: The crape-myrtle aphid is one of the most frequent pests of the crape-myrtle, promoting sooty mold to grow on the foliage and trunk of the tree. Heavy infestations of the aphids cause the plants to become unsightly and spraying may be necessary to control this problem. Powdery mildew is the most common disease found in crape-myrtle, and may be cause of concern with plants growing in wet, shaded places and fungicide sprays may be necessary to control this disease. There are new cultivars available which are resistant to powdery mildew and aphids.

Biological control: The large aphid populations that are usually present on crape-myrtle is a good source of food for a large variety of predators, many of which can be found feeding on the aphids and building up large populations of their own. It is very common to see larvae of lady beetles and lace wings feeding on the aphids, becoming a source of beneficial insects for the surrounding areas. A crape-myrtle in your yard, can become a factory of natural biological control for your landscape plants. Make sure that you do not apply any insecticide to control the aphids. You may be destroying the most precious commodity that the crape-myrtle has to offer, biological control of insect pests.

Noise getting neighbor down

DEAR ABBY: Could you tell me why construction workers feel it is their privilege to have their radios and boom boxes blaring while they work on residential property? What would happen if we all felt we had this privilege? For instance, imagine what it would be like if gardeners, tellers in the bank or checkers in the markets all played their radios at high volume while they worked.

I live next door to a house that has been undergoing remodeling for four months. (The owners moved out and won't return until the work is completed, and who knows when that will be?) One day I was subjected to the noise of three radios — from three different construction crews.

Time and time again I have appealed to the workers, the contractor and the owners to alleviate the stress of having to listen to this unnecessary noise pollution six and sometimes seven days a week — often starting before 7 a.m. Nothing has changed.

I have no objection to the noise made by various tools they use, nor to the shouting, banging and dust attendant with the work. It contributes to the betterment of my neighbors' property and to the employment of people. But being forced to endure blaring radios is something else.

I have asked the workers why they can't use headphones, but have received no satisfactory answer.

BOB PROUDLOCK,
LOS ANGELES

DEAR BOB: Headsets could pose a danger to the workers. They would be unable to hear a cry for help or a warning of impending danger. Also, orders from the boss would be blocked. Since your appeals have fallen on deaf ears, perhaps you should report the noise pollution to the police. Many cities have laws on disturbing the peace.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: In reference to "Sonia in Spring Lakes," who wrote complaining about "Jake," her 50-plus-year-old boyfriend who got too chummy with the hostess of a party that he took Sonia to:

You compared Jake to a bumblebee in the garden of life: entertaining to watch at a distance, but guaranteed to deliver a nasty sting if you got too close.

You advised Sonia to tell Jake to buzz off, which reminded me of the following poem:

"This is the story of the little bee
"Whose sex is very hard to see.
"You cannot tell the he from she
"But she can tell, and so can he.
"The busy bee is never still
"And has no time to take the pill.
"And that is why, in times like these,
"There are so many sons of bees."
SIDNEY ROSEN,
BRANDON, VT.

DEAR SIDNEY: At the risk of appearing "waspyish," that poem appeared in my column in 1985, submitted by Jim Harval, an Arizona bookkeeper. But thanks for the reminder. You're a honey!

DEAR ABBY: Here's one more letter about grandmas catching bridal bouquets. I caught the bouquet at my grandson's wedding and didn't shove anyone to get it. I am 86 and not so spry. We all had a good laugh. Another grandson caught the garter.

The ladies at church have my wedding all planned. There's only one hitch — they haven't found a groom yet.

HAPPY GRANDMA

DEAR ABBY: I recently became legally separated and have no intention of reuniting with my estranged husband. Because his employer provides excellent benefits for our entire family, we have agreed not to divorce until one of us decides to marry again.

I am not interested in hearing approval or disapproval of this arrangement. However, I would like to know if I am morally obligated to continue wearing my wedding ring until we are legally divorced.

Please do not tell me that if I had morals I would get a divorce. My financial situation makes the continuance of benefits imperative to the survival of my family.

BENEFITTING IN EL CAJON, CALIF.

NOTICE OF DEFAULT AND FORECLOSURE SALE WHEREAS, on March 28, 1996, a certain Mortgage was executed by RICHARD D. TOWERY, a married person, joined by his spouse, RUTH E. TOWERY, as obligors in favor of FINANCIAL FINANCIAL CORP., a Delaware corporation, as mortgagee, and was recorded on April 3, 1996, in Official Records Book 2988, Page 0313 in the Public Records of Seminole County, Florida; and WHEREAS, the said Mortgage is now owned by the Secretary, pursuant to an assignment dated April 21, 1996, and recorded on May 3, 1996, in Book 3911, Page 0618, in the Public Records of Seminole County, Florida; and WHEREAS, a default has been made in the covenants and conditions of the Mortgage in that the payment due on October 1, 1995, under the note and mortgage, and the payment due on November 1, 1995, under a future advance, were not made and remain wholly unpaid as of the date of this notice, and no payment has been made sufficient to restore the loan to a current status; and WHEREAS, by virtue of this notice, the Secretary has declared the entire amount of the indebtedness secured by the Mortgage to be immediately due and payable;

NOW THEREFORE, pursuant to powers vested in me by the Sheriff's Office, Florida Foreclosure Act of 1994, 12 U.S.C. 3781 et seq., by 24 CFR Part 29, and by the Secretary's designation of me as Foreclosure Commissioner, notice is hereby given that on August 7th, 1996, at 10:00 a.m. local time, of real and personal property at or used in connection with the following described premises currently owned by RICHARD D. TOWERY, located at 2411 Marshall Avenue, Sanford, FL 32771 ("Property"), will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder:

Lot 4, Block 8, 2nd SECTION DREAMWOOD, according to the Plat thereof as recorded in Plat Book 4, Page 70, of the Public Records of Seminole County, Florida. The sale will be held at 12:45 p.m., or as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, at the west front door of the Seminole County Courthouse, 301 N. Park Avenue, Sanford, FL 32771.

There will be no proration of taxes, rent, or other income or liabilities, except that the purchaser will pay, at or before closing, his pro rata share of any real estate taxes that have been paid on the project by the Secretary to the date of the foreclosure sale. When making their bid, all bidders except the Secretary must submit a deposit totaling $5,957.51 in the form of a certified check or cashier's check made out to the Secretary of HUD at the time of sale. Each oral bid need not be accompanied by a deposit. If the successful bid is oral, a deposit of $5,957.51 must be presented before the bidding is closed. The deposit is to be held in escrow. The remainder of the purchase price must be delivered within 30 days of the sale or at such other time as the Secretary may determine for good cause shown. The Secretary will pay the deposit to the successful bidder in cash. The deposit will be applied to any conveyance fees, all real estate and other taxes that are due on or after the date of closing and all other costs associated with the transfer of title. At the conclusion of the sale, the deposits of the unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them.

The Secretary may grant the successful bidder an extension of time within which to close. All extensions will be for 30 days, and a fee will be charged in the amount of 1.5% of the unpaid balance of the purchase price or HUD's holding costs, whichever is greater. The extension fee shall be paid to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. If the high bidder closes the sale prior to the expiration of any extension period, the unused portion of the extension fee shall be applied toward the amount due at closing.

If the high bidder is unable to close the sale within the required period, or within any extensions of time granted by the Secretary, the high bidder's deposit will be forfeited, and the Commissioner may, at the direction of the HUD Field Office Representative, offer the Project to the second highest bidder for an amount equal to the highest price offered by that bidder. All other terms of the sale would remain the same. If the second highest bidder rejects the Commissioner's offer, the Field Office Representative will provide instructions to the Commissioner about cancellation of the sale or other action to be taken.

FLORIDA QUALITY HEALTH CARE, INC. By: J. DARRIN MILLER President GASSMAN & CONETTA, P.A. 1245 COURT STREET SUITE 102 CLEARWATER, FLORIDA 34616 Publish: July 9, 1996 DER-63

NOTICE OF DEFAULT AND FORECLOSURE SALE WHEREAS, on October 29, 1996, a certain Mortgage was executed by MICHAEL DANIEL KERRIGAN, a single man, as mortgagor in favor of CHASE HOME MORTGAGE CORPORATION, as mortgagee, and was recorded on November 3, 1996, in Official Records Book 1787, Page 9011 in the Public Records of Seminole County, Florida; and WHEREAS, a default has been made in the covenants and conditions of the Mortgage in that the payment due on August 1, 1996 under the note and mortgage was not made and remain wholly unpaid as of the date of this notice, and no payment has been made sufficient to restore the loan to a current status; and WHEREAS, by virtue of this notice, the Secretary has declared the entire amount of the indebtedness secured by the Mortgage to be immediately due and payable;

NOW THEREFORE, pursuant to powers vested in me by the Sheriff's Office, Florida Foreclosure Act of 1994, 12 U.S.C. 3751 et seq., by 24 CFR Part 29, and by the Secretary's designation of me as Foreclosure Commissioner, notice is hereby given that on August 7th, 1996 at 10:00 a.m. local time, all real and personal property at or used in connection with the following described premises currently owned by MICHAEL DANIEL KERRIGAN, located at 2388 Sandstone Drive, Winter Park, FL 32789 ("Property"), will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder:

That certain Year-round parcel known as Lot 264, WINDWARD SQUARE, SECTION THREE, according to the plan thereof as recorded in Plat Book 22, Pages 28 and 29, of the Public Records of Seminole County, Florida. The sale will be held at 12:45 p.m., or as soon thereafter as is reasonably possible, at the west front door of the Seminole County Courthouse, 301 N. Park Avenue, Sanford, FL 32771.

There will be no proration of taxes, rent, or other income or liabilities, except that the purchaser will pay, at or before closing, his pro rata share of any real estate taxes that have been paid on the project by the Secretary to the date of the foreclosure sale. When making their bid, all bidders except the Secretary must submit a deposit totaling $5,957.51 in the form of a certified check or cashier's check made out to the Secretary of HUD at the time of sale. Each oral bid need not be accompanied by a deposit. If the successful bid is oral, a deposit of $5,957.51 must be presented before the bidding is closed. The deposit is to be held in escrow. The remainder of the purchase price must be delivered within 30 days of the sale or at such other time as the Secretary may determine for good cause shown, time being of the essence. This amount, like the bid deposits, must be delivered on or after the date of closing and all other costs associated with the transfer of title. At the conclusion of the sale, the deposits of the unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them.

The Secretary may grant the successful bidder an extension of time within which to close. All extensions will be for 30 days, and a fee will be charged in the amount of 1.5% of the unpaid balance of the purchase price or HUD's holding costs, whichever is greater. The extension fee shall be paid in the form of a certified or cashier's check made payable to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. If the high bidder closes the sale prior to the expiration of any extension period, the unused portion of the extension fee shall be applied toward the amount due at closing.

If the high bidder is unable to close the sale within the required period, or within any extensions of time granted by the Secretary, the high bidder's deposit will be forfeited, and the Commissioner may, at the direction of the HUD Field Office Representative, offer the Project to the second highest bidder for an amount equal to the highest price offered by that bidder. All other terms of the sale would remain the same. If the second highest bidder rejects the Commissioner's offer, the Field Office Representative will provide instructions to the Commissioner about cancellation of the sale or other action to be taken. Dated: June 29th, 1996 Foreclosure Commissioner: Douglas M. Kidney problem needs diagnosis

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctor has told me my kidney problems are mostly the result of slow degeneration functions. I've had many blood tests, a blood-flow test, ultrasound and 24-hour urine. Can you suggest treatment to reverse my kidney condition that seems to eventually point to failure of this organ? I'm 60.

DEAR READER: From your brief description, I do not know the cause of your kidney damage. Perhaps the diminishing function is a consequence of your age: The kidneys, like all the other body organs, become less efficient the older we get.

Nonetheless, you could also have a primary renal disorder (of which there are many), including infection and damage from diabetes or hypertension. What does your doctor say? It seems to me that he owes you an explanation. If for no other reason than to assuage your anxiety. With modern medical therapy, many kidney diseases can be controlled or cured, but before taking treatment, you should be informed of what the problem is. This can be determined by X-ray tests, such as an IVP, or — on occasion — biopsy.

For example, if your kidneys are malfunctioning because of damage from diabetes, a common complication in the elderly, the use of drugs called "ACE inhibitors" will slow the progression and extend your life. Ask your doctor for an in-depth discussion — and let me know the outcome.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders."

DEAR DR. GOTT: Seven years ago I had an emergency C-section. For the past two years, I've had menstrual cramps six days following my period. My doctor can only say I might have adhesions from the surgery. What's your opinion?

DEAR READER: Based on the limited information you supply, I don't have an opinion. Ordinarily, Caesarian sections do not cause menstrual cramps. Therefore, I suspect that something other than adhesions (post-operative scarring) is to blame; for example, endometriosis is a strong possibility.

Perhaps your gynecologist should order a CT scan or ultrasound exam of the pelvis to pinpoint the cause of your symptom. In any case, your pain should not be ignored.

You also might consider a second opinion from another gynecologist. In problems such as this, two heads are usually better than one.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I wish you wouldn't be so hard on women with PMS, as I suffer for it for 10 out of every 30 days each month and it's no fun. Will these symptoms subside that these symptoms are worsened by temporary, cyclic hormone imbalance. Anti-depressants or anti-anxiety pills often reduce the severity of symptoms.

MEDICINE

Also, I've been told that the symptoms of PMS can sometimes be lessened if women stringently avoid dietary salt during times of their discomfort; this prevents unwanted fluid retention that can worsen symptoms. Finally, birth control pills may eliminate symptoms by re-establishing a more normal hormone balance.

Most women discover that PMS disappears once they enter menopause.

Because you are bothered by PMS, ask your gynecologist for special advice.

I will address PMS in a longer essay in a few weeks. Stay tuned.

WIN AT BRIDGE

On the beach

By Phillip Alder

no more so than in this deal from Juan.

I don't know the exact auction, except that South opened three diamonds (a bid that the Young Turks consider mandatory), and then showed club values later in the auction. This persuaded North to bid seven diamonds.

A black-suit lead would probably have defeated the contract — by several tricks. But West selected the "safe" heart ace.

This left South with no choice. He ruffed with dummy's diamond 10, then cashed the diamond king and spade ace before ruffing a low spade back to hand. When the diamond queen obligingly appeared under the ace, South drew East's last trump, played a club to dummy's ace and discarded his four remaining losers on dummy's spade winners. The ruff bottom suffered by East-West cost them several French francs in reduced prize money.

There is a lot of luck in pair events.
